Bush, Dukakis win Round 2

Gephardt edges Simon for second; Dole, Kemp remain in GOP hunt

Michael Dukakis

By Matthew C. Quinn
United Press International

CONCORD, N.H. — Vice President George Bush rescued his faltering presidential campaign Tuesday with a stunning victory over Kansas Sen. Robert Dole in New Hampshire's Republican primary and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis won the Democratic race hands-down.

"Tonight, I somehow feel I have a lot in common with Mark Twain — reports of my death are greatly exaggerated," Bush told cheering supporters at a Manchester Hotel after winning the nation's first primary election. "On to the South, where we are going to rise again!" Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri finished second in the Democratic race ahead of Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois. Dukakis, as popular governor of a neighboring state, had been expected all along to win handily so the drama centered on the hard-fought competition between the two Midwesterners for No. 2.

DUKAKIS VOWED to prove himself more than a regional candidate in the Super Tuesday primaries concentrated in the South in three weeks.

"I always wanted to be an Olympic champion," Dukakis said at his Manchester victory celebration, a medal around his neck. "Last week in Iowa, our message started to shine through and we won a bronze. Tonight in New Hampshire our message came in loud and clear. We went for the gold and won."

In the Republican race, Bush showed surprising strength across the Granite State just eight days after his disastrous third-place finish in the Iowa caucuses behind Dole and former television evangelist Pat Robertson.

With 77 percent of the precincts reporting, Bush had 38 percent of the Republican vote; Dole, 29 percent; Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, 13 percent, and former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont and Robertson, 10 percent each.

With 76 percent of Democratic vote reporting, Dukakis had 36 percent; Gephardt, 20 percent; Simon, 17 percent; civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, 8 percent; Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, 7 percent; former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, 5 percent, and former Sen. Gary Hart, 4 percent.

THESE RESULTS project that Bush would pick up 11 GOP delegates; Dole, seven delegates; Kemp, three, and du Pont, two. Democratic projections would give Dukakis nine delegates; Gephardt, six, and Simon, three.

Gephardt, who won the Iowa caucuses and sorely needed to show his appeal beyond the Midwest, said his second-place finish demonstrated his tough-trade policy economic message "makes sense anywhere in the country."

Gephardt told supporters he had carried the state with the exception of the "Boston suburbs," the south-

Sewage plant dispute goes to mediator

By Sara Anderson and Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

A mediating team from the Iowa Peace Institute will be given 60 days to try to settle the dispute between Iowa City and Johnson County over the city's proposed sewer plant, according to an agreement worked out Tuesday in Des Moines.

City officials appeared Tuesday before the Environmental Protection Commission, the policy-making body of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, to explain why mandatory building of the city's sewage treatment plant will not be completed by July 1, 1988, as the department had required.

The city filed a lawsuit against the county last week to force the county to rezone the site of the proposed plant so the city can begin construction.

But at the meeting Tuesday, Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, proposed that the Iowa Peace Institute form a mediation team to work toward a solution of the problem.

City officials agreed to delay their suit for 60 days while the dispute is being mediated.

THE IOWA PEACE Institute is a bi-partisan organization, comprised of prominent Iowans from both the public and private sectors, which attempts to mediate issues of conflict.

Jones said mediation could prevent a long legal battle between the city and the county.

"With something like this, you're probably looking at two years in court, at least," she said. "But if we can get them to mediate, there's a better chance that everyone can come out feeling that they've won something."

For the past 10 months the Johnson County Board of Supervisors has refused to approve rezoning to allow the city to build a sewage treatment plant site one mile south of Iowa City.

The supervisors have refused to approve rezoning the site of the proposed plant because of disagreements with the council over the location of the plant's access road and sewage disposal. Supervisors have also objected to what they say is a lack of cooperation from the Iowa City Council.

REP. MARY Neuhauser, D-Iowa City, said formation of the mediating team constitutes a positive step, but she added that the process could be rough on everyone involved.

"It's going to be an extraordinarily difficult mediation because there are so many people affected," she said. "But if there's any possibility of working out these problems, fine, that's great."

Several of the supervisors said they welcomed the mediation as a cooperative step to avoid legal action.

Supervisor Bob Burns said he hopes the city is "sincere" in addressing the concerns of county residents and the supervisors.

"It would be a very sad thing if Johnson County and Iowa City spend up all their money fighting it out (in court)," Burns said. "I'm glad they are delaying the suit. It makes a good start."

The supervisors held a closed strategy session with Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White Tuesday to decide how to handle the lawsuit with the city. In the closed session, the supervisors asked White to meet Thursday with the city council to try to get things settled.

WHITE SAID THE county would cooperate with city officials during the next two months in an attempt to avoid lawsuits.

"I think that is an encouraging sign," White said. "I think if someone else is suggesting that there is room for discussion, we may actually resolve this thing

Gunman fires on company workers

By Michael Molinski
The Daily Iowan

SUNNYVALE, Calif. — A gunman fired from a computer company for sexual harassment walked into the firm's offices Tuesday and opened fire, killing at least one person and wounding at least five employees, one of them a woman who had spurned his advances, police said.

The gunman surrendered more than five hours later after holding between five and 40 people hostage, police said. Officers immediately launched a search of the building for dead and wounded.

Police confirmed one death. Officials had said earlier that three people and possibly more had been killed by the gunfire.

The gunman, tentatively identified as former employee Richard Farley, 40, was armed with a shotgun and high-power rifle and had two bandoleers of ammunition strapped across his chest.

He holed up on the second floor of the ESL Inc. building with his hostages and workers who had locked themselves in their offices.

FIVE ESL employees wounded in the shooting were taken from the building by police and were sent to area hospitals.

Among them was Laura Black, a woman who had obtained a court order to keep Farley away from her and apparently was a primary target of the gunman's rage, police said.

Black, who police said had been trapped on the second floor with Farley, was listed in critical condition at Stanford Medical Center with a gunshot wound to the shoulder.

Jerry De Runtz, a co-worker of the wounded woman, said, "Laura is a beautiful girl and a very talented engineer. She had just started a bicycle club here at ESL. I'm so happy that she survived."

De Runtz said Farley "didn't seem like the kind of person who could

Hennessey home meets fate of UI Union-area expansion

By Karyn Riley
The Daily Iowan

Paul Hennessey remembers when houses dotted the area now occupied by the Union's north parking lot. He remembers when people called what is now Union Field home. And he especially remembers his mother's wish that her home not meet with the same fate — UI expansion — until after she died.

But in January, more than two years after her death, Hennessey sold the house at 234 N. Madison St. to the UI. Hennessey said the UI had been trying to purchase his home for the last 20 years, and he said he believed it was the last private property within the land acquisition area on Madison Street.

That area, part of a land acquisition plan approved by the state Board of Regents in 1984, is the future location of the UI Laser Science and Engineering Center, a chilled water facility and a parking ramp.

"THE REASON we never sold was because my mother's wish was to die in her own home and her own bed, owning her own house," Hennessey said. "And she made no bones about it to the university's business managers."

But when she died at the age of 95, Hennessey said it was time to sell. "She died on August 1, 1985, at 3:30 in the morning, in my arms, and at that point there just wasn't much reason to stay here anymore," Hennessey said. "I'm 66 and there must be other things for me."

On January 29, Hennessey received the first installment of the $53,000 offered by the UI. The state Board of Regents must approve the sale at this week's meeting in Des Moines.

UI ADMINISTRATORS say they are more interested in the location of the house than the structure itself.

"If it is within the boundaries, we like to have everything belong to the university rather than a mixture (of UI and private property)," UI Vice President for Finance and

UI Foundation elects chair

Wallace Sulentic of Waterloo has been elected chairman of the UI Foundation Board of Directors and five new members also have been elected to the board, Foundation President Darrell Wyrick announced Tuesday.

Sulentic, president of Waterloo Industries, Inc., and a 1954 graduate of the UI College of Business Administration, has been on the foundation board since 1980, and a vice chairman for three years.

The new directors are Dennis Boatman, Cedar Rapids; Charles Kierscht, Hinsdale, Ill.; Richard Nelson, Parker, Colo.; Mary Louise Smith, Des Moines, and David Stanley, Muscatine, Iowa. All have one or more degrees from the UI.

Boatman, a urologist, serves on the staffs of both Mercy and St. Luke's Hospitals in Cedar Rapids. Kierscht is president of Kemper Financial Services, Inc., of Chicago, and Nelson is an oral surgeon with offices in Denver.

Smith, former chairman of the Republican National Committee, is active in many civic organizations in Des Moines and throughout the state. Stanley, an attorney, is president and treasurer of E & M Charities of Muscatine, president of Iowans for Tax Relief and a director of the Stanley Foundation and the Stanley-UI Foundation Support Organization.

Elected foundation vice chairmen were Charles Grannon, of Ridgewood, N.J., and Richard Kautz, of Muscatine. Jill McLaughlin, of Moline, Ill., was elected to the executive committee, joining Grannon, Kautz, Levitt, Marvin Pomerantz of Des Moines, and ex-officio members Sulentic and UI Interim President Richard Remington.

Harriet Brady, of Chicago, and Elizabeth Stanley, of Muscatine, were named lifetime honorary directors in recognition of their past service to the foundation and to the university. Each has served a three-year term as director.

Bridge cost discussed

Johnson County Secondary Roads Interim Director Mike Gardner Tuesday told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors it will cost $79,500 to design a bridge to replace the Butler Bridge, which spans the Iowa River on Dubuque Street about 1 mile north of Iowa City.

Designs for the $1.34 million concrete bridge are being drawn up by Noel Willis, of Noel N. Willis Inc., 316 E. College St. The new bridge will be built beside the presently standing structure.

Gardner said bids will be solicited for the construction contracts in April 1989 and construction is expected to begin that summer. He said it would take over one year to complete the new span.

In other discussion Tuesday, the supervisors considered placing Johnson County's money in the Iowa Public Agency Investment Trust. The trust is a cash management service for Iowa cities, counties and city-owned utilities.

An official involved with the Des Moines-based investment firm said the trust attempts to maximize the yield on all the money invested by interested members of the League of Iowa Municipalities, the Iowa Association of Municipal Utilities and the Iowa State Association of Counties, by pooling their money into one large fund.

County board postpones herbicide study committee

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday delayed appointing a committee to address growing concerns by some county residents over spraying herbicides to kill the brush, trees and weeds that grow along Johnson County roads.

The supervisors were divided over whether a committee would create an understanding between environmentalists opposed to any chemical spraying and the proponents of spraying, or if such a committee would further polarize the two sides.

Supervisor Dick Myers said the reason for a "roadside vegetation management committee" would be to get the two sides together to talk and agree on how to deal with the county roadsides.

BUT JOHNSON County Environmental Commission member Nancy Seiberling criticized the board for not setting up the committee, saying the Board of Supervisors had "resisted" listening to constituents who the committee set up to discuss spraying and its effects on the environment.

She also said the supervisors have ignored suggestions for planting a "fabric" of prairie grass along roadways which would choke out weeds and make spraying unnecessary.

Seiberling said using chemicals along roadsides to strip vegetation is a "very poisonous practice," because it poses a threat to people, animals and crops. She said she is also concerned with the effects of herbicides on groundwater in the county.

SEIBERLING ALSO cited a memo from Iowa Department of Natural Resources Assistant Coordinator of County Conservation Activities Stephan Dermand which stated, "Flagrant use of chemicals in roadside spraying application is often due to the direct negligence of a contact sprayer hired by the county for annual weed control."

But Johnson County Weed Commissioner Terry Hennes said the Johnson County Secondary Roads Department is using the smallest amount and the safest chemicals it can possibly find to meet their needs for weed control. About 100 miles of Johnson County's secondary roadsides were sprayed in 1987 with Invert, a herbicide consisting of 2-4-D (Dichlorophenoxyacetic acid), according to Hennes.

THE SECONDARY roads department will begin using Krenite this year, a safer, less-restrictive herbicide than Invert. Krenite is a compound consisting of ammonium salt of fosamine. The chemical will be selectively applied by Chemtrol Inc. of Kansas City, Mo., Hennes said. He added that some Invert may continue to be used.

He said spraying is necessary because the county must avoid being held liable in accidents caused by vegetation obstructing a driver's view or by hazards like ice caused by a tree blocking the sun from a road's surface.

He also said the county only sprays chemicals along its roadsides when conditions are favorable. Neither Krenite nor Invert may be sprayed when temperatures are above 85 degrees or if winds are stronger than 10 mph.

Governors sign agreement at summit-style conference

United Press International

SOUTH SIOUX CITY, Neb. — The governors of Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota met Tuesday in a summit-style conference where they planned to submerge their collective economic development ambitions into a cooperative plan for the region.

Govs. Terry Branstad of Iowa, Kay Orr of Nebraska and George Mickelson of South Dakota signed an agreement calling for cooperation and program sharing in developing the "Siouxland" area, which includes Sioux City, Iowa, South Sioux City, Neb., and North Sioux City, S.D.

The three states often have fought for the same new business opportunities, but the governors decided to bury the hatchet. The agreement covers economic development, tourism promotion and job-training funds and calls for Iowa's foreign offices to represent all three states on matters affecting the tri-state region.

"THE PUBLICITY of the three governors' meeting together marketing the area will further enhance tourists and conventions coming to the area," Branstad said before huddling with Orr and Mickelson. "This focuses attention on all three states and recognizes we're interdependent."

Mickelson said it is important to promote the area as a region. "The concept of regionalism is something I've really promoted," Mickelson said. "It was the concept I used for the supercollider and old-west trails."

OFFICIALS SAY South Dakota's tax advantages, along with a popular dog track in the area, are attracting economic development as well as tourism. The meatpacking industry around South Sioux City and Sioux City also is eyed as a magnet for further development.

"I'm going to mention the frozen-food industry," Orr said. "We're well suited here to provide what they need. We have a great deal to offer and we can send that message coast to coast."

The governors planned to sign the agreement today, then tour businesses such as IBP Inc., in Dakota City, Neb., Sioux Bee Honey in Sioux City and Prince Manufacturing, a hydraulics manufacturer located in North Sioux City.

Department responded to a report of a fire in the UI Chemistry-Botany Building at about 3 a.m. Tuesday, according to Campus Security reports.

An anonymous caller reported to Iowa City police a smoke smell and a glow coming from the laser laboratory on the first floor of the building.

An investigation revealed the fan belt of a heater reportedly had caught on fire within the lab. No damages were reported in the incident, according to the report.

Theft: The driver's side window of an Iowa City resident's car was reported broken into, and a radar detector valued at $300 was stolen from inside the car Tuesday morning.

The car was parked in the 300 block of Finkbine Lane, according to the report.

Report: An Iowa City woman reported Monday night that she was nearly struck by a train while crossing the railroad tracks at Kirkwood Avenue and Maiden Lane, according to police reports.

The woman said she saw no flares and heard no whistle to warn her the train was coming, according to the report.

Human rights amendments recommended for UI policy

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The UI Human Rights Committee last week announced recommendations that UI administrators amend the UI Human Rights Policy Statement to ensure equal treatment of persons with physical and mental disabilities, and that administrators address committee recommendations in a more timely manner.

The suggested amendments to the policy statement, indicated by italics, state the UI "is guided by the precepts that in no aspect of its programs shall there be differences in the treatment of persons that are irrelevant to the purposes for which they are applied because of race, creed, color, national origin, age, sex, physical or mental disability, and any other classifications that deprive the person of consideration as an individual, and that equal opportunity and access to facilities shall be available to all."

UI HUMAN RIGHTS Committee Chair Debbie Cowherd said most policy amendments result from complaints brought to the committee from the outside, but she said the suggestion to add a disability clause came from within the committee.

A clause ensuring equal treatment of the disabled should have been part of the UI's original policy, she said.

Also, in a Feb. 5 letter to UI Interim President Richard Remington, Cowherd requested UI administrators adopt a policy "regarding an appropriate time period within which the president should respond to committee recommendations once they have been submitted."

LAST APRIL, the committee presented recommendations regarding the UI Printing Services' refusal to print an edition of Common Lives/Lesbian Lives, a national lesbian-culture magazine published by a subgroup of the UI Lesbian Alliance. Remington did not address the case until the following January.

UI Dean of Student Services Philip Jones said the Lesbian Alliance case took several months because administrators needed time to review the information and because several faculty members were out of town during the summer break.

"It is not feasible to talk about when something has to be addressed without considering the dynamics of the case," Jones said.

"I think if there's a simple issue, it will probably be addressed promptly. If it's more complex, it takes time.

"THE RESPONSE will be as timely as the circumstances will allow," Jones said.

In other recommendations, Cowherd requested a revision to the committee's complaint resolution procedure. Under the current procedure, complainants have six months to report alleged human rights violations to the committee. Cowherd suggested the administration expand the time period for filing complaints to one year after an incident has occurred.

"We set the time period to one year because there are various other processes that complainants have to go through," she said. "If you take something to the Faculty Senate, it could take several weeks for them to get to it."

Cowherd said the rule revision would give complainants more time to pursue their cases with other UI governing bodies.

"We were concerned there might be some difficulty for complainants to get their complaints reviewed on time. We sort of see our committee as a committee of last resorts," she said.

Report: Foreign UI students have local economic impact

By Michael Coleman
The Daily Iowan

Foreign students at the UI contribute more than $14 million annually to the local economy with a total economic impact exceeding $50 million a year, according to a report released Monday by the UI Office of International Education and Services.

Assistant Director of the UI Foreign Student Program Gary Althen and graduate assistant Yizgaw Belay compiled the report, which listed the average expenditures of foreign students and their families, and how those expenditures affect the economy.

Foreign students spend about $500 per month, according to Althen and Belay. Most of that money goes for essential items like food and rent, but some students spend more by purchasing such things as cars and stereos.

UI senior Sunny Chua, who is from Malaysia, said the $500 estimate is close to what he spends each month.

"A lot goes for car maintenance," he said. Chua said he spent money on extras — a television and a "fancy" telephone — when he first arrived in Iowa City.

"GROCERIES, rent and everything adds up to that ($500) amount," UI senior William Chong, who is from Singapore, said.

The report also estimated the contributions of foreign students' spouses to the local economy at $2,000 each per year. Children's contributions were estimated at $1,200 each per year. Expenditures for foreign student family members in 1987 totaled about $1,142,800, according to the report.

The report cited enrollment figures from the 1987 spring semester. Foreign undergraduate students then numbered 555 and foreign graduate students 1,156.

"The (foreign student) enrollment has gone up the last 17 years, except for one semester," Althen said, adding those increases raise total foreign student expenditures each year.

ALTHEN AND BELAY implemented a 1986 study by UI Economics Professor Jerald Barnard to help estimate the total foreign student economic impact. Considering a "multiplier effect" — an income multiplier figure defined by Barnard as 3.6, in which dollars are recirculated in the local economy — the expenditures of foreign students exceed $50 million, according to the report.

"Calculating foreign students' contributions to a local economy is by no means a scientific procedure," the report stated. "Many basic data must be estimated."

Panel OK's sale of fireworks

United Press International

DES MOINES—The Senate State Government Committee Tuesday voted to legalize the limited sale of firecrackers and other larger fireworks in Iowa.

The proposal approved by the House last year won passage in the Senate panel Tuesday on an 8-6 vote. It would allow firecrackers, bottle rockets, fountains, spinners and other items to be sold for more than a month before and after the Fourth of July.

Backers of the bill said Iowans currently are buying fireworks, but they spend their money across the state's borders, especially in Missouri. Opponents said larger firecrackers, currently outlawed in Iowa, are a dangerous threat to the safety of children.

Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon, has indicated in the past he does not support the bill, however he has refrained from threatening to block its debate on the Senate floor.

Bush win rescues campaign

Frantic last-minute media blitz keys comeback

By Joseph Mianowany
United Press International

CONCORD, N.H. — Vice President George Bush's strong win Tuesday in the New Hampshire primary gave his campaign a considerable shot in the arm and reinstalled him as the man to beat for the Republican presidential nomination.

At the same time, the convincing Democratic win by Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, coupled with his relatively close third-place showing in the Iowa caucuses, made him a force to be contended with — but did nothing to erase questions about whether the liberal Northeasterner can appeal to voters in the South.

Ironically, the Bush win over Senate GOP leader Robert Dole was by a smaller margin than the 20-point edge he held as little as several days before his very disappointing third-place finish in Iowa, behind Dole and former television evangelist Pat Robertson.

HOWEVER, when polls showed that huge lead evaporating almost overnight after his Iowa performance, Bush did what he had to — rescuing his White House effort with a frantic week of campaigning throughout the Granite State.

Knowing his presidential drive was at a turning point, Bush held nothing back — blitzing the state with personal appearances and television advertisements.

Appealing to voters in a state that is heavily supportive of President Ronald Reagan, Bush pulled out almost every Reagan card he held and even reminded voters that eight years ago he defeated Reagan in Iowa, but lost New Hampshire, and eventually the GOP nomination, to the future president.

After conservative Alexander Haig dropped out of the race and threw his support to Dole, Bush countered with his own pitch for the right wing vote, bringing "Mr. Conservative" — former Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona — up to New Hampshire to campaign for him on the day before the primary.

It all paid off handsomely for the vice president Tuesday and, by winning strongly when the last-minute polls showed him in a virtual dead heat, he won even bigger in the critical expectations game.

BUSH CAN NOW boldly take his well-financed campaign to the critical Super Tuesday race on March 8 when 20 states hold primaries and caucuses. Bush is running strong in many of those areas and his New Hampshire win should help stop any further hemorrhaging his campaign was in danger of suffering.

However, Bush's Granite State win is not enough. If he stalls in the South and can't repeat his New Hampshire performance, he will once again be in trouble. But the New Hampshire win made it clear that he will be around to fight for a while.

For the Democrats, New Hampshire did little to clarify the field.

Dukakis was expected to win in his political backyard, and the close battle waged between Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, the winner in Iowa, and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, the second-place finisher there, left both men able to claim that they were still viable candidates.

Both campaigns are low on money, but Gephardt, because of his Iowa win, was certain to take his battle to the South. Simon insisted that a tight third-place finish was good enough to keep him alive.

Also heading to the South for the Democrats are Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, who has all along concentrated on the region, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson and former Sen. Gary Hart, who is still trying to spark his maverick campaign.

Dukakis sets sights on South

after winning in 'back yard'

By Jerry Berger
United Press International

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, claiming a "terrific boost" from his convincing win in neighboring New Hampshire, set his sights Tuesday on the South and vowed a strong showing in Dixie.

"The people of the South are not voting for a zip code," the Democratic presidential hopeful told an enthusiastic victory party Tuesday night. "They're voting for a president of the United States."

The next big political test is March 8, known as Super Tuesday, when 20 states, many of them southern, hold primaries or caucuses.

Claiming victory at a University of New Hampshire rally, Dukakis had a gold medal placed around his neck by his wife Kitty. Dukakis said he was pleased with his strong third-place showing in Iowa's Feb.

8 caucuses, and had aimed higher in New Hampshire.

"I ALWAYS wanted to be an Olympic champion," Dukakis said, referring to the medal. "I love the people of New Hampshire. They've been terrific."

"Last week in Iowa our message started to shine through, and we won a bronze. Tonight here in New Hampshire, our message came through loud and clear. We went for the gold, and we won it."

The Massachusetts governor, who finished behind Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois in Iowa, was expected to easily win in New Hampshire, where he is popular for his opposition to the coastal Seabrook Nuclear Plant.

CLAIMING VICTORY, he sought to project a national appeal.

sion advertisements attacking Dole for "straddling" sticky issues in Congress do the talking.

"They know it's not accurate but they got away with it," Dole said of Bush's advertisements that blanketed the airwaves in recent days.

Dole said it was "unfortunate that the vice president of the United States, who knows better, would sink to that level" of charging that Dole would raise taxes.

In return, Atwater attributed Bush's victory to the "issues campaign" he ran instead of "mindless talk of momentum," another dig at Dole.

ON THE EVE of the Iowa caucuses, Bush had enjoyed a 20 percentage point lead in the public opinion polls over Dole. It evaporated overnight, with Dole ahead of the vice president in many polls leading up to the crucial New Hampshire balloting.

Said Dole, "We've made a lot of progress in the last 10 days but we didn't quite pull it off."

The Dukakis and Bush victories became apparent even before all the polls closed in the nation's first primary election that is traditionally a crucial electoral test. Every president elected since 1952 has first won his party's New Hampshire primary.

There was a tight race for third place on the Republican side among du Pont, Kemp and Robertson. All wanted to emerge as the conservative alternative to more traditional Republicans Bush and Dole.

Dukakis appeared to have won the Democratic primary by record proportions. No Democrat had won a contested New Hampshire primary by more than 10 percent since Estes Kefauver defeated President Harry Truman in 1952.

THE TASK FOR Dukakis, who finished third in Iowa behind Gephardt and Simon, will be to prove he is more than a regional favorite son.

Claiming a "significant boost" from New Hampshire, Dukakis said he will prove just that by campaigning in the South.

The subplots of the New Hampshire campaign — for second place on the Democratic side and third place in the Republican race — had turned nasty in recent days. Simon and Gephardt traded charges and countercharges and Robertson, du Pont and Kemp sought to out-conservative each other.

Jackson and Gore, looking to strong showings on their southern home ground on Super Tuesday, vied for fourth place in the Democratic race. Gore had not spent much time here and Jackson was showing as he did in Iowa last week that he has appeal beyond his base of black supporters.

Babbitt, who was at the bottom of the Democratic heap with Hart, said he would now "move on to Washington for a couple of days and ask my supporters, 'How can we keep the reform movement alive? Should I withdraw or should I do something else?'"

JACKSON SAID he hoped to "work out some common ground" with Babbitt but denied asking the former Arizona governor to withdraw and endorse him in a telephone conversation Tuesday night.

Hart, whose 1984 candidacy was propelled by a come-from-behind New Hampshire victory over Walter Mondale, called his showing "disappointing but not discouraging."

ern part of the state near Dukakis' home state.

Simon, who had finished second in Iowa, conceded his New Hampshire showing "is not helping" his efforts to raise money but will take his damaged candidacy to the Super Tuesday states. But he said Dukakis, Gephardt and himself had emerged from New Hampshire with about the same number of nominating convention delegates.

It was an amazing revival for Bush, who had pleaded with voters to give him the same boost New Hampshire gave Ronald Reagan in the 1980 GOP primary after Reagan had been defeated by Bush in an Iowa upset.

IN WHAT BUSH'S state campaign chairman Gov. John Sununu described as a "touch me, feel me" politicking during the last week, the 63-year-old scion of an old blue blood New England family donned a blue windbreaker and visited truck stops and fast food restaurants in a dogged effort to revive his presidential hopes.

Poll: Waldheim support slipping

VIENNA, Austria — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim has lost significant support from the country's voters, according to a new opinion poll released Tuesday.

The poll, conducted for Austria's leading newspaper, Die Presse, immediately after the president's address to the nation Monday night, found that 45 percent of the 440 people questioned by telephone would not vote for Waldheim in a presidential election while 34 percent said they would.

Asked whether Waldheim should step down as president, 37 percent were in favor, 46 percent said he should remain in office and the rest did not respond to the question. Two weeks ago, however, 72 percent of Austrians supported Waldheim's remaining in office, an opinion poll showed.

IRS prepared for new tax season

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service is better prepared than ever to deal with the new tax filing season, IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs told Congress Tuesday, but the question is: Are the taxpayers?

Apparently afflicted with what Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., described as "form phobia," millions of Americans are waiting longer and longer each year to file their income tax returns.

"Today the Internal Revenue Service is as ready for this filing season as we've been for any other in modern history," Gibbs told a Senate Finance subcommittee. He also promised there would be no repeat of the 1985 tax disaster when computer problems were responsible for massive processing delays.

"We hope that the American public is ready as well," Gibbs added.

FDA approves AIDS drug

WASHINGTON — Federal health officials Tuesday announced that they have approved the expanded distribution and use of Trimetrexate, an experimental drug to treat pneumocystis carinii pneumonia, a potentially life-threatening infection that frequently afflicts AIDS patients.

The Food and Drug Administration and the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases said that Trimetrexate was the first AIDS-related drug to be granted the status under new federal regulations that became effective last June.

The rules permit drug developers to provide promising experimental drugs to patients under certain conditions before studies on the drug's safety and efficacy have been completed.

American IRA member convicted

LONDON — A 40-year-old American — the first Irish Republican Army member ever extradited from the United States — was convicted and sentenced Tuesday to life in prison for slaying a policeman 13 years ago.

William Quinn, extradited from San Francisco in October 1986 after a case that reached the U.S. Supreme Court, smiled when he was convicted of shooting to death a 21-year-old, off-duty policeman who tried to stop him near an alleged IRA bomb factory in 1975.

Police said Quinn, a third generation Irish-American who lived in Britain and the Irish Republic in the 1970s, had been a member of an IRA "Active Service Unit" that operated in London, staging bomb attacks.

Stocks jump above 2000 level

NEW YORK — Stock prices staged a strong advance Tuesday, pushing the Dow Jones industrial average to its first close above the 2000 level since early January. With the exception of takeover stocks, trading was slow.

The Dow industrial average, which gained 72.78 points last week, rose 22.71 to close at 2005.97. The Dow last closed above the 2000 level Jan. 7, when it finished at 2051.89.

Advances led declines 883-621 among the 1,989 issues crossing the New York Stock Exchange tape. Volume totaled 135,380,000 shares, compared with 177,190,000 traded Friday. It was the second-slowest session of the year.

"It was an exceptionally good day," said Trude Latimer of Josephthal & Co. "The volume was light, but at least it was all legitimate buying and not related to dividend activity, which we have seen recently."

Iowa guard troops visit Norway

MINNEAPOLIS — More than 100 Army National Guard troops from Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri and Texas left the Twin Cities Tuesday for Norway.

They will receive training in Norwegian weapons and tactics. They also will spend time with Norwegian families before returning March 5.

About 100 Norwegian troops will arrive in Minnesota and will train at Camp Ripley near Little Falls. They also will spend time with local families and tour the state and national capitols before heading home March 3.

Defendant pleads guilty in train deaths

By Steven Ginsburg
United Press International

TOWSON, Md. — A former Conrail engineer who drove his string of engines into the path of a speeding Amtrak passenger train, killing 16 people, pleaded guilty to manslaughter Tuesday and faces a maximum of five years in prison.

Ricky Gates, 33, originally was charged with 16 counts of manslaughter by locomotive. But in a plea bargain arrangement, Baltimore County prosecutors consolidated the counts into one manslaughter charge bearing all the victims' names.

"I cannot imagine the pain and grief I've caused the families. I'm sorry," Gates said as he left the courthouse after the verdict.

Relatives of victims of the crash wept openly when the morning court proceeding ended.

GATES, WHO offered no comment following Tuesday's proceedings, faces a maximum of five years in prison and a $1,000 fine when sentenced March 29. Had he been convicted on all 16 counts, Gates could have received an 80-year prison sentence and a $16,000 fine.

Gates, wearing a gray, pinstripe suit, was stiff and emotionless during the court proceedings while lawyers read a 48-page statement that detailed events on the day of the Jan. 4, 1987, train tragedy in Chase, Md.

PLO gives threat of retaliations

By Charles P. Wallace
Los Angeles Times

NICOSIA, Cyprus — The Palestine Liberation Organization threatened Tuesday to retaliate against Israel for the killing of three officials of the guerrilla organization and the bombing of a PLO-chartered vessel on this Mediterranean island.

The Cypriot government denounced the two attacks as "unacceptable and impermissible." It said that it will investigate to determine who was behind them.

The vessel, the ferryboat Sol Phryne, had been acquired by the PLO as its much-publicized "ship of return." The organization plans to transport 130 Palestinians, who were deported in recent years by the Israeli government, to the Israeli port of Haifa. The Israelis have said that they will not allow the ship to land.

The undisguised aim of the voyage, complete with foreign dignitaries and about 200 journalists, was to capitalize on the current uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip by evoking the image of the ship Exodus, which attempted to carry Jewish refugees to Palestine after World War II but was turned back by the British.

THE THREE PLO officials who were killed Saturday in the Cypriot port of Limassol are believed to have arranged the sale of the ferryboat to a PLO-affiliated organization. The PLO acquired the ship after failing repeatedly to charter a vessel in Greece.

The PLO has accused Israel of carrying out the attacks. Israeli officials would not comment on the charge. Anonymous telephone callers saying that they spoke for the Jewish Defense League and for Kach, a militant Israeli organization, claimed responsibility for the ferryboat bombing, but official spokesmen for both groups would not acknowledge the attack.

"Israel knows that the PLO is not handcuffed," the PLO said in a statement issued here in Nicosia and at its headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia. "The blood of our martyrs will not go unavenged."

IN KUWAIT, PLO leader Yasser Arafat warned Israel that it was pushing the PLO toward revoking its pledge in the so-called Cairo Declaration to halt guerrilla operations outside Israel and the Israeli-occupied territories.

The Cairo Declaration was issued a month after the October 1985 hijacking of the Italian ocean liner Achille Lauro by a radical PLO faction during which an elderly American Jew, Leon Klinghoffer, was murdered.

Caution needed

As a condition of acceptance into a fraternity, James Callahan — a freshman at Rutgers University in New Jersey — was equipped with a vomit bag and then told to drink until he got sick. He went the brothers one better and drank until he died.

Why Callahan should have been so desperate to be identified with the devisors of such a degrading and sadistic ritual will remain a mystery of adolescent nature. But the fact that he felt compelled to go on drinking even after he became sick attests to the dangerous power, the potentially lethal grip, of mob psychology. It is as if the intellectual sum of the whole is lower than the least of its parts.

The history of the greek system at American universities provides abundant proof that one can come under the sometimes negative influence of fraternal organizations' groupthink, and that this influence tends to have an exponential effect when combined with alcohol. At its worst, this effect has led to massive vandalism, gang rapes and, of course, hazing deaths.

In light of the recent series of alcohol overdoses among the greeks, Rutgers officials have acted quite correctly in suspending, for the present, all social activities of fraternities and sororities. The aim should not be to punish all for the offenses of a few. Rather, the students need time for a little sober reflection, and to receive a signal that the problem is not just alcohol, but its place in the system.

Fraternities in general cannot be fairly condemned for the Rutgers incident, but still it points to a general need for caution. Certain forces accumulate within the group dynamic, forces which, like those of the highway, require foresight and restraint with respect to alcohol.

Unveiling the truth

In the last year-and-a-half, U.S. leaders have had to explain the facts behind the Iran-Contra curtain. Now, the citizens of one Western European country are searching for the real story behind their nation's leader and his suspected war crimes. A recent study conducted by a six-member international commission of military historians confirms that Austrian President Kurt Waldheim was aware of Nazi atrocities committed by troops he commanded.

There is a difference between Austria's situation and America's Iran-Contra affair, however. The American public has been dealing with this problem for a little more than a year, while some Austrians have questioned Waldheim's military service affairs for more than 40 years.

Not only has he hidden the truth, but he has distorted his past. Waldheim wrote in his memoirs that he was in Austria to study law when he was, in fact, deep in the Balkans. When the truth was discovered, he then said he knew nothing of the mass deportation of Greek and Austrian Jews to the infamous death camps.

Waldheim, whose knowledge of these activities has since been established, stated a few days ago, "My accusers come up with more and more charges and have always promised the evidence. But the proof did not come." Unfortunately for Waldheim, his many layers of deception are finally unfolding.

Although Waldheim's conscience may be clear, many organizations are readily questioning the strength and quality of his conscience, past and present. Those protesting factions are demanding he give up his post, and some of the country's top officials are rethinking their support of Waldheim.

Leaders are a reflection of the people they lead — therefore, the longer Waldheim remains in office the longer the Austrian people are insulted. The poverty of his character calls for an immediate resignation.

Investigating the FBI

Executive Order 12333, signed by President Ronald Reagan in December 1981, gave the FBI permission to engage in domestic spying when it has "probable cause" to suspect a terrorist threat. Although the order was ostensibly designed to protect Americans from foreign terrorists, recently released documents show that the FBI itself may actually pose a greater threat.

Twelve hundred pages from bureau files — released last month through a Freedom of Information Act lawsuit — alerted the public to FBI surveillance of groups opposed to the administration's Central America policy. The five-year investigation involved at least 52 of the agency's 59 bureaus and targeted church, labor, student and civil liberties groups.

The precise guidelines for these inquiries are secret or, perhaps, nonexistent. The Denver FBI office reported it was "not sure how much seemingly legitimate political activity can be monitored." And in a news conference last week, FBI Director William Sessions conceded the initial target of the investigation, the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, "was involved in political activities involving First Amendment rights — and not international terrorism."

The worst of all this is that a legitimate basis for the investigation may never have existed. Instead, it may have simply been an excuse to intimidate opponents of U.S. foreign policy. According to FBI informer Frank Varelli, who spoke to a congressional subcommittee last year, the bureau urged him to fabricate justifications for its inquiries.

These revelations provide plenty of "probable cause" for additional congressional hearings. Following on the heels of Lt. Col. Oliver North and the Iran-Contra scandal, Americans have had enough of unchecked governmental agencies and their secret un-American activities.

UI events must be explained

By Brenda Sutherland

Guest Opinion

People are talking. And if you've listened to what's being said by those around you, you've begun to recognize a pattern in the issues of their concern. My guess is in the last few months you've overheard discussions concerning the UI presidential selection process, the destruction of the Armory, the displacement of ROTC and the Foreign Language House, the proposed laser facility, the "temporary" destruction of the Union Field and perhaps even future hospital expansion and the status of Kinnick Stadium.

A pattern of issues emerges which I attribute to an alarming increase in the concern that issues are not being addressed in a manner which best represents the interests of the university as a whole. My perception of the effect which recent decisions have had on university morale finally compelled me to take action: I agreed to testify as a "student-at-large" representative before the Joint Educational Appropriations Committees of the Iowa General Assembly.

IN PREPARATION for the Feb. 12 hearing, I spent several hours speaking with administrators and asking straightforward questions about the role of students in the decision-making and goal-setting process. My first question was to the office of the president regarding students' rights to information and a request for access to the UI's 10-year capital projects plan. The immediately defensive response of administrators made me wonder if there was a backroom paper shredder working madly to destroy evidence!

It would perhaps be unfair to define what I discovered as a "cover-up," although any word I could apply would have equally negative connotations. I'm referring to an attitude which prevails in the UI administration; an us-against-them, adversarial type of attitude held by many top-level administrators towards students. This attitude has been reflected in recent decisions handed down in a manner which is like a slap in the face to student concerns.

UI ADMINISTRATORS have offered no legitimate opportunity for discussion of these issues. This attitude has never been more obvious to me than when I attempted to gain answers to direct questions and requests for information. Let me be perfectly clear on this point. The individuals I talked to were very friendly, enjoyable individuals and it is possible they did not, in fact, know the answers to my questions (a frightening thought considering the positions they hold!).

What seems much more likely, however, is that the evasion of direct questions and the nervous reactions I sensed to my requests were a reflection of the policy of an administration which imposes strict limits on student access to information and applies tight constraints to student input. The disastrous effects of this policy have been felt with each surprise announcement of new construction, destruction and displacement.

I SURMISE that the administration feels threatened by students who would insist the primary focus of decisions be on educational advancement rather than the current focus on the greatest financial gain and the desires of the strongest interest groups.

One example will provide ample evidence of the type of evasion I encountered. I chose to focus my efforts on understanding the hospital expansion project. A discussion with Richard Gibson, director of facilities planning, indicated the plans for destruction of the Armory and construction of the Psych Hospital Pavillion have been in the books for nearly 20 years. Direct questioning regarding future hospital plans elicited an answer of "I really don't know what they intend to do. They have submitted no long-term building plans to this office."

I NEXT SPOKE with a secretary in John Colloton's office who referred me to another hospital office. That office referred me to the office of the vice president for finance. I spoke with a very helpful individual who told me the hospital usually only submits plans after they have been fully developed and, to date, they had submitted only a three-year proposal.

I again spoke with John Colloton's office and gave them a more precise definition of just exactly what I wanted. During the third conversation with that office, I was told the document had been located but permission must be obtained from Mr. Colloton to release it to me — an interesting point considering all hospital documents which do not involve patient information are public access documents.

I finally received a call late in the day from Brant Echternacht, the assistant director of development who informed me that no 10-year plan exists. During our very friendly conversation, he acknowledged the director may have ideas about potential expansion, but the hospital normally documents its capital project proposals only three years in advance.

PERHAPS THIS is true, but it strikes me as extraordinary for a facility the size of the UI Hospitals. And why is the hospital exempt from the state Board of Regents requirement that the university annually submit a 10-year capital project report? Mr. Echternacht was unable to answer this question.

This is an example of the length to which a student must go to gain access to documents which are, by law, open to public access. And what about possible hospital expansion toward Kinnick Stadium? If this is to occur, chances are students won't know about it until it's too late to change the decision!

I am unwilling to place the responsibility for the existence of this policy on the shoulders of a single individual. I am willing, however, to place the correction of this situation squarely on the shoulders of the regents. If they do not utilize the current presidential search as an opportunity to bring change, then they are perpetuating a situation which will soon cause students to respond in kind to the administration's lack of trust and disregard. If the UI administration is not made accountable to the students and faculty, to whom shall it be accountable?

Much diversity To the Editor:

In response to David Essex's editorial, (The Daily Iowan, Jan. 26) I would like to correct some inaccurate information contained in the article.

Essex states, "The fact that middle-aged mothers vote and 18-year-olds do not, assured that Mothers Against Drunk Driving would have its hysterical way." I assume he is referring to the change in the legal drinking age in Iowa to 21.

First of all, MADD is not comprised of "mothers." Its membership includes both men and women from all walks of life and certainly the age of members is not exclusive to middle age. The president and first vice president of the local chapter are men.

Secondly, his use of "hysterical" implies that MADD's methods are over-reactionary and fanatical. This is simply not true. "Hysterical" would more appropriately describe the carnage which occurs every 22 minutes when someone is killed on our nation's roadways by a drunk driver. Members of MADD work diligently through its 400 chapters nationwide to stop the hysteria, by providing support to victims and their families, increase

The statistics indicate that the older drinking age will save lives. Alcohol-related crashes are the leading cause of death for Americans between 16 and 24 years of age. Persons in this age group cause 44 percent of all nighttime fatal crashes, even though they comprise only 22 percent of the total licensed population and 24 percent of the total vehicle miles traveled by all-aged licensed drivers. These are not MADD's statistics. They are provided by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and the National Safety Council.

Republicans beware To the Editor:

So, the Republicans of this great state feel Pat Robertson is the second most qualified man to be president of the United States. Albeit, he may be intelligent — a graduate of Yale Law School — but president of the United States?

This is a man who has built a broadcasting empire on the principle that God will financially reward contributors. He has claimed that he holds the power to summon God to control the weather. Perhaps the belief in such powers is not surprising in this era of spiritual revitalization, but what is so objectionable about this man is that he has no room in America for those who do not profess his beliefs.

Candidate Robertson wants to make America "Christian." The Republican party I have always believed in stands for the principle that America has acquired greatness because it does not impinge on religious beliefs. Faith is such a personal matter that even proposing a national religion cheapens Christianity and alienates the many Americans who practice other beliefs.

I am now faced with the difficult choice of whether I should desert the Republican party because it has lost its integrity as the party of reason, or try to reconcile Robert Dole's victory as a sign of some moderation. Iowa Republicans have been duped by the greatest "snake oil salesman" of the decade. I hope that the Republicans in other states will recognize Robertson's narrow views and support candidates that will serve all Americans.

House

University Services Assistant June Davis said. "It is in a key area, and if it is available, we purchase if we can afford it."

Because of its age, general condition and location, UI administrators are recommending to the regents that the house be torn down after acquisition procedures are complete.

"It will be nice to get it acquired," Campus Planning Committee

Chair Carol Casey said. "It has been a nonentity in the middle of the university for quite some time."

HENNESSEY SAID he had not been pressured by the UI to sell his home, but was prompted in January when construction workers installed an 8-foot fence around his house to protect it from remodeling of the UI Chemistry-Botany Building.

"As a matter of fact, I'm very grateful and thankful to the business managers of the university to allow my mother to die in her own home," he said. "I'm just sorry I outlived the former business managers who tried to buy it."

In addition to Hennessey, the structure now houses five boarders, all UI students, who will be forced to relocate. "This is life. Everything can happen," UI sophomore and boarder

Yudhi Sugandi said. "I would love to stay here, but if he sells the house — what can I say?"

Hennessey said he has until April 1 to vacate the house his family has owned for more than 50 years. He said he is unsure where he will live next.

"I'm getting old. Things progress, but it's just a house," he said. "And I never want to own a house again."

Shooting

do anything like this. I knew he had been harassing Laura. I'm sure she never did anything to lead him on."

POLICE ENTERED the first floor of the building following the shooting.

Farley, a computer software technician who was fired two years ago for sexual harassment, walked into the first floor of the building at about 5 p.m. carrying the shotgun in one hand and a 30.06-gauge rifle in the other, police said.

"Some guy walked in and started blowing people away," said Gary

Wood, technical illustrator at the company, adding some employees ran for cover, and others locked themselves inside office cubicles when the gunfire erupted.

A motor home registered to the suspect was also found parked nearby. It contained rifles, ammunition and filled gasoline cans, police Lt. Tom Moore said.

Police said the motive for the shooting appeared to be Black's rejection of Farley's romantic advances.

"HE WAS SOMEBODY who was apparently infatuated with her (Black), followed her around and even terrorized her," Moore said. "He followed her to ballgames. He followed her to the store."

After opening fire on employees inside the building, Farley "called ESL security and he indicated that he wanted to talk to Sunnyvale police," Capt. Al Scott said.

A police SWAT team entered the building on the first floor seeking out wounded people trapped inside and police negotiators began talking with the suspect, Scott said.

"Negotiators say he is showing some remorse about what's occurred," Moore said during the standoff.

Scott said Farley had warned that "if the officers try to storm the building he's going to take a few officers with him," Moore said.

The SWAT team surrounded the building, part of a complex of six buildings operated by ESL in the heart of the Silicon Valley. ESL is a subsidiary of TRW Inc., an electronics and defense contractor based in Redondo Beach, Calif.

ESL, which concentrates mostly on computer-aided drafting for defense electronics projects — much of it classified — employs some 2,200 people, a spokesman said.

without litigation. We will pursue whatever channels of communication that we can — be it the city manager, the city attorney or whoever."

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said the 60-day grace period will buy the city time, but added the parties' positions may be inflexible.

"Buying some time is always an improvement," he said. "But I've got to believe that the parties involved have very rigid positions."

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said the Environmental Protection Commission chose mediation rather than turning the entire case over to the attorney general's office.

"It seemed to be the wish of the commission that rather than turning it over to the attorney general, some other effort be made to solve the problem," McDonald said. "Whether it will solve the problem I don't know, but we are willing to try."

Woman sells house to finance funerals

United Press International

DETROIT—A 72-year-old woman who put her house up for sale to raise $16,000 she owes for the funerals of seven victims of violent death is borrowing another $2,000 to pay for Tuesday's funeral for a girl who starved to death.

Lois Frederick, of suburban Dearborn Heights, said she borrowed the money from a friend to cover the funeral and burial costs of Rishonda Jones, 15, who was found dead Feb. 8 in the Detroit apartment she shared with her mother and 10-year-old sister.

"Any child that starves to death in America, we need to do something to call attention to it," she said.

An autopsy showed that Rishonda, who was physically disabled, died from marasmus, a severe protein and calorie deficiency. Her death was being investigated by the Detroit police child abuse and homicide squads as well as the Wayne County Department of Social Services.

RISHONDA'S AUNT, Denise Sanders, who is caring for Rishonda's mother and sister, said Frederick contacted her through the James H. Cole Funeral Home in Detroit, which handled Tuesday's services.

Frederick has now paid for the funerals of eight Detroiters, all strangers to her. She began paying for funerals in July after she read about the death of a 3-year-old girl who died after allegedly being immersed in a running washing machine.

Last month, Frederick said she would have to sell her home to pay the $16,000 bank loan she owes for the previous seven funerals. She said Monday that she had received about $500 in donations, and her house is still for sale.

Meanwhile, Rishonda's mother, Michelle Jones, said in a telephone call to the Detroit News that she tried to feed her crippled daughter but the girl could not keep the food down.

Jones, 34, is being treated in the psychiatric ward of Southwest General Hospital in Detroit. Police have questioned her about the girl's death but have not charged her.

And other majors that don't guarantee jobs after graduation

Getting the job you want isn't easy. Especially for recent college grads. Very few majors will prepare you for a specific career, and guarantee you get hired right out of college. For the rest of you, finding something you like won't be simple. You could contemplate grad school. Or law school. Two or three more years of school, and student loans comparable to the national debt. There are very few jobs out there that require little or no experience. Jobs that you would enjoy, where the only requirement is a college degree.

The Federal Aviation Administration is now hiring Air Traffic Control Specialists. Over 3,000 of them. All you need to qualify for testing is a college degree. Any major is welcome. You don't even need any aviation experience. Consider the benefits: •Salaries to $50,000 plus •Up to 26 days vacation a year •Special retirement plan •Locations nationwide •Equal Opportunity Employer.

Graduation will be here soon enough. Consider a civil service career with the Federal Aviation Administration. For more information about a career as an Air Traffic Control Specialist, including an application, send your name and address on a postcard to:

More than 1 million people jam Canal Street in New Orleans Tuesday during the Zulu parade as Mardi Gras continued before the start of Ash Wednesday today. The warm weather was a factor for record turnouts.

Record Mardi Gras crowd parties hard

By Janet Plume
United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — A record 1.5 million Mardi Gras revelers, many in costumes ranging from the erotic to the fantastic, jammed the city center in spring-like weather Tuesday to celebrate the end of Carnival with the nation's biggest street party.

The first procession to reach Canal Street, the main downtown thoroughfare that borders the French Quarter, arrived about 7 a.m. CST led by clarinetist Pete Fountain and his "Half Fast Walking Club." Fountain had glued a small tuft of fake hair to the top of his familiar bald pate.

The raucous walking club took its time heading to the French Quarter, stopping at each bar along the way.

The streets were jammed with men and women dressed as Playboy bunnies, jungle warriors, vampires, vamps and other outrageous costumes. In the French Quarter, where the more risqué aspect of Mardi Gras is played out, scantily clad male transvestites competed with women for attention. The Phantom of the Opera was a crowd favorite.

DENISE RICHARD, 31, of San Francisco, who was dressed as a pumpkin, said: "I don't know when to go to sleep or wake up around this camp. I love it, it's great."

New Orleans Mayor Sidney Barthelme said the record crowd of 1.5 million was drawn by warm temperatures in the mid-60s and the memory of last year's near-perfect Fat Tuesday bash that drew throngs estimated at near 1 million.

Thousands of spectators braved overnight lows in the mid-30s and camped out along parade routes to secure choice viewing spots for the satiristic processions of the Krewe of Zulu, the city's only all-black Carnival organization and the first of the day's 12 scheduled parades.

The 27-float parade carried King Zulu, the Big Shot, the Soulful Warriors and scores of others wearing grass skirts. For the first time in two years, the Zulus dispensed gilded coconuts, the prize catch of all Mardi Gras favors that was banned after insurance problems arose when parade-goers were injured by the flying nuts.

ZULU WAS FOLLOWED by the majestic Krewe of Rex and hundreds of truck floats carrying more than 11,000 maskers. The floats spitting plastic baubles and trinkets flowed up and down both sides of Canal Street all day, while in the French Quarter, thirsty celebrants continued a binge of drinking that for many had been an ongoing party since Friday.

"It's great," said Jim Shaw as he watched his wife, Sharon, having her face painted. "It's like one big party where everyone is friendly. You have people come up and talk to you and it's just like they've known you for a long time."

Mardi Gras is the last day of unbridled pagan revelry before Lent, giving way at midnight to Ash Wednesday and the start of a period of fasting and austerity for 40 days before Easter.

Arrests were down despite the record crowds, police spokeswoman Ruth Asher said.

"The crowds are bigger, but we're running slightly fewer arrests than we have in previous years," Asher said.

But she added that most arrests typically occur on Fat Tuesday.

"With the weather shaping up like it is — warm, no rain and clear skies — crowds swell, people drink more and we have more arrests," she said.

On Monday night, a young man who dropped his pants and exposed himself, was arrested quickly by two police officers.

Unbeaten Hawks overpower Drake

Edwards in N.Y. spotlight

By Chris Wessling
 The Daily Iowan

For at least one day this season coaches and players from the nation's top women's basketball programs will become allies rather than adversaries.

In an effort to showcase women's basketball and the NCAA women's championships, five top basketball programs will be represented at the NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball Thursday in New York City. For top-ranked Iowa, Coach Vivian Stringer and senior guard Michelle Edwards will participate in the sixth annual media event.

On Page 4B . . .

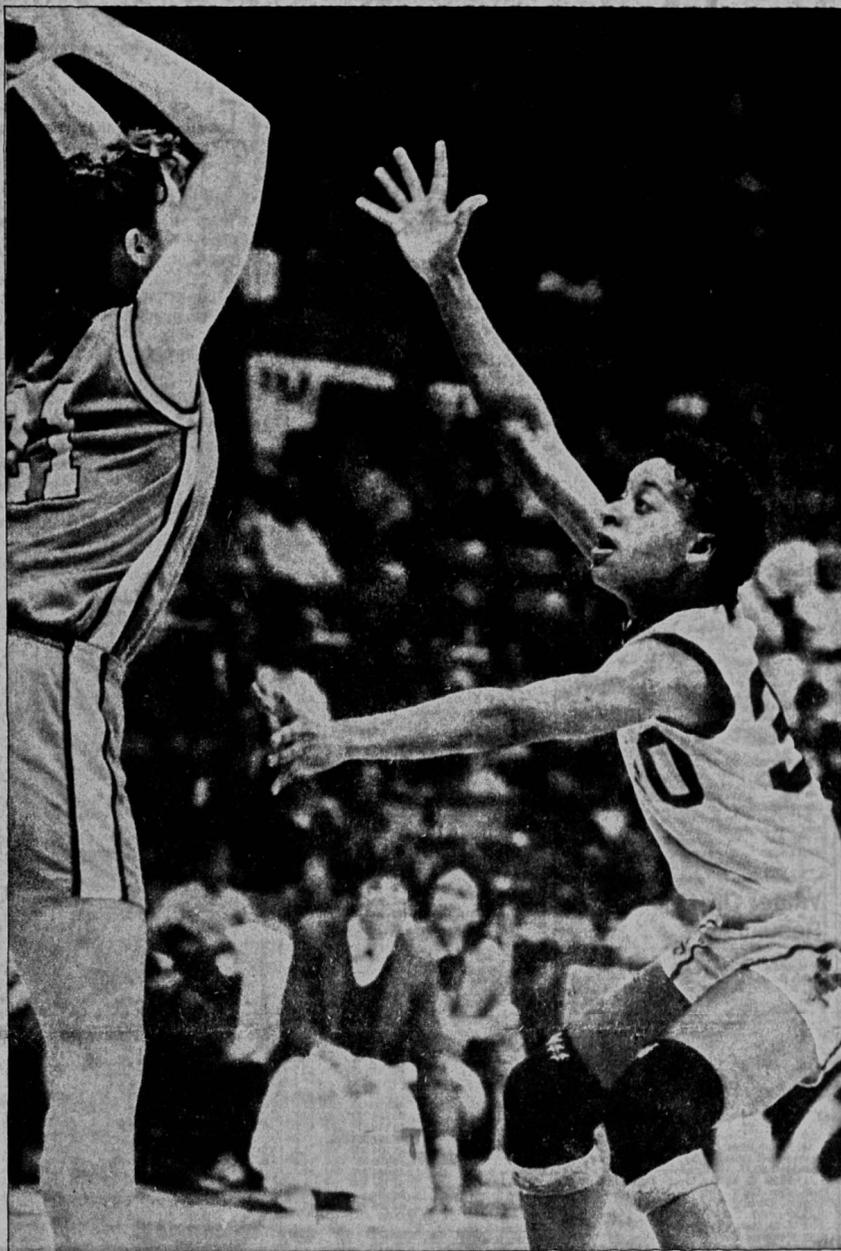

Iowa women's Athletic Director Christine Grant calls Edwards "a superb athlete" at the February Board in Control of Athletics meeting.

"When I first found out about it, I really didn't know what it was," admitted Edwards. "So much has happened to me and I really haven't had time to analyze it all. But to have them pick me instead of, say, Shanda (Berry) or Jolynn (Schneider) is an honor in itself."

AN INVITATION to the Spotlight may be an honor, but don't expect an abbreviated practice schedule for the Hawkeyes while their coach and top scorer wing off to the Big Apple — especially with a game against Purdue Friday.

Stringer and Edwards will head for New York only after today's practice, and plan on returning immediately after Thursday's festivities.

"I'm not going to miss a beat," vowed Stringer. "It is an opportunity for us to promote women's basketball, but nothing will interfere with my team and preparation. If it meant I would miss a practice or miss some serious time whatsoever, I would not be going there."

Iowa senior guard Michelle Edwards defends Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Iowa, ranked first in the nation, won 74-38 and upped its record to 20-0.

Cagers coast to 20th triumph of season

By Michael Triik
 The Daily Iowan

Vivian Stringer had an eerie feeling before her top-ranked Iowa women's basketball team played Drake at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Tuesday night.

Never before had Iowa beaten Drake at the Arena, and when the fifth-year Iowa coach stopped to think about Tuesday's matchup she became a bit rattled.

"We talked about the fact that we have only lost five games in four years on this court and two of those were to Drake," Stringer said. "It made me nervous. The last time we lost to them it was on a Tuesday and my assistant Marianna Freedman has only missed one game and that was the last loss to Drake."

"Circumstances didn't permit her to be here tonight, either. The whole situation was kind of eerie."

Iowa put aside the Drake jinx, however, and handed the Lady Bulldogs a 74-38 loss, the biggest margin of victory by either team in the series. The win also runs Iowa's record to 20-0 and gives the Hawkeyes their fourth straight 20-win season. Drake slipped to 12-12 with the loss.

IT LOOKED AS though the Drake mystique might have the Lady Bulldogs poised for the upset early in the contest, but late in the first half Iowa put the game on ice.

With five minutes, 3 seconds left before intermission Iowa went on a 13-0 run to take a 37-18 lead.

"Because we have three games this week I didn't know if we would be mentally up for Drake," Stringer said. "We knew Drake would be extremely high coming in here. They are a good shooting team, they work hard and we knew they wouldn't give up."

"I thought we played pretty good and did some things that we needed to improve on but we still have some work to do."

Iowa combined an explosive offensive effort from Franthea Price and a decisive rebounding margin to keep Drake under wraps. Price scored a career-high 29 points, including a school-record five 3-point goals.

AS A TEAM, the Hawkeyes hammered Drake on the boards, out-rebounding the Bulldogs 49-31.

"We rebounded better than we have been but we are a long way from where we need to be," Stringer said. "Fran had an outstanding game. She took the shots she needed to take. Michelle (Edwards) wasn't feeling good tonight but we have had the kind of team all year that when one player is down another player steps up to fill the void."

Price credited her success to a knock on the head she received in last Friday's game against Minnesota.

"I've been having some headaches off and on but I think it knocked some sense into me," Price said.

Watson, Oppegard capture bronze behind Soviet duos

By Martin Lader
 United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — Ekaterina Gordeeva, a slight 16 year old, and Sergei Grinkov skated a precise, error-free routine Tuesday night to pace a 1-2 Soviet sweep of the pairs figure skating title at the Olympics.

Elena Valova and Oleg Vasiliev, the 1984 Olympic champions, settled for second and Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard, despite a fall by Watson, provided the United States with its first medal of the Winter Games by taking the bronze. Gillian Wachsman and Todd Waggoner, the United States' No. 2 team, finished fifth.

Gordeeva, 90 pounds, and Grinkov, two-time world champions, received 14 scores of 5.9 — just short of a perfect 6.0 — and the four other marks were 5.8.

The Soviet Union is the team leader after four days of the Olympics with three gold medals and seven overall.

Calgary '88

Mount Allan, Pirmin Zurbriggen, a quiet, reserved Swiss who is likely to emerge as the biggest winner of the Olympics, closed in on his second gold medal by posting the fastest time in the downhill portion of the combined alpine event.

There was, however, intrigue of another nature as Katarina Witt, the East German figure skating champion, and a Soviet official indulged in gentle pokes at the West. And further dissent for the already troubled U.S. bobsled team became imminent when the two-man team including football star Willie Gault was the fastest American entry in a trial run.

Zurbriggen, 25, sped down the 1.6-mile course in one minute, 46.90 seconds to lead Franck Piccard of France by a half second, followed by Felix Belczyk of Canada. The combined, being contested in the Winter Games for the first time since 1948, will be completed Wednesday with the slalom.

JUST AS HE DID in winning the downhill a day earlier, Zurbriggen seemed to speed out of control near the top of the course in the combined event. At one point his hand appeared to scrape the snow.

"It's difficult to say whether I can win," said Zurbriggen, whose only weakness, if he has one, is in slalom. He is in good position to capture an unprecedented four alpine gold medals and has an outside shot at five.

"Slalom is a very hard course," he said.

Piccard had a time of 1:47.38 and Belczyk, a strong downhiller who is not considered a top slalom racer, finished third in 1:48.24. A.J. Kitt of Rochester, N.Y., was the best placed U.S. finisher at 21st.

THE TWO-MAN SLED of driver Randy Will and Gault was the best of the three U.S. entries, placing 24th among 47 starters. Gault is not popular among other team members, who resent the fact he didn't join them until last month. If he is chosen to compete in the Olympics, another controversy can be expected. Gault is currently an alternate on the bobsled team.

"We're going to do so well they won't have any choice but to put us in," said Gault, a star receiver for the Chicago Bears. "I think we can go faster, get our timing together better at the start. I was pushing pretty good, but I wasn't all out. I've got more juice in my tank."

Witt, the defending Olympic and world champion figure skater, told a group of more than 600 media people she owes her success to Jill Watson and her partner Peter Oppegard of the United States perform their routine during the pairs free skate program in Calgary, Alberta. The duo won the United States' first medal of the 1988 Olympics — a bronze medal behind two Soviet pairs.

Micki Schillig

Schillig steering Hawks toward successful year

By Hugh Donlan
 The Daily Iowan

Building a successful athletic program is like an award-winning recipe — it requires all the right ingredients.

And putting together the ingredients for the Iowa women's tennis team is Coach Micki Schillig, a former professional and collegiate tennis player who honed her court skills at San Diego State.

Schillig was thrust into the head coaching spot last February while serving as an assistant under

Women's Tennis

Charley Darley. Darley has taken a leave of absence from the position.

Although becoming a head coach was not one of her ambitions, Schillig said she has enjoyed her appointment as acting head coach.

"I never wanted to be a college tennis coach," Schillig said after practice Monday. But Schillig added she likes coaching because "it's challenging and it keeps me involved in the sport."

THIS IS SCHILLIG'S first full season as head coach, and the team and the coach have improved as Schillig has become more comfortable with her role.

"It's so much better than last year," she admitted. "The girls weren't used to my style and the things I expected from them."

After a three-year stint on the professional tour and four years in college, Schillig knows what it takes to be successful in the game.

Essential to the tennis player is conditioning, and three days a week the team participates in a conditioning program before practice. The exercise consists mainly of aerobics and lasts one hour. Schillig said she has seen results already.

"They've improved 110 percent in that area," she said.

Another part of Schillig's practice is a series of ball drills.

"THEY GO UNTIL I can tell they can't breathe anymore," she said.

After competing in two meets over the weekend, Iowa players were back on the courts Monday afternoon. It used to be the team would have the day after a meet off, but no more.

"I was always a hard worker and I want that of them," Schillig said.

She may sound more like a tyrant than a teacher, but the team understands what Schillig is doing and the rewards her style of coaching can bring.

"We really have a strong team,"

Hanks named to All-Bowl team

Iowa defensive back Merton Hanks has been named to the 1987 All-Bowl team, becoming the fifth Hawkeye to earn the honor. The recognition comes from Gary Slater, who is based in Federal Way, Wash. The All-Bowl team has been selected 12 times. Hanks is the fifth Iowa player to earn the honors. Hawkeyes Clay Uhlenhake (1982), Chuck Long (1984), Mike Flagg (1986) and Kevin Harmon (1986) are the others.

Trump may hold Patriots' 'trump card'

DEDHAM, Mass. (UPI) — The New England Patriots ownership battle was delayed in court Tuesday when it was disclosed former USFL owner Donald Trump may buy the financially ailing NFL franchise from Billy Sullivan and his family.

Attorneys for the Sullivans and for Philadelphia businessman Fran Murray's group, which owns the option to buy and is suing to obtain Sullivan's controlling stock, confirmed Trump may hold the trump card for all parties.

"Everything that he (Trump) has done has been a success and there's no reason to believe that wouldn't continue if he owned the Patriots," said Patrick Sullivan, Patriots general manager.

SMU gets new academic director

DALLAS (UPI) — Cynthia Patterson, director of Northwestern's academic program for athletes, has resigned to assume a similar position at Southern Methodist, SMU Athletic Director Doug Single said Tuesday.

Patterson, 32, will assume her new duties at the scandal-racked Southwest Conference school March 1 after six years at Northwestern.

Single, who also came from Northwestern, said Patterson will administer academic programs for all SMU athletes, monitor SMU's compliance with NCAA and Southwest Conference regulations and supervise the school's recruiting coordinator and academic counselor.

In the last two years, 113 Northwestern athletes have won academic All-Big Ten awards, 15 were named Academic All-Americans and three received NCAA post-graduate scholarships.

SMU was placed on NCAA probation a year ago and did not field a football team in 1987 because of a play-for-pay scandal funded by an alumni slush fund. The Mustangs also canceled their 1988 season because of the NCAA sanctions.

Soviets deny blood doping charges

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — A top Soviet sports official Tuesday refuted an accusation that Soviet athletes were blood doping to improve their performances at the Winter Olympics, saying the charge constituted "slander."

In blood doping, blood is removed from the system and stored. It is re-injected just before competition so the added blood increases the body's oxygen supply and improves stamina.

In the Tuesday edition of the Calgary Sun, Canadian Coach Marty Hall said he believed the Soviet cross country skiers use blood doping. "It's the most logical thing," he said. "I'm going to get in trouble for this 'cause I'm a loud mouth in the international scene."

IOC spokesperson Michele Verdier said the IOC medical commission had checked out Hall's claims with doctors at Canmore, the site of the cross country events.

"The IOC medical commission made a report this morning and there is absolutely no truth to the claims of the Canadian coach," she said. "They received a report from doctors at Canmore and there was nothing to substantiate the claims."

The Soviets finished first and second in both the women's 10-kilometer and men's 30-kilometer cross country races. Four of the top five women finishers were from the Soviet Union and the Soviets placed three among the men's top four.

"This charge could be considered only as slander," said Viacheslav Gavrilin, deputy head of the Soviet delegation in Calgary. "Soviet athletes never used and never will use such means. Hall brings out no facts and this is not surprising because there are no such facts whatsoever."

Without a workable test to detect the practice, the International Olympic Committee is unable to prove one way or the other whether athletes use blood doping.

Although undetectable, blood doping is banned by the IOC, along with substances that can be traced, such as steroids, stimulants and narcotics.

While few cases of blood doping have been documented, the most publicized case involved American Kerry Lynch, who admitted he used the procedure before his second-place finish in the nordic combined event at the 1987 World Championships. He was subsequently suspended from competition until 1989.

ABC rakes in solid Olympic ratings

CALGARY, Alberta (UPI) — ABC registered a strong 20.8 viewer rating and 31 share in the overnight figures for Monday night's telecast of the Olympics, the network announced Tuesday.

The rating represents the percentage of homes with televisions tuned in to a particular broadcast. The share is the percentage of sets actually in use that are viewing a given show.

The latest figures, coupled with Sunday night's 20.8 rating and 32 share, have given ABC a solid start in the 16-day Olympic competition. ABC, which has planned 94 1/2 hours of Olympic coverage, paid $309 million for the exclusive U.S. telecast rights.

Becker remembers to win, beats Forget

MILAN, Italy (UPI) — Top seed Boris Becker, ranked fourth in the world, fought back in his 1988 tournament debut Tuesday to defeat Guy Forget of France 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in the first round of the $490,000 Italian Indoor championships.

Becker, back from knee and thigh injuries which kept him out of tournament play since December, had to battle at times to pull his concentration together.

"The problem was partly concentration and partly because Forget played well," said Becker, a 20-year-old two-time Wimbledon champion. "I had periods of letdowns. Remember, it's been some time since I played the first round of a tournament."

Wimbledon champion Pat Cash also moved into the second round with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over persistent Swedish amateur Niklas Kulti. Cash, the fourth seed, needed almost 90 minutes to wear down Kulti, a 17-year-old from Stockholm, at Milan's Palatrussardi Arena.

In other matches, France's Henri Leconte, the sixth seed, continued his comeback from physical problems that plagued him last year and defeated Marian Vajda of Czechoslovakia 6-3, 6-3. Andrei Chesnokov of the Soviet Union eliminated American wild card entry Todd Nelson 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 and Sergio Casal of Spain knocked out Claudio Pistolesi of Italy 6-3, 6-2.

Expos sign 6 to 1-year deals

MONTREAL (UPI) — Pitcher Floyd Youmans and outfielder Mitch Webster were among six players to sign one-year contracts with the Montreal Expos, officials from the National League baseball club said Tuesday.

Pitchers Bob Sebra, Brian Holman and Mike Smith also signed, as well as shortstop Luis Rivera.

Webster's contract for $550,000 was signed one day before he was scheduled for salary arbitration. The Expos had offered Webster $500,000. The player had sought $625,000, a team official said. Details of the other contracts were not released.

Macon boosts Temple to 21-1

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Mark Macon converted a 3-point play and Tim Perry blocked a shot with two seconds left to play Tuesday night to lift top-ranked Temple to a 50-49 Atlantic 10 triumph over Penn State.

Macon, who finished with 26 points, helped move Temple to 21-1 overall and 14-0 in the Atlantic 10. Penn State, 11-10 and 7-6, got 15 points from Tony Ward and 13 from Tom Havasse as the Nittany Lions' five-game winning streak ended.

Olympic Almanac

Today is Wednesday, Feb. 17. The United States meets the Soviet Union in hockey tonight. Six racer Pirmin Zurbriggen of Switzerland goes after his second alpine gold medal today, competing in the slalom portion of the men's combined. Zurbriggen won the downhill portion of the event Tuesday.

Today's Quiz

Who was the youngest skier ever to win a gold medal in Winter Olympic competition?

Luge Scandal East Germany, which could sweep the women's luge today, was involved in a major luge scandal in the 1988 Games. The East German women captured three of the top four places then were disqualified when it was discovered the runners on their sleds had been illegally heated. The East German Olympic Committee blamed the affair on a "capitalist revenge plot."

Trainer's Room Italian cross country skier Bice Vanzetta broke her left ankle Tuesday after her leg became entangled in a fence during practice for Wednesday's 5-kilometer race.

Nils Linneberg of Chile crashed in the combined downhill race but was not seriously injured. Karla Delgado of Italy crashed during downhill practice, suffering a laceration on her right leg and straining ligaments in her right ankle.

Quote From The Past "I just can't wait to be normal again." — Anne Henning of the United States, who won the gold medal in the women's 500-meter speedskating event at the 1972 Games in Sapporo, Japan.

Quote of the Day "We stuck to our plan, which was a difficult plan. We wanted to tie and that is hard to do. It is harder than playing to win. We stuck to our plan because they are a disciplined team." — Polish hockey coach Leszek Lecjczyk after his club earned a 1-1 tie with world champion Sweden.

Goat of the Day Marc Girardelli of Luxembourg, the co-favorite with Pirmin Zurbriggen in the combined event, pulled out of Tuesday's downhill. It was not clear whether his absence was due to an elbow injury or to a dispute with his ski maker.

Quiz Answer Michela Figini of Switzerland was only 17 when she won the women's downhill at Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, in 1984.

Pin Fever The president of the Ho Ho Art and Craft, the official pin licensee for the U.S. Olympic Committee, has announced that his New York based company has sold 10 million Olympic pins for USOC sponsors and authorized retailers. The 10 million pins were sold in the United States.

Superstitious Mom When 16-year-old Anne Henning won her gold medal in women's speedskating at the 1972 Winter Olympics, her mother sat in the stands clutching a bunch of good-luck charms, including a four-leaf clover, Japanese beads, a Christmas ornament and two U.S. flags.

Do You Know the Rules The combined alpine event uses a complex point system to determine the winner. Points are assigned based on a mathematical formula set by the International Ski Federation. In each discipline the person with the fastest time is given zero points. Each following skier is assigned points based on the time he finished behind the leader, multiplied by a factor. In the downhill the factor is 600. The factor for the two slalom runs, which are added together to get the final slalom time, is 1,140. The skier with the fewest number of points after the two days of competition is the winner.

Did You Know The super giant slalom is being held for the first time in Winter Olympics competition this year.

Win over Iowa gives Purdue Big Ten edge

By Michael Triik
The Daily Iowan

Purdue's win over Iowa Monday night did more than knock Iowa out of the Big Ten title picture — it moved the Boilermakers that much closer to the championship.

Monday's win completed a three-game road sweep for Purdue, in which they defeated Michigan, Michigan State and Iowa.

"We're very happy that we made a sweep on the three-game road swing," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said after the 73-66 win over the Hawkeyes. "We thought that if we could make the sweep it was something characteristic of a team that has the ability to win the Big Ten title."

"Last year Indiana did the same thing. Now we have four of our last seven games at home, and I hope that means something."

Iowa Coach Tom Davis also endorsed Purdue as his favorite to win the Big Ten title.

"I DOUBT THAT anybody can catch them," Davis said. "They are an experienced and mature team. They have the schedule in their favor and I think that will help them in the tournament as well." Wisconsin Coach Steve Yoder said he thinks Purdue has the inside track to the championship because of its bench strength.

"Look at the Purdue bench," Yoder said during the Big Ten Teleconference Tuesday. "Right now every one of those kids is playing well for them. As you go down the stretch you are playing games with emotion and you are bound to get into foul trouble. If you can put someone in for five minutes without the level of play falling, then you have a fine basketball team."

Purdue leads the Big Ten with a 10-1 mark, Michigan is just a game back at 9-2 and Iowa is third at 7-4. Purdue and Michigan still have a game left to play, but the Wolverines will have to travel to Purdue's Mackey Arena for that contest.

PURDUE SHARED THE Big

Ten title last year with Indiana but was upset in the first round of the NCAA tournament. Keady said his team is taking a different approach this season.

"If we can maintain this level of play we'll be happy in April," Keady said. "Our attitude is that we are trying to hang loose. If we don't win the Big Ten, who cares. We want to win the NCAA tournament. Don't get the wrong idea — we want to win the Big Ten but the NCAA is more important."

Keady isn't the only coach worrying about the NCAA tournament. The league's coaches were polled during Tuesday's teleconference and the feeling is that six teams from the conference should make the postseason affair.

"Where we are I'd like to see as many as possible make the tournament," Ohio State Coach Gary Williams said. "I think they will take six teams again this year. With the games I've seen on television, I think ourselves and Illinois can certainly compete."

"I hope the committee will take how tough it is to play in this league under consideration."

Tournament invitations will go out March 13.

Lewis looking to Olympics

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

Randy Lewis still has something to prove — to himself, to the budding wrestling stars of the United States, and most of all, to the Russians.

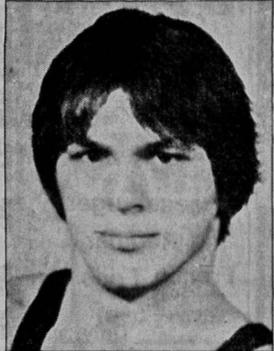

Lewis said he feels at various times in his career he reached the competitive level of his Soviet counterparts, the proven force of the freestyle wrestling arena.

But the United States has not faced the Soviets in Olympic competition since 1976. Lewis was the 136.5-pound U.S. representative at both Olympiads since then, winning a gold medal in Los Angeles in 1984 when the Russians stayed home and not competing when the United States boycotted the Olympics in 1980.

"I feel I still have something to prove," Lewis said. "I can't believe how much politics has affected me and my wrestling career. For a long time I was one of the best in the world, but never got a chance to really prove it for one reason or another."

"I REMEMBER WHEN I first heard the Russians were boycotting the Olympics. I was devastated. Twice in the next week, I broke down crying during practice. Here they were, taking away my chance again."

Lewis has had a celebrated career. He won all 89 of his high school matches (83 by fall) in his last three years at Grand Rapids, S.D. At Iowa from 1978-81, he won 127 of 139 matches, was a four-time all-American and won two national titles.

Randy Lewis

Lewis was on the World team as a college freshman, an alternate as a sophomore, a non-competing Olympian as a junior and was out of international competition with a dislocated elbow as a senior.

In 1982 though, it looked as if Lewis was finally going to have his day. He made it back to the World Championships and upended the defending world champion from Bulgaria, 13-11, in the semifinals.

BUT AN HOUR before his World finals match, Lewis learned his previous match score had been reversed, leaving him a 13-13 criteria loser.

Lewis won the Pan Am Games in 1983, but lost another chance at the World Championships that year to Lee Roy Smith. A year later, Lewis and Smith were locked in a legal tussle over the 136.5-pound Olympic slot. Lewis finally won after being left off the team for three weeks on an appeal process.

After winning the Olympics in 1984, Lewis retired for 18 months, figuring to wait for the 1988 Olympics. But a golden opportunity arose in 1986 for Lewis to wrestle Victor Alexyev, the Soviet he pinned in 1980.

"I just wanted to come back out and wrestle one match with the Russian," Lewis said. "I felt real confident I could beat him and beat him bad. But three days before the match, he dislocated his elbow. That was the match I really wanted. I was really wrestling well at the time."

NOW, WITH THE Olympic trials coming up again, Lewis is the sole competitor left from the United States' last 136.5-pound class. All the others — Smith, Ricky Dellagatta and Darryl Burley — are retired.

NCAA honors Iowa's Stringer, Edwards

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

Iowa women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer and senior guard Michelle Edwards have been selected by the NCAA to participate in a national press conference on women's basketball, it was announced Tuesday at the Board in Control of Athletics February meeting in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Five coaches and five players from as many schools will attend the sixth annual NCAA Spotlight on Women's Basketball conference, which is slated for Feb. 17 at the Hilton Hotel and Towers in New York City's Rockefeller Center.

The Spotlight's purpose is to promote women's basketball, as well as the NCAA women's basketball championships.

The other coaches and players who will attend are: Tennessee Coach Pat Summitt and junior forward Bridgette Gordon, Texas Coach

EDWARDS HAS ALSO been chosen by the NCAA to participate in a "Say No To Drugs" advertisement that will be aired during the last week of the season.

"She's a super role model," Iowa women's Athletic Director Christine Grant said of Edwards. "She's modest, hard-working and a superb athlete."

"The NCAA has really done an outstanding job attracting the best coaches and players."

Edwards, from Boston, is a two-time all-Big Ten selection who leads the Hawkeyes in scoring (19.8 points per game), field goal percentage (58 percent), assists (94) and steals (55).

In other notes of interest at the board meeting — which focused primarily on Iowa women's athletics — Grant announced hours for the Carver-Hawkeye Arena ticket office will be extended from 4 - 6:30 p.m. on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays before home weekend contests.

Grant said the extension was made "to accommodate people" who couldn't get to the ticket office before it closed at 4 p.m.

Iowa female student-athletes who received academic achievement awards will be honored March 16.

The list of Athletic Board Award recipients, presented by Iowa men's Athletic Director Bump Elliott, was approved by the board.

being brought up in a Communist country.

"I would have never been a top figure skater in a capitalistic state," she said. "My parents could never have afforded it and skating is an expensive sport. I think it is good that the state helps support our sport."

As expected, East Germany swept the first three places after the first two runs of the women's luge. Ute Oberhoffner was first with a combined time of one minute, 31.963 seconds, followed by defending Olympic champion Steffi Walter (1:32.001) and world champion Cerstin Schmidt (1:32.098).

The United States, which never has done well in luge, placed three women in the top 12. Bonny Warner of Mount Baldy, Calif., was eighth, Cammy Myler of Lake Placid, N.Y., was ninth and Erica Terwillegar of Lake Placid was 12th.

The final two runs are scheduled for today.

IN HOCKEY, POLAND emerged as the surprise team by holding world champion Sweden to a 1-1 tie, and now has yielded only two goals in two games; Canada beat Switzerland 4-2 and Finland routed France 10-1.

In addition to the completion of the combined and women's luge, there are three other medal events scheduled for today. They include the men's 5,000-meter speedskating, women's 5-kilometer cross-country and team 90-meter ski jumping.

Also today, the U.S. hockey team plays the Soviet Union. The Americans, following a 7-5 defeat to Czechoslovakia Monday, have a 1-1 record and the Soviet Union is 2-0.

U.S. Coach Dave Peterson said he expects his team to put aside the memory of blowing leads of 3-0 and 4-1 Monday night in the contest against Czechoslovakia.

Tennis

junior Robin Gerstein said. "Mickey has made a big difference. She pushes us so much harder."

The Hawkeyes are off to a fast start at 3-0, but they have only been challenged in one of their meets — a 5-4 victory over Texas Tech.

IN AN EFFORT to upgrade the Iowa program, Schillig has scheduled teams that are in the upper tier of collegiate tennis.

Next week, Iowa will face nationally ranked opponents in Arizona (Feb. 24) and Arizona State (Feb. 25), the results of which will be an indicator of where the Iowa program is and how much work is still left to do.

"They know those teams are going to be tough," Schillig said. "But they've got to see for themselves."

The team knows Schillig means business and the Hawkeyes have responded accordingly.

"The improvement and attitude change of these girls — they've just worked so much harder," she said. "They want (success) so much more than they did when I first came here."

Schillig said she has seen flashes of brilliance from all of her players but their outstanding performances have not been consistent enough.

"We have so much depth on our team," Schillig said. "We really do have a lot of talent — if we can just put it all together."

"It's not a crushing defeat; it's a defeat," Peterson said. "It's disappointing because we worked hard and played well. But it's not heart-breaking. This is hockey; it's not marbles. We're big boys, and we're not going to pick up our marbles and leave."

The Americans could use a Lake Placid miracle against the Soviets to bolster their chances of advancing to the tournament's medal round. A loss would mean the third and final medals-round berth in the Blue Division would likely be decided Sunday when the United States plays West Germany.

"They totally dominated us," Yow said. "We lost to a very good team. The thing that impressed me the most is their quickness and hustle at both ends of the floor. I think that says a lot about their character and what they want to accomplish this year."

'Ironweed' is rich but bleak

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Ironweed

Directed by Hector Babenco.
Francis Phelan..... Jack Nicholson
Helen Archer..... Meryl Streep
Annie Phelan..... Carroll Baker
Rudy..... Tom Waits
Peg..... Diane Venora

Showing at Campus Theaters.

Herman Melville said of his novel Moby Dick, "a polar wind blows through it and birds of prey hover over it." One hundred years later that chilling and bleak description could be applied to the film Ironweed.

Unfortunately, on an artistic level Ironweed isn't in the same ocean as Moby Dick. This is too bad, because the film is made up of some impressive parts; William Kennedy wrote the screenplay based on his Pulitzer Prize-winning novel, Hector Babenco directed the film, and Jack Nicholson and Meryl Streep turn in tremendous performances.

Ironweed is the story of Francis Phelan (Nicholson), a drifter coming to terms with his past in 1938 Albany, N.Y., where he confronts his estranged family as well as the ghosts of his life. It's also the story of Francis' relationship with fellow bum Helen Archer (Streep), exploring the highs and lows in both characters' lives.

KENNEDY'S NOVEL dwells mostly within the minds of its characters, creating a challenge for screen adaptation. It's apparent — judging from Ironweed and his co-scripting of Francis Ford Coppola's The Cotton Club — that Kennedy's talents are more fitted to the page than the screen.

Kennedy's screenplay wanders and rambles, often getting lost on narrative side streets. And in an attempt to show his characters' inner selves, Kennedy overloads the dialogue with pat philosophies, creeds and various personal maxims. The style is more obnoxious than informative, causing the viewer, after the first 30 minutes, to wish Kennedy had put more faith in the filmmakers to convey the characters visually.

AND IT'S VISUALLY that Ironweed's characters do come to life. Obviously, it's an actors' film, and Nicholson and Streep are two of our best (let's not talk about Heartburn). Streep the Star is gone in the role of Helen, disappearing into the character's wretched insanity of memory and survival. Streep handles the role's complexities and challenges as few of today's actresses could.

Nicholson is a weird kind of national treasure, and any role he plays must compete with his own

Francis Phelan (Jack Nicholson) passes on a prized baseball to Danny (Ean Egan), a grandson he's never known in Hector Babenco's Ironweed.

larger-than-life persona. That persona was allowed to run delightfully wild in The Witches of Eastwick, but as counterbalance Nicholson gets down and acts in Ironweed. He carries Ironweed, his acting saving it from being a slow bore. Anyone who had begun to think Nicholson's acting was becoming all eyebrows and grins will have their faith revived — in Ironweed he uses every tool at his disposal to convey Francis Phelan's haunted personality. Ultimately Ironweed is less than the sum of its parts — its lack of cohesion keeps it from being a great film. But while it never fulfills its masterpiece potential, it does gradually draw the viewer into the richly barren world of Francis Phelan. Albany circa 1938 isn't as exposed and bleak as a Nantucket whaler, but the polar wind blowing through it is still awfully grim.

English lady wins pancake race series

United Press International

LIBERAL, Kan. — The town's most fleet-footed flapjack flipper was no match Tuesday for her rival in Olney, England, who bested her by five seconds to tie the annual Shrove Tuesday pancake race series.

Liberal lost the trans-Atlantic race for the sixth year in a row and allowed the women of Olney to tie the series at 19-19-1.

Marcia Streiff, 30, of Liberal, won her third race and second in a row, but her time of 67.7 seconds fell short of the 62.9-second dash earlier Tuesday by Lesley Byrne, 26, in Olney.

"I would have been surprised if I beat the Olney time," Streiff said. "I think that's a little faster than I normally run."

SINCE 1950, women 18 and older on both sides of the ocean, dressed in skirt, apron and headcovering, dash through their respective 415-yard, S-shaped, cobblestone courses with skillet in hand. They must flip their pancake once at the start and finish of the race.

When she got her breath back and tossed her pancake one final time, Byrne said she hoped it was good enough to bring Olney level with Liberal in the series that started in 1950.

Legend has it that in 1445 a housewife making pancakes in Olney heard the peal of church bells that signaled Shrove Tuesday services. Not wishing to miss the service, she ran to the church with pancake and skillet still in hand.

Writers Guild gives awards

By Jack Matthews
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — Writer/directors James L. Brooks, John Boorman, Woody Allen, Bernardo Bertolucci and Stanley Kubrick were named Thursday as nominees for 1987 Writers Guild of America screenwriting awards.

Brooks (Broadcast News), Boorman (Hope and Glory), Allen (Radio Days) and Bertolucci (The Last Emperor) were selected, along with John Patrick Shanley (Moonstruck), in the best original screenplay category. Bertolucci's co-writer on The Last Emperor was Mark Peploe.

Kubrick and his Full Metal Jacket co-writers Michael Herr and Gustav Hasford were nominated for best adapted screenplay, sharing the slate with James Dearden (Fatal Attraction), William Goldman (Princess Bride), Steve Martin (Roxanne) and David Mamet (The Untouchables).

There was a particularly crowded field in the adapted screenplay category and some big names and heralded contenders were left off.

Most conspicuous by their absence were Tom Stoppard, who adapted J. G. Ballard's novel Empire of the Sun for Steven Spielberg, the late John Huston and Janet Roach, for their adaptation of the James Joyce short story The Dead, and John Briley, who fused Donald Woods' two books about South African black leader Stephen Biko for Richard Attenborough's Cry Freedom.

The Writers Guild's 9,000 members made their selections from a list of 130 original and 73 adapted screenplays that were eligible. The winners in the two categories will be announced at the guild's bi-coastal awards dinner March 18.
