Overdose sparks inquiry at UI Hospitals

By Dana Anderson

After months of debate, Iowa City and Johnson County have decided to split the cost of the Oct. 5, 1987, police shooting. The decision comes after four months of investigation between the two organizations over who should fund the investigation of the police shooting. The city will pay approximately $11,000 of the bill, according to Johnson County Assistant County Attorney Norma Schulte. The county will pay the rest of the bill paid as the dispute could be resolved.

Reagan's news conference hints at terrorism in West Bank, Gaza

By Norman G. Sandler

Despite the growing political tension in the Middle East, U.S. President Ronald Reagan has expressed concern over potential terrorism in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

WASHINGTO: President Ronald Reagan, opening a major diplomatic push for "a true peace" between Israel and its Arab neighbors, said Wednesday that the deadly violence in occupied territories was "a natural".

The president also said he would not rule out the possibility of terrorist attacks in the region.

The White House said Wednesday that it would not confirm reports of a possible link between the violence and terrorist attacks.

Reagan also said the U.S. is working to stop drug-related violence, including the recent attack that killed two military personnel.

President Reagan made a stop in West Berlin on Tuesday night.

Mystery of Union Field 'sculpture' explained

By Cathy Jackson

The mystery of the abandoned Office of American Indian and Alaska Native Affairs building is now solved. Officials say the building was used for the construction of the new Union Field.

The project was put on hold in 1985 after the DFL government came to power.

The building was used as a temporary site for the construction of the new Union Field.

The building was later sold to private developers.

The building has now been turned into a temporary home for the Union Field.

School board limits bids on grounds care contract

By Doug Krug
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board has recommended a list of companies to bids for grounds care services necessary for the school district's maintenance of its lawns and hedges.

The list was compiled by the Grounds Committee, which evaluated the bids submitted by various companies. The committee recommended the following companies: John's Mowers, 2150 Highway 20 West, Iowa City; Quality Turf Care, 123 S. Gilbert, Iowa City; and Wehner's Landscape, 235 S. Gilbert, Iowa City.

The selection of these companies is based on the companies' past performance and the quality of their services. The Grounds Committee will continue to monitor the companies to ensure that they meet the school district's standards.

The school board will hold a public hearing to discuss the selection of the companies and allow for public input. The hearing will take place on Tuesday, March 30, at 5000 High St., Iowa City. The public is encouraged to attend and provide feedback on the selection process.

The school district is committed to providing the best possible grounds care services to its students and staff. The school board appreciates the efforts of the Grounds Committee and looks forward to working with the selected companies to maintain the highest quality of grounds care services for the school district.

Newman building will be ‘user-friendly’

By Jay Center
The Daily Iowan

When his predecessor неделю before August, UI students will have a chance to view the new Newman Catholic Student Center. The $14 million construction on the corner of Jef- ferson and Clinton streets will be completed.

It is not the same site since 1939. Construction has grown through- out most of the winter, and center director the Rev Ed Fitzpatrick led to expect that the facility is to be the home to which the beginning of classes in the fall.

"From this practical point of view, I think people are trying to decide what the Newman Center is all about," Fitzpatrick said. "It will be moving and it was confusing."

Fitzpatrick said the old building was often criticized by students for not look like a traditional church. "There people didn’t even believe that it was a church," he said. "Now on the first time, looking for a Catholic church, it’s the next, and they would walk right up to it."

The new building will be user friendly, "From the beginning the whole idea was that it wasn’t even a house," Fitzpatrick said. "I’m really glad they are making a new one because the old one was absolutely horrid. It was falling apart at the seams." Moreover, "The old building was as bad beginning and ended in."

By Bobb Sommer

DES MOINES — House Speaker Chuck Grassley, prob- ated Wednesday Sen. Charles Grassley with the Republican Par- ty for the Senate, played down the possibility.

Avenson also said he believes Majority Leader Tom Miller’s early assessment of his condi- tion is a sign Miller believes he would win a primary. "I think he’s right," he said. "I think Charles Grassley is the next candidate I think will win and be the primary."

Grassley has said he wants to run for governor. However, his plan is to run for the Senate. "I don’t think he’s right," he said. "I think Charles Grassley will be the next candidate I think will win and be the primary."

We've all been watching the game of Pat Robertson, a most demented mind.

AIDS panel offers first recommendations

WASHINGTON — The chairman of President Reagan's AIDS advisory panel recommended a 10-year, $5 billion drug treatment program to help stem the spread of the country's most costly sexually transmitted disease.

The drug program as well as proposals to train and drug counselors and promote needle disposal were adopted by the panel. It was the panel's first formal recommendations since it began work last June.

Federal experts, including Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, have said the AIDS crisis is spreading rapidly among the 120,000 Americans who have been stricken with the disease.

``The vast majority of AIDS deaths are caused by the virus itself, not by the drugs used to treat the disease,'" Koop said, but that this population group is the toughest to reach through traditional education methods.

Filibuster forces senator's 'arrest'

By Mary Beth Franklin

WASHINGTON — Senate Republicans staged a rare filibuster Thursday, delaying consideration of a measure that would allow the Senate to vote on a campaign finance reform bill.

The senators, led by Majority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., and other GOP senators, used a series of delays and procedural maneuvers to prevent the chamber from taking up the bill, which would have ended the filibuster.

The measure, a compromise between Democrats and Republicans, would have included provisions to limit campaign contributions and spending, strengthen disclosure requirements and create an independent funding system.

The bill, which passed the House earlier this month, was opposed by McConnell and other Senate Republicans, who said it would burden their party's candidates.

But the filibuster came to an end when McConnell conceded that the Senate had enough votes to vote on the bill, setting up a potential vote later this week.

The bill's supporters hailed the vote as a victory, while McConnell and other Republicans accused Democrats of using delaying tactics to force a vote.

Filibusters are often used by filibustering senators to delay votes on legislation they oppose. In recent years, the tactic has become more common as a way for minority parties to block legislation.

In this case, the GOP filibuster was aimed at preventing the Senate from voting on the campaign finance reform bill, which would have been a Senate version of the House-passed legislation.

The filibuster began Thursday afternoon, with McConnell saying the bill would be a "virtual act of war" against the Republican Party.

The Senate, which was in session Thursday, was expected to vote on the bill later this week, with both parties forecasting a close vote.

The bill's sponsors, including Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and Senate Minority Leader Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., have said they would work to get the bill to the floor as soon as possible.

The legislation, which was introduced by Sens. John McCain, R-Ariz., and Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., would have required candidates to disclose their sources of campaign funding and limit the amount of money they could raise from outside groups.

The Senate's ranking Republican, Senate Majority Whip John Cornyn, R-Texas, said the bill would make it harder for candidates to raise money from special interests.

"This bill is about more of the same," Cornyn said. "It's about more special-interest money, more special-interest influence, more special-interest access to politicians, more special-interest money being used to buy votes and influence."
Simon passes up Southern campaign

Quint Press International

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gov. James M. "Jimmy" Carter, in yet another attempt to solidify his vice-presidential prospects, said today the Republican primaries will be "tough" and that he was willing to "compromise and negotiate for peace and democracy in Central America." The statement was made during a news conference with reporters.

Carter said he was "willing to compromise and negotiate for peace and democracy in Central America," and that he would work with the Democrats to achieve these goals.

The vice-president also indicated that he would be willing to work with the Democrats on issues such as the Iran-Contra affair and the ongoing war in Nicaragua.

Carter's statement was met with mixed reactions from members of both parties. Some Democratic leaders expressed support for Carter's stance, while others criticized the vice-president for not doing enough to oppose the Bush administration's policies.

Despite the mixed反应, Carter's statement is seen as a positive development for the Democratic Party, as it shows the vice-president's willingness to work with the Democrats on important issues.

Carter's statement also comes at a time when the Democratic Party is facing criticism for its handling of the Iran-Contra affair and the ongoing war in Nicaragua.

The vice-president's willingness to work with the Democrats on these issues is seen as a positive development for the Democratic Party, as it shows the vice-president's willingness to work with the Democrats on important issues.
Ashkenazy discusses career

By Daniel Carcelli

LAKEFRONT - Vladimir Ashkenazy is perfectly poised to praise the pianist's recent album. "I am incredibly impressed," he says. "He is a great artist." - the concerto that he, written for him three years ago - the concerto that he, Alice, overcomes the objections of her unemployed, tow-truck-driving husband and strikes out to improve her life. No one, however, seems to notice.

"I never deliberately directed myself at becoming a conductor," the 50-year-old Russian-born pianist told The Daily. "But I knew that that is one thing that I have been prepared for in many ways to do." In 1987, Ashkenazy was appointed music director of the London-based Royal Philharmonic. The orchestra will add the Beethoven Radio Orchestra to its line-up.

"As long as I can remember, ever since I was a little boy, I have always wanted to conduct. It seems to me as if it is as much in pianists as in conductors," he said.

"I don't think it is as important to the Beethoven Radio Orchestra as it is to the London Symphony Orchestra. But knowing that you are conducting in the Soviet Union we have many concerts and many performances, and I don't think that every concert starts with the London Symphony Orchestra. But without the people who have been brought in by the London Symphony Orchestra, there are some people who have been brought in by me."

"For many years, I have been interested in performing, more interested in the orchestral repertoire, I have been."

Then in 1986, the year he turned 45, Ashkenazy became principal guest conductor of the Metropolitan Opera in New York. "That was my idea of a conductor," he says. "I was not interested in making the music."

Ashkenazy says he has discovered that conducting is more difficult than he had thought he would be. "But every conductor has his or her own way of conducting."

"We will have to work together."

"I don't think I am good at conducting, but I think I am good at music."
Wrigley Field lights still causing controversy

Chicago City Council to make final decision on future of North Side night baseball games

By Susan Kostos

CHICAGO — A showdown over whether the Chicago Cubs will be allowed to install lights and play a limited number of night games at Wrigley Field is expected today when the City Council meets in special session to decide the issue.

A council committee earlier this week recommended approval of a proposal that would install lights at the former stadium on a temporary basis in order to play at least eight night games this season, beginning until Dec. 17.

The compromise proposal, which was agreed to by the Cubs, would be in effect until July 21, 2000, also would allow the Cubs to play eight night games in 1999, beginning the 1999 season while the number of 2000-season starts would drop from 38 to 34. Acting Mayor Eugene Welsh, chairman of the city's legislative committee, which also supported the compromise proposal, which was agreed to by the committee, said he was hopeful that the agreement would be in effect by the end of the season.

Acting Mayor Eugene Welsh, chairman of the city's legislative committee, which also supported the compromise proposal, which was agreed to by the committee, said he was hopeful that the agreement would be in effect by the end of the season.

All the above decisons would be decided at the meeting today.

To EASE THOSE fears, the 10-page proposal translates no beer sales at the park after the seventh inning, no parking concessions before the game, and calls for additional off-site parking to be provided by the Cubs. The agreement also calls for reimbursement from parking when night games are scheduled.

Cubs' professional baseball club, wants immediate approval of the lights as Construction is to begin immediately. The agreement also calls for reimbursement from parking when night games are scheduled.

Last week, aldermanic committee considered a compromise proposal that would allow the lights to be installed in time for night games this season. The Tribune Co., owners of the Cubs, has been fighting the last seven years to have night games played at Wrigley Field despite city and state regulations that prohibit such games at the North Side ballpark.

TRIBUNE CO. officials suggested playing only championship games be played at the Cubs at a softball game, and night games would be played in a new proposal as well as an agreement to allow the Cubs the ability to play any non-game games at home.

Two weeks ago, aldermanic committee awarded the ordinance that the Chicago Tribune approved, which also was agreed to by "Tozte," and passed an amendment calling for a "special" and "political" base.

Chicago's Wrigley Field is under controversy over the use of lights. A Chicago City Council vote today may allow the Cubs to play night games starting in July.

Chicago Mayor Eugene Welsh is working to get lights for Wrigley Field.

Cassini thrown in race debut

FREDERICK, Md. — Doug Golding Jr., who finished 3rd in the 1989 running of his own campaign to be the first American to fly to Mars on a reusable rocket, has decided Wednesday that his rocket will not fly. Golding, who has been a key figure in the recent history of space exploration, announced during the press conference held before the rocket was assembled, that the rocket had to be scrapped from the race and was flown by a truck driver in an effort to raise money for his next attempt to fly to Mars.

The rocket, which is due to be launched in the next month, is being developed by a private company and is scheduled to be launched in July. The rocket had been on display at the U.S. Testing Association, a facility where rockets are assembled, to draw interest in the project and to allow the company to raise money for its next attempt to fly to Mars.

By Bryan Miller

The Interfraternity Council has suspended in-house investigation of a fight between members of two fraternities that led to some injured and one dead.

Two members of the Delta Upsilon fraternity died on Saturday night after a fight with members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity. The incident occurred in a house on Willow Street, where the Delta Upsilon fraternity is located.

The Interfraternity Council announced on Sunday morning that the investigation would continue, and that the fraternity would be suspended pending the outcome of the investigation.

Delta Upsilon does not have a chapter at the University of Iowa, but the incident occurred in a house that is used as a fraternity house.

Delta Upsilon is one of the largest fraternities on campus, with more than 100 members. It is one of the most successful fraternities on campus, with a high rate of alumni giving.

The Interfraternity Council said that the investigation would continue until a decision is made about whether to reinstate the fraternity.

The council said that the fraternity would be suspended pending the outcome of the investigation.

Sioux City station won’t see
UI sports package information

By Trael Auble

KMEG denied in court that the current package holder - Broadcast
Communications Management Corporation - had an exclusive package on right of the sports package because it is the only company with information regarding the value of the sports package. In their case, KMEG officials requested to see information on the package value. The station also said that Broadcast Management (UI) has a contract relationship with the UI because it has information in its exclusive possession of the bids, which help determine the value of UI sports programming.

BUT LAWYERS representing Broadcast and the UI and the relationship between the two organisations is the same as with any independent contractor with the UI. Then compared to a building company, the UI ultimately performs construction for the UI. The court agreed with this argument and stated that the financial records of both parties are not public records, and that the information in the cases is not available to the public. KMEG General Manager Ron S. said, "We asked for the information, and it is not available to the public."
