UI vice president delays retirement Presidential search postpones Spriestersbach's plans

Duane Spriestersbach

By Anne Kevlin
The Daily Iowan

UI officials will ask the state Board of Regents in March to approve an additional year of appointment for UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane C. Spriestersbach, who Friday announced he will delay his retirement through June 1989.

The postponement will be Spriestersbach's second. He originally planned to retire on June 30, 1987, but agreed last spring to stay at the UI an additional year following the resignations of UI President James O. Freedman and UI Vice President for Finance and University Services Dorsey Ellis.

In May, the state Board of Regents named Susan Phillips as Ellis' replacement. But a search for a replacement for Freedman, who announced his resignation last April, has been unsuccessful.

UI Presidential Search Committee Chairman Sam Becker said Sunday the committee will forward additional names to the regents within the next two months.

"WE ARE MOVING as rapidly as we can to have people on campus to be interviewed before not too long, and then recommend some," Becker said. "It's just impossible to set precisely a timetable, but it is important that we move with as much speed as possible."

Becker added the committee hopes to start interviewing candidates off-campus soon.

"There are some very interesting people we are talking to," Becker said. "We hope they can be persuaded to continue to talk with us."

Spriestersbach said UI Interim President Richard Remington

asked him to stay at his position an additional year during which a new UI president will take over.

"It's a little hard to find a replacement for the vice president when one doesn't know who the president will be," Spriestersbach said.

SPRIESTERSBACH said prolonging his term as UI vice president is impeding "many, many plans" he has for retirement, but a

3 killed in crash near Oxford

The Daily Iowan

NORTH LIBERTY — Three Iowa City residents were killed and a fourth critically injured when a rented single-engine plane crashed into a farm field seconds after taking off here Sunday morning, according to Johnson County Sheriff Gary Hughes.

The Cessna 172 rented from Green Castle Aviation in Oxford appeared to take off normally about 10 a.m. in clear weather, then nose-dived into an empty field about one mile east of the aviation service's 2,400-foot runway, according to officials.

The airport is located about five miles west of North Liberty on county road F-28.

Killed were Megan Celia Danton, 31, and Gilbert Journell Cuthbertson, 31. The two were married to each other and lived at 1019 Rider St.

Danton, a graduate of the University of North Carolina College of Medicine, had completed her residency in pathology at UI Hospitals and Clinics in 1987 and was enrolled in a UI Master's of Business Administration course, according to officials. Cuthbertson was an advanced fellow in pediatrics at UI Hospitals.

ALSO KILLED WAS Brian Olson, 32, 301 Teeters Court. His wife, Molly Olson, was listed in critical condition Sunday night at UI Hospitals.

Brian Olson, originally from Moline, Ill., and a graduate of Augustana College, was a bank auditor for the U.S. Treasury Department. Molly Olson, originally from Romeoville, Ill., is employed as a staff nurse at UI Hospitals. She was transported to UI Hospitals by Air Care.

Cuthbertson and Olson worked together at UI Hospitals and had planned for the two couples to fly to Prairie du Chien, Wis., for a brunch and then return to the Green Castle Airport that afternoon, according to family members of Brian Olson.

Cuthbertson, Danton and Brian Olson were pronounced dead at the scene by Johnson County Coroner T.T. Bozek. Hughes said the victims had to be removed from the wreckage with power tools by sheriff's deputies as the plane stood at a 90-degree angle to the ground.

HUGHES SAID HE believed the plane "went straight down" into the ground.

A Federal Aviation Administration official walks away from the crash site of a single-engine plane which crashed shortly after takeoff from Green Castle Aviation near Oxford Sunday morning. Three Iowa City residents were killed and a fourth was critically injured.

Castle Aviation, said Cuthbertson was a regular customer and had learned to fly at the aviation service.

Nelson said the aircraft had been flown on a round trip to Waterloo Sunday with an instructor and student pilot and appeared to be in good working condition. Nelson said he returned from a chartered trip to Atlanta, Ga., Sunday afternoon and was not at the airport when the crash occurred.

A Federal Aviation Administration official photographed the wreckage Sunday afternoon, and a National Transportation Safety Board investigator was en route from Kansas City late Sunday to determine the cause of the crash.

The weather at the time was clear with winds from the south at about 10-15 mph, according to FAA officials. The plane was flying under visual flight rules conditions, and no flight plan had been filed.

Services for Brian Olson are being arranged by the Esterdahl Mortuary, Ltd., of Moline, Ill. Arrangements for Danton and Cuthbertson were not available Sunday night.

Iowa Charter Bill allows change in local government

By Craig Sterrett
The Daily Iowan

After remaining unchanged for more than a century, Iowa's county governments may become more efficient if a bill passed Friday by the Iowa Senate becomes law.

The Iowa Charter Bill was passed Friday by the Iowa Senate, 32-8. If it is accepted by the Iowa House of Representatives and signed by Gov. Terry Branstad, the bill will allow voters to call for changes in the form of their county governments.

The bill would allow county residents to place items on a general elections ballot to make a Board of Supervisors hire a county manager. County residents could also elect a chief executive officer to preside over the board of supervisors.

City and county governments could also be combined under the bill. County residents could vote to combine functions of two neighboring counties or to combine two or more offices within one county, Iowa House Local Government Committee Chairman Jim Cooper said.

THESE ITEMS COULD be placed on a ballot if more than 10,000 — or 25 percent — of a county's residents who had voted in the latest gubernatorial or presidential election signed and submitted a petition.

Each county could also set up a charter commission made up of elected officials and legislative appointees who could advise the supervisors on how to streamline their government, Cooper said.

Any proposed changes would be made if they are approved in a countywide election.

Iowa Farm Bureau Sixth District Director Dick Hahn said changes need to be made in the structure of county governments to make them more efficient.

"I think as times change governments, too, must change," Hahn said. "Some officials may lose their jobs, but in terms of efficiency it is a worthwhile proposition."

Bush, Dukakis pick up expected Maine victory

By Douglas Jehl
Los Angeles Times

PORTLAND, Me. — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Vice President George Bush won expected victories in Maine's presidential caucuses Sunday, but Dukakis' triumph was shared by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who demonstrated an ability to attract widespread support among white voters.

Dukakis and Bush profited from their victories in New Hampshire two weeks ago, as their principal rivals virtually ceded the race to them, allowing Dukakis and Bush to use their extensive organizations and regional ties to consolidate their hold on their native New England.

Jackson, who finished with 27 percent of the state's delegates to 46 percent for Dukakis, took advantage of the void, launching a last-minute television advertising campaign to help broaden the support he had already received from the state's union leaders and workers.

Other totals, with about two-thirds of the state's precincts reporting were: Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, 4 percent; Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, 3 percent; Tennessee

Panama prepares for strike against strongman Noriega

By Dan Williams
Los Angeles Times

PANAMA CITY, Panama — Timidly and in fear of reprisals, opponents of Panama's military strongman Manuel Noriega made preparations Sunday to mount a general strike today, while the country's deposed civilian president remained in hiding and vowed to stay in Panama.

Moves to get ready for the strike were painstaking. Because Gen. Noriega's regime has shuttered opposition newspapers and radio and television stations, organizers depended on a small army of women to make telephone calls throughout the day to persuade merchants and industrialists to close their businesses.

LOGISTICS, however, were only part of the problem. Fears tended to erode the willingness of protesters to display opposition to Noriega.

"People are afraid. It is a problem that they think is a problem — they think that death could come at any moment," said Roberto Brenes, a leader of the Civic Crusade, a grouping of some 200 business and trade organizations that have spearheaded the opposition to Noriega.

Crusade leaders say that they must make an impact with the general strike or face embarrassment not only inside Panama but abroad. "We have to show that Panamanians are solidly against the government," Brenes said.

THE GOVERNMENT indirectly cautioned against the strike by publishing stories in its own newspapers asserting that "the gringos" had ordered the work stoppage.

Noriega's opponents were clearly nervous. A small impromptu rally at a Roman Catholic Church Sunday broke up in panic when word spread that police were coming. No policemen showed up.

The Civic Crusade has been trying to overthrow Noriega's military rule of Panama since last June. The resulting turbulence has not only created immense local political tensions and severe economic problems, but has also seriously taxed relations between Panama and the United States.

Minority conference held

Minority students considering a career in law are invited to attend the 11th annual "Bridging the Gap" Minority Pre-law Conference March 11-13 at the UI College of Law.

The program will include workshops on applying to law school and obtaining financial aid, as well as opportunities to meet and talk with minority law students currently enrolled at the UI and a panel discussion with minority attorneys in various law-related fields.

Participants will take a sample Law School Admissions Test, required for admission to most U.S. law schools, followed by a workshop on the LSAT conducted by William Parker, an authority on standardized testing.

Mock law classes and tours of the Boyd Law Building, which opened in 1986, will also be part of the program.

A banquet at 7:15 p.m. March 12 will be headlined by Winnie Taylor, a professor at the University of Florida College of Law.

"The conference is designed to bring minority students into contact with educational professionals who can help them make intelligent choices about whether to attend law school," said UI Law Admissions Director Dennis Shields.

"The College of Law instituted the conference because it recognized that minorities are underrepresented in the legal profession, and it shows our commitment to increasing the number of minority law students," he said.

There is a $20 registration fee, which includes the cost of housing, two lunches and the banquet. Accommodations are in the Iowa House or in a local motel, but all participants should expect to share a room with another conferencegoer.

For more information, contact Dennis Shields at Boyd Law Building Room 276.

Student workshops held

The Johnson County Chapter of the Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities will sponsor a series of workshops for parents of children with problems in reading and math on March 5 and 12 in the Media Center at Southeast Junior High School, 2501 Bradford Drive.

The series is being held due to a favorable response to an earlier series of four workshops held by the association in October.

The series will offer techniques for improving study skills, tips for behavior modification, strategies for helping reading and games to help reduce friction and stress in the child.

The workshops are being offered to help parents whose children have fallen behind in reading and math. Participants in the sessions must bring a three-ring notebook and five dividers.

The fee for the March sessions is $10 for new participants. The fee covers the workshop manual. Those participants from the fall sessions who wish to review the material will be admitted free. Scholarships are available for the sessions from ACLD.

The sessions will last from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with an hour break for lunch at noon. To register or apply for scholarships for the March sessions, call Elaine Breuer at 351-6677.

Club to hold fashion show

"Couture with Color — A Fashion Collection and Luncheon" will be the theme of the annual University Club Style Show to be held March 8 at 11:30 a.m. in the Union.

Reservations are due Tuesday. Cost of reservations is $7 for members and $8 for guests. People wishing to sit together must submit their reservations and payment together.

Checks should be made payable to the University Club and given to Sally Dierks, 905 Weber St.

U.S. students score low on worldwide science tests

By Pam Murphy
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The scores of American students from elementary through high school on international science tests "paint a dismal picture of science education in the United States," a National Science Foundation expert said Sunday.

American students placed in the middle at best and more often landed at the bottom among test takers around the world, the study showed.

Twenty-four nations participated in the Second International Science Study in which various tests were given to some 204,308 students in 7,581 schools.

The NSF released the preliminary results from 17 nations that took part in the study. The first such study, also by the International Association for the Evaluation of Educational Achievement, was conducted in 1970.

"The data paints a dismal picture of science education in the United States today," said Basam Shakhshiri, NSF assistant director for science and engineering education.

THE STUDY concluded that "for a technologically advanced country, it would appear that (in the United States), a re-examination of how science is presented and studied is required."

The preliminary report of the study showed 10-year-olds from Japan, Korea and Finland bunched at the top, with U.S. fifth-graders eighth among students from 15 nations. Singapore, Hong Kong and the Philippines were at the bottom.

At the intermediate level, Hungarian, Japanese and Dutch students scored the best marks on the test, with U.S. ninth graders placing 15th among test takers in 17 nations, and Hong Kong and the Philippines trailing in last place.

The study also showed U.S. high-school students at the bottom. Among the various tests administered in high schools, students from Hong Kong, England and Singapore received the highest marks, while those from Canada, Italy, Finland and the United States scored the worst marks.

AMONG HIGH-SCHOOL seniors considered "advanced placement" students who were studying a second year of biology, U.S. students placed last with an average mean score of 37.9 percent.

Advanced chemistry students in the United States came in 11th in a field of 13 nations' high-school students, and second-year physics students from America ranked ninth among test takers from 13 countries.

"America's future as a world technological and economic leader and the quality of life we enjoy depend on confronting the real problems in science education with vigor, determination and a sense of urgency," NSF Director Erich Bloch said.

Shakhshiri said the NSF is supporting the development of new curriculum materials in all grades from kindergarten through high school and noted, "The training of elementary school teachers is a high priority."

Prisoner holds counselor, 2 fellow inmates hostage

United Press International

McALESTER, Okla. — A convicted burglar was held under extra security Sunday for taking an Oklahoma Penitentiary employee and two other prisoners hostage for 13 hours with a screwdriver, a prison spokeswoman said.

The incident ended when Robert Taylor, 27, — who had made no clear demands during the standoff — was overpowered by one of the hostages, counselor Chuck Ryden, 52, at 11:09 p.m. Saturday, said prison spokeswoman Linda Morgan.

Taylor and the three hostages were examined at the prison infirmary but had only suffered scratches and bruises, Morgan said.

Taylor, serving 15 years for burglary from Rogers County, was taken to an extra-secure cellblock Sunday and may face both state and institutional charges for the incident, the spokeswoman said.

THE INCIDENT began at 10:20 a.m. Saturday when Taylor asked to talk to Ryden about a special diet, Morgan said. Ryden escorted him into an office and Taylor then produced a screwdriver and took the 13-year prison employee hostage, she said.

Two other inmates who had been working in the hallway outside the office walked into the office and also were taken hostage, said Morgan.

"It's like they walked in on a situation, so we had one inmate holding three hostages," she said.

Negotiators talked to Taylor, but he never clearly spelled out any demands, said Morgan.

"He never came right out and said, 'This is why I'm doing this.' He never issued one large demand. The main issue throughout the day was he wanted an attorney present.

When he had an attorney present, he would present his complaints to the Oklahoma State Penitentiary," said Morgan.

MORGAN SAID the incident ended before Taylor's attorney arrived at the maximum-security prison, so officials never did hear his demands.

She said she was unsure what kind of special diet Taylor might have wanted.

"We allow special diets for special reasons like health or religion, but I'm not sure which reason he was asking for," Morgan said.

Morgan said an investigation began Saturday night to determine how Taylor got the screwdriver.

The inmates held hostage were Robert King, 33, serving 1,700 years for rape, assault with intent to kill and arson; and Allen Livingston, 39, serving 250 years for robbery with a dangerous weapon.

Police

By Susan M. Wessling
The Daily Iowan

A man was arrested by Iowa City police Sunday morning and charged with public intoxication, fifth-degree theft and interference with official acts after several males allegedly ran through a UI sorority house, according to police reports.

A resident of the Gamma Phi Beta sorority house, 328 N. Clinton St., reported at about 2:20 a.m. Sunday that several males reportedly from another college had entered the house, set off a fire alarm and were continuing to run throughout the house, the report indicated.

Police officers pursued the individuals eastbound on Fairchild Street, and one was arrested and charged, according to the report.

Ron K. Litton, no address available, was arrested at approximately 2:35 a.m., according to the report.

Theft: Sixteen bottles of champagne, valued at $57, allegedly were stolen from a UI student's car Saturday night, according to police reports.

UI junior Andrew Hampe, 322 S. Lucas St., reported at about 8 p.m. Friday that the champagne was stolen from his car while it was parked at McDonald's, 804 S. Riverside Dr., the report indicated.

Report: Approximately 20 individuals were asked to leave the Downtown Pedestrian Mall Sunday morning after police responded to a report that they were singing for money in the mall area, according to police reports.

The unidentified individuals left the mall at about 1:45 a.m., after they were told they would have to leave, and that they needed a permit to be soliciting on the mall, the report indicated.

Report: A hot-air balloon reportedly set down near a busy Iowa City street Saturday due to a lack of wind, according to police reports.

Balloonist Dennis Winegarden, no address available, set his balloon down in a yard on Brown Street — near Dodge Street — at about 5:50 p.m. Saturday, and a second balloon set down in Brown Street Park, the report indicated.

No damages were reported, and no charges were filed regarding the incident.

Report: Four intoxicated males were arrested by Iowa City police for riding a train Saturday afternoon, according to police reports.

Robert K. Miller, 20, 516 S. Dodge St.; Alan M. Kurtis, 22, 637 S. Dodge St.; Michael G. Horton, 21, 412 S. Dodge St.; and Thomas R. O'Neill, 20, 725 14th Ave., Coralville, were arrested at about 2:50 a.m. Saturday after riding on a flat car of a train traveling on the railroad tracks on Greenwood Drive, the report indicated.

Theft: Two cases of cassette tapes valued at approximately $400 allegedly were stolen Thursday from an Iowa City woman's car while it was parked in the driveway of her home, according to police reports.

Patricia Peyton, 2212 California Ave., reported at about 7 a.m. Friday that sometime overnight an unidentified individual allegedly stole the cases, one described as saddle-tan leather with a red label on the front with "Peyton" written on it, and the other described as black plastic, and the tapes inside, the report indicated.

UI to test foreign TAs' English

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

To stop a wave of student and parental concern about the inadequate communication skills of some foreign teaching assistants, the UI's English as a Foreign Language program will administer mandatory English proficiency tests to foreign graduate T.A. candidates beginning next fall.

The mandatory test will consist of two parts — a taped oral proficiency exam and a 10-minute videotaped presentation test.

Under the new policy, candidates may fall into one of four categories of English proficiency: unconditionally ready to teach a full course, ready to grade papers and teach a lab or discussion section, ready to grade papers only, or not ready for a T.A. position.

To become unconditionally certified to teach, according to the policy, candidates must prove their speech is understandable to the average American undergraduate. They should also be able to understand the speech of the American student, have some cultural understanding of the United States and be able to present an organized and coherent lecture.

THE TESTS will be scored by undergraduate students, raters from EFL and a member of the candidate's department, EFL Coordinator and Linguistics Professor Maureen Burke said. But Burke said the scoring policy is still being determined.

"For those who don't pass," Burke said, "we're talking about taking components of the summer program and extending them to a yearlong program."

UI Graduate Student Senate President Alan Tribble said the senate supports the policy, but said he had reservations about the financial drain it may create.

"If someone doesn't pass the exam, then they'll have to hire another (T.A.). It will be a financial drain, but I think in the long run it will improve the quality of the education here," he said.

ANOTHER SENATE concern, according to Tribble, is possible faculty reluctance to hire students they think may not pass the test.

"If a professor hires a T.A. realizing it's possible he's not going to be able to work for him, he might be more inclined to appoint him as research assistant instead and give the T.A. positions to American students," Tribble said.

Burke said the new policy will compliment EFL's increasingly popular voluntary Teaching Assistant Preparation in English, a six-week intensive summer course taught to foreign students. "Because of the complaints, something obviously had to be done," she said. "The testing program has been in the works for awhile. 1985 was devoted to taking a look and seeing if we could do something about the problem, and that summer we instigated the TAPE program."

Graduate T.A. in Management Science Jishan Zhu said he supports the policy as well, but thinks the tests should concentrate on vocabulary needed for the course.

"In a lot of countries they don't teach American slang. The university has to decide what it should test and should emphasize vocabulary related to the course," he said. "I was talking to some American students, and they said foreign T.A.'s are much better than American T.A.'s just related to their knowledge in the course."

UI celebrates Black History Month

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

Black History Month, a nationwide celebration held in February, was low-key in Iowa City this year compared to celebrations held in the past, UI Black Student Union President Rodney Sturgeon said Sunday.

"Last year, you might remember, we held a rally protesting racism," Sturgeon, who came to the UI in 1985, said. "Iowa City is a liberal place. There is not a lot of overt racism. It's a little more subtle."

But opportunities for black Iowans are steadily improving by opening lines of communication, he said.

"Three weeks ago the law school held a conference forum for black students to get things off their chests," he said, adding the UI faculty is responsive to the UI's black community.

UI groups held a variety of activities in conjunction with Black History Month this year.

THE UI BLACK Student Union held a minority student leader retreat in the Union Feb. 13 and co-sponsored a party with Alpha Phi Alpha Saturday at the Union.

"I went to the event Saturday," UI Liberal Arts Student Association Treasurer and Minority Affairs Chairman Eric Sanders said. "It was called the Chocolate Affair. It was sort of a dance, and we did some stepping, and they had some chocolate confections."

Sanders said the monthlong celebration is a "getting-together process," a time to unify Iowa City's small black community. "Groups on campus try to bring attention to minority students on campus and try to bring recognition to the contributors, like George Washington Carver and the contributions he made to science," he said.

The Voices of Soul, a UI vocal group, Saturday held a reception at the Union Ballroom which included singing and black history presentations.

"A LOT OF children were there from the Iowa City community," UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard said, adding there were various programs held by Iowa City public schools during the monthlong celebration. "It showed students trying to bring some of the black culture to the university."

Hubbard said despite Iowa City's small minority population, it is a good place for minorities to settle.

"It's simply a nice place to live, and I guess it avoids some of the problems of a large urban center," Hubbard said, adding Iowa City has a good family environment and a good school system.

"Of course, the people are the most important thing," he said. "I feel Iowa City has a very open and encouraging environment (for minorities)."

Peace march to spend July 4 in Iowa City

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

For most people, a Fourth of July in Iowa City typically brings to mind watermelon, sweet corn and a late-night fireworks extravaganza.

But for some special visitors to Iowa City this summer, the celebration will be a once-in-a-lifetime experience.

This year Iowa City will play host on Independence Day to a delegation of 200 Soviet citizens and 230 Americans who are participating in the 1988 American-Soviet Walk across the United States.

On June 14 the group will begin a monthlong journey across the country. The trek — 250 miles of which will be made on foot — will begin in Washington, D.C., and end in San Francisco.

Iowa City resident Martie Olson, who serves as Midwest Regional Director for International Peace Walks Incorporated, the organization sponsoring the American-Soviet Walk, participated in the 1987 Soviet-American Walk from Leningrad to Moscow. This unique brand of grass-roots diplomacy took a giant step toward achieving better U.S.-Soviet relations, according to Olson.

"IT WAS OVERWHELMING," she said. "It did, we feel, make a difference. The reaction of the Soviet people was fantastic."

"We were on the front page of the papers daily," Olson said. "We were the top story the entire time we were there. We were able to touch thousands of people."

The walk is divided into three regions, according to Olson. The Eastern regional segment will follow a route from Washington, D.C., to Philadelphia. Walkers will then be bused to Moline, Ill., where the Midwest regional leg begins.

American and Soviet walkers will spend July 3 and 4 in Iowa City. Olson said the International Peace Walks, Inc. will try to show the Soviet visitors what life is like in typical midwestern communities.

"WE DON'T WANT to come into Midwestern communities and say 'This is what International Peace Walks is doing,'" she said. "What we'd like to do instead is to say, 'What would you like to do to share with our guests? Is there something unique about your town or community we could emphasize?'"

The 1988 American-Soviet Walk is an outgrowth of the 1986 Great Peace March. Soviet walkers were so well-received in Iowa during that walk that they remembered the state, Olson said.

"When the march got to Iowa, the entire temperament of it changed," she said. "Nebraska didn't seem to be quite ready for that kind of openness. It just kind of closed down when they came through. But that all changed when it got to Iowa."

Karen Hradek, who serves as Iowa City coordinator for the walk, said plans for the joint American-Soviet venture are not firm yet, but that next month more definitive plans would begin to be made.

Democrats blast front-runners

Dukakis and Gephardt accused of ignoring South

By Jeri Clausing
United Press International

HOUSTON — Four Democratic presidential candidates who debated for the second time in two days Sunday accused front-runners Michael Dukakis and Richard Gephardt of turning their backs on the South by declining to attend.

Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, Illinois Sen. Paul Simon and former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart spent much of their time during and after the televised debate blasting their absent opponents.

"I really think it is unfortunate that Richard Gephardt and Michael Dukakis chose to skip this debate," Gore said after the broadcast. "The candidates chose to turn their backs on Texas."

Hart said during the debate the two "apparently don't have that much interest in the South" nine days before the March 8 Super Tuesday elections, when Texas and 19 other mostly Southern states weigh in on the race.

All six major candidates met Saturday in Atlanta in a debate sponsored by the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and televised by Cable News Network. They are scheduled to meet again Monday in Nashville, Tenn., in a debate sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Jackson said he had reservations about the plethora of televised forums in recent months, in which the candidates often have been restricted to 30-, 60- or 90-second responses to questions.

"I'm concerned that in debates like this we have too little time to focus on the new South's economic and environmental challenges," Jackson said. "Poverty, drug abuse, education and economic reform are top priorities in the South."

Gore, who has staked his entire campaign on Super Tuesday, said he welcomed frequent debates. He again took shots at Dukakis, the Massachusetts governor who dominated Maine's Democratic caucuses Sunday, and Gephardt, the Missouri congressman who is the only other Democrat to win early presidential contests.

But after Gore promised to put the White House back on the side of working people, Hart complained, "A way must be found to get past the slogans. We all want to put the White House back on the side of America and working people."

The candidates pledged to develop economic and foreign policies to give voters renewed confidence in their party. At the same time, they criticized the policies of President Ronald Reagan and his Republican would-be successors.

"We represent 20 percent of the world's economy, and we have no energy policy," Simon said. "It's absolutely insane."

Republican hopefuls debate in South

By Matthew C. Quinn
United Press International

ATLANTA — Vice President George Bush and Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, in their first debate since the New Hampshire primary, sought Sunday to outdo each other as acolytes of President Ronald Reagan in a region where the president's popularity remains high.

There were no real fireworks between the two leading candidates for the Republican presidential nomination, who confined their quarrels mostly to policy matters nine days before the Super Tuesday primaries in 20 mostly Southern states.

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York was the most aggressive during the 90-minute debate among the four major GOP aspirants, charging the nomination of Bush or Dole would mean "the Reagan revolution is over — it's dead."

And former television evangelist Pat Robertson, after a series of statements that have been attacked as off-the-wall, sought to appear statesmanlike, promising to convene a Middle East peace conference in Washington if elected.

THERE WERE harsh words for Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the Panamanian strongman who refuses to step down despite a federal indictment against him on drug charges.

"We ought to give Noriega 30 days to get out of Panama or we're going to have a trade embargo," Dole said. "Let's take care of Noriega. He's been peddling drugs in this country for too long."

"If the Panamanians want to keep

Noriega," Kemp said, "the United States is going to keep the Panama Canal."

Bush and Dole, leading Kemp and Robertson in the race, emphasized their ties to Reagan in the debate sponsored by The Atlanta Journal-Constitution. They argued about plans to freeze federal spending and to handle foreign trade.

At one point, Dole, the Senate Republican leader, suggested Bush had not done enough to round up votes in Congress for Reagan's aid program for the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's Soviet-backed government.

"Why couldn't you get that done, George?" Dole asked. "Why didn't you try and get some votes on Contra aid?"

With an eye on Reagan's popularity in the Deep South, Bush said he had been "standing shoulder-to-shoulder as vice president with a president I greatly respect" during the last eight years.

"The American people are going to be looking for leadership," Bush said.

Bush, Jackson, Gore head up primary polls

United Press International

Vice President George Bush easily tops his closest rival, Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, in South Carolina, Kentucky and Florida in the last days before the three states' presidential primaries, polls showed Sunday.

The leads in the Democratic races were divided up, with civil rights leader Jesse Jackson running as the strong favorite in his home state of South Carolina, Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee ahead in Kentucky and the undecided vote with the greatest percentage in Florida, the polls showed.

In South Carolina, which holds its primaries Saturday, Bush was preferred by 48 percent and Dole of Kansas was chosen by 25 percent of the registered voters questioned last week by The State, a Columbia newspaper. The poll surveyed 516 registered voters.

FLORIDA AND Kentucky are among the 20 mostly Southern states that will hold Super Tuesday primaries on March 8.

Former TV evangelist Pat Robertson of Virginia garnered 19 percent in the South Carolina poll and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York was the pick of 3 percent of the respondents. Five percent of the Republicans were undecided.

Among South Carolina Democrats, the poll found that Jackson was favored by 35 percent of the voters and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis was supported by 17 percent. The undecided count followed close behind with 16 percent.

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri was favored by 10.9 percent, former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart by 10.5 percent, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois by 5.5 percent and Gore by 4.2 percent.

ALSO SUNDAY, a poll said Illinois voters have given top ratings to Illinois Democrat Paul Simon and Republican Bush and in the March 15 state presidential primary, a poll said Sunday.

Bush, who suffered defeat in three Midwestern states at the hands of Dole, was favored by 48 percent of the Republicans surveyed who planned to vote in the Illinois primary March 15. Simon, who had disappointing showings in last week's voting in Minnesota and South Dakota, was favored by 46 percent of Democrats surveyed.

The joint statewide telephone poll of 1,205 registered voters by the Chicago Sun-Times and WLS-Television was taken between Feb. 19 and Feb. 23, before Simon pulled out of the Super Tuesday primaries March 8 partially because of finances.

Church mounts campaign in Prague

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — After years of grass-roots growth, Czechoslovakia's Roman Catholic Church has mounted a new campaign to strengthen its legal position and seems close to winning concessions from Prague's Communist authorities.

For the first time in almost four years, representatives of the government are negotiating with the Vatican on the appointment of new bishops for the country's 10 dioceses with vacant posts. No new bishop has been appointed here since 1973.

At the same time, communist authorities have been forced to react to a petition drive that church officials say has collected 300,000 signatures in support of greater freedoms for the church. The popular campaign is one of the most extensive independent in the country since the Soviet invasion of 1968.

Iraq to begin bombing Iranian cities

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq said Sunday it will start bombing all Iranian cities "until further notice" in retaliation for heavy Iranian artillery and rocket barrages that killed "large numbers" of civilians in five Iraqi border cities.

Baghdad Radio made the announcement after several stories by both countries, including an Iraqi air raid on an oil refinery near Tehran and three Iranian fighter-bomber attacks against petrochemical installations and strategic bridges in southern Iraq.

Iran had served notice to Iraqi civilians to flee their homes before it starts what it described as retaliatory bombardment against Baghdad and other major cities.

Abandoned newborn found in garbage

CHICAGO — A newborn baby boy with an extra finger on each hand abandoned in a south side garbage can was recovering from hypothermia Sunday, while authorities searched for his mother.

The baby may have been abandoned because of the deformity, police speculated.

The 6-pound, 4-ounce baby was discovered Saturday night by a passerby who heard the child's muffled cries coming from the garbage can, police said. The infant, with his umbilical cord still attached, was wrapped in a plastic bag placed inside a paper bag, said Youth Division Sgt. John Kelly.

The baby was taken to Little Company of Mary Hospital where he was being treated for hypothermia caused by exposure, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Herlihy. He was listed in fair condition.

Composer Vincent de Paul dies at 68

LOS ANGELES — Composer, pianist and musical arranger Gene Vincent de Paul, who collaborated on the Academy Award-winning score for the 1954 musical Seven Brides for Seven Brothers, died Saturday at his Los Angeles home.

De Paul, 68, had an inoperable brain tumor, his son Tony de Paul said.

Born in New York on June 17, 1919, some of de Paul's biggest hits were "Star Eyes," "Irresistible," "Cow Cow Boogie," "When You're in Love," "Mr. Five by Five" and "I'll Remember April," a song that inspired de Paul to name his daughter April, Tony de Paul said.

Swaggart attends service, says thanks

BATON ROUGE, La. — Television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, banned from the pulpit for three months because of a sex scandal, briefly took the podium Sunday at his Family Worship Center to give thanks for expressions of support.

Swaggart and his wife, Frances, who also spoke to the congregation, took their customary seats in the front row of church elders and officers on the righthand side of the stage.

"This has been the darkest week we have experienced," Swaggart said.

Life support for Texas baby shut down

LOMA LINDA, Calif. — A Texas baby born missing most of her brain was breathing on her own Sunday after doctors turned off life-support systems that had helped to preserve her organs in a controversial transplant program, officials said.

With the parents' consent, physicians at Loma Linda University Medical Center removed Baby Evelyn from artificial breathing equipment late Saturday, seven days after her birth in San Antonio. She was born with a fatal genetic defect called anencephaly, in which most of her brain and skull were missing.

"Baby Evelyn continues to breathe on her own but shows signs of gradual deterioration," Anita Rockwell, a spokeswoman for the hospital said Saturday night.

Hospital officials said Sunday the baby was still alive, but a new update on her condition was not immediately available.

Man detained for carrying rifle

LONG BEACH, Calif. — A man carrying an unloaded rifle to his car was briefly detained by police Sunday when he was spotted near the church where Britain's Prince Andrew and his wife, Sarah, attended services, authorities said.

Long Beach Police Lt. Ron Mickelson said the man had just picked up the gun at a police station. The gun had been confiscated three days ago by officers after the man's wife filed a complaint followed an argument.

"It was just some poor chump trying to take his gun home," Mickelson said.

2 Palestinians killed as army, civilians clash

By Edward Cody
Washington Post

ABUD, Occupied West Bank — Two Palestinians were killed in this West Bank village as rioting youths were confronted by Israeli army troops and armed Jewish civilians from a nearby settlement, residents and Israeli military spokesmen reported Sunday.

The violence, which villagers said started Saturday night and went on until early Sunday morning, marked a re-emergence of vigilante actions by Jewish settlers in the face of persistent stoning by Palestinians protesting Israel's 20-year occupation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. Although army officers have sought to discourage such actions in the past, residents here said the settlers who entered Abud were seen firing weapons alongside regular troops.

One settler was arrested and will be arraigned today, Israeli state radio reported.

THE KILLINGS of the two Palestinians, aged 17 and 23, pushed the death toll in 11 weeks of angry demonstrations to more than 70 Palestinians, according to U.N. and Israeli counts. No Israelis have been killed in the clashes. The killings, most of them by Israeli army gunfire, and the protests, have intensified since Secretary of State George Shultz began his Middle East peace mission last Thursday.

Meanwhile, a military spokesman said a Navy gunboat off the Lebanese city of Tyre fired on a dinghy manned by guerrillas trying to launch an attack on Israel. According to news agencies, Palestinian sources in Lebanon said two guerrillas, from the Fatah faction of the Palestine Liberation Organization, were killed and three swam to shore after the attack. The sources said the guerrillas were on their way to attack a military base at Nahariya in northern Israel.

Egypt backs Middle East peace plan

By David B. Ottaway
Washington Post

CAIRO, Egypt — Egypt Sunday became the first Arab country to signal its backing for the new American peace plan for the Middle East, as Secretary of State George Shultz emphasized that he is seeking a comprehensive settlement and not just to quell violence in the territories occupied by Israel.

After three hours of talks with President Hosni Mubarak, Shultz declared, "I think I can say we both feel we have a package, and it's promising. At least we think it's promising. Whether anybody else will think it's promising is a question."

Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismat Abdelguid, who was standing next to Shultz, did not speak but nodded his head in agreement. An aide to Shultz said the Egyptians had "no major reservations" but had made "some suggestions" for changes.

The Egyptian endorsement came after Syria and Jordan had taken issue publicly with key aspects of the plan Saturday.

EGYPT WOULD BE likely to play only a secondary, supportive role in the proposed negotiations. Israel, Jordan and the Palestinians — plus, the Americans hope, Syria — would be the main parties along with the United States.

Egypt, like Jordan and Syria, had been calling for a United Nations-sponsored international conference. Egypt's apparent decision now to support the American approach of playing down such a conference could carry weight with the skeptical Jordanians and Palestinians, officials said.

Shultz's package envisages only a brief "international event" to start the negotiations, with the United States and Soviet Union acting as hosts rather than all five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

The plan also calls for negotiations first on interim self-rule for the Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip. A second set of talks, seeking a long-term solution based on the principle of "land for peace," would start within six months.

The Arab states and Palestinians have said Shultz's plan would only succeed in achieving limited autonomy and leave the problem of an overall final settlement unresolved.

Shultz said Sunday, "What we are seeking is a comprehensive peace in the Middle East. That means that we have to consider all the countries involved . . ."

Mecham impeachment trial begins

United Press International

PHOENIX — Charges of obstructing an investigation into an alleged death threat will be the first to be heard against Gov. Evan Mecham when his impeachment trial begins today before the state Senate.

Opening arguments are scheduled for Monday morning, kicking off a trial that is expected to take up to eight weeks on 23 individual counts listed in the articles of impeachment drawn up by the Arizona House of Representatives.

The articles are broken into three main charges — trying to block a state investigation into a death threat made by one former gubernatorial aide against another; trying to conceal a $350,000 campaign loan on state reporting forms; and misusing state funds by loaning $80,000 from his protocol fund to his car dealership.

The death threat centers on Lee Watkins, formerly head of the state's prison-construction program, and Donna Carlson, who formerly was Mecham's legislative liaison.

Mecham is accused of telling state Department of Public Safety officials not to cooperate in an investigation into the death threat

It's good for you. It's bad for you. It causes cancer. It prevents cancer. It makes you more fertile. It makes you less fertile. You should get on it. You should get off it.

All the conflicting information floating around about the Pill is enough to make you contemplate abstinence. We recommend a far less drastic measure: educate yourself. Gather all the information you can from reliable sources and, together with your doctor, make the decision that's right for you.

Here are a few facts to start you off. First, the Pill is actually many women may experience a short period of readjustment after discontinuing the Pill. Even so, they usually become pregnant soon.

Some women wonder if their bodies need an occasional rest from the Pill. The simple truth is, they don't. And switching to a less effective form of birth control increases your chances for unplanned pregnancy. So much for giving your body a "rest."

TRUTH RUMOR

pills. Since its introduction in 1960, it's evolved from one high dosage product into many much lower dosage. From 150 mcgs. of estrogen in 1960, down to 35 or less today. Yet, it's still the most effective form of birth control available to you other than sterilization.

What about the Pill and breast cancer? Although there are conflicting reports concerning this issue, the Centers for Disease Control reported that women who took the Pill—even for 15 years—ran no higher risk of breast cancer than women who didn't.

The CDC also reported that ovarian and uterine cancer are substantially less common among women who use oral contraceptives. In addition, Pill users are less likely to develop benign breast disease, pelvic inflammatory disease (tubal infections) and ovarian cysts.

One of the Pill's greatest areas of misconception is conception. Does the Pill make you less fertile? Studies indicate that if you were fertile before you took the Pill, taking it should not affect your ability to have children later. However, some You've also probably heard that there are risks associated with taking the Pill. That is a fact. And you should know what those risks are.

For example, if you are taking the Pill you should not smoke. Especially if you are over 35. Cigarette smoking is known to increase the risk of serious and possibly life-threatening adverse effects on the heart and blood vessels from Pill use. What's more, women with certain conditions or medical histories should not use the Pill.

Even if you're already on the Pill, you should see your doctor at least once a year.

Decisions about birth control aren't easy and shouldn't be taken lightly. Moreover, they should be based on information from first-rate sources, not secondhand advice. If you're a Pill user, read the patient information regularly. Learn everything you can about what you're taking.

Whether you're considering getting off the Pill or getting on it, the better informed you are, the better you'll feel about your decision. And that's the truth.

When the topic is the Pill, they're hard to separate.

Wednesday the Supreme Court overturned a jury decision that had awarded $200,000 to the Rev. Jerry Falwell for mental distress incurred by Larry Flynt, whose Hustler magazine had portrayed Falwell as an incestuous drunk in a parody of a well-known national ad campaign. Describing Flynt's piece as a "poor relation" of political cartoons, Chief Justice Rhenquist in an 11-page decision defended the historically registered importance of satire and the rights of satirists to work without fear.

Once again, the Supreme Court has seen the forest for the trees.

The trees in this case are the litigants — Falwell and Flynt — whom it is so easy to dislike. One might wish, in a completely insupportable way, that the court had found a way for both to lose. They represent the polar extremes of opinion, personality and taste in our society. Falwell is a moralizing, pro-censorship fundamentalist. Flynt makes his living by pornography, which, whatever else it does, degrades and exploits women. The forest is a larger matter: free public expression.

In this country virtually all journalism falls into one of two categories: the libelous (purportedly factual writing that defames falsely) and the non-libelous (everything else). They are easy categories to live by and to invoke when occasion warrants the dispensation of justice.

Satire, because it is not strictly factual, (and therefore not strictly journalism) has long enjoyed a neutral status. By awarding Falwell $200,000 compensation for mental distress, the jury had, in effect, created a third category for satirical writing: the injuriously distasteful.

Bad idea. Not only would the creation of a third category clog the civil courts with all manner of hysterical litigation, but it would blur the lines that make a free press function. Juries everywhere would be asked to decide what is tasteful and what values to attach to the injuries sustained by the victims of bad taste — all matters of personal interpretation.

Moreover, satirists and cartoonists would face the onerous task of satirizing without offense. Inevitably they would censor themselves, and a vital component of the public voice would be lost.

The Supreme Court's finding is less a victory for bad taste than it is a victory for all who avail themselves of the First Amendment. Thanks, folks.

Forgetting the students

On Feb. 9 the Iowa City School Board decided to increase the number of students per classroom in an attempt to offset the cost of a 5 percent teacher pay increase negotiated a week earlier. Some call this taking from Peter to pay Paul.

Last Tuesday the district told the board the student/teacher ratio increase would hurt the educational quality of the district. That surely comes as no surprise. Iowa City Education Association President Karen Woolums gave a statement for the teacher's union against upping the ratio. That's no surprise, either. But in all of these objections there's an undercurrent of shock, as though the school board's decision came out of a clear blue sky.

That's surprising. Some call this whining. The ICEA received the same school district budget bulletin as everybody else involved. The Daily Iowan's copy of that document is as clear as ink on paper: Under "Selective Cuts and Adjust Staffing" there's listed $281,045 next to something called "Adjust Staff Ratio Option" — which means student/teacher ratio. Considering the Feb. 2 date of the district's report, that means precious few people should have been surprised.

"Shocked" might be a better word. It is shocking that so much revenue should be staked on tampering with something as fundamental to good education as a reasonable student/teacher ratio. Even though the actual increases might be small — an additional one or two kids to each class — the effect isn't small.

The greater the class size, the greater the tendency toward corporate management tactics, such as moving at the speed of the majority or increased pressure to conform or a formation of a large crust of apathy around the brains of the adults involved.

The point: Even though the Iowa City School District clearly announced its plan to increase the student/teacher ratio, that plan is totally, irretrievably wrong. The teachers will have more students to handle, true, but it's the students who will really pay if this option is carried out.

Long overdue

Catherine Pollard, a 69-year-old Connecticut schoolteacher, chops her own firewood, goes camping, drives a tractor and rides a motorcycle. For many years she was also a volunteer Boy Scout leader. Just about the only thing Pollard hasn't been able to do is serve as an official scoutmaster.

Until now. After a 14-year fight, she finally won the war: The national Boy Scouts' organization has voted to reverse a 70-year-old policy and allow women to be official troop leaders.

Had the old boys of scouting been less hung up on gender, they might have noticed how many of their members were already taking informal lessons in leadership from women: mothers, grandmothers, big sisters, teachers.

Now, will someone please give Catherine Pollard a merit badge for showing the Boy Scout hierarchy that leadership role models can be found in many guises?

Men's attractions more fatal

When I read of the tragic events that occurred in Sunnyvale, Calif., last week — the senseless murder of seven innocent bystanders by a man obsessed with a young woman — and when I thought about the rage that must have impelled him and the fear that must have haunted her, I wondered how this story would have been handled if the sexes of the attacker and victim had been reversed.

Inevitably this would have been tagged the Fatal Attraction Murders; columnists and commentators all around the country would have pounced on the incident, eager to exploit its potential as proof that single, professional women today are so lonely, so desperate for love, so twisted and deformed by their pursuit of success that they latch onto men whom they hardly know and try to bully them into relationships, actually committing murder if they don't get their way.

HAD LAURA Black, an attractive electrical engineer, hounded and harassed Richard Farley for four years, burst into the electronics firm where he worked, fired off a 12-gauge repeating shotgun and injured Farley and three others while killing seven, it would have become the year's sweepstakes story in the "What's-Wrong-With-Modern-Women" category.

It didn't happen that way, and to many people the thought of happening that way is simply bizarre, surreal, unimaginable. Women — even crazy, spurned women — don't do that sort of thing. Men do that sort of thing. Men who go crazy, and even men who don't go crazy but who just get real mad, frequently become violent and frequently hurt people — both the women in their lives and innocent bystanders, like children.

That's why it's so fascinating that a film like Fatal Attraction, which succeeded as entertainment because it turned reality upside down and cast the woman as the violent, possessive attacker, was actually treated as some sort of broad social comment on real women in the 1980s. Yet events like the one in Sunnyvale, which occurred because a crazy man took literally our culture's message that men can and should possess women, are never treated as part of a larger phenomenon.

IT APPEARS that when one fictional woman is violent, it's an indication of a social problem, but when men — lots and lots of real men — are violent, it's a series of isolated incidents.

There's no question — in my mind, anyway — that Richard Farley is quite crazy. The question here has to do with the way in which crazy men like Farley, and men less crazy than Farley, express that craziness.

It's a question about violence, and the disturbingly high correlation that we see everywhere in this society between male anger — crazy or not — and violent behavior.

If Laura Black instead of Farley had committed this atrocity, we'd have heard a lot about how women are so socialized for love and affection that they go crazy if they don't get it. It strikes me that this is an appropriate time to point out that men are so socialized for violence that when they just get angry, they often use violence to express themselves.

WE CAN'T create a system of laws or education that will prevent all cases of mental illness until we start taking it seriously and making the connections that we must make between the images that our children see, the toys that they play with, the language that they use, the discipline that they encounter, the international relations that they learn about and the conclusions that they draw about violence and masculinity.

The Richard Farleys of the world, the deranged psychotics with a tenuous grasp of reality, will always be with us, but we can create a society that doesn't encourage those individuals' violence tendencies, that doesn't provide them with countless examples on television of men being enriched and adored for violent behavior, that doesn't regard male obsessive pursuit of women as a normal, even desirable, part of human life.

If only the psychotics among us mistook this message as a license to pursue women and punish them if they resist that pursuit, the Sunnyvale case might not invite social comment. But on the very day that I read about that case in the newspaper I also read an article bearing the headline, "Sexual Harassment: The Problem That Won't Go Away." Of course it won't go away, any more than rape or wife-beating will go away if treated — like the Sunnyvale massacre — as isolated incidents. They are all of a piece, and must be treated as such.

We romanticize male pursuit, we validate the idea that physical beauty is a legitimate cue for such pursuit, we encourage men to regard women as possessions and we tolerate men who use violence to get what they want. As long as we do that, we're going to have male violence in general and male violence directed at women in particular. This is a social problem that is much more than a fatal attraction; it's a lethal obsession, and it has to stop.

Remember the kook factor

Let's talk about the kook factor in this year's presidential campaign. No, let's be more specific. Let's talk about Pat Robertson.

Pat "Don't-Call-Me-Marion" Robertson is a sometimes comical, more often frightening, bona fide loon. Consequently, he enjoys an enormous amount of celebrity, is rich and is running for president.

In an interview following his surprise second place "win" in the Iowa Republican caucuses, Robertson vehemently denied that he is a former "TV evangelist" and demanded he be called a former "Christian businessman." Sure. And the Mayflower Madame is a former "sex therapist."

It's odd that Robertson would so strongly deny his past as a televangelist. For one thing, his political strength is his base of fundamentalist support, a group that made up 20 percent of Ronald Reagan's 1984 vote. One-third of Americans identify themselves as "born-again." Why would Robertson risk distancing himself from such a large contingent of naive and gullible voters?

MOREOVER, there are thousands of miles of videotape displaying irrefutably Pat's evangelical talents: beseeching his buddy the Lord to cure some poor soul's hemorrhoids or reroute a hurricane; or reassuring his loyal minions that the Second Coming is near and will be televised worldwide by satellite; or categorically asserting that only Christians and (in a rare concession) Jews are qualified to hold public office.

This is the wonderful thing about how we Americans go about electing our presidents. It's trendy these days to bash the tedious, drawn-out process that involves more than a year of campaigning, five months of caucuses and primaries, two months of conventions and three months of head-to-head partisan mud-slinging. The eyes do glaze over.

BUT IT IS precisely our interminable electoral process that provides such improbable candidates as Pat Robertson with the chance to gain a foothold into the system. It is also our interminable process that subsequently brings such otherwise improbable candidates into the public limelight for closer scrutiny. And in the case of Robertson, that scrutiny reveals what a truly unhinged citizen of bedlam he is.

Just in the three weeks since his Iowa success, he has:
• Reasserted his claim that he had asked for and received "divine intervention" in diverting the path of hurricane Gloria from the Carolinas to heathen New York.

• Maintained that God has literally, on numerous occasions, spoken with him. (Why doesn't he record these conversations?)

• Condemned Planned Parenthood as being a "conspiracy" to produce a "master race."

• Said that he had information that Russian nuclear missiles are currently deployed in Cuba (which was denied later by his staff, but not by Pat).

• Claimed that his CBN news bureau had known, but decided not to tell, where American hostages in Beirut were being held. (A claim described as "very strange" by President Reagan, who should, if only by habit, recognize strange when he sees it.)

• Hinted strongly that the sex scandal that got televangelist Jimmy "I-Like-To-Watch" Swagert weeping buckets was engineered by George "Out-of-the-Loop" Bush in an effort to discredit Robertson by association (never mind his denial of ever being a televangelist).

All of this nonsense has been duly reported by the media. If anyone was not previously familiar with Robertson's dementia before the Iowa caucuses, it's public knowledge now. That's the way our process works: the closer one gets to political success, the harder it is to hide one's seams.

THE REALLY scary part of the process, though, is that knowledge does not necessary yield wisdom. Pat Robertson could still wind up being the most daffy president since Ronald Reagan.

Reagan, you will recall, promised to simultaneously increase defense spending, cut taxes and reduce the deficit. He said it over and over again. It was the goofiest thing any presidential candidate had promised since Grover Cleveland promised split-crotch panties in every boudoir. Still, Reagan was elected. So was Cleveland. And so, too, might Robertson.

According to a recent study, 29 percent of Americans had visions of some sort, 42 percent have been in contact with the dead and 67 percent have experienced extrasensory perception. It can fairly be assumed that many of these people also place their fearful, wanting hands atop their TVs, mail checks faithfully to sleazeball evangelists — and would in blissful ignorance and the hope of eternal salvation (at least for white Christian Americans) cast their votes for the giddy balm of Pat Robertson.

As the wise sage Pogo once observed, "We has met the enemy and it is us."

Report draws sketch of typical drunk driver

By Eric Lichtblau
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A raised drinking age in most states has helped slash the number of drunk-driving arrests among 18- to 20-year-olds by almost a quarter since 1983, a steeper drop than for any other age group, the Department of Justice said Sunday.

That was one of the major findings in a new study by the department's Bureau of Justice Statistics, which seeks to track trends in drunk driving and draws perhaps the most comprehensive character sketch to date of the average offender.

THE STATISTICS indicate, for instance, that half of the people jailed on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol had drunk the alcoholic equivalent of at least 12 bottles of beer or eight mixed drinks before their arrests. More than a quarter of the group drank what amounted to at least 20 beers or 13 mixed drinks before getting behind the wheel.

"We begin to see something about the typical drunk driver," departmental statistician Lawrence Greenfield said of the study. "We see the guy in jail who, by and large, drinks very heavily when he drinks, who has a history of DWI arrests and a history of alcohol treatment . . . who doesn't have a very stable family life and is frequently unemployed."

Greenfield based the portrait on newly released data drawn from a 1983 nationwide survey of individuals held in local jails for driving while intoxicated, an offense estimated to have killed as many as 250,000 people in car crashes over the last decade.

ALMOST HALF the group — or 48.3 percent — were repeat offenders, having been sentenced at least once previously for driving while intoxicated and a similar proportion had been in alcohol abuse treatment programs.

Norma Phillips, national president of Mothers Against Drunk Driving, said in a telephone interview that the study "substantiates exactly what we've been saying for years" about the dangers of repeat offenders and alcohol abusers on the roads, and that it points up the need for stiffer penalties and better education.

The Department of Justice also noted that of those charged or convicted for DWI: 95 percent were men; 32.7 percent were unemployed; 77.8 percent were single, divorced, separated or widowed; the median annual income was $8,750; the median age 32 years and; the median schooling 12 years.

THE STUDY said that the racial breakdown of those held on DWI charges paralleled the general population, although it noted that 17 percent classified themselves as Latino, compared to 8 percent in the general population.

The median sentence was 90 days for first-time offenders, 180 days for repeat violators.

The Department of Justice study also found that overall arrests for driving under the influence of intoxicants such as drugs or alcohol rose 223 percent from 1970 to 1986. For 1983, an estimated 1.9 million people were charged, or one in every 80 drivers.

Obando y Bravo: Sandinistas blocking input to talks

By Richard Boudreaux
Los Angeles Times

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo said Sunday that the Sandinista government is blocking his bid to mediate the Nicaraguan conflict by refusing to discuss political issues in the next cease-fire talks.

In a homily, the Roman Catholic leader defended his proposal to condition a preliminary 30-day truce on a government amnesty for all political prisoners, full press freedom and a revision of the law obliging young men to serve in the Sandinista army.

"The day we have a broad amnesty will bring reconciliation and take away the suffering of so many families," he told the parishioners at Las Sierritas church. "Revising the (draft) law will ease so much tension. But the president wants another agenda."

SPEAKING TO reporters after Mass, the cardinal criticized President Daniel Ortega for insisting that negotiations be limited to the military aspects of a cease-fire.

"The road the president points to seems to lead back to point zero," he said. "We're falling into the same old problem, in which the government wants to discuss a cease-fire and the other side wants to discuss the democratization of Nicaragua."

"We will probably end up at an impasse," he said.

The cardinal's remarks, the latest in a chilly public exchange with Ortega, put him squarely on the side of the Nicaraguan rebels in a dispute over the agenda for the talks and left it unclear whether they will resume.

THE UNCERTAINTY appears to be linked to indecision in Washington whether to resume U.S. aid to the Contras. After rejecting the administration's bid for new military and non-lethal aid Feb. 3, Congress is set to vote on the issue again this week.

Ortega asked Obando last November to mediate a cease-fire under terms of the Central American peace accord but now appears to have lost faith in the cardinal's impartiality.

County

said that, in light of the state's recent economic instability, having the ability to reform the county governments is a welcome change.

But he said there is concern that making changes in government by virtue of a countywide election could remove some of the responsibility an elected official has to his rural constituents.

If a county manager or chief executive officer were mandated by Johnson County voters, Sehr said they would have a job similar to the current Iowa City manager.

But he added that there is some criticism of the city management system.

"Some people argue that a city manager is more attuned to the finances of this day and age, but a city manager is not accountable to the public," Sehr said.

JOHNSON COUNTY RURAL Taxpayers Association President Harry Seelman said he was in favor of combining some Johnson County offices to make them more efficient but rejected the idea of a Johnson County manager because it would be "just one more step removed from representative government."

But according to Scott County Supervisor Maggie Tinsman — whose county has had a county manager since 1980 to help with daily administrative chores — having a county manager can help lower property taxes by making governments more cost- and time-efficient.

She said that although many Scott County residents and elected officials were afraid of the county manager system at first, they now think the county has a more efficiently run government than during the 1970s.

TINSMAN SAID THINGS get done quickly in Scott County because action can be taken without waiting for the Board of Supervisors' approval. She also said the supervisors have more time to set definite budgetary goals for each county department and added that the county manager helps them to keep closer tabs on how wisely money is spent.

"I think we have found that the county manager system — where he is appointed by the Board of Supervisors and is hired and fired by the Board of Supervisors — has made Scott County way more efficient," Tinsman said.

Although Scott County is the third largest county in Iowa, it ranks seventh in the state in the amount of property taxes each resident pays, largely due to having a county manager, Tinsman said.

Scott County residents paid an average of $105 a year in property taxes during 1987-88, while per capita taxes paid in Linn County amounted to $160. Residents of Polk County — which also has a county manager — paid $158. Woodbury County residents paid $140, and Johnson County paid $136.

Caucuses

Sen. Albert Gore Jr., 1 percent; former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart, 1 percent; and uncommitted, 18 percent.

ON THE REPUBLICAN side, Bush outpolled Pat Robertson 65 percent to 14 percent, successfully facing down what was viewed as a serious threat because of the Robertson campaign's ability to drum up grass-roots support, which he had used to great advantage in previous caucus states. The GOP figures were provided by the Bush campaign, although they were not contested by any other candidate. Because scattered caucuses have not been held, the state party has not released official figures. Other unofficial figures were Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, 8 percent; New York Rep. Jack Kemp, 1.5 percent, and uncommitted, 12 percent.

While both Jackson and Robertson showed strength in unfamiliar territory, their support appeared too scant to translate into a significant bloc of delegates to the national convention, who will be elected at state conventions later this spring.

RIVAL REPUBLICAN campaigns conceded that Bush would almost certainly win all 22 of Maine's delegates to the GOP convention. While Dukakis' narrower margin of victory and complicated Democratic party rules makes his delegate count more difficult to predict. Party leaders here said that he is likely to win at least 20 of the state's 27 Democratic national delegates if he continues to run strongly elsewhere in the country.

The influence of delegates elected from Maine is likely to be scant, as their numbers represent 0.6 percent of the delegates to the Democratic national convention and 1 percent of Republican delegates.

BECAUSE OF the Bush and Dukakis victories in New Hampshire Feb. 16, several candidates drastically reduced their efforts in Maine in order to focus their attention elsewhere. The Republican campaign of Dole reduced its staff from 13 to 2, while Democrats Rep. Richard Gephardt and Sen. Paul Simon canceled planned commercials.

Aides to the victorious Dukakis and Bush campaigns hailed the Maine result as important evidence that their competitors are not pursuing a national strategy.

"He decided, as he always has throughout the years, to do his best for the university," Remington said.

Spriestersbach, who first came to the UI as a graduate student in 1939, was named dean of the UI Graduate College in 1965 and became a vice president in 1966.

Spriestersbach also served as UI interim president for nearly two semesters in 1981 and 1982, between the UI presidential terms of Willard L. Boyd and Freedman.

Panama

The Panama Canal is considered a major economic lifeline in this hemisphere, and the United States, bound by the Panama Canal treaties to defend the vital waterway until Dec. 31, 1999, maintains several military bases along its banks.

THE ONGOING political crisis suddenly deepened last week when President Eric Delvalle, who had never previously functioned as much more than a civilian figurehead in Noriega's shadow, tried to fire Noriega as commander of the nation's Defense Forces. The National Assembly promptly ousted Delvalle, replacing him as president with Education Minister Manuel Solis Palma.

Delvalle, who sneaked out of his guarded home and went into hiding Saturday just ahead of a move by the military to send him into exile, later telephoned ABC News from his hideout to proclaim: "I am going to stay here. I'm going to stick it out. I'm going to fight all the way."

Delvalle's defiance has become a rallying point for the Civic Crusade, even though he and the crusade were long at odds, because while he held office, Delvalle acted as a front for Noriega's rule.

THE DEPOSED leader's whereabouts remained a mystery Sunday. Panamanian exiles in Washington insisted that he was safe and that he had not taken refuge with any foreign embassy in Panama, as has been widely rumored here.

His location has taken on symbolic value: If Delvalle remains in Panama, he continues to be a central figure in efforts to unseat Noriega; if he has taken refuge with a foreign government, he is technically out of Panama and his claim to still be the nation's civilian president would correspondingly suffer.

"Delvalle is under the protection of good Panamanians," insisted Gabriel Lewis, a former Panamanian ambassador to Washington who has been the opposition's point man in dealings with the Reagan administration.

IN A TELEPHONE interview from Washington, Lewis emphasized that the opposition's hope that foreign governments will recognize Delvalle and not Solis as Panama's legitimate president.

"It is critical that the international community rally around him," Lewis said.

The Reagan administration continues to recognize Delvalle as Panama's chief of state.

Noriega's government has said little about Delvalle's move underground. Mario Rognoni, a spokesman for the strongman in the United States told the NBC television program "Meet The Press" that Delvalle was free to return to his neighborhood.

"He has committed no crime and is a free citizen. He was never under arrest, and there is no judicial action against him," Rognoni said. "He can go back to his house and his private business." Members of Delvalle's family in Panama City were unconvinced. They gathered at the ousted president's four-bedroom house here to divide up his valuable belongings and put them into safekeeping.

"We believe that someone might be sent to destroy the house," said Raul Diaz, a brother-in-law of Delvalle.

Violin prodigy Akiko Meyers plays at Clapp Wednesday

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

It's not easy being billed as a teen prodigy. Just ask 17-year-old violinist Anne Akiko Meyers, who performs at 8 p.m. on Wednesday in Clapp Recital Hall as part of Hancher Auditorium's Young Concert Artists Series.

Akiko Meyers comes to Iowa City at the height of a career which would be a source of pride to performers three times her age. She has won the Japanese Philharmonic Society Competition and Grand Prize in the American String Teachers Competition. She's appeared as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic under the direction of Zubin Mehta.

The list goes on: She's been a soloist with the New York String Orchestra in both Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center, with the Los Angeles Philharmonic and other West Coast symphonies and with the New York Symphonic Ensemble at Lincoln Center. She's appeared on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson and on several TV documentaries. Later this month, she'll make her Washington, D.C., recital debut in the Young Concert Artists Series at the Kennedy Center.

Marble said in jest he wasn't sure if he was going to return home to Flint, Mich., this summer after Iowa's embarrassing 123-103 loss to Michigan in Ann Arbor.
"First of all, my pride wasn't hurt — it was crushed," said Marble, who led the Hawkeyes Saturday with 19 points. "I'd never lost like that before. And I was never criticized like that before. It felt better to finally get a victory and even it up."

FOR DAVIS, in recording his 50th victory as an Iowa coach there wasn't a better way to win or better team to defeat.

However, the victory wasn't without its problems — Michigan had six scorers and all were in double figures.

Again, the work paid off.
In Iowa's 95-87 win Saturday over Michigan at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, Horton scored 16 points, dished off three assists, grabbed one steal, pulled down a game-high 11 rebounds and finished the game with a very resounding dunk.

THE SLAM THAT ended the game brought a smile to his face. Horton then looked to the near side of the court and pointed to his family members as the clock expired.

But Horton wasn't the only person smiling. Pearl and Iowa Coach Tom Davis were, too.

Michelle "Ice" Edwards had the cool head and hot hand in an overheated contest as Iowa blazed past Indiana 71-47 Sunday at Bloomington, Ind.

The win, riddled with 41 fouls including three technicals, returns Iowa to the winning track with a 23-1 mark overall, 13-1 in the Big Ten Conference. Indiana falls to 12-13 overall and 7-8 in league play.

Ohio State topped Iowa Friday 58-54 at Columbus, Ohio.

Fifth-year Coach Vivian Stringer's club saw a sellout crowd of 13,220 at St. John Arena, the first sellout of a women's game in the Arena.

Six-foot junior Nikita Lowry was the dominating factor for Ohio State, scoring 28 points.

WITH THE pressure of a undefeated season behind them, the Hawkeyes headed for Indiana looking to correct a few things.

But fouls became the major problem of Sunday's game.

Iowa was whistled for 24 fouls. Five-and-a-half minutes into the second period Stringer was given a technical foul for approaching the scorer's bench.

Less than three minutes later, Stringer picked up her second technical foul after approaching the official at the baseline below Iowa's basket. A minute later, Indiana Coach Jorja Hoehn was whistled for yelling at the official.

Dutch speedskater finishes Olympics as lone triple victor

By Mike Rabun
United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — Dutch speedskater Yvonne Van Gennip became the only individual triple gold medalist of the Calgary Olympics Sunday, setting a world record in winning the 5,000-meter event four hours before the Winter Games closed.

Van Gennip thus won one more gold medal than the entire American delegation, which finished the Olympics with the nation's lowest medal total in 52 years.

American Brent Rushlaw came within a heartbeat of winning the first U.S. bobsled medal in 22 years Sunday, finishing two-hundredths of a second behind the third-place sled. And the Soviet Union celebrated the conclusion of the 16-day show by setting a record for most medals won in the Winter Games.

On Page 4B . . .

UPI Sportswriter Pohla Smith takes a historic look at figure skating, and USOC President Robert Helmick wants more training money for U.S. Olympic athletes.

THE SOVIET gold-medal hockey team, however, saw its 15-game Olympic winning streak end against Finland. The Finns pulled off a 2-1 upset to win the silver medal while Sweden claimed the bronze.

Olympic competition drew to a close with four events Sunday, and Van Gennip, 23, easily stole the show.

Upset that East Germany's top speedskaters had said she would be able to win gold medals only when they retired, Van Gennip beat her rivals over 1,000, 1,500 and 5,000 meters. A sign hanging from the Olympic Oval proclaimed

"Yvonne 3, East Germany 0."
"I felt fairly strong," Van Gennip said. "The first lap I held myself in and then I let it go."

THE 5,000-METER race was added to the Olympic women's events for the first time this year and the world record coming into the day was 7:20.36, a time Van Gennip skated last year. East Germany's Andrea Ehrig turned in a 7:17.12 Sunday and then Van Gennip topped it with a 7:14.13. East Germany's Gabi Zange was third in 7:21.61.

The other gold medals won Sunday went to Switzerland's Hippolyt Kempf in nordic combined, the Swiss four-man bobsled team driven by Ekkehard Fasser and the Soviet hockey team, which had clinched the gold two nights earlier.

Finland, however, took some luster off the Soviet gold with its stunning decision in the last hockey game of the tournament. Erkki Lehtonen scored the winning goal with 100 seconds remaining. The Finnish players spilled onto the ice at game's end in a jubilant scene reminiscent of Lake Placid, N.Y., eight years ago when the Americans downed the Soviets — the last time the powerful Soviet team had lost an Olympic game.

Despite three record-setting performances and an NCAA qualifying mark, the Iowa women's track team finished seventh at the Big Ten Indoor Championships at West Lafayette, Ind.

Sophomore Jeanne Kruckeberg qualified for the second straight year with a fifth-place and school-record finish in the mile run. Her time was four minutes, 42.2 seconds.

Kruckeberg broke the NCAA qual-

The Indiana Hoosiers won their first-ever indoor team title, scoring 98.5 points to second-place Purdue's 93.

THE HAWKEYES, meanwhile, crowned one champion, Senta Hawkins, in the 400-meter dash. Hawkins set a school record in the event with a 55.66 time in the event.

Iowa's other school record came in the final event of the day, as Bev Powell, Hawkins, Alycia Simpson and Jill Freed raced to fourth place in the 4 x 400-meter relay with a time of 3:49.13.

Jill Freed, who ran the anchor on the record-setting relay, said the team had hoped to win the 4 x 400-meter relay but was satisfied with the fourth-place finish.

"I think we were hoping to win," she said. "We knew when we got in the fast heat with good competition that it would push up our time. I guess there were some ups and downs. You're going to have that with every meet."

Behind a second- and third-place finish in the 55-meter high hurdles, the Iowa Hawkeyes finished ninth at the men's Big Ten Indoor Track Championships at Columbus, Ohio.

Iowa closes the indoor season without a qualifier for the NCAA Championships. More importantly, the Hawkeyes suffered two key injuries during action Friday and Saturday.

Jumper Paul Jones and middle-

Men's Track

distance runner Curtis Chung both reinjured hamstrings in their left legs, according to Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler.

"After finishing ninth, it kind of compounded the discomfort," Wheeler said.

Iowa did have a few bright spots with Doug Jones finishing second in the 55 high hurdles with a 7.38 clocking. Teammate James Armstrong was third at 7.41.

DOUG JONES, a senior from Dallas, said his main goal was to win an indoor title in his final chance as a collegian. The finish was his best indoors this season.

He'll now turn to the outdoor season and the 110-meter high hurdles, where five more hurdles will be an added advantage for him.

"It gives me enough time to build up my speed," Jones said of the outdoor high hurdles.

"I think we'd like to use these next two weeks before spring break to train for the outdoor season," he said.

Other Iowa finishers included St. Clair Blackman's sixth in the 800 meters at 1:53.82, Gordon Finch's sixth in the triple jump at 47-feet-2 1/2 inches and D'Juan Strozier's fifth in the 500 meters at 1:04.17.

DeMarco disappointed despite win

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

Coming the circus atmosphere the Iowa's women's gymnastics team had to endure in the Windy City Saturday, the Hawkeyes had a pretty good day.

Iowa won the meet against Illinois-Chicago despite registering its second-lowest point total of the year, 170.60-166.85. The win ups Iowa's season record to 6-4. The Flames drop to 1-7.

"It was an interesting meet to say the least," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said. "The whole thing was bizarre."

DeMarco was not entirely happy the meet started seven minutes early — while half of her squad was still in the locker room. Another problem was the condition of the mats, which were sliding while the team was practicing its vaults. Consequently, the Iowa staff had to tape them into place.

THEN, FIRST-YEAR gymnast Suzanne Gorny, who "had a super week of practice" according to DeMarco, injured her heel in the warmups while performing a pike double-back flip.

Add to that inconsistent judging in some events and you have a low team score. Nonetheless, DeMarco tried to remain upbeat.

"I hope we learned a lesson from it. The scores were a little on the short side but we weren't as sharp as we could have been," DeMarco admitted. "But I don't think the judging was quite on the money either."

DeMarco said she was more than a little disappointed her team was distracted by a triangular men's meet running simultaneously with the women's meet.

"We need to be aggressive no matter what the circumstances are," DeMarco said. "I felt we didn't perform up to our best. We weren't as sharp as we've been performing in past weeks."

THE HAWKEYES, led by sophomore Robyn Zussman's winning effort in the all-around and vault, won three of the four events, including sweeps in the vault and uneven bars.

Iowa also won the three top spots in the all-around with first-year gymnasts Michele Cahal and Tracy Junker finishing second and third respectively.

Cahal also claimed her fourth first-place finish in the uneven bars with a 9.3 score.

"It was a good routine for her but she'd been a little sharper in her last two meets," DeMarco said.

Junker placed second in the beam at 8.8 and tied for second in the uneven bars with Zussman with an 8.85 effort.

Zussman and Junker also tied for second in the floor exercise with 8.9 scores.

Iowa returns home to take on Big Ten conference foe Wisconsin Saturday in the North Gym of the Field House.

Buckeyes, Illini drop Hawkeyes

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

For the Illinois and Ohio State men's gymnastics teams, there's no place like home.

Iowa lost both of its meets on opposing schools' home turf this weekend — 285.85-278.05 to the No. 1 Illini and 281.9-280.85 to the No. 3 Buckeyes.

Iowa Coach Tom Dunn said the home advantage gave the Illini an edge they didn't need.

"Illinois has a great team," Dunn said. "They have quite a fine power team, being No. 1. They were at home and that makes it a little easier."

David Zeddies, Illinois' leading all-arounder with a 57.95 mark, had a near-perfect routine on the horizontal bar and scored a 9.95.

former was Dominic Minicuc, who totaled a 57.35 all-around. His best event was the pommel horse, where he scored a 9.8.

Iowa's leading scorer was team captain Joe Thome with a 9.8 on the horizontal bar. Thome competed for the first time this weekend without his back brace. Keith Cousino scored a 9.5 in the parallel bars, missing the top mark by two-tenths of a point.

The Hawkeyes, said Dunn, performed better in their next meet against Ohio State in Columbus, Ohio.

"We lost by one point," Dunn said. "We had the potential to win. We had a consistent meet until the last two events."

Iowa broke their team record in the pommel horse, scoring a 47.45 and beating the previous mark of 47.3. Thome tied his record in the horizontal bar with a 9.85.

EVEN WITH THE two losses, Dunn said he was pleased with his team's progress.

"We are really in good shape for the season," Dunn said. "We are ahead of ourselves (compared to) other years. Last year at this time we were struggling at 276. It wasn't until March that we hit 278 and then a 280. We usually peak later in the season and it has worked out."

Although Iowa has improved over last year, Dunn said the competition has also improved.

"The competition has gotten tougher," Dunn said. "The Big Ten has gotten tighter but I am looking forward to the Big Ten meet."

Olympics

Olympics. The Soviets broke their own mark of 27 in 1976 and led the medal count for the fourth straight Games.

Eleven Soviet medals were gold while East Germany won 25 medals overall and nine gold. The surprising Swiss, enjoying what were easily their best Olympics, added two golds to their haul Sunday for five golds and 15 total medals.

Apart from Van Gennip, the only other triple gold medalist at Calgary was Matti Nykanen. However, the Finnish ski jumper won two individual golds and one team gold.

The Americans won six medals, their smallest total since claiming only four in 1936. From a percentage standpoint, however, the U.S. showing in Calgary was its worst ever. The American total represented only 4 percent of the available medals compared with the 8 percent they won in 1936.

"MY MAIN thought during Calgary is that I'm thankful the attention has come to the American public on where we stand in international competition," said Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee. "I think because of (successes in) 1980 and 1984, the U.S. public hasn't had a clear perspective.

"With our political and social and economic system, there is no reason we can't do much better. Our athletes have the capability. What we're lacking is proper support."

The USOC receives $15 million of an estimated $600 million in revenues and corporate money from U.S. firms to the International Olympic Committee. Most of the dollars come from television rights and contracts allowing companies to serve as Olympic sponsors.

"IN THE SOVIET Union, that money is staying in the Soviet Union and their Olympic program is fully financed," he said.

Arbitrator tells his side of the story

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

The fourth paragraph of a Major League Baseball player's contract contains a blank line for a salary to be listed.

Tom Roberts fills in that line. Roberts, a Los Angeles attorney, has the power to decide salary figures because he is a sports arbitrator, a Solomon of sorts, in the world of professional athletics.

Roberts spoke on "Arbitration in Baseball as Viewed from the Head of the Table" Friday afternoon at Phillips Hall. The talk was co-sponsored by the UI Colleges of Law and Business and the Iowa Athletic Department.

ROBERTS AWARDED the first million-dollar contract in arbitration when he ruled in favor of Los Angeles Dodger pitcher Fernando Valenzuela in 1983. Two years later, he broke the $1 million barrier when he awarded Montreal Expos outfielder Tim Lincecum $1.2 million.

Roberts, an avowed Dodger fan who has season tickets, said neighbors and friends blamed him when the price of a beer went up 25 cents — a year after Roberts awarded Valenzuela $1 million.

Since the '83 Valenzuela ruling, salaries have skyrocketed — even though the minimum salary for a Major League Baseball player is $65,000 — and players paid in the $1 million range are not uncommon.

"BASEBALL ENJOYS a kind of legal schizophrenia," Roberts said. "We all know they (salaries) are going up, there's no doubt about that. But the test in setting up these comparable salaries is looking at another shortstop, who also hits from the left side of the plate for another second-division team — what is he worth?"

Roberts has been an arbitrator since 1974 — the year the process was initiated.

As an arbitrator, Roberts mediates between players and representatives from teams in one of three cities where hearings are held — Los Angeles, Chicago or New York. Each side, which sometimes brings an excessive number of people to a hearing, pays half of an arbitrator's salary.

The Daily Iowan/Joe Kress

Each side has one hour to present its argument and then 30 minutes to give a rebuttal. Players give their arguments first.

ON ONE SIDE sits the player, his wife ("if she's attractive or pregnant," Roberts said), his attorney and, occasionally, Roberts added, the attorney's accountant.

On the other side sits a slew of attorneys and officials representing the team involved. It is then Roberts' job to keep the peace.

Roberts doesn't only keep the peace between players and teams. He works in other fields of business as well, recently mediating the merger-proposal of Northwest Airlines.

But spring training has turned his attention to baseball. This season, Roberts said, 111 players filed for arbitration but only 18 had hearings. The other 93 settled with owners. Of the 18, 11 players lost their case while seven won.

"That tilt is pretty typical," Roberts said. "Of the 85 percent who usually file, 60 percent usually go in favor of the clubs."

HE HAS HANDLED several players' cases that received national attention, including that of Boston Red Sox third baseman Wade Boggs, who he ruled against in 1986, as well as Valenzuela and Raines.

But the two cases that have had the biggest impact didn't involve salaries directly but rather drugs and collusion.

He ruled against the owners both times, finding the terms of the contract between the players and owners did not allow random drug testing of players.

Roberts also ruled that baseball owners colluded in restraining the free-agent system. But the damage had already been done. "How do you unscramble eggs?" Roberts asked. He answered his own question with his solution: He restored the free-agent status to the eight players involved.

The irony concerning collusion is that it was actually started by players, according to Roberts. Former Dodger pitchers Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale teamed up when they told owners they wanted $100,000 each in what was termed a kind of package deal. They got it.

'Harvey's Wallbangers' leader dies in Arizona

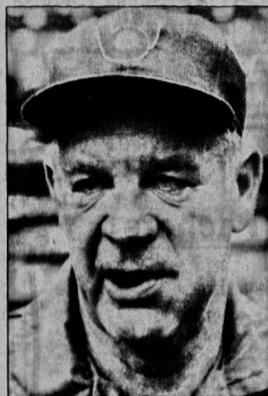

United Press International

PEORIA, Ariz. — Harvey Kuenn, who won the American League batting title in 1959 and managed the Milwaukee Brewers to the 1982 World Series, died early Sunday at his home. He was 57.

Kuenn was found dead in his home in suburban Phoenix at about 7:30 a.m. Sunday. Peoria police spokesman Sgt. Mike Branham said that while no official cause of death had been established, it "appears natural at this time."

Branham said Kuenn had told his wife, Audrey, he was going to take a shower, but never emerged. He was found dead a short time later.

Kuenn compiled a 160-118 record in less than two seasons as manager of the Brewers. He took over for Buck Rodgers in June 1982 and put together a 72-43 mark the rest of the season, taking his "Harvey's Wallbangers" club to the World Series, where they lost in seven games to the St. Louis Cardinals. Kuenn was named Manager of the Year following that season.

Netters enjoy weekend wins

Men sweep Iowa State, N. Illinois

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team improved their record to 5-1 this weekend with two victories — over intrastate rival Iowa State (6-3) and Northern Illinois (5-1) — at the Westfield Country Club in Cedar Rapids.

Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said Iowa dominated the match against Iowa State more than the final score showed.

"The three matches we lost were very close in match points," Houghton said. "(Dave) Novak and Martin (Aguirre) both had two match points. So really we played better than the score."

The Cyclones were enthusiastic for the intrastate matchup, Houghton said.

"THEY WERE FIRED up. I thought a bit too fired up. There were several emotional-type matches. Some of their players were too carried away. I think it made our guys play harder. There were some really intense matches. It made it a more impressive victory."

Houghton said Northern Illinois, who also dropped their match with Iowa State, has the potential to be a good competitor, but their biggest fault was their inconsistency.

"Northern Illinois has a really talented team," Houghton said. "They vary. Sometimes they are very good and sometimes they aren't. They are an emotional and physical team."

Three players who keyed the Hawkeye victories, according to Houghton, were Jay Maltby, Lars Nordmark and Cleas Ramel. Ramel is recovering from a calf injury which he sustained in last weekend's action. Maltby is 6-0 on Women end skid with win in Phoenix

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

The best lessons in life are learned the hard way and the Iowa women's tennis team received a good one last week.

The Hawkeyes suffered losses at Arizona and Arizona State Wednesday and Thursday before getting back on the winning track with a 7-2 triumph over Grand Canyon Friday in Phoenix. Iowa is now 4-2 on the spring season.

"I thought we all looked good on Friday, especially doubles." First-year No. 5 singles player Tracey Peyton said. "We really wanted to win one. We were kind of frustrated because we didn't win more matches against (Arizona and Arizona State)."

"We learned how good those teams are and how much we need to work," Peyton continued. "We mainly just wanted to see how we stacked up. I think we learned we can stay with those teams."

FRIDAY, IOWA lost the first two matches and its luck seemed to be going the way it had gone the previous two days. Grand Canyon's Anna Duque defeated Pennie Wohlford 6-2, 4-6, 6-2 at No. 1 singles and Madeleine Willard lost to the Antelopes' Michelle Knapp at No. 2 singles, 6-4, 7-6.

But after the first two matches, the Hawkeyes did not lose another. Sophomore Liz Canzoneri started the rally at No. 3 singles when she beat Grand Canyon's Chris McClain 2-6, 6-4, 6-4. Catherine Wilson allowed Iowa to even the match 2-2 with her 6-1, 1-6, 7-5 defeat of Leah Bennett.

Peyton put the Hawkeyes ahead for good when she upended Dana Mattby 6-1, 6-3 at No. 5 singles.

The San Diego native was the only Hawkeye to win in singles against either Arizona or Arizona State. Peyton defeated Karen Bergan of Arizona State 6-4, 3-6, 3-6 Thursday.

IOWA'S ROBIN Gerstein was victorious in the final singles match, a 6-2, 6-4 win over Tali Lee at No. 6.

The strength of the Hawkeyes' doubles teams overwhelmed the Antelopes with a clean sweep of all three matches.

Wohlford-Wilson defeated Knapp-McClain of Grand Canyon, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3, at No. 1 doubles. Canzoneri-Willard conquered Duque-Lee, 6-2, 6-4, at No. 2 doubles and the Iowa duo of Pat Leary-Susan Evans triumphed over Mattby-Pyle Michael of Grand Canyon, 6-1, 6-3, at No. 3 doubles.

U.S. skated well — relatively CALGARY, Alberta — The accomplishments of the United States' 1988 Olympic figure skating team probably will look better in retrospect than they did at the close of the Winter Olympics.

With fans still stewing over Debi Thomas' disappointing bronze-medal finish, Jill Trenary's failure to medal and Caryn Kadavy's incapacitating flu in the women's singles competition, it is difficult to think of the 16-member squads as one of the most successful in American Olympic history.

But, in fact, the three medals won collectively by Thomas, pairs bronze medalists Jill Watson and Peter Oppegard and men's gold medalist Brian Boitano equalled the third highest total ever won by a U.S. figure skating squad.

Only the 1956 and 1960 teams did better.

IN CORTINA d'Ampezzo, Italy, in 1956, the United States swept the men's competition, and Tenley Albright and Carol Heiss finished

1-2 in women's singles.

Taking advantage of the home ice of Squaw Valley, Calif., in 1960, Americans David Jenkins and Carol Heiss won the singles' titles, while Barbara Ann Roles and pairs' Nancy and Ron Ludington won the bronze.

The 1952 and 1984 teams also won three medals each, but theirs were of slightly higher value that those won this year.

At Oslo in 1952, Dick Button won his second gold medal, while Tenley Albright and pairs' Karol and Peter Kennedy captured silvers.

Four years ago in Sarajevo, Scott Hamilton won the men's championship, Rosalyn Sumners finished second in women's singles and Kitty and Peter Carruthers upset Soviets Larissa Selezneva and Oleg Makarov for the pairs' silver medal.

BUT THE 1988 team traveled to Canada 20 days ago optimistic it had the ability to take home four medals, two of them golds.

In the end, however, only Boitano managed to surpass expectations, taking the gold medal.

USOC's Helmick wants more money for Olympic facilities

By Jim Slater
United Press International

CALGARY, Alberta — Robert Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, has a simple solution to the worst medal showing by the United States at the Winter Games in 52 years.

He wants more money. The pitiful U.S. performance at the Games has awakened Americans to a need for improved training opportunities, Helmick said Sunday.

"My main thought during Calgary is that I'm thankful the attention has come to the American public on where we stand in international competition," Helmick said. "I think because of (successes in) 1980 and 1984, the U.S. public hasn't had a clear perspective."

"WITH OUR political and social and economic system, there is no reason we can't do much better. Our athletes have the capability.

What we're lacking is proper support not only financially but programmatically," he said.

Athletes, including U.S. Olympic spirit award winner Dan Jansen, have said there is too much emphasis on medal counts.

"What does count is competing, strong competition. If we compete and compete well, the medals will come," said Helmick, who said the U.S. Olympic squad is better than past teams despite its poor showing. "Our performance has increased. What has happened is the performance of the other nations has improved at a greater rate."

The USOC receives $15 million of an estimated $600 million in revenues and corporate monies that flow from U.S. firms to the International Olympic Committee. Helmick wants a bigger slice of the money for U.S. use.

"IN THE SOVIET Union, that money is staying in the Soviet Union and their Olympic program is fully financed," he said. "We have to get our system so that funding stays in the United States. The success of our athletes depends on funding. We need more funding."

Helmick said he wants money to build new U.S. training centers and improve existing facilities. If he can't get that, Helmick wants the funding to send the best U.S. athletes to world-class training sites in other nations. U.S. speedskater Eric Flaim has already said he will train at Calgary's new indoor oval, where world records have fallen consistently during the Games.

"The most important thing is an athlete having facilities to train at. If the best place for Eric Flaim to train is in Calgary, we want to support him to do that," Helmick said.

Keady: Purdue hasn't clinched

United Press International

Although his team whipped Northwestern 69-51 Saturday night and the conference's No. 2 team, Michigan, lost at Iowa, Purdue Coach Gene Keady said he doesn't think the Big Ten race is over. The Boilermakers, 13-1 in the Big Ten, still must play at Wisconsin and Ohio State and at home against Michigan and Minnesota.

"We finally got some help from someone. It seems like that's the first time that's happened in eight years," said Keady of Michigan's loss at Iowa. "We've still got a lot of work to do."

Wisconsin 81, Minnesota 70

At Madison, Wis. — Trent Jackson of Wisconsin said he surprised even himself Sunday when he scored a career-high 30 points in an 81-70 Big Ten victory over Minnesota.

"I had no idea I was on my way to scoring 30 points," he said. "You can't look to score for yourself. You have to look for the team first."

Danny Jones added 28 as the Badgers snapped a six-game losing streak to up their record to 4-10 in the Big Ten and 10-14 overall. Minnesota falls to 3-11 and 9-15.

Georgia Tech 91, Duke 87

At Atlanta — Tom Hume scored 29 points and Dennis Scott added 18 Sunday to send 16th-ranked Georgia Tech to a 91-87 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over No. 5 Duke.

Georgia Tech, 21-6 and 8-4 in the ACC, received 15 points from Oliver and Duane Ferrell fouled out with 13.

Temple 78, West Virginia 69

At Philadelphia — Without Ramon Rivas' quiet work in the middle, the Temple Owls would not be the nation's top-ranked basketball team.

Rivas turned in another solid effort Sunday as Temple posted a 78-69 victory over West Virginia in an Atlantic 10 game. Rivas scored 13 points and grabbed a game-high 15 rebounds, 11 of them off the offensive boards.

The Owls improved to 25-1 overall and 17-0 in the Atlantic 10. The victory gave Temple its fifth straight 25-win season and was the Owls' 48th victory in its last 50 games at McGonigle Hall.

Kentucky 62, Syracuse 58

At Lexington, Ky. — Freshman Eric Manuel, starting because of a back injury to leading scorer Rex Chapman, scored Kentucky's last three field goals — including the game-winning dunk — to lead No. 12 Wildcats to a 62-58 victory Sunday over No. 11 Syracuse.

With the game on the line, Manuel scored 7 of his 11 points in the last 2:26 of the game.

Kentucky improved to 20-5 and kept its perfect record over Syracuse intact at 5-0. Syracuse dropped to 21-7.

Sailing club will hold raffle

The Iowa sailing club will hold a raffle March 14 in an effort to raise money for a new boathouse at Lake MacBride.

Tickets are $1 and will be available at tables set up in the Union Tuesday, March 4 and March 11. The drawing for prizes will be March 14.

Prizes include a JVC compact disc player, compact discs from local record stores, athletic clothing from local sporting goods stores and dinners provided by local restaurants.

The club has also announced weekly meetings will be held Wednesdays at 7 p.m. in English-Philosophy Building Room 202. Anyone is welcome to attend. For more information, contact Gunther at 338-2290 or Beth at 337-3054.

Bicycle club now forming

Anyone interested in forming an Iowa bicycle club should attend an organizational meeting March 8 at 7 p.m. in Field House Room 201. The primary purpose of the club will be to compete intercollegiate, but all interested cyclists are invited to participate. For more information, contact Chad Osborne at 353-0129.

Raiders will name coach today

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Raiders, without a head coach since Tom Flores retired Jan. 20, today will name Denver assistant Mike Shanahan as Flores' replacement, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Sunday.

The newspaper said team owner Al Davis settled on Shanahan after soliciting a private opinion from Broncos star quarterback John Elway.

The newspaper said Shanahan is expected to bring Broncos offensive line coach Alex Gibbs to the Raiders.

Shanahan, 35, began calling the Broncos' plays in 1985, his second year as a pro assistant. Last week, he became the front-runner when Washington assistants Dan Henning and Joe Bugel were eliminated from consideration.

Shanahan meets most of Davis' qualifications — he is young and pass-oriented.

Beck wins Los Angeles Open

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Chip Beck, who had been winless in 10 years on the PGA Tour, birdied three consecutive holes on the front nine Sunday and coasted to a four-stroke victory in the rain-soaked $750,000 Los Angeles Open.

His four-day total of 17-under 267 beat the 271s posted by Mac O'Grady and Bill Sander. Mike Reid and Ed Fiori were at 12-under, and those another stroke back included Tom Purtzer and Haas. Elkington was in a group at 9-under. Beck's total was three shots higher than the tournament record Lanny Wadkins set three years ago.

Beck, a 31-year-old who has finished second seven times, blistered the 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club course for a first-round 65, then fired another 6-under round Saturday to grab the lead.

Player tops Hill's hole-in-one

NAPLES, Fla. (UPI) — Gary Player birdied four consecutive holes on the back nine Sunday to overcome a hole-in-one by Dave Hill and win a $300,000 senior's golf tournament.

Player birdied the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th holes and finished with a 5-under-par 67. Player edged Hill by one shot as he completed the tournament at 9-under 207. Hill aceed the 157-yard, 16th hole with a 7-iron to briefly take the lead on the 6,719-yard The Club at Pelican Bay course which comes within 500 yards of the Gulf of Mexico.

Player won $45,000 and remains atop the Senior PGA Tour money list with $132,500. He won the PGA Seniors Championship two weeks ago and was third at Tampa last week. It was his ninth title since joining the Senior Tour in November 1985.

Navratilova downs Shriver

Playing what she called the best tennis of her career, Martina Navratilova won her third tournament title in as many weeks, crushing longtime doubles partner Pam Shriver 6-0, 6-2 in the finals of the $300,000 Virginia Slims of Washington. It was Navratilova's 23rd straight victory over Shriver.

Audio Odyssey only has a few storewide sales a year. Don't miss this one!

Unlike some stores, we don't stage weekly "sales." But when we have a big event, you'll save big on today's best electronics.

SALE ENDS SATURDAY, MARCH 5TH AT 5 P.M.

End the Winter Blues with a New CD-Player and FREE CD's!

When you buy a CD-player from Audio Odyssey, you can always count on three things:

- 1 you're buying a player from a technology leader like Denon & Nakamichi.
- 2 you'll receive local factory-authorized service should you have a problem.
- 3 if you have a problem that we can't fix in 7 days, we'll give you a loaner to use.

$298

DENON DCD-600 & 3 FREE CD's!

From Denon, the inventor of digital recording, comes one of the best values in a CD-player today. Features 23-key remote control, programmability, and Denon's hand-tuned Super Linear Converter for smooth high frequency response.

NAKAMICHI OMS-1A & 3 FREE CD's!

Brand new, basic and beautiful! Audio Odyssey's strong recommendation for the best-built, best-sounding CD-player in its price range.

$398

DENON DCD-800 & 4 FREE CD's!

Had you planned on spending more than $400 on a CD-player? This Denon might make you reconsider! Features advanced remote with volume control, digital filtering, 4 times oversampling, and 4 power supplies.

We won't sell gutless hi-fi.

Bells & whistles and "rated" power. Unfortunately, that's what most receivers are designed to deliver. Nakamichi and Denon take a different tact, emphasizing good internal design and "real-world" power. You'll hear the difference!

DENON DRA-25V

(Reg. $280)

Considering its superb sound, this Denon is a very reasonably priced receiver. It is equipped with a high quality power amplifier and excellent features like "CD-Direct" for optimum playback of compact discs, AM/FM 16-station preset memory tuning and a wealth of other capabilities.

NAKAMICHI SR-2A
$398

(Reg. $450)

We won't pull any punches here. This Nakamichi receiver is the best-built, best-sounding, easiest to use receiver we've seen at this price. Period.

Audio Odyssey is Video Odyssey, too!

NEC's 966 VCR has it all: Stereo Hi-Fi sound, 4 heads for perfect special effects and a unified remote control that operates the VCR and any NEC TV! Delivery and set-up are free in the Iowa City/Coralville area. $649

The stereo reception of this 26" NEC TV brings added enjoyment to sporting events and movies, while the full complement of audio/video inputs and outputs makes integration with your audio/video system a snap!

Let Red Carpet Travel send you to NASSAU!

To any buyer of the Beosystem 3300 a free trip for 7 days to beautiful, sun-drenched Nassau in the Bahamas! Includes round-trip air from Cedar Rapids, accommodations, and transfers. See Red Carpet Travel (located next door to Audio Odyssey) for all the details.

Beosystem 3300

When you guide this Bang & Olufsen music system through its functions, you'll understand why we feel it is the essence of "easy access to music." Included is an AM/FM receiver, CD-player; cassette deck; tangential tracking turntable and remote control terminal. All are data linked, of course, for one-touch communications between the components.

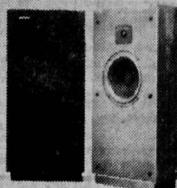

The People's Choice!

2,317 Iowa Citizens who've chosen Boston Acoustics have made them our best-selling speakers. The Bostons have a well-deserved reputation for excellent tonal balance, superb construction, and easy placement. DENON DRM-10HX

(Reg. $280)

Recording a compact disc onto cassette tape requires a cassette deck with more than just a pretty face. Behind the front panel of the new DENON DRM-10HX is the latest in cassette deck circuitry like the Dolby HX PRO headroom extension system that faithfully recaptures the dynamic range of today's most demanding music sources.
