Rezoning for sewage plant is considered

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

The city has further agreed to spread checks on any portion of the sewage plant so long as the developer, which is not known yet and so he was satisfied with the board's decision.

But several city and county officials were pleased with the sewage plant before the designation of Iowa City on the map, not sure if we can call it an endorsement.

IOWA CITY SENTINEL
Truitt expressed concern that the sewage plant could be built at lower cost. Truitt said he had been with Michael J., the president of Planning/Engineering Services, which is involved in the plant contract.

Soviet troops to exit Afghanistan in May

By Gary Lee
The Daily Iowan

The Soviet Union and Afghanistan Thursday to sign a peace agreement. The agreement is expected to end the Soviet Union's 10-year war in Afghanistan. The Soviet Union has been in Afghanistan since 1979 to support the Marxist government.

The agreement, signed Thursday in Moscow, will allow the Soviet Union to withdraw its troops from Afghanistan over a period of several months. The exact terms of the agreement have not been made public, but it is expected to include a promise by the Afghan government to respect Soviet interests and a commitment to hold free and fair elections.

Job outlook shines for UI graduates

By Jean Thielen
The Daily Iowan

A report presented for May graduates is looking brighter than it was in December. The report, released in December, predicted that job prospects for UI graduates would be challenging, with a high unemployment rate and a low demand for graduates in certain fields.

The new report, released Thursday, predicts a more optimistic outlook for UI graduates. It states that the job market is improving, with a higher demand for graduates in various fields and a lower unemployment rate.

The report, titled "Job Outlook for UI Graduates," includes data on job prospects in various fields, as well as advice for graduates on how to find employment.

The report is available online at the UI career center's website.
Zard! Cow From Hell! will be filmed here this summer.

By Susan W. Blum
The Daily Iowa

A major motion picture will be shot in Iowa City this summer, according to producers of the new film, "Cow From Hell." The movie will be produced by David's Dream Productions Inc., based in Johnson County.

The film, directed by John Adolescent, will be shot in Iowa City, with some scenes scheduled to be filmed in the Coralville area. The movie is expected to be released in theaters in 1988.

The story of the film centers around a cow that has escaped from a local farm and is on the loose in the city. The cow is a talking, intelligent animal that communicates with humans.

Producers have been scouting locations in Iowa City, including the Iowa Riverfront Center and the UI Library, for the filming of various scenes. The movie is expected to employ over 100 local residents as extras.

"Cow From Hell" is the latest film project from David's Dream Productions, which previously produced the hit movie "Shake, Rattle, and Roll." The company is known for its innovative approach to filmmaking and its commitment to showcasing local talent.

Pre-production work on "Cow From Hell" is expected to begin in the coming months, with filming scheduled to begin in late June. The movie is expected to wrap up production in early September.

"Cow From Hell" is being marketed as a family-friendly comedy, with a strong emphasis on environmental themes. The film is expected to appeal to audiences of all ages.

For more information on "Cow From Hell," visit the movie's official website at www.cowfromhell.com. Follow the production on social media for updates on the filming process and behind-the-scenes content. The movie trailer and additional details will be released soon.

Corrections

In an article published in the Daily Iowa on April 9, 2000, the newspaper incorrectly reported the location of a movie being filmed in Iowa City. The article stated that the movie, titled "Cow From Hell," would be shot in the Coralville area. In fact, the movie is being filmed in Iowa City, with some scenes scheduled to be filmed in the Coralville area.

The Daily Iowa apologizes for any confusion caused by this error. The newspaper strives to provide accurate and up-to-date information to its readers.

Board appointments

The board of trustees for the University of Iowa has appointed three new members to its board. The appointments were made during a meeting held on April 4, 2000. The new board members are:

- John R. Meister, a Iowa City resident and business owner, will serve a term expiring on June 30, 2003.
- Lisa A. Johnson, a Cedar Rapids resident and university employee, will serve a term expiring on June 30, 2002.
- Michael J. White, a Coralville resident and university employee, will serve a term expiring on June 30, 2003.

The appointments were made following a review of candidate qualifications and a selection process conducted by the university's Board Appointment Committee.

For further information, contact the office of the university's Board of Trustees at 319-335-4000 ext. 2000 or visit the university's website at www.uiowa.edu.

One of a few finalists currently looking to establish a nine-member Board of Regents at the University of Iowa Hospital in Des Moines was this morning's keynote speaker for a Thursday morning lecture titled "Thirty Years of Service." The lecture was held at the university's new $11 million Director of Administration Hubert Van ider said that the hospital will be embracing "accessibility to the times.
Dependable watches and leather jewelry.
Japan's largest teaching hospital.
"There is no finer institution to do business
than UI Hospitals and Clinics," he said.
Vanider said the hospital's success is based on the work of its employees and leaders. "There are no secrets here. We work hard to make sure our patients are cared for," he said.

Concentration
If you're planning on concentrating on a career in the health sciences, you may want to consider UI's new board of trustees to oversee the university's expanding health care services.

DES MOINES - The Iowa Senate will approve a hospital board proposal to establish a new board of directors for the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, Sen. Robert Murray, D-Waterloo, said Thursday.
The Senate has yet to act on a similar bill in the House, but Murray said he expects the legislation to pass soon.
Murray said the legislation is necessary because the hospital system is growing so rapidly.
"There is no finer institution to do business
than UI Hospitals and Clinics," he said.
Vanider said the hospital's success is

The Ul to emerge from stress

Rutgers University researchers have found that early childhood biochemical reactions are associated with the development of shy behavior. The study was led by Professor John Perry and his team, who have found that exposure to stress early in life can trigger biochemical changes that predispose children to sensitivity and introversion.

Researchers analyzed samples of saliva from a group of children aged 2 to 5 years old. They found that those who were shy had higher levels of a stress hormone called cortisol than their non-shy counterparts. The hormone levels were associated with the children's social behavior. The study also showed that children whose parents reported high levels of stress had higher cortisol levels, even when they were not shy themselves.

The findings suggest that early childhood stress can have long-term effects on social behavior. They also highlight the importance of early intervention to prevent the development of shy behavior. The results were published in the journal Developmental Science.

Gore continues to attack rivals as race continues

By Ellen Wallof

Minneapolis Star-Tribune

NEW YORK — A defiant Albert Gore turned aside a barrage of attacks on his record Thursday with a defiant speech to New York party leaders that he was not going to be "pushed out of the race." The Democratic presidential rival said that he had an "unshakable" belief in his ability to win the nomination.

"I'm not going to be pushed out of the race," Gore said at a time when a group of New York party leaders were looking for someone else to challenge Vice President Al Gore in the Democratic party's nomination.

Gore said he was considering suspending his campaign in order to run for the Senate in 1988. But he said he would not do so unless he was assured that he could win the nomination.

"You've got to be sure you can win," Gore said. "You've got to be sure you can win."

Shy people now believed to emerge from stress

By Joe Dugay

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Shy people apparently emerge from stress in response to stress, but not in response to stress in other people, researchers from Harvard and Yale universities have found.

Children who show signs of shyness were studied by the researchers from Harvard and Yale universities. The children were divided into groups, and the researchers measured their responses to stress.

The researchers found that the children who were shy in response to stress were more likely to show signs of stress than the children who were not shy. The researchers also found that the children who were shy in response to stress were more likely to show signs of stress than the children who were not shy in response to stress.

The researchers concluded that shy people are more likely to become stressed than other people.

UI cheerleading tryouts held

Squad members fight 'fluffy blonde' stereotype

By Paul Bent
The Daily Iowan

A study that examined the thoughts of athletes about their own individual psychosocial characteristics and the effects of coaching on these characteristics was presented at the University of Nevada's

annual convention.

The study, which was conducted by Dr. Matthew

D. Stull, assistant professor of psychology, looked at the relationship between athletes' self-esteem and the amount of stress they experience.

Stull found that athletes who had higher self-esteem reported lower levels of stress than those who had lower self-esteem.

He also found that athletes who were more athletic and had higher self-esteem were more likely to report lower levels of stress.

Additionally, the study showed that athletes who had higher self-esteem were more likely to report higher levels of enjoyment from athletic activities.

Stull said that these results

suggest that athletes with higher self-esteem may be more likely to continue participating in sports than those with lower self-esteem.

He said that this could have implications for coaches,

who might use self-esteem enhancement strategies to help their athletes.

The study was funded by the National Institute of Mental Health and was presented at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

The findings were based on a survey of 100 college athletes.

Questions that were asked included: How do you feel about yourself? How much do you enjoy your sport?

How much stress do you experience? And do you think you can improve your performance?

The researchers found that athletes who had higher self-esteem reported lower levels of stress.

They also found that those who enjoyed their sport more reported lower levels of stress.

The study concluded that self-esteem may play a role in reducing stress and that sports may be a way to improve self-esteem.

Stull said that these results

suggest that athletes with

higher self-esteem may be

No more U.S. troops

Presumably any American who knows anything about Panama’s strongman, Gen. Manuel Noreiga, supports the invasion of the U.S. government to drive him from power. And most probably also want the repentant dictator to either surrender, withdraw from his current unorthodox policy of the United States may cause more problems than it solved. The U.S. military action has reached a rather steady stage in the past two months. U.S. troops brought down a flagpole bearing the Panamanian flag. U.S. officials have stated that the assets and the country’s leader were not hurt by the military action. The U.S. civilians living in Panama and recent threats to the American civil rights in Panama, however, require a prompt approach. The invasion administration, however, plans to send down 600 Marines — in addition to the 1,300 troops over last week to suppress the Panamanian uprising — to station in Panama. A Pentagon spokesman said that the invasion had been well with other children, some-­­posed to the invasion plan. However, the British, civilians in Panama. Also, in an editorial, The International Center was a known risk, which makes it easily understandable to make the U.S. military presence more blatant and a threat to Panama.

Deployment Noreiga, either. The sentiments among Panamanians become exaggerated to make the U.S. military presence more blatant and a threat to Panama.

Resisting pressure

The Iowa Legislature should be congratulated for not giving in to the treacherous interests of the insurance industries. On Wednesday, lawmakers defeated an amendment which would have limited the monetary awards on individual injuries. Proponents of the bill argued that limits on malpractice awards would help contain the rising costs of malpractice. However, opponents of the bill argued that such limits would also affect the livelihood of victims of medical malpractice. The Iowa Legislature voted against the amendment, and the insurance industries will continue to face opposition from those who believe in the right to sue for compensation for injuries caused by medical malpractice.

Guest Opinion

It was interesting to read the letters in the editor’s column, especially the letter from Donoghue. Donoghue’s condemnation of the recent events in Northern Ireland was quite forceful. However, I believe that people should always view both sides of an issue before drawing any moral or intellectual conclusions. I would like to think that more people would agree with the view that the IRA has not provided a peaceful way to achieve their goals.

Those who have been involved in the conflict are quite familiar with the dangers involved. They are aware that the conflict is far from over.

However, it is important to note that the IRA has not provided a peaceful way to achieve their goals. The conflict is far from over, and it is important to remember that a peaceful solution is possible.

I agree with Donoghue that the IRA has not provided a peaceful way to achieve their goals. The conflict is far from over, and it is important to remember that a peaceful solution is possible.

Hijackers fire shots, threaten to leave

By Michael Ross

Passengers were held hostage for the second day yesterday in a remote northeastern Iraq firing range, but instead of being the site of an international incident, the area seemed to be a training ground for a potential terrorist assault.

Iranians

The airport was deserted, the once-bustling terminal reduced to a dusty expanse.

Baghdad

The plane appeared to be part of a group of four planes that hijacked the Kuwait Airways jetliner.

ест

The hijackers were据说 to be 北周和 objecting to the Egyptian government's handling of the situation.

Tehran

The hijackers apparently had no intention of harming the passengers, but were demanding an end to the conflict and the release of political prisoners.

The hijackers claimed to be affiliated with the Revolutionary Guards, a paramilitary force whose primary mission is to defend the Islamic Republic.

Tennis squads play host to Big Ten rivals this weekend

Men hope to keep winning streak alive

By Anja Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men’s tennis team’s seven-match winning streak and 1-0 league record will be on the line when it faces Big Ten foes Ohio State (16-3, 4-0 Big Ten) Saturday and Indiana (13-3, 1-3 Big Ten) Sunday at Kress Court.

"Judging by the tenors’ records, Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said he doesn’t expect any easy times to the home matches.

Men’s Tennis

"Both teams are really good," Houghton said. "We know we can win this weekend but we will have to play really well.

"Both Ohio State and Indiana’s head coaches showed the same sentiments as Houghton.

Their No. 6 player, Jay Maltby, is a good player. I’d say we have about even. They rotate their lineup, the home court advantage; the ball bounces differently in the home matches ." Houghton said.

Both matches will start at 9 a.m. on Klotz Courts.

Women's Tennis

"They are about even. They rotate their lineup, the No. 1 player in one match could play No. 4 in the next. They have gone 1-1 in their last six matches, all on the road, and the players said they are prepared to play in Iowa City.

"We have had lots of home match and it’s exciting to have them. It’s nice to have a hometown crowd, to be in our own building because of these things that is not traveling," Houghton said.

"It makes you win so much more comfortable," No. 2 singles player Jennifer Wilson said. "People come out and watch and we have some friends and family here. It’s a lot of fun to have your family and friends here and she is confident with her decision to play in the second singles match with Wohlford at No. 1."

"TENNIS THEY are going to put together as a team," Houghton said.

"It’s a combination of their ability to be tough and aggressive. They are very much on pace to be big matches of the pressure matches.

"They are still young, but they will be very strong," Houghton said.

Houghton said the Indiana-Iowa meeting will be tough because both teams want to win.

"New Coach" Schillig forced to shift lineup

By Hugh Doherty
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes haven’t been the same since their loss to Penn State earlier last month.

This has been a week to remember in the career of Iowa women’s tennis Coach Mike Schillig, but her success are more with her players.

Schillig was officially named Iowa’s head coach in December 1987.

But before she could celebrate, she was forced to replace Catherine, Wilson, Iowa, No. 1, doubles and No. 4, singles player, who will miss the remainder of the season.

"I HAVEN’T THOUGHT that much about it," Schillig said of her appointment.

This new week and she has more important things to think about, like the Big Ten tournament scheduled for Saturday and Sunday at the Klotz Center.

"I would have loved to have the Big Ten tournament here, but," Schillig said. "I have gone 1-1 in the last six matches, all on the road, and the players said they are prepared to play in Iowa City.

Company dances to Copland

By K. Hamann
The Daily Iowan

Dancing to a composer's music is not a new idea, but the University of Iowa Dance Company will do just that with the program "Perspectives on Human Rights and Self-Determination: Black Americans, Palestinians, & South Africans." Friday, April 8 from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in Boyd Law Building Room 245.

Figar's Rap ite rewrites problems

By Neena Mathur
The Daily Iowan

"Latherin' Up at the Bear's Nest" is a 14th-century play, in which the University of Iowa's Romance of Rannoch Adaptation Ensemble from The Master of Ballaure, which opened Wednesday night at K.C. Nelson Theater, takes the question, why an adaptation? Dancing is as much a part of the story as the plot itself. The play involves the comic spirit of the play, the "bear's nest" being a place where boys would gather to dye their hair and learn to be men.

The acting featured Figgas Paul Sheets. Figgas played the role of "Lathering Up," a man who was kidnapped in the middle of the night and taken to the bear's nest by the bear. The bear, played by a group of male dancers, was able to create a piece of the play that reflected upon the story line - unlike the original play, which was a stream-of-consciousness piece, but when taken by itself would only show a few scenes. After a wonderful playful treatment, the lack of effective pacing of many of the scenes. After a wonderful treatment, the lack of effective pacing of many of the scenes.

The laughs were quick, and many story is that "the bear's nest" was a place where boys would gather to dye their hair and learn to be men. The scene where the bear's nest is attacked by a group of men is particularly memorable for the audience. The audience actually enjoyed the scene, and the play was interrupted and dancing took place during the course of the play.

The Bear's Nest is a popular place for children. The premise of the story is that a bear goes to the graveyard to rescue children who have been taken by the bear. The bear then rescues the children and goes to war with the bear. The bear's nest is a place where boys would gather to dye their hair and learn to be men.

Gibby's Dance is the main character, the bear, is named dance enthusiast. Gibby's Dance was choreographed by Mr. Gibby, who was injured in the bear's nest and was unable to dance. Gibby's Dance works such as Appalachian Spring and Bolero. Gibby's Dance is a lot of fun, on the level of Twyla Tharp, "It really sounds like music to my ears," he said, "and the director of the school is interested in the work." Faculty of the Quad City Center for the Performing Arts presented Gibby's Dance on the End of Time. According to Wood, the piece "reflects upon the psychological and physical changes that occur when one is held captive by someone."

Poet Orr to read from works

By Steve Keenan
Special to The Daily Iowan

Gregory Orr will read from his works tonight at 8 in Allen Hall. Orr's poetic vision has been formed by the tragedies of his early youth and a lifetime of writing that reflects on his passions.

Orr was born in the University of Iowa's Writers' Workshop program and has won numerous awards and prizes, including a National Book Foundationimei Fellowship and a Pew Charitable Trusts fellowship.

But credentials aside, the allure of Orr's poetry is to his reading. "We must make a distinction, as one of his poems suggests, 'We must make a living off of these' " Keenan quotes.

"Many of his poems have matured into 'Military Confessional,' the poet's imagination from the prison itself, from reports of the circumstances that landed him there," Keenan writes. "This is poetry of confessions."

"Orr's ability to express himself in writing, one may expect a reading of quality tonight. Since his poems have matured into a landmark in his body of work, his reading will present a secure voice, an imagination frees him from his works tonight at 8 in Allen Hall."

"Orr's poetry trusts itself. In his poem 'We Must Make a Living off of These,' he states "From his works tonight at 8 in Allen Hall."

"When the War is Over," Orr is occasionally shot and killed his brother. Much of his early work, embodied in the books "Burning the Empty Nest," Together (1973) and The Red Tentacles (1975), celebrates the tragedies of his early life and resonates with the poet's imagination from the prison itself, from reports of the circumstances that landed him there."

Jazz greats to help out homelesss

United Press International

Jazz greats Count Basie and Herbie Hancock take their fame heads on tour this month for a 13-city combined benefit for homeless Americans, the musicians said Thursday.

"The tour will raise at least $15,000 for local homeless aid organizations," Basie said.

"We're putting a lot of energy into this," he said.

The tour will open June 1 in Chicago, wind up July 1 in Tampa, Fla., and take in some other cities.

The tour will feature two days of a series of concerts, a benefit for the National Coalition for the Homeless.

The tour guidelines, local churches.

"In addition to donating money for people, we will also throw open our homes to helping people out," Basie said. "And it's not a one-time donation. We will break it into individual deals and large groups take some of the money that they have and channel it toward a cause, it results in a potential interest.

"We are more than happy to help out the people who are in need," Basie said.

"If you want to help out, send some money to us, and we'll work on it," he said.
Mime troupe plays 'Caper'
By Stephen Humble
The Daily Iowan

The San Francisco Mime Troupe, Western United States' preeminent performance ensemble, is on an educational tour of the United States. "Eight of the nation's premier university and college theater departments have selected the Mime Troupe to present workshops and guest lectures," the Troupe's recent announcement says.

The Troupe has been on the road since April 1, and will continue through May. This is a "puppet theater" of a type not seen in Iowa City before, according to the Daily Iowan article.

The group, which consists of eight mime artists, is known for its "offbeat, non-verbal approach to theater. "It is a performance that is both a form of entertainment and an educational experience," the article states.

The Troupe's shows are scheduled for April 28 at 8 p.m. at the Hancher Auditorium. The performance will feature a wide range of characters, including a clown, a jester, and a harlequin. The show is expected to last approximately one hour.

Tickets for the performance are currently available at the Daily Iowan box office. The Troupe's visit is made possible through the support of the Iowa City Community Arts Council and the Iowa Arts Commission.
