UI Hospitals face negligence suits regarding two patients

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

Two lawsuits were recently filed in Johnson County District Court against UI Hospitals and Clinics for alleged negligence regarding two patients at the hospital, including the death of one, according to court records.

Janice M. Becker, 210 Windsor Drive, filed a suit Friday claiming UI Hospitals and Clinics' employees were negligent in the care of her husband, George E. Becker, who died April 9, 1986. He was admitted to the hospital April 7, 1986, for medical care and treatment of a heart attack and was pronounced dead two days later, according to court records.

Janice Becker is seeking monetary compensation for damages including the mental anguish of both her and her husband, pain and suffering endured by George E. Becker, premature and wrongful death, medical expenses and loss of savings to the estate of George E. Becker, according to court records.

THE SECOND LAWSUIT was filed Monday by Jeremy and Carrie Weber of LaGrand, Iowa, for alleged negligence to Jeremy Weber while he was admitted to UI Hospitals and Clinics for surgery on August 9, 1985.

The suit is being brought against UI Hospitals and Clinics and Luis F. Urdaneta, a doctor who performed abdominal surgery on Jeremy Weber which resulted in separation of the surgical wound on August 16, 1985. The separation allegedly caused injury, illness and an abdominal hernia, according to court records.

The suit claims the defendants were negligent in the caring for Weber by failing to advise him of the risks associated with wound separation, for failing to properly repair the wound separation to guard against infection and for failing to exercise the normal degree of care possessed by other physicians and hospitals caring for the same type of surgery, according to court records.

Jeremy Weber is seeking monetary compensation for painful and permanent injuries, loss of wages, mental anguish, medical expenses and additional surgical procedures. His wife is suing for having suffered loss of consortium, including love, affection, services, society and companionship as a result of negligence by UI Hospitals and Clinics and Urdaneta, according to court records.

Hijackers kill 2nd hostage on Kuwaiti jet

By Karen DeYoung
Washington Post

LARNACA, Cyprus — The hijackers of Kuwait Airways Flight 422 shot and killed a second passenger Monday, ending earlier hopes that the 7-day-old crisis was nearing an end.

Like the first passenger who was killed Saturday, the dead man was identified by the hijackers as a "Kuwaiti officer," believed to be one of three military men who were aboard the plane. His body was dumped out on the tarmac from the door of the jumbo jet.

Three hours after the killing, which occurred just after 3 p.m. local time (7 a.m. CST), the hijackers brought a passenger to the aircraft radio who said in Arabic that the hijackers "will kill the passengers" unless the plane was refueled. "Please give us fuel," pleaded the man, who identified himself as Fadl Marzouk Oteibi, "a Kuwaiti citizen."

PROSPECTS FOR an end to the hijacking ordeal rose and fell dramatically several times over the past 24 hours as the captors, believed to number seven or eight, seemed unsure whether to compromise on their demand that the plane be refueled and allowed to take off for a neutral country with all of an estimated 50 passengers and crew aboard, sources here said.

At the same time, sources said the governments of Cyprus and Kuwait, negotiating with the hijackers through Malath Abdo, a local official of the Palestine Liberation Organization, disagreed over Kuwaiti insistence that no concessions be made, even at the price of the lives of the hostages.

In Kuwait, according to Reuter News Service, Foreign Minister Sabah Ahmed Sabah said Monday, "We will do our utmost to secure the release of our people in the plane, but we shall not give in to any blackmail or terrorism. . . . Though we may lose more (hostages), this is a decision not only of the government but of the people of Kuwait."

IN WASHINGTON, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said, "The United States is appalled at the cold-blooded murder of two innocent hostages . . . (and) firmly supports the Kuwaiti policy of no concessions . . . (and) the Cypriot position of refusing to refuel the aircraft."

Cyprus, which strives to maintain good relations with all its Arab neighbors, has grown somewhat

Cuomo: I won't accept a draft

By John J. Goldman
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — Gov. Mario Cuomo, in his strongest statement on the subject, says he will turn down a draft if it is offered at the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta.

Over the weekend, the governor moved to scotch a draft movement started on his behalf by former New York Democratic Congressman Richard Ottinger. In a letter, Cuomo told Ottinger "not to go forward with your intention to encourage a draft."

But later, the governor's press secretary, in a clarification to reporters, said that the governor, while still believing a draft was unhealthy and unlikely, would accept one if it occurred at a deadlocked convention. Still later, Cuomo clarified the matter himself, announcing for the first time that he would turn down a draft.

"HOW CAN I SAY a draft would be counterproductive, unwise, wrong, and then say I would accept it?" Cuomo asked.

Months earlier, the governor had said he would accept a draft and top aides concurred that it would not jeopardize his duties as governor because the press of state

Groups hold Disability Days

By Karyn Riley
The Daily Iowan

Physical and attitudinal barriers that affect the disabled will be the focus of activities planned for UI Disability Awareness Days, to be held Wednesday through Friday.

Sponsored by UI student organizations Restrict Us Not and Rolling Hawks, along with UI Services for Persons with Disabilities, Disability Awareness Days will include a variety of activities intended to create an awareness of issues relating to the disabled.

The event will also provide information and support programs to disabled students and community members, according to Jeff Carstens, a UI academic adviser to the disabled.

"The goals are twofold," Carstens said. "One focus is targeted toward helping people understand issues relating to the disabled, and the second focus is informing people with disabilities of our resources and programs that can help them be more successful, both as students and as people."

ACTIVITIES include lectures and discussions on the rights of disabled students and classroom accommodation.

"Professors need to understand in their own mind that the disabled, even though certain accommodations might have to be made, just want to be on an equal level with the other students in the class," Carstens said. "They don't want an advantage, but the chance to compete on the same level. While it is rare here, some professors don't understand that."

Even though the UI has made strides in improving conditions for the approximately 400 disabled students on campus, Disability Awareness Days Chairman Dan Burns said there is still room for improvement in decreasing bias toward the disabled.

"Our group (Restrict Us Not) was formed in order that these issues get dealt with instead of ignored," Burns said. "While accessibility is improving, there are more attitudinal barriers. Most people haven't had to deal with the issues because it hasn't come into their lives in any way. Through this (Disability Awareness Days), it can be brought to their attention, and they can start thinking about it."

ALTHOUGH THERE ARE still challenges and barriers for the disabled in Iowa City, Carstens said the community and the UI are more enlightened than other communities about disabilities.

"The climate in Iowa City is very supportive and accepting of differences whether it be race, gender, nationality or the disabled," Carstens said. "In my mind, as a person with a disability, it's a good place to be."

As part of the efforts to change and improve attitudes in the classroom, UI faculty and staff members are invited to simulate a disability for a day Wednesday. Being confined to a wheelchair or simulating blindness with darkened glasses are two ways people can experience disabilities, Carstens said.

"They will get a chance to deal with the physical part of being disabled, but more importantly they will have to deal with the non-physical part," Carstens said. "It's easy to overcome the physical obstacles but not so easy to understand how other people view them and deal with their reactions."

ALSO INCLUDED in Disability Awareness Days is keynote speaker Roger Kerns, who wrote and produced the video documentary Looking Up. Kerns will present "Seeing Disability Through New Eyes" Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Union Main Lounge.

"Mr. Kerns provides a very good personal close-up view of someone with a disability that can really help people take a new perspective," Carstens said. "He can make people realize that the disabled aren't better or worse but that they just do things differently, and that difference is not positive or negative."

Other events, such as a wheelchair basketball tournament, will take place during the week. More information is available at the UI Office of Services for Persons With Disabilities.

Tax-crunched grad students may get aid from state funds

By Joe Suchner
The Daily Iowan

UI graduate assistants — who must now include stipends as earned income due to the 1986 Tax Reform Act — may soon receive supplemental aid from a $145,000 state fund, according to UI Graduate Student Senate President Alan Tribble.

UI Graduate Student Senate Vice President Al Beardsley said changes resulting from the tax reform have financially hurt graduate students who depend upon stipends, and although the special fund will provide only a small measure of relief, it is important to let graduate students know that such a fund exists.

Advertisements are going to be placed in newspapers and graduate students receiving a stipend will be receiving notices addressed by payroll. Also, the next issue of the graduate newsletter will include information about the fund plus an application form, Beardsley said.

THE FUND WILL be divided among teaching assistants who apply and meet certain conditions, with an adjustment that will distribute the funds on a pro-rated basis to half-time, quarter-time and three-eighths time graduate assistants and graduate researchers, Tribble said.

He said a similar bill of appropriation is being debated at the federal level, and if passed, will restore the exemption of stipends prior to the tax reform.

Applications are available from the Student Activity Center in the Union and the UI Graduate College office. Applications will also be distributed in the Graduate Bulletin.

The deadline for applications is April 20.

Israelis deport 8 Palestinian citizens

By Dan Fisher
Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — The Israeli government deported eight Palestinians from the occupied territories Monday and served a dozen more with expulsion orders as it continued a series of reprisals following the controversial killing of a Jewish teenager last week in a West Bank Arab village.

A West Bank Jewish settlement leader branded the government response as "too little, too late" after 15-year-old Tirza Porat died and 15 companions, most of them teenagers, were injured in a violent clash at the village of Beita. Two Palestinians were shot to death and two others were wounded in the incident, in circumstances that army investigators say are still not completely clear.

Other critics charged that the expulsions were unjustified and were evidence that the authorities either could not or would not stand up to right-wing militants in the settlement movement.

UI vending employee dies

The flag at the Old Capitol building will be flying at half mast today in honor of Thomas Doling, 61, who died April 8 after a long illness. Doling retired from the UI after working 20 years in the UI Vending Machine Department.

Awards given to journalists

Journalism advisers at 469 high schools around the state will soon receive letters notifying them of three new scholarships intended to lure promising young journalists to the UI. The awards of $2,500 per year will go to students who choose to attend the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication and work on the staff of The Daily Iowan, the UI daily newspaper.

"Our goal is to get top journalists to come to the university and work on The Daily Iowan," DI Publisher William B. Casey said. The paper is funding two of the three scholarships; the Cedar Rapids Gazette is funding the third.

Casey said in recent years the DI staff has been composed mostly of juniors and seniors. If the DI can attract students to work at the newspaper starting as freshmen, the newspaper should have a greater pool of experienced talent from which to select an editor, he said.

The scholarships will be renewed on a semester-to-semester basis. In order to keep the scholarships, the recipients must work on the DI in some capacity and maintain a specific grade-point average, still to be established.

Eventually, Casey says, the number of scholarships will be increased to eight or nine, with students possibly recruited from neighboring states as well as Iowa.

Because some of these students may go on to work for Iowa newspapers, Casey hopes other newspapers, in addition to the Cedar Rapids Gazette, will participate in the scholarship fund. He plans to make an appeal to the state's newspapers at the annual convention of the Iowa Newspaper Association in Des Moines April 14-16.

Professor given grant

A UI professor has received a $40,000 National Science Foundation grant to study economic conditions that existed in a pre-Columbian city-state.

Thomas Charlton, professor and chairman of the UI Department of Anthropology, and co-investigator Deborah Nichols, professor of anthropology at Dartmouth College and recipient of a matching $40,000 NSF grant, plan to conduct a dig at a well-preserved urban site about 40 miles northeast of present-day Mexico City.

They hope to learn how the rise of the Aztec Empire affected local industries and, in turn, economic conditions, as well as the very existence of city-states surrounding the Aztec capital.

"We are going to study one of the city-states, located in the Basin of Mexico, which preceded the Aztec Empire and which became incorporated into it during the Aztec expansion," Charlton said.

During a preliminary surface survey completed by Charlton and his wife, Cynthia, in January 1987, large amounts of obsidian debris were found, indicating that this particular city-state was likely a major industrial center.

Charlton, Nichols and their 10-member team plan to conduct their dig beginning in the fall and continuing into the winter, during the region's dry season.

Iowa City police will invest in less powerful weaponry

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police officers may soon be outfitted with a new type of gun which will ensure a higher degree of protection to officers and the public, according to Iowa City Police Chief Harvey Miller.

The department is currently in search of a less powerful 9 millimeter pistol to replace its present .357 and .38 caliber revolvers. Although the exact gun has not yet been chosen, the department is looking carefully at a name brand, Beretta, as a possibility, Miller said.

Iowa City police now use a standard six-shooter, according to Miller. The new one will have a magazine, which is a compartment in which cartridges are held before being fed into the firing chamber.

Miller said the switch will serve as a safety measure.

"It (the gun) will have a smaller, less powerful shell," he said. "We want to look at guns that would cut down on the possibility — if they absolutely must be used — on danger to others, although I guess any gun is dangerous. This just gives a larger margin of protection to our officers and to the public we serve."

ACCORDING TO MILLER, no Iowa City police officer has been shot with a weapon since an armed man shot an officer three years ago.

The new weapons are part of continuing improvements by the police department. Last year, the department exchanged light blue officers' uniforms for a more traditional, darker uniform.

Miller said the city's police force is following a trend in law enforcement to switch to less powerful weaponry for safety.

"We'll experiment widely with that sort of thing, whether it be with uniforms or weapons," Miller said. "You see a lot of places switching to the less powerful types of guns."

City funds needed to purchase the weapons will not be available until after the start of fiscal year 1989, July 1. But a purchasing order has been signed, and delivery of the weapons will take about 90 days, according to Miller.

Attorney general: Suit will prove laws can't be exported to Iowa

By Bill Brewer
United Press International

DES MOINES—Attorney General Tom Miller filed suit Monday against the nation's second largest bank holding company and its South Dakota subsidiary for assessing illegal late charges to their credit card holders in Iowa.

The suit filed in U.S. District Court in Des Moines, accuses Citicorp of New York and Citibank of South Dakota of violating the Iowa Consumer Credit Code by assessing penalties of $10 to Iowans whose account payments bounce or are delinquent. He said the Iowa Legislature in 1985 specifically prohibited out-of-state banks from assessing late charges in return for abolishing the state's ceiling on credit card interest rates.

"Consumers already are paying more because of additional interest charges," Miller said.

THE SUIT SEEKS an injunction prohibiting Citibank from assessing any additional late penalties and an order requiring the company to issue refunds to any Iowa cardholder who has been assessed a late fee or a bad check charge.

Miller said he took the unprecedented step of suing the company after Citicorp claimed that Iowa law cannot restrict the activities of an out-of-state bank. South Dakota law allows banks to assess late payment and bad check fees on credit card accounts.

"We're challenging their assumption that they can export the laws of states which have few consumer protections into states like Iowa that have stronger protections for their citizens," Miller said in a statement.

"The point of our lawsuit is that it's up to the Iowa Legislature to determine Iowa law for Iowa consumers on these questions. It's not up to the laws of other states."

A man who had previously threatened Iowa City police officers was arrested and charged with criminal trespass Sunday night, according to police reports.

John Moore, address unavailable, was reportedly in the 900 block of East College Street at about 9:40 p.m. Sunday and allegedly harassing residents, according to the report.

He was subsequently charged and taken to the Johnson County Jail, according to the report. Moore was reportedly removed earlier in the day from the area at the request of residents, according to the report.

Moore has allegedly threatened to purchase a 14-foot rifle and "shoot the faces off of any Iowa City police officer he sees," according to the report.

Report: Two UI students were arrested and charged with harassment Thursday after they allegedly made annoying phone calls to a victim's room, according to Campus Security reports.

UI freshmen Kristine A. Cohlma, 19, and Mary C. Gelhaar, 18, 2408 Burge Residence Hall, were arrested at about 10:45 a.m. Thursday for allegedly making harassing phone calls, the report stated.

Theft: A VCR camera valued at approximately $1,000 was reported stolen at about 7:35 p.m. Saturday from a room in North Hall, according to Campus Security reports.

Theft: A car rented from Bill's Rentals, 105 E. Burlington St., and due back April 6 was reported stolen Friday morning, according to police reports.

The car allegedly was rented by David K. Bliss, who gave a Rock Falls, Ill., address at the time of the rental, but said he was staying at the Colony Inn on Interstate 80, according to the report.

A David Bliss who gave the same Illinois address reportedly checked out of the Colony Budget Inn on April 5, according to the report.

A warrant has been issued by another county on Bliss, who is reported to have stolen and sold one car already, according to the report. The incident is under investigation.

Theft: Approximately $340 in clothes belonging to a UI student were reported stolen Saturday morning from a dryer in the laundry area in Mayflower Residence Hall, according to Campus Security reports.

UI freshman Chad Hornbuckle, 411B Mayflower, reported at about 12:35 a.m. Saturday that his clothes had been stolen, according to the report.

Shang 'supports' minorities

Support services head promotes ethnic diversity at the UI

By Paul Dunt
The Daily Iowan

Back in the late 1950s when Florida was home to more alligators than people and DisneyWorld was but a glint in Walt's eye, UI Director of Special Support Services Paul Shang was growing up, an Asian in a predominantly white rural community near Orlando.

Shang's parents came to the Sunshine State from China in the late 1940s, and as a child he attended the local elementary school in the town of Apopka.

"It was a kind of surprising thing that they moved there," Shang said. At that time the United States was facing major social change, he said, recalling the prejudice his color often invoked.

"Being a minority, I was the subject of verbal and physical harassment," he said. "People who are minorities can expect it to happen. It happened pretty often in Florida."

BUT BY THE time he entered his teens, the word of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was spreading across the continent and especially into the South. Desegregation was appearing on the national agenda.

Paul Shang

"It was the era when affirmative action policies were being discussed for the first time. Those issues were real issues then. The whole notion of desegregation in the South was the major issue," Shang said.

In 1969, Shang enrolled in Florida State University and soon became active on the campus, campaigning for social issues. He was able to continue his studies after being awarded the Florida State University Fellowship, a program to encourage minority students to attend graduate school. Shang was one of the first recipients and would not have been able to afford graduate school without the award.

"AT THE TIME, it made all the difference in the world," he said.

In 1977, Shang began to work in minority affairs and special programs as a research assistant at Florida State University, and in 1978 he earned his doctorate in philosophy. It was his interest in working with students that first drew him into studying philosophy, he said. Although intending to find a career in this field, Shang said he soon realized he could fulfill his ambitions for social change better by helping ethnic minority students.

"Because of my enthusiasm for social issues and my belief in Martin Luther King and other people and my involvement in student activity, this would be a way I could do all those things," Shang said. "I have always believed that many social issues could be addressed by further education."

IN 1982, SHANG moved to Iowa City to become director of Special Support Services, a program designed to increase ethnic diversity at the UI.

Since that time, the program has grown from fewer than 750 to almost 1,000 students, and the number of minority students studying at the UI has risen from 1,263 to 1,633.

"This is the time for minority students," Shang said. "In some universities the numbers are declining rapidly. In Iowa they are growing with the rest of the student population."

But despite the move toward educational equality, Shang said, there is still much to be done. Dropout rates for minority students are higher than other groups at the UI.

"There are pressures on minority students that others don't have," he said. "It is important for us to realize that there is a gap between the expectations of the university and the life experience of the students. We have to bridge that gap."

"It is not Utopia now. There is still discrimination, overt and institutionalized," Shang said.

Presidential imposter opens Hoover exhibit

By Jean Thilmann
The Daily Iowan

Abraham Lincoln will take center stage tonight at 7:30 at the Hoover Presidential Library in West Branch, Iowa. Accompanying him will be former U.S. presidents John F. Kennedy and Richard Nixon. Even President Ronald Reagan will be in attendance.

These men will not actually be present, but eight men who look and act just like them will be. They'll be auditioning for the role of the presidential imposter who will help Gov. Terry Branstad open the Hoover Library's new "39 Men" exhibit April 23.

The exhibit is an assortment of more than 200 rare artifacts associated with each of the 39 men who have served as U.S. president, according to Hoover Library Director Tom Walsh.

"We thought we'd have a little fun and inject some life and personality into the exhibit," Walsh said. Walsh said anyone interested in auditioning for a presidential role can contact him at the Hoover Library.

CONTESTANTS will have two minutes onstage to imitate the mannerisms, dialect, costume and makeup of a president of their choice before a panel of judges, he said.

Mark Kuehnle, production supervisor of the Cedar Rapids Teleconnect Talking Phone Book, said he will use his two-minute time allotment and then some. He'll be imitating four presidents: Kennedy, Nixon, Jimmy Carter and Reagan.

"I'm going to banter between Reagan and Carter for four minutes," Kuehnle said. "Then I'll do an excerpt from Kennedy's nomination speech. I will, of course, imitate Nixon's historic phone call from the White House to Neil Armstrong on the moon."

"NIXON'S VOICE was the easiest to get down, but Reagan's took me two years to perfect," he said.

UI second-year medical student John Becker knows he will be imitating Abe Lincoln when he steps on the stage tonight, but he's still not sure exactly how.

"I'm going to dress as much like him as possible, but I don't know what I'll do for two minutes," he said. "People have told me I look like Abe Lincoln, so I decided to go for it."

disABILITY AWARENESS DAYS

APRIL 13-15

Take This Opportunity to Acquaint Yourself with Issues Affecting the Disabled

Restrict Us Not (R.U.N.), Rolling Hawks, and Services for persons with Disabilities invite your participation.

Schedule of Activities:

Wednesday, April 13

"Disability Simulation" · 8:00 a.m. - 4:30 p.m.
UI faculty, staff, administrators and students will be conducting portions of their daily routines with simulated disabilities. Participants will discuss their impressions of the experience at the end of the day.

"Accommodating Students with Disabilities in the Classroom"
3:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m. Purdue Rm., IMU
Presenter: Jeff B. Carstens, Services for Persons with Disabilities. This UI Staff Development course, dealing with appropriate classroom accommodations for persons with physical and/or learning disabilities, will feature a panel discussion by faculty and students.

"Panel Discussion: Disability Simulation" · 4:30 p.m. Main Lounge Sunporch, IMU
Moderator: Donna Chandler, Services for Persons with Disabilities. Participants in the Disability Simulation will discuss their impressions of simulating a disability. A panel of persons with disabilities will discuss their disabilities and will answer questions from the audience.

Opening Address Reception · 6:30 p.m. - 7:00 p.m. Main Lounge, IMU
All interested persons are encouraged to meet Mr. Roger Kerns of Fire Productions, Portland, Oregon. UI students are especially encouraged to attend.

Opening Address: "Seeing Disability Through New Eyes"
by Roger Kerns, Fire Productions · 7:00 p.m. Main Lounge IMU
Roger Kerns, who uses a wheelchair as a result of an auto accident in 1978, will present the award-winning video documentary "Looking Up." He will challenge current perspectives and attitude regarding disability, clarify the distinction between having a disability and being handicapped and will provide insight into the different ways we disable ourselves and others.

Thursday, April 14

"Wheelchair Basketball Tournament" · Field House, Main Floor Courts 7 & 8
Opening Round: 8:30-10:30 am; 2nd Round 2:30 pm; Final Round 7:30 pm
An eight-team basketball tournament will be held throughout the day. Teams representing different organizations and athletic teams will compete.

"Section 504: The Rights of Students with Disabilities"
12:00 noon-1:00 pm, Yale Room, 3rd Floor, IMU
Presenter: Mary Dudziak, Assoc. Professor, College of Law. This presentation will outline the legal right of persons with disabilities, particularly the rights of students with disabilities, under Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act. A brief history of Section 504 and developments in recent case law will also be presented.

"Personal Presentation for the Disabled" · 1:00-2:00 pm, Yale Room, 3rd Floor, IMU
This program will explore issues of personal appearance for persons with disabilities. Topics will include dress, grooming, posture, and adornments. The emphasis will be placed on presenting a positive personal image.

"Survival Skills and the Learning Disabled Adult" · 6:00-7:00 pm, Yale Room, IMU
Presenter: Terry Willkomm, Iowa Easter Seals Society. This program will outline methods, materials and resources that can be utilized by adults with learning disabilities. Emphasis will be given to being successful in educational as well as vocational settings.

Friday, April 15

Exhibitors and Vendors Display · 9:00 am-5:00 pm, Yale Room, IMU
A variety of agencies, organizations and retailers will be exhibiting health care, recreation and adaptive equipment for persons with disabilities. Stop by to learn more about community service agencies in the Iowa City area and see the latest technology in adaptive devices and transportation on display.

"The Job Interview" · 10:30-11:30 am, Yale Room, IMU
Presenter: Ray Manning, Vocational Rehabilitation Counselor. This program will cover interviewers' expectations, how to score points in the interview, "clinchings," and how to discuss a disability with a potential employer. A question and answer period will follow the presentation.

"If I Have to Go Blind, Iowa Is the Place to Do It"
12:30-1:30 pm, Yale Room, IMU
Presenter: Joe Howell, U of I student. This program will outline the state and local services available to persons who are blind or who have visual impairments. Also, obstacles and difficulties encountered by students at the University will be discussed.

"Consumer Awareness of Rehabilitation Technology"
1:30-2:30 pm, Yale Room, IMU.
Presenter: Thomas L. Grey, Elayne O. Sexsmith, Rehabilitation Engineering Department, University Hospital School. This presentation will introduce consumers to the "nuts and bolts of rehabilitation technology. What is available for recreational, educational, vocational as well as daily living needs, along with where to find it and how to make it work for you, will be outlined.

"Daily Experiences of a Disabled Person" · 2:30-3:30 pm Yale Room, IMU Presenter: Pam Daale, WOI-TV, Ames, Iowa. Ms. Daale, who uses a wheelchair, is a meteorologist at WOI-TV. She will be speaking about her experiences working with others on a day-to-day basis.

"Adaptive Sports, Recreation and Independent Living for the Physically Handicapped"
3:30 pm-5:00 pm, Yale Room, IMU
Presenter: Brian Johnson, founder & president of Innovator of Disability Equipment and Adaptations, Inc. (IDEA), will give a slide presentation, hold a question and answer session and demonstrate equipment. Mr. Johnson is quadriplegic and lives independently.

"disABILITY Awareness Days Social" · 5:00 pm, Yale Room, IMU
Everyone participating in disABILITY Awareness Days is invited to meet with presenters, exhibitors and others interested in disability issues. The social is informal and refreshment will be served.

Anyone requiring special accommodations to participate in this event should contact Services for Persons with Disabilities, 335-1462

SPECIAL THANKS TO: Gene Woellert of Pepsi-Cola in Cedar Rapids for donation of hats, T-shirts and posters; Aid Care Medical, Hamilton Medical and Miller Medical Service for the use of their wheelchairs. Co-sponsored by University Lecture Committee.

Vacation time

A catchy Xavier Cugat ditty of the 1940s extolled the virtues of a vacation in Managua, Nicaragua. Honduras, even with a capital city whose name is as poetic as Tegucigalpa, never inspired such melodious adulation.

Nicaragua's dusty northern neighbor is generally considered the poorest of Central American nations. Honduran leaders historically have had the advantage of a cushy relationship with United Brands, exporters of the nation's extensive banana crops, but the benefits of that relationship have not been shared with the general populace. Ironically, while bananas leave the country by the boatload, Honduran peasants seem to subsist on sand — average annual income there is less than $600 — and predictably, malnutrition is rampant.

So what's a corrupt government with a hungry country on its hands to do? Lean on an uncle from the North, that's what. Honduras has received hundreds of millions of dollars in economic aid from the U.S. in the last few years, but it has not been without strings attached.

The U.S. virtually created a military for Honduras and used it for its own ends — arming and housing Contra terrorists. That resulted only in increased peril to Honduras from an understandably touchy Nicaraguan government, who correctly claimed its borders were not safe.

When Honduran leaders spoke up to say they didn't like what the U.S. was doing, they were ousted and replaced with politicians who were more grateful for U.S. intervention.

Honduras gave up its sovereignty for a song.

The latest "threat" to Honduran security is not from its southern neighbor, who, of all things, has signed a truce agreement with the Contra terrorists. It comes from inside its own borders, in the form of street demonstrations against the corruption and cowardice of its government.

Anti-U.S. sentiment ran high and Honduran leaders, scared that Washington would once again think them insincere in their gratitude, overreacted. They declared a state of emergency last week and suspended the already abbreviated rights of its citizens.

The international press promptly forgot about the dusty little backwater and news from Honduras has been scant since. Now that U.S. troops are back at Fort Bragg after a two-week vacation in the Honduran "battle zone," U.S. media has pigeonholed Honduras with the same old tune — they're just another Latin American banana republic gone tyrannically amok. And besides, the truce in Nicaragua had to be covered ("still no violation, but we're waiting") and the crisis in Panama needed to be examined ("still no end to the evil empire, but we're waiting").

The long-suffering Honduran people are finally brave enough to sing "Fuera Yanqui — Yankee Go Home!" Unfortunately for them, the North American press listened and packed its bags, leaving U.S. business and military behind to work their murderous melody.

If the U.S. government wants strong, healthy allies in that part of the world, it should stop funding regimes on the condition that they dance to the tune played by the great white fiddler in Washington. What Honduras needs is a song of its own to sing.

Nix Nixon

Like a dog returning to its vomit, this country just can't seem to get enough of Richard Nixon. The Soviets have bumbled into at least one good idea, they make their disgraced bureaucrats "non-persons," to whom no more attention is paid. But given enough time, America rehabilitates its national disgraces into elder statesmen.

Former President Nixon was beneficiary of this process when Sunday he pontificated for the national TV cameras on "Meet the Press." Nixon, who brought "peace with honor" to Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia; Auguste Pinochet to Chile; and the Watergate scandal to Washington, did his best to revise the American memory of his administration. In the post-Rambo era he wants us to believe that he could've won in Vietnam if only he'd rubbled Hanoi a little earlier. How simple things seem in hindsight.

But more to the point, there was this "small thing," as he put it, Watergate. He would have us believe that he was so busy pulling geopolitical masterstrokes in Paris, China and the Soviet Union that he made an insignificant little boo-boo at Democratic Headquarters.

Nixon compounded his lie by suggesting that he regrets not pardoning his flunkies in that scandal. Actually, he was far too busy worrying about his own skin, brokering his own pardon from Gerald Ford, to even consider roiling the waters with pardons for the "plumbers."

This suggests the real motive behind Nixon's appearance. It was probably part of the effort to make the upcoming pardons of Oliver North and William Poindexter more palatable to the American public. Some TV stations have been airing a "documentary" whitewash of the Iran-Contra scandal, prepared by associates of the CIA, and mouthpieces of the extreme right are sounding off in concert, hoping to legitimize an abortion of the prosecutions. The idea we're supposed to get is that excess patriotism led North and Poindexter to their petty thefts and high crimes.

The precedent set by Nixon's pardon probably helped Poindexter "stonewall" for his president, fully expecting that Reagan could put all concerned above the law, if only he remained in office. We can only wonder what new lows will be reached given the legacy of precedents set by the Reagan administration.

Sen. Paul Simon: 'the loser'

Mike Royko

Four years ago, Jesse Jackson went to the Democratic Convention as a loser. He had run in many primaries but picked up only a modest 465 delegates.

But he still wanted to be a player in the big political game, so he took his small stack of chips to the convention and played them for all they were worth.

Give him credit. Jackson accomplished his goal. Despite having few chips, he was in the game. He had his name placed in nomination, he strutted and preened, was treated like big heat by the news media, and the Democrats wound up letting him make a prime-time convention speech on TV.

NOW IT IS FOUR years later. And we have another loser who wants to go to the convention and still be a player.

This time it is Sen. Paul Simon, the bow-tie man from Illinois.

Simon has suspended his campaign. He's tapped for money, and the voters are yawning. But he hasn't officially dropped out. So under the party's rules, he gets to keep his 170 delegates, most of which he won in Illinois.

Why does he want to keep them? Obviously he doesn't expect the nomination. But he'd like to have some influence at the convention, maybe a small say in who his party's candidate will be.

Sure, he has only a modest stack of chips. But if the game gets wild, as it will might, his little stack could start looking bigger.

Simon wouldn't be the first politician to do this. Throughout the history of political conventions, favorite son candidates, primary also-rans and others have arrived with a handful of delegates as political leverage.

But suddenly this is not an "honorable" thing to do. Who says so? Jackson says so.

Jackson is miffed because Simon won't formally drop out and surrender his delegates. Of course Jackson is miffed. That's because he would inherit most of Simon's Illinois delegates, having finished second in the Illinois primary.

JACKSON NOW DESCRIBES the Simon delegates as "delegates which in fact belong to me."

I'm not sure I understand why he considers them as delegates "which in fact" belong to him.

I voted for a Simon delegate who won. It was not my intention that this delegate "belong" to Jackson. And I'm sure that the many voters of Illinois who voted for Simon delegates didn't intend for them to belong to Jackson.

To be blunt about it, many of those who voted for Simon's delegates did so precisely because they didn't want Jackson representing their interests at the convention.

Jackson's campaign manager, a hired political gun named Gerald Austin, oozed contempt when he talked about Simon and his delegates. He said:

"He (Simon) shouldn't have been a candidate for president. He shouldn't have been in it this long. He's still in it and now it is becoming an embarrassment for him, not us."

AUSTIN DIDN'T explain why it is an embarrassment for Simon to hold on to his delegates in 1988, yet it wasn't an embarrassment for Jackson to hold on to his in 1984.

And I'm not sure what he means when he says that Simon shouldn't have been a candidate in the first place. Because Simon didn't make it? In that case, Jackson shouldn't have been a candidate four years ago because he didn't make it, either.

Or is he implying that Simon isn't qualified? True, Simon isn't very pretty, and he doesn't speak in rhymes, but he does have some redeeming qualities.

I've followed the careers of both men for many years. Simon was a respected state legislator and an honest reformer before anyone in Illinois heard of Jesse Jackson.

Later, Simon was elected lieutenant governor and to Congress while Jackson and his Operation Push were shaking down businessmen.

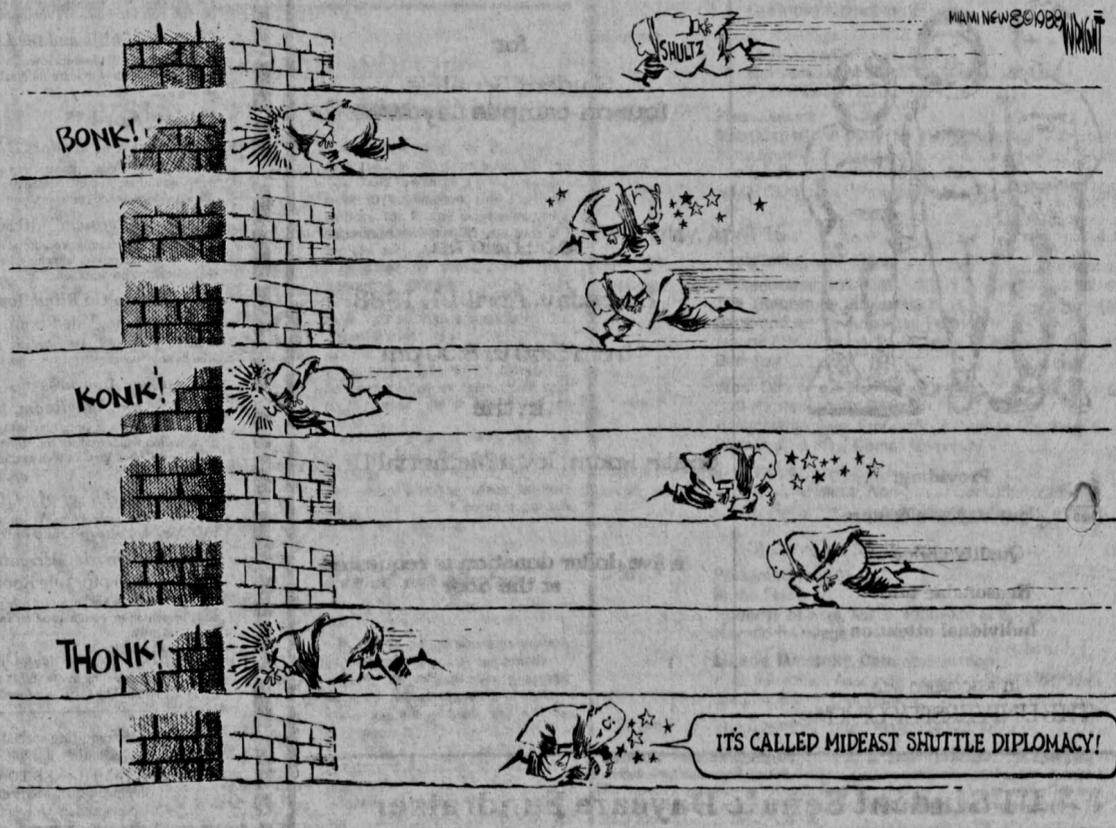

Simon has been an active and valued member of the Democratic Party for most of his life. Jackson is a recent arrival. Until recently, he played political footsie with the Republicans when it suited his purposes.

Simon has run for office and won many times. Until Jackson decided the White House would be a nice pad, he hadn't run for anything but the nearest TV camera.

Of their track records, I'd say that Simon has earned the right to have a small voice when the Democrats gather in Atlanta, just as Jackson used his delegates to have a much louder voice four years ago in San Francisco.

Jackson has always liked making up new rules as he goes along. For Simon, he seems to have come up with another one.

Do as I say, not as I did.

Branstad: No tax hike for teacher raises

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad Monday said he is committed to building on this year's $92 million worth of teacher salary increases but not at the price of higher sales or income taxes.

"I'm committed to higher teacher salaries. But we're not going to be raising taxes. We're going to continue to live within our means," Branstad said at his regular news conference.

The governor's comments came on the heels of a recommendation Friday by the 31,000-member Iowa State Education Association's Delegate Assembly, which proposed raising the state's 4 percent sales tax to 5 percent to boost the average teacher salary in Iowa to $42,000 within five years.

Air Force pilots survive fiery crash

AUSTIN, Texas — An Air Force jet crashed in flames into a storage warehouse near Bergstrom Air Force Base Monday, but the two pilots ejected safely, authorities said.

The pilots were slightly injured, but no one else on the ground was hurt, authorities said.

Air Force officials said the RF-4C Phantom II jet was returning from a low-level training mission when it crashed short of a runway near Bergstrom, igniting two units in the storage facility. Witnesses said the plane was on fire as it went down.

Governor urges expansion of prisons

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad Monday urged lawmakers to approve expansion of Iowa's prison system before they adjourn this week to address "a crying need for better protection of public safety."

Branstad, who has called for spending $7 million in lottery profits over two years to build space for up to 200 additional prison beds, also said lawmakers should consider extending their session, if necessary, to act on the proposal.

"There's a crying need for better protection of public safety," Branstad said. The governor said too many dangerous convicts have been released from prisons prematurely to ease overcrowding in the institutions and have committed violent crimes within weeks of their release.

Bush, Jackson eye New York wins

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Democratic presidential candidates geared up their New York campaigns a little more than a week before the Empire State's April 19 primary.

Even Vice President George Bush, who is virtually assured the GOP nomination, was in New York Monday to start a three-day swing and establish themes he hopes will carry him to the White House in November.

Bush and Democrat Jesse Jackson spoke at sites in New York City's northern suburbs — Bush toured an IBM plant in Westchester County saying that Republican policies had revitalized the economy, and Jackson scheduled a rally at a nearby General Motors Plant.

Government unveils drug testing rules

WASHINGTON — The government published its technical guidelines for federal drug tests Monday, formally starting the process for random testing of employees and renewing the criticism of its plans.

Publishing its lengthy requirements in the Federal Register, the government set forth the scientific and technical standards for testing federal employees under President Ronald Reagan's Sept. 15, 1986, executive order calling for a drug-free workplace.

The concept of such tests, which public interest groups and unions have attacked as unconstitutional invasions of privacy, remain under challenge in the courts.

Meese offers Peru help in drug battle

LIMA, Peru — Attorney General Edwin Meese, on a nine-day swing through Latin America, offered U.S. assistance Monday to help Peru battle left-wing rebels allied with drug traffickers.

Saying he was impressed by President Alan Garcia's "firm commitment" to fighting drugs, Meese said the United States would offer anti-terrorist assistance if the Peruvian leader asks for it.

Washington has earmarked $18.6 million for anti-narcotics programs to Peru this year. Some of the money pays for more than 460 workers who pull up the illegal coca plants or cut them down with machetes, but rebel activity threatens the laborers and coca eradication dropped sharply in 1987.

Congress hears Mafia story

'Code of Honor' destroyed by greed, drugs

By George Lobsenz
United Press International

WASHINGTON — A former Sicilian mobster told Congress Monday the Mafia's traditional "code of honor" has been destroyed by the greed and violence of drug trafficking, saying: "Gone are the men whose word you believed in."

Testifying from behind a tall opaque screen because he is under U.S. protection as a key informant, Tommaso Buscetta, 60, appeared before the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations to tell the lurid tale of his life as a "made man" in La Cosa Nostra.

Buscetta became a government informant in 1984 and helped convict dozens of Italian mobsters with insider testimony.

The subcommittee opened its hearings on the effectiveness of the government's war against organized crime 25 years after U.S. mobster Joseph Valachi socked the nation with his landmark 1963 congressional testimony revealing the existence of a vast criminal underworld.

BUSCETTA, SPEAKING in Italian and through a translator, said he decided to break the Mafia's notorious code of silence — or "omerta" — and cooperate with authorities after Italian mobsters killed seven members of his family because he refused to cooperate in drug trafficking.

"My brother, my two sons and my three nephews all were violently and needlessly killed," he said. "My son-in-law was gunned down in front of my daughter on Christmas Eve."

"These persons were not even members of Cosa Nostra families," he said. "There was no honor in these murders."

Buscetta said La Cosa Nostra was respected as an advocate for the poor when he joined in 1948 and counted doctors and lawyers among its members. He said it had little money, and its primary illegal activity was cigarette smuggling.

But over the years, he said, "I have seen our organization change from within. I have seen money, drugs and greed corrupt the Cosa Nostra code of honor and loyalty to the families."

"I DECIDED TO cooperate with the Italian and American authorities, in part because I felt the Mafia that I had known no longer existed," Buscetta said. "Gone were the men of honor whose word you believed in. Gone were the men you could trust with your women and family."

Buscetta spoke at length about the Mafia's initiation rites, in which a new member's finger is pricked and his blood dripped on a sacred image that is then set on fire. The new member must hold the sacred item in his hands until the fire goes out while swearing allegiance to La Cosa Nostra.

Buscetta said the key requirement for membership is murder. "The most important thing this individual has to do is become an assassin," he said.

Also testifying Monday was FBI Director William Sessions, who told senators more than 1,000 Mafia members and associates have been convicted and imprisoned since 1981. He said the massive prosecutions have crippled the five New York crime families and mobs in seven other areas — but the Mafia still is a potent force.

"The question most often asked is whether we have eradicated La Cosa Nostra as a national threat," he said. "The simple answer is no."

Sessions said federal authorities have largely destroyed the leadership of families in New Jersey, Boston, Cleveland, Denver, Kansas City, Milwaukee and St. Louis.

"Our expansive intelligence base on La Cosa Nostra indicates that many of their lucrative criminal conspiracies, which have existed unfettered for years, have been dismantled," he said.

Church addresses women's concerns

By David E. Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Confronting the "sin of sexism," a proposed statement by Roman Catholic bishops said Monday women should be allowed in lay ministries, such as in the role of altar servers, but "the church is not free" to make women priests.

The first draft proposal, subject to further debate, also called for a dialogue between the church and those "who find the prohibitions against artificial contraception unacceptable," even though "official" church policy forbids birth control.

The 164-page document, called Partners in the Mystery of Redemption, A Pastoral Response to Women's Concerns for Church and Society, took more than five years to produce.

It will be discussed in June at the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' meeting in Collegeville, Minn. After revision, it is expected to be put to a final vote of U.S. bishops in November 1989.

THE DRAFT calls for serious study on the admission of women to the role of deacon — a step below ordination to the priesthood and a role that has been opened in recent years to married men.

In speaking of "the sin of sexism," the bishops said "attitudes toward it or an incapacity to deal with women as equals should be considered as negative indications for fitness for (male) ordination."

But the draft, noting an "unbroken" Roman Catholic tradition that only men be ordained to the priesthood, said, "The church is not free to depart from the tradition."

However, it said women currently serving in non-ordained pastoral ministries "accomplish, by virtue of some other title or commission, many of the functions performed by ordained deacons. . . . The question of women being formally installed in the permanent diaconate arises quite naturally, and pastoral reasons prompt its evaluation."

"EVEN MORE compelling is the question of women being installed in the lay ministries of lector and acolyte," the draft said. "The exclusion of women and girls from certain aspects of service at the altar likewise raises concern. These instances of exclusion seem to stand in contradiction to our call for women's direct involvement in the life of the church."

The statement promises to be one of the most controversial pastorals promulgated by the all-male hierarchy, dealing as it does with issues that mingle some of the most controversial elements of church teaching and divisive secular social questions.

The committee that drafted the document, headed by Bishop Joseph Imesch, of Joliet, Ill., said it had received suggestions from some 75,000 women and some 25 national organizations.

Imesch said their views were varied, but noted, "What has become clear is that all women have concerns, not just a few, not only special groups, but all."

Speakes admits to making up quotes

By Ann Devroy
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former White House spokesman Larry Speakes, in memoirs published this week, recounts two incidents in which he manufactured quotes and attributed them to President Ronald Reagan, including a widely reported statement issued when Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev held their historic first meeting in Geneva in 1985.

Speakes, who became chief spokesman for Reagan when James Brady was shot in 1981, recounts in his book, Speaking Out, that he made up the quotes because he was fearful of the Soviet "communications juggernaut" at Geneva.

Noting that Gorbachev had made several quotable statements about Soviet desires for peace, while Reagan said little, Speakes writes that he instructed press aide Mark Weinberg "to draft some quotes for the president."

"I polished the quotes and told the press that, while the two leaders stood together at the end of one session, the president said to Gorbachev, 'There is much that divides us, but I believe the world breathes easier because we are talking here together.'"

IN AN INTERVIEW Monday, Speakes said making up presidential quotes "is not lying. . . . When you're a press secretary, you develop a bond of understanding with the president so that you think like the president. . . . I knew those quotes were the way he felt."

In the book, Speakes says he felt that Gorbachev was besting Reagan in the public-relations battle that November during the summit, Reagan's first session with Soviet leaders in almost five years in office.

After a first term in which Reagan had set a confrontational tone in U.S.-Soviet relations, referring originally to the Soviet Union as the "evil empire," the White House was aiming to lay groundwork for arms-control agreements in the president's second term.

Another Reagan quote from that summit that Speakes said "we manufactured that received extensive play in the press was, 'Our differences are serious, but so is our commitment to improving understanding.'"

IN THE BOOK, Speakes recounts the extensive play given both quotes on television, particularly from CBS, NBC White House correspondent Chris Wallace and print journalists.

He adds, however, that in retrospect, it was "clearly wrong to take such liberties" because the Soviets could have said that Reagan had said no such things.

"Luckily, the Russians did not dispute the quotes, and I had been able to spruce up the president's image by taking a bit of liberty with my PR man's license," Speakes concludes.

Wallace, in an interview, said he was "astonished, flabbergasted" that he and others had been given manufactured words as actual Reagan utterances.

Protesting teachers in Panama City carry signs as they shout anti-Noriega slogans and call for the re-opening of Panama's schools which have been closed for more than a month. The teachers are paid with bank checks which are difficult to cash since banks are closed.

Hijack

dispirited over the lack of a resolution. There is no visible indication that storming the plane is being considered.

In Beirut, kidnapers of a U.S. Marine officer in Lebanon threatened to put "the hangman's noose around the neck of the American agent Col. William Higgins if any attempt is made to storm the plane" in Cyprus, Reuter reported, quoting from a statement Monday by a group called the Militant Moslem Organization of the Oppressed of the World.

AS THE HIJACKING has stretched into one of the longest on record with passengers remaining aboard the aircraft, tempers began to fray and the scene here became increasingly surreal. The huge Boeing 747 sits near the end of the single seaside runway, hooked up to unoccupied service vehicles with their motors left running that supply it with air conditioning and power.

Meanwhile, airliners from around the world still land regularly to disgorge hundreds of tourists destined for Cyprus' sunny springtime beaches. Luggage and catering trucks rumble past the hijacked jumbo jet, its shades drawn. The cockpit windows facing the terminal appear to have been partially covered from inside.

Monday, as the bare-legged body of the victim dumped out the door lay on the asphalt for a half hour until an ambulance took it away, dozens of windsurfers held a regatta just offshore. A group of just-arrived

Scandinavian sun-seekers struggled to get a glimpse before they were hustled into the terminal door by airport personnel.

THE PLANE, en route from Bangkok to Kuwait, was hijacked last Tuesday and flown to the eastern Iranian city of Mashhad. There, the hijackers demanded the release of 17 men held in Kuwaiti jails since their conviction for bombings there in 1983. After freeing 57 non-Kuwaiti passengers, the plane took off again Friday.

Refused permission to land in Beirut, it set down at Larnaca.

Reporters have not been officially briefed on any of at least 14 face-to-face negotiating sessions that have taken place at the door of the plane since then.

Informed sources said that, although the hijackers have continued to give lip service to their demand for release of the 17, negotiations since the plane landed here have centered almost exclusively on refueling the plane in exchange for passengers.

longer operative terms."

In Washington, the United States said that it "strongly opposed" the deportations, calling them "counterproductive" and saying that the measure would only "further inflame passions."

The deportations were carried out as two more Palestinians were shot to death by army gunfire in the West Bank village of Kafr Rai, northeast of Tulkarm. The deaths brought to at least 137 the unofficial toll of Arab dead in more than four months of unrest in the territories. In addition to Porat, one other Israeli, a soldier, has been killed.

Six of those served with expulsion orders Monday were from Beita. The army said that they were among those "who took an active part in the attack" on the Jewish teen-agers and two armed guards hiking with them.

FOREIGN MINISTER Shimon Peres conceded during a tour of Beersheba that the timing of the expulsions was influenced by Porat's death. He said, "It was clear that it would happen sooner or later," adding that experience had proved that expulsions were "one of the most effective deterrents that exists."

The eight who were deported were transferred by army helicopter to the edge of Israel's self-proclaimed "security zone" in southern Lebanon. They had been in custody since at least December and had previously either exhausted or rejected their limited rights of appeal.

Three were arrested before the Palestinian uprising began, while five others were among nine residents of the West Bank and Gaza Strip who were served with deportation orders last January. Four were deported over repeated American and U.N. Security Council appeals, but the authorities delayed expelling the others in part because of concern that the move would stir more protests.

THE EIGHT WERE dropped off at a pass near Hasbaya, handed $50 "deportation allowances" and read the official notice of expulsion in a 10-minute ceremony. Among them were four men considered to be members of the radical Moslem religious leadership in the Gaza Strip, where the uprising began Dec. 9.

All eight, the army said, were "leading activists in terror organizations involved in incitement and subversive activities. . . . Most of them have served long jail sentences in the past for terrorist activity and incitement."

The United States, the International Red Cross and other organizations oppose administrative expulsion of Palestinians from the occupied territories as a violation of due process and of the 1949 Fourth Geneva Convention.

Cuomo

business was negligible during the months between the close of the convention and election day.

Laurence Kirwan, New York's Democratic state chairman, said Monday that the governor had believed since Feb. 19, 1987, when he declared that he would not seek the presidency, that the candidate would come from the field of contenders in the primaries.

Kirwan said Cuomo had not changed his mind. The state chairman said that Cuomo long ago had decided it was impossible to be governor and at the same time seek the White House.

ASKED WHAT CUOMO would do if the convention became deadlocked, Kirwan replied: "Give the guy a break. Leave it."

And an aide to Cuomo, asked whether New York's governor finally was issuing a Shermanesque statement, replied: "Cuomoesque."

In 1884, Civil War Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman turned down an appeal to draft him as the Republican nominee, declaring: "If nominated, I will not run; if elected, I will not serve."

One of the Democratic contenders in New York's April 19 primary, Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore Jr., campaigning at the New York Stock Exchange, insisted to reporters that Cuomo's announcement was nothing new.

The New York governor, Gore told reporters, had already made it "abundantly clear" that he would not enter the race.

"I personally don't think it's a big change. . . . I always heard his words clearly. I never thought he was a candidate because he said he wasn't a candidate," Gore said.

New York Mayor Edward Koch had been a strong backer of a possible Cuomo draft at the convention. The mayor said Monday that he would now endorse a candidate in the New York primary by the end of the week.

Shultz to be guarantor to Soviet-Afghan talks

By Jim Anderson
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan announced Monday that Secretary of State George Shultz will sign on as a guarantor to the agreements governing the Soviet military withdrawal from Afghanistan and calling for a non-aligned Afghan nation.

The U.S. decision to serve as co-guarantor of the agreement marked a major diplomatic movement in the 8-year war between the Soviet-supported government and Islamic fundamentalist rebels backed by the United States.

After meeting with Shultz to review the terms of the pact announced last week in Geneva after years of negotiations under the auspices of the United Nations, Reagan told a Rose Garden audience of college basketball champions, "I believe the United States can now join the Soviet Union as a guarantor of the Geneva instruments."

HE SAID SHULTZ, who hailed the breakthrough as "a major national and international success," will represent the United States at a signing ceremony Thursday in Geneva of the four-part agreement, which includes a written commitment by the superpowers to respect the sovereignty of Afghanistan and neighboring Pakistan.

"This development would not have been possible had it not been for the valiant struggle of the Afghan people to rid their country of foreign occupation," Reagan said. "We take great pride in having assisted the Afghan people in this triumph and they can count on our continued support."

Reagan also pledged "our continued friendship and support" to Pakistan, a formal party to the pact by virtue of its position as a haven for more than 3 million Afghan refugees and a covert channel for U.S. arms to the Afghan rebel forces.

'Emperor' reigns supreme, collects 9 Academy Awards

By Vernon Scott
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — The Last Emperor, Italian Bernardo Bertolucci's epic tale of the bizarre reign of China's last imperial ruler, swept Monday night's 60th annual Academy Awards, winning nine Oscars — including best picture and best director.

Bertolucci's biography of Pu Yi, who began as boy monarch of a vast empire and died an impoverished gardener in communist China, won every category it was nominated in to become the most honored film since West Side Story took 10 in 1961. Ben Hur is the all-time champion with 11 Oscars in 1959. Gigi won nine awards in 1958.

Michael Douglas, whose reptilian portrayal of a ruthless broker mirrored the greedy Wall Street ethic, won the best actor Oscar. The deaf actress Marlee Matlin, last year's best actress winner, announced the award for Douglas's part in Wall Street.

Cher won for best actress for her performance as an ugly-duckling widow whose lover affair with her fiancé's brother transforms her into a swan in Moonstruck, which won three major awards.

Sean Connery won for best supporting actor as an Al Capone-era cop in The Untouchables, and Olympia Dukakis won for best supporting actress for her role as Cher's Italian mother in Moonstruck, ending her acceptance speech with a political plug for her cousin, presidential candidate Michael Dukakis, saying, "OK Michael, let's go."

The Last Emperor also won for best art direction, sound, editing, cinematography, original score, costumes, adapted screenplay, in addition to direction and best picture.

Douglas won over William Hurt for Broadcast News; Marcello Mastroianni for Dark Eyes; Jack Nicholson for Ironweed, and Robin Williams for Good Morning, Vietnam.

Cher won over Glenn Close for Fatal Attraction; Holly Hunter for Broadcast News; Sally Kirkland for Anna, and Meryl Streep for Ironweed.

Dukakis won out over Norma Aleandro for Gaby — A True Story; Anne Archer, for Fatal Attraction; Anne Ramsey for Throw Momma From the Train; and sentimental favorite Ann Sothern for The Whales of August.

Connery, who began his acting career in the chorus of a London production of South Pacific in 1951 and went on to fame and fortune as superspy James Bond, won for his role of a crusty Chicago cop in the Al Capone days. He defeated Albert Brooks, Broadcast News; Morgan Freeman, Street Smart; Vincent Gardenia, Moonstruck, and Denzel Washington, Cry Freedom.

Host Chevy Chase and many presenters, including comic Billy Crystal, wrote their own material because of the writers' strike creating a considerable amount of ad-libbing in a 3½ show that seldom lagged and was often hilarious.

The awards, telecast on ABC and expected to be seen by 1 billion people around the world, were moved to the aged Shrine Auditorium in a less than glamorous section of the city for the first time in 40 years because the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion, the usual home of Oscar, could not accommodate the crush of 6,000 movie folk who clambered for tickets.

More than 100 movie fans slept outside the auditorium to get good seats in the bleachers erected for 1,000 spectators to watch the stars arrive.

Also vying for best picture were Broadcast News, a cynical look at primetime network news gathering; Fatal Attraction, a chilling story of sexual obsession by a demented woman; Moonstruck, a comedy about infidelity in a Brooklyn Italian-American family and Hope and Glory, a boy's adventures in bomb-ravaged World War II London.

Author Eisenberg will read her fiction tonight in EPB

By Justin Cronin
The Daily Iowan

Deborah Eisenberg, author of Transactions in a Foreign Country, will read from her fiction tonight at 8 in English-Philosophy Building Room 304.

Transactions, a volume of short stories, was released in 1986 to wide critical acclaim. Hailed as "an astonishing debut" by The New York Times, Eisenberg's collection brought together for the first time stories previously published in The New Yorker and Vanity Fair. The title story received an O'Henry Award and was included in the O'Henry Collection in 1986.

New York theatergoers will also know Eisenberg as the author of the play Pastorale, produced by the Second Stage in 1982. Like Transactions, that play met with immediate popular and critical success.

READING HER STORIES, one immediately recognizes the playwright's ear for dialogue and voice at work. Crisp and quirky, the language of her characters works like a jeweler's tool on the reader's ear, bringing it into sync with the epiphanic moments and textures of her stories.

If there is a unifying theme to Eisenberg's stories, it is the public and private nature of solitude. Characters reach out to one another, inevitably fall short and are left to locate themselves in the wreckage. Her narrators, all women, find themselves faced with a sudden solitude in a world which seems, if not outwardly hostile, certainly lacking a recognizable scheme.

In "What It Was Like, Seeing Chris," a young girl engages herself in a bizarre, possibly dangerous affair with a much older man. The difference in their ages is more than numerical; it is an occasion for the deepest estrangement, even in the midst of desperate longing. "I knew that he wanted me to see that he knew perfectly well how old I was. He wanted me to see it, and wanted me to think it was strange."

'Sign' has open questions

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

One could wish sometimes for more sure-fire signs in the world. For example, it'd be nice to have a seven-item list of signs to foretell a bad movie.

Surely one of those signs would be Demi (that's de-MEE, puh-lease) Moore in the starring role. For four years now, she's been hamming it up on the big screen without enough acting talent to yell "Fire!" convincingly in a crowded theater. Since she's underfoot virtually all the time in The Seventh Sign, some attention must be paid to her performance.

She's awful as Abby Quinn, the expectant mother of the first little tyke scheduled to be born without a soul. Moore can't even be pregnant convincingly, and she's had real-life experience at that.

But much like the film, one doom sign does not an apocalypse make. Because despite Moore's constant mugging and moping, The Seventh Sign is a good flick. Its basic plot deals with the biblical signs which signal the coming of God's wrath to end the world. We follow these signs, "witnessed" and maybe instigated by a stubble-chinned stranger played by Jurgen Prochnow. These signs take us to Venice, Calif., and to an ordinary pregnant woman named Abby Quinn.

THIS STRANGER shows up to rent an apartment from the Quinns, who are naturally worried about Abby's pregnancy since she lost a baby once before, albeit to less supernatural causes. Abby becomes curious about her guest's identity, so she snoops around his spartan room and — in one of the film's silliest moments — accidentally and unknowingly breaks one of the seals of God by stepping on it.

David Banner (Jurgen Prochnow), whose mere presence stirs commotion in a Haitian sea village, prepares to deliver the first of the disastrous seven signs of the Apocalypse in Tri-Star Pictures' The Seventh Sign.

Needless to say, all heck breaks loose. The movie follows a breakneck pace from its earliest scenes, but after that seal goes crunch you can't tell the portents without a scorecard. Moons turn to blood, earthquakes shake up all the sets, crows caw, sparrows get eaten by ants and, it seems, Abby Quinn's baby MUST DIE! Gasp!

LIKE MOST breakneck paces, this one is haphazard and uneven, and that's the biggest technical flaw of the film. Scenes are kept in that contribute almost nothing to plot, and explanations are left out when they're needed — for instance, if Abby Quinn is just an ordinary woman, what the heck is she doing toting a water jug 2,000 years ago in the time of Christ? If that's just a dream, why is it played up like a forgotten memory?

Then there's Father Lucci, the closest thing this film's got to a villain. Father Lucci wants the world to end in a big way, and when he sees all the signs firsthand he's convinced the Big Day is right around the corner. But if he's so convinced, why does he throw the Vatican council off the track by telling it there's nothing to worry about? And if he's not convinced, then why doesn't he just step aside and let things go kablooye?

ALL OF WHICH is meant to raise the question of motivation, and in The Seventh Sign it's a big question. In one of the film's climactic scenes, Lucci is seen dashing off into a cab, intent on helping bring about Armageddon, only to stop for an instant and look across the street at Prochnow's mysterious stranger. Considering Who this stranger is, how does Lucci expect to win?

And why does the Boarder leave His stuff out and about if such important things can get stepped on? And why is a point made of telling us that he has a shortwave radio in His room? To phone Home? And why is such effort made to avoid identifying Prochnow's character, when He Himself says, "I've already died once?" That sort of narrows the list of messianic candidates.

Prochnow, believe it or not, is convincing in his enigmatic part, and Peter Friedman has some juicy moments as Father Lucci. Michael Biehn as Mr. Quinn the virtuous attorney is largely a face reciting lines, but at least he makes no outright flubs, and the film does contain some moving scenes.

The Seventh Sign is far from a disaster of a film. It's competently shot and full of energy, definitely worth the price of admission. The sentimentality of the ending is a measured thing, controlled in mildly admirable ways. It's only on the deeper levels that it fails, but considering the subject matter being dealt with here, that's a big enough sin.

I Musici's Vivaldi is flawless

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Sunday afternoon may have been filled with wind and blowing rain, but inside Hancher Auditorium the Italian string ensemble I Musici brought all the seasons of the world to an audience of 1,200.

If God has a favorite string ensemble, it's surely I Musici. And even He would find it impossible to come up with a superlative it hasn't already earned. Here was music alive in the air, as pure and virtually flawless as it reads on paper.

The afternoon's all-Vivaldi program began with the Concerto in D minor for two violins and cello, and the group rendered a marvelously felt work of art, punctuating it with perfectly synchronized silences and harmonies. Throughout the show, a quicksilver pace was set and maintained, and Vivaldi as a composer helps this out immensely.

SECOND ON the agenda was the concerto in B minor for violin, cello, strings and continuo, and by this point the audience could develop the distinct impression that this was somehow one mind playing through 12 instruments. Soloists Claudio Buccarella and Francesco Strano wore on their faces the contented confidence of men who have been comfortable for a long time making beautiful music.

I Musici, Italy's legendary string ensemble, presented an all-Vivaldi concert highlighted by "The Four Seasons" Sunday afternoon, April 10.

The exuberance continued for the concerto in B minor for four violins, strings and continuo, "The Spirit of Harmony," in which there was nothing mistimed, nothing flat or presumptive. Throughout the piece the musicians displayed a confidence which was totally justified. But the high point of the afternoon was never in doubt, and it came exactly as expected in the show's second half when the ensemble played the piece for which they are perhaps best known, Vivaldi's "The Four Seasons."

ALL GOOD musicians know that, regardless of the score's quality, it can still sleepwalk. And all great musicians know how to wake up even the oldest or best-known of classics, open them wide to fresh appreciation. When it comes to music of the Baroque, there are no living musicians better than I Musici, and when that virtuosity was applied to a piece as perennially invigorating as "The Four Seasons" the result was spectacular.

First Spring then Summer then Autumn then Winter, each with music familiar even to those who have never paid any serious attention to classical music. With familiar music an ensemble walks an edge between a blessing and a curse: The blessing is that the piece is already sold, already associated in the listener's mind with images and memories; the curse is that everybody will have high expectations, and the entire house will notice every mistake.

Sunday's performance of "The Four Seasons" was the best live rendition of the eight this reviewer has heard, equalling anything recorded in the last 20 years. Each movement, each shift of emotion and tempo was executed with a depth of experience and skill that other ensembles dream of attaining. With the close of "The Four Seasons," I Musici brought to a finish one of the finest classical events of the entire season.

Cult films can still entertain

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Cult movies are by definition movies so far out of the mainstream that they develop a following among those who are tired of typical Hollywood fare. But in the past 10 years, since the success of The Rocky Horror Picture Show, a disturbing new trend has developed — Hollywood has begun to manufacture its own cult movies.

Probably everyone has seen these movies at one time or another. Examples include such movies as Pink Floyd: The Wall, Buckaroo Banzai or Amazon Women on the Moon. These movies are "manufactured" cult movies which are designed to be weird.

But a true cult movie isn't weird by design but by nature. Cult movies have their own visionary quality, a quality which is produced either by the skill of the director or by accident. A cult movie intentionally made to be a cult movie would be far too bland to be that much different from the mainstream.

I have been a big fan of cult movies for a long time. For those who want to watch something different from routine movies this weekend, here are some recommendations:

The Treasure of the Sierra Madre (1948) — This movie was one of the few times Humphrey Bogart played a villain, which is probably why it isn't as well-known today as some of his other movies. But he gives a great performance as gold prospector Fred C. Dobs, a man whose greed is unmatched by anyone this side of Ivan Boesky. Walter Huston gives an Academy Award-winning performance as the grizzled prospector who helps Dobs and gets cheated for his efforts.

Plan 9 From Outer Space (1956) — A classic! This movie has been designated by several critics as the worst movie ever made, and you'll know why after you see it. Every facet of the production is bad, from the atrocious dialogue to the cardboard tombstones everyone keeps tripping over. The plot (such as it is) has something to do with ghouls rising from the grave. No wonder — they were probably upset about the cardboard tombstones.

Touch of Evil (1958) — Orson Welles is the fattest villain in screen history in this look at corruption in a Southwest border town. Wells directed this movie, and a lot of people think it's as good as Citizen Kane. Welles' performance as a sleazy detective is one of the best in screen history, and the rest of the cast is almost as good.

A Hard Day's Night (1964) — Rock movies haven't advanced much since Richard Lester's film about the Beatles was released. Featuring a great soundtrack and neat camera tricks, this movie still stands as the best rock video ever made.

The Good, The Bad and The Ugly (1968) — It took Italian film director Sergio Leone to modernize the American western, and this movie is his finest achievement. Featuring Clint Eastwood in his classic "man with no name" role, this movie also features standout performances by Eli Wallach and Lee Van Cleef. The movie is also notable for its climactic shootout and a score by Ennio Morricone that people still whistle today.

A Clockwork Orange (1971) — This movie has been attacked over the years for its ambivalent stance toward rape and its nihilistic attitude toward society as a whole. But Stanley Kubrick's look at the not-too-distant future is undeniably a fascinating film, even if it is repulsive. Malcolm McDowell and the rest of the cast give good performances and say a lot of quotable lines. Even if you hate the movie, you can say one thing for it — it's a lot more interesting than 2001.

The Wicker Man (1973) — Edward Woodward, in his pre-"Equalizer" days, is a policeman who gets caught up with pagans on a remote Scottish isle. Featuring nude fertility dances, human sacrifice and a great performance by Christopher Lee as the Jim Jones-like leader of the pagans. What more could you want?

Last Tango in Paris (1973) — Marlon Brando gives the best performance of his career, and beautiful Maria Schneider spends most of the movie nude in this look at sex and betrayal among the bourgeoisie in Paris. Director Bernardo Bertolucci's controversial film shocked everyone when it was released, and it contains some of the most hardcore sexual scenes ever seen in a mainstream movie. Bertolucci never recovered from making this movie and has since retreated into making boring "epics."

Eraserhead (1977) — Those wimps who thought Pink Floyd: The Wall was a great "trip" film should take a look at this. David Lynch (Blue Velvet) shows us some of the most disturbing images in recent memory, including a baby that looks like some sort of meat, rooms full of water and seaweed, and a hero who looks like he plugged his finger into an electrical socket.

Mommie Dearest (1981) and Scarface (1983) — Two of the funniest films in recent memory feature overacting galore by former movie stars Faye Dunaway and Al Pacino. Dunaway is hilarious in Mommie Dearest, delivering every line as if she was playing Charles Manson rather than Joan Crawford. And as Tony Montana in Scarface, Pacino will have you rolling in your seat, particularly with the enormous number of times (over 100) he uses a certain expletive beginning with the letter "F." Great party movies.

Balks make Brew Crew blue

By Mike Tully
United Press International

NEW YORK — Veteran American League umpire Larry Barnett warns balk calls will continue if pitchers keep committing the infraction.

Barnett, chief of the crew that called six balks Sunday in a game between the Milwaukee Brewers and the New York Yankees, added he's surprised at the lack of adjustment to the new rule. "The rule is so clear in the book it's not funny," Barnett said. "All these clubs had clinics during spring training. If they continue to abuse the rule, the same results will happen as happened today."

"UP UNTIL TODAY it hadn't been too bad," Barnett continued. "We called a lot of balks in spring training. I think they forget about it. Gentlemen, this is the way it's going to be. And they might as well get used to it. I didn't make the rules, I just enforce them."

"Dr. (AL President Bobby) Brown signs the checks and as long as he does that, I think I'll do what he wants me to do," Barnett said.

In the first week of the season, major-league umpires called 74 balks according to Elias Sports Bureau. In all of 1987, major-leaguers were called for only 356 balks.

AFTER THE GAME, Milwaukee's third straight loss, the Brewers fumed over the calls.

Barnett said he would meet Monday in Toronto with the AL umpiring supervisor, Marty Springstead.

"I'm sure we'll discuss it," Barnett said. "It's a matter that's probably being discussed around baseball now. I don't think we're the only ones calling balks. If you look in the paper, there seem to be an abundance of 'em."

Ostler

game. Rather than angry or upset, Welch seemed dazed and puzzled. On Welch's second balk, he was flagged not because he didn't come to that full-second stop in his windup, but because the stop came at a slightly different spot in his stretch.

"I HADN'T STOPPED at that spot yet," Welch said. "In the future, I guess you have to show something like that up front, show them you stop in different places."

I didn't want to upset Welch with questions like, "Did you know it was a balk as soon as it left your hand?"

So I went to the other clubhouse to talk to the victors, who, coincidentally, had lost to the A's the night before with the aid of three balks called on Angel pitchers.

DeWayne Buice, a balker Saturday but a stopper Sunday, must have enjoyed seeing the tables turned, no?

"I'm out in the bullpen (watching the balks called on Welch) and I can't believe it," Buice said. "There's no reason for it. This is a fun game, a sacred game, people love it, why mess around with it? This is my 12th year in pro ball, I've been pitching the same way my whole life and now they tell me it's a balk."

WHY ARE MORE balks being called?

"Because the umpires weren't getting enough TV time," Buice said. "There's always someone around who will fight progress. Buice obviously doesn't realize baseball had been headed in a dangerous direction. Some games were being played in three hours or less. In the Balk Era, games are longer. Sunday's game was a leisurely 3 hours and 29 minutes, slow enough for most of the fans to absorb and analyze the action."

Hey, if it's dizzying, mindlessly fast-paced action you want, go watch college basketball, or professional golf, or cricket.

Baseball is meant to be savored, like chess in slow motion. And with the balk, there's more savoring time. Games will be longer. All the great balk records will fall. Twitches and hitches and tiny pauses will decide championships. It's a new era.

Balk is beautiful.

Vikings' program hit with charges

United Press International

CLEVELAND — Cleveland State basketball star Ken McFadden was on the university's payroll six months before he enrolled in the school, a newspaper reported.

In response to the Lake County News-Herald's copyright story, school athletic officials said there were no rules broken when McFadden was hired to work in the university's equipment room from Jan. 14 to June 30, 1985.

Officials said he was paid the minimum wage of $3.35 an hour and worked 100 hours.

The NCAA rule regarding employment at an institution before enrollment states that "the arrangement of employment for the prospective student-athlete shall be permitted, it being understood that no such employment shall be permitted before the completion of the prospective student-athlete's senior year in high school."

McFadden completed his senior year of high school in New York City in June 1984, but did not have enough credits to earn a diploma.

He came to Cleveland and took the test for the General Equivalency Degree more than a year after he left school. He received his diploma Sept. 25, 1985, less than a week before Cleveland State classes started.

The school's assistant athletic director Merle Levin said the NCAA requires a prospective student to wait at least 12 months after the completion of his senior year before taking the GED. Levin said McFadden complied because he waited nearly 15 months.

In December, the NCAA leveled sanctions against the basketball program for recruiting violations. Cleveland State has appealed those sanctions and a hearing on the matter is scheduled for April 18-19 in Washington.

School officials said they have hired an outside investigator to determine whether illegal practices have taken place in the school's basketball program.

"We have hired an outside investigator to snoop around to see if we have done anything illegal," said Athletic Director Bob Busbey.

"We're doing it to make sure we are above board. So far, they have reported no problems. It's an ongoing investigation."

Elliott opts to stay in school

Arizona junior will stay under Olson's wings one more year

United Press International

TUCSON, Ariz. — All-America junior forward Sean Elliott Monday announced he will remain at Arizona for his senior year.

After Arizona lost to Oklahoma in the NCAA semifinals, Elliott felt sure he would apply for the NBA draft. However, Arizona Coach Lute Olson and assistant coach Kevin O'Neill convinced the only Tucson native on Arizona's squad to finish his college eligibility.

Elliott said NBA teams told him they were prepared to pay him several million dollars. The minimum package quoted was "$7 million," he said.

Elliott said it was not easy turning down that kind of money but said he hopes he will be worth even more next year.

"NOT ONLY IS IT wise — other than staying in school-wise — it's wise financially and for the future."

On April 5, after returning from Kansas City and the Final Four tournament, Olson and Elliott flew to Los Angeles to watch the Los Angeles Lakers play the Houston Rockets. When he returned two days later, Elliott said he was again "teetering" toward the NBA. But O'Neill phoned him Thursday night and they had a long talk. Elliott said he decided that night he would stay at Arizona.

Elliott said if Arizona had won the national championship, his decision might have been different.

He scored 743 points this season in 38 games for an average of 19.6 per game, 18.2 on his career. Elliott is expected to become Arizona's leading career scorer next season. Currently, he is second on Arizona's all-time career scoring list.

Elliott was named to just about every first team, including the UPI team, and was on the NCAA Final Four All-Tournament Team. He also was the most outstanding player in the NCAA West Regional.

Lawmakers want drunks out of ballparks

By Jonathan Ferziger
United Press International

ALBANY, N.Y. — A Republican state legislator pitched a new plan Monday to require ballparks to reserve seats so fans can be sure they won't be sitting with a pack of rowdy drunks.

But the bill, sponsored by Senate Deputy Majority Leader John Dunne, R-Garden City, is a watered-down version of similar legislation proposed last year, and stadium owners said they are already taking voluntary measures to curtail excess drinking.

Dunne retracted his tougher bill last year, which would have banned alcohol in 25 percent of a ballpark's seats, explaining he was satisfied with the owners' promise to address the problem.

BUT HE SAID he was prompted to write a new bill when Baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth singled out Yankee Stadium in the Bronx and Shea Stadium in Queens as the unruliest ballparks in the country.

"In his State of the Game address last December, Commissioner Ueberroth specifically singled out New York's two major league ballparks in his criticism, and called for greater effort in improving the environment in these stadiums," Dunne said.

Under the new plan, stadiums in New York City, Long Island and Buffalo would have to set aside 10 percent of their seats in sections where no alcoholic beverages could be sold and 10 percent where those drinks could neither be sold or consumed.

Stadiums also would be required to hire more security guards to police rowdy behavior.

BUT ROBERT Bishop, the lawyer, said, "If you're talking about somebody whose sensitivity is offended by somebody else yelling out, 'Kill the umpire,' then I'm sorry."

Dunne said the Senate conducted a study of alcohol control policies across the country and found almost a third of the pro teams and stadiums surveyed prohibit the selling of beer in the stands.

Only 17 percent, however, have alcohol-free sections and the average number of seats set aside in those areas amount to 3.3 percent of capacity.

The law would affect the Nassau Coliseum on Long Island; Shea Stadium, Yankee Stadium, Madison Square Garden in New York City, and Rich Stadium, Pilot Field and the Memorial Auditorium in the Buffalo area.

Russians, Iowans will meet on court

The Soviet Junior National Basketball Team will play a high school squad composed of Iowa senior all stars May 19 in Veterans Memorial Auditorium in Des Moines at 8 p.m.

The game will be the ninth of 10 stops for the Soviet squad, who will begin its tour in New York May 6 and conclude in Chicago May 20. The tour is sponsored by the Amateur Athletic Union (for full slate of Iowa events see Scoreboard, page 10).

The Iowa squad, led by Palmer Coach Alden Skinner, will also play several games, including one against an all-star squad from Illinois.

A preliminary game May 19 will begin at 5:45 p.m. and will feature graduating seniors from Iowa colleges vs. three-time Iowa AAU men's champion AFSA team.

Those seeking additional information contact Iowa Director Bob Utter (515) 266-4751.

Parade marshal named for Drake Relays

Dick Schultz, a former Iowa basketball coach who is currently the executive director of the NCAA, will serve as parade marshal for the 1988 Drake Relays April 30.

The 79th annual Drake Relays have been set for April 29-30 in Drake Stadium in Des Moines.

Bix 7 race will sport tough competition

DAVENPORT, Iowa (UPI) — A number of potential Olympic distance runners, some of the world's best female competitors and two famed masters athletes will be among as many as 15,000 entrants in this year's Bix 7 road race, organizers say.

Race director Ed Froehlich said the July 30 event, the 14th annual seven-mile race, will feature a masters' battle between Bill Rodgers and Frank Shorter, who both join the class for runners 40 years and older this year.

Meanwhile, Joseph Nzau, already picked to compete for Kenya in the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, will defend his 1987 Bix title against a men's field that includes Mark Culp, Phil Coppess and John Wellerding.

On the women's side, defending Bix champion Francie Larrieu-Smith will be challenged by Joan Benoit-Samuels and Cyndie Welte, while Priscilla Welch will compete in the masters competition.

2 race to victory in Seattle

SEATTLE (UPI) — Doug Kurtis won his fourth consecutive Emerald City Marathon Sunday, capturing the event in two hours, 19 minutes and six seconds.

Nancy Kubasek, 31, of Bowling Green, Ohio, took the women's title in 2:46:48.

Teltscher, Grabb coast to Suntory wins

TOKYO (UPI) — Ninth-seeded American Eliot Teltscher and 13th-seeded compatriot Jim Grabb Monday won first-round matches with ease at the $752,500 Suntory Japan Open Tennis Championships.

Cooper, Moller win Boston's Milk Run

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Cooper of Charlotte, N.C., edged Bruce Bickford by a second Sunday to win the $25,000 Milk Run 10-kilometer road race through downtown Boston.

Lorraine Moller of New Zealand easily won the women's division with a course record. Both Cooper and Moller won $5,000.

Clubs

and Jean O'Leary added one try against Grinnell.

• Nine members of Hawkeye Tae Kwon Do competed in the Central States Championships held at the Iowa City Recreation Center and two others were at the Lincoln Invitational in Lincoln, Neb.

In Iowa City, yellow belt Phil Leonard took second in sparring and forms competition and white belt Rich Willard was first in sparring.

In lightweight blue belt, Zack Williams took second in sparring and Steve Shower captured third in sparring. Mary Sullivan was the champion in women's blue-belt sparring and breaking. Rudyard Porter took first in sparring and breaking and third in forms in heavyweight blue belt.

In black belt, Ben Springer took first in forms and third in sparring. Ned Ashton took second in sparring.

Clubs

In Lincoln, Neb., red belt Jeff Sullivan and green belt Gary Rohrer were fourth in forms.

Iowa senior Jeff Schafer will be on the mound against Northern Iowa today at 2 p.m. at Iowa Field as the Hawkeyes return for a three-game homestand.

Iowa comes off a four-game weekend meeting at Indiana in which it took three of four games. But the Hawkeyes will have little time to rest with a full schedule ahead.

After the Panthers today, Iowa meets Big Ten foe Minnesota for a 1 p.m. doubleheader Wednesday. Thursday, Iowa travels to Macomb, Ill., for a single game with Western Illinois. Saturday and Sunday, Iowa meets Illinois for a four-game conference clash.

Iowa Coach Duane Banks said his team's performance against the Hoosiers gives it a good outlook for the conference season.

PITCHING, BANKS said, has been good all season.

Schafer, who has been the regular first baseman as well as a spot pitcher, will be on the mound to get more experience for a stretch run.

Allen Rath and Mark Boland will be the starters against Minnesota. The Iowa duo will return to the mound next Sunday against Illinois.

"The games we want to win are on Wednesday," Banks said.

Meanwhile, Northern Iowa will appear at Iowa Field with a 4-22 record under first-year Coach Gene Baker.

Baseball

"We are still very positive about the season," Baker said. "We have the conference season in front of us.

"We'll use it (today's game) as a preparation game for us."

Baker will send Steve Bair, a freshman from Cedar Rapids who is 0-4 this season, to the mound against the Hawkeyes.

BAKER SAID MOST of his team is young, and it likely will take one to years to bring the program to a comfortable level.

"At least 75 percent of my team is freshmen and sophomores," he said, adding that three of the five seniors on the ballclub are walk-ons.

Northern Iowa's top hitters are shortstop Brian Scheidegger, who leads the team with a .349 batting average and outfielder Mark Lumpa (.315 and a team-leading six home runs). Outfielder Tobey Goines is the leading base stealer with 11.

Iowa's hitting, Banks pointed out, had been in a slump. But after a "great weekend" against the Hoosiers that may turn around.

Before, the Iowa coach said, balls were being hit directly at people. Now some of the hits are starting to fall in play.

"Now we're beginning to swing the bats and make the consistent play (on defense)," Banks said.

Iowa lacrosse member Justin Berg, from Libertyville, Ill., gets ahead of his opponent during the game against Illinois State Saturday at the Union Field. Iowa went on to defeat Illinois State 12-2. The Big Ten Championships are next weekend for the club at Northwestern.

'Balk Era' will add excitement to game

I went to my first baseball game of the new season Sunday. This, for me, is a very special annual event, a renewal of a lifetime love affair, a time for getting back in touch with the excitement and electricity that belongs alone to America's national pastime.

I was not disappointed. Only slightly toxic levels of smog blanketed the cozy confines of Southern California's Anaheim Stadium, and the home team, the California Angels, won the game, 6-4, over the fearsome Oakland Athletics.

Most thrilling of all was the method of victory, something new to the grand old game. The Angels got clutch relief pitching and clutch hitting, but you expect that from the Angels.

NO, WHAT SWUNG the game in the Angels favor was the balk. Two of the Angels runs came as a result of three balk calls on the A's starter, Balkin' Bobby Welch.

He balked Jack Howell to second base in the second, and Howell scored on a two-out single. Then Welch balked Mark McLemore to second in the third, McLemore took third on a fly ball, and then scored on Welch's third balk. A hat trick for Balkin' Bob, a win for the Angels.

Very encouraging. Like they say, the mark of a great team is its ability to take advantage of balks.

I rushed home from Anaheim to catch the Sunday night highlights, to once again see Welch failing to pause the required one second in his stretch delivery. Wow. I taped the three balks, because someday my young son will want to know what baseball is all about.

"SON, I'LL explain to the lad, "the 1988 season ushered in the Balk Era. There were some truly classic balks that season. But why describe it when I can show you the videotape?"

Baseball had to do something this season to keep pace. In recent years, basketball has installed a three-point shot and the colleges now have a shot clock, too. Football has restricted defenses, opening the game to long bombs. Wrestling has introduced the Battle Royal and sharper foreign objects.

Baseball desperately needed a shot of adrenalin. "What can we do to increase the excitement level of the game?" the keepers of baseball asked themselves.

The answer was brilliant. "Call more balks."

FANS LOVE TO see the umpire jump up and down and wave his arms around in the gesture that means either a balk has been committed or a swarm of bees has attacked. The thrill of the baserunner jogging to the next bag, well, it's like no other sight in sports.

There will be a period of adjustment, of course, as pitchers become accustomed to seeing well-pitched games go down the toilet on random and unfathomable balk calls.

"We're going to have to live with it," said Welch after Sunday's

When the ball is in the hands of Steve "Hobie" Brenner, good things usually happen.

The senior out of Wilmette, Ill., scored four goals and also assisted on the first goal of four by Andy Bargerstock in a 12-2 defeat of Illinois State by the Iowa lacrosse club Saturday on Union Field.

Bill Monat scored twice and Pete Kingwell and Todd Lyman each added one goal in the victory. The club's record stands at 1-1 going into the Big Ten Championships at Northwestern this weekend.

"I think we played a lot better," club president Mark St. Germain said. "Our passing was down, ground balls were down and we just seemed to be more of a team playing as a whole unit."

BRENNER, WHO scored all three of Iowa's goals in a loss to Wisconsin last weekend, said he thinks he knows what it is that makes him such an offensive threat.

"The experience I have is the big thing," Iowa's leading scorer said, before turning the accolades towards his teammates. "Everybody played fantastic and the new guys played great. We're looking forward to the Big Tens."

St. Germain, Andy Settini, Jay McCormick and Trevor Phister bolstered the club's defense and goaltenders Mike McCarthy and Chuck Klimkowski held the Redbirds to just two goals.

On a steady diet of beer and the music of Jimmy Buffett, the men's rugby club captured the championship of the eight-team collegiate bracket of the Omaha Rugby Classic last weekend.

Black Label defeated South Dakota, 4-0, in Sunday's championship match and now stands at 5-0 on the spring, one of the club's best starts in recent years.

"Nothing went wrong," eight-man and Buffett devotee Scooter McDonough said. "We just played super as a team and I was completely impressed."

"It was great," fullback Marty Davis said. "We performed well, the forwards especially. They were the backbone of the performance."

The club advanced to the finals Saturday after defeating Northern Iowa, 27-0, and Kansas State, 15-0. The ruggers have not given up a try in their first five matches.

In the first match Saturday, wing Kyle McDonough scored his first two tries of the season and hooker Ron Pfeifer added his first try on the season. Against Kansas State, Davis and Carl Anderson scored tries. Hiram Melendez converted on both tries and he added a penalty kick.

The club travels to Cedar Falls, Iowa, for a tournament at Northern Iowa Saturday and Sunday.

The women's rugby club opened its season Saturday and split a pair of matches, losing 4-0 to Wisconsin and rebounding to beat Grinnell 28-0.

"Two good opening games," Cyndi Miller said. "It looks like a promising season."

Daniele Speidel, Diane Pfile and Libby Wheatley all scored two tries

When Andy Martin first set foot in Hull, England, some 160 miles north of London on England's northeast coast, he had no idea that five months later he would have a hand in making British sports history.

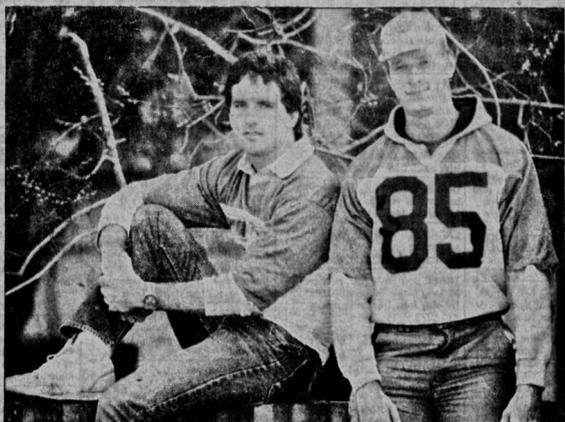

The senior from Adel, Iowa, on a university exchange program with Hull University during the 1986-87 term, played linebacker for the UCH Sharks of the British Collegiate American Football League. The Sharks, in the first year of organized American-style football, marched their way to a 24-6 victory over Newcastle University in the first-ever British national championship.

But the road into British sports lore was sometimes far from glamorous.

WHEN A COLLEGE activities recruiting seminar first gave Martin the idea of participating in this newly established league, he admittedly had little idea what to expect.

"When I showed up for the first day of practice it was a little shocking," he replied with a wry smile. "Because of economic restrictions, there was little money allotted to us. Only a few of the players even had equipment. You had to purchase your own or borrow it from somewhere."

"It's hard to compete with sports

Andy Martin, left, and Andy Parsons were members of the first champions in the British Collegiate American Football League.

like rugby," he added. "Since this is such a new concept it is forced to earn its own place."

If the idea of mismatched uniforms and organized chaos seems to paint an amusing portrait, then the way the squad got their name should fit in comfortably.

ANDY PARSONS, AN Iowa junior from Birmingham, England, who is studying in Iowa City under the same exchange program that led Martin to Hull, played tight end for the Sharks in 1986. He explained that the name UCH (University College at Hull) was greatly influenced by its American counterpart.

"When we got around to naming the squad we wanted to make it sound something like UCLA or USC," he said. "We could have been some boring old thing like Hull University Sharks, but we fancied to jazz it up a bit."

Hull is economically sustained by its whaling industry, but Parsons said the squad would have nothing to do with being called the Whal-

"IT JUST SOUNDED a bit sluggish," he said. "We wanted something that sounded vicious and since we are so close to the water we thought that UCH Sharks fit quite nicely."

And the Sharks proved to be vicious indeed.

They rolled through league competition, routing teams by an average of 26.6 points a contest in racking up a 7-0 season record in getting to the College Bowl for the national championship. The closest contest all season was a 27-14 win over Teesside in the first outing of the year.

On March 15, 1987, it all culminated with a championship victory over Newcastle that saw Martin block a field goal attempt and run back a kickoff to complete his linebacking chores.

With it all behind him, how does Martin believe that American-style college football could ever achieve the success of a British sports staple like rugby?

"Yes, I think football could become quite prominent over there in time," he said. "The interest over the national championship was great. I think that it will just take time for the funding to allow it to grow. I could see it happening in five or ten years."

And what did Parsons think about the American griddy at Hull?
 "He could play," he said. "For a Yank."
