Indiana vice president set for visit to UI

By Kevin
The Daily Iowan

An Indiana University-Bloomington vice president — one of three recently identified UI presidential prospects — will visit the UI campus today and Thursday to meet with administrators, faculty, staff and students.

Kenneth R.R. Gros Louis is the second of three new candidates chosen by the 17-member UI presidential search committee to visit the UI this semester. Hunter R.

Rawlings III, University of Colorado vice president for academic affairs and research, spent April 8-9 with UI representatives. City University of New York Vice President and Provost Steven M. Cahn will arrive at a date yet to be determined.

The search committee has been seeking a replacement for former UI President James O. Freedman, who announced his resignation April 11, 1987. Freedman is now president of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.

GROS LOUIS, 51, joined the Indiana University faculty in 1964 as an assistant professor, then was promoted to associate professor in 1967 and professor in 1973. He held a two-year term as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, as well as a five-year term as chairman of the English Department, before becoming vice president of Indiana University's Bloomington campus in 1980.

In addition to holding an administrative post at the university, Gros Louis teaches a freshman honors course each fall semester and a graduate course in comparative literature each spring semester. He said he enjoys teaching and would like to continue to teach if chosen to head the UI.

Gros Louis said he encourages individual faculty members to concentrate on either teaching or research, depending on personal strengths.

"I THINK THE University of Iowa, like Indiana, has the potential and has the strength to become in the next century one of the 20 to 25 major universities in the country," he said. Citing the success of universities like the University of Michigan, the University of Wisconsin and the University of Illinois, Gros Louis said the UI should appeal to Iowa citizens and businesses for funding.

"I don't think any state economy in the Midwest is going to have the resources to fund" a leading public university, he said. "The citizens have to understand clearly — and it's the university's responsibility to help them understand — how the university will help them."

Gros Louis said when he became vice president at Indiana University, he implemented a toll-free number for Indiana citizens who had questions or complaints about university policies.

"IT WAS A positive statement to know that they could call," he said. Indiana Daily Student Editor in Chief Paul Rogers said Gros Louis is receptive to student concerns.

Hijackers free 12 hostages, fly to Algeria

By Brendan Murphy
United Press International

ALGIERS, Algeria — A hijacked Kuwait Airways jet with about 35 hostages aboard landed Wednesday on the ninth day of an odyssey of terror after the air pirates released 12 of their captives in Cyprus in return for fuel.

The Boeing 747 touched down on the palm-lined runway at Hourti Boumedienne Airport at 3:06 a.m. (9:06 CDT) to complete a nearly four-hour, 1,200-mile flight across the Mediterranean from Larnaca, Cyprus.

The jetliner taxied to within 300 yards of the terminal, where Algerian security forces turned two large arc lights on the plane.

An official black Peugeot limousine and emergency vehicles drove up to the blue-and-white plane but then retreated after the hijackers made contact with authorities by radio and told them to pull the vehicles back.

Algeria marked the third stop for the jumbo jet, which was hijacked and forced to land in Iran April 5 before being taken to Cyprus Friday. Forty people remained aboard the jet, including five to 10 hijackers demanding the release of 17 jailed Moslem extremists in Kuwait.

"Nobody knows what is going to happen," said the Kuwaiti ambassador to Algeria, Gasin Bourisly. "But we hope evrything will be all right and the hostages will be safely released."

Cypriot government spokesman Akis Fantis had said in Larnaca after the plane's departure that the government had received indications the hostages would be released in Algeria. He declined to say who gave such assurances, but added, "I assume the Algerians are reliable people."

As the plane arrived, scores of policemen wearing navy blue uniforms, white peaked hats and white gloves patrolled the facility carrying only sidearms.

A senior Algerian official said his government allowed the jetliner to fly to the country "to find a solution" to the ordeal.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, told United Press International the decision to allow the jet into Algiers followed contacts Monday between Algerian President Bendjedid Chadli and the leader of Kuwait.

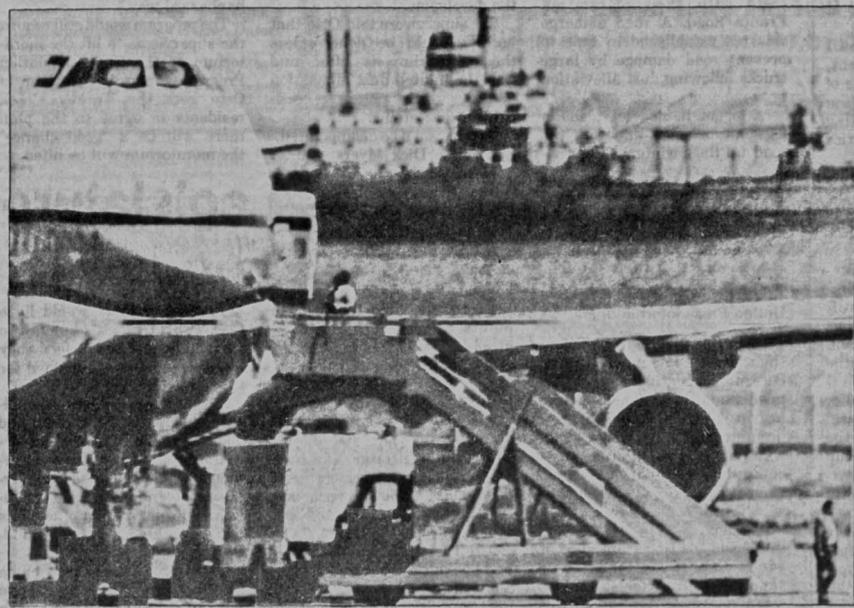

Asked if an Algerian delegation, reported to have taken part in negotiations at Larnaca, had reached a preliminary agreement with the hijackers, the official said only, "If they are coming here, it is to find a solution."

The jumbo jet lifted off the Larnaca runway at 1:19 a.m. (5:19 p.m. CDT Tuesday) and swept out across the black waters of the Mediterranean after the Arabic-speaking hijackers had freed the 12 captives in exchange for fuel.

Two Kuwaiti hostages were killed in Cyprus — one Saturday and one Monday — after Flight 422 landed in the Mediterranean island nation.

The hostages-for-fuel swap Tuesday was carried out as part of a bargain struck between Palestine Liberation Organization chairman

Hopefuls audition for 'Zarda!' parts

DI writer joins local actors, takes chance at the big screen

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

I didn't go there wanting the part. I had nothing to be nervous about. But as I sat in the Wesley House lobby with the other actors and actresses-to-be, visions of Hollywood fogged my brain. I got a little flaky.

My palms were sweating and I became acutely aware of my freckles as I read over Gloria's lines. I was auditioning for one of the 40 speaking parts open to locals for the Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre feature-length film, Zarda! Cow

From Hell.

"Who is Gloria, down deep?" I wondered. "I need to become Gloria."

My name was called. As I was escorted to the audition room, knees knocking, I marveled at the countless possible ways to say, "Hi. My name is Gloria. I hope you don't feel threatened by my presence. . . . Men like me." Which one did the producer want?

HOW ABOUT, "Hi. My name is Cathy. I feel threatened by the presence of most everyone." But it wasn't so bad. Producer Scott Smith courteously held back his laughter and managed to avoid the old standby, "We'll be in touch." He even shook my hand.

Zarda! Cow From Hell, a Stone Peach production, will be shot in and around Iowa City May 15 to June 15, according to Smith. And it's more than just the story of a crazed, radioactive cow.

"The movie within the movie is about a bunch of shock horror filmmakers who come to Iowa to make a shock horror film called Zarda! Cow From Hell," Smith said. "They come expecting a bunch of bumpkins but actually run into a very sophisticated crowd of Iowans who end up taking over the film and making it into something akin to Out of Iowa."

SMITH SAID the film is more a parody of Hollywood than Iowa.

"California is too ripe a target," he said. "The people in the film from Iowa are the ones who are quoting Jean-Luc Godard."

Smith, who grew up in Iowa City and is about one credit away from graduating from the UI, said members of the comedy troupe decided to shoot the film in Iowa City because they knew the community would be supportive.

"It was a good excuse to come back," he said. "Plus this is the greatest town. I'd live here if I could. The people here have been unbelievably good to us."

He said local businesses and the community in general have contributed more than he expected, helping with the film's $500,000 budget.

"You don't have to have $30 million to make a good film," Smith said. "But it's very difficult because you have to get everything you can for free."

Medical, social specialists to work at clinic

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

In response to multiplying cases of AIDS in the state of Iowa, UI Hospitals and Clinics will open an AIDS outpatient clinic later this spring that will unite medical and social specialists to help combat the deadly disease.

Jack Stapleton, a UI virologist who will direct the new AIDS clinic, said the clinic's staff will include UI Hospitals personnel from the Infectious Diseases Department, Department of Epidemiology, family practice physicians and staff members from the hospital's Social Service Department.

Stapleton said including social service staff members will provide better educational and counseling resources for the clinic's patients and their families.

"AIDS is a devastating disease as far as a person's social structure is concerned," Stapleton said. "I think that there is an increasing recognition that Iowa is not immune from the disease and that the best chance of preventing its spread is through education."

RALPH KNUDSON, a UI family practice physician who will work at the new clinic, said the clinic will offer AIDS patients a variety of coordinated services.

"One of the things it will provide is an entry point served by a multi-disciplinary team," Knudson said. "AIDS needs to be approached from different angles, and to do that you really need a team approach."

Stapleton said one of the main benefits of the new clinic will be better coordination of hospital medical care for AIDS patients.

"I think certainly that any time you have a large institution there is a risk that care is not personalized," Stapleton said. "I think this clinic will help to resolve some of those problems."

Stapleton said the clinic will provide a central reference system for both medical care and social services.

Proposal will force students' transfer

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 100 Iowa City elementary school students will be forced to transfer from Lucas Elementary School to either Lemme or Longfellow Elementary schools under a proposal submitted to the Iowa City School Board Tuesday night.

The proposal was submitted by the Iowa City School District Demographic Study Committee.

The proposal is the result of the 1985 report to the board, "Current and Projected Demographic Problems Facing the Iowa City Community School District," which identified Iowa City's north and east side as potentially overcrowded areas.

Following an updated report issued in 1987, the board recommended a committee study the district because of a "potential for rapid growth" on the east side. The report predicted an excessive enrollment of 100 students at Lucas School and an enrollment of 76 below capacity at Lemme School by 1992-1993.

THE PURPOSE OF the 40-member Demographic Study Committee was to work out a plan to deal with the enrollment problems which would increase operational costs as little as possible, disrupt as few students as possible, and allow the school boundaries to stand for at least five years.

Demographic Study Committee Chairman David Woodrirk, a former member of the Iowa City School Board, said the plan has many advantages including no additional bussing costs and allowing long-term stability for Longfellow School and future expansion at Lemme, Hoover and Lucas schools.

The plan would remove approximately 100 students from Lucas School. About 39 students would be added to Lemme School and 62 added to Longfellow School.

Woodrirk said the plan will emphasize transferring students who are currently bussed in the district.

"WHO IS THE easiest to move?" Woodrirk said. "Certainly you want to maximize the number of students who want to move, but the bussed students are the ones who will be moved most."

But Iowa City resident Harold Mcelderry, whose daughter would be affected by the change, said he did not want her bussed to a school located further away.

"I don't feel that it is really fair to the children who are on a bus simply because they are on a bus," Mcelderry said. "It seems they are being shoved around."

Board member Betsy Hawtreys said

College holds Research Day

Information on 117 health research projects at the UI College of Medicine will be on display in the corridors of the Bowen Science Building April 14-15.

The 13th annual UI College of Medicine Research Day is open to the public. It highlights the progress and goals of the UI medical college and provides a unique opportunity for scientific exchange among colleagues, faculty, students, fellows and staff members, said Nelson J. Gurll, professor of surgery and head of the Research Day Committee.

Researchers will be present to explain their projects and answer questions on Thursday. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Thursday and 9 a.m. to noon on Friday.

UI projects given awards

Two research projects have been awarded 1988 University House Interdisciplinary Research Grants at the UI. The grants will allow the faculty members to work collaboratively at University House this summer.

Jay Christensen-Szalanski, of the UI Management Sciences Department, and Michael Saks, of the UI College of Law, will prepare a research proposal and a journal article on "Evaluating and Enhancing the Model Malpractice Act."

The proposed Model Medical Malpractice Act, about to be released by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, is designed to reduce uncertainty and unpredictability in outcomes of medical malpractice suits.

The researchers, experts in tort reform and legal decision-making, will identify critical questions related to the act which require further study and outline methods for collecting essential information.

"State, Politics, and Public Policy Response to Demographic Change" will be studied by Fred Pampel, of the UI Sociology Department, and Paul Adams, of the UI Social Work Department, both in the College of Liberal Arts.

Pampel, a demographer, and Adams, a social worker, will combine their specialties to examine the demographic and political determinants of child-bearing, family and retirement policies in the 1980s.

University House is a UI facility dedicated to faculty scholarship. In addition to office accommodations and support services, University House offers faculty members and visiting scholars the opportunity to share their ideas, according to Jay Semel, University House director.

The competitive grants are open to UI faculty members of all ranks and disciplines and are administered through the UI Office of Educational Development and Research.

Education talk to be held

A discussion of educational systems in socialist countries will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. in UI International Center Room 36.

The event is the second in the "World Issues Series" sponsored by the UI Office of International Education and Services.

Participants will include William Reisinger, UI assistant professor of political science, and a panel of American and foreign students. The discussion is free and open to the public.

Teleconference slated for UI

The UI is inviting the public to attend a free live teleconference on "Altering the Aging Process" from noon to 3 p.m. Thursday in the UI International Center Room 36.

The teleconference will feature nationally recognized geriatric authorities in individual presentations on scientific progress, clinical applications, economic impact and public policy issues. They will then sit down as a panel and field questions from the audience in Iowa City.

The program is sponsored by the UI Geriatric Education Center in cooperation with the UI Division of Continuing Education.

Corrections

In a story entitled "Professor speaks on African culture" (DI, April 11), Professor Ali Mazuri was incorrectly quoted as saying he spoke Islamic as a child. The language spoken in the area Mazuri grew up in is Swahili.

Supervisors may nullify Dust Alleviation Program

By Steve Weiss
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors may lift a yearlong moratorium placed on the Johnson County Dust Alleviation Program if residents of an Iowa City township agree to help finance the program.

The program was established several years ago to remedy dust problems on Johnson County's secondary gravel roads. The program specified that the county would spread two lengths of oil over a 150-foot stretch of gravel road in front of a house for a fee of $125 in order to alleviate dust problems.

But a moratorium was placed on the program last year after the county incurred unexpected costs with the program on Frantz Road. A road embargo was not established in time to prevent road damage by large trucks following dust alleviation improvements.

"A logger hauled big loads of logs out of there and tore the road up (last winter)," Supervisor

Chairman Don Sehr said. "We wanted to get a handle on things and see how they came through another winter."

BUT RESIDENTS of the Turkey Creek Development in Iowa City's Newport Township have asked the board to re-establish the program.

Don Otto, RR 2, addressed the board at Tuesday's informal meeting on behalf of Turkey Creek residents, who are upset about the tremendous amount of dust that comes off the gravel road which leads into the development.

"There are a lot of frustrated people out there," Otto said.

Otto asked supervisors to begin the program again for the one mile stretch of road leading into the development.

But supervisors told Otto that nothing could be done unless the moratorium is lifted and that the limited dust alleviation procedure may not meet residents' expectations.

"I think you'll be disappointed," Supervisor Dick Myers said. "I don't think you'd get out of it what you want."

INSTEAD, the board suggested converting the gravel road into a double-sealed oil road which the county would guarantee for three years. The improvements would carry a price tag of about $19,000 over the three years for residents of Turkey Creek.

"If I were a homeowner out there, I'd consider it a five-year investment," Myers said, adding the road should outlive its guarantee by at least two years.

Despite the cost of this project, Otto said he would like to see the idea pursued.

"I'd love to see it," Otto said. "It's a whole lot better to do things in a classy way than a haphazard way."

The program would still require the supervisors to lift the moratorium on the Dust Alleviation Program. According to Sehr, if Otto gets the Turkey Creek residents to agree to the plan there will be a "good chance" the moratorium will be lifted.

Lack of time forces Legislature to hold off on education laws

United Press International

DES MOINES — Sufficient time does not remain in the current legislative session for lawmakers to consider taking action to accommodate fundamentalist Christians who want an exemption from state compulsory-education laws, House Speaker Don Avenson said Tuesday.

Avenson, D-Oelwein, said the session is "getting frantic" as it winds to a close, and "there simply isn't time for so complicated an issue right now. Not that it's not valid; there simply just isn't time."

Home- and church-school advocates are seeking an exemption from Iowa laws requiring all children to be taught by state-certified teachers.

The advocates, with the backing of Gov. Terry Branstad, have proposed legislation replacing the certified-instruction requirements of the compulsory-attendance law with annual proficiency testing of children.

"THIS IS A controversial issue — it will take a great deal of time to review and discuss before the Legislature can come to a decision," Avenson said. "We don't want to rush any issue, but especially not this one. It will have to wait."

Also Tuesday, the Senate voted to overhaul a key state economic-development program to ensure that new and expanding businesses create the number of jobs they promise.

The bill, which appropriates lottery profits for the next fiscal year, includes a provision approved on a 25-24 vote that would replace direct grants to businesses with forgivable loans.

Backers contend businesses receiving the loans would have to pay them back if they fail to create the number of jobs they promised when they applied for the funds.

The bill also includes expenditures for expanded tourism and economic-development advertising, renovation of the Statehouse, emergency medical services, juvenile-detention facilities and construction of exhibits for the State Historical Building.

In other business, the Senate Tuesday gave final approval to a bill allowing schools to begin their academic years before Sept. 1.

Lawmakers sent to Gov. Terry Branstad a bill that would allow school districts to start their academic years during the week that includes Sept. 1. The change means districts will be allowed to conduct classes as early as Aug. 28.

An Iowa City man pleaded guilty Tuesday to charges of disorderly conduct and public intoxication after police found him intoxicated at a party on April 9, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Robert P. Schweers, 20, 650 S. Dodge St., was found by police at a party on 436 S. Van Buren St., wearing an "oral sex" sticker on his shirt. The officer responded by saying, "Excuse me, Mr. Oral Sex" and then pushed Schweers' arm to move him out of the way, according to court records.

Schweers allegedly began yelling, "Talk about police brutality" in the hallway, which allegedly attracted the attention of residents in the building at 2 a.m. in the morning, according to court records.

Court records indicate police said Schweers smelled of alcohol, had red, watery eyes and slurred speech. Schweers refused to take a breath test, according to court records.

Schweers was fined $98, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was released from the Johnson County Jail on his own recognizance Tuesday after being arrested Monday assault causing injury, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David M. Birch, 20, 2804 Lakeside Drive, was allegedly involved in a verbal disagreement with a female on March 5. The argument resulted in Birch allegedly hitting the victim in the mouth with his fist, choking her and kicking her hand, stomach and head, according to court records.

The victim stated that Birch said he would break her hand again if she upset him again. A preliminary hearing in the case is set for April 26, according to court records.

A car belonging to an Iowa City woman reportedly was vandalized sometime between 11 p.m. Monday and 5 a.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

Linda Fellers, 1013 E. Market St., reported Tuesday that unidentified individuals scraped something across the trunk of her car while it was parked at her home, pried off four plastic disks from the wheels and possibly stole ball-joint covers from the front ball joints of the car, according to the report.

Fellers reported two suspects in the incident who allegedly have been harassing her, but no charges were filed.

Report: A UI student was asked by police officers to "find a more appropriate time of day" to attempt to contact his girlfriend, according to police reports.

UI senior Marshall Cotton, 23, 632 S. Dodge St., was reported at about 5:20 a.m. Tuesday yelling and banging on the door of her apartment and was warned by officers when they investigated the incident, according to the report.

Report: The rear-view mirror on a car belonging to a Des Moines woman was reported stolen while she was in Iowa City Saturday night, according to police reports.

Tammy Bragg reported that sometime over Saturday night the driver's side of her car was damaged and the rear-view mirror was ripped off by unidentified individuals while the car was at 2427 Shady Glen Court, according to the report.

Theft: Approximately $265 in miscellaneous items was reported stolen from a car parked in level 1 of University Parking Ramp 2, according to Campus Security reports.

Robert Stopko, address unavailable, reported at about 12:14 p.m. Monday that unidentified individuals allegedly broke windows on his car and stole the items, according to Campus Security reports.

Report: A water balloon that was thrown by unidentified individuals Tuesday night broke a window in Seashore Hall, causing approximately $50 damage, according to Campus Security reports.

UI Air Force ROTC program is granted 2-year reprieve

By John Gillardi
The Daily Iowan

Although the UI Air Force ROTC detachment was granted a reprieve earlier this week to continue the program for two more years, some UI students who have decided to leave the program will continue with their plans, according to a local Air Force official.

This past January's announcement that federal budget cuts had targeted the UI program to be eliminated forced the 100 students in the program to decide whether to stay at the UI or transfer. Since then, officials said about 50 students have decided to transfer.

An Air Force spokesman in Washington, D.C., said officials withdrew plans to eliminate or close 37 of 152 national units after discovering the criteria for evaluation had not been properly explained to the schools.

UI Professor Lt. Col. Gary Spivey said Tuesday some of the students he had talked to who were planning to transfer have decided to continue with their plans, despite the announcement.

STILL, THE decision to keep the program going for two more years gives the program time to improve, which officials said was slated to be eliminated due to scores on areas such as cost per student, number of students graduated, minority enrollment and number of engineering majors, Spivey said.

"We were surprised, we thought it was a final decision in January," Spivey said, adding he believed the decision may have been reversed due to congressional pressure from Iowa legislators.

The extension will allow current UI juniors and seniors to graduate from the program while allowing sophomores and some freshmen to consider staying at the UI. Spivey said the program will also work on recruiting high-school students and try to improve other weaknesses before the program is planned to be re-evaluated in two years.

"THIS WILL certainly let us apply to the standards we were judged by," Spivey said, adding those standards were not outlined to the units.

But the program will face the difficulty of recruiting high-school seniors who would face the risk of being in the program for two years and then waiting to see whether the program will continue, Spivey said, adding, "it's a gray area for these students."

One ROTC student, UI freshman Randy Merfeld, has decided not to transfer to Iowa State after hearing the program would be extended.

"I'll stay here unless they kick me out for some other reason," Merfeld said. "I never really wanted to leave; I was only leaving because I had to."

Merfeld said he suspected those students leaving the programs were going to more prestigious programs, such as Notre Dame, Michigan and Illinois.

But, he added, "I wish they weren't leaving. We all work together very well."

Marchers protesting "Catch-22" guidelines of Aid to Families With Dependent Children and other welfare programs marched along the Coralville Strip Tuesday morning en route to Cedar Rapids and eventually Des Moines, where they will submit a list of grievances to Gov. Terry Branstad and the state Legislature.

Paramount in their concerns is the inability of the U.S. government to encourage welfare recipients to find gainful, self-supportive employment while retaining the benefits of health care and child support that is not affordable without government aid.

The group of five women, representatives of the United Neighbors Inc. Welfare Reform Committee, a community support organization based in Davenport, began its trek from St. Mary's Catholic Church in Iowa City, followed by a support van from its organization. Kevin Jokisch, a coordinator and driver of the van, will follow the women, providing water and rest along the way.

ON TUESDAY, they had come as far as Iowa City from Davenport, where the march began Sunday. Melinda Jones, a marcher and Iowa City resident, complained welfare does nothing to rehabilitate those who are dependent on government support.

"We need to cause an awareness in government that we don't want to be like this — the laws of the welfare system make it difficult to change," Jones said. "I get partial benefits because I work part-time at Target, and can only work so many hours. I would like to work more, and my employers have asked if more hours would help my situation, but I can't have both the health benefits I need and the extra money I could use. It's the Catch-22 of the system."

Ann Lake, a Davenport resident, expressed similar sentiment at the prohibitive nature of welfare reform.

"All I want to do is become a taxpayer, and the only check I want from the government is my tax refund, but the way it is now I get my check and there's nothing I can do — it all goes for bills and I feel buried again."

JONES FELT a solution to unemployment and a low minimum wage would involve cooperation between government and business.

"We understand about profit margins and making money, but the private sector needs to understand workers' problems," Jones said. "You just can't get by on minimum-wage jobs — we're not getting anything that will help us escape welfare; it's just something that keeps us where we are."

The marchers also expressed dissatisfaction at Project Promise, a state jobs program they say has not lived up to its name.

"The state of Iowa made this program, said they would create jobs for low-income workers, then they changed their words and said the jobs were there for those who would go out and get them," said Lupi Martinez, also from Davenport.

U.S. Marine killed by fellow guards

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A U.S. Marine was accidentally killed by gunfire from his fellow Marine guards in Panama after intruders, believed to be members of Panama's Defense Force, invaded a U.S. petroleum storage facility, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

"The preliminary assumption at this point is that (the Marine's death) was the result of U.S. fire. ... This was indeed the result of a tragic accident," said Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard.

The accident occurred Monday night near the petroleum tank farm, which is located near Howard Air Force Base, Howard said.

Howard said the Marine was shot in the abdomen when he was caught in crossfire by two separate elements of a Marine patrol guarding the tank farm. He said the Marines fired after six or eight intruders set off a flare that sounded like gunfire.

HE SAID THERE had been a series of recent intrusions by men wearing camouflaged uniforms, similar to those worn by members of the Panama Defense Force.

Therefore, Howard said, the "logical assumption" is that the Monday incursion was by members of the PDF. However, he acknowledged the Pentagon only has "sketchy" details at this time of the Monday night incident.

The Pentagon later identified the dead marine as Cpl. Richardo M. Villahermosa, 25, of Santurce, Puerto Rico, a member of I Co., Third Battalion of the Fourth Marine Regiment.

Majority leader Byrd announces decision to resign Senate post

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia announced Tuesday that he will step down as Senate Democratic leader to better serve his home state, touching off a three-day fight to succeed him.

Byrd, 60, who will seek a sixth term in November, said the decision to give up his leadership post after 12 years was "extremely difficult" and, "As late as yesterday, I was forward and backward, up and down."

"But I've made my decision and I think it was the right one," Byrd told a news conference shortly after disclosing his decision to Senate Democrats at a closed meeting. "I have no regrets. I did my best."

IF HE WINS re-election and Democrats retain control of the Senate, Byrd next year will become president pro tem and chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. A senator cannot be party leader and hold a chairmanship.

Byrd made it clear that a major factor in his decision was his home state, saying many people told him,

"I can do more for West Virginia as chairman of the Appropriations Committee."

"I chose the role which at this point in time will be best for West Virginia," he said.

Sens. George Mitchell of Maine, Bennett Johnston of Louisiana and Daniel Inouye of Hawaii immediately said they will be candidates for the coveted post when Senate Democrats meet in late November to select leaders for the 101st Congress. Byrd will be party leader until that session convenes in January.

U.S. touts Afghan accord as 'victory'

WASHINGTON — The White House touted the accord on a Soviet pullout from Afghanistan Tuesday as "one of the greatest victories of the Reagan administration," despite grumbling by conservatives and lingering questions about the terms.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater brushed aside objections raised by conservatives worried about the fate of U.S.-backed Afghan rebels, insisting that "with rare exceptions, I think we feel we have good support."

President Ronald Reagan reaffirmed his determination to see that U.S. weapons continue flowing to the Mujahideen rebels as long as the Kremlin sends arms to its puppet regime in Kabul.

But with the United States slated to serve as a guarantor of the Afghan peace pact due to be signed Thursday in Geneva, administration officials declined to be drawn into technical discussions of the legal basis for that position.

Undetected rockets explode in Pakistan

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Two rockets undetected after a weekend fire and explosion at an army ammunition depot blew up in the town of Faizabad Tuesday but no injuries were reported as Pakistani soldiers continued a massive clean-up operation.

Associated Press of Pakistan reported the explosions Tuesday, two days after a fire at the depot engulfed a magazine of ammunition, rockets, mortar and weapons. At least 96 people were killed and 1,100 were injured Sunday.

The report did not mention exactly where the explosions occurred, but no injuries were reported and military sources said the blasts were in the immediate vicinity of the depot.

The official death toll rose from the 93 announced by President Mohammad Zia ul-Haq Monday, when three people died in a hospital in nearby Rawalpindi city, the news agency said.

Arizona court cancels recall election

PHOENIX — The state Supreme Court Tuesday canceled the gubernatorial recall election set for May 17, effectively guaranteeing that Gov. Rose Mofford will serve out the remainder of ousted Gov. Evan Mecham's term.

Absentee balloting in the recall election was to have begun Thursday.

The court ruled 4-1 that the constitutional successor to a governor ousted by impeachment in Arizona is the secretary of state, who was Mofford.

Mofford became acting governor when the state House of Representatives voted to impeach Mecham, and she was sworn in as his successor a day after the state Senate convicted him of the impeachment charges.

Coalition formed to improve aviation

WASHINGTON — A broad coalition of U.S. aviation interests called for a national commitment Tuesday to make air travel more efficient, build new airports and modernize the air traffic control system through an ambitious program reaching into the next century.

The Partnership for Improved Air Travel, founded by airlines, aircraft manufacturers, pilots, passengers and airport operators, told a news conference civil aviation has been unable to keep up with America's growing appetite for air travel.

Herbert Kelleher, chairman of Southwest Airlines and head of the newly formed group, said the organization advocates spending big money to upgrade the system. The project would be financed by those who use aviation primarily through ticket and gasoline taxes, he said.

Patent on genetic mouse granted

WASHINGTON — The government has granted the first patent on a genetically engineered animal, a mouse developed by Harvard University researchers for breast cancer research, officials said Tuesday.

"This may well be a first step toward continued genetic engineering that will permit the medical industry to fight against diseases that have been very difficult to eliminate in our lifetime," Donald Quigg, commissioner of patents and trademarks, told a news conference.

The patent office has previously approved patents for genetically engineered bacteria, and the plant patent act went into effect in May 1930.

Muscovites line up for slice of America

MOSCOW — Soviets braved a bitter wind and snow flurries Tuesday to sample a slice of America — free pizza — with the latest opening of a joint U.S.-Soviet venture.

Astro Pizza, a partnership owned 51 percent by the Moscow city government and 49 percent by USSO-Food International Inc., of Piscataway, N.J., opened for business with its mobile kitchen perched on the Lenin Hills overlooking the Soviet capital.

"It's tasty, it's fresh, it's free delivery," read an English sign on the 36-foot-long van, also emblazoned with Cyrillic lettering proclaiming the new joint venture.

The offer of free delivery will remain unfulfilled for the foreseeable future, but the steady flow of Russians seemed to accept the other claims. A crowd gathered around the van as the joint venture was declared officially open, pushing toward the window to sample free slices of pizza.

"Very tasty," said a Russian woman.

Fitzwater denounces Speakes over quotes

United Press International

WASHINGTON — White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, determined to avoid any question of his integrity, denounced as "a damn outrage" Tuesday an admission by his predecessor, Larry Speakes, that he fabricated quotes attributed to President Ronald Reagan.

With official Washington buzzing over the barbs Speakes flings in his new book, Speaking Out, Fitzwater came out swinging when asked about a disclosure that at times, presidential remarks relayed to reporters were created by the White House press office.

Calling the action acknowledged by Speakes "an outrageous thing to have happen," Fitzwater said, "I think that aspect (of the book) reflects on me and this position and I resent it."

"It casts aspersions on the presidency and on my position," he told reporters, "and those questions you just asked are the best reason why he shouldn't have done it and why I wouldn't do it."

AFFAIRS OF STATE took a backseat as Fitzwater spent most of his daily press briefing renouncing some of the public relations practices of his predecessor as chief presidential spokesman.

"I certainly am not going to allow the transgressions of the press secretary at the time to be transferred to the president or anybody else," he said. "He's responsible for his own actions and it's not the responsibility of others to tell him how to do his job or what's right and wrong."

White House press secretary James Brady, who left his post when he was wounded in the 1981 assassination attempt on Reagan, told reporters after an appearance on Capitol Hill that "the best person to make up quotes about the president is the president."

In a telephone interview from New York, Speakes said: "It's an honest book. I criticized people for their mistakes and I admit my mistakes."

Judge makes move to assure reality of Iran-Contra trial

United Press International

WASHINGTON — A federal judge, faced with the prospect of an Iran-Contra trial almost a year away, threatened Tuesday there may be no trial at all if prosecutors do not quickly turn over secret documents and prove they have a case.

Claiming that failing to turn over the documents would result in a "constitutional question of major proportions" — and inviting the defense to raise the issue formally — U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell took firm control of the first courtroom clash between the office of independent prosecutor Lawrence Walsh and lawyers for the four men indicted in the scandal.

THE DEFENDANTS, including former White House national security adviser John Poindexter and his aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North, were presented during the hearing, held at the federal court where the Watergate trials took place. All four have pleaded innocent.

"I want to know if we have a case that can be tried," Gesell said. "I want to have some sense that I am not wasting two to three months of my time listening to a trial that is certain to be aborted before its over."

Walsh said he was prepared to assure Gesell that his charges against the four were fairly lodged and not aided by the public testimony before congressional investigators last summer.

When it came time to discuss a potential trial date, Walsh said he could be ready in July, if pressed.

But Gesell seemed genuinely distressed by predictions the case would take up to four months to try.

Food container manufacturers move to help save ozone layer

United Press International

WASHINGTON — Manufacturers of foam food containers said Tuesday they will sharply cut back their use of chemicals that are most damaging to the ozone layer, Earth's shield against cancer-causing ultraviolet light.

Instead, a similar chemical that poses less of a threat to the atmospheric buffer will be used for the ubiquitous packaging materials.

The Foodservice and Packaging Institute Inc., an industry group representing the makers of cartons, boxes, paper and plastic plates, egg cartons and other disposable food containers, said that by the end of 1988 it's "expected that all manufacturers of disposable products for food service will discontinue producing products using fully halogenated chlorofluorocarbons in their manufacture."

THE ANNOUNCEMENT follows President Ronald Reagan's signing of an international agreement last week, called the Montreal Protocol, to reduce the use of chlorofluorocarbons by 50 percent by 1998.

Scientists have concluded that CFCs erode the ozone layer high in the atmosphere by touching off a chemical reaction. The compounds are used to make the bubbles in foam containers, as an industrial cleaning agent, in refrigerators and in packing and other foams.

The food packagers said less than a third of the foam products for food service currently contain the ozone-damaging CFCs.

The Collegiate Associations Council and Student Senate are seeking students to serve on student committees. Democrats clash in debate

Gore shifts attacks to Dukakis

By Matthew C. Quinn
United Press International

NEW YORK — Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, in a fresh attempt to lift his Democratic presidential campaign a week before New York's primary, shifted his attacks Tuesday to front-running Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis.

During a 90-minute debate among Gore, Dukakis and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, the Tennesseean needled Dukakis about his record as governor, a switch from his recent salvos aimed at Jackson.

But when Gore suggested Dukakis had coddled criminals in a controversial furlough program for Massachusetts prison inmates, he got a sharp response.

"Al, the difference between you and me is that I have to run a criminal justice system. You never have," Dukakis said. "I'm very proud of my record in fighting crime."

WHILE GORE AND Dukakis quibbled, Jackson was clearly the favorite of the crowd at Madison Square Garden's Felt Forum.

The debate was the first three-way face-off of the day; later, the candidates were meeting before a women's activist group.

Gore told the Madison Square Garden audience he is running as "underdog," Jackson claimed to be "top dog," and Dukakis appealed for help to make April "the month of the Dukakis" following the Democratic presidential candidates Al Gore, left, Jesse Jackson, center and Michael Dukakis do a three-way handshake Tuesday prior to their debate in New York City.

Academy Award presented Monday night to his cousin, actress Olympia Dukakis.

At one point, hecklers demanded answers on AIDS and unfurled a banner saying, "Silence equals death." The candidates urged increased research and public education efforts to combat the deadly virus.

Gore, trailing in New York polls, again blasted Jackson over the Middle East, but aimed most of his fire at Dukakis and drew sharp rejoinders from the governor.

WITH JEWISH voters expected to make up a quarter of the Democratic vote next Tuesday — when 255 national convention delegates are at stake — Jackson again advocated a Palestinian state but took special care to back "strong and secure borders for Israel" as well.

But the only real sparring on the Middle East — the focal point for Jewish concerns about Jackson left over from the 1984 campaign — was when Gore charged Dukakis expressed "enthusiasm" for a Palestinian state and Dukakis denied it.

Jackson, however, answered persistent suggestions from Gore that his nomination would threaten a repeat of resounding Republican defeats of Democratic tickets headed by George McGovern in 1972 and Jimmy Carter in 1980.

Jackson said, "There was no Jesse Jackson factor in the losses and there was no black factor in the losses" and blamed them instead on intra-party squabbles during the primaries.

"IN 1980, THE Democrats defeated Carter in the spring and Reagan beat what was left of him in the fall," Jackson said. "That's why I've worked so diligently to keep our campaign focused on mission and issues and not on destroying each other."

But that did not stop Gore from going after Dukakis.

"If I'm not mistaken, Governor Dukakis has just in the past week or so recommended very, very deep cuts in the programs designed to help welfare recipients and poor families in Massachusetts as part of a new budget plan," Gore said. "That's absolutely incorrect," Dukakis interjected.

"WELL, THE newspaper accounts are wrong, then," Gore responded.

"No, you're wrong," Dukakis snapped.

Given a chance to ask Dukakis a question by the debate format, Gore asked Dukakis whether he would advocate a program for federal prisoners similar to a Massachusetts program he said Dukakis had backed and which allowed weekend furloughs for convicted criminals, "including those convicted of first-degree murder and serving life sentences without parole."

Dukakis responded: "I think Senator Gore knows we've now changed our policy. There will not be furloughs for lifers but we will have a strong well-administered furlough program."

He Speakes falsely

The Soviet Union was once a country frequently referred to as the world's "evil empire" by President Ronald Reagan. But suddenly in 1985, in referring to the relationship between the two superpowers, Reagan supposedly said that "our differences are serious, but so is our commitment to improving understanding."

The problem is — to whom shall the quote be attributed? Former White House spokesperson Larry Speakes admitted to two incidents in which he manufactured quotes and attributed them to Reagan, including the widely-publicized quote above. In his memoirs published this week, Speakes gave his reasoning for putting words in the president's mouth.

In comparison with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's statements, it appeared to Speakes that Reagan was losing the public relations battle. In matching Reagan's actual utterances with his military goals for 1985, saying little was quite appropriate.

At the time of the 1985 Geneva summit, Reagan had requested one of the largest peacetime increases in defense spending in the history of the United States. Little — indeed — could have been said without blatant hypocrisy resulting.

Yet hypocrisy of another breed developed. The extensive play of the Speakes' quotes on television wrongly improved Reagan's image. The confession brings two questions to mind: Was the president aware that his top spokesperson passed off manufactured quotes as his own? And more importantly, have there been other instances? With so many devoted aides all trying to improve the president's image, the likelihood of quote corruption is great.

No matter how significant the covert action was, answers and explanations from President Reagan, once again, are in order.

The end of the tail

Well, it's official.

The Des Moines Playboy Club is stripping its bunnies of their tails and turning their seamy little flesh-hatch into a "family dining establishment." The announcement came on Monday that the Playboy clubs in the Sheraton Hotels in Des Moines and Omaha, Neb., will be changing face at the end of the month.

Bill Ramsey Associates is the public relations firm for Seldin Properties, owner of the Playboy Clubs. Ramsey's the first to admit that "times have changed quite a bit" since the Playboy Clubs had their heyday back in the '60s and '70s. The reason for the change was slated as financial; the clubs just aren't pulling in enough money in their present format.

"Two years is about the usual life for a particular format," said Ramsey. "And since we've had this format for four years, I'd say we were about due for a change."

Considering the advances made in women's rights since the '60s and '70s, that's something of an understatement. While women in cities throughout the country are fighting for equal wages and opportunities in the workplace, here was a string of relatively posh nightclubs employing women in just about the most demeaning above-board position imaginable, wiggling their derrieres and cooing "Can I take your order?"

Good riddance. And this arrangement will almost certainly work out better for everybody involved. For club the Playboy circuit has been waning, leaving traveling club members high and dry most of the time, so the prestige factor is gone. Plus the atmosphere of the present clubs discourages families with children from eating there; when the format changes, an increase in customers can be expected.

And best of all, exploitive sexism is given another push right out of the national mindframe, off the menu of ongoing prejudices.

Root of housing bias

The Department of Housing and Urban Development announced plans to conduct a national study of housing discrimination. Specially trained couples — black, white and Hispanic — will be sent out to pretend they want to rent or buy apartments or houses. The two-year survey intends to uncover racial discrimination in its blatant and more subtle forms, with the aim of increasing enforcement against illegal practices.

HUD should be commended for initiating the study, and one can only hope it will indeed lead to more vigilant enforcement of fair-housing laws. But there is a danger the study will divert attention away from the need for initiatives that address the most prevalent and severe form of housing discrimination in the United States — economic inequality.

In a decade of escalating housing costs, the Reagan administration has succeeded in cutting funds for low-income housing by over 80 percent. Federal spending on low-cost housing has dropped to its lowest point in more than 20 years and the number of homeless and poorly-housed citizens is higher than ever. The hardship extends across racial lines, though blacks, Hispanics, Native Americans and other minorities — the most economically-disadvantaged groups — naturally bear the brunt of this economic discrimination.

Congress, and the next administration, must address the housing crisis, developing innovative programs and equitable fiscal policies. At the state and local level, much can be accomplished through rent controls, employment programs and the renovation of broken-down residential districts.

As long as the issue of economic injustice is ignored, one more government study shouldn't lead anyone to complacency.

Wake-up call: coronation day

Now that our presidential search has surpassed Generalissimo Francisco Franco's death watch for sad comedy, let's all roll over and play dead. Worried you'll miss something? Here:

"Regents President Marvin Pomerantz granted today that Richard Remington will become the next president of the University of Iowa. Remington, who turns 87 on Tuesday, has been UI interim president since the resignation of James O. Freedman.

"Pomerantz praised the search and its results. 'Sam Becker and those morons did a fine job,' Pomerantz oinked. 'The candidates were outstanding — each would make a fine hassock. We spent a year looking for the best and we found him right in our own back yard. Just like Hayden and Bump said.'

"Remington was unavailable for comment, but his moustache, Rolf, appeared at a press conference last night.

"Pacific rim,' Rolf said. 'Age of light. Diversity. More diversity. Far East friends. Excellence. Covenant. Top 10. Tremendous diversity.'

"In a related development, Rolf announced the retirement of UI Vice President for Educational Development and Research Duane Spriestersbach, effective June 1, 2000.

Scott Raab

"Look, the guy's still breathing, and we're still looking for a replacement,' Rolf said. 'Yo, Spree — run out and get me another donut.'

BUT SERIOUSLY, folks, real life is funnier.

The search committee, wholly cowed by the regents, did as ordered: Richard Remington has moved from non-candidate to semi-candidate to candidate to finalist without an honest word spoken about his willing subversion of the process. The faculty, who vote mainly with their moving vans, otherwise keep still. After all, counting money takes concentration, and nothing makes a sugar-daddy look benevolent and wise more quickly than a raise or two.

The students? Well, student government is doing its usual quiet, professional job of padding resumes and making connections. These hacks may actually believe they do good work, but their effect is nil when it comes to issues of significance. They merely rehearse the day when they become regents; by that time they will have forgotten they were once students, and will raise your kids' tuition every year.

AS FOR THE student on the street — your average 18-22 year-old majoring in materialism — why should he or she care about which faceless white man comes next? It's enough to worry about trying to find seats in required courses and money for the next tuition hike.

Hell, even for people who care enough to speak up against Remington and/or the mockery of the selection process, the coronation will be relatively painless. Like most major decisions, it'll get made over break, another example of the shameful lying that has characterized the search.

Last November and December, the paper was full of presidential candidates' comings and goings, quotes and qualifications. Winter break came, and the regents' whip came down. At the time, Pomerantz told reporters the expanded search would last one or two months. One brave-but-not-too-search committee member responded, "I think it may be a little unrealistic to get the additional candidates in the time frame proposed." Exactly so, dear member. What other point was Large Marv making than that they needed only filler?

SLOW-FORWARD to March 5, when search committee chair Sam

Becker said, "It seems to me not inconceivable that we could make a recommendation by mid-April." You bet, Sam. How long does it take to pick enough snmoos to make Remington look distinguished? Just long enough to make sure he isn't crowned by Pomerantz until after finals week. Just long enough. Until May 1, say.

Of course, Becker's recommendation means diddly. Remington didn't deign to endure the round of candidates' interview until after Pomerantz's personal invite. Do you think for an instant that the search committee would find the courage to NOT recommend Remington as a finalist? And if somehow it managed to vote their consciences — remember, it split 6-6 on a vote last semester on whether even to invite Remington — would Marvin Pomerantz and his hand puppets give a damn?

Hardly. The only voters who count with the regents are Athletic Director Bump Elliott, football Coach Hayden Fry, University Hospitals Director John Colton, Gov. Terry Branstad and the wealthy alumni who want a university the whole football team can be proud of.

The rest of us? See you in September, I guess. Have a nice nap.

Misplaced humor

To the Editor:

The peculiar editorial, "Policing barbarians," penned by an arts/entertainment editor, caused me, among other reactions, to recall a scene from the play Borstal Boy. As a group of London bobbies beat the hell out of the young Brendan Behan, caught with a suitcase full of IRA bombs, one asks, "Have you ever seen a woman cut in half by a plate-glass window?" The line stays with me because the image is so horrible. I never have, thank God.

I saw a woman's eyes shot out by a rubber bullet on the 6 p.m. news some years ago. That image stays with me, too. She was a middle-aged woman, unarmed, accompanied by a priest who tried to use a handkerchief as a white flag. I read in some obscure place later that she was the mother of eight children and was, of course, permanently blinded.

My reaction to the most recent violence in Ireland was to cry — which did no one any good — but still I cried, for the British soldiers and the perpetrators driven mad with rage and frustration and grief, and for the spectators who will carry images more vivid than that provoked by the 6 p.m. news.

Mr. Donoghue's response was a sanctimonious little piece conceding some fault on the part of the British government and characterizing it as sometimes a "big spot." Somehow that term doesn't convey the images. It doesn't bring into focus the suffering of humans involved in hundreds of years of oppression and enforced poverty, persecution by those who are supposed to protect, the tortures of Long Kesh, the injustices of the Diplock courts, the execution without trial of unarmed IRA soldiers or the shrapnel-filled body of a 10-year-old boy.

It doesn't remind us of Bobby Sands, Francis Hughes, Raymond McCreech, Mickey Devine. (Arts/entertainment editor, allow me to borrow from Yeats and "murmur name upon name, as a mother names her child".)

It is not so easy for me to know who are barbarians and who are civilized. I remember too well when the IRA turned the violence against itself with the hunger strikes, while Margaret Thatcher prided herself on her "firmness" and we civilized Americans politely covered our mouths while we yawned.

The press is fond of the term "terrorist" for groups like the IRA and the PLO. It helps to hide the fact that governments murder without that label, and contributes to the oversimplified either/or view and the assumption that these groups spring out of nowhere, without a history.

I find some small encouragement lately — now that TV cameras have been focused on the horrors in the Gaza Strip — that at long last there seems to be some slight shift from the long-held attitude that those of us who recognized Arabs as deserving human rights somehow had to favor oppression of Jews or Israelis.

How many TV cameras and how much blood will it take in Ireland to get beyond the simplistic and the tired old line of the IRA "having only themselves to blame"?

As for the description "Neanderthal, or worse, Democrat," I am bewildered. If this is a misprint, it should be corrected and what was meant to be said explained. If it is a misplaced attempt at humor, Mr. Donoghue should be gently scolded and carefully led by the hand back to the entertainment page. If it is intended to be any kind of serious political comment, then I concede that I have no words to express my reaction.

Propaganda

To the Editor:

In response to Prasanta Reddy's "Research the shield" (DI, April 1), this is the kind of propaganda the Reagan administration likes. It likes to "scare the wits" out of people so that they will see things the way it wants them to be seen and do things the way it wants them done. And it does this by picking out people like Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi to use as examples.

In all reality it is very unlikely that Gadhafi will ever obtain access to nuclear weapons. Since his bloodless coup to power in 1968, he has been kept under close observation and at arm's-length not only by the United States but by the Soviets as well.

Instead of spending the billions of dollars on Star Wars and making our country poor (which happens when a country throws billions of dollars on the military year after year), the money would be better spent economically.

In 1986, $1.5 billion could have provided 30,000- to 50,000-homes to accommodate a city of 120,000 inhabitants. Consider what could be done with the billions of dollars that would go into Star Wars. The United States as an advanced nation has the highest rate of slum houses in the world. Sooner or later people will have to realize the primacy of domestic policy over foreign policy.

A correction

To the Editor:

The article (DI, April 6) about my honors project gave the impression that the technique of combining people's own writings with their photographs was an original idea of my own. This is not true. This method has been used previously by other artists, most notably Jim Goldberg. I felt this technique was the best way to achieve my goals for the project, and in this way it is original. That is, it is a secondary consideration as a means to an end rather than an end in itself.

I liked talking with Joe, but his information somehow got distorted. None of the quotes attributed to me were accurate, and the two paragraphs about my previous work were complete fabrications. I think Joe came to the interview with some preconceived notions, and when I did not fit them he forced pieces together anyway. That is understandable, though. Many people have preconceived notions about art.

Transit problems

To the Editor:

As an alumnus of the UI, I have been sorry to hear about the recent problems suffered by the Iowa City Transit System. I sympathize with those students who live far from campus and have to put up with hourly service and pay a fare for it, while those who live close have a free ride around campus via the Cambus system.

It is unfair to have all students subsidizing Cambus when the majority of students living off-campus get few benefits. There has to be a better way to operate a bus system.

I am presently a graduate student at Iowa State University, and I ride the bus daily to campus. I pay a fare of only 25 cents, and there is service every 20 minutes. Needless to say, I am happy to have it so good. The reason why I do is that the city of Ames, ISU and the students have joined together to fund a single bus system that serves the whole community. Money comes in equal shares from the city, the university, the students and the fare box.

With this arrangement, the city can afford to run a superior bus system, the university does not have to provide more parking for the students and staff, and all the students have a bus system which serves their needs and is affordable.

What with the current squabbling between Iowa City and the UI, having everyone come together to solve the transit problem would foster better relations all around. Speaking as a student representative of the Ames Transit Board, I know that what has been done here can be duplicated in Iowa City if there are people who care enough about their community to make it work.

Peepers

To the Editor:

"Protecting Peepers" could have been titled "Protecting All of Us." Pace may be a law student, but it is painfully obvious that Donoghue is not.

Donoghue maintains that "The real rub is that he said he was guilty," and that "a guilty plea should count for more." Fortunately, for all of our sakes, the framers of our Bill of Rights did not agree with him. After a lot of experience with situations in which a guilty plea counted for a great deal more, it was their opinion that the rights of an individual must be safeguarded by written protections against self-incrimination through coercion, trickery or force in order for a society to remain free.

The real rub is indeed that "Pace wasn't clued in properly to his rights." Donoghue is guilty himself, of the most acute myopia if he does not realize that the same "human" oversight which resulted in Pace's mistrial could easily result in the conviction and imprisonment of another, less-fortunate individual charged with a more serious crime.

Donoghue does not seem to realize that it is also possible for the police to "overlook things" when dealing with individuals who are not necessarily white, male, English-speaking, middle-class or college law students. Some of them may not share Pace's advantage in terms of legal expertise and adequate counsel.

Perhaps it is a necessary part of our legal system that the courts and the police be occasionally "burned" by people like Pace in order to keep them on their toes — perhaps his arresting officers will remember to inform other arrestees of their legal rights; other arrestees who might not "know a basic constitutional right when they see one."

President

"He's been one of the most open administrators of all the administrators we've had," Rogers said. "He has an open line to his office that students can call at any time."

Rogers said Gros Louis hosts social functions for students in an effort to better know them and their concerns. Gros Louis was also among the most visible supporters of the student-sponsored "shanty town," a public display opposing Indiana University investments in South Africa.

Andy Potts, vice president of the Indiana University Student Association, said a student advisory committee for the College of Arts and Sciences, established by Gros Louis when he was dean of that college, is still in operation. Gros Louis also hosts a student advisory breakfast every few weeks to discuss campus issues, Potts said.

"HE MAKES A special effort to keep in touch with all the constituency groups on campus," Potts said.

According to Potts, Gros Louis discusses with students nearly every major issue concerning them and occasionally defers decisions or makes compromises until students are satisfied. Potts cited recent residence hall rate increases and a $50-per-semester "technology assessment fee" as examples, and said Gros Louis spends "more than an adequate amount of time" conferring with students.

Rogers said Gros Louis, along with Indiana University President Thomas Ehrlich, met with some opposition from staff members earlier this year regarding the reclassification of salary brackets, but the reclassification was implemented anyway.

GROS LOUIS, who was one of three finalists in Indiana University's search for a president last year, received a bachelor's degree in English and math from Columbia College, a master's degree in Renaissance literature from Columbia University and a doctorate in medieval and Renaissance literature and medieval history from the University of Wisconsin.

Two other candidates in the presidential search, UI Interim President Richard Remington and University of Kansas Vice Chancellor Frances Horowitz, have already met with campus representatives. Search Committee Chairman Sam Becker said the committee may invite more candidates to the UI before submitting names to the state Board of Regents. The regents will select the next UI president.

Auditions

BECAUSE OF THE film's low budget, Smith said, local participants will be paid depending on what they do.

"If it's one line, we'll say, 'Gee, isn't that a nice potato salad over there?'"

Although actors and extras may end up with only a full stomach and a story to tell their grandchildren, about 280 have already auditioned for a part, and Smith said he expects about 140 more to try out today.

"We have parts for all sizes and shapes," he said. "We have a number of good speaking parts we want to cast from here."

Production assistant Kirk Griffith said among other Iowa City landmarks, John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St., will make its debut in Zarda, along with much of the surrounding countryside and possibly some parts of neighboring West Branch.

As Griffith and I were chatting, a number of participant performers shot us glances between script reads.

IN VARIOUS corners of the room, some were silently feeling out their characters. Mothers were primping their children. Others were pacing.

So this is what it's like in the big city, I thought.

But many, like me, were there on a whim.

"I'm here just for the hell of it," UI sophomore Rita Heimes said. "I don't really expect to get a speaking part. I'll be in Iowa City this summer and it'd be a great experience to work with these guys because they're all real strange."

UI senior Steve Stein said he thought the name was promising.

"I heard about it and it sounded like a neat thing. Zarda... how could you go very wrong?" he said.

UI senior TV production major Kim Kinney tried out for the experience.

"I want to get on the set just to see how they work. I figure the worst they can do is turn me down," she said.

And me, well, I realized as I fumbled through the audition that I'll probably never be Cher. But maybe, just maybe, I'll be a face in one of the mob scenes. One can only hope.

Callbacks will be posted in Wesley House lobby Thursday afternoon.

Hijack

Yasser Arafat and the hijackers, airport sources said.

Under the deal, the air pirates were to release half of the hostages before being allowed to fly to Algiers, they said. But after the 12 passengers were freed, subsequent negotiations for the release of more captives failed.

The 12 hostages were released in two groups. They hobbled dazed and shaken down a portable gangway and got into three ambulances that took them to Makarios General Hospital in Larnaca.

"Praise be to God," said an Egyptian man who had been released. "I am happy to be free again. I am happy to be born again."

The released captives, speaking in English and in Arabic, refused to give their names for fear of reprisals. They appeared exhausted, but most said they had been treated well and never beaten while on the plane.

"All I want is for my turn to have a long shower," one man said.

AIDS

"WHAT WE WILL be providing won't be markedly different from what we are providing right now, but it will be more centrally located," Stapleton said. "I think the main advantage of the clinic is that we will be more coordinated and there will be more consistency in the type of care we offer."

Knudson said the clinic will effectively familiarize AIDS patients with UI Hospitals.

"People with AIDS or ARC (AIDS-related complex) are anticipating that their health will be changing in the future and that they will need to be hospitalized, probably at the University of Iowa Hospitals," Knudson said. "This approach will enable us to get to know the patient better and will familiarize the patient with the hospital."

Knudson also stressed the importance of providing social service care to the clinic's patients.

"SO MANY times, people that are HIV-positive or have AIDS or ARC are going through so much emotional distress about it," Knudson said. "They are going through specific, day-to-day problems that are best managed and helped by someone who has experience in dealing with the disease."

UI Hospitals Social Service Division Supervisor Pat Herring, who currently works with AIDS patients at the hospital and in a local AIDS support group, will be part of the staff at the new clinic.

Herring said the key to controlling the disease in Iowa is education.

"It seems to me that what Iowa has to face is the fact that this is not just a problem in large cities," Herring said. "I think some people have the misconception that people in Iowa do not engage in high-risk activities. Just because people live in rural communities doesn't mean they are exempt from the disease."

HERRING SAID lack of education about the disease can result in AIDS patients being shunned and isolated by families and friends in their communities.

"We are approaching the time when we all are going to know someone with AIDS, and I think we need to be educated and knowledgeable so we can deal with these people effectively," Herring said. "Education is about all we have to get over that ignorance and to stop the spread of AIDS."

According to Stapleton, another advantage the new clinic will offer is more sophisticated lab research.

"It will provide sophisticated lab expertise," Stapleton said. "We will be able to provide better lab support and consequently better patient support."

Stapleton said the type of research the clinic will focus on remains to be seen, but said he anticipates research on what patients feel constitutes good counseling and therapeutic procedures.

ALTHOUGH Stapleton initially anticipated the clinic would treat between five to 10 AIDS patients per week, he said the early estimates were low.

Now, Stapleton said increasing numbers of AIDS and AIDS-related cases will result in larger numbers of patients for the clinic.

"We predicted five to 10 patients a week about a year ago," Stapleton said. "We are currently seeing more than that now at the hospital, and I would expect that we will be seeing more at the clinic."

Stapleton said interviews are currently being conducted to find a full-time nursing coordinator for the clinic.

hearings and a time table for implementing a change would be forthcoming from the board in the weeks ahead.

"The hearings or decisions will be hopefully made by the end of the school year in order that the people who are affected by the change can respond," Hawtrey said.

Why do we die in exile
Unmourned by anybody?
Why don't we cry as normal humans do?
We walked on fire, on thorns,

Why do we die terrified?
Why are we in exile
Why, oh my god.

Shamir defends deportation of activists despite protests

By William B. Ries
United Press International

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir Tuesday ignored U.S. protests and defended the deportation of eight Palestinian activists and warned more Arabs would be expelled if necessary to restore peace to the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

At least 18 Palestinians were injured in anti-Israel demonstrations that erupted in seven towns and U.N.-run refugee camps in the territories one day after the Monday deportations.

At least 140 Arabs have died in more than four months of Palestinian unrest.

BUT TOP MILITARY leaders claimed the army's harsh measures, including the detention of 4,800 suspects and wide-ranging economic sanctions, were quelling the violence that began Dec. 9 in territories seized by Israel from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War.

"We will continue to use it (the deportation measure) if the need arises," Shamir told state-run Israel Radio. "Deportations constitute an extremely severe deterrent measure, particularly when we refrain from taking steps, while imposing order and quiet, which are liable to lead to the loss of life."

The deportations Monday triggered a strong protest from the U.S. State Department, which condemned the expulsions as a violation of the Fourth Geneva Convention on military occupation.

"WE STRONGLY oppose deportations in the occupied territories," State Department spokesman Charles Redman.

At the United Nations, Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar also said Israel violated the Geneva Convention by deporting Palestinians and demolishing their homes.

Israel also issued deportation orders Monday against 12 other Palestinians, who filed appeals Tuesday in a military court, the first step of a limited appeals process, an army spokesman said.

On Monday, eight suspected leaders of the Palestinian uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip were released in southern Lebanon. Most of the eight have served jail terms in the past for belonging to outlawed Palestinian nationalist organizations or Islamic fundamentalists groups, the army said.

The expulsions ended an unofficial three-month freeze on the use of deportation, a practice that has been condemned by most of the world. On Jan. 13, the army expelled four West Bank residents, sparking widespread protests.

Evangelist Graham arrives in China to 'build bridge' between countries

By David Holley
Los Angeles Times

BEIJING — Evangelist Billy Graham arrived here Tuesday at the start of a 16-day tour that he said was aimed at strengthening Sino-American ties, especially between churches of the two countries.

"I come here primarily — always, wherever I go — as an ambassador of the Kingdom of Heaven," Graham told reporters on his arrival at Beijing airport.

"We are in the process since 1972 (when then-President Richard Nixon visited China) of building bridges between China and the United States. We hope that our visit is going to be another strand in building that bridge stronger — the understanding between our two countries, and also between the churches."

THIS IS GRAHAM'S first visit to China. His wife, Ruth, a daughter of missionaries, was born in China and lived here until she was 17. She is traveling with him.

Graham said that another purpose of the trip was to "see where my wife was born and reared, and ... to see what makes her so Chinese, because since we've been married I've been conscious of the fact that she's part Chinese."

Graham is scheduled to preach at churches in Beijing and Shanghai and to speak at a theological seminary in Nanjing. He and his wife will also visit her hometown of Huaiyin in Jiangsu province.

"There are several thousand churches open in China today, and we are looking forward to being in a few of them," Graham said.

THE GRAHAMS ARE the guests of the government-sanctioned China Christian Council, an umbrella Protestant organization headed by Episcopal Bishop Ding Guangshun, and of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries, headed by a former Chinese ambassador to the United States, Zhang Wenjin.

Ding and Zhang, along with U.S. Ambassador Winston Lord, were at the airport to greet the Grahams.

Ding, in a brief interview at the airport, said there are about 8 million Christians in China, about half Protestant and half Roman Catholic.

The practice of religion in China was severely suppressed during the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution. Since then religious life has been allowed to resume, but religious organizations are supervised by the government, and there are still some restrictions.

Ding said that Chinese policies requiring churches to be independent of foreign influence and control have contributed to the growth of Christianity in China.

Davis lands Class A champ Palmer High's star shooter

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

In getting Palmer High School's Troy Skinner to sign a national letter of intent today, Iowa Coach Tom Davis will be prepared for those basketball games that turn into Russian Roulette with the three-point shot.

Skinner, who finished second on the all-time Iowa high school scoring list with 2,497 points, has an uncanny shooting eye from downtown — his range is 23 feet. He averaged 36.9 points per game.

"He's a very good ballhandler and a tremendous outside shooter," Van Coleman, publisher of National Recruiter's Cage Letter, said. "I see him as a young man who will take a year to develop and mature as a defensive player."

COLEMAN, WHO HAS seen Skinner play a number of times, compared his style of play to Ohio State's Jay Burson and a former feisty Purdue player, Steve Reid.

"He's (Skinner) got a set jump shot, where, if you give him a second, he will put it down. I saw him hit seven straight three-pointers in a row to bring his team back from 12 down against a team in Florida," Coleman noted.

Skinner becomes Davis' fourth recruit to sign on for the 1988-89 season. During the early signing period last fall, Iowa nabbed:

• Ray Thompson, 6-foot-5 off-guard of Argo, Ill., Summit High School

• Acie Earl, a 6-11 pivot man of Moline, Ill., High School and

Former 'Mr. Indiana' eyes SMU, Evansville, Kansas State

By Eric J. Hess

and United Press International

Mark Jewell, who said March 31 he will leave Iowa after the spring semester, said Tuesday he is considering transferring to Kansas State, Southern Methodist, and Evansville.

The 6-foot-9 Lafayette, Ind., native and former "Mr. Indiana" basketball prep selection told the Iowa coaching staff he planned to leave the Hawkeye basketball program in search of more playing time.

Jewell, who averaged 1.4 points and 1.7 rebounds per game in 31 appearances during the 1987-88 season, said he has not visited any other college campuses yet, but is most interested in the three schools.

HE SAID HE will travel to Kansas State for an official recruiting trip this weekend. He also plans to make an unofficial trip to Evansville. Jewell said he knows assistant coaches at both schools.

He also expects to hear from Southern Methodist in the near future.

A decision on when he will transfer is still up in the air, he said. "After I've talked to each of them and I've found what I'm comfortable with, then I'll go there," he said.

Jewell's decision opened up another scholarship for the Iowa coaching staff. Iowa assistant coach Bruce Pearl said the staff spent last week on the recruiting trail, but he did not expect the Hawkeyes to sign anyone new when the spring signing period opened today.

Bats explode; Iowa, Schafer drop Panthers

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Jeff Schafer tossed a five-hitter and the Iowa offense turned in its biggest offensive performance in a month in overpowering Northern Iowa 13-1 Tuesday at Iowa Field.

Iowa's hitting produced 14 hits, including homers from freshmen Mike Bradley and Tim Costo.

"I was really worried about today," Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks said. "We came off a tough weekend."

Iowa, which meets conference foe Minnesota for a home doubleheader today at 1 p.m., improves its season record to 14-12 and scored the most runs since defeating Evangel 16-10 March 12.

BANKS SAID HIS team collected the hits when they were needed. But even more importantly, Schafer, the Hawkeyes' regular first baseman, turned in a strong performance in his first start of the season. "We wanted to get him ready if we needed some help this weekend," Banks said, looking toward a four-game series Saturday and Sunday against Illinois.

Schafer, who took a redshirt season last year after a slipped disc forced him to undergo back surgery, went the full nine innings against the Panthers to collect his first victory. He gave up one run on five hits while walking four and striking out six.

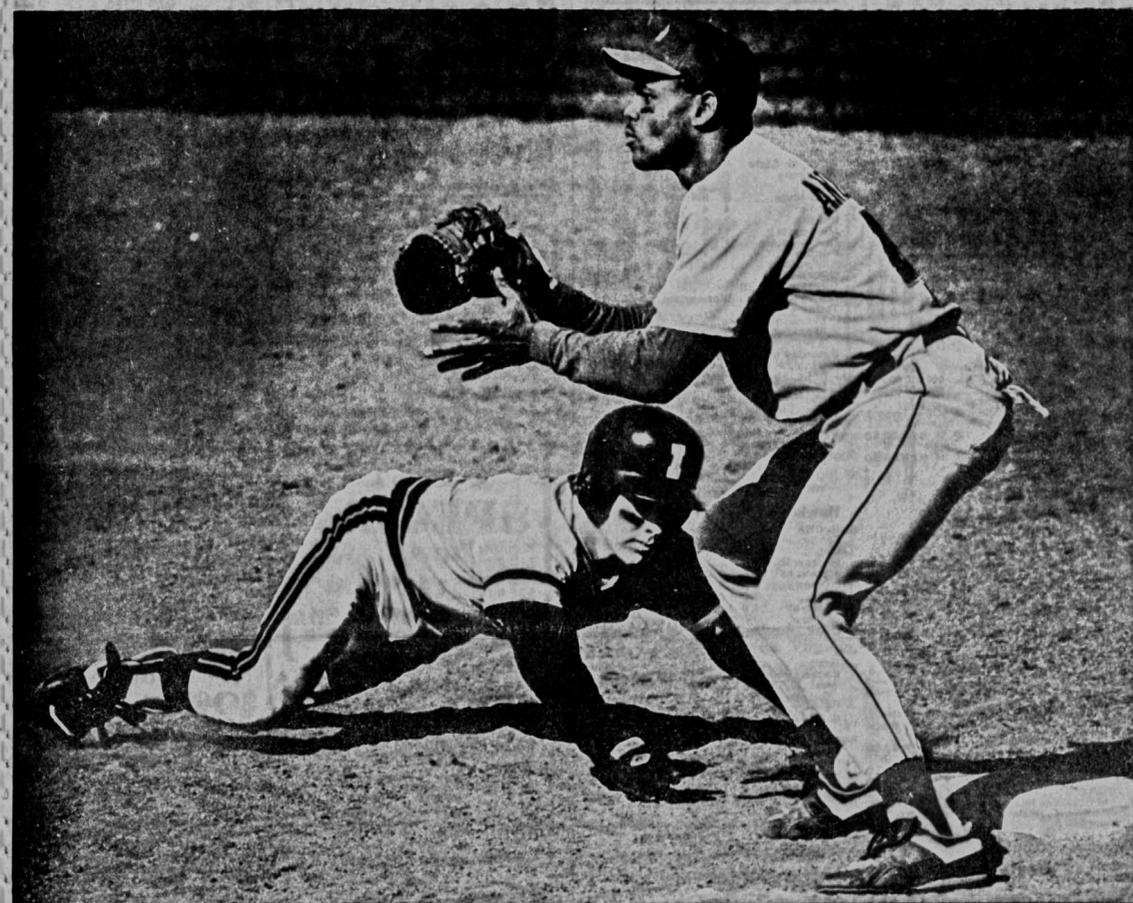

"The doctors told me I'd never play again," Schafer said. "Now my back feels strong and my arm feels good."

"I felt my last inning I was going as well as in the middle innings."

SCHAFFER HAD plenty of offensive support.

Robinson hired as Orioles manager

BALTIMORE — Cal Ripken Sr., whose club opened the season with six straight losses, was fired as Baltimore Orioles manager Tuesday and replaced by Frank Robinson, who becomes the first black to manage in the majors since 1984.

Robinson, 52, a Hall of Fame slugger and former Oriole, was also the last black to manage in the majors, being fired by San Francisco during the 1984 season. He became the first black manager in major-league history when he took

Fry prepares for spring game

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

Saturday's spring football game just might be like a fist fight for some of Hayden Fry's less experienced Hawkeyes.

"If you're going to be a good fighter, you've got to get into a few of 'em," the Iowa coach said.

Fry faces the task of replacing all-Big Ten selections Rob Houghtlin, receiver Quinn Early and offensive lineman Herb Wester, who have been lost to graduation.

Although Fry is worried about his team's lack of experience at key positions, he said avoiding harm will be his other major concern during the annual affair.

THE HAWKEYES have already suffered a rash of injuries this spring. Linebacker Brad Quast,

QB dilemma won't nag Fry this spring

The Daily Iowan

Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry said he'll bring much the same team as last year into Saturday's annual spring game at Kinnick Stadium.

There's one big difference — the Iowa quarterback slot is set.

Last year, Fry had three quarterbacks — Chuck Hartlieb, Tom Poholsky and Dan McGwire — vying for the top spot on the depth chart.

punt returner Peter Marciano and wide receivers Marc Mazzeri and Devin Harberts are among the many likely to miss Saturday's scrimmage. And former all-Big Ten lineman Bob Kratch, who missed seven games last season, is still recovering from a fractured leg.

It wasn't until the sixth game of the season that Hartlieb went to the head of the class, gaining 412 yards — 223 by air and 189 on the ground — and passing for two touchdowns against Wisconsin. He used that performance as a springboard to first-team all-Big Ten honors.

"He's just a super person," Fry said Tuesday of the senior from Woodstock, Ill. "He's a class guy, very unselfish, team-oriented and

See QBs, Page 4B

"We have had very few contact drills because we're afraid of getting people hurt," Fry said. "These guys are so big, so strong that when they have a collision something has to give."

"If they get hurt, which we don't want to happen, it's going to be in a ball game next fall rather than now or during two-a-days."

As a result, Fry said it is difficult how to gauge in practice which players will perform best in certain situations.

"WHEN THEY HAVEN'T been able to go full-speed in practice, we just don't know how they'll react (in game situations)," Fry said. "This is a very young football team at certain positions, so we need all of the game time we can get this spring."

Despite experience at quarterback, tight end, linebacker and in the defensive backfield, Fry said he knows the deficiencies of his team.

"The overall opinion I get is that

Pepperdine's Harrick will take post at UCLA

By Mike Barnes
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — UCLA ended its frustrating search for a basketball coach Tuesday, naming Jim Harrick of Pepperdine to fill the position previously rejected by Jim Valvano and Larry Brown.

Harrick, 49, a former Bruins assistant who had long expressed interest in returning as head coach, signed a four-year contract. He compiled a 167-97 record at Pepperdine and led the Waves to six postseason berths in nine years at the Malibu, Calif., school.

"For Jim Harrick, if you said the Lakers or Celtics wanted a coach, I don't think it would be any more appropriate than the opportunity to be basketball coach at UCLA," Harrick said at a campus news conference.

"I DON'T THINK I would have left my position at Pepperdine for any other position except the one here at UCLA."

Harrick replaces Walt Hazzard, who was fired March 30 after the Bruins concluded a 16-14 season by being eliminated in the opening round of the Pacific-10 Tournament.

Athletic Director Pete Dalis said Harrick received strong recommendations from North Carolina Coach Dean Smith and Louisville Coach Denny Crum, under whom Harrick worked during last year's Pan American Games trials.

Dalis then phoned Harrick at 7 a.m. Tuesday and said: "Are you ready to join me in the toughest coaching job in America?"

Pepperdine assistant Tony Fuller will accompany Harrick to UCLA. Harrick will recommend that Tom Asbury, another assistant, replace him as the Waves' head coach.

THE HIRING OF Harrick ended a frustrating 12-day period in which UCLA courted better-known coaches in an effort to revive its struggling program.

Valvano of North Carolina State and Brown, a former Bruins coach who led Kansas to the NCAA championship this year, both rejected the job. Duke's Mike Krzyzewski was also approached.

"I hope they don't look at him as a consolation prize," said guard Pooh Richardson, who with the rest of the team met with Harrick for about 20 minutes. "He's a good guy and he knows what he's doing."

Harrick said that throughout the school's negotiations with the other candidates, "I knew where I stood at all times. I appreciate that. In this business so many people play games. Never did I not know where I stood with Pete Dalis."

BROWN, AFTER apparently agreeing to a five-year contract, surprised UCLA officials with his last-minute decision to remain with the Jayhawks. The Bruins were then forced to find a quick replacement because of Wednesday's deadline for signing high school players.

"(Getting a coach) is a step in the right direction (for recruiting)," said forward Trevor Wilson.

over the Cleveland Indians in 1975. There have been only two others.

"I DON'T PROFESS to be a Superman or anything like that, but I do have ideas about the way things should be done and I'm a little stubborn about that because I believe in good sound fundamental baseball," Robinson, who was a special assistant to Orioles owner Edward Bennett Williams before becoming manager, told a Memorial Stadium news conference.

"I really have mixed emotions about this moment," Robinson added, "only because a person that I feel very close to and have a lot of confidence in as a baseball person, and as a person period and as a friend, has to lose his job for me to get a job."

Ripken pleaded guilty earlier Tuesday in Baltimore County District Court to driving while intoxicated and was sentenced to three years' probation before judgment.

LAST YEAR, Ripken's only full season as manager, the Orioles finished 67-95 and in sixth place in the seven-team American League East. The 414 winning percentage was the franchise's worst since 1955, their second season in existence. Under Ripken this year, the Orioles were outscored 43-7.

Ripken, who will remain with the club as an advisor to General Manager Roland Hemond, has spent all of his 32 years in professional baseball with the Orioles organization.

RIPKEN, 52, was stopped Feb. 3 in the suburban Baltimore town of Carney driving 44 mph in a 30 mph zone, police said. A Breathalyzer test was ordered after Ripken was unable to stand without leaning on his car.

The Orioles had said earlier the matter was personal and would not affect Ripken's status with the club.

QB Malone traded, Skinner will press Vlasic

United Press International

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Steelers Tuesday traded quarterback Mark Malone to the San Diego Chargers for an eighth-round choice in this month's NFL draft and possible future considerations, the Steelers announced.

In addition to the draft choice, Pittsburgh could receive additional compensation based on Malone's playing time with the Chargers next season, a Steelers spokesman said.

Malone, 29, was Pittsburgh's first-round draft choice in 1980 out of Arizona State and had been the club's starting quarterback the past four years.

Malone led the Steelers to the AFC championship game in 1984, but the team has not made the playoffs since. Last season, Malone was the worst-rated passer in the NFL and threw 11 interceptions and only one touchdown pass in his last seven games.

THE MOVE BY San Diego will affect former Iowa quarterback Mark Vlasic. The 6-foot-3 Vlasic from Monaca, Penn., was a fourth-round draft pick by the Chargers in 1987. Vlasic was at the Hawkeye helm for less than a season, backing up current Detroit Lions quarterback Chuck Long. He will most likely battle Malone for the Chargers' starting quarterback position.

The Chargers must replace longtime signal caller Dan Fouts, who recently retired.

Two weeks ago, Pittsburgh acquired quarterback Todd Blackledge from Kansas City. Blackledge and Bubby Brister, Malone's backup last year, are expected to contend for the starting job next season.

Malone is a native of the San Diego suburb of El Cajon, Calif.

David Moses, a 6-6 shooting guard of Gardena, Calif.

Skinner, at 6-foot, 165 pounds, will be initially tried as a point guard at Iowa.

"I'll play wherever they tell me to, whether it's the point or the wing," Skinner said from his home in Palmer, Iowa.

"Iowa's a great school — one of the best schools in the country," Skinner said. "I'm real excited and kind of nervous about going to school there. It's going to be tough — but it's a great opportunity."

Skinner was also offered a scholarship by Northern Iowa Coach Eldon Miller.

"I like Coach Miller, but I wanted the chance to play in the Big Ten," Skinner explained. "I think the Iowa system (fast-breaking offense and pressure defense) is best suited for me."

AT PALMER HIGH School, a Class A school with an enrollment of 46, Skinner, a four-year starter, led his team to three consecutive state titles. The Panthers, coached by Troy's father, Aldon the past 20 years, were 27-0 last year and have a 79-game winning streak.

As a senior, Skinner drilled 344 of 582 shots from the field for a 59.1 percentage, including 127 of 245 (51.8 percent) from the three-point zone. Iowa high-school basketball courts have the same measurements — 19' 9" — as the NCAA.

Skinner also zeroed in on 182 of 202 free throws, or 90.1 percent. Also considered an excellent passer, Skinner averaged 11.7 assists per game.

"He's got so much to learn in terms of adjusting," Aldon Skinner said. "It'll be a different world with more physical and quicker players. Troy does not have blazing quickness, but he has tremendous work habits, is a tremendous shooter and a great passer."

"With a very big heart and a great attitude, he can overcome some of his limitations and make a positive contribution," Skinner, who has won four Class A state titles at Palmer, added.

IOWA NOTES

With the transfer of Mark Jewell, Davis has one added scholarship to offer.

Ex-Iowa State player Rhodes arrested

AMES (UPI) — Ames police Tuesday charged former Iowa State basketball star Lafester Rhodes with second-degree burglary for allegedly forcing his way into his girlfriend's apartment and causing minor damage to her possessions.

Police documents show Rhodes allegedly broke down the door to the Ames apartment last weekend, rooted through the unidentified woman's closets and slashed her waterbed.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 25. If convicted, Rhodes faces a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison, a $10,000 fine or both.

Rhodes could not be reached for comment Tuesday, but Dave Starr, Iowa State sports information director, said the former cager has been told the charges "will be dropped soon." A police dispatcher contacted Tuesday night said she was unable to confirm that information.

Rhodes scored 54 points in an overtime win against Iowa this past season.

Anderson fined $500 for match penalty

EDMONTON, Alberta (UPI) — Forward Glenn Anderson of the Edmonton Oilers has been fined the maximum $500 for a match penalty incurred during a Stanley Cup playoff game April 9 against the Winnipeg Jets.

Brian O'Neill, NHL Executive Vice-President, announced the fine Tuesday, a day after a hearing was held in Toronto. Anderson was assessed a high-sticking penalty against Steve Rooney of the Jets.

"In my judgment, the match penalty was properly assessed since from all appearances Anderson attempted to injure his opponent," O'Neill said in a statement. "However, on close observation of the videotape, it is evident that there was no attempt to injure by Anderson. Nonetheless, his actions were threatening and a reckless form of intimidation."

In an unrelated incident, Edmonton police have completed an investigation on the death of George Varvis, a friend of Anderson's who died of pneumonitis caused by fluid in the lungs as the result of drowning in Anderson's pool on March 16. He was revived, but died in hospital three weeks later. The death was ruled non-criminal.

Dreams loom big for Rutgers coach

PISCATAWAY, N.J. (UPI) — Newly appointed Rutgers Coach Bob Wenzel pledged Tuesday to "dream big dreams" for his alma mater and to try and return the university to basketball prestige and a national ranking.

Wenzel, 38, a New Jersey Nets assistant this season after six years as coach at Jacksonville, replaces Craig Littlepage, who was fired March 15 after a 7-22 season that brought his three-year totals to 22-63.

Wenzel is a 1971 Rutgers graduate and two-time Scarlet Knights MVP.

Haugen keeps IBF middleweight belt

TACOMA, Wash. (UPI) — Lightweight Greg Haugen, who first thought he had lost his International Boxing Federation title to Miguel Santana, now may be forced to fight the challenger again.

Haugen retained the crown Monday night after receiving a deep cut over his left eye from an apparently unintentional head butt by Santana that stopped the bout at the end of the 11th round.

Santana was declared the champion when the fight was stopped, but 20 minutes later, in what was called a "technical decision," Haugen was declared the winner.

Haugen, 22-1-1, was making his second defense of the title he regained in February, when he scored a unanimous decision over Vinny Pazienza in Atlantic City, N.J.

Pate advances in Suntory

TOKYO (UPI) — Fifth-seed David Pate, who upset Ivan Lendl in the semifinals of last year's Suntory Japan Open, Tuesday advanced to the third round of the $752,000 tournament with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over fellow American Tim Pawsat.

In women's play, Brenda Shultz of the Netherlands upset third-seeded Swede Catarina Lindqvist, 1-6, 6-1, 6-3.

In first round matches, 15th-seeded American Scott Davis eliminated Damir Keretic of West Germany 3-6, 6-4, 6-4; Steve Shaw of Britain upset 14th-seeded Joey Rive 6-4, 6-2; and Robert Van't Hof of Lynnewood, Calif., eliminated compatriot John Ross 7-6 (7-3), 6-0.

Derrick Rostagno upset 10th-seeded Australian John Frawley 7-6 (14-12), 3-6, 6-3 and Dan Goldie ousted Roberto Saad of Argentina, 6-3, 7-5.

In the women's singles, top-seeded Soviets Natalia Zvereva and Larisa Savchenko, making their first appearances in Japan, easily advanced.

Zvereva, 16, the former No. 1 junior player, eliminated Japan's Masako Yanagi 6-0, 6-4. Savchenko turned back Umiko Okamoto 6-4, 2-6, 6-3.

Etsuko Inoue of Japan, the seventh seed, lost to Natalie Bykova of the Soviet Union, 0-6, 6-4, 6-1.

Fourth seed Patty Fendick eliminated Natalia Medvedeva of the Soviet Union 6-4, 7-6 (7-4) and No. 5 Anne Minter defeated Australian Michelle Jaggrd 6-2, 6-2.

No. 6 Stephanie Rehe defeated Maya Kidowaki of Japan 6-2, 6-2 and eighth seed Gigi Fernandez eliminated fellow American Molly Van Nostrand 7-5, 7-5.

Rains delay tennis tournament in France

NICE, France (UPI) — Heavy rains along the Riviera washed out Tuesday's eight first-round matches in a $150,000 men's Grand Prix tennis tournament, pushing them back to today.

Soviets try to break into men's tennis

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviet Union is attempting to win a spot on the men's professional tennis circuit with a proposal to hold an indoor Grand Prix tournament in Moscow in November 1989, Soviet national tennis coach Shamil Tarpishev said.

If held, it would be the first professional tennis tournament to take place in the Soviet Union.

Branham bowls to second-round lead

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — George Branham, who in 1986 became the first black to win a PBA Tour event, averaged 238 for his 16 qualifying games to take the early second-round lead in the men's bowling U.S. Open.

Branham, from San Diego, Calif., has knocked down 3,808 pins in the $500,000 event.

Suns' Davis 'doubtful' for Spurs game

Right fielder Bill Heinz, who leads the Iowa regulars with a .381 batting average, then smacked a sacrifice fly to short right-center field. First baseman Jason Jones followed with a double to center, scoring Bradley.

With the Hawkeyes leading 2-0, Bradley came up in the third inning and ripped a 1-0 pitch over the left-field fence. Chris Hatcher's RBI double and a two-run single by Jones followed later in the inning.

Northern Iowa, 4-23, scored its lone run in the fifth as Tovey Goynes singled to center, scoring former Iowa outfielder Mark Lumpa.

Iowa's Costo couldn't keep his bat quiet all game. He towered his second homer of the season, a two-run shot over the 375-foot mark in left.

After Keith Noreen singled home a run in the sixth, the Hawkeyes went into the eighth leading 9-1. That still wasn't the end of the Iowa offense.

Panther pitcher Jeremiah Longwrecker walked Hatcher with the bases loaded and Jones followed with a two-run single. Costo then finished off the scoring with an RBI single.

IOWA NOTES

• Schafer will return to first base for Iowa's doubleheader with Minnesota. Jones, who had five RBIs against the Panther, returns to the Iowa bench with a .429 batting average in eight games this season.

• Iowa's probable starters are Allen Rath (3-0 and 2.25 ERA) and Mark Boland (2-4 and 5.17 ERA). Minnesota is expected to send Denny Nagle (2-2 and 5.72 ERA) and Darren Knight (0-2 and 9.64 ERA).

• Coach John Anderson and his Golden Gophers were 8-13 overall and 1-3 in the Big Ten before playing a doubleheader against Wisconsin-Stout Tuesday. The Hawkeyes defeated Minnesota earlier this season 8-7 in the Metrodome in Minneapolis during a game not counted in the conference standings.

• Minnesota centerfielder J.T. Bruett leads the team with a .449 batting average and nine stolen bases. Second baseman Brian Rabe has a .405 batting average.

coachable."

HARTLIEB WILL lead a team his coach describes as "inexperienced." But Fry said he thinks Hartlieb is equal to the task.

"He's very poised," said Fry. "He controls his emotions very well."

"He's so much like (former Hawkeye and present Detroit Lions quarterback) Chuck Long. You could search America over and not find the same mold — they're identical — Long and Hartlieb."

Fry didn't leave Iowa's No. 2 quarterback out of his sweeping praise.

"You have to throw Tom Poholsky in the same group," Fry said. "He's exactly like Hartlieb, just a class, class individual."

With McGwire sitting out the '88 season after transferring to San Diego State, Fry has Poholsky and redshirt freshman Matt Rodgers backing up Hartlieb. Freshmen Brian Honnold and Dave Colbert are Nos. 4 and 5, respectively.

The game, slated for a 1:05 p.m. kickoff, will feature 12-minute quarters instead of the regulation 15 and is free to the public.

Fry

we're lacking in speed and quickness," he said. "We do have strength. We do have size. We do have some very fine football players at key positions. But we still have some real shaky areas we'd like to upgrade."

The offense will be bolstered by first-team all-Big Ten selections quarterback Chuck Hartlieb and tight end Marv Cook, along with fullback David Hudson and tailback Tony Stewart.

FRY SAID HE'S concerned about filling Houghtlin's shoes at placekicker. Jeff Skillet is the prime candidate to fill the big hole left by the departure of Iowa's all-time scoring leader.

"It's a great battle," Fry said. "Right now Jeff Skillet is ahead of (George) Murphy, from a kickoff standpoint. He gets the ball higher than any kicker we've ever had. But once again he's inconsistent. And so is Murphy."

The Hawkeyes will start the year with a generally young offensive line, led by veterans Bob Kratch and Bill Anderson.

IOWA NOTES

• Evan "The Oven" Simpson update: Oven, a defensive lineman, was reported two weeks ago to be down to 311 pounds from 328. Tuesday Fry said "He may be closer to 300 now and he could help us this fall."

Alligator shops for carpet

United Press International

COCOA, Fla. — A 9-foot alligator browsed briefly through a carpet warehouse, topping a lineoleum rack and piled rug remnants before deputy sheriffs lassoed and relocated the beast to a rural river area.

The 275-pound gator also sent two customers fleeing from the Wells Carpet Distributors warehouse when he crawled through an open rear door late Monday, deputies said.

"They took off and I don't blame them," carpet salesman Mike Gardner said. "After getting a noose around his neck, that gator did a lot of fussing and thrashing. He was very unfriendly."

Gardner used the reptilian intrusion to play a prank on a fellow salesman.

"I was up in the front of the store, and Mike came up with a very straight face and said, 'You've got a customer in the back,'" salesman Bob Padgett said.

"I walked back, and there was the gator," he said. "I thought it was a trick or something. But as I got closer he looked pretty real, especially when he stood up."

Brevard County Deputy Gene Hope, a marine and agricultural officer, led the 15-minute gator roundup, tying the critter with rope and binding its eyes with masking tape. Deputy Eric Kennard handled the tail.

Hope said the gator was between 10 and 15 years old.

Band plays new pieces

The UI Symphony Band under the direction of Myron Welch will present a free concert at 8 tonight in Hancher Auditorium. The program will consist of three pieces, all written in the 1980s. With pianist Gail Culberson, the band will perform Passages, composed and conducted by Timothy Mahr. A doctoral student in band conducting at the UI, Mahr is currently on leave from his position as director of bands at the University of Minnesota-Duluth.

Passages was commissioned by St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn., in memory of Marc Priest, a St. Olaf band student and a friend of Mahr's who died in 1980, shortly before entering his senior year of college.

Other works by Mahr, including Argentum and O Brother Man, have recently been performed at the UI. He has received commissions from the UI, the Nebraska State Bandmasters Association and the Knight-Wood Ensemble of Milwaukee. He has also had works performed at Lincoln Center in New York and at national and international music conventions.

Culberson has been the symphony band's pianist for three years and has accompanied more than 85 recitals at the UI. A native of Marshalltown, Iowa, she received a bachelor of music degree in 1987 and is a graduate assistant in accompanying.

Welch will conduct the band in John Heins' Overture for Band and David Maslanka's A Child's Garden of Dreams. The band has played other works by Maslanka, including the premiere of his Symphony No. 2 in 1985. A Child's Garden of Dreams is a 40-minute work in five movements, inspired by the writings of psychologist Carl Jung. It calls for a full symphonic band, plus piano, harp, organ and six extra percussionists.

The symphony band is the UI's select wind, brass and percussion ensemble. The band presents many full-length programs on- and off-campus during the year, playing the standard band repertoire as well as contemporary works and transcriptions.

Myron Welch has been director of bands at the UI since 1980. In addition to conducting the symphony band, Welch teaches courses in instrumental methods and conducting and is coordinator of the Iowa Honor Band, the Iowa Band Directors Conference and the All-State Music Camp.

New videos are reviewed

The Daily Iowan

There are more new films on cassette in the Iowa City video stores to collect and trade with your friends. Since none of these films made it into the theaters around these parts, you can assume that most of them are of a slightly lower quality than the Big Names. But occasionally one of them will have some spark, however small, of entertainment value. Others heartily deserve their anonymity:

Slam Dance — The last thing the world needs right now is another "Miami Vice in L.A." pseudo-noir hip thriller, but this one isn't as bad as it may seem. Tom "Rock Me Amadeus" Hulce has slipped a bit from the Oscar nomination scene, but he's still a likeable, watchable actor, and there's a weird, humorous tone to the film that comes close to nullifying its problems. Slam Dance doesn't spend a lot of time hanging out on Reality Boulevard, and it's too slick and shallow to be really disturbing, but it is entertaining in a B-Grade, MTV sort of way.

Penn and Teller's Cruel Tricks for Dear Friends — The con's on us — this isn't a tape of a Penn and Teller performance, but rather a practical video-joke kit. It includes seven gags requiring you to interact with the videotape on television. The gimmick is that we're supposed to purchase the tape and use it to bedazzle our pals out of their cash. However, you'd have to run with some pretty dim bulbs to expect any of P & T's tricks to really work. But the ideas behind the shams are clever, and Penn Jillette's usual bullying bravado is entertaining most of the time.

A Prayer for the Dying — The premise sounds promising: Mickey Rourke as an ex-IRA terrorist trying to leave his violent past behind and Bulldog Bob Hoskins as the British priest who harbors him. But if every film fulfilled its cinematic potential, the Oscars would last five days. Prayer disappointingly falls back on every organized crime-melodrama cliché it can dredge up. Rourke's Irish accent sounds like John Lennon with a head cold, and his acting never gets around the brogue. Hoskins is fine as usual and Sammi Davis (Mona Lisa, Hope and Glory) shows promise, but it's all moot when wallowed in the film's awful script and lifeless direction.

China Girl — Romeo and Juliet meets The Year of the Dragon in this modernized urban rapping of the Bard and Iggy Pop. This time Juliet's Chinese, Romeo's Italian and neither of their respective street gangs care much for the budding romance. Plenty of slick, wet streets and rumbles under the moonlight, but not much else. The flat, monotone acting is so awful you find yourself looking forward to the anticipated dual deaths. China Girl falls neatly into a cinematic limbo between really stupid and really bad.

PERINATAL OUTREACH EDUCATION COORDINATOR

This newly established position within Mayo Medical Center provides an opportunity to utilize and draw upon a broad spectrum of abilities and interests. The Perinatal Outreach Education Coordinator will be responsible, along with the Perinatologist and Neonatologist, for the assessment of clinical skills and educational needs of nurses working in OB and newborn nurseries within the region served by the perinatal center. Upon assessing needs, this individual will plan curricula, teach, evaluate, collect and utilize data, provide patient follow-up information, write reports, and maintain informative working relationships with community personnel and outreach team members.

In order to effectively carry out this role, one must possess a knowledge of regionalization of perinatal care, knowledge and skills in teaching and principles of learning, clinical knowledge of perinatal nursing care, and the ability to collect and analyze data.

- Requirements include:
- Minnesota RN license
 - MSN with a clinical component reflecting neonatal, perinatal, or maternal/infant care
 - Clinical nursing experience of four or more years
 - Certification within perinatal specialty (optional)
 - Two or more years of clinical nursing experience in a Level III perinatal unit (NICU and/or Labor and Delivery)

Interested candidates are asked to submit resumes by May 1 to: Cynthia Scott Assistant Director Personnel/ Nursing Recruitment Rochester Methodist Hospital 201 West Center Street Rochester, MN 55902 MAYO MEDICAL CENTER An Equal Opportunity Employer
