House approves trade bill

Legislation is intended to open markets

By Mary Beth Franklin
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House, ignoring President Ronald Reagan's veto threats, overwhelmingly approved a trade reform bill Thursday intended to open international markets and stop foreign trade abuses.

Lawmakers approved the package — including a controversial advance notice requirement for business layoffs and plant shut-downs — on a 312-107 vote and sent it to the Senate for final action.

Only two Democrats, Reps. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Robert Mrazek of New York voted against the bill. Sixty-eight Republicans voted for it.

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said the Senate could begin debating the trade measure today, but it probably would not come to a vote until next week.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which led the fight against the plant closing provision, said passage of the bill "will deal a painful blow to American industry... and represents an unprecedented government intrusion into the most fundamental decision-making process of employers."

THE WHITE HOUSE declined comment, but before the vote, Reagan told the World Affairs Council in Springfield, Mass., he wanted a trade bill — but not with the plant closing provision, supported by organized labor.

"If I do have to veto it, I will immediately call on Congress to adopt a trade bill, but without those things added on," Reagan said.

Before casting the final vote, the House rejected a Republican plan to strip off the plant closing provision, 253-167.

"This provision imposes a straitjacket around small businesses as well as large ones, inhibiting them from making the decisions that can save jobs and create new ones," House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois said.

But the House Democratic leadership, frustrated after weeks of unproductive negotiations with the administration, kept their members in line with the warning that sending the bill to a conference committee could damage it.

"THE COUNTRY deserves better than to have this bill die in the crossfire of competing interest groups," House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., said in support of the trade bill.

Gore departs race, retains 405 delegates

By Karen Lee Scrivo
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sen. Albert Gore, the youthful Tennessean who entered the presidential race hoping to be the Democrats' Southern savior, suspended his campaign Thursday pledging to help the party regain the White House this year.

By suspending his bid, and not quitting altogether, Gore can keep his winnings of more than 405 delegates to the Democratic National Convention. The freshman senator said that action will allow him have a voice at the Atlanta meeting in July.

Gore was accompanied at his Capitol Hill news conference by his wife, Tipper, campaign staff members and congressional colleagues. His departure from the Democratic field that once numbered eight leaves only front-running Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and civil rights leader Jesse Jackson.

He said he will remember a lesson from the campaign trail: "From Dukakis, I learned that after eight years of Reagan and Bush, competence is charisma in the eyes of Americans hungry for leadership."

Tennessee Sen. Al Gore hugs his wife, Tipper, Thursday in Washington, D.C., after announcing his withdrawal from the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

GORE WAS throwing a farewell party Thursday night for his staff and supporters at a Washington nightclub called The Fifth Column.

He celebrated a birthday March 31 and he noted ruefully Thursday, "I was doing great until I turned 40."

Last September, eight Democrats were in the running for the White House; preceding the Tennessean to the wings were Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, former Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, who also suspended campaigning to keep his 169 convention delegates.

Jackson, campaigning Thursday in Williamsport, Pa., said Simon and Gore should have quit the race: "When the race is over and you stop running, you should declare that."

"Senator Gore brought a number of important ideas to the debate for the Democratic nomination and I'm sure he will continue to make strong contributions to the Democratic Party and the future of this country," a Dukakis campaign spokesman said.

THE SON AND namesake of a former senator from Tennessee, Gore entered the race last June fixing himself as the Southern moderate the Democratic Party needed to take back the White House — particularly since better-known Democrats who fit that profile, Sen. Sam Nunn of

Gunmen flee with hostages in Mexico

United Press International

LOS MOCHIS, Mexico — Six gunmen who held more than 40 hostages in a bank overnight in a robbery attempt that left five people dead traded their captives for four Red Cross workers Thursday, boarded an armored car provided by police and sped off to the cheers of a crowd.

"We're free, we're free," some of the hostages shouted as they left the bank.

Before the departure, one gunman warned authorities he had dynamite strapped to his body and "the entire armored car would blow up" if police attacked.

Authorities in Los Mochis, 400 miles south of the Arizona border in the Mexican state of Sinaloa, said the gunmen released all of the hostages in exchange for the Red Cross workers and the escape car. They raced off to an undisclosed destination.

Thousands of townspeople in the agricultural center pushed through police lines before the gunmen emerged from the bank.

"Let them go free, let them go free," the crowd chanted to police, referring to the gunmen.

THEY CHEERED the gunmen and warned them not to leave the bank.

"Don't go. It's a trap. The police are waiting outside to kill you," one bystander shouted. It was an example of dozens of warnings.

Earlier, one of the gunmen said all six gunmen were poor peasants.

"We are peasants and work in the countryside," he said. "We needed the money for the family because of the (nation's) economic crisis."

"We have nothing to lose," another gunman said.

But a police official said some were identified and had criminal records.

Room assignment system may be replaced

By Joseph Euchner
The Daily Iowan

Spinning one of three huge triangular flip files, UI Programming Assistant Jackie Omahen of the UI Facilities Planning Office finds a place listing for a UI classroom. She checks the reserved time, then flicks a small cellophane tag into place, pinning down a daily reservation for a class in UI Chemistry-Botany Building next fall.

Manual record-keeping may seem out of place in a computer-laden institution like the UI, but Omahen, whose office also is equipped with an array of small computers, has relied on the filing system long enough to respect its simplicity and effectiveness in keeping office staff nine months ahead of the academic schedule.

"The system goes back a long way, and was designed by our current director, Dick Gibson, about 25 years ago," Omahen said. "It allows us to see at a glance which rooms are occupied and which are vacant."

But after a quarter-century of service, this system of assigning classes to classrooms may be replaced by a computer. Omahen said she hopes a program will be installed soon to help assign facilities more quickly and surely.

SHE SAID AN automated system would eliminate some of the repetitive tasks the manual system requires.

"With a computer, we could look at a number of variables at the same time and make quick comparisons and conflict checks," she said. "It would eliminate a lot of the busy work."

Omahen, who holds a UI degree in management science, said she has no fear of being replaced by the automated system.

"I'll be the one who works the kinks out of the new system," she said. "Some adjustment will be necessary after it's finally installed."

UI Campus Facilities Planning Director Richard Gibson said he is somewhat skeptical about a computerized system.

"The real beauty of the current system is that it places all of the pertinent information at your fingertips. It's a simple, but a good, mechanical system," he said.

But Gibson said a new computerized system would eliminate the potential for human error.

"IT DOESN'T HAPPEN very often, but sometimes mistakes creep in, and when they do, it can be a real mess if two classes show

Regents approve calendar

The state Board of Regents approved the proposed academic calendar for the 1989-90 school year and the 1989 and 1990 summer sessions at its meeting in Vinton, Iowa, on Thursday.

The calendar contains 73 class days each semester or 146 days for the academic year — the same number of days contained in the calendar for the 1988-89 school year.

According to the calendar, the first semester in the 1989-90 school year will begin on Aug. 24 and end on Dec. 16. The second semester will begin on Jan. 10 and end on May 5.

The board also approved stricter standards for non-native speakers who apply to the UI College of Liberal Arts at the meeting.

The new standards would raise the minimum Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) score for non-native applicants from 480 to 530, bringing those minimum scores in line with those of the UI College of Engineering, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The range of TOEFL scores where additional testing is required prior to the beginning of academic work will also be raised, as will the score at which no required testing or restrictions would be applied.

In addition, the board approved the renovation of the UI president's residence. The renovation will include improvements in mechanical, electrical and plumbing systems and repair of exterior brickwork at the residence, located at 102 Church St.

The cost of the project is expected to be between $200,000 and $300,000 and will be funded from gifts to the UI Foundation.

The board also approved the establishment of the Iowa Statewide Organ Tissue Procurement Organization, which will coordinate organ and tissue transplant operations currently being conducted at UI Hospitals and Clinics, Mercy Hospital Medical Center of Des Moines and Des Moines Methodist Medical Center.

Local bank elects officers

Robert Sierk has been elected president and chief operating officer of First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., and First Financial Bancorporation, the holding company which owns the bank.

Clark Houghton, formerly president of the bank and holding company, has been elected chairman of the board and chief executive officer of both.

Regents approve director

The state Board of Regents Wednesday approved appointment of Mark Warner as director of student financial aid for the UI. He has served as acting director since January, when John E. Moore retired.

The regents also approved the appointments of Kim K. Merker as director of the UI Center for the Book and Milton Exline as director of material services at UI Hospitals.

Warner's appointment is effective May 1. After receiving bachelor's and master's degrees from the UI, Warner joined the Office of Student Financial Aid in 1972, moving up to associate director in 1980.

Merker's appointment is for a five-year term beginning July 1. He is credited with developing the idea for the Center for the Book and was a leading force in combining the activities which comprise it.

A graduate of Illinois College, Merker operated the Stone Wall Press from 1959 to 1974. He joined the UI in 1967 as a lecturer and director of Windhover press. He was promoted to assistant professor in 1971 and associate professor in 1974.

Exline's appointment is effective immediately. He had served as assistant director of material services for UI Hospitals since 1978.

Previously he was director of central service and admitting manager with the University of Nebraska Hospitals and Clinics. He received a bachelor's degree in business administration from the University of Nebraska.

Supervisors approve new Johnson County engineer

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

An Elkader, Iowa, man received approval from the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Thursday to become the new Johnson County engineer.

Clayton County Engineer Glen Meisner will start at the position May 9. Meisner replaces Gene Bane, who resigned the post in January for health reasons, according to Supervisor Betty Ockenfels.

His main responsibility in the position will be the maintenance and construction of Johnson County secondary roads, Meisner said.

Meisner has held an identical position in Clayton County since 1980. He also served as Clayton County assistant engineer for eight years.

He graduated from Iowa State University in 1977 with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering and is a registered land surveyor in Iowa as well as a registered civil engineer.

Meisner said he had been involved in negotiations with the county for the position since March 31. His salary will be $44,000 per year.

SUPERVISOR BETTY Ockenfels said Meisner negotiated for a two-year contract.

"We had not come across that in the past, but it really seemed to make sense for him because of the cost of moving his family, relocating, etc.," she said.

Meisner said he anticipates a challenge in moving from a rural area to a more urban one.

"I'm excited about the challenge that I will have in Iowa City, going from a rural to an urban area such as Johnson County, and when I say urban I realize there are also some rural areas in Johnson County," he said.

Ockenfels said Meisner was the best-qualified applicant for the position.

"We have State Department requirements we must meet, as it's a very important position," she said. "I think he'll be a very good employee and do a good job for Johnson County."

Meisner said he will not move his family from Elkader until the school year is over, near the end of June.

Branstad rages about negative Iowa story in Minnesota paper

By John Peterson
United Press International

DES MOINES — Gov. Terry Branstad added fuel to the simmering feud between Minnesota and Iowa this week by chewing out a Minneapolis Tribune reporter who wrote about economic and social upheaval in Iowa's small towns.

In a letter to the editor published in the Minnesota newspaper Sunday, the Republican governor charged the March 27 story was inaccurate and misleading and accused reporter Larry Batson of fabricating facts.

"Spend your doom and gloom on the Iron Range or elsewhere in Minnesota, we'll do all right here in Iowa," was the governor's parting blast.

Batson's story, headlined "Iowa's Withering Dreams," painted a bleak picture of an idyllic rural lifestyle forever changed by a farm depression. The reporter interviewed farmers, bankers, small town business people and economists in developing the theme that Iowa's classic lifestyle of self-sufficient small towns passed down from generation to generation was severely dented in the farm crisis.

THE STORY was accompanied by a photograph of rotting hog carcasses in the yard of an abandoned Tama County farm.

Batson said he is not surprised Branstad took issue with the story, but he said accusations that he fabricated sections are silly.

"I did not draw conclusions, I reported facts," Batson said. Branstad fumed the reporter went out of his way to use negative statistics and inaccurately portrayed the number of abandoned farms.

"Mr. Batson wove every grim statistic he could find into his nightmare and then dreamt up a few extra for good measure," Branstad wrote.

The Iowa governor used the letter to quote his own figures showing Iowa's economy firmly on the rebound, and delivered another slap by noting some of Minnesota's firms are moving to Iowa.

THE IOWA Economic Development Commission also responded to the story by sending an essay on Iowa's virtues for use in the Tribune's "counterpoint" section. Spokesman Bob Boyd said development officials complained to Tribune editors about what they called "trashy journalism."

Minnesota and Iowa residents have been trading jokes about each other for years, but Boyd said the Batson story was a vicious attack.

"This is no joke to us, it was very unfunny, it was a very destructive piece. This was unnecessary between neighboring states in the same boat," he said. "The story wasn't very balanced, it was all negative."

Batson defended the story, noting the governor confused some of his article with a caption that ran with the bleak-looking picture.

A UI student was charged with harassment Tuesday after he reportedly made harassing phone calls, according to Campus Security reports.

UI freshman John J. Argo, N316 Hillcrest Residence Hall, was arrested by Campus Security officers at about 1 p.m. Tuesday for making the calls to unidentified individuals, according to the report.

Theft: A car stereo valued at approximately $300 was reported stolen Thursday from a vehicle belonging to an Iowa City man, according to police reports.

John Smith, 916B Oakcrest St., reported at about 10:35 a.m. Thursday that sometime Wednesday or Thursday morning his Alpine car stereo was stolen from his Nissan truck as it was parked at his home, according to the report.

Approximately $20 damage was done to the truck during the theft, according to the report.

Theft: A jacket and contents inside valued at more than $200 belonging to an Iowa City woman were reported stolen Thursday from the Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., according to police reports.

Sandy Vazquez, 910 W. Benton St., reported that between 12:55 a.m. and 1:10 a.m. Thursday morning, her brown Berman's leather jacket, driver's license, bank card and keys were stolen from the Fieldhouse, according to the report.

Report: Unidentified individuals reportedly were throwing firecrackers or firing a gun outside the window of a car Wednesday as they drove in the area of Taft Speedway and North Dubuque Street, according to police reports.

No injuries were reported in the incident, and police were unable to locate the vehicle, according to the report.

Courts

By Traci Auble

A Cedar Rapids man was released from the Johnson County Jail Thursday after being charged with assault causing injury when he was involved in a domestic assault, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Clifford N. Wright, 32, allegedly stopped the victim's vehicle on Highway 6 at 20th Avenue on Wednesday. The victim said Wright became very aggressive trying to get keys from her vehicle and in the process he bit her right arm, according to court records.

The victim had several cuts and scratches on her arms as a result of the altercation. A preliminary hearing in the case is set for May 5, according to court records.

An Iowa City woman was charged with forgery Thursday after she allegedly took a check without permission in order to receive money, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Danielle M. Johnston, 19, 1415 E. Bloomington St., allegedly took a signed blank personal check at a residence without permission, according to court records.

Johnston allegedly filled out the blank check so it appeared to be made to her for the amount of $223. She later signed the check over to a friend and received the money in cash, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for May 5.

BSU brings 'School Daze' to town by popular demand

By Diane Hawkins
Special to The Daily Iowan

Because of its controversial look at black colleges, light- vs. dark-skinned blacks and especially black Greeks, Spike Lee Joint's School Daze is making its Iowa City premiere due to popular demand, according to members of the UI Black Student Union.

"The idea was brought up in a BSU meeting to bring School Daze for black students on campus," said UI junior and BSU Senator Melinda Brand. "The movie deals with the separation of black against black and asks to have blacks re-evaluate themselves concerning attitudes on color prejudice and class separation," Brand said.

"The movie's message would dismiss some of the stereotypes that some whites have about black culture and would educate both white and black classes," Brand added.

According to UI sophomore and BSU member Kathy Wordlaw, School Daze serves as an important reminder to blacks on campus.

"IT WAS IMPORTANT to bring it here because blacks need to be responsible for each other regardless of social class, complexion, Greek or non-Greek affiliation, and regardless of whether one is African or Afro-American," Wordlaw said. Astro Theater Manager Emmitt Frazer cited BSU's involvement as the main reason School Daze arrived in Iowa City relatively quickly.

"We were telling them at Columbia Pictures that Black Student Union wanted to view the movie and it had to be before finals. By being insistent we were able to acquire it," Frazer said.

UI Coordinator of Campus Programs and Student Activities Deborah Parsons feels the movie "pokes fun at real issues in our society. Spike Lee does a spoof on black culture, using the black college system, black Greek system and light- vs. dark-skinned issues to play with in the film," Parsons added.

Parsons emphasized School Daze's social relevance to the black Greek system in the film. "The film is topical to the black Greeks. On this particular campus, the black Greek system is in need of progressive development concerning identity and heritage," Parsons said.

ACCORDING TO Parsons, one-tenth of the black students on the UI campus are active in black Greek organizations.

Lee's movie generates both negative and positive responses from UI black Greek and non-Greek students.

"Spike Lee gives a totally negative image of black Greeks," said UI senior Larise Baker, a member of Delta Sigma Theta sorority. "Lee did not show the positive side of how we donate money and service projects like educational development, international political involvement, and mental and physical health (for those) like teen unwed mothers," said Baker.

"Black Greek organizations do get involved in apartheid and campus activities, which is not shown in the movie," Baker added.

UI sophomore Darryl Lockett, a member of Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, feels the movie will intimidate some students about pledging black Greek organizations.

"THOSE WHO ARE on the borderline of whether or not to pledge who have not made up their minds won't know how much (of the film) is real or not real," Lockett said.

But UI sophomore and Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity member Willie Watson feels the movie may make blacks more aware.

"The movie tried to bring about an awakening. We as blacks need to stop racism of black against black. Instead, we should channel our energies on positive ways to uplift the race," Watson said.

School Daze begins tonight at the Astro Theater, 212 E. Washington St.

Researcher Allen gives lecture on advantages of 'laser pencil'

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

The advantage of the laser pencil in the processing of microelectronics and optics was the topic of a lecture by UI laser researcher Susan Allen Thursday night.

Allen, who came to the UI from the University of Southern California to join the staff of the new UI Center for Laser Science and Engineering, is a member of the UI Departments of Chemistry and Electrical and Computer Engineering.

In a presentation titled "The Laser Pencil: Maskless Processing of Microelectronics and Optics," Allen used slides of diagrams and photographs to detail segments of her laser research.

Allen said she used the term "laser pencil" as an "attention-grabber," but said the pencil analogy was exact.

"We really do, in my laboratory, use the laser as a pencil," Allen said. "You can use the laser to write patterns, as a one-dimensional processor, one line at a time."

Because use of the laser is extremely flexible in this process, Allen said it was possible to quickly change the desired image or to write at a moment's notice.

Allen said the advantages of the laser include speed, color selectivity, area selectivity, coherence and eliminating possible distortions by contact.

Fourteen people attended Allen's lecture in the Union Lucas-Dodge Room.

The lecture was sponsored by Sigma Xi, the Scientific Research Society.

Hess heads student senate

This president is guided by 'responsibility of individual'

By Paul Dunt
The Daily Iowan

Kenya may seem a world away from the UI, but for UI Student Senate President Melinda Hess, this African nation nurtured many of her present hopes and dreams.

Born in Stanford, Conn., Hess was a member of a large family that moved often during her early childhood. After living in Illinois and then Wisconsin, Hess's father, who was an Iowa quarterback and a student in the UI Writers' Workshop in the 1950s, gained a position working for the United Nations. The family headed for Africa.

Hess was 11 years old at the time, but she remembers it as an incredible experience and one that had a major effect on her life.

"It is hard to describe how it changes your perspective. It expands horizons politically and socially to be more accepting of differences and alternatives in people's lives," she said.

After a year, the family returned to Iowa where Hess has lived since.

HESS SAID SHE remembers life as a child in a large family — she has three sisters and one brother — as "a lot of fun." She said she wants a large family herself. Hess recalled the influence her parents have had on her life and feels it was that, coupled with life in Kenya, that shaped her world.

"Both of my parents' interest in intellectual things helped me from an early age to be attuned to that kind of understanding," she said. "Their emphasis on responsibility of the individual to the community and society at large encouraged me to get involved in politics."

Hess said her parents were active in politics. Both were strong supporters of South Dakota Sen. George McGovern — the Democratic presidential candidate in 1972 — and her father was fascinated with the Kennedys, she said.

But before coming to the UI in 1983 from West Des Moines, Hess had no previous experience in student politics. That has changed in the past five years. As an undergraduate, Hess joined the UI Unified Program, designed for highly motivated freshmen and sophomores who want to increase their grade point averages.

"I DEVELOPED a more serious emphasis than other undergraduates — that's my impression," she said of the program.

Now a UI senior, Hess is majoring in anthropology with a minor in women's studies. She currently is completing an honors thesis titled, "Symbolic figures in the Mexican-Chicano Culture," which examines feminist symbolic figures.

In the spring of 1986, Hess was elected with a record number of votes as a member of the UI Student Senate, and became treasurer that fall. In the spring of 1987 she became vice-president of her senate party — the Allied Student Advocacy Party — and after the resignation of senate President Joe Hansen in January, Hess became president.

Hess said her political involvement has provided several opportunities.

When Democratic presidential candidate Jesse Jackson visited the UI before February's Iowa Caucuses, it was Hess who introduced him at some of the meetings. She describes herself as a "left-wing Democrat" and said meeting Jackson was a great opportunity.

"IT WAS AN educational experience to follow him around and see what his day was like," she said. Commenting on Jackson's campaign since the Caucuses, Hess said she thinks his message is still getting through.

"People are paying more attention to the issues. I'm one of the more left Democrats and feminists, so for me, Jackson was the choice."

Her role as senate president is mainly administrative, and Hess said she often feels frustrated behind a desk. She described recently talking to a mother with four children who wants to attend the UI but is having trouble with funding. Hess said she had no choice but to tell the woman to wait and seek her later for advice.

"In situations like that you feel powerless," she said. "There are things I'd like to do that I don't really have control over."

HESS MAINTAINS that her political views have not been softened by her time on the student senate.

"I find myself to be more to the left than most people involved in the student senate," she said. When she joined senate, Hess said that her intention was to inject a different discourse.

"When I first ran, it was really with the intent to reverse what I saw as the current conservative trend of the student senate," she said.

But Hess has had to change her approach.

"I've had to become not necessarily more accepting of opposing viewpoints, but more patient to others' side of the story. It has not so much changed my politics as changed my role."

Hess said she heavily supports daycare facilities at the UI, and would also like more senate-sponsored speakers on campus.

IN ADDITION to her role on student senate, Hess has been the only student on the UI presidential search committee since May. It is a position she takes very seriously, she said, adding she has learned a lot about the UI but feels there is still much to be achieved.

"As a student, I feel there needs to be more communication with the students," she said. "Ultimately the institution is to exist for the students. My role on the search committee is a definite step in the right direction."

She said the new UI president will have to tackle anxiety within the UI community.

"With slim budgets, people get anxious and downtrodden," she said. "The new president has to be very good to bring different groups together to provide a more positive, energetic voice for the institution."

Hess said she currently is not planning a future in politics, but she said her plans may change.

"I THINK I'D tend to lose my cool a little more than is acceptable," she said. "Politics is a very interesting integration process and it is very difficult to be the candidate taking the heat from all sides."

But she said that at some point she may get more involved.

During her free time, Hess said, she enjoys film, particularly its feminist aspects. She is taking a class in jazz dance and plans to add ballet to her accomplishments.

Hess also attends various cultural events for UI students, like Palestinian and Malaysian nights.

Hess said when her term as president expires, she may go to law school or graduate school emphasizing in women's studies, with the intention of teaching. She said she is unsure of her long-term goals, but she feels strongly about education.

"We don't have enough people going in as educators," she said. "I'm thinking there are more and more advantages leaning towards graduate school and a future as a teacher."

RUNNING INJURIES

Millions of people are now running regularly for recreation and fitness. Many are following a well structured, progressive program that allows the body to gradually adapt to the additional stress. Unfortunately many others don't know how to get started on a good program and start running without preparing their bodies first. The result is often minor or major running injury for those people.

If you have questions about training, running or athletic injuries, or have suffered an injury, consult

Ousted Soviet party boss makes comeback

By Gary Lee
Washington Post

Boris Yeltsin

MOSCOW — Boris Yeltsin has re-emerged publicly in an official Soviet newspaper interview, signaling that he and other proponents of Mikhail Gorbachev's reforms, who suffered a major defeat when the maverick Moscow party boss was ousted last fall, are regaining their foothold.

In an interview published in the official Soviet newspaper Moscow News, Yeltsin is unrepentant about the sensational speech he gave to the Communist Party Central Committee in October, which led to his dramatic demotion to deputy head of a construction conglomerate.

"I spoke candidly and said what I felt and what I thought was right," Yeltsin said. He quoted "someone famous" as saying, "Everybody must think independently so that the light doesn't go out suddenly on everyone."

Yeltsin, alluding to the continuing battle over Gorbachev's campaign for greater democratization, exhorted its proponents to push onward. "I belong to those who are ready to tough it out," he said, "and not to be afraid to take risks."

THE PUBLICATION of Yeltsin's interview, the first published since his expulsion as party leader in Moscow and nonvoting member of the ruling Politburo, is being interpreted here as a signal that he is making something of a political comeback after his dramatic fall from grace.

But the Yeltsin interview, conducted by the former editor of the official newspaper Moscow Pravda, was published only in the German-language edition of Moscow News, prepared for sale in West Germany, indicating that Yeltsin's political position is still disputed within the Communist Party leadership. It appeared as Gorbachev and his allies are bracing for a major battle against opponents of his reforms.

GORBACHEV RECENTLY mounted a major victory over Politburo member Yegor Ligachev, a leading conservative, who authorized an article critical of Gorbachev's reforms to be published in the official newspaper Soyetskaya Rossiya. The newspaper later apologized, after the article was denounced in a major editorial by the Communist Party newspaper Pravda.

In his unexpected speech before the Central Committee in October, Yeltsin is said to have attacked several members of the Kremlin leadership — including Ligachev — for braking the pace of the reforms.

Treaty unveiled at arms limitation meeting

By Don Oberdorfer
Gary Lee
Washington Post

MOSCOW — Soviet negotiators unveiled a long-awaited draft treaty on space arms to Secretary of State George Shultz on Thursday in the first of two days of meetings aimed at limiting strategic nuclear arsenals.

The presentation of the Soviet draft on one of the most difficult current arms issues was described by a U.S. participant as a positive result of lengthy sessions of Shultz and his party with Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and other officials.

Shultz took time out Thursday to meet for 50 minutes with about two dozen Jews and others who have applied to emigrate and had their applications denied.

The arms discussion took place in a city swept with speculation about impending major changes in the Soviet political leadership that could strengthen the hand of Communist Party General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev before his meeting with President Ronald Reagan here next month.

THE SEEMING inability of arms negotiators to make major strides on space-defense issues involving Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative has loomed as a roadblock to a closely related accord intended to slash offensive nuclear arms by up to 50 percent.

Shevardnadze agreed during discussions with Shultz in Washington two months ago to come up with such a draft, but until Thursday they had not done so, and aides to Shultz complained that there had been "no movement" and little serious discussion of space defense.

When the U.S. delegation at the Geneva talks presented its space-defense treaty draft in January, Soviet negotiators objected strongly to it.

U.S. OFFICIALS declined to characterize the substance of the Soviet draft treaty. At issue are the conditions under which both sides would continue abiding by the 1972

U.S.-Soviet anti-ballistic missile treaty and the degree to which new anti-missile defense projects, such as Reagan's SDI, would be allowed to proceed.

After a nearly all-day discussion of space issues by senior arms control aides to Shultz and Shevardnadze, the two sides agreed to continue their work in the forum of the Geneva arms talks, a U.S. official said.

Ex-hostages go home, get hero's welcome

By Najj Al Qanni
United Press International

KUWAIT — Released hostages from a Kuwait Airways jumbo jet received an unprecedented hero's welcome on their return to Kuwait from Algiers Thursday after 16 days on a flight of terror spanning three countries and 7,600 miles.

Sheikh Jaber Al-Ahmad Al-Sabah, the emir of Kuwait; Sheikh Saad Al-Abdullah Al-Sabah, the crown prince and prime minister; and other members of the government joined thousands of Kuwaitis and expatriates to give the freed prisoners a red carpet welcome at Kuwait's international airport.

A special Kuwait Airways jetliner carrying the former captives touched down in Kuwait at 10.15 p.m. (2:15 p.m. CST).

Three members of the ruling Al-Sabah family were the first to disembark. The crew followed and then the remaining passengers.

Security was tight at the airport where military bands played national music, and scores of costumed girls sang Arab folk songs, carried bouquets for the 31 released hostages and waved Kuwaiti flags.

SHEEP WERE slaughtered in a traditional Arab blessing ceremony.

Emotional scenes unfolded as the hostages were reunited with their families and friends after their odyssey of terror.

The Boeing 747 was seized April 5 while on a flight from Bangkok, Thailand, to Kuwait with 112 people aboard. The last 31 hostages were released early Wednesday in Algiers after the plane had previously made stops in Iran and then in Cyprus, where two passengers were killed.

As the hostages returned home, the United States weighed the possibility of filing criminal charges against the hijackers who blended into teeming Algiers following the release.

In Algiers, diplomats said the vanished hijackers of Kuwait Airways flight 422 most likely would end up in Moslem West Beirut in Lebanon, but U.S. officials want the air pirates punished and suspect one of them may have killed an American during a 1985 hijacking.

Iran accuses U.S. of killing sailors in Persian Gulf battle

United Press International

MANAMA, Bahrain — Iran's navy commander accused U.S. forces Thursday of firing on and killing Iranian sailors who had jumped from their missile-damaged warship during the U.S.-Iranian naval battles in the Persian Gulf Monday.

Rear Admiral Mohammad Hussein Malekzadegan told reporters aboard an Iranian frigate damaged in the naval clash in the strategic waterway that U.S. forces fired "five or six missiles" at the Iranian frigate Joshan, the state-run Iranian news agency said.

"The U.S. Navy later opened fire on the personnel of the frigate who had jumped into the water, martyring (killing) a number of them," Malekzadegan was quoted as saying aboard the Iranian frigate Sabalan.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman, Lt. Col. Keith Schneider, said, "I don't think that this type of thing warrants a reaction."

Malekzadegan has said 15 Iranian sailors died and 29 were wounded in the "uneven" naval engagement with U.S. forces.

Captive U.S. Marine may stand trial

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The group claiming to hold kidnapped U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins said Thursday the U.N. observation team commander will stand trial before an Islamic court on espionage charges.

The statement, which came three days after Higgins was reported to have been killed, was delivered to West Beirut media outlets signed by a group calling itself the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth and accompanied by a black-and-white photograph of Higgins.

Higgins, kidnapped in February, appeared tired in the picture and did not look into the camera.

The Arabic-language statement said the interrogation of Higgins had been completed and declared, "he is going to be transferred today (Thursday) to the oppressed court for trial."

Israel celebrates 40th birthday on alert

JERUSALEM — Israel Thursday celebrated its 40th birthday with parades, picnics, dancing and an elaborate military show — plus a massive security alert to forestall any attempt by Palestinians to retaliate for last weekend's assassination of senior Palestine Liberation Organization leader Khalil Wazir.

Israeli troops sealed off the territories for the third consecutive day, confining nearly a half-million Palestinians to their homes in 23 refugee camps, towns and villages and others to their communities in the rest of the areas.

The army barred Palestinians from crossing into Israel and banned journalists from most of the territories. A general strike called by Palestinian activists to protest Wazir's killing kept shops closed and the streets mostly empty.

Dukakis signs universal health care bill

BOSTON — Gov. Michael Dukakis, calling for national health care reform, signed into law Thursday a bill making Massachusetts the first state to guarantee medical insurance to all its citizens.

Thousands of jubilant supporters flocked to the Statehouse steps to watch the liberal three-term governor and Democratic presidential front-runner sign legislation critics warn could end the economic boom that propelled him into the national spotlight.

The law, carrying a price tag of between $600 million and $1 billion, requires most businesses to provide group medical insurance plans for their employees by 1992 or pay an unemployment tax surcharge that will finance a low-cost health plan administered by a new state agency.

TV program leads to arrest of fugitive

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — A California fugitive involved in the 1987 killing of his ex-wife's father was arrested Thursday by deputy sheriffs acting on a tip from a citizen who spotted the suspect on the television program "America's Most Wanted."

The nationally syndicated TV show, which began airing Feb. 7, now has generated tips that have led to the capture of nine fugitives shown on the program, its producers said. Another fugitive surrendered after his picture appeared on the show, they said.

After three days of surveillance, Curtis Ray Morgan, 34, was arrested in a parking lot near St. Petersburg's City Lights bar, where the anonymous tipster said he had been seen, Pinellas County Sheriff's Sgt. Cheryl Seaman said.

Labor leader urges changes in child care

WASHINGTON — Labor Secretary Ann McLaughlin warned against a movement toward nationalized child care Thursday and called on businesses, unions, schools and community groups to provide parents with a variety of choices.

McLaughlin, addressing a luncheon at the National Press Club, said the result of nationalized child care in other countries has been excessive taxes and little, if any, flexibility in the ways children are provided care.

Instead, McLaughlin urged businesses, unions, schools and community groups to revise the way they operate to handle the childcare issue and to better meet changing needs of society.

New ethnic gangsters begin to emerge

WASHINGTON — State law enforcement officials said Thursday that Hispanic, Asian, Jamaican and newly immigrated Sicilian gangs are moving into an underworld power vacuum created by the weakening of the old-line Mafia.

Organized crime experts from New Jersey and New York told a Senate subcommittee the longtime dominance of La Cosa Nostra is crumbling due to the successful prosecution of many of its leaders and a general breakdown of discipline among younger "yuppie" mobsters.

Authorities now must turn their attention to "emerging" ethnic gangs before they grow into a national cancer as sinister and powerful as the Mafia in its heyday, they said.

FCC penalizes 2 dial-a-porn services

By Pam Murphy
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Federal Communications Commission, in its first penalties against dial-a-porn services, fined two companies $600,000 each Thursday, charging they did nothing to keep children from hearing "the ultimate in sleaze."

The FCC commission voted unanimously to send "notices of apparent liability" to two California companies, Audio Enterprises Inc.

of Mill Valley and Intercambio Inc. of San Jose, ordering them to pay fines of $600,000 each.

Audio Enterprises, which is now out of service, used an American Telephone & Telegraph Co. 900 telephone number, and Intercambio's messages came over Pacific Bell's 976 mass announcement service, FCC officials said.

The FCC action came a day after the Senate approved and sent to the White House legislation to ban all dial-a-porn telephone service. The measure, included in an education bill, was approved overwhelmingly by the House Tuesday.

THE COMMISSION charged Audio Enterprises and Intercambio did nothing to prevent access to their obscene telephone messages, as required by the 1983 Communications Act and FCC rules, which prohibits the interstate transmission of obscene messages by telephone for commercial purposes to children or non-consenting adults.

The FCC approves of three methods of restricting access to recorded telephone messages through pre-payment by credit card, use of an access code and message scrambling.

"By this action today, we take a very important step in initiating the process of enforcing that law," Commission Chairman Dennis Patrick said at the hearing.

"The fact of the matter is that children today can easily access obscene materials. Unfortunately, it is often as near as their telephone," he said.

Reagan urges Senate to ratify INF pact

United Press International

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — President Ronald Reagan warned the Senate Thursday it would "put a strain on the summit" if he had to face Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow next month without ratification of the INF Treaty.

Reagan indicated that progress on the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks will likely be the highlight of the May 29-June 2 summit in Moscow. He stressed that U.S. tactics of public candor about "the depth of our disagreements" and the full range of problems with the Soviet Union have "borne fruit."

"Negotiations are underway between our two governments on an unparalleled number of issues," Reagan said. "The (Intermediate Nuclear Forces) Treaty is reality and now the Senate should give its consent to ratification."

In a question-and-answer session after the speech, Reagan said: "If anyone had predicted just a few years ago that by the end of this decade a treaty would be signed eliminating a whole class of nuclear weapons, that discussions would be moving along toward 50 percent reduction in all strategic nuclear arms and that the Soviets had set a date certain for pulling out of Afghanistan, that individual would have faced more than a little skepticism. But that — on the eve of the fourth summit — is exactly where we are," Reagan told the council.

The Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty, the first pact to eliminate an entire class of weapons, was signed with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Washington Dec. 8, 1987.

Body of baby found in garbage can

United Press International

NEW YORK — The body of a 2-month-old Brooklyn boy whose mother said he was snatched from his stroller was found dead by police Thursday in a garbage can, and officials said they no longer considered the case a kidnapping.

"We are disregarding the kidnapping angle," said Sgt. Peter Sweeney, a police spokesman. "We are questioning members of the family."

Police acting on a tip found the body of Stephen Gentile in a garbage can about two blocks from his home in Brooklyn late Thursday afternoon, Sweeney said.

It was not immediately known how the baby died or how long he was in the garbage can.

The boy's mother, Lucrezia Gentile, had told police the boy was kidnapped.

Gentile said a woman telephoned her at 9:10 a.m. CST Wednesday to say that her 7-year-old son was ill at school and had to be picked up.

Gentile said she put her son in a stroller and was walking to St. Ephrem School on a quiet street in broad daylight when a dark-colored sedan carrying two men pulled up beside her, police said.

The passenger left the car and asked Gentile for directions and while she was talking, the driver leaped from the sedan and held the mother's hands behind her back, police said.

The passenger then snatched the baby out of the stroller and the two kidnappers fled with the boy in the car, she told police.

Food aid sent to rebels in spite of objections

United Press International

WASHINGTON — The State Department has approved delivery of 60,000 pounds of food to the Nicaraguan Contras despite the objections of the Marxist-led government in Managua, officials said Thursday.

Six trucks loaded with beans, rice, bananas, and other food rolled to Contra camps in Honduras Tuesday to restock their dwindling supplies, despite the absence of a formal agreement between the guerrillas and the Sandinista government on the delivery system.

"It is getting desperate" for the Contras and their dependents, an official of the Agency for International Development told reporters.

In Managua, the government said it will be recalling its ambassador to Washington for "consultations" to protest the new U.S. aid to the Contras.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman told United Press International that Ambassador Carlos Tunnerman would leave Washington immediately.

"The ambassador is returning for consultations with President Daniel Ortega over the situation of U.S. aid being sent to the Contras in Honduras," the spokesman said.

ORTEGA SAID Wednesday the act violated a nine-point cease-fire accord signed March 23 in the southern border post of Sapoa, because the agreement stipulates that any aid must be sent by a "neutral organization only."

The State Department agency is to oversee the distribution of more than $17 million in food, clothing, medicine, and other humanitarian supplies to the guerrillas during the proposed cease-fire with the Sandinista government the rebels had been fighting since 1981.

The Contras and Sandinistas agreed to a truce last month and have held negotiations to end the civil war and open the Nicaraguan political system to democratic reforms. But the negotiators have not reached agreement on establishing cease-fire zones within Nicaragua that the guerrillas were to have settled in by April 15.

PUBLIC NOTIFICATION FOR LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

To the Users of the University of Iowa Water Utilities System:

The Safe Drinking Water Act passed by Congress in 1986 requires all water systems to issue a public notice regarding the possible lead contamination of drinking water. The water provided by this system is currently below the standard for lead contamination and is safe to drink.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women.

Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be the highest:

- if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
- if the home is less than five years old, or
- if you have soft water or acidic water, or
- if water sits in the pipes for several hours

Lead piping and lead solder are two of the most common sources of lead in domestic drinking water, though the severity of the problem may depend on the age of the piping. The only way to be sure about water's lead content is to have the water tested. University Water Utilities has water test results and can tell you how to reduce the risk from lead contamination. Using water from the cold-water tap and flushing your system for a few minutes before each use, for example, can help lower exposure to lead where piping is in infrequent use. Other steps are also helpful, including refraining from use of hot water for cooking or drinking, replacing lead pipes and service connections and using certain types of water treatment.

As your provider of water, the following actions are being taken to assure you of the highest possible quality of drinking water:

- University Water Utilities, in our continuous Water Treatment Plant process, adjusts the pH level to deliver a non-corrosive drinking water that does not dissolve measurable amounts of lead.
- University Water Utilities does not use lead pipe and has discontinued the use of lead solder in our water distribution and plumbing systems.
- University Water Utilities monitors the level of lead in the University water system. Our most recent samples have all tested at less than 0.010 ppm for lead (the limit of test detection), meeting all current standards set by EPA.

For additional information regarding lead contamination of drinking water contact Kenneth E. Lloyd, P.E., Water Utilities Manager or Chris L. Catlin, Water Utilities Engineer, at 335-5168.

Gore suspends campaign; Pennsylvania approaches

By Anne Saker
United Press International

PHILADELPHIA — The 1988 Democratic presidential field that once numbered eight candidates slimmed down Thursday to two hopefuls, and they moved on to Pennsylvania to start their spring-time sprint to the party's nomination.

Polls in the Keystone State, which has its primary next Tuesday, show front-runner Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis with a healthy lead. A statewide poll released Thursday night gave Dukakis a 31-point edge over Jackson, 55 percent to 24 percent.

The poll of 400 Democratic voters was conducted April 20, the day after the New York primary. It had a 5 percent margin of error.

But support in those cities is strong for Jackson, and a reflection of that following came in a significant endorsement by The Philadelphia Daily News.

IN AN EDITORIAL Thursday, the newspaper said the civil rights leader "would bring back into the process the citizens Ronald Reagan has excluded and reverse the changes Reagan has brought to our government. That alone makes his nomination important."

Jackson started his day in Williamsport, Pa., where he delivered an anti-drug speech to high-school students and called on Gore to help unify the party.

In his campaign, Gore, who had his 40th birthday March 31, attempted to reach out to the aging baby boom generation, drawing on the name and legacy of President John Kennedy. At his news conference in Washington, he joked, "I was doing great until I turned 40."

Gore got into the race intent on winning big in the mostly Southern Super Tuesday contests March 8. He won six states then but never took another contest.

HIS LAST stand was in New York's primary Tuesday and he finished a very distant third.

Thursday, Gore said keeping his delegates was not a spoiler's tactic for the convention and insisted his larger goal is a Democratic victory in November.

"I want no part of a stop-Jackson or stop-Dukakis movement," he said. "The only man I want to stop is George Bush."

By suspending his campaign, Gore also keeps his winnings of 405.55 delegates to the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta

July 18-21. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois also suspended campaigning — a tactic that allows him to keep his 169 convention delegates.

Dukakis, the acknowledged leader by virtue of his huge New York primary victory Tuesday, has 914 delegate votes. Jackson, who finished second in New York, had 770.

BEFORE HITTING the road again, Dukakis staged an old-fashioned political rally at the Massachusetts Statehouse to coincide with his signing of a universal health care access bill.

With 116 delegates at stake, Pennsylvania — like Ohio May 3 and California and New Jersey June 7 — is among the states with the biggest delegate prizes.

Jackson has no delegates running in four of Pennsylvania's 23 congressional districts and in 11 others he has only partial slates. Dukakis, however, has full delegate slates in all 23 districts.

Jackson suggested that Gore and Simon, having been beaten in the political process, should have dropped out of the race entirely and released their delegates, some of which would, under Democratic Party rules, go to Jackson.

Shuttle booster gets 'perfect' rating in early NASA inspections

By William Harwood
United Press International

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Technicians climbed inside the sooty throat of a burned-out shuttle booster Thursday for a crucial inspection that indicated the giant rocket sailed through a test firing Wednesday in "perfect" condition.

Detailed analysis remains to be carried out, but NASA officials were "ecstatic" over the results of preliminary inspections, which indicated NASA cleared a giant hurdle on the road to resuming shuttle flights this summer.

"End to end, it looks like what you'd call at this time a perfect test," said Royce Mitchell, manager of the booster project at NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala. "We've still got to take it apart, but everything we've seen so far looks good."

The 126-foot rocket, the third in a series of five full-scale firings required before the first post-Challenger launch in August, was fired at 12:00 p.m. CST Wednesday at Morton Thiokol Inc.'s rocket plant in the high Utah desert north of Salt Lake City.

FOR THE FIRST time in the solid-fuel rocket industry, deliberate flaws were built into a full-scale rocket.

John Thomas, manager of NASA's booster redesign project, said data reviewed overnight shows a flaw in an O-ring joint used to attach the rocket's nozzle had no adverse effect on the booster's performance. The effect of the other flaw will not be known until the rocket is disassembled.

The exercise marked the first such booster test since a Dec. 23 firing in which part of a booster nozzle system "boot ring" broke apart, forcing NASA to delay the next flight from June 2 to early August.

To recover from the boot ring failure, NASA turned to an alternate boot ring design that worked properly during a test-firing in August.

Long-term solutions

In this decade of farm foreclosures and plant shutdowns, with all the talk about dying towns and declining population, many Iowans are concerned about what lies ahead. (That is, those folks who will be around long enough to find out.) Many are asking: "What's the key to economic development?" Somehow all the debate in Des Moines about riverboat gambling and promoting tourism in "the Heartland" isn't too reassuring.

It seems the state leaders who ought to have some vision of the future can't see beyond the next exciting version of the Iowa Lotto. The just-ended session of the Legislature surely did not produce much of substance or promise, beyond a new lottery-funded subsidy for community improvement. At least our elected officials do a fair job of spending Lotto proceeds.

Forward-looking Iowans are wondering if the answer to the state's economic problems lies in attempting to bribe companies that consider locating here. Maybe bringing jobs to Iowa involves more than offering tax incentives and putting ads in the Wall Street Journal. Perhaps this narrow-minded approach — entice corporations, bring jobs — overlooks something.

Like improving what we've already got — quality of life. People value well-maintained parks and highways, good schools and hospitals, clean air and water, low crime and low hassle, communities that support cultural events and preservation of heritage. People want to live in places that offer the good life, and jobs often go where people enjoy living.

Likewise, a lot can be done to encourage homegrown enterprises. Through strong education programs and a support network for new economic projects, more young Iowans will look at Iowa as a place with a promising future. At the same time, more can be done to improve the processing and exporting of Corn State products.

People are tired of hearing about the decline and fall of Iowa — and are fed up with "leaders" without a vision. The problems are complex, and the answers are by no means obvious. But undoubtedly, the "key" to a better Iowa includes the appreciation and improvement of what's already here.

Freedom for all

Iowans United in Faith, a conservative religious group, is showing its misunderstanding of the U.S. Constitution and its protection of religious freedom by urging Iowa public school boards to bring back prayer for high-school graduation ceremonies. Members are urging this despite a federal court ruling banning prayers from high-school commencement ceremonies.

Headed by Robert Dopf, an assistant U.S. attorney for the Justice Department, the group has offered to provide lawyers at no charge to any public school that has an invocation and benediction at commencement. It has justified its actions by arguing that prayers are consistent with the historical and contemporary belief that religion is a positive societal influence.

But the constitutional protection of freedom of religion is not just to ensure that people have the ability to practice any religion which they choose. It is also to ensure that those who choose not to participate in any religion are protected.

There are many who choose not to practice any religion at all. These people are in the minority and perhaps the Iowans United in Faith do not consider their interests to be important. But it is precisely these people whose rights must be preserved because they are the minority.

The worth of constitutional protections does not lie in the protection of the majority — the majority usually will be able to protect itself. The true test of our Constitution is its ability to preserve the interests and rights of minority groups — minority's rights are the most difficult to maintain.

Every possible position must be protected equally and if religious groups compel prayers to be reinstated in the public schools they are denying rights and destroying the real worth of the constitutional right to freedom of religion.

Doing what's right

A state legislature finally has stood up to the national gun lobby and passed a law that would ban the manufacture and sale of cheap handguns known as "Saturday night specials."

The statute enacted by the Maryland General Assembly also would prohibit plastic guns that cannot be detected by airport metal detectors.

The landmark legislation was fiercely opposed by the National Rifle Association, chief lobby for firearms manufacturers and gun owner groups.

At one point, the NRA threatened to pull its 1992 convention out of Baltimore unless the lawmakers abandoned the effort to crack down on handguns. . . .

Passage of the bill by wide margins in both legislative houses demonstrates that citizens and officials concerned over the terrible handgun toll in America — about 10,000 deaths each year — can successfully buck the gun lobby.

Other state legislatures should follow Maryland's example.

Bush carries on the tradition

After his smashing victory in the New York primary, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis seemed the odds-on favorite for the Democratic presidential nomination. Rev. Jesse Jackson carried New York City, but was unable to generate much support in the upstate area which has a more conservative electorate, contains fewer minority group members and prefers free verse to obvious rhymes. Even though Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore was endorsed by the Big Apple's small, ugly Mayor Ed Koch, he was unable to cash in on Unedited Ed's popularity among Jewish voters. He was, however, able to attract the votes of another major group of Koch supporters, Chihuahua fanciers, who find the voluble mayor's looks, voice and personality quite appealing, and even oddly familiar.

Yes, in those heady days, Dukakis and his retinue must have thought they had it in the bag, that it was time to make plans to confront George Bush head on. If only they knew what was to come next. . . .

APRIL 21, 1988 — Brash, youthful Al Gore, with his lovely wife "Tipper" standing by his side at the odd angle that earned her her nickname, brushed a manly tear from his ruggedly handsome face as he withdrew from the race for the presidency. "There were too many things we couldn't overcome," said Gore, "our lack of organization in northern states, our laggardly fund raising, the fact that nobody north of Chattanooga gave a flying hoo-ha about me or what I had to say, all combined to deep-six my keister right proper.

But it wasn't a total loss. I take away with me a new appreciation for the culinary diversity of this great metropolis. The rich variety of ethnic dishes I have enjoyed all over this city, everywhere I went, over and over, day in and day out, morning, noon, and night, relentlessly, even though it didn't get me any votes, are memories I will cherish forever. A particular favorite, and one I intend to continue to enjoy, is bagels with cream cheese and smoked salmon. Especially the smoked salmon, boy is that stuff tasty. And even though it didn't help me at the polls, even if in the end it didn't matter whose lox was being Gore's, it was worth it. So thank you, good-bye, and go to hell, you yankee sumbitches."

APRIL 25, 1988 — An ebulliently smug George Bush, greeting a group of joyously yawning supporters, once again lent his support to Attorney General Ed Meese. Defending Meese against charges of ethical lapses, moral failings, influence peddling, a lackadaisical attitude toward white-collar crime and callous indifference toward the underprivileged, Bush compared the attorney general's questionable behavior with Democratic challenger Michael Dukakis' posture.

"The people in the other party go on and on about Wedtech, about the Iraqi pipeline, about slimy grifters using the name of the nation's chief law enforcement officer to get the upper hand in shady business deals," honked The Great Reiterator, "and they even have the gall to say that this is just part of a larger pattern, that dozens of people who have loyally served this great president have either been indicted, convicted or forced to leave government service under a cloud. All that may be true, but it is also true that this administration came to office with a mandate to get government off people's backs, and I think this includes people inside as well as outside government. We could have forced a code of ethics down the throats of the people who shared Ronald Reagan's vision of a renewed America, we could have demanded that they act within the law, we could have insisted that they not use their service in government to enrich themselves.

"BUT WHEN ALL was said and done, these people above all stood by a great man and a great dream. And when I ask myself what is more important, a flood of criminality that erases people's trust in government, or loyalty to a popular figurehead whose intellectual shallowness is second only to his obliviousness of what is going on around him, I think you know what George Bush's answer is.

"Now compare Ed Meese's loyalty and moral decrepitude to Mike Dukakis' posture. Have you ever seen a guy slump like that? Talk about round-shouldered, where'd he grow up, in a cave? Are those his eyebrows or his pet bat? Maybe he has a bad back, bad enough that he can't concentrate, bad enough that he has to drink or take drugs or both to stand the pain. How'd he hurt that back? During some kind of monkey business, I'll bet, while he was up to no good. Think about it."

Dukakis knew he was in trouble when the Cleveland Plain Dealer ran a banner headline the next day reading "Bush Lashes Quasimodo." And that was only the beginning. The horror continues. . . .

No limit to press constraints

Freedom of speech is inextricably entwined with the freedom of the press. As soon as a country attempts to silence its media the sad knell harboring impeachment and removal of liberty has already rung. South Africa immediately comes to mind in this context. The restrictions P.W. "Pik" Botha placed on foreign reporting under the position of the state of emergency were soon echoed as political pressure came to bear on government objectors.

But manacles on the press are being locked far closer to home. For a country that purports to be the cradle of democracy, the present British government's relationship with the media appears increasingly draconian. In 1987, The Guardian newspaper described the state of the media in the United Kingdom as "the year the boot went in." The plethora of injunctions and verbal attacks from governmental ministers bears witness to a year that left many British journalists seriously concerned over their freedom to report and investigate.

UNLIKE THE United States, the United Kingdom has no Bill of Rights. Instead, what exists is effectively a Bill of Wrongs, an armed blunderbuss with a catch-all muzzle. The Official Secrets Act is one weapon the Conservative government is particularly fond of wielding. Under present law it is still forbidden to reveal the blend of tea drunk in a Cabinet meeting or the type of toilet paper used in the Ministry of Defense.

The "Spycatcher" episode is the most widely known government restriction upon the press, with its international implications. When Peter Wright, an ex-MI5 officer, decided to publish his memoirs of life in the Secret Service, the Conservative government moved heaven and earth to stop publication of the book, claiming that it would be a breach of confidence and contrary to the Official Secrets Act. Nothing could be further from the truth. The croaky memoirs of an old man grumbling over his "meager" pension were hardly a threat to national security and his revelations about attempts to destabilize the Wilson government were something the public should have been made aware of.

By Paul Dunt

THE BOOK IS still officially "banned" from being printed in the United Kingdom, but it can be brought into the country (although mine was seized illegally at Heathrow Airport). One store in London avoided the ban by selling packets of chewing gum for the princely sum of (what translates to) about $20, with which you received a free copy of "Spycatcher." Three newspapers remain restricted from printing any part of Wright's book.

Investigative Journalist of the Year Duncan Campbell, speaking at City University in London, told student journalists that "the battle for freedom of speech and of the press (in the United Kingdom) is really on." Campbell has cause to be concerned. While structuring a six-part series for the British Broadcasting Corp. entitled "Secret Society" he discovered a government order for the building of a new spy satellite, "Zircon." The government is required to inform Parliament and the Public Accounts Committee of any defense spending above a determined level, one the Zircon project far exceeded.

CATCHING WIND of Campbell's work, Special Branch officers, under the instruction of the government, raided the British Broadcasting Corp.'s offices in Scotland to seize the tapes. Moving to Campbell's flat, they booted down the door and removed further documentation. The government remained adamant that the tapes were a threat to national security. Campbell took copies of the tapes to the House of Commons to show members of Parliament, but Thatcher slapped a further ban on showing the program even there.

In the height of its excitement, however, the government had omitted to place an injunction on The New Statesman, for which Campbell also worked, and the magazine ran the entire story, much to Thatcher's chagrin. The crux of Campbell's work was made perfectly clear in the magazine — government deception of Parliament. "Secret Society" remains officially banned and Campbell fears for the future of investigative journalism in Britain. "I am part of a dying breed," he said.

THE LIST GOES on. In December the Radio Four — part of the BBC — was banned from broadcasting a program entitled "My Country Right or Wrong?" The government acted to prevent a "breach of confidentiality" by present and former members of the security services who had taken part in the program. Peter Kellner, a journalist on The Independent, concluded: "We are in spying distance of a state of affairs where nobody will be able to publish or broadcast anything about the security services without risking contempt of court."

In March of this year, Channel Four approached the growing concern by planning a television program entitled "The Government and the Media." Characteristically, government ministers refused to take part in the program and it was renamed "How Free to Speak?" — almost a rhetorical question under the circumstances.

In addition, it is becoming increasingly clear that journalists are being placed under surveillance by police and security services when investigating stories. Andrew Jennings, a BBC journalist investigating allegations of corruption at Scotland Yard, was put under surveillance for two months, and several other journalists claim they are being phone "tapped" by the security services.

To the outside world Britain appears to be the bastion of press freedom. Naked women appear daily in our tabloids, many of which survive on a diet of sexist and racist material. There have been few government attempts to curb them. The reason remains quite simple — most are staunch supporters of the Conservative government and command a massive readership. Meanwhile, the government concentrates its attentions on those papers intent on maintaining investigative and insightful reporting. It is a dangerous and sinister trend.

up for the same room," Gibson said. Gibson said some things are just better simple. "I once spent a ridiculous amount of time trying to put a calendar on my personal computer, but it never worked as well as a cheap one you can tack on the wall," Gibson said. "I think there may be a little of that in this project. Sometimes I feel we are inclined to computerize too many things." Omahen said difficulties in assigning classrooms usually arise from circumstances the Facilities Planning Office cannot anticipate, such as disabled access for certain classrooms and students' proximity to all class buildings. "There's no way we can anticipate where handicapped enrollment will be," Omahen said. "When there is an access problem, we just try our best to assign or change rooms without any barriers."

IN MAKING assignments, Omahen said priority is given to instructors and classes within the buildings their departments are housed. "We try to honor requests for proximity and special equipment as much as possible," Omahen said, "but often it takes a week or two before classrooms are approved or rejected." Omahen said the headache of assigning rooms starts with the UI Registrar's Office, where initial versions of class schedules are sent to departmental offices for proposed changes. The list is then sent to Omahen, who proofreads it and sends it back to departmental offices for a final proofreading. From there, the list goes back to the Registrar's Office where the copy is checked and proofed before going to the printer. Any changes are submitted prior to a "copy call" when the listing goes to the printer for student schedules. Omahen said there is not a lot of annual change.

"ABOUT 60 PERCENT of the classes in the manual do not change time or location at all. There are always a lot of these leftovers, so checking our history tells us a lot," Omahen said. "If a room was used for a certain class the year before, and we had no complaints, it's likely they will be assigned the same room again. If it's not broken, we don't fix it," Omahen said.

Rostenkowski, charged with steering the bill through the House, said, "If this conference report fails, the real winners will be those countries who want the United States to remain a paper tiger on trade issues." The trade bill is intended to open world markets to American products, crack down on foreign trade abuses, streamline export controls, promote American exports and expand assistance for industries and workers hurt by imports. It is the result of years of work, culminating one of the largest joint conference committees in congressional history. Nearly 200 lawmakers have worked since January to craft a compromise trade bill from the differing versions passed by the House and Senate last year.

tions of the Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, making it more difficult to prosecute American businessmen who pay foreign officials to gain business abroad. The 14-inch thick conference report, rushed to the House for a vote before it could be printed, consisted of more than 2,000 pages of legislative language and explanations bound together with rubber bands. In addition to focusing on immediate remedies to America's huge trade deficit and grant the administration broad authority to participate in a new round of world trade negotiations, the bill includes some long-term solutions such as allocating more than $750 million for education and training programs to improve future competitiveness of American workers. Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, said the trade bill "provides rules and the tools and the schools" to make the U.S. competitive again. IT ALSO covers issues like the plant closing language, a repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax on petroleum products, tougher enforcement of pesticide residues on imported fruits and vegetables, and sanctions against Japan's Toshiba Corp. in retaliation for the illegal sale of high-technology equipment to the Soviet Union by one of its subsidiaries. Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., chairman of a Ways and Means trade subcommittee, said, "This bill does some real fine things for the country" and warned if it is not approved "nothing will happen to improve the trade situation in the world." But Rep. Hal Daub, R-Neb., speaking on behalf of his farm state, expressed concern the bill's call for mandatory retaliation against foreign trade abuses would "paint a big red bull's eye on farmers' heads" — resulting in lost agriculture exports. GEPHARDT, THE former presidential candidate, who voted against the trade measure, said, "I come to the conclusion that we have an important assignment in trade legislation this bill does not fulfill and that is how to open markets abroad so that we can better sell our products." He said his proposal, which the House-Senate conference committee dropped because of administration opposition, "had some enforcement that was needed that I still think is needed."

ing in a program to reform apartheid, the system of racial separation in the country. "This beautiful country, with its wealth of diversity, deserves less negative propaganda and actions," Botha said. "South Africa deserves more patriotism." He appealed to South Africans to "remain calm, restore balance and recognize each other's rights. If we wish to live together peacefully... the time has come to reflect on what unites us instead of emphasizing what divides us." The president said that he continued to support the creation of a national advisory council in which blacks and whites could negotiate and propose a new constitution. But it would have to be approved by Parliament, where the country's 26 million blacks have no seat. That proposal has been rejected by most prominent black leaders, including moderate Zulu chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi, who says that the government must first release black nationalist leaders, such as Nelson Mandela, from jail and lift restrictions on anti-apartheid organizations. WHILE BOTHA said he thought that black leaders supported the principle of a national council, he added that some had asked that it be named "Indaba," a Zulu word meaning "meeting." "We are of the opinion that it (the Zulu name) deserves serious consideration," he added. Helen Suzman, of the liberal white Progressive Federal Party, criticized the president's proposals as vague and noted that Botha gave no timetable for implementing them. And Koos van der Merwe, a Conservative Party member of Parliament, accused Botha of another step in abandoning the Afrikaner people, the descendants of Dutch, German and French settlers who make up the bulk of the Conservatives. The speech, he said, was "weak and meaningless, a collection of warmed-up leftovers from previous statements." IN HIS SPEECH, Botha also criticized the anti-apartheid activities of church leaders, "who go out of their way to provoke the government."

The multidominational South African Council of Churches had increased its criticism of the government since the government on Feb. 25 restricted 18 anti-apartheid organizations. Botha responded with vitriolic attacks on some church leaders, and the confrontation led to the arrest and brief detention last month of Anglican Archbishop Desmond Tutu and several other clergymen during a protest march in Cape Town. South Africa's largest grouping of anti-apartheid organizations, the United Democratic Front, with an estimated membership of more than 3 million, is restricted from commenting officially on the speech because of the restrictions imposed upon it in February.

Bank

Continued from page 1A day-old crisis failed in a hail of bullets. The gunfire erupted just as four women hostages tried to leave the building, encircled by 500 police and army troops. RED CROSS commander Jose Lopez said after the first agreement broke down. "There was already a solution when there was gunfire and now the situation is much more tense. There apparently is not complete coordination among the authorities." The drama began at 12:30 p.m. Wednesday when six men in their 20's armed with rifles and reported carrying explosives tried to rob the Banamex bank in Los Mochis, due south of Douglas, Ariz. Guards opened fire, starting a firefight that killed two employees, two customers and a policeman. Twelve other people were wounded. The gunmen took hostage all employees and customers, about 45 in all, and held them through the night. Three captives who complained of stomach pains were released before dawn.

Georgia and former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb, decided against running for president. Gore also tried to appeal to the aging baby boom generation by recalling President John Kennedy in stump speeches. He targeted March 8, the day of the mostly Southern Super Tuesday primaries, as his battleground, skipping the Feb. 8 Iowa caucuses. He put in a late effort in New Hampshire's primary Feb. 16 but finished badly. On Super Tuesday, Gore won six states and tried to stretch the Southern strategy to the north but was shut out. He made a last stand in Tuesday's New York primary, borrowing about $750,000 for advertising, but he finished a poor third — in large measure because New York Mayor Edward Koch, who endorsed the Tennesseean, bitterly criticized Jackson for days before the voting. HIS NEW YORK finish also meant that he lost his eligibility for more federal campaign matching funds, and aides said his campaign is about $1.6 million in the red. Starting Wednesday morning, friends and advisers were urging Gore to quit the race. Rep. Thomas Downey, D-N.Y., who was with Gore after the Empire State primary, said he told the senator it was time to "make a graceful exit." Tennessee Gov. Ned McWherter and home-state Democratic Reps. Bart Gordon and Jim Cooper also advised the candidate to call it quits, though Cooper said some supporters told Gore he could do well in California, which holds its primary June 7. Gore chose instead to suspend his effort to have influence at the Atlanta convention — not to be a spoiler. "I want no part of a stop-Jackson or stop-Dukakis movement," he said, though he would not endorse a candidate now. "The only man I want to stop is George Bush."

Iowa hopefuls roll dice in NFL draft

By G. Hammond-Kunke
 The Daily Iowan

The most prestigious crap shoot — the National Football League draft — will kick off Sunday at 11 a.m. for the 53rd time. In all, 333 players are expected to be selected by 28 teams in 12 rounds. For the first time the draft will be held on a Sunday. The site is New York's Marriott Marquis Hotel. Some experts have predicted that seven Hawkeyes could be selected in the two-day extravaganza to be nationally televised by ESPN (cable channel 32 in Iowa City). "Everyone (in NFL circles) respects the Iowa program and what kind of talent they turn out," Gil Brandt, vice president director of player personnel for the Dallas Cowboys, said from his office.

FOUR IOWA SENIORS — wide receiver Quinn Early, tailback Kevin Harmon, cornerback Dwight Sistrunk and offensive tackle Herb Wester — are in the

"definite" draft category. For kicker Rob Houghtlin, safety Kerry Burt, tailback Rick Bayless, tight end Mike Flagg (who may get a shot as an offensive tackle), offensive guard Dave Alexander, defensive tackle Joe Schuster (whom the Philadelphia Eagles gave a tryout), backup tight end Craig Clark and Mark Sindlinger, a center on the 1986 team, it comes down to a coin toss. Chances are, if they're not selected, they'll all be given tryouts. "Number one," Brandt said, "Hayden Fry does everything he can to make the players accessible. He lets you look at anything you need. And, secondly, the Iowa coaches really get the most out of their players. "THIS IS NOT a very good Iowa graduating class — not typical of past years where you have some players rated very high," Brandt said. In 1986, Iowa had three players, Chuck Long, Ronnie Harmon and Mike Haight, taken in the first round. Brandt said seven Iowa players were "potentially draftable," including Sistrunk, Bayless, Harmon, Wester, Early ("will go very high"), Flagg ("possibly as a tackle") and Houghtlin. Pro scouts like Harmon because he is an explosive type of runner with the ability to hit the hole quickly. In the 10-yard dash, Harmon was timed at 1.53 seconds, good for second-best in the nation among backs. Lars Tate of Georgia ripped off a 1.50. Though Bayless was injured most of his senior season, Brandt said, "He'll get a shot, based on what he

Streaking Hawkeyes take on Boilermakers

By Scott Wingert
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team will try to continue its recent road mastery this weekend when it travels to West Lafayette, Ind., for a pair of doubleheaders with Purdue. The Hawkeyes (6-6 in the Big Ten, 19-17 overall) have been perfect in three tries this week and desperately need more of the same this weekend to preserve their tenuous playoff chances. Purdue (5-11, 18-23) is also on a mini-streak, winning its last three games. The Boilermakers thrashed Butler, 18-0, earlier this week and swept a doubleheader at Illinois, 6-4, 6-2, Wednesday. Last weekend, Illinois swept four straight games from Iowa.

Baseball

SATURDAY, PURDUE is expected to pitch Tom Mayer (3-3) and Andy Swain (3-4). The Boilermaker ace, John Carrico (4-3, 2.45 ERA) and Pete Altenberger (2-4) are expected to start. Iowa, after a 21-hit burst in the second game at Minnesota, is now hitting .296 in the Big Ten. Purdue, meanwhile, is batting .252 in the conference. Cal Eldred continues to lead Iowa starters statistically. He has a 2-1 conference record to complement a 2.45 ERA. In 22 innings, Eldred has given up 19 hits, struck out 13 and walked eight.

Bill Heinz, who smashed four home runs in the second game at Minnesota, leads in a number of Big Ten hitting statistics. His .447 batting average, 11 runs, 17 hits, 11 RBI, five home runs, 36 total bases, .947 slugging percentage and .500 on-base percentage are all team highs among regulars. Heinz also has a 1,000 fielding percentage in the conference. IOWA NOTES • Iowa has hit 39 home runs this season compared to 19 for its opponents. The team also leads its opponents in doubles, 71-44, but trails them by a 13-5 margin in triples. • The Hawkeyes have stolen 13 bases in 25 tries this season compared to 56 thefts in 87 attempts for their opponents.

Blevins hopes Hawks can win her Hoosier homecoming

By Marc Bona
 The Daily Iowan

You can't go home again, author Thomas Wolfe once wrote, but Iowa softball Coach Gayle Blevins would probably disagree. In fact, Blevins is going to go home this weekend not only to try to dispel Wolfe's famed quote but also to try and beat the school she led to three Big Ten titles over the span of seven years — Indiana. "I guess you could say it's one of the most prepared games of the year," the first-year Iowa coach said. "There will be some nostalgic moments. I know the people associated with the team, and have some real nice relationships, but when the game starts you block all that out." THE IOWA-INDIANA series will kick off a 12-game road trip for the Hawkeyes, who won't return home until May 6-7 against Ohio State. Iowa sports a 23-15 overall record and a 2-8 conference mark going into the weekend rendezvous against the Hoosiers, who are coming off four losses to Minnesota. "Long before the season started we all knew this would be the toughest part of the season," Blevins said. "We seem to have bad timing no matter where we go. They're in a must-win (situation) to stay competitive in the conference. They've got good pitching, good defense. And they're very quick. It's going to be a tough series. There isn't any aspect of their game I consider a weakness." The team Blevins referred to is led by one of her former assistants and players, Diane Stephenson, who has guided the Hoosiers to a 26-15, 5-5 conference mark so far this season. OUTFIELDER PAM Craig leads the team offensively with a .309 average. Probable pitchers for the series are Theresa Raine (9-4, 1.45 ERA) and Roxie Raffik (5-4, 0.75). Blevins will counter with two first-year hurlers, Tami Chown and Diana Repp. While Repp has been consistently starting for the Hawkeyes, Chown has been used more in relief. The starting spot is well-deserved, Blevins said. "She (Chown) gave us the single best pitching performance we've had all year (in a loss earlier this week to Northwestern). Chown pitched 6 2/3 scoreless innings in relief in a one-run loss that went 10 innings.

Baltimore's record of futility continues

United Press International

Chris Bosio scattered eight hits and Bill Schroeder homered Thursday in Milwaukee to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 7-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles, who extended their major league record for most losses at the start of a season to 15 games. With the loss, Baltimore, which Wednesday eclipsed the old record of 13 straight losses to open the season set by the 1904 Washington Senators and the 1920 Detroit Tigers, passed a club record for consecutive losses previously held by the 1954 Orioles, which lost 14 straight. Fans of the Baltimore Orioles have tried everything from witch doctors to disc jockey marathons in an effort to rid the team of its record-setting losing streak. By Thursday, cruelty had set in. The jokes circulating around the city: "What do Michael Jackson and the Baltimore Orioles have in common?" "Both wear a glove for no apparent reason," or, "They're both BAD." "How many Orioles does it take to change a tire? One — unless it's a blowout. Then the whole team shows up." "They have got to win sometime, I know it's going to happen," said WIYY-FM disc jockey Bob Rivers, who began his on-air show Tuesday at 5:30 a.m. with a vow not to leave until the Orioles win a game. "We have got to mobilize the fans and show the team we're behind them," he said. "We lost the Colts and some people do not think this is a major league city. We have got to show those people that they are wrong." For those counting, and many Baltimoreans are, the record for the longest losing streak in major league history is 23 games held by the 1961 Philadelphia Phillies. Impossible? The last time a team lost 13 games to start the season, Woodrow Wilson was in the White House. The Brewers scored 24 runs on 39

Hawkeyes host 8-team meet

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's women's golf team will host the 15th Hawkeye Invitational at hilly Finkbine Golf Course. Thirty-six holes will be played today starting at 8:30 a.m. in the 54-hole event, and 18 Saturday. Admission is free.

Iowa Coach Diane Thomason's Hawkeyes have not won the event since April 1981. Iowa's only other victory came in October 1977. The team, ranked No. 35 nationally, along with No. 39 Michigan State are the pre-tourney favorites in the eight-team field. Also contending are Illinois (No. 56), Wisconsin (No. 58), Northern Illinois (No. 59), Wichita State, Wyoming and Northern Iowa.

Women's Golf

"IT SHOULD BE a close match between us and Michigan State. The course is in good shape," Thomason said, noting the Finkbine roughs were high and the greens moderately tough.

Iowa is coming off last weekend's fifth-place finish at the 14-team Golf Shores (Ala.) Classic. Hawkeye sophomore Kelley Brooke finished fifth in the event and is one of the pre-tourney favorites for medalist honors.

Brooke will get strong competition from Michigan State's Kelly Holland, who won the Susie Maxwell Berning Classic in Norman, Okla., April 4-5 by four strokes over Brooke, who placed third. Holland, who sports a 78.85 average, finished second at the Big Ten Championship match last spring.

"This'll be a good tournament for us heading into the Big Ten Championship (May 6-8 in Columbus, Ohio)," Thomason said.

OTHER LINKSTERS TO keep a watch on include Justi Miller of Illinois, Wisconsin's Beth Marning, a Dubuque, Iowa, native, Wichita State's Ann Vandermillen and Michigan State's Saith Egli.

The only Iowa golfer to win the Hawkeye Invitational is Elena Callas, who won it twice in 1979 and 1981.

"Amy (Butzer) and Jeannine (Gibson) have the potential to win if they can put together three consistent rounds," Thomason said.

"A lot of people are going to be surprised with the toughness of the course," Brooke pointed out. "The greens have been playing really fast and the ball can really get buried in the thick rough. These greens have a lot of slopes to them which makes the breaks tough to read."

Teams will be allowed to use six players, with the top four scores counting. With Brooke, Butzer and Gibson, first-year Hawkeye Stacey Ward and sophomores Kristi Heatherly and Sara Ward will compete. First-year Hawkeyes Marne Miller and Shirley Trier will compete individually.

Zwiener looks for leader in Iowa team

By Michael Trilk
The Daily Iowan

Iowa golf Coach Chuck Zwiener is looking for someone to step to the head of the pack as his team travels to the Spartan Invitational Golf Tournament in East Lansing, Mich., this weekend.

So far seven of Zwiener's linksters have competed in Iowa's first four meets of the year without a top player emerging.

All seven seasoned Hawkeyes have averages that are within two strokes of one another.

Steve Reilly has played 11 rounds and has 77.7 stroke average. Jeff Schmid is second with a 78.0 average for 11 rounds. Brad Klapprott has carved out a 78.1 average over 11 rounds and Dave Holmes has a 78.4 mark through eight rounds.

BOB KOLLSMITH HAS the highest average of Iowa regulars — 80.2 over 11 rounds. Chris Kramer has an 80.3 average for three rounds and Eric Westemeier fired an 81 in his only round this season.

The Hawkeyes are coming off of a seventh-place finish at the 23-team Kepler Invitational last weekend in Columbus, Ohio. Although the Hawkeyes had a poor first-round showing in that event, Zwiener said he feels the last two rounds of the Kepler tournament could be the stepping stone for a strong Iowa finish this season.

"I wasn't too happy with our first round in the tournament," Zwiener said. "But we did better with each succeeding round. I think we're getting down to where we have a pretty solid top five. This could be a very good team if it can put things together."

The Spartan event this weekend marks the start of the second half of Iowa's schedule. So far Iowa has finished fourth at the Purdue Invitational, first at the Big Four Meet, third at the Bradley Invitational and seventh at the Kepler Invitational last weekend.

Iowa is one of 14 teams in the Spartan field which will play 36 holes on Saturday and 18 Sunday on Michigan State's Forest Acres golf course. Michigan State won the event last year while Iowa was not in last year's field.

Other Big Ten teams competing in East Lansing this weekend include Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

Sutton leads USF&G with 7-under first round

United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — Hal Sutton shot a 7-under-par 65 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over Tom Byrum after the first round of the $750,000 USF&G Classic.

Sutton sank a 40-foot birdie putt on the first hole and a 30-footer for birdie on the next hole. He also drained a 5-foot par putt on the ninth.

"I made the two long putts and the good up-and-down at No. 9," said Sutton of Shreveport. "I missed two short ones (for birdie), too. I guess I felt guilty making those two long ones."

Sutton, who has withdrawn from two events this year because of injuries, said he is cautiously optimistic about the remaining 54 holes.

"WE'VE GOT A long way to go in this tournament, and the way I've been playing, it's one shot at a time."

Byrum, younger brother of fellow pro Curt Byrum, overcame a sluggish start to fire a 66. Byrum, whose previous best round of the year was a 68, carded all six of his birdies on the back side of Lakewood Country Club's 7,080-yard layout.

Byrum credited his 30 on the back nine to a more confident putting stroke.

"I just got a little different feeling in my putting stroke," he said. "It really didn't happen until the 12th hole," Byrum said. "It felt good so I stuck with it."

Byrum birdied six of the last eight holes, including 20-foot-plus birdie putts from the fringe on the 12th and 14th holes. He also saved par on the 17th with a 25-foot putt.

"The elements are perfect and the course conditions are fast," said Byrum, who shot a bogey-free round.

Drew's 66 leads LPGA's St. Pete Open

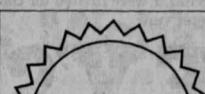

United Press International

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Heather Drew opened with four straight birdies in a career-low 66 Thursday to take a one-stroke lead after the first round of the $225,000 St. Petersburg Golf Classic.

An undistinguished field of 103 players which included just five of this season's top 28 money leaders, competed in 80-degree temperatures under sunny skies and a light breeze which kicked up in the afternoon.

Martha Nause and Tina Tombs-Purtzer each birdied the final hole to tie Rosie Jones at 5-under-par 67. Jones, who finished with a 65 here last year, lipped out a tricky 22-foot birdie putt on her final hole that could have tied Drew for the lead.

Kathy Ahern, Kathy Postlewait, Donna White and Vicki Ferguson were two shots back at 68.

Firm donates money for soccer program

Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co. has donated $1,200 to the Iowa City Kickers' 6-and-under soccer program, according to Iowa City Kickers board member John Schiltz.

Last year, the firm donated $800 for the program's 8-and-under division. The money will go toward new nets, goals and balls, Schiltz added. The Iowa City Kickers are a volunteer group in Iowa City that promotes soccer.

"We were surprised, we were shocked," he said. "People should be aware that a firm in town has helped out our recreation soccer program."

Iowa women's sports banquet set for May

Tickets for the annual Iowa all-sports award banquet May 2 at the Union will go on sale April 25 for $12. A softdrink social will be held at 6 p.m., with dinner (the entree is stuffed chicken unless a vegetarian dish is requested) to follow a half an hour later.

For more information or reservations contact Doug McKechnie at 335-9322. Tickets will be reserved at the door.

Fraternity will sponsor first 'Fight Night'

Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity will host its first Fight Night at the Dubuque Street Brewing Co., 313 S. Dubuque St., tonight. Proceeds from the fraternity's annual philanthropy will benefit St. Jude's Children's Hospital in Tennessee.

Tickets are $2 in advance and may be purchased at Hungry Hobo, 517 S. Riverside, or $3 at the door. The three-round bouts — there will be 20 in all — will begin at 7:30 p.m. Doors open at 6 p.m.

The fights will be sanctioned by the United States of America Amateur Boxing Federation. Judges and officials will be brought in from Des Moines and Cedar Rapids.

Boxers from other fraternities will include student senator Juan Valdez, lacrosse player Andy Settini and brothers Bill and Dan Pace, who will fight for opposing fraternities.

For more information contact TKE President Steve Parmelee at 338-4736.

Illinois' Menkhousen switches positions

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — Brian Menkhousen, Illinois' first string quarterback at the beginning of last year, will open this season with a new position, a new number and a new outlook.

Menkhousen, a junior out of West High School in Hazelwood, Mo., lost playing time to signal callers Scott Mohr and Peter Freund after his play failed to impress the coaching staff.

As a quarterback last year, he completed a tepid 43 percent of his passes, tossed six interceptions and no touchdowns. Those stats, and the addition of Jeff George, a strong passer who transferred from Purdue, solidified the decision to move Menkhousen to tight end.

Bird nets 44 in win, Jordan 39 in loss

BOSTON (UPI) — Larry Bird scored 44 points Thursday night and the Boston Celtics ended the Chicago Bulls' six-game winning streak with a 126-119 victory.

The Bulls, 49-31, dropped into a tie with the Atlanta Hawks for the No. 3 playoff spot in the Eastern Conference. The No. 4 team ends up in Boston's half of the playoff draw with No. 3 in Detroit's half.

Dennis Johnson had 23 points and 15 assists while Kevin McHale scored 20 points for the Celtics, 57-23, who have clinched the Eastern Conference's best record. Bird hit 19 of 29 shots and grabbed 10 rebounds.

Michael Jordan, the NBA's top scorer, finished with 39 points for Chicago, which had won its previous seven road games. The loss was Chicago's eighth in a row at Boston Garden, where they have not won since March 6, 1985.

Chicago's Charles Oakley scored 18 points and grabbed 17 rebounds. Scottie Pippen contributed 17 points and Dave Corzine 14. For Boston, Parish had 14 points and 10 rebounds.

Seattle QB Gilbert faces rape charge

SEATTLE (UPI) — A King County Superior Court Judge decided Wednesday to hold separate trials for two incidents involving Seattle Seahawks backup quarterback Gale Gilbert, who faces a rape charge.

Gilbert, 27, was charged in February with a count of second-degree rape for allegedly forcing himself on a 21-year-old woman he picked up at a Ballard bar in January. A 24-year-old woman read of the allegations against Gilbert and reported she also was accosted by the quarterback after meeting him at a different bar in Kirkland last August.

Gilbert is charged with taking indecent liberties with both women, but faces rape charges only in the case involving the 21-year-old.

Ill Wilander falls prey to Pistolesi

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — Claudio Pistolesi, a qualifier ranked 154th in the world, Thursday upset flu-weakened Mats Wilander 2-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-2 to jolt the $492,500 Monte Carlo Open.

It marked the first time in six years at this event Wilander has been ousted before the semifinals.

Ivan Lendl, the world's No. 1 player, beat Horst Skoff 6-3, 7-5 and appeared to show more power than in Wednesday's struggle against Christian Bergstrom, his first singles match since a foot injury two months ago.

Three other seeds advanced to Friday's quarterfinals: No. 4 Yannick Noah had to capture a final set tie-breaker to beat Jordi Arrese. No. 5 Andres Gomez eased past Tarik Benhabiles 6-4, 6-1 and No. 7 Martin Jaito overwhelmed Andrei Chesnokov 6-3, 6-2. However, No. 6 Kent Carlsson was ousted 6-4, 6-3 by Henri Leconte.

Garrison advances to Slims quarterfinals

HOUSTON (UPI) — Zina Garrison, saying her concentration deserted her in the second set, Thursday defeated Dinky Van Rensburg 6-2, 6-4 to advance to the quarterfinals of the $250,000 Virginia Slims of Houston.

The No. 4 seed from Houston will face No. 6 Isabel Cueto on Friday. In other quarterfinal matches, it's: No. 1 Martina Navratilova vs. No. 6 Arantxa Sanchez and No. 2 Chris Evert vs. Gretchen Magers.

Also Thursday, Cueto defeated Amy Frazier 6-4, 6-1, and No. 7 Patricia Tarabini defeated Carrie Cunningham 4-6, 6-4, 6-3.

In doubles, Garrison and Katrina Adams beat Maria Lindstrom and Heather Ludloff 6-1, 6-1, and Penny Barg and Mercedes Paz eliminated Amy Frazier and LuAnne Spadea 6-3, 6-4.

Brian's Time emerges as odds-on favorite

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brian's Time, a runty-looking horse brushed off as a 32-1 shot when he began prepping for the Kentucky Derby, has emerged as the best candidate to replace fallen Forty Niner and filly Winning Colors as favorite for the May 7 Run for the Roses.

Proof of his increase in stock was offered Thursday, when linemaker Don LaPlace installed the late-closing son of Roberto the 3-1 program favorite for the $599,000 Wood Memorial at Aqueduct Saturday.

Flying Victor tabbed favorite in Derby

ALBANY, Calif. (UPI) — Flying Victor, a ninth-place finisher in the Santa Anita Derby two weeks ago, Thursday was installed the 5-2 favorite for this weekend's $250,000 California Derby at Golden Gate Fields.

The chestnut colt will be ridden Saturday by Russell Baze, the leading jockey at Golden Gate Fields this season with 84 victories as of April 20.

Elite meet at Kansas Relays

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

When the Kansas Relays take place in Lawrence this weekend, Iowa women's track Coach Jerry Hassard will have the luxury of skipping a nearly full boat as the bulk of his squad qualified for the invitation-only event.

Senior Davera Taylor, who returns from competing in the Jamaican National Relays, will handle the duties in the 100- and 200-meter dashes while Tricia Vesely, a junior from Elmhurst, Ill., was invited to compete in the 100-meter hurdles.

Two events at the meet (the 400-meter dash and the 1500-meter run) have an elite-eight field that allows only the top competitors to challenge for a title. Both races also have an open field like the rest of the scheduled slate.

Women's Track

IN THE ELITE division of the 400-meter dash, Iowa sprinter Senta Hawkins was selected while teammate Jill Freed will compete in the open section.

Two other Hawkeyes, Jeanne Kruckeberg and Rachelle Roberts, were two of the eight offered a spot in the elite portion of the 1500-meter run. In the open portion of that event, first-year performer Tami Hoskins gained an invitation.

Tricia Kiraly will be among those to race in the 3000-meter run while Renee Doyle, Wendy Bare and Janeth Salazar were invited for the 5,000-meter run.

The Hawkeyes will also sport a sprint medley, mile relay and 4 x 880-yard relay.

Hassard, in his eleventh year at the Iowa helm, admitted he was pleasantly surprised with the number of Hawkeyes invited to this prestigious event, but added this was a product of his squad's hard work.

"I'M LOOKING FORWARD to this weekend's meet because we have so many entrants," he said. "We usually have only about one-third of our squad asked to attend. One thing to remember, however, is that everyone who competes this weekend has earned their spot. It's been a true team effort in every sense of the word."

Iowa also has a number of athletes scheduled to compete in field events.

The high jump will see four Hawkeyes in action as Lynn McMillan, Janelle Jaspers, Steph Davis and Traci Claussen were among those selected for the meet.

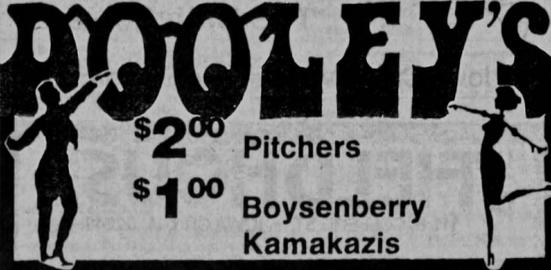

McMillan will team up with sophomore Becki Borg as the Iowa entrants in the triple jump, while Borg was invited to compete in the long jump.

Sara Joens and Kathy Snow will wear the black and gold for the Hawkeyes in the discus. Joens will also be part of the javelin field.

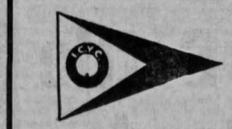

The lone Iowa participant in the shot put will be sophomore of the Marconi.

Hassard said he feels the increase in Hawkeyes' invitations to Kansas over past years has a lot to do with the depth and overall talent of this year's squad.

"This (Kansas Relays) has proved to be an excellent stepping stone for our squads," he said.

Hawks open Big Ten season

By Brent Woods
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team will face its first Big Ten competition of the season Saturday against the Minnesota Golden Gophers at Cretzmeier Track.

The field events will begin at noon with the running events getting underway at 12:45.

This conference meet may be hotly contested, but don't expect it to come down to the last point — the match-up will not be scored.

"We just want to get through this meet without any more problems," Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said.

The woes Wheeler is referring to are injuries to a few key Hawk-eyes. Hurdler James Armstrong suffered a stress fracture in the second meet of the outdoor season, and middle-distance specialist Curtis Chung has been out with hamstring problems since the Big Ten indoor meet.

CHUCK MOYE, A freshman who came to Iowa last year touted as the best high school shot putter in the nation, hasn't performed in the outdoor season.

"Right now, we're going to try to get back on track," Moyer said. "My training is going well, and the coaches will make the decision about when I get back. I can't make that decision."

Wheeler said he will run some of his best performers against each other in meet events Saturday, "so that will take us out of some things."

Minnesota, which recorded a lower-division finish in the Big Ten indoor meet, figures to be strong in the middle-distance and distance events, according to Wheeler. The Gophers will also be strong in the high jump — the indoor champion in that event will be wearing a Minnesota uniform.

Wheeler said the injured Hawk-eyes will definitely miss the Drake Relays April 29-30.

"IT MEANS WE will be out of three relays," he said. "It's looking like we might have one relay team (the 1,600-meter relay) and some individuals compete at Drake."

On Saturday, high jumper K.P. Lansing will try to follow a career-best height of 7-feet, 1-inch, which he accomplished last weekend against Northern Iowa.

Doug Jones and Mike Moschella will run the 100-meter dash, Paul Steele will compete in the 400- and 1,600-meter relays and D'Juan Strozier and St. Clair Blackman are slated to run the 800 meters.

Women travel to Illinois, Purdue

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

If there is ever a time to snap a losing streak, this is the weekend to do it.

The Iowa women's tennis team has lost six matches in a row, including four straight at home, and hopes to change its fortunes Saturday at Illinois and Sunday at Purdue.

"I think we're going to have a big weekend from our seniors," Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said. "It will be their last dual meet before the Big Tens. Everybody seems to be

Iowa faces Michigan teams, hopes to keep streak alive

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team (17-3) takes on Michigan (16-4) and Michigan State (7-7) on the road this weekend as it looks to improve a six-game winning streak.

The Hawkeyes, 3-1 in the Big Ten Conference, will face the Wolverines (5-0) Saturday in Ann Arbor and the Spartans (0-5) Sunday in East Lansing.

Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said he thought the weekend's action was going to be challenging — especially Michigan, with the NCAA runnerup, Dan Goldberg, in its No. 2 spot.

Men's Tennis

"Michigan is a dominant team," Houghton said. "They are strong at every position. They are definitely the heavy favorite. We would clearly have to play our very, very best, and even then I don't know what would happen."

ALTHOUGH MICHIGAN is a main concern, Houghton said he wasn't overlooking Michigan State.

"If we look past Michigan State we will have our hands full,"

Houghton said. "They may be 0-5 in the Big Ten but those have been close losses. There is no guaranteeing a win."

Michigan State Coach Stan Drobback said he was anticipating a great match between the two schools.

"They are an excellent team," Drobback said. "We are really looking forward to this match. I think Steve Houghton has vastly improved Iowa tennis."

"The conference as a whole has improved," Drobback said. "First, the quality of players from our nation and overseas recruits has improved. Second, the indoor facilities are better, and third the coaches have improved."

up in practice this week. I think we're going to have a big performance from everybody."

The Hawkeyes' record stands at 1-6 in the Big Ten and 8-11 overall. A victory or two this weekend is necessary for improving Iowa's seed in the Big Ten tournament April 29 in Bloomington, Ind.

ILLINOIS IS THE conference cellar-dweller at 0-6 and 9-12 and a victory over the Fighting Illini would do wonders for the Hawk-eyes' morale before facing Purdue, who is just one spot ahead of the eighth-place Hawkeyes with a 2-4, 10-12 mark.

"I think they're going to be two tough matches," Schillig said. "But I think they are two we can get through. I think we are going to pull through."

Schillig remains optimistic despite the losing streak. It doesn't matter how many matches a team has lost when it enters the Big Ten Tournament. What matters is who a team's opponent is in the first round. That is what Schillig said she is concerned about.

"It will have a big effect," she said. "It will decide the seeds and that will determine who will play the top one or two teams in the first round."

And playing the top one or two teams first is something Iowa must avoid if it hopes to improve on last season's fifth-place conference finish. Indiana (first in the Big Ten), Wisconsin (second), Michigan State and Northwestern (tied for third) are the top four teams in the Big Ten. The Hawkeyes lost heavily to all of them, with the exception of a relatively tight 6-3 loss to the Spartans.

Sophomore Liz Canzoneri, Iowa's No. 3 singles player, is 25-12 on the season and is closing in on Pennie Wohlford's 1987 school-record 29 wins. Wohlford is 13-19 at No. 1 singles this season.

Reebok chairman buys piece of NFL Patriots

United Press International

FOXBORO, Mass. — Paul Fireman has struck a deal to buy out a group of dissident New England Patriots stockholders for $7.9 million, completing a major step toward closing the sale of the team, The Boston Globe reported today.

When he reached the agreement to take over the team last month from William Sullivan and his family, Fireman said that settling with the stockholders and acquiring Sullivan Stadium from bankruptcy were critical to completing the transaction.

THE STOCKHOLDERS were owed money from several lawsuits filed against the Sullivans dating back to 1976.

Fireman is chairman of Reebok International, the Canton-based athletic and casual footwear maker.

A source told The Globe that Fireman and his partner, Fran Murray, expect to have everything settled soon and hope to go before the National Football League owners for approval on May 25 in Miami.

hits in sweeping the three-game series. It was the fourth time Baltimore has been shut out this season.

Bosio, 3-1, pitched his first shutout and third complete game in lowering his ERA to 1.64. He did not walk a batter and struck out two.

Red Sox 12, Tigers 3

Ellis Burks had four hits and drove in four runs Thursday to help rookie Steve Ellsworth win his first major league game and spark the Boston Red Sox to a 12-3 rout of the Detroit Tigers at Tiger Stadium.

The 27-year-old Ellsworth, whose father Dick pitched for Boston and four other major league teams, allowed six hits over seven innings before giving way to Mike Smithson. Smithson got only one batter out before walking three in a row and was replaced by Dennis Lamp, who got the last five outs.

Burks tripled home three runs in a four-run third inning and also singled home a run in the seventh. Spike Owen chipped in with a two-run homer for the Red Sox, who collected 16 hits off three pitchers.

Cardinals 9, Pirates 3

In Pittsburgh, Tony Pena homered

twice and Randy O'Neal combined with Larry McWilliams on a six-hitter Thursday night, helping the St. Louis Cardinals end their six-game losing streak with a 9-3 victory over Pittsburgh, snapping the Pirates' four-game winning streak.

Eight of the Cardinals' 12 hits were for extra bases, as St. Louis posted its first road victory in eight games this season.

O'Neal, 1-0, made his first appearance since joining the Cardinals from Louisville of the American Association (AAA) April 20.

John Smiley, 0-2, yielded five earned runs on seven hits, walked two and struck out five in five innings.

Cubs 6, Expos 2

Greg Maddux scattered eight hits and Vance Law hit a two-run homer to extend his hitting streak to 14 games Thursday, helping the Chicago Cubs snap a four-game losing streak with a 6-2 victory over the Montreal Expos at Wrigley Field.

Maddux, 3-1, had some problems in the early innings but blanked the Expos over the last seven innings to notch his third complete game of the season. He struck out four and walked three in besting

Bryn Smith, 0-1, who gave up six runs and nine hits in six innings. Andre Dawson hit his fourth homer of the year in the first inning.

Reds 7, Giants 6

Jeff Treadway tripled home Nick Esasky from first base in the 12th inning Thursday to lift the Cincinnati Reds to a 7-6 triumph over the San Francisco Giants.

Esasky led off the 12th with a single and Treadway tripled to deep right field off loser Joe Price, 0-1, the fifth San Francisco pitcher, to drive home Esasky with the winning run.

Pat Perry, 2-2, the sixth Cincinnati hurler, worked the final three innings for the victory.

San Francisco's Will Clark had three hits to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.

Dodgers-Padres rained out

Thursday's scheduled doubleheader between the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Diego Padres was postponed because of rain, marking the third straight day baseball was washed out at Dodger Stadium.

Since the ballpark opened in 1962, games on three consecutive days had never been rained out.

Cincinnati's Kal Daniels (28) greets Nick Esasky at the plate in the 12th inning as Pete Rose and Terry McGriff run to the plate. Esasky scored game winner on Jeff Treadway's triple to defeat San Francisco 7-6.

Kirk awaits tax evasion trial

By Mike Barry
United Press International

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A year and a half after former Memphis State basketball Coach Dana Kirk was indicted on income tax charges, the prosecutor is getting restless to go to trial.

Kirk, meanwhile, has kept a low profile, writing a book and keeping out of basketball.

"We're looking for a ruling. We're ready to go to trial," said U.S. Attorney Hickman Ewing Jr.

Kirk was indicted Nov. 20, 1986, on 11 counts alleging tax evasion, filing false income tax returns, mail fraud and obstruction of justice charges. He pleaded innocent to all counts, and the mail fraud counts were later dropped.

THE COACH WAS fired two months before his indictment, after leading Memphis State to a Final Four appearance and three Metro Conference championships. He was paid about $171,000 in contract obligations.

Kirk has finished writing a book about his experiences and a publisher is interested, members of his family say. He has not kept up with Memphis State basketball, and does not watch the games, they say.

Reached at an office where he has worked on the book, Kirk refused to talk.

"I really don't have anything to say. I'm sorry," he said.

The income tax evasion case has been dormant since August, when U.S. District Judge Odell Horton started reviewing transcripts of the grand jury meetings that led to the indictment. That was in response to charges by Kirk's lawyers of grand jury bias and prosecutor misconduct.

EWING SAID HE hopes the case can be expedited, as it was once set to go to trial last June. Kirk is accused of under-reporting his income and intimidating grand jury witnesses.

Also unresolved are libel suits Kirk filed in January 1987 against Sports Illustrated and The Memphis Commercial Appeal over articles about his legal troubles published before he was indicted.

Kirk has repeatedly invoked Fifth Amendment privileges in response to questions and document requests by the publications, said S. Russell Headrick, attorney for The Commercial Appeal. The case is tied up in motions, he said.

Evert plans marriage to ski champ

United Press International

Is Chris Evert superstitious? The tennis star, who is divorced from British tennis pro John Lloyd, has been picking her attendants for her wedding to former ski champ Andy Mill at the Polo Club in Boca Raton, Fla., this summer.

"My sister Jeanne is going to be my matron of honor, although she was my first maid of honor," Evert said. "Maybe I should have a whole new crew."

She was known as Chris Evert-Lloyd during her first marriage but Chris says there won't be any hyphens this time. "Because of the endorsements, as long as I remain in tennis, I think I will stay Chris Evert."

The wedding was strategically scheduled for July 30, which falls between Wimbledon and the U.S. Open.

An irate Zsa Zsa Gabor called a New York gossip columnist everything but "dahlisk" in an appearance Wednesday on a New York TV talk show. The New York Daily News said Gabor was in her makeup room, preparing to join hosts Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford on WABC's "Morning Show," when columnist Claudia Cohen, a regular on the show, stuck her head in to see if Zsa Zsa was ready. Cohen said Gabor lashed out with a string of profanities and then stormed onto the set to continue the assault.

"I've never been so insulted in all my life," Zsa Zsa said on the air. "She's such a bitch. I don't know who she is, but she certainly needs more."

Tulane to reinstate hoops program

United Press International

NEW ORLEANS — Tulane University reinstated its men's basketball program Thursday after a three-year suspension imposed in the wake of a point-shaving scandal.

Tulane Board of Administrators Chair William Boatner Reilly III announced its approval of the plan to President Eamon Kelly, who said he already had received several individual donations of $1 million and more for the program.

The Athletic Director Chet Gladchuk said he would begin recruiting immediately in an effort to find a basketball coach who he hoped to have on board by July and the start of a new fiscal year. He said Tulane expected to field a team in 1990.

"I am not sure at what point we will win 20 games or qualify for the NCAA tournament or appear on national television but I am certain that bringing back 54 years of tradition will not be very difficult for Tulane."

IT WAS NOT immediately known whether Tulane, which dropped its men's basketball program on April 4, 1985, would petition the Metro Conference for readmission.

The board also authorized a $25 million fund-raising effort for all intercollegiate athletics at the university.

They voted to create an athletic growth fund to provide a financial base for day-to-day operations of the athletics program and dedicated $3 million of university fund to act as an anchor.

Reilly said the actions will "assure a vital and dynamic future" for Tulane athletics in Division I.

"The stand the university has taken historically on matters relating to university athletics ensures the integrity of all the different elements of Tulane University's intercollegiate program," Kelly said.

KELLY SAID among the million-dollar contributors was Avron Fogelman, a co-owner of the Kansas City Royals and 1962 graduate of Tulane.

"Fogelman was so excited when he read about the imminent decision to reinstate basketball in the Memphis (Tenn.) paper this morning that he flew down to New Orleans on impulse to make a million-dollar gift," Kelly said.

Fogelman earmarked his gift for programs designed to prevent problems such as those that led to the discontinuation of Tulane's basketball program three years ago.

"I asked that my gift be used to help Tulane's basketball players in the areas of counseling, tutoring and adjusting to pressures facing today's student athlete," Fogelman said.

"Counseling would cover a broad spectrum ranging from helping basketball players learn how to deal with environmental, cultural and other sociological problems to learning how to better deal with the everyday problems that seem to always arise in the life of a college athlete."

Kelly disbanded the men's basketball program during the point-shaving scandal that led to the trial of star center John "Hot Rod" Williams and others and the resignation of Coach Ned Fowler and later Athletic Director Hindman Wall.

Stubbs is 49ers' desire, but will he be available?

William D. Murray

United Press International

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — The San Francisco 49ers, seeking help on the defensive line, must force a last-minute trade by Sunday to improve their draft prospects.

The 49ers pick 26th of the 28 teams in Sunday's first round of the NFL draft, making it nearly impossible for the team to wait for a particular player.

"I don't see how I can tell you who we'll pick," Coach Bill Walsh said Thursday. "There are just too many teams ahead of us."

In past years, Walsh has been able to maneuver for better draft position by trading choices or players. This year, he says, it will be far more difficult.

"We haven't talked to anyone directly, but there has been a lot of conversation around the league," the coach said. "We pick so late we just don't have much collateral. When you pick 26th, you don't have much to offer. I guess we could conceivably move up to 15th or 16th."

WALSH SAID THE club has been contacted by other teams about veterans who may be available. However, those teams are not offering high draft picks.

"We have had offers for some of our players," he said. "But we are not trading because we would end up just drafting to replace the players we traded."

The 49ers enter the draft with a wish list topped by the need for help along the defensive line. Last season, San Francisco recorded just 37 sacks and held opponents to 107.4 yards a game rushing. Age and injuries concern Walsh.

"We'll look at the defense first," he said. "The defensive line or an outside linebacker. Then we'd most likely draft a wide receiver. The other consideration would be that some player who is rated the best at another position is available when we draft."

THE MAN THE 49ERS would most like to be able to draft is Miami's defensive end Danny Stubbs, a lightning-quick pass rusher.

"But I think he'll be taken before we get a chance," Walsh said. "I think Stubbs will be taken in the first 15."

Another defensive lineman the 49ers like is Angelo State defensive tackle Pierce Holt, who probably will be around when San Francisco picks. Holt, 6-foot-3 and 280 pounds, has great strength but is not a strong pass rusher. He also is 26 years old.

If the 49ers do not trade up, they likely will draft a wide receiver with their second-round pick. The club needs to replace Dwight Clark, the 49ers all-time leading receiver who retired at the end of the 1987 season.

"There are 12 to 14 receivers in this draft who will play in the NFL," Walsh said. "I think six are first round category players."

SAN FRANCISCO ALSO NEEDS A replacement for either punter Max Runager or kicker Ray Werschung. Runager averaged 39.2 yard a punt and Werschung was 3 of 7 outside the 40 yard line.

"The group of punters available this year is much better than in the past," Walsh said. "(Greg) Montgomery is a great punter and (Tom) Tupa is also very good."

Both Montgomery and Tupa hail from the Big Ten, Montgomery from Michigan State and Tupa from Ohio State.

Redskins' Beathard denies Schroeder trade rumors

By Will Dunham

United Press International

HERNDON, Va. — General Manager Bobby Beathard of the Washington Redskins said Thursday it is "highly unlikely" the Super Bowl champions will trade deposed starting quarterback Jay Schroeder, but admitted "we'll listen" to any offers.

With rumors swirling involving the disgruntled Schroeder as trade bait, Beathard said he has fielded inquiries from several teams about acquiring the 1986 Pro Bowl quarterback but has received no firm offers.

Schroeder was extremely unhappy after he was benched in favor of veteran Doug Williams for the playoffs and did not attend the Redskins' victory parade in Washington. Schroeder met twice with Coach Joe Gibbs since the end of the season and neither Gibbs nor Beathard would deny Schroeder asked for a trade.

"I WOULD SAY that it would be highly unlikely that we'll make any trade with the quarterback," Beathard said. "But, like any other position, if a team wants to talk about it, we'll listen. If we felt we could improve the Redskins, sure we're going to listen to anything about any player. But nothing has ever been offered to us that we would ever consider making such a move."

Beathard said even if Schroeder desired a trade, it would not have an impact on the team.

"Whether or not a player wants to be here or asks to be traded, we're not going to make such a move just because a player wanted it," Beathard said. "We're going to do what's best for the Redskins. It's hard to find quarterbacks, as a lot of teams are finding out this year."

SCHROEDER ASCENDED to the Redskins' starting position in November 1985 after Joe Theismann suffered a career-ending leg injury and passed for a club-record 4,109 yards in 1986, when he was selected to play for the NFC Pro Bowl team. But Schroeder slumped badly in 1987 after suffering a shoulder injury in the season opener, with Williams coming on to lead the team to a victory in Super Bowl XXII.

Both Gibbs and Beathard said the club still views Schroeder, who will earn $900,000 this season, as the Redskins' quarterback of the future.

"He's been a very valuable guy for us and he's done a heck of a job for us. A starting quarterback in this league is worth a lot," Gibbs said.

"I DON'T FEEL any differently, personally, about Jay than when we drafted him," Beathard said. "I think he can be a top quarterback in the league for the next eight or nine years. I would love it to be here and I would imagine it would be because I don't think any team would come up with something that would change our minds."

Schroeder, 26, remains extremely valuable to the Redskins as insurance behind the oft-injured Williams, the Super Bowl MVP. Williams, 32, has had knee surgery four times in his career, including an operation in February to repair damage to his left knee sustained in the first quarter of the Super Bowl.

did in (Iowa's Most Valuable Player), but termed Houghtlin's situation "chancey (because) a lot of teams just don't take kickers. I'm not sure if he'll get picked or not."

BRANDT PREDICTED that either Harmon or Early would be the first Iowa player chosen.

Tony Razzano, director of college scouting for the San Francisco 49ers, said, "Iowa always offers good talent and this year is no exception. They'll have a lot of players in camp." In all, the 49ers have 750 players on their draft list.

Razzano talked briefly about some Iowa players:

• Early: "A good player. I'd like to have him."

• Harmon: "We like him. He can play in the NFL."

• Sistrunk: "We don't have him as high as some people but he's definitely a prospect."

• Houghtlin: "He's a tough one to predict — on the border, but he's a prospect."

• Flagg: "He's borderline but could make it as a backup tight end."

According to Harry Buffington, director of National Football Scouting Combines the past 20 years, "Four players will definitely get drafted (Early, rated No. 9 at his position, Harmon, No. 7, Wester and Sistrunk rated No. 10 by BLESTO) and another five (Burt, Alexander, Bayless, Houghtlin and Flagg) have a 50-50 chance of being chosen."

Buffington estimated that the National Football Scouting service looked at more than 1,400 seniors.

At the Bijou

Friday: Scenes from a Marriage (1973) — Ingmar Bergman edited this powerful film about marriage, its disintegration and its aftermath. Saturday at 9 p.m.

Sammy and Rosie Get Laid (1987) — The story concerns a visit by a corrupt, retired Pakistani politician to his unsuccessful accountant son and social-working daughter-in-law. 9:30 p.m. Saturday at 7 p.m. Sunday at 8:45 p.m.

Sunday: Promised Lands (1973) — This film directed by Susan Sontag views the world through the eyes of the alienated Israeli intellectual.

Television

Friday: "Doctor Who — Robot" — Innocent, blundering Sarah Jane Smith stumbles across a group of scientists who plan to use its robot to blackmail the world, and it's up to the Doctor to un-blunder her (10 p.m.).

Saturday: "Saturday Evening Film

Classic" — Angel on My Shoulder (1946) — The story of a dead crook sent back to Earth as a judge (8 p.m.; UIVT 28).

Sunday: "Sunday Evening Film Classic" — Street Scene (1932) — Elmer Rice adapted his own Pulitzer Prize-winning play about the nitty-gritty of New York tenement life (8 p.m.; UIVT 28).

Music

Friday: Tenor Scott Muters will hold a recital at 2:30 in Harper Hall. Tenor Martin Wilson will follow hard on his heels at 4:30 p.m. in Harper Hall, and at 5:30 — since your tenor appetite certainly will be filled by this point — violist Caroline Leland will hold a recital in Voxman Hall.

Saturday: Pianist Kathleen Dunn will hold a recital at 4 p.m. in Harper Hall. Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia, the professional music fraternity for men, will hold its 8th annual Jazz-a-thon in the Union Wheelroom beginning at 2 p.m. and will continue until the last shuffling rug-cutter is shepherd off the dance floor. Admission is free.

Sunday: Carolyn Therese Stahle, who plays the tuba, will hold a recital at 7:30 p.m. in Harper Hall. Violinist Mary K. Van Hemert will hold a recital at 4 p.m. in Harper Hall. Violinist Mary Beth Kirkpatrick will hold a recital at 8:30 p.m. in Harper Hall. The UI Flute Ensemble will hold a recital at 2 p.m. in Voxman Hall.

Art

Illuminated manuscripts, etchings and engravings from the UI Museum of Art's permanent collection of northern Renaissance art will be on display in the museum's Print Study Room through May 15. The 10th biennial Faculty Exhibition will consist of works created by the studio faculty of the UI School of Art and Art History and will run through May 15.

Nightlife

Friday: The Lyres are joined by Green at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St.

Saturday: The Hollowmen and the Farmers play at Gabe's.

Sunday: Alex Chilton and Pianosaurs play at Gabe's.

Radio

CAAD CRITERIUM

UNIVERSITY OF IOWA RIVERFRONT

OLD CAPITOL CRITERIUM

From the Editor's Desk . . .

The Old Capitol Criterium celebrates its 11th year as a spring event in Iowa City. For one day some of the best cyclists in the Midwest arrive for United States Cycling Federation events.

Some race for the cash prizes. Some race for the pure pleasure of competition. But whatever the reason may be it provides excitement not only for the riders but also the spectators.

On Sunday, the city closes the streets around the Pentacrest and unleashes what several thousand spectators are expectedly hoping is an exhilarating visual spectacle.

The Criterium isn't just for those who spend hours and hours training. It's also for the weekend rider whose will for victory still exists. The citizens races provide an open opportunity for everyone to participate. There are 16 citizens race for ages 8 and up.

THERE ARE EVEN events for the youngsters of ages 4-7, including the Big Wheel, tricycle and bicycle races. Along with these races featured on a straight-line course, there's an event for unicycles, and all ages can enter that event.

Just as the Criterium is geared as a family event so is Riverfest. This yearly event is celebrating its 10th year as an Iowa City spring event.

With year-long preparations, Riverfest, which continues through Sunday, has become something to look forward to every year.

The Battle of the Bands, the Riverrun and the Taste of Iowa City highlight several events which yearly provide family entertainment.

Whether you plan to be a spectator or not, this weekend looks to be a special event — one that shouldn't be missed.

A U.S. phenomena

While the Old Capitol Criterium has become a popular event in Iowa City, it also is a popular form of competitive cycling in the United States.

Chasing the favorite

Chris Hayes won last year's Old Capitol Criterium, edging a number of racers by less than a wheel's length in one of the most exciting races in recent history. Now Hayes enjoys the role as the Criterium favorite. And as racers anticipate Sunday's 30-lap race, Hayes isn't feeling any of the pressure.

No one seems to know if Elaine Hodges of Chicago will return to defend her title. One other former champion is now retired. Kym Life of Oskaloosa, Iowa, a former champion and runner-up last year may be the favorite in an open field.

The course

The Old Capitol Criterium's course is steep and oval. A map of the course may give insights to where the best place is to watch the action Sunday. A complete list of events for the Criterium is also included for the avid fan.

Running with the wind

The 1988 Riverrun features a 1-mile fun run, a 5K race and a 10K race. Dallas Robertson looks to defend his men's 10K title while the women's 10K race looks to be wide open. Officials also have added a 5K walk to this year's competition.

Criterium racing goes full circle

By Marc Bona
The Daily Iowan

They ride hunched, bent over, gripping the handlebars as they cut corners sharply. Churning their legs faster and faster until they come full circle on the pavement, they wisp around and complete the circuit again.

It's a criterium.

A criterium is to cycling what oval, circuit racing is to automobiles. It's not the drawn-out European style of racing commonly seen once a year at the Tour de France where Americans receive their annual dose of cycling on television when riders embark on a grueling trek across the country.

The number of laps in the Old Capitol Criterium races differ regarding the skill level involved. Dan Nidey, owner of World of Bikes, 723 S. Gilbert St., who has been involved with the Old Capitol Criterium as an announcer for several years, said senior I and II divisions will circuit downtown streets for 30 laps while some citizen races will go two or three laps.

"IT'S NOT A ROAD race," said Mike Chambers, an employee at Novotny's Cycle Center, 224 S. Clinton St. "It's laps. It's an in-town race on a closed circuit track."

Chambers said the race is "very" popular in Iowa City as well as the United States. "A lot of them have citizen races for the people in the community. It's kind of a neat thing."

Gary Henry, service manager at World of Bikes, said road races and criteriums are two basic, but different, forms of competitive cycling.

"Actually, a long history of bicycle racing around the world is that you'll see road races and criteriums. Except for the Coors Classic, around the U.S. you usually see circuits (criteriums).

"CRITERIUMS ARE more spectator-enhanced events. Road races are more low-key," said Henry, who raced in the first Old Capitol Criterium in 1977 ("I raced, I crashed, I got back up and finished okay). "Criteriums are more abundant in the U.S. It's real exciting for the public to see. You register some of the speed, the danger. People are more concerned with speed, cornering, sprinting."

Team tactics, Henry added, are also popular in criteriums.

"It's a great spectator sport," Nidey said. "You watch racers go fast around corners or climb the Jefferson Street hill."

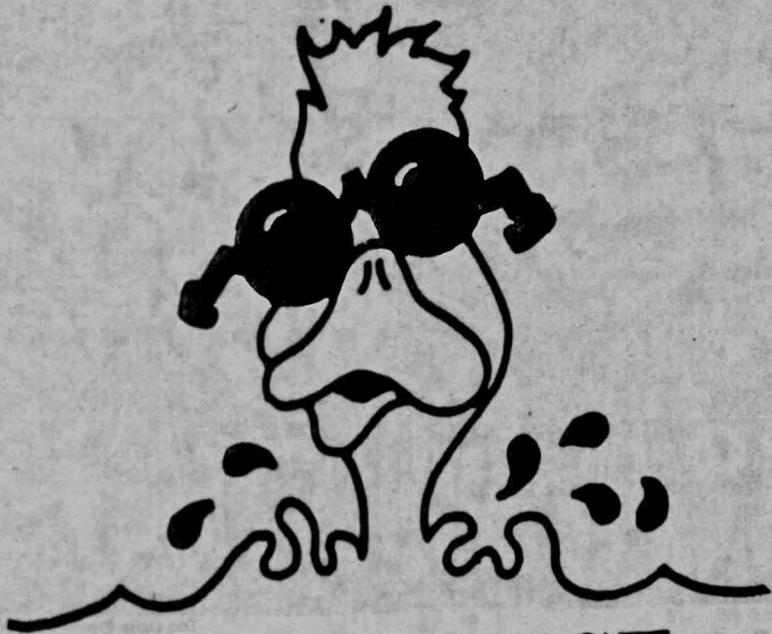

"It's exciting; it's unique. You don't usually see cycling. It's very challenging. It has all the attributes — quick corners, fast and a challenging hill."

Brian Furlong, an employee at Ordinary Bike Shop, 215 N. Linn St., will be competing in his first Old Capitol Criterium this weekend. Not only is a criterium popular, he said, but it is also dangerous.

"Criteriums are definitely an American phenomena. People in Europe are definitely into bike racing, but you won't find any criteriums there."

CAPITOL CRITERIUM

Defending champ set to repeat

Hayes points to Criterium's loaded field

By Hugh Donlan
The Daily Iowan

Chris Hayes is just starting to get serious about bicycle racing. The defending Old Capitol Criterium champion has taken the semester off from his industrial engineering studies at the UI to devote more time to his racing.

"I just wanted to take this semester off and race, just to see what I can do," Hayes said. "I'll be racing every weekend from now until September."

The recent addition to the Pepsi-Miyata racing team also said he and his teammate, Mark Parman, have an advantage over other area competitors in terms of training this spring.

THE TWO RIDERS participated in a month-long racing camp in February at the United States Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo., and spent another month racing in Florida.

"We're kind of ahead of everybody in the Midwest right now," the Muscatine, Iowa, native, said.

Hayes lived up to the expectations of his friends in a wire-to-wire victory over Tim Hinz of Ames to capture last year's Criterium. The role as one of the favorites this year does not bother the defending champion.

"I don't mind being considered a favorite," the 5-foot-11, 140-pounder said. "I think I'm stronger than I was last year, but I'm not that much faster. I should be able to ride well Sunday. I'll be pretty psyched for it."

RICK ROHRET, THE Old Capitol Publicity Director, said Hayes is a favorite this time around, but he will face some stiff competition from his teammate Parman, Jeff Boldt of Davenport, Scott Wall of the Central Iowa Racing Team and some others in the field.

"Last year he wasn't really a favorite and this year he is. You can't be sure about anything like that though," Rohret said. "It's a criterium and anything can happen. It's really hard to tell."

The Daily Iowan/Todd Mizener

Perhaps one of the worst times for a cyclist are the few moments before the race begins. This year's Old Capitol

Criterium opens Sunday with the Citizen's Division and the United States Cycling Federation Division.

One factor that will be in Hayes' favor this year will be riding with Parman, the 1987 Iowa Road Race Champion. Hayes said if he doesn't win the race, he hopes his training partner and roommate does.

"We want one of us to win the race," Hayes said. "I'd like it to be me, but if things don't work out that way, if he's having a better day, I'll work for him."

"WE JUST HAVE TO make sure a breakaway doesn't get away that doesn't have one of us in it."

Because Hayes will be watched closely by the other riders in the race, it will be difficult for both Pepsi-Miyata riders to break from the field. Racers are more apt to chase the defending champion than be left behind in the pack.

"A lot of times what happens is," Hayes said, "if there's two or three strong teams and each team gets a rider or two in the break, the race is pretty much over because all those guys in the field are all blocking and that means few of the guys can chase."

"Once you get out of sight and and you get a good gap, the field is pretty much resigned to the fact that it's going to stay that way."

AS HARD AS IT IS to win a criterium race, it's even harder to repeat as champion, especially when the strength of this year's field is considered.

Davenport Velosport and Louis Rich, also out of Davenport, will be two of the strongest teams represented. As well as the local club Bicyclists of Iowa City/Hawkeye Medical Club.

"I think I have a good chance to win, but I think it will be harder (than last year)," Hayes said. "The field will be bigger and, I think, better than it was last year."

The Old Capitol Criterium course is a short (30 laps) but exciting one, so the riders are forced to race at a faster pace for a shorter period of time than other events.

"It's the same course and you can't really change it," Rohret said. "If you're a hill climber, you're going to do well on this course. But it's a tough course for the beginning of the season."

"IF YOU'RE NOT prepared to go your maximum all the time, you're going to be dropped out of the race."

The most difficult part of the course is heading up the hill on Jefferson Street, in addition to the turns at Iowa Avenue, Dubuque Street and Washington Street. Hayes said he considers himself a climber and his slender build is conducive to his style.

"That's to my advantage," he said of the hill. "A lot of guys have trouble with hills. The hill helps break things up. On a flat course, things tend to stay together."

"It's not as bad as it looks. You come down off the other hill and you're going 30 miles an hour and your momentum carries you one-third to halfway up the hill."

"The hardest part is really the crest at the top (Madison Street) and then the block to Clinton Street. The hill is really good because that's where things happen."

Because bicycle racing, like many sports, requires as much mental concentration as it does physical endurance, Hayes said he's confident he'll be in top physical and mental condition Sunday.

"The days you're on are the days you're psyched and feeling good," the defending champion said. "I'm going to be psyched and I've been feeling good, too."

Women's race favorite still hasn't emerged

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

If last year is a valid gauge, one woman holds the key to the outcome of Sunday's women's final of the Old Capitol Criterium.

Elaine Hodges of Chicago, who raced to a huge lead just two laps into last year's feature women's event and cruised to a half-lap victory, is the favorite again — if she races.

Criterium Publicity Director Rick Rohret said Tuesday it is not yet known whether Hodges, who last year raced with the Strada Velosport Club, will return to defend her title.

"There's only two officially signed up so far, and I haven't heard if Hodges is coming or not," Rohret said. "We probably won't know for sure until the day of the race."

"I HOPE SHE'S not coming," joked Kym Life of Oskaloosa, Iowa, last year's runner-up and the champion in 1986. "We'll know her this year. We won't let her get away on us this time."

The women's final is slated for 12:50 p.m. and will begin at the corner of Clinton and Washington streets. A record 15 women are expected to race 12 kilometers, or 10 laps, around a layout which circles the Pentacrest.

If Hodges does not compete, the favorite's role would likely go to Life. Last weekend in race in Ames, Life won the overall series of events and feels she is still in top-notch racing condition.

"I've been training pretty hard," said Life, who nipped Iowa City's Amy Wilcox for second place last year. "I'd love to win this race again. It's one of my favorite races."

WILCOX WILL NOT be among the competitors Sunday because she has retired.

"I have two little kids to care for now," Wilcox said. "I'm retired."

Wilcox's absence leaves Karen Lunde as the lone representative from Iowa City expected to enter the race.

Lunde, who races with Hawkeye Med, an offshoot of the Bicyclists of Iowa City, was second in both the state Road Race and the state time trials last year.

Those placements qualified Lunde for a tryout for the national team in Colorado Springs, Colo. last year, but she was forced to abandon that opportunity to continue her medical studies.

"I'm still racing pretty strong," said Lunde, who has logged about 800 miles so far this year. "I've been concentrating a lot on my sprint and interval work lately."

"My problem is I tend to flip out in group situations. I'm going to make sure to get out there early and practice the course well once they get it set up. That's helped before."

Rohret stressed that entries will be accepted the day of the race and that the public is invited to compete. For further information about the Criterium, call Rohret at 351-5088.

CAPITOL CRITERIUM

Youngsters catch the thrill of racing

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Old Capitol Criterium is more than just a United States Cycling Federation class event.

The Criterium is divided into two categories, the USCF and Citizen division. Besides the typical women's, men's and junior subdivisions, there are divisions for the younger competitors.

There are four categories — two boys and two girls — for racers age 8-9 and 10-11 on a straight-line course, separate from the regular track. There will be youngster races with individual categories for big wheels, tricycles and unicycles.

Kurt Ackerson, age 9, will be returning this year to reclaim his crown. He is joined by his brother Kris, 12, who will also be competing.

THE CRITERIUM ISN'T the only race which Kurt and Kris compete in. Both boys are defending champions in their divisions of the Merchants Bank annual M&B race in Cedar Rapids.

Kurt said he has been training since he was 7 years old, and he plans to be victorious again this year.

"I like racing," Kurt said, "It's fun. I'll try to win again this year."

THE TWO STUDENTS OF Shimek Elementary began biking because of the strong influence from their parents.

Kent Ackerson said he began bicycling with acquaintances at work in the UI Physics Department and now bikes whenever the weather allows.

"I started bicycling with friends at work," Kent said. "I ride to work and I'll ride for the three seasons. When the snow comes that's where I draw the line."

Kent encouraged his wife, Kay, to bike and together they took the boys on several trips. According to Kay, when the Ackerson children were infants they were strapped into a two-wheel contraption and enjoyed Ragbrai.

"The big attraction of biking as a family is the flexibility of the sport," Kay said. "You can do it alone or with others."

Equipment could be key to Criterium win

By G. Hammond-Kunke
The Daily Iowan

In any type of racing, speed may not be everything but without it your machine (whether it be animate or not) is not going to be close to winning at the finish line. The same premise can be used when discussing racing equipment — without a proper bicycle, a racer doesn't stand a chance of getting the checkered flag.

In bicycle racing equipment — like Indianapolis 500-type championship race cars — the state-of-the-art trend in design is aerodynamics.

In the early 1980s, the key to being a winning bicyclist was in the weights being lighter. However, the emphasis has shifted to frames being constructed more aerodynamically, wheels with less spokes (from 36 to 32), different gearshifts and glued-on wheels.

With the 11th annual Old Capitol Criterium in Iowa City Sunday, there will be a number of serious racing enthusiasts bringing in 12-to-18-speed two-wheelers ranging in price from $500 to $3,500.

SOME OF THE TOP racers in the Midwest will fashion the top-flight equipment. Many of the local bike shops have been doing safety inspections and tuneups for some of the would-be racers. However, many of the contending racers tune their own precision machines.

There are a number of differences between a touring bicycle and one that is used for criterium racing. Besides being constructed more aerodynamically in the frame with a shorter wheel base, a racing bike is lighter, usually weighing between 21-23 pounds.

"The wheels have improved dramatically over the years," said Dale MacMillan, owner of Don's Bicycle Sales & Service, 1208 5th St. in Coralville.

"The bicycle business has really gotten complicated the past few years. Now a higher grade of alloy tubing is used to make the bicycle more rigid. The angles are cut down on the frame for quicker handling," MacMillan said.

Most racers purchase their bike as a group set, consisting of the hubs, head set, brakes, seat post, crank set and derailleurs.

LAST YEAR'S 24-MILE event had five racers a mere wheel apart at the finish line, indicating to MacMillan that "better equipment could make the difference" between winning and losing.

Another component to the racer's edge is the general wearing apparel used for a race. One-piece lycra skin suits are worn.

"The suits make the racer more aerodynamic to fight the major component of wind resistance," said Ian McLagan, bicycle manager at Racquet Master, 321 S. Gilbert St. in Iowa City.

Other racing attire includes: gloves, for better grip and to avoid cuts in case of a wipeout; hard shell helmets, which have been mandatory since 1986; sunglasses (also used to fend off bugs); specialized racing shoes; and toe clips or shoe grips, which lock the shoe onto the toe clips.

McLagan, a United States Cycling Federation Category II racer (the second-highest level of four categories), said shoe locks "make the racer 20 to 30 percent more efficient."

WHAT'S THE BEST equipment for McLagan? "It's in the legs. Those bikes take an incredibly bloody pounding — everyone's really smokin' goin' up those hills."

McLagan noted that racers' legs are so strong that they could cause the bicycle to inadvertently shift gears, but not anymore. Three years ago a gearshift was developed that locks the gears into place.

"If there is one most important component it would have to be the wheels because of the way you're saving weight through distance (on the rotation)," McLagan added.

David Eye, a road bicycle racer, employed by Ordinary Bike Shop, 215 N. Linn St., in Iowa City, echoed McLagan's thoughts: "The tire aspect is the most critical."

"Of course you have to be talented. In terms of equipment everybody who is serious about racing has the good equipment. What makes the difference are other factors too, the wind, the mental aspect, the aggressiveness of the racer — sprinting ability, speed as opposed to endurance," Eye said.

"In a mass start equipment is not really a deciding factor," Chris Hayes, who will be competing in the event as a team Pepsi-Miyata racer, said. "In an indoor timed sprint type of race which might be decided by two one-hundredths of a second, then equipment can be a factor."

Hayes won the Category I-II race last year.

Riverrun aiming for energetic field

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The question isn't whether Dallas Robertson will win the 10K portion of the 9th annual Riverrun, that is a given. The biggest mystery should be what time the Iowa City native will post in this Sunday's event.

That sound a bit presumptuous unless Robertson's track record in previous Riverruns is taken into account.

He has won the event every time he has entered it. Inclusive in that statistic is a string of three consecutive wins culminated by last year's crown. Before that he spread three more wins over a five-year period that dates back to his first Riverrun title in his initial participation in the event in 1980.

THE ONLY REASON that Robertson didn't compete continuously since 1980 is because of conflicts with yet another race.

"I missed a few races because they were on the same weekend as the Boston Marathon," he said. "I try to run in every race I can because I love the sport."

For all those who say, 'Well he was probably a high school or collegiate runner with a glorified portfolio,' think again.

Robertson began running in 1975 as a way to lose weight and didn't race competitively until he ran in the Virginia Beach Marathon in 1979.

While the men's 10K already has its favorite going into the race, the women's 10K should offer more parity.

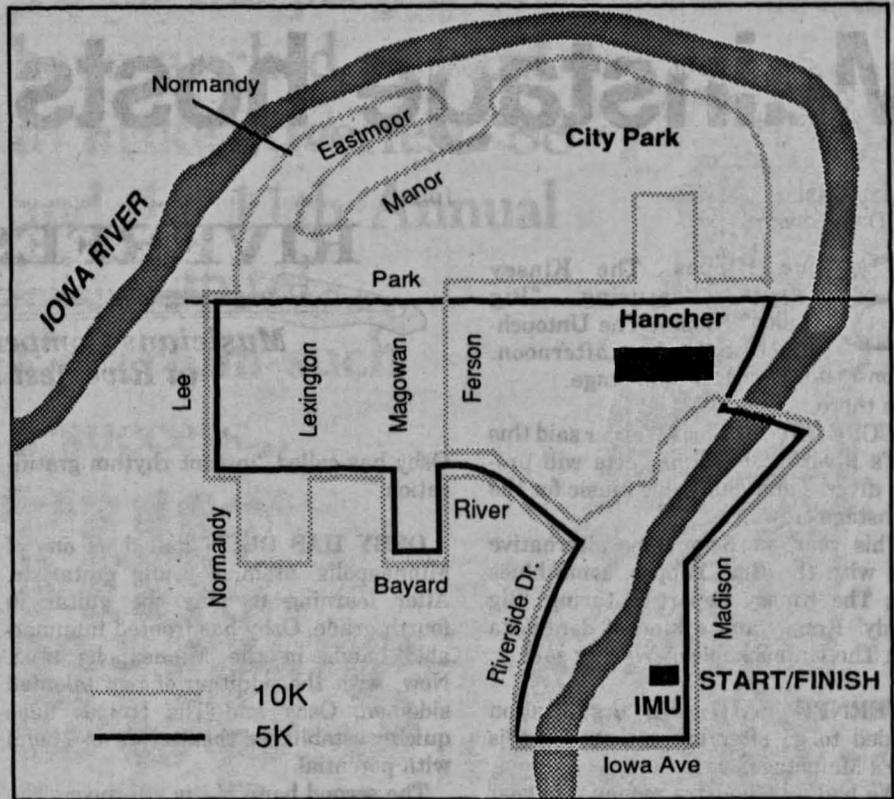

MURIEL NAUMANN IS the defending champion in a race that has been traditionally tight, according to the chairman of the Riverrun, Libby Tonske.

"The men's race has been dominated by Dallas (Robertson)," she said. "But the women's race has proved to be competitive and exciting."

Tonske, in her second year of working on the Riverrun, has had a hand in the addition of a new event to this year's competition.

A 5K walk, sponsored by Reebok, will join the agenda of the 5K and 10K runs scheduled to begin at 8:30 a.m. The one mile Fun Run will start at 8 a.m. Tonske said that the increased interest in walking has brought about the need for this race.

"Walking is so popular that most races have this category," she said. "Reebok offered to sponsor the race so we thought we would take advantage of the opportunity."

FROM 9 A.M. TO 11 a.m. on the day of the competition a workshop will be held in the Main Lounge of the Union where organizations like Health Iowa, New Life Fitness and the Iowa Training Staff will be on hand to provide insight on sports-injury prevention as well as information about health and fitness.

For those who still wish to register for the race, the deadline is Saturday until 8 p.m. for the $15 fee. Race applications may be picked up and turned into the University Box Office located in the Union.

Because of the confusion that can result from day-of-the-race entries, Tonske emphasized that no applications will be received on Sunday.

"We can't allow people to enter at the last second," she said. "It has proved to cause too many problems in the past."

Mainstage hosts music variety

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Blue Hippos. The Kinsey Report featuring "Big Daddy" Kinsey. The Untouchables. Saturday afternoon. Union Field. Riverfest Mainstage.

Be there. SCOPE Director Chris Werner said this year's Riverfest headliner acts will provide diverse and danceable music for the Mainstage crowd.

"This year, we have some alternative rock with the Blue Hippos, some blues with The Kinsey Report featuring 'Big Daddy' Kinsey and a kind of dance/ska with The Untouchables," Werner said.

WERNER SAID HIS organization decided to go after bigger acts for this year's Mainstage event.

"We had a little extra money this year so we decided to go after some bigger names," Werner said. "We were looking to provide some bands that hadn't played extensively in the Iowa City area."

The first feature band, Minneapolis' Blue Hippos, is scheduled to take the stage at 1:05 p.m. Since the release of the group's 12-inch debut EP and its "Forty Forty" LP in 1987, the Hippos have enjoyed wide critical acclaim.

The trio — guitarist and vocalist Paul Osby, bassist Alan Schroeter and drummer James Petroski — blend funk, blues, rock and jazz into a unique style that

RIVERFEST MUSIC

Musicians Compete and Entertain at Riverfest Mainstage.

Osby has called "instant rhythm gratification."

OSBY HAS BEEN hailed as one of Minneapolis' premier young guitarists. After learning to play the guitar in fourth grade, Osby has fronted innumerable bands in the Minneapolis area. Now, with the addition of two talented sidemen, Osby and The Hippos have quickly established themselves as a band with potential.

The second band of the afternoon, The Kinsey Report featuring "Big Daddy" Kinsey, combines two generations of experienced musicians into a contemporary electric blues and funk style.

Led by their father and musical mentor, renowned slide guitar and blues harp player Lester "Big Daddy" Kinsey, the Kinsey brothers have established a reputation as an innovative contemporary blues band.

Guitarist Donald Kinsey has worked with The Rolling Stones, bluesmen Albert King and Roy Buchanan and with late reggae stars Peter Tosh and Bob Marley. Kinsey toured with Marley in 1976 as a member of The Wailers but left the band after he was almost shot in Jamaica during an attempt on Marley's life.

IN 1984, DONALD Kinsey reunited with his family to form The Kinsey Report with brothers Kenneth on bass and Ronald on drums along with Chicagoan Ron Prince on guitar.

Donald produced his father's 1985 debut LP Bad Situation and the younger generation of Kinseys have enjoyed critical success. Despite their own success, the younger Kinseys plan to continue to tour with their father.

The final band of the afternoon, The Untouchables, formed in 1981 and has toured the U.S. opening for Cyndi Lauper, X, The Psychedelic Furs, UB40 and King Sunny Ade. They have also become popular on the campus circuit, headlining last year's SPIN/MTV college tour and performing live on last year's MTV Daytona Beach Spring Break coverage.

THE UNTOUCHABLES opened UB40 at a Hancher Auditorium performance three years ago, and Werner says they were exceptionally well-received by the Iowa City crowd.

"In a lot of people's opinion, Untouchables just blew UB40 off of stage," Werner said. "They really put on an excellent show."

The band includes Clyde Grimes, Jim Miller and Chuck Askerneese, who founded the band in Los Angeles, along with Tony Brewster, Willy McNeil, Derek Breakfield.

The Untouchables also feature DeU Horns, a three-piece horn section that adds to the band's high-energy blend of soul, reggae and ska.

WERNER SAID HE expects the lineup of names and diverse musical styles to attract a large, enthusiastic crowd.

"I think this is probably going to be the best Riverfest event in recent years," Werner said.

The afternoon's entertainment is scheduled to begin at noon with the winner of the 1988 Riverfest "Battle of the Bands" competition.

Today's final round will include Easton from Des Moines; LaGrange, Ill.; Drasbu from Des Moines; The Incredible DayC Bomber Boys from Iowa City; and Heavens With Betsy from Iowa City.

Werner said if rain interferes with the outdoor show, the bands would be moved inside to the Union Main Lounge.

Riverfest celebrates 10th year

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

With more than 8,000 people expected to attend Riverfest this year, the event is moving toward the prominent position its UI founders envisioned 10 years ago.

Making its first appearance in 1978, Riverfest was conceived as an event where students and Iowa City residents could get together to celebrate spring.

Former UI Associate Dean of Students Ray Musten said the original Riverfest idea resulted from brainstorming between students and him. Several students came to him inquiring if there was potential for a spring event similar to UI's fall Homecoming.

"THE WHOLE IDEA THEN was that some day this could be a very exciting event," Musten said. "We wanted to begin something comparable to Indiana University's Indy Little 500 or Iowa State University's VISHA."

Musten said the name "Riverfest" was chosen to emphasize that the river does not separate the campus but rather provides a cultural and artistic union, an idea stressed by then-UI President Willard Boyd.

He said the first Riverfest was a small, unglamorous one-day event. About 150 attended the event on a cloudy April day. Families and students walked along the Iowa River looking at arts and crafts tables or having their faces painted like clowns.

Current Riverfest commission member Sue Larkin, who investigated Riverfest history as part of her duties, said she was impressed with the way planners organized the first Riverfest.

"I WAS SURPRISED HOW the first one was so organized," she said. "Looking at the brochure and the events, you could tell they really put a lot into it."

Larkin said the event has doubled in size the last several years and that much of the success was due to the good weather Riverfest has experienced recently.

Riverfest activities have grown and expanded since its 1978 beginning. Riverfest is well known for its "Battle of the Bands" contest, Old Capitol Criterium bicycle race and the Riverrun. Taste of Iowa City was incorporated into the festivities in 1984, when local businesses and the Acacia Fraternity joined to sell take-out food.

THE RIVERFEST Commission also continued to grow. The commission, comprised in 1978 of only a few students, is now a year-round planning committee which provides students a chance to participate in a community event and gain practical organizational experience.

The Riverfest Commission received $5,900 from the Student Senate, according to Finance Executive Lynn Rose. She said the profits the committee earns from T-shirt sales are put into a Riverfest account for the following year.

"The T-shirt sales are the one thing that keeps our heads above water," Rose said.

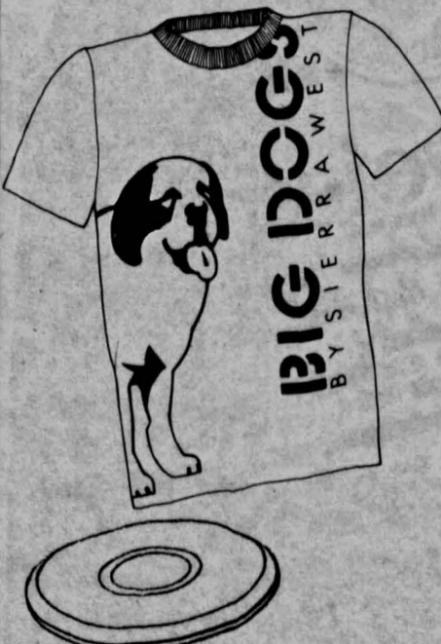

She added some of the profits made by Union Field vendors are donated to charities.

Riverfest Advertising Executive Susan Przblyski, a UI junior said the commission has helped her further advertising career goals.

"AS AN EXECUTIVE, I have gained incredible experience," Przblyski said. "With this job I have learned about all aspects of advertising."

Saturday's Main Stage will feature a professional master of ceremonies. Jack Gallagher, a Californian employed by AP Talent NY/LA, will coordinate the show. Joel Rosenstein, the 1988 Riverfest Director, said the commission also hired professional bands like "The Untouchables" and "The Blue Hippos" to ensure quality entertainment.
