Differences define mental health, illness

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

Her first panic attack took place on the night of May 8, 1987. Shyla Osborn, a UI junior, remembers the date clearly. She couldn't breathe properly and she was scared. Later that night at the hospital, the doctor she spoke to called it an anxiety attack.

"In retrospect, I started feeling depressed in March, but I began having the anxiety attacks in May. After they happened I felt numb and deadened, not like myself," Osborn said. "After an attack I had a diminished affect-level. I wasn't experiencing sights, sounds or feelings as fully as I had been."

But what originally was thought to be an anxiety disorder was eventually diagnosed as clinical depression. Osborn began taking Imipramine, a drug used to treat depression. The drug was administered in gradually increasing dosages because of the strong side effects.

"IT WAS like having a constant hangover," Osborn said. "I was dizzy, had headaches and always had a coppery taste in my mouth."

Osborn said the drug took about a month to begin working, so originally all she experienced were side effects.

"You think it's not working and you're scared. Everyone says, 'Hang in there,' but it's hard," Osborn said.

According to Carol Spaziani, chairwoman of the Alliance for the Mentally Ill of Johnson County, there is a difference between the terms "mental health" and "mental illness." Mental health is a more general term that deals with stress and personal problems, while mental illness is a chronic brain disorder, she said.

What Osborn was experiencing was more than just the stress-related problems that are a sign of poor mental health. Osborn was exhibiting signs of a bipolar disorder of mood.

"PEOPLE WITH mental health problems are people who are not ill," Spaziani said. "We call them the worried well. They are going through a rough time."

She said mental illness is demonstrated by an impairment in thinking, a change in emotions or character or the experiencing of delusions.

Affective disorders include manic-depression, evidenced by extreme highs and lows in emotions, and major depression.

"These problems tend to come on people in young adulthood, usually between the ages of 18 through 32, who have no occasion to notice it until it happens," Spaziani said.

She said the problems are not apparent until they are activated by a stressful time or incident in the patient's life. There is no cure, but a great deal of research is being conducted.

Carol Chollar Lear, case manager for the community support services at the Mid-Eastern Iowa Community Mental Health Center, said mental illness is comprised of bipolar affective disorders of mood and affective disorders of thought, such as schizophrenia, as well as various personality disorders.

3 British soldiers killed, IRA claims responsibility

By William Tuohy
Los Angeles Times

BONN, West Germany — Three British servicemen based in West Germany were slain and three more were wounded in the Netherlands early Sunday, and the Irish Republican Army later claimed responsibility for the killings.

The off-duty servicemen were attacked in two separate incidents while they were on weekend passes during May Day festivities in the Netherlands, just across the border from their Royal Air Force base in the Federal Republic.

One airman was killed and two were wounded when their car was raked by sub-machine gun fire in the town of Roermond in southern Holland.

A half-hour later and 30 miles south, in the hamlet of Nieuwbergen, two airmen died and one was badly injured when a bomb exploded in their car as they got into it after leaving a discotheque.

THE DISCO is a haunt for off-duty British servicemen, and the nearby streets in the early hours were still filled with people marking Queen Beatrix's 50th birthday, celebrated over the weekend.

The attack, for which the IRA in Belfast claimed responsibility, was apparently in retaliation for the March slaying of three IRA guerrillas in Gibraltar.

British sources have reported that the slaying of the IRA guerrillas, who were allegedly intent on placing a bomb in the British colony at the tip of Spain, was carried out by an ambush set by troopers of the British army's top-secret, anti-terrorist arm, the Special Air Service.

And a recent, controversial British television program quoted witnesses in Gibraltar as saying that the IRA militants — two men and a woman — were slain while trying to surrender.

ACCORDING TO the BBC in Belfast, an IRA caller issued a statement warning British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher: "Disengage from Ireland and there will be peace," adding that if Britain does not disengage, "there will be no haven for your military personnel and you will regularly be at airports awaiting your death."

This was an apparent reference to the prime minister's recent receiving of the coffins of two British soldiers, slain during an IRA funeral in Belfast, when their bodies were flown back to England.

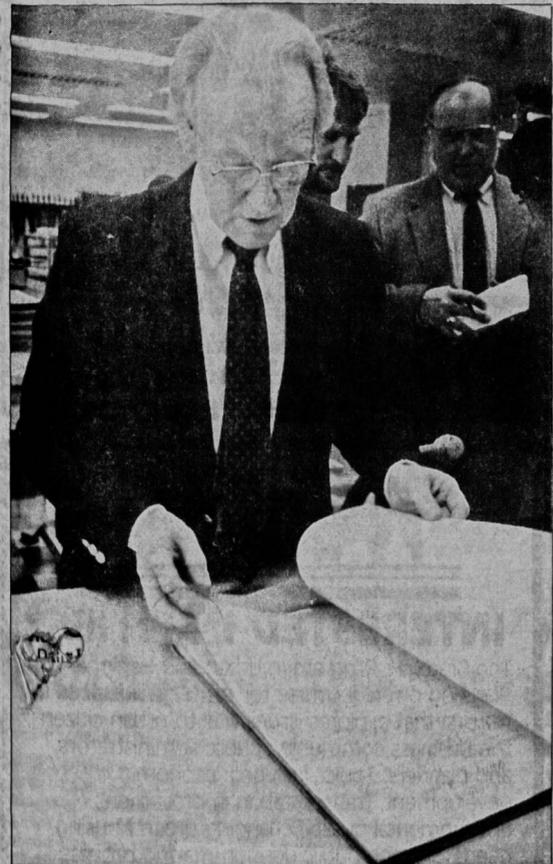

After Sunday's attack, British Defense Secretary George Younger said that he was "appalled" by the incidents.

He said that security measures for British forces in West Germany would be reviewed, but he emphasized that the servicemen — off-duty, in civilian clothes and unarmed — could never be fully protected against terrorist attacks.

THE DEAD men, Younger added, were "just totally innocent people, murdered outside the law."

In Dublin, Irish Prime Minister Charles Haughey declared: "I totally condemn the killing by the IRA of British soldiers in the Netherlands."

He added, "I would like to extend my deepest sympathy to the relatives."

Take Back the Night draws 400 against sexual violence

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

A comment made by Indiana University men's basketball Coach Bobby Knight drew fire from a speaker at the Take Back the Night rally and march on the UI Pentacrest Friday night.

Speaker Cathryn Johnson, author of If You Were Raped: What Every Woman Needs to Know, attributed Knight as saying last week, "Stress is like rape — if it's inevitable you might as well relax and enjoy it."

Johnson said the perpetuation of sexual violence is, in part, the responsibility of vocal media personalities who make similar remarks. She said treating the violent act of rape as if it were an everyday part of society is something women must unite against.

"We've come a long way thanks to nights like this," Johnson said. "We cannot rest until our Bobby Knights are replaced with nights like this."

SHE SAID VIOLENCE is becoming an accepted part of young people's relationships. Recent polls reveal high-school boys and girls think it acceptable for a boy to force a girl who has a sexually active reputation to have sex unwillingly, according to Johnson.

She added laws are not tough enough and not consistent throughout the country — for example, spouse rape is not a crime in Iowa, but it is in Florida.

"We all need to fight for laws that see rape as an act of violence and never as a sexual act," she said.

The annual Take Back the Night rally and march was sponsored by the UI Women's Caucus together with local businesses and student groups. Johnson and other women speakers, musicians and poets addressed the crowd in what women's caucus members termed an "empowering" display of unity.

ABOUT 400 MEN and women at the rally were told violence begins in families, is perpetuated in society and spans along a continuum that encompasses the world.

UI sophomore Alix O'Gorman, a rally organizer, said Take Back the Night marches have taken place on activist campuses and at the UI for many years.

"The symbolic meaning of the march politically, but tonight physically, is that when we unite we will be able to walk alone," she said.

The march route was designed to include high-risk areas around campus where women have been raped, attacked or would feel uncomfortable walking alone.

The march went from the Pentacrest past the Clinton Street residence halls and behind North

Strike leads to violence in Poland

WARSAW, Poland — Police and pro-Solidarity demonstrators clashed in Warsaw and Gdansk Sunday and anti-government demonstrations were mounted in five other Polish cities, marking a tense May Day on which workers at the nation's largest steel mill remained on strike for the sixth day.

In the Baltic seaport of Gdansk, the birthplace of the now-banned Solidarity trade union, demonstrators engaged in running skirmishes with police for 40 minutes. Witnesses said that two police officers were beaten when they tried to enter a churchyard to apprehend rock-throwing demonstrators.

In Warsaw, police clashed briefly with demonstrators following a rally outside St. Stanislaw Kostka Church, a center of Solidarity support in the capital.

The demonstrators dispersed after a one-hour standoff with police, who were determined to prevent the anti-government rally from spreading beyond the neighborhood of the church.

THE GOVERNMENT spokesman said that at least 33 people were arrested across the country in what Solidarity had urged as national "day of protest."

The Polish leader, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, speaking at official May Day ceremonies, took a hard line against the wave of labor unrest that has beset Poland in the past week.

"Our country is at a turning point" in its economic reform plan, Jaruzelski said in a rally preceding the traditional May Day parade, suggesting that increased wage demands from workers could derail the government's faltering plan to revive the troubled economy.

"To give more, one has to take away from somebody else, or produce more," Jaruzelski said. "One cannot solve every complex problem very quickly."

As Jaruzelski spoke, hundreds of workers at the vast Lenin steel works in Nowa Huta were attending a mass conducted by two priests who had been spirited into the sealed-off plant by workers who, since Tuesday, have been demanding a 50 percent pay increase to offset price increases imposed by the government in February and March.

UI professor dies of cancer

Flags will be flown at half mast today in honor of UI Oboe Professor James Lakin, who died of cancer last week. Lakin was a professor in the UI School of Music for 20 years. He is survived by his wife, Jean, a son and a daughter.

Japanese executives visit

Seventeen Chicago-based Japanese business executives and officials will visit Cedar Rapids and Iowa City May 2-3 as guests of the UI and development groups in the two cities. The centerpiece of the visit will be a concert by the Tokyo String Quartet in Hancher Auditorium May 2. The Japanese delegation and area business representatives will have dinner with UI Interim President Richard Remington and other UI officials before the concert. Afterward, the entire group will meet members of the quartet at a reception hosted by Hancher Auditorium Director Wallace Chappell. The delegation includes Yoshio Karita, consul general of Japan for the Chicago region, and representatives of 12 major Japanese corporations doing business in the United States. Also attending the events Monday night will be Hiroyuki Kasuga, head of a UI alumni group in Japan.

The visit is an outgrowth of efforts undertaken by the UI, in cooperation with the Iowa City Area Development Group and Priority One, a development group representing the Cedar Rapids area, to promote eastern Iowa as an attractive base for Japanese business investment.

In addition to the concert, the delegation will visit with Cedar Rapids and Iowa City businessmen and tour industries in the two cities.

LASA establishes award

The UI Liberal Arts Student Association has announced the establishment of the Lane Davis Excellence in Education Award.

This award, named in honor of UI Political Science Professor Lane Davis, will be presented annually by LASA to honor an outstanding professor in the College of Liberal Arts.

On May 3 at 6 p.m. in Schaeffer Hall Room 333, the award will be presented to Davis.

Farmers' Market to open

The opening of the 16th season of the Iowa City Farmers' Market will take place on Wednesday. The season will run from May 4 through Oct. 29, with the market being open on Wednesdays, 5:30-7:30 p.m., and Saturdays, 7:30-11:30 a.m. It is held under the College Street bridge.

Fresh produce, baked goods and plants are some of the items available from individuals who actually make or produce items.

Contract for school awarded

Selzer Construction Co. Inc. of Iowa City has been awarded the general construction contract for the 1988 addition and alterations to Lincoln Elementary School in Iowa City. The amount of the contract is $361,563.

Mel Selzer, president of Selzer Construction Co., stated in a release this will be the fifth addition to the original school. Architect for the project is Roland Wehner, of Wehner, Patschull and Pfiffner PC, an Iowa City firm.

Professors develop books

Two UI College of Dentistry professors have helped to develop textbooks for a new series of dental publications with an Iowa emphasis.

James Pinkham, who heads pediatric dentistry at the UI, served as a senior editor for a multidisciplinary textbook on pediatric dentistry. The book, published in October, will be adopted for next year's pediatric dentistry course at the UI.

Richard Walton, who is chairman of the Endodontics Department, served as primary editor for an undergraduate endodontics textbook to be published in November.

Iowa City officials to pick construction firm for plant

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City officials will be deciding within the next week which of three bids received for construction on the city's new wastewater treatment plant will be accepted.

The low bid of the three was received from the Paul A. Laurence Co. of Minneapolis, which said it could renovate the city's current plant and construct the new plant for a total cost of $25.2 million — about $2 million less than what Metcalf and Eddy, the city's consulting firm, had estimated it would cost.

Metcalf and Eddy estimated that renovating the city's Pollution Control Plant, 1000 S. Clinton St., would cost about $13 million and the construction of a new plant south of town would cost $14.2 million.

C.D. Smith Construction of Fond du Lac, Wis., also submitted a bid which was lower than Metcalf and Eddy's estimates. The company estimated the total cost of construction for both facilities at $26.6 million.

THE OTHER bidder, M.A. Mortenson Co. of Minneapolis, bid a total of $28 million for both projects.

Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said he was pleased with the low cost of the bids, but cautioned the city could still have problems regarding the cost of the plant.

"We were certainly pleased the bids came in under (Metcalf and Eddy's) revised estimates for the cost of the plant, but they still far exceed what we originally estimated the plant would cost," Atkins said. "We're not out of the woods yet on this."

The city still must accept bids on the cost of interceptors and neighborhood sewers for the plant project. The cost of that part of the project has been estimated at about $10 million.

Atkins said the city will have to try to sell more bonds in an effort to fund the project, adding that this effort will probably be hampered by a pending lawsuit brought by the UI against the city in a dispute over the city's sewer rates.

"We're going to have to go back on the bond market and try to sell enough to fund the project," Atkins said. "Basically we have no choice — we have to start on this as soon as possible."

The bid by the Laurence Co. is currently being reviewed by Metcalf and Eddy, which may recommend the company to the Iowa City Council if the bid is approved. Atkins said he hopes the bids will be ready for the city council to review by Tuesday's council meeting.

A UI student was being held in the Johnson County Jail Friday on $5,000 bond on charges of second-degree theft and possession of stolen property after he allegedly sold a stolen Apple II computer to a police officer, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Akaninyene E. Iniama, 22, 1926 Broadway St., allegedly sold the Apple computer and equipment valued at over $1,000 to a police officer for a negotiated price of $350 which the officer paid for in marked bills, according to court records.

The computer items were reported stolen from Willowwind School, 226 Johnston St. Among the items were an Apple II Plus computer, monitor and keyboard, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for May 9.

Two UI students were charged Thursday with fourth-degree criminal mischief and second-degree burglary after they allegedly damaged cars and were caught with stolen property, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Tom Kollasch, 24, no address available, was with another individual when he tried to kick in the rear door of the housing project at about 4 p.m. Saturday. The building was not open at the time. The men, who allegedly were intoxicated at the time, were evicted from the residence. No charges were filed, according to the report.

Police attempted to find Kollasch on Saturday night after members of the project discovered prescription drugs were missing from a resident's room, according to the report.

At about 9:45 a.m. Sunday, Kollasch was at the project and admitted to stealing the drugs, according to the report.

Kollasch also was charged with criminal trespass and driving while under suspension, according to the report.

Report: At least five reports were filed with the Iowa City Police Department Friday and Saturday of glass being broken by unknown individuals shooting marbles through windows, according to police reports.

Residents on Grantwood and Friendship streets, Burns Avenue, Wakefield Court and Taylor Drive reported that sometime Friday night, a marble was thrown through a front window of the residence, and in one case, the window of a car parked at a home, according to reports.

Two vehicles parked at homes on H and Capital streets were reported to have glass broken, but nothing specific was identified as the cause, according to reports.

All totaled, damage to the vehicles was more than $2,000, according to the report.

Report: A number of items reportedly were reported Saturday to have been left in the lot of an Iowa City home, according to police reports.

The realtor yard signs, two mailboxes, a lawn ornament, a fire extinguisher, a serving tray and two syringes were left on a property in the 500 block of Third Avenue, according to the report.

Report: An unidentified white male was reported at about 1:25 p.m. Thursday to have thrown another individual against a wall in Phillips Hall, according to Campus Security reports.

Report: Approximately $100 damage was reported at about 4:30 a.m. Friday in Burge Residence Hall Carnival Room after foil in an oven caught on fire, according to Campus Security reports.

Report: About $400 damage was reported Friday morning to Quadrangle Residence Hall when a window at one of the entrances was broken, according to Campus Security reports.

allegedly involved in an argument Friday when Rogers pushed Sieve out of bed and in the process scratched her neck and wrist, drawing blood and causing her pain and injury, according to court records.

Sieve also allegedly scratched Rogers on the leg during the argument. A preliminary hearing in the case is set for May 17.

An Iowa City man was found guilty Friday of disorderly conduct after he was beating on a door and yelling loudly at a female to open the door, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David Omer Davidson, 28, 502 N. Dodge St., was found by officers hiding behind a couch on the floor of the apartment after officers were called by the subject whose door was being pounded on by Davidson, according to court records.

Davidson appeared intoxicated and when questioned about the incident stated, "I'll beat the door if I want to." Officers learned that Davidson also resided at the residence and had a key in his possession to open the door, according to court records.

Davidson was fined $48 in court, according to court records.

U OF I PARKING NOTICE

NIGHT RESERVED PARKING ZONES IMPLEMENTED

Portions of University parking lots 3, 4, 30, and all of Lot 35 have recently been designated as protected evening parking zones for Faculty and Staff. Between 5:30 PM and 7:30 AM, and all day on Saturdays and Sundays, cars parked in these zones will be required to display a reserved permit. Faculty/Staff Reserved and Ramp permits from all lots are valid in any of these designated facilities during these times. Vehicles without the proper permits will be considered in violation and will receive a ticket. Commuter, meter and storage permits are not valid in these zones. Regulations for weekday parking within these facilities, and existing regulations for evening parking in other facilities will remain unchanged.

The zones are designated by signs and will be further highlighted with red flags through the remainder of the semester. Lot 3 is located directly south of the English Philosophy Building, lot 4 is east and north of Gilmore Hall, lot 30 is west of the Health Sciences Library, and lot 35 is between the Engineering Building and the offices of the Security Department.

These areas have been set aside in order to provide parking for University faculty and staff who must teach or work in the evenings. The majority of reserved parking spaces will remain open at night so that students, staff and the public may use them while attending University functions.

UI president's house repairs said to be basic maintenance

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The estimated $300,000 in repairs to the UI president's house at 102 Church St. will be largely restricted to basic maintenance of the interior ground floor and exterior of the 80-year-old structure, UI Facilities Planning Director Richard Gibson said during a tour of the house Friday.

"We're not up here trying to do anything fancy," Gibson told members of the UI Campus Planning Committee. "That's not our intention. We don't anticipate any remodeling at all in this project."

The state Board of Regents in April gave the committee approval to solicit bids from architects for the project.

Gibson said the project will consist of basic maintenance such as installing a new air conditioning unit, replacing parts of the slate roof and repairing water damage.

THE CURRENT air conditioning system — which was installed on a cement bank facing the Iowa River sometime during the 1960s — is about half the size of what is needed in the 11,000 gross square-foot building, he said, adding the basement and the attic should be air-conditioned to prevent water damage.

A new air conditioning system will probably cost between $80,000 and $100,000, he said.

UI Campus Planning Committee Senior Architect Steve Buckman said the current air conditioner is a two-pipe coil unit. It should be replaced with another coil unit, he said, but the new system should have more fan coils and an increased chilling capacity.

BUCKMAN SAID most of the slate roof will also need to be replaced. Although parts of it were fixed during a partial renovation five years ago, he said, there are still masonry problems which allow leakage.

Campus Planning Committee member Mary Ameche said the northside dining area is the only room to be touched-up in the last six months, but she said the new paint job has already been marred by water damage.

Cracking wood, paint and plaster and peeling wallpaper in the house have also resulted from water damage, Gibson said. But he said if the roof is repaired and a larger air conditioner is installed to reduce moisture, water damage will not be an ongoing problem.

Five or six years ago — just before former UI President James O. Freedman and his family moved in — second-floor bedrooms, the ground-floor kitchen and several bathrooms were remodeled, Gibson said.

GIBSON SAID during that project the architects "did kind of a paint-up on the outside."

"If the wood was strong enough to hold up a coat of paint, we didn't mess with it," he said. "Now that's kind of catching up with us, so we need to deal with some of that stuff."

There is water damage throughout the house, but the ground-floor living room, with plaster ceiling and walls cracking, is the part of the house most obviously damaged by water.

Gibson said the cracked plaster can be fixed by placing burlap swatches on the walls and ceiling and plastering over them.

First-floor public areas, such as the living room, should be a top priority during this renovation since they will be used for receptions and other entertaining. Second- and third-floor rooms, although in need of maintenance, are not seen by guests and may not be fixed during this renovation, he said.

GIBSON SAID the water-damaged wood trimming on the exterior, especially on the north porch, needs to be replaced or repainted. The house also needs plastering and painting on both the exterior and the interior, he said.

Buckman said the wooden railings lining the third story's exterior have also been water-damaged and need to be replaced.

Other maintenance work Gibson said may be included in the current renovation is cleaning or replacement of the exterior's brick and mortar, replacement of electrical outlets, sink and bathtub faucets and possibly some painting, wallpapering, carpeting and furnishing of the ground floor.

"We have some very eclectic furniture of questionable quality," Gibson said.

Gibson said he expects the renovation to start with the outside of the house this summer.

Taxpayers have fewer difficulties with forms, expect more refunds

United Press International

DES MOINES — Just when it was safe to be a mail handler again, the state tax filing deadline comes Monday and state revenue officials expect post offices will be swamped with 100,000 last-minute returns.

Because April 30 fell on a Saturday, the official deadline was extended to midnight May 2 this year, said Gerald Bair, director of the Iowa Department of Revenue.

The revenue department has received 1.06 million returns leading up to the final weekend, some 30,000 returns ahead of last year, Bair said. About 1.11 million returns are expected altogether, officials said.

Tax officials expected to see large numbers of tardy or last-minute filers due to revamped federal and state income tax forms, but more taxpayers may have discovered they were receiving refunds, prompting early mailings, Bair said.

million have been issued to more than 400,000 Iowa taxpayers with the average refund about $207. This time last year 355,000 refunds totaling $75.5 million had been issued.

Iowa taxpayers appeared to be having no difficulty filling out the state forms, Bair said, with the error rate around 11 percent, the same as last year.

Calls to the revenue department's main taxpayer service number have been running around 2,500 a week.

was arrested on a disorderly conduct charge dating back to last year and on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon. He was identified as Robert Schlichting, 36, of East Dubuque, Ill. Authorities also confiscated 16 eggs, but said none were hurled at marchers.

Organizers said Saturday's march, which included gay-rights activists from as far away as New York City and Washington, D.C., was called to draw attention to violence that marked the smaller disturbance last September.

Although Saturday's demonstrators were greeted with heckling and obscenities, police said there was no violence.

University of Iowa FALL SEMESTER 1988 COURSE CHANGES

Registration is now in progress. Students will register through the Registration Center, Room 17, Calvin Hall. New courses and closed courses are posted in this space. The closed list is in numerical order and indicates the department, course, and section numbers followed by a code (CD) indicating why the course is closed.

Code 1: the course or section is full
Code 2: the course or section has been cancelled
Code 3: the course or section is not available until the first day of classes
Code 4: the course or section is pending (undetermined)

These lists should be reviewed and adjustments made prior to entering the Registration Center. Registration information is printed in the Schedule of Courses.

French urged not to vote for Mitterrand

PARIS — Tens of thousands of supporters Sunday cheered right-wing extremist Jean-Marie Le Pen, who urged them to vote against President Francois Mitterrand in the final round of presidential balloting May 8.

But the one-eyed former paratrooper stopped short of wholeheartedly endorsing Mitterrand's opponent, Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, saying that to vote for the conservative was to choose "the lesser of two evils."

"No, no, no, not one vote for Francois Mitterrand," Le Pen shouted in a lengthy harangue to the tumultuous applause of supporters. "The most important thing is to avoid Mitterrand and socialism."

Report cites U.S. for exporting cancer

WASHINGTON — The U.S. tobacco industry, constrained at home by labeling restrictions and a ban on television advertising, is exporting a "cancer epidemic" by heavily promoting cigarette ad campaigns abroad and falsely labeling its products, a World Health Organization official charged Sunday.

"We see a double standard here. We are the nation that's addressed malnutrition and infectious disease in the world. But as a nation we are now exporting our cancer epidemic," said Gregory Connolly of WHO. "Our high-powered marketing and advertising programs overseas are used in many developing countries to promote smoking."

Meanwhile, federal officials disclosed that Surgeon General C. Everett Koop will release a report in several weeks showing the addictive powers of nicotine, especially compared to other drugs. The report is likely to trigger demands for additional restrictions on the sale and marketing of cigarettes in the United States, officials predicted.

Gore campaign incurs $1.7 million debt

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Sen. Albert Gore Jr.'s suspended Democratic presidential campaign will wind up with an estimated debt of $1.7 million, campaign finance chairman Johnny Hayes said in a report published Sunday.

"We feel we have the commitments from people across the country where we hopefully can get the debt wiped out by the end of the year," Hayes told The Tennessean.

Of the $1.7 million Hayes expects the campaign to owe, about $1.4 million will go to banks and $300,000 for expenses like office rentals and other routine campaign services and goods.

Herpes offers clues to human origins

New information about the earliest origins of human sexual activity is being obtained from viruses that cause cold sores and venereal disease.

By studying the composition of herpes viruses, researchers at the University of Mississippi Medical Center have concluded that distinctly human sexual behavior, including face-to-face mating and sexual attractiveness of females throughout their entire menstrual cycles, began more than 8 million years ago.

The new research also suggests that humans began to walk upright about the same time.

The Mississippi researchers' conclusions, published in the prestigious Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, are important because there is no other hard evidence to suggest when such behaviors began, said anthropologist C. Owen Lovejoy of Kent State University. "As anthropologists always say, 'Behavior doesn't leave fossils,'" he said.

Postal service tests computers of future

WASHINGTON — Americans may be spared from the long lines at post offices and the sometimes grumpy clerks who preside over them if the Postal Service goes national with its latest creation — automated postal tellers.

The high-tech "Autopost" machines, similar to the automated tellers popularized by the banking industry, could become a standard offering in thousands of post offices across the country by the 1990s.

The Postal Service will begin testing the "Autopost" and the "Infopost" — a sleek 6-foot machine that answers questions about mail services on a colorful video screen — later this year.

Report: China's economy grows rapidly

WASHINGTON — China's economy is growing rapidly but inflation and a decline in farm production have put the brakes on reforms, the CIA said Sunday in a report critics said was more notable for its omissions than its contents.

The unclassified version of a CIA report on China's economy, released Sunday by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., fails to include any information about Chinese arms sales.

Train sets speed record of 251 mph

WUERZBURG, West Germany — An experimental West German passenger train set a new world speed record Sunday, reaching 251.7 mph on a stretch of railroad built especially for high-speed trains near this Bavarian city.

The Intercity Experimental broke the previous record of 235.6 mph set in 1981 by the French TGV.

Reagan to act on trade bill

Baker cites objection to plant closing provision

By Norman D. Sandler
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary James Baker sketched the conditions Sunday under which President Ronald Reagan might sign a stripped-down version of the landmark trade bill he is slated to veto in the days ahead.

Against a backdrop of election-year politicking, Baker said Congress would have to remove two provisions — a requirement that many businesses give 60-day notice of plant closings or massive layoffs and restrictions on exports of Alaskan oil — before Reagan would sign a follow-on bill.

"There are several other things and the president will speak to what has to come out in his veto message," Baker told NBC's "Meet the Press."

The Senate gave 63-36 final approval to the trade bill Wednesday, despite a vow by Reagan to veto the measure. How and when Reagan will veto the bill is not clear. The bill is expected to arrive at the White House this week and the president will have 10 legislative days to veto it.

Lawmaker's aide jumps to his death

By Ellen Wulffhorst
United Press International

NEW YORK — The top aide to a Maryland congressman jumped to his death Sunday in an apparent suicide at the Helmsley Palace Hotel after a newspaper reported he made unorthodox demands of male staffers, including forcing them to accompany him socially.

Tom Pappas, 46, chief of staff for Rep. Roy Dyson, D-Md., jumped from his room on the 25th floor of the mid-town Manhattan luxury hotel and landed on a ledge near the eighth floor, said Sgt. Diane Kubler, a police spokeswoman.

Police, who called the death an apparent suicide, said Pappas left a note but they would not release its contents. He was pronounced dead at the scene and his body was to be taken to the morgue.

Pappas had checked in Friday afternoon along with Dyson and press secretary Todd Skipper, said police, who added they believed the three were in New York on business.

POLICE SAID they were questioning Dyson about Pappas' death. Calls to Dyson's and Skipper's rooms were not answered.

Pappas' death came on the same day The Washington Post reported that Pappas made demands on the social lives of young male staff subordinates that had little, if anything, to do with work duties.

Other staffers for Dyson told the Post that they either quit or were fired because they refused to attend social functions with Pappas, who they said exercised complete control over Dyson's office.

Some staff members were shocked when Pappas told one male employee he would have to perform a striptease at a 1987 office retreat at Fort A.P. Hill in Virginia, the newspaper said.

the fact that Reagan chose to base his veto on the plant closings and predicted the issue could be successfully used against Republicans this fall.

Echoing that theme, House Democratic leader Tom Foley, interviewed with Baker on NBC, called the requirement for advance notice of plant closings and firings "a simple and equitable thing for a company to do" and one supported by a bipartisan majority of Congress.

"It seems to me very strange that the president would veto a trade bill which has many, many things that both the administration and the Congress and both parties in the Congress have agreed on, on this kind of an issue: an issue of simple fairness."

THE ADMINISTRATION and Congress came to be at loggerheads over the trade bill after both sides dug in their heels on the issue of whether the government should require businesses with more than 100 employees to give advance notice to workers targeted to lose their jobs.

In the absence of an early offer by Reagan to sign the bill if the provision on plant closings was dropped, Democrats bonded with organized labor to insist that the veto-bait requirement remain in the legislation.

Democrats acknowledge there is little, if any, chance that Reagan's promised veto of the trade bill will be overridden.

Dukakis is expected to keep front-runner status in Ohio

By Anne Saker
United Press International

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Polls in Ohio showed Sunday that Democratic front-runner Michael Dukakis could pick up a fresh victory in a third big Northern industrial state, raking in another cache of national delegates.

Meanwhile, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson cooled his weekend attacks on Dukakis in a sermon at the Cleveland church of Ohio's Democratic governor, Richard Celeste — but he later skewered Vice President George Bush.

Dukakis visited Akron, once the rubber-manufacturing capital of the world, before heading back to Cleveland for the annual Polish Constitution Day Parade and to Toledo for an evening event.

After marching in the parade, Dukakis offered a few words of greeting in Polish and expressed solidarity with striking workers in Poland.

IN AKRON, DUKAKIS hit hard on an anti-drug theme at the City-County Safety Building — apparently to counter Jackson's accusation that the governor has not been tough enough on that matter.

Addressing law enforcement officers and later about 300 people from the steps of the building, Dukakis drew on his experience in Massachusetts to call for a better education program against drugs.

"(We have) a governor's alliance against drugs that I hope we can transform into a national alliance against drugs that brings drug education into the early elementary grades in every school in the country. That's where it has to begin," he said.

Jackson preached at the United Methodist Church in the Cleveland suburb of Lakewood and later at the Olivet Institutional Baptist Church on the city's east side, where he harshly criticized Bush because he said the vice president "does not want to make human priorities. Bush has been over the drug patrol for seven years, and the drugs keep flowing."

JACKSON ALSO MADE a quick fund-raising visit to Columbus and was to return to Cleveland for the evening.

Bush, who will have the GOP nomination locked up after Tuesday's primaries in Ohio, Indiana and the District of Columbia, spent Sunday in Washington but was to visit Vandalia, Ohio, outside Dayton, Monday.

Bush stopped Saturday in Columbus and in the historic river town of Marietta, where he was booed by steelworkers who objected to his claim that a higher percentage of Americans are working now than at any other time in history.

Though Dukakis has been telling Ohio voters at weekend stops to ignore public opinion polls — saying, "Pollsters don't vote, people do" — two surveys in Ohio newspapers predicted that the Buckeye State will go in the front-runner's column, perhaps by as much as 3-1.

The Akron Beacon-Journal poll of 926 registered Ohio voters — conducted between April 20 and 30 with WCMH-TV in Columbus and WKYC-TV in Cleveland — gave Jackson 22 percent of the vote, an increase of about 18 percent from March. The poll had a margin of error of 4 percent.

The Dispatch poll of 1,974 registered Ohioans, taken between April 25 and 29 with a margin of error of 3 percent, put Jackson at 24 percent.

Dukakis, before going to Toledo, responded briefly to criticisms from the other candidates. Of Jackson's accusation that he has been soft on the anti-drug issue, he said, "My state is one of the few states in the country that has shown significant reduction in crime and a real impact on drug use and abuse among children in junior high school and high school."

Israeli soldier gets suspended for role in 'unjustified' killing

By William B. Ries
United Press International

JERUSALEM — An Israeli patrol under attack from stone-throwing youths Sunday shot to death a West Bank villager, and military sources said a preliminary army investigation found the shooting was unjustified.

The deputy company commander of the unit that killed the 22-year-old Palestinian in the remote village of Faqu'a was suspended after the investigation, the sources said.

The troops entered Faqu'a, 50 miles north of Jerusalem, in the morning to make arrests, clear away roadblocks and remove outlawed Palestine Liberation Organization flags, the sources said.

The patrol quickly came under attack by stone-throwing youths. The soldiers were given the order to open fire, and one village resident was fatally wounded. Palestinian sources identified the victim as Naim Yousef Mahmoud Tarha, 22, who died later at a nearby hospital.

THE PRELIMINARY army investigation found that the shooting was not justified, the military sources said, but declined to elaborate. Investigators have begun a full inquiry into the incident.

The death raised to 169 the number of Palestinians killed since the anti-Israel uprising began Dec. 9. A Jewish teenager and an Israeli soldier also have been killed in the unrest.

An army spokesman said he had no information on other shooting deaths that were ruled to be unjustified.

In at least one previous shooting death, the Jan. 3 killing of a 25-year-old woman in the village of Al Ram, just north of Jerusalem, a soldier and his commander were placed under arrest during an army investigation. The death was found to be accidental.

Under standing orders, Israeli troops are permitted to open fire only when in life-threatening situations. To disperse rioters, soldiers are instructed to use tear gas and rubber bullets before firing live ammunition into the air.

Several soldiers have been court-martialed for excessively beating suspected Palestinian protesters.

Protesters and Israeli troops Sunday clashed during scattered protests in at least 11 other West Bank and Gaza Strip towns and refugee camps. At least five Palestinians were wounded by army gunfire in the protests, Palestinian and hospital sources said.

In the West Bank city of Tulkarm, three people were injured by army fire and in Askar refugee camp outside Nablus two residents were hit by bullets, Palestinian sources said.

Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron, armed forces chief of staff, said Sunday residents of the territories were slowly realizing they would not achieve their goals by rioting and that Arab states were not helping them, state-run Israel Radio reported.

Iran offers threats of terrorism

By Leo Stokes
United Press International

MANAMA, Bahrain — In what Western diplomats call a thinly veiled threat of terrorism, Iran warned Sunday that future encounters with the U.S. Navy in the Persian Gulf might have repercussions around the world.

Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, the Iranian parliament's powerful speaker, also told an opening session of the newly elected body "the U.S. administration is taking Americans toward another Vietnam," according to Iran's official news agency.

"It is not the U.S. which decides the zone (of confrontation), and if from now on incidents occur in the Persian Gulf, the region will not be limited to the Persian Gulf," he said.

Western diplomats said Rafsanjani's remarks were a thinly veiled threat to extend terrorist activities against U.S. and other Western targets outside the Persian Gulf region.

"The U.S. decision to extend protection to neutral shipping makes it extremely difficult now for Iran to risk attacks" against merchant vessels in the Gulf, said one diplomat who requested anonymity.

"One way they can respond is to use surrogates around the world to attack U.S. targets," the diplomat said.

Rafsanjani said President Ronald Reagan's recent decision to extend protection to neutral shipping would sink the United States deeper into the Persian Gulf "swamp."

Rafsanjani accused Reagan of making "a hasty and dangerous decision" because of "the approaching end of his political life."

Heartland horror

Gangs in Iowa?
An absurd thought perhaps. And not so long ago, the residents of Omaha, Neb., probably would have scoffed, too — that is until last autumn, when members of the two broad-based Los Angeles gang affiliations, the Crips and the Bloods, started showing up on Omaha's mostly black north side, sporting their telltale colors and carrying weapons, cash and drugs. To date, 31 have been arrested.

Any similarity between the new Los Angeles gangs and the Sharks and Jets of West Side Story is purely coincidental. They are called gangs, but guerilla armies would be more accurate. Switchblades have been exchanged for automatic weapons; alleyway rumbles have been replaced by professional-style hits, highspeed freeway chases and drive-by shootings. The Crips and the Bloods are so deeply entrenched in their communities that despite the gang sweeps of recent months, they maintain a firm hold on South Central L.A. and large portions of the Latino East Side.

But the new gangs differ from the gangs of the past not just by degree but in the essence of their undertaking — for at the heart of all this mayhem there lies, oddly enough, a recognizable kernel of corporate mentality.

Gangs are still motivated by turf, ethnicity and loyalty, but the bottom line is crack money. And there's so much of it to be made that the gangs have organized themselves, in a crude way, along corporate lines. They have sales, marketing and management. They have bonus pay and internal hierarchies and money to invest. And like a perverse McDonald's vending their own brand of junk food, they have taken some of that money and begun to franchise.

Youth gangs are not just a local problem for big cities like Los Angeles with large numbers of urban poor — they are the future of crime nationally, the utterly predictable result of our nationwide failure to offer real hope to young male ghetto dwellers. Learning too well the lessons of capitalism, the L.A. gangs have found their own solution to the problem of getting out of the ghetto, and all the social programs in the world can't compete with the thousands of dollars these young men can make each week selling narcotics.

How long before the Crips and the Bloods breach the 133 miles of placid farmland between Omaha and Des Moines? The sad truth is, they probably already have.

White-collar criminal

There's been a criminal in the news lately by the name of Steven Hadley, but the tone of talk is far from universally critical, and that's confusing.

After all, Hadley has left a trail of corruption and deceit that stretches back five years and a few states and has hurt the lives of two innocent women and three children, not to mention the financial and legal damages brought down on all the corporate people who made the mistake of trusting him.

In 1983, Hadley stole $1,136,000 from the John Deere Community Credit Union in Waterloo and hopped a plane to parts unknown, abandoning his wife, Kathryn, and his three children in Iowa. He showed up a month later in Friendswood, Texas, and quickly availed himself of a "new" wife and some expensive merchandise. It was this merchandise which initially tipped off the Friendswood police that Richard Finley, as Hadley began calling himself, was something other than what he seemed.

Eventually, Hadley was cornered and, a week ago, arrested. One would think that would be the essence of the matter: A slick, intelligent criminal was caught, and that's that.

But that hasn't been the end of it. Hadley's former neighbors in Friendswood — as well as others, many of whom were totally uninvolved in the case — feel an intense sympathy and loyalty for the man, even after the full nature of his crimes was disclosed and aired extensively in the press. There's talk of taking up collections for the guy, to help him defray the high cost of highway robbery. And even those who don't go that far still can't quite condemn this thief and homewrecker.

Much of this attitude foot-dragging no doubt comes from the entrenched Western culture's love of a calm, cool, collected villain. Courtroom trials from Claus Von Bulow to Ollie North have exposed this sweet tooth for those who appear to have stepped outside the hum-drum world of parking tickets and income taxes. But that isn't the whole reason; part of this current of sympathy stems from the fact that Hadley is — or was — an upstanding, responsible-seeming, white family man.

It's a fair bet that if Hadley were a poor black man the donations would dry up in short order. It's a fair bet that if he were a poor black man the glamour of his crimes would be reduced — properly — to the pathetic cruelty of a man who deserted his family for the sake of greed.

Let's hope the romance has worn off and left only the scum showing by the time Hadley appears before a jury.

Alarming sign

To the Editor:
See Bobby. See Bobby write. See Bobby write a hilarious anecdote about a woman driver.

"Learning to write," Bobby tells me, "is second only to learning to drive."

His fingers slide seductively along the typewriter keyboard. He sticks up a thumb and waves it in my face.

"One handy digit," he tells me. "It allows me to put spaces between my words."

I will not stop my parody of Bob Ivry's piece "Teaching Katie to ... drive?" (DI, April 28). I find it frightening and painful to find such blatant sexism trying to pass for humor in a university newspaper. Do people find this type of degrading and misinformed writing funny? I would not bother responding to such a weak piece of writing if I did not see it as indicative of something larger.

Just what is Ivry making fun of? All the "humor" rests on the "woman driver" stereotype; "Katie" is yet another example of the stupid, childish "girl" who thinks she can drive, but in actuality can't even keep the car on the road. I do not deny that there are bad drivers of both sexes, but if female drivers are so much worse than male drivers, then why are their insurance rates so much lower?

Ivry's piece is an example of a reversal too often seen in our society, in which what is most often male behavior is attributed to women. Thus, we have the stereotype that women talk more than men, whereas linguistic studies have shown that in mixed sex groups, the men will dominate the discussion. An extreme example of this reverse stereotyping is the idea that women "ask" to be raped.

We must be vigilant in recognizing the connections between all misogynistic stereotypes and the danger inherent in even such a "funny" piece as Ivry's.

Flawed argument

To the Editor:
James Gude maintains that making condoms available to UI students (DI, April 27) is a bad idea. He argues condom vendors in residence halls will promote sex, vandalism and irresponsibility. I believe Gude should include himself in that category of students which, using his own words, "don't know as much as they think they know."

Gude's argument is that the appearance of condom vending machines in the residence halls will promote sex like saying the existence of bridges promotes suicide — bridges are important to our world, though individuals may have deviant uses for them. Condoms are an intelligent hygienic choice and not necessarily a sexual device.

Gude seems to subscribe to the idea popular in our Bible Belt that "condom" is a dirty word which unavoidably leads to that dirtier word — "sex." The Associated Residence Halls is not proposing the sale of crocodile ribs or French ticklers, but analogical seat belts for intercourse. Sex is here in River City and nothing short of hot pokers is going to stop it; why not promote safety in sex?

Strangely enough, vandalism is not a phenomena indigenous only to residence halls; condom vending machines have traditionally endured the seedy environments of dive bars and dirty truck stops. I am sure that Gude is not aware of how the condom vending industry has tremendously grown in the last 18 months alone. With this massive growth, condom machine manufacturers are now able to offer excellent warranties on units that are not only virtually vandalproof, but are tasteful in their appearance.

Gude basically challenges students who participate in intercourse to be responsible enough to run down to Osco Drug and stand in line for five minutes to have a strange check-out clerk make subjective value judgments on their sexual habits. Well, if these students are indeed "old enough to vote and defend their country," shouldn't they be allowed to choose between buying and not buying condoms in the residence halls?

The guest opinion was flaccid.

Improvement needed

To the Editor:
This year's Riverfest Committee has proven itself perfectly incapable of good judgment in terms of the Battle of the Bands. The judges were largely unqualified, exclusively Top-40 listeners, who completely ignored local popularity, onstage performance and, worst of all, crowd response (obviously the most important part of any such contest). The Riverfest people also refused to give vital information to some of the bands playing and to KRUI-FM, which originally intended to broadcast both the Battle of the Bands and the Riverfest Soundstage.

Rather than take into account that the Battle of the Bands is out every year, this year's committee decided to take the battle to The Fieldhouse bar on the night of a fraternity function and to schedule the preliminary battles in the microscopic Wheelroom. Did it simply not dawn on them that the same number of people that fills the Main Ballroom to capacity cannot be squeezed into these places? Did the committee decide that it was fine and dandy for the UI to lose the revenue it would have gained by taking the battle outside the UI?

In the future, as a former Riverfest participant, I would suggest that the simplest bit of hindsight, combined with a little bit of common sense, would bring back most of the people these "little" oversights have lost.

Think about it, Riverfest Committee; just the slightest bit of consideration for your prospective audience would benefit Riverfest greatly.

(Waste)land between rivers

It was more bad news last week for the Iowa Department of Economic Development, an agency which in recent years has developed little more than a sympathetic understanding of what the 14th-century French Health Ministry must have gone through during the Black Death. In a study commissioned by the DED, quizzing 62 business leaders in Iowa and other states regarding their impressions of the business climate in Iowa, it was found that Iowa's major drawback is not high unemployment insurance rates or high income tax rates, but rather "a perception of a lack of culture."

Apparently unaware of laws constraining false advertising, the DED concluded that the solution to this "perception" problem is but to communicate to the outside world that Iowa is not, in fact, the vast cultural wasteland it is generally taken to be. "If Iowa can successfully change its image as a state of extremely limited cultural offerings," the study argues, "an initial barrier will have been removed which is currently seen as a reason not to consider Iowa."

AND SO IN the June 6 issues of Business Week magazine, there will appear a 16-page Iowa advertising supplement, titled "A Head Start in the Heartland," featuring pictures of symphony conductors, laser scientists and other members of Iowa's cultural avant-garde.

Those who are ardent in their contention that Iowa does indeed possess a culture point to such local cultural icons as opera singer Simon Estes (who had to leave Iowa to find his fame); the Iowa Writers' Workshop (which draws promising young writers from around the country, though precious few from Iowa); and the "giants" of Iowa's cultural heritage, artist Grant Wood and composer Meredith Willson (both of whom, ironically, found success by putting onto canvas and stage the very stereotypes the DED is now so adamantly attempting to dispel).

DON'T GET me wrong, I happen to think Iowa's a great state. Well, it's a good state. At least it's better than Nebraska. But the truth is that while it may not be the cultural wasteland it is commonly perceived by outsiders to be, it also falls well short of being the cultural rain forest many Iowans would like to think it is.

Setting aside the anomaly that is Iowa City (and even Iowa City can't get a decent film into its eight commercial movie theaters), for most Iowans, "culture" comprises the UI-ISU football game, tractor pulls, cow chip throwing contests and the annual crowning of the state's pork queen. Out of the 50 states and six U.S. territories, Iowa ranks 50th in per capita spending for the arts. Even the DED study could find no more positive description of the state's cultural environment than to say that Iowa "is not lacking in culture" — a phrase that deserves entry into the Euphemism Hall of Fame.

THERE IS A curious schizophrenic quality to Iowa's economic development woes. On one hand, we rightfully revel in the idyllic charms associated with our prosperous agricultural past; we press political candidates, local and national, to embrace the "values of the family farm" and support the "decent and tranquil lifestyle" that has historically been the hallmark of the state. On the other hand, we urge — via the DED in 16-page glossy advertisement supplements placed in influential business publications — to be accepted into the contemporary cultural fold by announcing some sort of best-kept-secret, mid-American renaissance — fin-de-siecle Vienna with seed caps and pickup trucks.

It's not easy to cope with an uncomfortable reality. It's so much easier to create an alternative reality that better conforms to the way we would like things to be. And that seems to be the current strategy of the DED. If there is a perception in the business community that Iowa lacks culture, then the solution is not to improve the cultural environment in the state (where would the funds, let alone the artists, come from?), but rather to perform a public relations sleight of hand and convince one that Iowa does — about as well as — have some of that there culture after all.

What I want to know is, has the DED planned for the remote possibility that its advertising scheme just might work? When all of those business moguls come jetting into Iowa in search of our long-held secret culture — their silk suits bulging with big bucks — and point to the corn fields, asking innocently what they might be, is the DED going to soberly respond, "Topographical sculpture?"

J.L. McClure's column appears on the Viewpoints page every other Monday.

NTSB reviews damage done to Aloha jet

By Eric Malnic
Los Angeles Times

KAHULUI, Hawaii — Damage to the crippled Aloha Airlines jetliner that landed here after a large section of its upper fuselage ripped away was even greater than originally thought, a federal official disclosed this weekend.

National Transportation Safety Board member Joseph Nall said that his investigators have found that, besides tearing away the upper two-thirds of an 18-foot section of the fuselage, five of the remaining structural floor members — and one of the control cables — were broken in the lower part of the plane's body.

In addition, one of the plane's two engines failed, complicating the pilots' efforts to land the crippled aircraft here on the island of Maui. "Few aircraft with damage that extensive have ever landed safely," Nall told reporters at a press conference here Saturday night.

WHILE THE cause of the explosive decompression that ripped away the top of the jetliner's fuselage has yet to be determined, Nall has said that the investigation is focusing on the possibility of metal fatigue.

He said that the Boeing 737-200 had taken off 89,672 times during its 19 years of service with the airline.

During each of those flights, the plane was pressurized and depressurized. This process puts some strain on the hull, because of the difference between the relatively high pressure inside the plane and the relatively low pressure outside at normal cruising altitudes.

Flight 243 was at an altitude of 24,000 feet and a speed of 285 knots enroute from Hilo on the island of Hawaii to Honolulu, on Oahu, Thursday afternoon, when pilot Robert Schornstheimer and co-pilot Mimi Tompkins heard a "whooshing sound," according to Nall.

NALL TOLD reporters that Schornstheimer and Tompkins, who were interviewed Saturday by NTSB investigators, said that when they looked back through the cockpit doorway, "all they could see behind them was daylight. . . . It became very apparent they were flying an aircraft that was severely crippled."

Officials have said that a flight attendant, Clarabelle Lansing, 37, apparently was flung from the torn fuselage and is presumed dead. Her body has not been recovered, despite an extensive search of the Pacific.

Anthony 'gets his hands on' 131 years of Iowa's history

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Under the protective eye of UI conservator William Anthony, the Iowa constitution lay exposed for the first time in years.

Even the care taken by Iowa Secretary of State Elaine Baxter as she turned the pages didn't put him at ease.

Baxter brought the 131-year-old Iowa constitution from Des Moines to the UI Main Library Friday and handed it over to Anthony, who was commissioned by the state to restore the document.

Being asked to head the restoration project is an honor, Anthony said, adding little risk is involved in the undertaking.

"It's a wonderful opportunity," he said. "I feel very honored. This is a very simple document, but it requires a lot of work to make it right."

AFTER ANTHONY TOOK his first look at the constitution, others gathered around. Seeing other people handling the document made him uneasy, Anthony said, but he said he and his apprentices would not wear protective gloves during restoration.

"We certainly won't impart any oils, grease or dirt from our own hands, but it would not be possible to do the work we need to do with it without handling it," he said.

The conservation project, which will cost the state $10,000, will "definitely be done within three months," according to Anthony.

Conservators will remove the binding and machine stitching on the pages. Restoration of the constitution involves washing the pages in distilled water and deacidifying them with magnesium bicarbonate. The previous binder caused some damage to the constitution by using animal glue, which is acidic, Anthony said, adding he plans to use wheat paste as an adhesive because it is reversible.

HOLES, TEARS AND weaknesses in the pages will be repaired. All new paper used for mending will be handmade by Timothy Barrett, papermaker at the UI School of Art and Art History and the UI Center for the Book.

Anthony said a trend toward increased conservation of written documents began in 1960 in Florence, Italy, when the Arno River overflowed its banks, destroying many documents.

Iowa's constitution is one of the older state constitutions still in effect in the country. Iowa officials drafted the 1857 constitution over 39 days in February and March of that year. Iowa legislators narrowly approved the document in August, and a governor's proclamation on Sept. 3, 1857, put the constitution into effect. Since that time the Iowa constitution has been amended 40 times.

Baxter said she is glad restoration could be done in Iowa.

"I didn't want to go out of state to have this restored," she said. "I feel strongly about that."

Senators discuss plans for ousting Panama's Noriega

By Don Irwin
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — A high-ranking Republican senator Sunday urged continued and strengthened moves to replace Gen. Manuel Noriega's regime in Panama, including possible military action conducted by Central Americans "as a last resort to change the government."

But Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., emphasized that armed force "won't work, in terms of our overall diplomacy, unless there is broad-based support for that option with the Panamanian opposition and with Central American friends."

Lugar, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, suggested during an interview on ABC television's "This Week with David Brinkley" that there may be a "military option," but his view was challenged by Indiana Rep. Lee Hamilton, the No. 2 Democrat on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

IT WOULD be "a very severe mistake to try to use military force out there," Hamilton said, both because "we would lose a lot of Americans" and because "we would certainly harm ourselves with regard to our friends in Central and Latin America."

Hamilton urged instead that further attention be given to a regional approach outlined by Lugar, which would work through internal opposition to Noriega among Panamanians and through "Central American friends. . . ."

Both Lugar and Hamilton agreed that the administration had miscalculated the effectiveness of the push to displace Noriega that got under way in February when Noriega was indicted on drug trafficking charges by two Florida grand juries.

Secretary of the Treasury James Baker III maintained Sunday during an appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press" that "progress is being made" in closed-door negotiations toward an agreement that would "get Gen. Noriega out of power."

BUT HE declined to spell out details or to comment on reports that U.S. negotiators offered a deal that would permit Noriega to remain in Panama if he steps down. U.S. and Panamanian officials have all said that no accord has yet been reached.

However, Baker denied that there was any plan, while Noriega remained in power, to lift the stiff economic sanctions that Washington and U.S. courts have imposed on Panama.

The impact of the sanctions was portrayed as substantial by Mario Rognoni, Panama's commerce minister, who was interviewed on the Brinkley show. Panama's banking system has been damaged "severely," he said.

ROGNONI depicted the sanctions, which were initiated to force Noriega out, as evidence that the United States was "acting as kind of a terrorist group . . . trying to hold hostage Gen. Noriega by discrediting him, by making a political indictment" basically designed to achieve "some changes to your benefit."

These U.S. goals, according to Rognoni, would relate to the treaty that gives Panama full operating control over the Panama canal in 1999, to the Panamanian banking system, and to the U.S. military presence in Panama, which has been augmented since the showdown with Noriega began.

Asked what kind of deal could be made to get Noriega out, Rognoni replied that "this is not a matter of Gen. Noriega; it's the honor of the country, it's the dignity of the country."

Mental

"THE PERSON is first treated with some kind of medication in an in-patient setting," Chollar Lear said of a patient who is diagnosed with mental illness.

She said new patients must learn about their illnesses and the medications they take. At Chollar Lear's support services, they also learn to manage life with mental illness. This is often difficult because the illness usually strikes just when the patient is beginning to live independently, Chollar Lear said.

"It becomes difficult to discern life problems from problems caused by the illness," she said. "It's hard to pay rent for everyone. Everyone has problems dealing with the phone company."

Chollar Lear said the community support aspect of the Mid-Eastern Iowa Community and Mental Health Center offers social and educational opportunities for people previously hospitalized who are having problems living in the community.

SHE SAID there are fewer people facing problems adjusting from hospital to community life, because now young adults with mental illnesses are rarely hospitalized.

During the 1950s and 1960s, a large number of people were living their lives in state mental institutions, according to Chollar Lear. Institutionalization slowed in the 1960s after the discovery that biochemistry and genetic disorders largely cause mental illness. Also in that decade, the growing availability of drugs that lessen the effects of mental illnesses started to allow patients to live full, productive lives within their communities.

"Deinstitutionalization was a result of the belief that there are some people with mental illness who can live in the community and have the right to," Chollar Lear said.

Spaziani added people were discharged from the institutions with the idea that they would be better treated in their own communities. But community service was often not available, causing an influx of homeless people. According to Spaziani, some patients released from institutions have no family or community support and are forced to live on the streets.

SPAZIANI said mental illness has always existed but wasn't identified as such until the Victorian era.

"Throughout history, people with mental illness have been stoned, kicked out of town and called witches," Spaziani said. "When I give talks, people realize, 'I had an aunt that...'; it was a lot more prevalent than people think."

Spaziani said most people can identify someone in their extended families who had a mental illness, but the disorder has not always been greatly recognized.

Spaziani said people today might have more difficulty relating to a friend who is mentally ill.

"Friends try to hang in there, but one by one they must go on with their own life," she said. "The friend must understand that it's hard. (The patient) is trying, but there's nothing they can do because it's inside their heads."

"THEY NEED friendship, support and social interaction," Spaziani said. "The best treatment is for them to live in their own community with employment opportunities they can handle."

According to Chollar Lear, there is often a negative stigma associated with mental illness and this is one more thing the patient and his or her friends and family have to deal with.

"People with mental illness usually think about life in different ways than other people, and they are often ostracized because of it," Chollar Lear said.

"Treat a friend that has mental illness with respect," she said, "the same way you would like to be treated."

For Osborn, social interaction was very important during the time she was adjusting to her medication.

"Family and friends were extremely supportive," she said. "After awhile, my parents pushed me to get out, to go to summer school, or even shopping as long as I didn't sit around and dwell on my problems."

Osborn said in the end, she learned a lot from her experience, although the path was often rough.

"I would tell anyone who is having chronic depression that they shouldn't deny bad feelings," Osborn said. "Work through your feelings at the time they are happening. It's OK to feel depressed. It's part of being human."

May Day

plant management have been stalemated since the strike began, and government officials are clearly worried that strikes could spread to other industrial concerns.

Lech Walesa, the Solidarity leader, pressed the rally in Gdansk to show support for the striking workers at Nowa Huta but stopped short of calling for more strikes.

"I demand from you Solidarity with Nowa Huta tomorrow (Monday), in your shipyards, in your ports and in your factories. I want it to be effective. Show me tomorrow what you can do," Walesa urged.

The wave of strikes in Poland, the worst since Solidarity was banned and martial law was declared in 1981, began last Monday with a transport workers strike in two western Polish cities, Bydgoszcz and Inowroclaw. The workers demanded, and within hours received, a 60 percent pay increase.

THE STRIKE at Nowa Huta, which employs 32,000 workers, began the next day.

Friday, a defense plant at Stalowa Wola in southwestern Poland went on strike. Workers decided to go back to work the following day, apparently after receiving a wage increase of about 50 percent.

Over the weekend, reports were circulating — mostly unconfirmed — that other major industrial concerns would issue strike alerts today and that other workers across the country would begin to demand equally substantial pay increases.

The government could give in to the pay demands, but officials fear that issuing wholesale pay raises could lead to the kind of economic chaos that hit the country in 1981, when shops' stocks of merchandise were bought out and even basic food commodities were in short supply.

Giving in to "unjustified" wage demands, Jaruzelski said Sunday, "would lead directly to the infamous epoch of (having only) vinegar on store shelves. We have gone through that already."

Some Solidarity activists have been saying in recent days that the new wave of strikes could bring down the Jaruzelski government, as it has brought down Polish governments in the past.

tives of those killed and the injured."

All the servicemen were based at the large Wildenrath RAF base close to the Dutch border, and most were members of the Royal Air Force Regiment, which mans Rapier missiles to protect the base from enemy air attack.

In Roermond, a local press photographer, Fer Trouwgod, told Reuters news agency that at about 1 a.m., a passing car sprayed the servicemen's small Volkswagen with bullets.

"THEY REALLY turned that car into a sieve," he said. "The driver had the whole left side of his face ripped off by the impact of the bullets."

Witnesses said that about 25 to 30 bullet holes were counted in the car.

And in Nieuwbergen, observers said that the car blew up in a parking lot near the Bacchus disco patronized by British servicemen about 1:30 a.m. in a large fireball.

Afterward, police sealed off the area and evacuated nearby houses for most of Sunday, as British anti-terrorist specialists were flown in to help with the investigation.

Dutch police said they believed that both cars in which the victims were riding had British-registered license plates.

Police said that the search for the attackers would be difficult because the southern sliver of the Netherlands allows easy access to Belgium and West Germany.

In 1979, the British ambassador to the Netherlands, Richard Sykes, and an aide were assassinated by the IRA in The Hague.

Last year, 33 persons were injured when the IRA exploded a car bomb outside a British military barracks in West Germany.

Hall. The marchers then proceeded along the Iowa River, through the tunnel north of the English-Philosophy Building and up Washington Street to the Downtown Pedestrian Mall.

ALONG THE ROUTE the marchers, many of whom carried lighted candles, shouted sayings including "Women united will never be defeated" and "No more violence, no more rape."

Organizers said the addition of downtown Iowa City on the route was important because women walking there at night, especially alone, are often the subject of verbal abuse from men coming out of bars.

During the march, male participants were asked to walk behind the women to symbolize their support.

UI sophomore Andrew Miller, one of about 30 men, said he didn't mind walking in the rear.

"I'm in full agreement. It makes perfect sense," he said. "This is an event for women's empowerment, and for men to say we will march wherever we want is contrary to the wishes of the organization."

The march ended at 10 N. Gilbert St., where there was a banquet and music.

Women take second place in 4 x 800 relay, set school mark

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard received a number of upper-division finishes at Drake Stadium in Des Moines this weekend when his squad participated in the 79th annual Drake Relays.

The highest place garnered by Iowa came in the 4 x 800-meter relay. The time of eight minutes and 48.53 seconds was second among those in the competition and was the best mark recorded by the relay this year.

Some impressive splits were recorded by members of that team. Sophomore Jeanne Kruckeberg anchored the relay with a 2:09.6

split while Rachelle Roberts (2:10.9), Tami Hoskins (2:11.5) and Kim Schneckloth (2:15.8) preceded her.

HASSARD SAID THE effort by Schneckloth, who has been hampered by achilles tendonitis, was noteworthy.

"I was very proud of Kim," he said. "She has had some problems with her tendon but she has come

Iowa hurdler wins 1 event, qualifies for tryout in another

By Brent D. Woods
The Daily Iowan

It's been almost three years since Iowa hurdler Pat McGhee has run at the Drake Relays.

Saturday, he made his return something to remember.

McGhee produced Iowa's lone victory at the prestigious Drake Relays in Des Moines this past weekend, winning the collegiate 110-meter high hurdles in 14.15 seconds and claiming third in the invitational 400-intermediate hurdles in 50.02. The 400-intermediate time was good enough to qualify McGhee for the Olympic Trials.

Wayland Baptist, led by standout sprinter Devon Morris, claimed the college team title with only eight team members.

"I surprised myself," said McGhee, who missed last year's Relays because of a knee injury. "I got a bad start (in the 110 hurdles). I was getting hit over the first couple of hurdles, and it came down to a really close race."

SO CLOSE, IN fact, that Michigan State's Tony Norris came in

Pitchers power Iowa to 3 wins over Spartans

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes reinforced their chances for a spot in the Big Ten Tournament this weekend, defeating Michigan State in three of four baseball games at Iowa Field.

Iowa Coach Duane Banks was sounding like a broken record while talking about the conference race.

"We'll have to get with it," he said. "It's going to be a dogfight all the way."

And, to be sure, the Hawkeyes are right in the middle of it.

The Hawkeyes improved to 25-19 overall and 12-8 in the Big Ten by defeating the Spartans three straight 3-2, 5-2 and 4-3 in eight innings before losing the final game of the four-game Saturday-Sunday series 2-1.

Michigan State fell to 29-13 overall and 10-8 in the Big Ten.

AFTER LOSING FOUR straight to Illinois at home two weeks ago, Banks was searching for a way to get back into the conference race.

"After Illinois, with the youngsters we have, they could have said 'Heck the season's over,'" the Iowa coach said.

The Hawkeyes, with four freshmen in the lineup, have fought back since the Illinois series to win eight of their last 10 conference games.

Iowa has eight Big Ten games left in the regular season. While Michigan rules in conference play, five other teams are expected to battle for the next three spots in postseason action — and each has at least nine Big Ten wins.

The Hawkeyes opened the series Saturday with Allen Rath winning his sixth game of the season. The right-hander from Riverside, Iowa, scattered five runs, struck out 11 and lowered his ERA to 2.91.

game, Iowa's Keith Noreen and Bill Heinz rapped back-to-back home runs as the Hawkeyes rolled to a 5-2 win.

Mark Boland improved his record to 3-7 while John DeJarld tied the school record for saves in a season with four. The right-handed DeJarld evened the save record set by Fernando Arango in 1971 and Boland in 1985.

Iowa went into Sunday's games riding a six-game winning streak. The Hawkeyes didn't disappoint their fans in the first game.

Cal Eldred went the distance in an extra-inning thriller to improve his record to 5-4 overall and 4-1 in the Big Ten.

Iowa took the lead early as Luis Ramirez doubled home Noreen in the first inning.

MICHIGAN STATE roared back in the third inning with two runs. After Noreen committed an error that allowed Steve Preston to reach first base, Kevin Dalsol followed with a single.

With runners at first and third, Dalsol stole second. Both runners scored on a single by Mike Davidson.

The Spartans' Dalsol came back in the fifth, scoring with an opposite field home run. The left-handed hitter smacked an Eldred fastball over the left-field fence to run the score to 3-1.

Eldred hit the next batter, Dan Masteller, and later said that "purpose pitch" and the home run were the beginning of a more controlled game for him.

"I almost think the home run helped a little," he said. "I think it actually helped me concentrate." IOWA'S OFFENSE got some help from the Michigan State pitching in the sixth thanks to three walks and a hit batsman that resulted in two runs and a 3-3 score. Brian Luedtke singled home the game-winner in the eighth.

Sunday's nightcap was a relief for Michigan State Coach Tom Smith as the Spartans held on.

"It was a big win for us to win one and salvage one of the four," he said.

Iowa's Mark Denkinger was the losing hurler. His record fell to 3-1.

136.5-lb. powers tangle in Reno

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

At long last, the reigning world champion met the reigning Olympic champion.

John Smith, the world freestyle wrestling champion from Oklahoma State, defeated the Hawkeye Wrestling Club's Randy Lewis, the 1984 Olympic champion, 10-8, Saturday for the 136.5-pound crown in the United States Open in Reno, Nev.

The match was the first in the long-awaited series of showdowns between the two champions and a preview to the final Olympic qualifier in Topeka, Kan., May 18-20.

"It was one of the best matches I've ever seen," Iowa assistant coach Mark Johnson said. "The officials, everyone gave them a standing ovation afterwards."

JOHNSON SAID Lewis came out in familiar fashion against Smith, generously offering his right leg to his opponent in order to initiate the action.

Smith, the first U.S. wrestler to win the world title with a year of college eligibility remaining, successfully attacked Lewis' leg to build an early 5-0 lead.

But then Lewis started to turn flurries into points of his own, and held a 7-6 advantage after one period.

The officials could not figure out some of Lewis' moves. The three all ruled differently on Lewis' first points, calling his flip of Smith a zero-, one- and four-point move before settling on a two-point score after discussion.

"That should have been a minimum of three points," Johnson said. "After the first minute, Lewis started wrestling smarter. He started putting Smith in things I know he's never been in before."

THE CRITICAL point in the match came when the score was

The Hawkeyes were down and all but out before the Big Ten Championships in Bloomington, Ind., this past weekend.

But the Iowa women's tennis team managed to pull out a sixth-place finish after struggling with a 1-8 conference record and starting as the double-elimination tournament's ninth seed. The Hawkeyes finished 10-15 on the season.

"They fought to the end," Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said. "We really struggled during our Big Ten matches. But we pulled it all together here. I am pleased. We played great."

While the women's team competed in Big Tens, the men's squad faced Minnesota and Wisconsin on the road.

Indiana won the Big Ten crown for the second year in a row, defeating Wisconsin, 6-3, in Sunday's championship match. Northwestern beat Michigan State for third place, 7-2.

"I'M FEELING great," said senior Pennie Wohlford, the Iowa captain. "We were really excited after beating Illinois. It was just a matter of everyone pulling together at the same time."

Bulls take 2-0 series lead behind — who else — Jordan

United Press International

CHICAGO — Maybe it's this simple: the Chicago Bulls don't need anybody else.

"I told the coaches on the bench 'We've got to find somebody else to score, we've got to find somebody else to score,'" Bulls Coach Doug Collins said. "But Michael was just in a groove."

Michael Jordan scored 55 points Sunday to lift the Chicago Bulls past the Cleveland Cavaliers 106-101 for a 2-0 advantage in their best-of-five first-round playoff series.

Jordan followed his 50-point game in Thursday's series opener with 24 field goals and 7 free throws, becoming the first NBA player to score 50 or more points in consecutive playoff games. He tied the NBA playoff record for most field goals and set seven Chicago Bulls records, five his own.

"WE'VE GOT OTHER options, but I was open and guys were getting me the ball," said Jordan, who played 44 minutes.

Unlike Thursday, when he had 20 in the second quarter, Jordan was sharp in all four quarters Sunday. He scored 14 in the first quarter, 14 in the second, 11 in the third and 17 in the fourth quarter.

"I haven't seen anybody else stop him so why do you think we will?" asked Cleveland Coach Lenny Wilkens. "Anybody that shoots as much as he does is going to score."

Despite Jordan's performance, Cleveland was never out of the game. The Cavaliers had a 15-point lead in the first period, which ended with Cleveland ahead 36-23, and they never trailed by more than 6.

3 new Finkbine tournaments added

Three new golf tournaments, open to the public, have been added to this summer's schedule for Finkbine Golf Course, it was announced in the latest issue of The Iowa Alumni Review.

The "Two-Person Best Shot Tournament" will begin at noon, Sunday, May 29. Both men's and women's divisions are offered. Registration deadline is May 23.

The "Mixed Couples Selective Drive Alternate Shot Tournament" begins at noon, Sunday, Sept. 4. Registration deadline is Aug. 29. There is no handicap required for either of the first two events.

Participants in the third event, the "Senior's Tournament," must be 50 years of age or older, and players will be divided into three age groups — 50s, 60s and 70s — and men's and women's divisions. Medal play will be applied to all groups and USGA handicaps will be honored. If a player does not have a USGA handicap, he or she will play at scratch.

Tea times for the Senior's Tournament begin at 8 a.m., Sept. 18. Registration deadline is Sept. 10.

A $10 entry fee is required for each event. For more information, contact Finkbine Golf Course at 335-9556. Entry fees should be sent to Finkbine Golf Course, c/o Marty Welch, University of Iowa, Iowa City, 52242.

S. African athletes may face barring

MADRID, Spain (UPI) — Foreign Ministry officials say they are studying a total ban on South African athletes entering Spain because of the country's role as host of the 1992 Summer Olympic Games.

The ban would conform with a United Nations "Declaration against Apartheid in Sports," which Spain voted for in 1978. Article Seven of the declaration calls on governments to "deny entry to sports organization representatives, team members or individual athletes from countries which practice apartheid."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said the government was considering imposing such a ban, but it was not clear when a decision could be expected.

Strange wins in sudden death

THE WOODLANDS, Texas (UPI) — Curtis Strange sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the third playoff hole Sunday, beating Greg Norman in the $700,000 Independent Insurance Agent Open and winning his third PGA Houston-area event in a playoff.

Norman and Strange, who became the first three-time winner of the event, completed regulation play tied with a tournament-record, 18-under-par 270 to force a playoff for the third straight year.

They returned to the par-3, 177-yard No. 16 where each had birdie putts stop short of the cup.

On the 17th hole, Norman tapped in a short putt for par. Strange's three-foot putt for par rolled around the rim of the cup before dropping.

Moody's playoff putt earns victory

AUSTIN, Texas (UPI) — Orville Moody made a 14-foot birdie putt on the sixth hole of sudden death Sunday, giving him and partner Bruce Crampton a second consecutive Legends of Golf title with a victory over Tommy Aaron and Lou Graham.

Moody-Crampton and Aaron-Graham shot 62 Sunday to finish 72 holes at 26-under-par 254. Moody and Crampton shared top prize of $120,000.

The teams of Bob Charles-Bruce Devlin and Peter Thomson-Harold Henning were a shot back, followed by Miller Barber and Arnold Palmer at 256. PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, making his first seniors appearance with partner Al Geiberger, finished at 264.

Leconte upsets No. 1 seed Becker

BOHN West Germany (UPI) — Frenchman Henri Leconte upset top seeded Boris Becker 3-6, 7-6, 7-6 Saturday to advance to the final of the $602,500 West German Open tennis tournament, where he will face Kent Carlsson.

Lendl tops Edberg in 3 sets

ATLANTA (UPI) — Ivan Lendl, playing impeccable clay-court tennis the last two sets, Sunday defeated Stefan Edberg 2-6, 6-1, 6-3 to win the $500,000 AT&T Challenge.

Richard's 6-under-par 66 good for tie

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — Deb Richard shot a 6-under-par 66 Saturday to move into a three-way tie for the lead entering the final round of the $335,000 LPGA Sara Lee Classic.

Richard, who shot a 71 Friday and gained a share of the lead Saturday with a birdie on No. 8, is tied at 7-under with Rosie Jones and Sherri Steinhauer.

Kingpost was equally impressive in his final Derby tuneup, swinging five-wide down the stretch to grab second by another nose over pacesetter Lover's Trust.

U.S. women's marathon field set

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Margaret Groos, a converted 10,000-meter runner competing in her third marathon, Sunday won the U.S. Olympic Women's Marathon Trials in 2 hours, 29 minutes, 50 seconds.

Groos, 28, who relocated to Tallahassee, Fla., from Nashville, Tenn., to train, will lead the U.S. contingent that will compete in the Seoul Olympics in September.

Nancy Ditz, 33, of Woodside, Calif., placed second in 2:30:14 and Cathy O'Brien, 20, of Boston, finished third in 2:30:18. They will join Groos on the Olympic team. The top three each earned $25,000, marking the first time money was awarded at a women's marathon trials.

Senna dominates Formula One race

IMOLA, Italy (UPI) — Brazilian Ayrton Senna broke a personal losing streak at San Marino Sunday and set up McLaren as the dominant force in Formula One competition this season, leading from start to finish in a grand prix race.

Senna, who started on the pole for the fourth straight year at the 3.13-mile Dino Ferrari track, jumped into a lead he never relinquished to beat French teammate Alain Prost.

Parsons wins Winston 500 race

TALLADEGA, Ala. (UPI) — Phil Parsons of Denver, N.C., Sunday won the Winston 500 NASCAR stock car race at Talladega for his first Winston Cup victory in 110 starts.

Bobby Allison of Hueytown was second and Geoff Bodine of Julian, N.C., was third. Terry Labonte of Archdale, N.C., finished fourth and Ken Schrader of Concord, N.C. finished fifth.

Gophers, Badgers drop Hawkeyes

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team fell to both Minnesota and Wisconsin on the road this weekend.

Iowa is now 4-4 in the Big Ten, and with the conference championships around the corner — May 13-15 — the weekend results could consign the Hawkeyes to the middle of the pack seed-wise.

But Iowa Coach Steve Houghton insists the two losses were misleading.

"They were two really good teams," Houghton said. "This wasn't a poor weekend — this was disappointing."

The Gophers dominated the Hawkeyes Friday, 7-2, with doubles teams Claes Ramel-Martin Aguirre and Brian Stokstad-Jay Maltby providing the victories.

SATURDAY, THE Badgers whipped Iowa, 8-1. Maltby, playing at No. 6 singles, was the lone Hawkeye winner, sweeping Wisconsin's Bryan Amero, 6-0, 6-0, and running his season record to 19-5.

Houghton said the match against the Badgers should have been closer.

"Wisconsin was a deceiving match," Houghton said. "We had four close matches that could have gone the other way. It should have been 6-3 or 5-4."

Houghton noted that the two losses had a topsy-turvy quality: "In the match against Minnesota we played better in doubles than singles. Against Wisconsin we played better singles than doubles."

According to Houghton, the road north has not been kind to the Hawkeyes.

"It seems over the years that this road trip is really trouble for us," Houghton said. "We have a hard time winning up there."

The Hawkeyes will face the Fighting Illini in their last home match and final match of the season Friday at Klotz Tennis Courts.

"Illinois is a win we need to move into good position for the Big Ten Championship," Houghton said.

"They will be tough, like others in the conference. But we have the confidence to come back and do well."

Minnesota, Iowa split 4 games

By Scott Wingert
The Daily Iowan

Two lapses prevented the Iowa softball team from winning its four-game series at Minnesota last weekend.

Iowa lost the opener Friday night, 2-1, but came back to win the nightcap, 8-1. Saturday, it won the first game, 3-2, but lost the second, 4-0.

Iowa moved to 27-20-1 overall and 6-11-1 in the Big Ten. Minnesota is now 24-20 overall and 10-5 in the conference.

A two-out double in the last inning of Friday's opener and a lack of offensive aggression late Saturday was all Iowa Coach Gayle Blevins said came between the Hawkeyes and a weekend sweep of the Gophers.

"EXCEPT FOR ABOUT the last three innings of the weekend, I thought we played pretty well," Iowa Coach Gayle Blevins said. "We were convinced we could win out there, but just didn't go through the mechanics to get it done when we needed to."

"The first game Friday was a real heartbreaker. We just gave up one big hit on a bad pitch. But then we immediately came back and played a great game right after that. I was pleased with the way we prepared for the weekend."

In Friday's first game, Iowa scored first in the fifth inning when Amy Drake singled and scored on a double by Karen Wick.

The Hawkeyes took their lead into the seventh inning before the Gophers' Sarah Winslow tagged a two-out, two-run double on a 0-1 pitch from Tami Chown (3-4) to win the game.

"THE BALL HUNG right at the belt and a drop ball pitcher cannot leave it there," Blevins said. "I thought our pitching combination was effective for this weekend except for that one situation."

In the second game Friday, Minnesota scored a run in the first inning, but Iowa came back to lead 3-1 in the third behind a Drake single, a triple by Wick and a single by Amy Miller.

Iowa erupted for four more runs in the sixth inning when Traci Gilmore stroked a three-run triple to deep right field. Cara Coughenour ended the scoring with a solo home run in the seventh.

Iowa's Diana Repp (16-9-1) earned the victory in the second game.

SATURDAY, MINNESOTA scored first in the opener with two runs in the fourth inning, the second run on an error by Gilmore. But Gilmore started a three-run Iowa rally in the sixth inning with a double to right field.

After Wick walked, Drake hit a two-run double to centerfield. Miller then delivered the game-winning triple to right field.

Iowa had seven hits in the last game of the series, but could not turn them into runs. Minnesota won the game with runs in the second and third innings and two more in the fifth inning.

"We quit attacking after they shut down our early scoring opportunities," Blevins said. "Their centerfielder made some outstanding grabs on us, but we didn't seem to have the same tenacity after that to get the job done."

Iowa's next action is Tuesday when the Hawkeyes travel to Cedar Falls for a doubleheader with Northern Iowa.

Patroons top Wildcatters for CBA title

United Press International

ALBANY, N.Y. — Coach Bill Musselman earned his fourth consecutive Continental Basketball Association title Saturday as Lowes Moores scored 23 points off the bench to give the Albany Patroons a 105-96 triumph over the Wyoming Wildcatters in the decisive seventh game of the championship series.

Musselman won the last three crowns while coaching at Tampa Bay.

Patroons forward Tod Murphy

clinched the victory in the final 20 seconds with four free throws after Albany had scored five straight points.

MOORE ANSWERED a dunk by Wyoming center Ron Cavenall with an 18-foot jump shot to give Albany a 96-90 lead. An eight-foot shot from Moore and a dunk by Murphy on a pass from Greg Grissom had given Albany a 94-88 lead.

Wyoming kept the game close through the fourth quarter, coming within a basket of the Patroons four times, the last on a drive by Cavenall with 4:49 left that made it 90-88.

Albany built leads of up to seven points in the third quarter, but Wyoming battled back to tie the score 66-66 and 73-73 late in the period. Moore sparked a 6-0 scoring run with a 6-foot shot in the lane to give Albany a 79-73 and the Patroons took an 82-76 lead into the final quarter.

Wyoming led 27-17 at the end of the first quarter. Moore came into the game with 7:20 left in the half and scored 13 second-quarter points. He hit a 3-pointer from 30 feet at the halftime buzzer to give Albany a 50-49 lead at intermission.

Murphy added 21 points for Albany and Derrick Rowland had 20. Murphy, a 6-10 rookie forward, was voted the Most Valuable Player of the CBA playoffs.

Wyoming's Kenny Natt scored a game-high 22 points, while Cavenall had 22.

'Cosi Fan Tutte' is a delight

By B. Gordon
The Daily Iowan

The UI Opera Theater presented possibly its best work to date Friday night with Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte ("That's What They All Do").

All the elements of excellence were in place for the opening night at Hancher Auditorium. The sets, singing and staging were first-rate, allowing the greatest transparency for the beauty of the music and the comic pathos of the story.

Margaret Wenk outdid herself with the versatile rococo set, winning spontaneous applause from the audience every time another layer of manorial splendor was revealed or another boat floated into the action on the Bay of Naples.

All of the singers were strong, both musically and dramatically. Rosemary Lack has been growing as a vocalist, enriching her entire range yet maintaining just enough bite at the top of her register to pierce through the orchestra. Her exaggerated portrayal of Fiordiligi, a basically frivolous woman determined to remain faithful to her soldier lover at the front, was bubbly and full of fun.

TRACY QUITNO, who played Fiordiligi's more sensuous sister Dorabella, had somewhat more difficulty with the vocal demands of her solos. But her ensemble work, especially a duet in Act II with the leading baritone at the end of a long seduction scene, was delicate and sensitively performed.

Joshua Breck and Wayne Neuzil as the leading men handled their roles with confidence, Breck playing up the dreamy aspects of his character and Neuzil the fire in his. And Kristie Tigges as the clever maid Despina, with Jeffrey D. Hook as the cynical Don Alfonso, elicited laughs and cheers with their mischievous performances.

It is not often that a lighting designer is mentioned in a theatrical review, if only because everyone takes lighting so much for granted. But David Thayer deserved his own curtain call for some of the exquisite effects he contrived — especially the romantic moonlight for the twin seductions in Act II.

RUTH AND Thomas Martin's translation (Cosi Fan Tutte was performed in English, as are all UI Opera Theater productions) was elegant without losing the low humor of the original libretto, and the singers deserve credit for making it as easily understandable as it sounded Friday night.

And Beaumont Glass's direction heightened the comedy with onstage bits that provided even more double entendres than Lorenzo da Ponte's bawdy dialogue calls for, without ever distracting from the forward movement of the action. He seemed more able to allow his singers to remain in one place than ever before, permitting the glory of the music to shine without imposing stage business.

There were a few points that one might quibble with, most notably occasional lapses on the part of the UI Orchestra's horn section in its most exposed sections and the cramped, uncertain feel of the two brief ballets incorporated into the text. But the greatest pleasure of this production was the power of the composer's spirit and vision — and that is the highest compliment anyone can pay to a group of interpretive artists.

Ristau's 'Corners' is staged

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The annual Iowa Playwrights Festival opens tonight with Todd Ristau's dark comedy Where Are All the Sharp Corners at 6:30 and 9 in UI Theatre Building Theatre B.

The play deals with a writer's reaction to the knowledge that he has acquired leprosy. Ristau points out that his use of leprosy is more metaphorical than actual.

"I'm employing the stereotype of leprosy, not the disease. It's a play about the degeneration of a human being, the idea that if you struggle to hold onto a dual entity within yourself, then the self will deteriorate."

The idea of the play, which was originally written in 1985, is based on a fleeting impression Ristau had as a 16-year-old busboy at Roy's Taco House.

"This guy with long hair and an army jacket was sitting by himself, drinking a cup of coffee. I thought, 'Wow, I wonder if I'll look like that when I'm 27!' When I came back out he was gone and I thought, 'What if that was me at 27 coming back to look at me when I was 16?' Does the 27-year-old owe anything to the 16-year-old? Does the adult have to kill off the youth, or is there an embracing opportunity? My conclusion when I was younger was no, but I've changed my mind since then. I'm not so concerned with the adolescent need for suicide anymore."

RISTAU, a two-time recipient of the Nicholas Meyer Undergraduate Playwriting Award, is the only undergrad to have two plays staged at the Playwrights Festival. The first, Puberty Shriek, traces his artistic aesthetics to "Creepy" comic books and "Batman."

"I operate out of a sense of humor. I call it the 'Oh, no' genre, where things start out bad and keep getting worse. All you can do is shake your head and giggle," said Ristau.

"Todd starts with cartoon rules, then the rules fall away, and there's mayhem," observes director Bonnie Metzger, a first-year student in the Playwrights Workshop. "We were concerned with our responsibilities to a subject like leprosy. How much can you laugh? We decided to deal with the offhand treatment afforded such issues over the years."

Metzger acquired a playwriting degree at Brown University in Providence, R.I., where she created and produced a new forum for original theater called Once Upon A Weekend. Metzger, who was working at American Repertory Theater when Iowa Playwright Workshop graduate Glenn Blumstein's play Bill was read, was impressed. "The thing that attracted me to the UI was that it had a strong reputation among professional theaters as a source for playwrights. That, and the fact that in my senior year I wrote a play about Igor Stravinski, and having read Blumstein's Nijinski, I felt like I had a soul mate in Iowa."

ONE OF THE Festival's visiting theater professionals is David Gothard, artistic director of the Haymarket Theatre in Leicester, England. His visit to the UI stems from a chance encounter he had with Ristau in Leicester.

"I had Gothard's name from someone I met at the previous festival," recounts Ristau. "I visited him. He read my script and sent me to someone else, I didn't know who. It turned out to be the literary manager of the National Theatre of England. Here I was sitting with this important theatrical professional discussing my class project for basic playwriting."

Last year Ristau returned to the Haymarket for a professional reading of his play Puberty Shriek.
