UI implements new plus/minus grading

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Starting today a slip of the pencil on a test or a few misspelled words in a paper could take on greater importance than ever for UI students.

The plus/minus grading system — embraced by some and feared by others — is finally here.

Last year, the suggestion of implementing such a system for the UI College of Liberal Arts initially sparked controversy between UI student and faculty governments.

Students have argued the new system will lower overall grade-point averages, while faculty members have insisted the system won't affect grades, but that it will provide them with a finer tool for measuring students' aptitudes.

The system will allow faculty members to differentiate between students within the same letter group by awarding a plus or minus — which either adds or subtracts one-third of a point from the grade's numerical value. For example, an A plus will have a value of 4.33, an A a value of 4.00 and an Aa value of 3.67.

Cumulative grade points will not be allowed to exceed 4.00.

"I'm mixed on this — I understand both sides of the discussion," UI Student Senate President Melinda Hess said Monday. "From the faculty members' perspective I think it would help them differentiate more."

Hess said the new system's effect should be carefully monitored by both administrators and faculty members.

"If it appears they (administrators) haven't made the best decision, if they get sufficient feedback from students, then they need to respond," she said. "Give it one year or two years and then reassess the system and take it from there."

"A lot will depend on the professors and how they handle it, whether they allow a little leeway or are hard-nosed," she said.

Hess also said she doesn't think the new system will alter many students' approach to grades.

"I think a few students will work harder to avoid sliding down to a minus grade in their classes," she said. "But I think you'll see a number of students who will take the lower grade."

A 1986 survey showed that the UI faculty favored the plus/minus grading scale over a mid-point system. A mid-point system would provide an additional grade level between every letter grade.

When asked which type of expanded grading scale faculty members preferred, 76 percent of the 369 respondents chose a plus/minus system while only 18 percent chose a mid-point system.

Missing baby girl murdered

MUSCATINE, Iowa (AP) — Amber Marie Hayes, the 7-month-old girl who disappeared from her mother's home last week, died of a blow to the head and was dismembered, Muscatine police said Monday.

No charges have been filed in the case, but police are holding a babysitter who was with the girl the night she vanished as a material witness in the case.

An autopsy performed at Mercy Hospital in Davenport showed the youngster died of trauma to the head by a blunt instrument, according to a statement by the Muscatine Police Department.

Police Sgt. John LeMar said the child's torso and arms were still missing and that officers from Muscatine, Davenport and Rock Island, Ill., were combing the area, including using K-9 dogs.

The partial remains of the girl were discovered by two youths Sunday afternoon about 12 miles south of Muscatine in a remote area of Louisa County. A white blanket and a pink diaper bag were also found near the remains.

"This is probably the most gruesome case I've ever worked on," LeMar said.

Eugene Meyer, assistant director of the Iowa Division of Criminal Investigation, said no motive has been established in the girl's death.

Meanwhile, clothing worn by Leslie Brockert, 28, who was babysitting the girl the night she disappeared, has been confiscated by investigators.

A black T-shirt, blue jeans, tennis shoes and a baseball cap were taken for laboratory tests after Brockert's arrest, according to a search warrant filed in Muscatine County District Court.

The mother, Mary Hayes, discovered her daughter missing when she returned home between 1 and 1:30 a.m. on Thursday. She and Brockert had been living together.

Court records said Hayes and Brockert argued after the baby was discovered missing. When Hayes asked where the child was, Brockert replied, "I'm not going to tell you until we talk about us," records show.

Brockert, meanwhile, has been moved from the Muscatine County Jail to the city jail for his own safety.

"I don't believe there was any problem back there. We just want to make sure there isn't a problem," Muscatine County Sheriff Ron Hazen said. The county jail is often filled to capacity, and the move was made after the jail became more crowded, he added.

Gov. Terry Branstad addresses students invited to attend the Iowa Governor's Institute for the Gifted and Talented in the Old Capitol.

Branstad welcomes talented youngsters

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad was in Iowa City Monday afternoon to welcome 82 Iowa junior high and high school students to the first ever Iowa Governor's Institute for the Gifted and Talented.

The students participating in the institute range from 12 to 16 years old and were selected from all over the state. They will undergo three weeks of intensive instruction in one of the five subject areas of math, integrated arts, science, the humanities and mechanical invention and innovation.

Branstad said one of the institute's functions is to provide the state with the future leaders it will need, and encouraged the participants to consider the benefits of living in Iowa.

"I think some of you are saying, 'Well, Iowa's kind of a boring place,'" he said. "You might think the grass is greener on the other side, and right now, with this drought, it probably is. But in the long haul, this is a great place to live and work."

Branstad said the current emphasis in education must be to prepare this generation of students for jobs that will be more complex and more competitive.

"One in five jobs today did not exist five years ago," he said. "Our educational system must make it possible for the graduates we turn out to adapt to a changing job situation."

Following his address in the Old Capitol Senate Chamber, Branstad answered students' questions.

Earlier Monday, the group was welcomed to the institute by UI Vice President for Educational Research and Development Duane Spriestersbach.

Spriestersbach charged the students to make the most of their time at the UI and the most of their talents in becoming the leaders of the future.

"As I'm sure you are aware by now, extraordinary talent brings with it certain privileges," he said. "But as I hope you will come to realize, extraordinary talent also brings with it certain obligations."

Nicholas Colangelo, institute co-director and UI professor of counselor education, said one of the greatest potential benefits for the participants is the chance to work and socialize with a more challenging peer group.

"We know that in your own school districts, many times you are surrounded by groups of students who do not have the interests and the feelings that you do," Colangelo said in addressing the students. "Hopefully here you will find that group."

Barbara Kerr, program co-director and UI professor, said one of the program's strengths was the process of selecting students.

"You people were selected — not on the basis of straight A's, not on the basis of achievement scores, not on the basis of being the most popular person in your school — but on the basis of your excellence in one particular field and your love for that field," Kerr told the students.

Kerr said the purpose of the institute was not to compete with public schools, but to complement them by allowing upper-level students to continue to progress outside of the normal classroom setting.

"We suspect that a lot of you have not been challenged in your classes," she said. "Well, here you will be challenged."

The students will attend morning classes in their various fields taught by UI and public school teachers and afternoon workshops with their peers. Activities also are planned for evenings and weekends.

Jury awards $400,000 to smoker's widower

By Daniel Wakin
The Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — A federal court jury for the first time held a cigarette company partially responsible for the death of a smoker, finding Monday that Liggett Group Inc. failed to warn the public about the dangers of cigarettes and violated its promise to produce a safe product.

The jury awarded $400,000 to Antonio Cipollone, whose wife, Rose, died of lung cancer in 1984, but rejected his claim of a conspiracy among the three tobacco companies which produced the products his wife used.

The damage award was based on the jury's finding that Liggett violated its expressed promise to consumers to make a safe product, thus contributing to Mrs. Cipollone's death.

It also found that Liggett failed to warn the public about the dangers of cigarettes, but awarded no damages because it found Mrs. Cipollone 80 percent responsible for her death.

Liggett, Lorillard Inc. and Philip Morris Inc. were exonerated of conspiring to mislead the public about the dangers of smoking.

Mrs. Cipollone, who was 58 when she died, smoked Chesterfield and L&M cigarettes, both made by Liggett, before the U.S. surgeon general's landmark report in 1964 linking smoking to lung cancer. She later smoked brands made by Lorillard and Philip Morris.

"The tobacco companies have claimed for the last 20 years that they are invincible," said Alan Darnell, an attorney for Cipollone. "This shows they are not... they are just like any other company."

Liggett attorney James Kearney said he was pleased by the verdict. "The jury specifically rejected any claims of damages," he said. "The floodgates have been closed even firmer than they were before."

Cipollone's main attorney, Marc Z.

Edell, said he was unsure whether the verdict would lead to more tobacco liability suits.

"I think the jury, for whatever reason, didn't like Rose Cipollone. That's the problem. They never met Rose Cipollone," he said.

Liggett attorney Donald Cohn said he regarded the jury's award of $400,000 as "sympathy," and said he would appeal.

Edell, Cipollone's attorney, said he would ask the judge to overturn the jury's decision to award no damages to Mrs. Cipollone.

Cipollone, 64, of Lakehurst, said he was glad the trial was over, "and I'm glad the verdict came out halfway a win."

"It wasn't 100 percent. I'm glad that we won partial, but it's a start," he said.

Asked if his wife would be happy about the jury's findings, he said: "I don't really know. She started the suit, and I told her I'd continue 'til the end."

As the jury forewoman answered each question from the court clerk, a gasp rose from the courtroom packed with industry lawyers, analysts and reporters.

The jury awarded no punitive damages.

"This is basically a victory for the defense," Cohn said.

S. Korean radicals attack U.S. office

By C.W. Lim
The Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — Radicals hurled tear gas grenades and firebombs at a U.S. diplomatic office Monday, and thousands of students battled riot police to protest the blocking of a march to the North Korean border.

Riot police kicked and punched street vendors in Seoul and threw tear gas to disperse a march by about 1,000 of the merchants, news reports said. The vendors accused authorities of hurting their businesses in efforts to clean up the city for the Olympics.

Police and U.S. officials said students tossed three firebombs and two tear gas grenades at the U.S. Information Service building in Taegu before they were seized by police guards firing tear gas.

Police said only three students were involved in the attack in Taegu, 150 miles south of Seoul, but local press reports said there were up to 10 attackers and that they also hurled two homemade bombs.

The reports said six windows were broken and the office's sign was set on fire.

The attack followed a wave of violent anti-government and anti-U.S. protests in the past two weeks by radical students demanding an end to U.S. influence and the removal of about 42,000 American troops stationed here under a mutual defense pact.

Few South Koreans support the radicals, who also are demanding reunification of South Korea and communist North Korea.

In the western port city of Incheon, about 3,000 university students yelling "Yankee go home!" and anti-government slogans hurled firebombs and rocks when police fired barrages of tear gas to stop them from marching off their campus.

The Korean news agency Yonhap said about 1,200 students from eight schools attacked riot police with firebombs and rocks at a university campus in the southern city of Pusan.

No injuries were reported in the School holds art class

Willowwind School of Iowa City will sponsor Summer Arts Workshops for children aged 7-11 throughout the summer. The workshops are of two-week duration and will be held from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., Monday through Friday, beginning June 20.

The two-week workshops will allow students to explore various art forms through hands-on experiences. Guest artists, who are selected because of their skills in their crafts as well as their ability to work with children, will teach classes in songwriting, giant puppetry, weaving, pottery, papermaking and indigo vat dyeing. For information or a brochure, call Willowwind School at 338-6061.

UI sponsors seminar

Stephen R. Salton will speak at a physiology seminar titled "Regulation of B-LH gene expression by GnRH" today at 3:30 p.m. in Bowen Science Building Room 5-669.

Salton is a research assistant professor of neurobiology at Fishberg Research Center at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York City. The UI Department of Physiology and Biophysics and the Diabetes and Endocrine Research Center are co-sponsoring the event.

Art center holds classes

The Arts and Craft Center in the Union is offering summer classes in the visual and creative arts for adults, teens and children beginning June 20.

Saturday and evening classes for adults and teens include printmaking, matting and framing, batik, basketry, bookbinding, fiction writing and instruction in beginning to advanced photography and darkroom techniques.

Classes for children include drawing, printmaking, painting, and creative writing. The mini-sessions allow children to choose which weeks to attend from a variety of creative activities.

Registration for the youth mini-sessions can be done in advance or on the first day of the sessions which the child wishes to attend. Registration for all other classes can be done at the Arts and Craft Center Office from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on the ground floor of the Union or by calling 335-3399.

Mall offers free phone calls

The Sycamore Mall Merchants will offer free phone calls for Father's Day. Those interested may call their fathers anywhere in the United States at no charge.

The phone service is provided by Teleconnect of Cedar Rapids. The phones will be located in the center court of the mall. There is a time limit of five minutes for each phone call.

Hours for the free phone calls are: Friday, June 17, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday, June 18, from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; and Sunday, June 19, from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Groups offer free gift wrap

The Sycamore Mall and the Eastside Kiwanis will offer free gift wrap for Father's Day purchases made at Sycamore Mall. Hours for the free wrapping service are: Friday, June 17, from 12 p.m. to 9 p.m., and Saturday, June 18, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The service will be offered in the center court of the mall.

The gift wrap is free, but donations can be made to the Iowa City Eastside Kiwanis, who sponsor various programs during the year, including a fishing trip with handicapped children and a highway safety project on Memorial Day and Labor Day.

Club sponsors car show

The Iowa Valley Antique Car Club will sponsor an antique car show on Saturday, June 18, at Sycamore Mall. The vintage automobiles will be displayed in the mall concourse from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Members of the Iowa Valley Antique Car Club will be at the mall to talk with the public about their cars and the hobby of car restoration.

Opportunities abound in summer workshops

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Whether you're interested in learning to speak a foreign language, writing for a yearbook or sharpening teaching skills, chances are there is a UI summer workshop or special program catering to your needs.

More than 75 sports, music, theater arts, writing and science programs are offered to teachers and students during the UI summer session, which runs from June 13 to Aug. 5.

UI Summer Session Director Christine Quinn said she expects 85 to 90 percent of the registrants to be continuing students who are working toward an undergraduate degree. Most of the rest will be teachers seeking recertification or working toward an advanced degree.

Quinn said she expects a slight enrollment decrease from 1987, partially because of the low unemployment rate.

"Students are finding it easier to get a summer job, so we think that more of them will take the summer off to make money for the regular academic year," she said.

Still, the summer workshops attract many people from across the state and country for each one- to eight-week session.

Quinn said the UI College of Education sponsors a majority of the summer workshops, adding she expects a slight increase in the number of returning teachers.

Quinn said she is pleased with the response generated by many of the workshops, especially the desktop publishing, debate and science training programs.

The desktop publishing workshop gives high school journalism advisers first hand experience working with layouts so they may teach students about publishing.

The workshop is coordinated by Mary Arnold, director of summer workshops for the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Quinn said the desktop workshop is being offered for the first time this summer and filled up very quickly.

"It's a hot, new and fairly low-cost way for high schools to publish newspapers," she said.

Another popular summer workshop involves more than 20 selected Iowa high school mathematics teachers who will learn about new computer software and textbook approaches for teaching geometry.

Funded by a three-year, $250,000 National Science Foundation grant, the program is being directed by Keith Stroyan, UI professor of mathematics, and Harold Schoen, UI professor of secondary education.

Schoen said the workshop will deal with the geometric ideas on which a microcomputer is based and help teachers see how different approaches to geometry — using transformation and vectors — fit together.

"Teachers will have an opportunity to see how the two are very similar and also see how they are used in microcomputer graphics," Schoen said.

Iowa math teachers and science teachers at the elementary- and secondary-school levels will attend a summer institute sponsored by the National Science Foundation.

The institute's purpose is to help teachers improve methods of organizing, planning and assessing science instruction. The summer science institute is being directed by Robert Yager, professor of science education.

Ambrisco raises questions about city sewer builders

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

A Minneapolis construction firm which was awarded the contract for construction of the city's new sewer treatment plant came under fire from a member of the Iowa City Council Monday night.

Iowa City Councilor William Ambrisco said he was upset at how the Paul A. Laurence Co., which was awarded the contract in May, was soliciting bids for the project.

Ambrisco said the company was doing business by soliciting low bidders and then taking those bids and seeking out lower bidders.

"A lot of local people submitted bids at the request of Laurence Co.," Ambrisco said. "Laurence then calls a competitor and sees if they can beat the low bid. This procedure may not be illegal, but I don't like it."

"We don't play games with the bidders in our community," Ambrisco added.

Council members decided to send a letter to Laurence Co. to request their appearance at a council meeting to explain why they are doing business in this manner.

The council also discussed the advantages and disadvantages of high-rise building in the downtown area Monday night.

Council member Randy Larson raised concerns about building high-rises, which are defined as those with four or more stories, in downtown Iowa City.

"Why do we think our emphasis on building should be downtown?" Larson said, adding it would increase congestion and create more problems for parking.

Council member Susan Horowitz also said increasing the population density in the downtown area might be detrimental to the public transit system.

But she added that high-rises in the downtown area could also be favorable to city by helping to preserve outlying neighborhoods.

Iowa City Director of Planning and Program Development Don Schmeiser also discussed the matter of subdivision regulations with the council members. The city received a letter Monday from developers which several council members said, if interpreted one way, asks the council disregard all previous plans and begin with a new framework for subdivision regulations.

Council members decided the content of the letter was too vague and requested more information on the new developing plan.

"I would like them (the developers) to come in with a new subdivision number that makes it clear we're dealing with something different," councilor Horowitz said.

The Johnson County Attorney's Office filed Monday to order an examination of alleged murderer Mark R. Peterson in response to his possible defense of insanity, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Peterson filed last week to use possible defenses of intoxication, insanity and/or a defense of diminished responsibility.

Peterson was charged March 24 with the first-degree murder of Marshall Stewart, former UI Power Plant manager.

Assistant Johnson County Attorney Linda McGuire also asked the court to order that the evaluation of Peterson be held at the Iowa Medical and Classification Center.

A Tiffin, Iowa, man was arrested Monday and charged with second-degree burglary after he allegedly kicked in the door at a UI medical lab and pried open a file cabinet, according to UI Campus Security reports.

Vincent Charles Thede, 18, was arrested by a Campus Security officer at about 5:30 p.m. Damages caused in the incident totalled approximately $85, according to the report.

Thett: Two males allegedly stole a case of beer valued at $15 from L & M Mighty Shop, 504 E. Burlington St., early Monday morning and fled on foot, according to police reports.

he allegedly kicked a 16-year-old male in the head, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Charles David Lewis Phelps, 18, 1100 Arthur St., was observed by three juveniles when he allegedly knocked down the 16-year-old and kicked him in the head and facial area on May 7.

An Iowa City man was being held in Johnson County Jail on $10,000 bond Monday for the charge of second-degree burglary after he allegedly stole $190 in cash from a room in the Canterbury Inn in Coralville Sunday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Jerry D. Patterson, 27, a resident of the Iowa City Hope House, was an employee of the Canterbury Inn in charge of cleaning the victim's room. He was found in possession of the master key and the money, according to court records.

Patterson gave contradictory explanations for the money in question. The Hope House staff said Patterson should have a maximum amount of $40 in his possession, according to court records.

A hearing in the case is set for June 23.

A Coralville man was charged Monday with second-degree theft after he allegedly falsified $1,733 worth of merchandise return slips at Payless Cashways, Route 1, Coralville, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Maurice J. Graham, 19, 409 Sixth Ave., allegedly falsified the return slips on six separate occasions between April 24 and June 5, 1988. He then rung the false returns through the register and took the money himself, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for June 30.

employee, according to the report.

Thett: A bank bag containing an undetermined amount of money was reported stolen from Lundy's Hallmark, Pepperwood Place, Sunday night at about 6 p.m., according to police reports.

The money was reportedly taken from the store when a clerk was distracted. No arrest was made, according to the report.

Thett: About $300 worth of clothes were reported by an Iowa City woman Sunday night to have been stolen, allegedly by her former roommate, according to police reports.

The woman said the clothing had been stolen from her old apartment while she was moving earlier on Sunday to a new apartment, according to the report.

Police were unable to contact the roommate, who was believed to be staying with a friend, at the time of the report.

Iowa Youth 2000 holds hearing on social needs

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Youth 2000 task force appointed April 4 by Gov. Terry Branstad to examine the economic and social needs of Iowa's youth held a public hearing in Iowa City last Friday to discuss incentives for keeping young people in Iowa.

The task force is a response to requests for studies of youth issues made at the Annual Governor's Youth Conference last October. According to 1985 U.S. Census figures, there are 773,000 children under the age of 18 in Iowa, a figure representing 26.8 percent of the state's population.

The 35-member task force consists of youths, legislators and representatives from private business, education, youth service providers and economic development groups. It will advise Branstad on ways in which he might develop programs in Iowa.

The main focus of the task force is to prepare Iowa's youth for the demands of a changing society in the 21st century, task force member and UI Dean of Academic Affairs Philip Hubbard said.

"We're looking to the future to see in which direction the state should invest its resources for the development of youth," he said.

In addition to marketing Iowa as a positive place to live and work, the task force will look at the needs, rights and responsibilities of young people.

"The real charge is to make Iowa a better place to live and build a career," Dick Vohs, Branstad's press secretary, said.

The hearing in Iowa City was not well-attended by the public, but task force staff member Harold Coleman said there will be more opportunities for public input at the meetings scheduled for July, September and November.

The public hearings are intended to provide the task force with information regarding current youth issues, to examine the needs of children now and in the future and to find out what needs to be provided for that isn't, Coleman said.

"In his State of the State Address," said Coleman, "the governor placed emphasis on education and economic development. Both issues are very important if our youths are going to become self-sufficient as they finish school and move on into the 21st century."

Coleman is an information specialist with the Iowa Commission on Children, Youth and Families. He said that the task force is working on an interim report to come out in July. "One of our goals is to make some legislative actions. We have four legislators on the task force."

The task force's final report will be issued in December.

Its next meeting is scheduled for July 22 in Carroll, Iowa, and a Sept. 23 meeting will be held in Waterloo. The task force's final meeting, to be held in November in Des Moines, will not include a public hearing.

Injured windsurfer improves

IOWA CITY (AP) — A Coralville doctor who was knocked unconscious in a windsurfing accident on Lake MacBride was reported in fair condition Monday night at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Scott R. Sneed, 30, 1701 Lynncrest Drive, was rescued by a fellow windsurfer and boaters who managed to get him to shore where he was flown by helicopter to an Iowa City hospital.

Sneed, who just completed residency at UI Hospitals, had been windsurfing with Douglas Wells and his wife, Kristen Wells, at about 4:15 p.m. at the state lake north of Iowa City.

Wells, 35, recalled Monday he looked back and saw Sneed lying half off the windsurf board. Sneed tried to lift his head but slipped into the water. He tried to lift his head again, then went motionless.

"I presume what happened is that Scott had been hit on the head by the boom of the windsurf board," Wells said. "The winds were very strong, coming and going. They would suddenly whip up and then nothing."

Wells said he sailed back to Sneed, who was wearing a flotation vest, and dragged the motionless body half onto rocks on the shore.

"He was unconscious at that stage," Wells said. "There was no pulse. His pupils dilated."

Wells got the attention of people on a sailboat. "One of the people on the boat jumped off and helped me drag (Sneed) further out of the water," Wells said. "A woman ran up the bank at the edge of the lake and went off to locate a phone at a nearby house."

Helping Wells was Tim Johnson, of UI Hospitals' Ophthalmology Clinic.

Wells said the rescuers flagged down a pontoon boat. With Wells doing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and Johnson doing external cardiac massage, the pontoon boat carried Sneed to a boat ramp.

An Air-Care Emergency Helicopter, ambulance and authorities arrived within moments.

Sneed received emergency treatment, including electrical shock, to restart his heart and resume breathing. He was then flown to UI Hospitals. Wells estimated the pulse was resumed 15 minutes after the accident.

Inmate loses battle for sex change

DES MOINES (AP) — An Iowa State Penitentiary inmate who convinced a lower court judge that prison officials were indifferent to his transsexualism has lost before a panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals.

A federal appellate panel in St. Louis on Monday reversed and remanded U.S. District Court Judge Harold Viotor's ruling in favor of Thomas L. White, who also is known as Tammy Lynn White.

White, who is serving a 10-year sentence for armed robbery, contended in his U.S. District Court Suit that he suffers from a mental disorder known as gender dysphoria, or transsexualism, and believes he is a woman "cruelly imprisoned in a man's body."

White, according to the opinion, made requests to state prison officials for treatment that included electrolysis, cosmetic surgery, hormone therapy and a sex-change operation. He also requested permission to wear women's clothing and use cosmetics, the opinion said, and asked for a transfer to a women's prison.

The opinion said White went on hunger strikes, threatened suicide and attempted to castrate himself on four occasions. In response, prison officials provided medical care for his injuries and placed him in protective custody or administrative confinement.

Viotor issued summary judgment in White's favor on the basis of a recommendation from U.S. Magistrate Ronald Longstaff. The magistrate concluded that prison officials had been indifferent to White's condition.

He also concluded that although White did not have a right to sex-change surgery while he was in prison, an independent expert should diagnose White and determine a minimal treatment plan.

Prison officials contended in their appeal that White did not prove he was a transsexual or that transsexualism was a serious medical need to which they were deliberately indifferent.

On Monday, a three-judge panel of the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals agreed. The panel said it agreed with Crispus C. Nix, the penitentiary's warden, and Harold Farrier, then director of the Iowa Department of Corrections, that questions existed as to whether White truly is a transsexual and whether treatment is therefore required.

Farrier has since resigned to return to school.

White is being held at the state Medical Classification Center at Oakdale, where he is being reviewed at the request of the State Parole Board for possible parole, said Lucille M. Hardy, an assistant attorney general who argued the state's position.

Stuck with a lemon

No weapon system has been the occasion for as much pure juvenile excitement as the Strategic Defense Initiative, the alleged antidote to nuclear holocaust.

From its inception, SDI has been nothing if not a mystery, living in the realm of hypothetical science. Politically, it is so indelibly associated with the President Ronald Reagan Wild West Show that Republicans and Democrats have split toe for toe from day one. For a pretty crazy idea, it has operated in the political arena with virtually no publicly acknowledged gray area.

Now after five years SDI and all its problems are coming into focus. In a report issued last week, the Office of Technology Assessment revealed that we haven't got the launchers to deploy Phase One before the late 1990s. Meanwhile, the Soviets would have ample time and reason to develop and deploy countermeasures of their own.

This does not mean that SDI has completely outlived its usefulness. Whatever Reagan's intentions when he first proposed a "peace shield," as a bluff SDI has been tremendously effective.

We are blessed at this time with a Soviet leader who seems genuinely interested in reforming his domestic economy, and the Soviets can afford an SDI-inspired arms race even less than we. Ironically, Reagan's commitment to building Star Wars has drawn the Soviets to the negotiating table as often as it has driven them away.

Now we know that in bargaining away SDI, we are actually bargaining away very little. It's a lemon, as we always suspected. But the price its abandonment will bring in arms reduction, global stability and a more humane and productive Soviet Union will be considerable.

It is time for the Reagan administration to make good use of one of its worst ideas. It's time to bargain this lemon away.

Freeloading friends

Uncle Sam has become Uncle Sap. According to Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., America has "all the burdens of an empire and none of the benefits."

After Reagan's $1 trillion military build-up, the allies are more secure than ever before. So secure they have huge trade surpluses. So secure they cut back their defense budgets to 81 percent of America's in 1980 and 47 percent in 1984.

Today they spend even less. West Germany spends 3.1 percent of its gross national product on defense. Italy spends 2.7 percent, and Japan less than 1 percent. America, in contrast, spends 6.9 percent.

In understandable terms: Americans pay $1,002 each, West Germans $359, Italians $187, and Japanese only $103.

At the same time, these nations have the gall to lecture America for not being able to control the budget deficit.

Spending less on their own defense lets the allies spend more of their money pursuing profit. Dollars once wasted on national defense now provide working capital, adding to their GNPs.

According to Richard Perle, hawkish cold-warrior and retired Reagan administration assistant secretary of defense, Uncle Sam has been duped by the NATO allies and Japan. Perle complained to Schroeder's House committee recently that "Japan has emerged as the largest single source of Soviet-bloc credits, and the Germans... are eager to expand their financial relationship with the Soviets."

While America's allies are lending money to the theoretical "enemy," America is borrowing money to secure these same allies from the same "enemy." Ironic, no?

With free-loading allies like this, who needs enemies?

A simple smokescreen

Stop the presses! Newsflash! Extra, extra, read all about it and be morally indignant!

This just in — 1988's biggest public relations hoax is not the U.S. presidential race! The "Major League Scam" honor has recently passed from George Bush and Michael Dukakis to Philip Morris, one of the nation's largest tobacco firms, following the company's attempt to soothe its guilty conscience by throwing some big parties.

This is the story: Philip Morris is engaging in a concept known as "strategic philanthropy." To anyone unversed in corporate bull, this means a company that makes a product which kills people gives a lot of money to cultural institutions. This, in turn, makes the public believe that the product — and the people who produce it — are OK.

According to The Wall Street Journal, Philip Morris produced 531 billion cigarettes last year. In the same year, according to the federal Office of Smoking and Health, cigarette smoking was linked to more than 300,000 deaths. But when Philip Morris gives $13 million to a few art museums, we're supposed to forget about lung cancer and emphysema and other such drivel. We're supposed to ooh and aaah and light a Marlboro.

Funding for the arts is noble and generous but not with dirty money. Not with monetary gifts that defeat the aesthetic message. Thanks to Philip Morris, the next production you see at Carnegie Hall may bear a high price tag — human lives.

Comic mourns the demise of an old and dear friend

Dear beloved, we are gathered here today to say good-bye to our cherished friend. A friend who was good to us all.

Though we all knew Sex, there were those who were fortunate enough to share Sex with a friend.

Sex gave us so much — endless pleasure, excitement and almost always a smile.

We will miss Sex, but we'll never forget it either. We must not dwell on our loss. We must forge ahead and find something to fill the void.

We will discover a whole world beyond the prison of lewd and lascivious thoughts and actions. We will transcend the urges and find peace and contentment in a good game of Pictionary and a big bowl of bran flakes.

When we look back on Sex, we will remember the good times. But Sex was not perfect. We must also remember the times Sex left us feeling limp and empty.

At a time like this it is hard not to ask, "Why?" Why did Sex die? Many things caused the demise of Sex. Social pressures, social diseases and the seemingly endless hassles with birth control devices.

Many people thought that they could save Sex with marriage. They believed marriage would provide them with an arena of unlimited safe sex. But that didn't solve the problem. Couples found themselves too tired for Sex. Sex died of neglect.

Those who believed Sex could survive without marriage gave it all they had, but that wasn't enough. Couples entangled in the salacious grip of lust shook themselves free because contraception was a perturbation which often led many to masturbation. Sex died from ignorance.

The condom was shunned by many. Even high-fashion colors couldn't turn things around.

For the reckless thrill seekers, there was the IUD. Not only did the IUD contribute to the death of Sex, it killed a multinational pharmaceutical conglomerate as well.

The diaphragm, though very popular, proved to be a better Frisbee for midgets than a sound method of birth control.

Then there was the pill, the single most effective method of contracep-tion. Yet it had some unpleasant side effects. The pill almost entirely removed the risk of pregnancy as well as one's libido. It frequently left the user feeling fat, ugly and violent. Medical science hasn't come as far as we thought. Sex died from hypertension and anxiety.

Massive public fear and hysteria over the spread of nasty diseases forced people to abandon Sex. Sex was placed in the proverbial dumpster of life where it decomposed into just a memory.

We are all to blame for the death of Sex. But we cannot live the rest of our lives with guilt or we, too, like Sex, will die of hypertension and anxiety.

Fortunately, time and penicillin heal most wounds. The warm feelings and impure thoughts will eventually fade away.

From time to time your body may try to force you to take a mental field trip back to the good old days of lust. But be strong. Hold your head high and be proud that you were a part in the life of our dear friend, Sex.

Hotel moguls caught in act

The trials of Leona and Harry Helmsley have touched me profoundly. Maybe it's because I once stayed in a Helmsley hotel and so I naturally feel a special bond with them. Or maybe it's because I've always taken such a keen interest in Leona's career as spokeswoman for their hotel chain.

I don't know why I feel so involved with the Helmsleys, but since they were indicted my thoughts have been with them. I've been trying to think of some way in which I can help in their time of trouble.

How difficult it all must be for them, and how confusing. One day they're up with Donald Trump, lionized as the apotheosis of success. The next day they're on the cover of People magazine with the headline "Greedy, Greedy, Greedy." Where are you supposed to draw the line between success and greed? Or aren't you supposed to, until you land in court?

The crimes — so-called — with which the Helmsleys have been charged are probably no more than bookkeeping errors or oversights. Their mistakes loom bigger than those other people might make because, after all, the Helmsleys are billionaires.

It's so easy to make mistakes. I have made them, and you have probably made them, too. So, naturally, we can understand how a busy woman like Leona might have mistaken a pink satin party dress for a hotel uniform and charged it up as a business expense. And as for the $500,000 in jade objects d'art the Helmsleys allegedly wrote off as hotel expenses, well, who among us can honestly say we have never done something similar?

To me, the most bewildering charge is that Leona "defrauded" stockholders by paying herself $83,333.34 a month in consulting fees. How can this be? Anyone who has followed Leona's appearances in advertisements must know how hard she works running the Helmsley hotels.

In the ads she seems to be everywhere at once, checking to see if the pillows are plump enough, the towels sufficiently fluffy. In one particularly memorable advertisement she was pictured, in gold lame, tasting some concoction in a hotel kitchen. The caption read, "Leona Helmsley, proprietress of the Helmsley Palace, samples the fare to see that each morsel reflects the culinary genius of our Master Chef."

Dedication like that — each morsel! — does not come cheap. Only the meaneast sort of person would carp about paying Leona a few thousand dollars for doing all she does.

As for the other charges, well, perhaps it was wrong of her to write off as a business expense the $45,000 clock she bought as a birthday present for Harry, if indeed she did. But probably it's all a mistake. She may have been confused about the new tax laws. Who isn't? It's understandable that she might make such an error, what with everything she has to do, fluffing all the pillows, putting all those candles on people's pillows, posing for those ads, always thinking of her guests and not herself.

Meanwhile, a suggestion. Each of us who has ever stayed at a Helmsley hotel should send back one of those little bars of soap or those tiny bottles of shampoo to help tide Harry and Leona over this mess. I have no doubt that the Helmsleys will be exonerated. But if they're not, well, there's always a lot of talk about cleaning up the prisons, and who could be better qualified for the job than Leona?

Striking similarities exist between undeclared wars

As we found out in Vietnam and as the Soviets found out in Afghanistan, if the civilian population back home isn't behind a war effort, it's a long, lonely battle for those fighting the war.

The mess we're now involved in in Central America, both the on-off funding of the Contras in Nicaragua and our dealings with General Manuel Noriega in Panama, are perfect examples of the symptoms of indecision. Indecision that can be costly and divisive to a nation.

President Ronald Reagan and Vice President George Bush made the same early mistakes with Central American policy that the Kennedy and Johnson administrations made with Vietnam. This time the public does not want to be burned.

Kennedy and Johnson slowly increased men, money and weapons to Southeast Asia. They never took their case to the American people concerning why we should be there and what we were trying to accomplish. They also did not ask the American people to make the human and financial sacrifices necessary in a war effort.

Johnson ignored advice from his economists who said he needed to increase taxes to pay for the Vietnam War. The draft in the 1960s was shot through with loopholes for the more affluent and educated in our society. An obvious example is seen in the deferments granted to college students.

Unlike World War II, the burden of fighting and paying for the Vietnam War was not spread evenly throughout society. So instead of a society that was either clearly behind the Vietnam War effort and willing to sacrifice money and lives to make it work, or willing to pull out early and cut losses, this war unleashed the most divisive era in this country since the Civil War.

So what does this have to do with Central America?

Every year the administration has gone to Congress to ask for piddling amounts of money — $100 million in the scheme of the federal budget is piddling — to fund the Contra forces in Nicaragua.

First it said the money was to keep the Sandinistas honest; then it said it was to make them say "uncle." Congress hasn't been much better. Either it votes in favor of these piddling amounts or it appropriates other piddling amounts for "humanitarian aid" after denying military aid.

The administration wanted an undeclared war in Central America against the Sandinistas on the cheap, as part of a sideshow the American public wouldn't pay attention to.

Democrats in Congress were leery of Contra aid, but they wanted to protect their political manhood, and their jobs, from Republican accusations that "they lost Nicaragua."

In short, no one took their case to the people, laid it on the line and dealt honestly with the American public. No one said, "Here are your choices, they may not be pretty, but decisions have to be made."

Instead, the administration decided to aid the Contras when Congress denied such aid by dealing with such people as Noriega and Lt. Col. Oliver North.

As Henry Kissinger and Cyrus Vance, both former secretaries of state, put it in their Newsweek article of June 6, 1988: "Central America provides a conspicuous example of an area where U.S. policy has suffered because of a lack of clear-cut national objectives that could be publicly debated and nationally mandated."

Talk to your grandparents sometime about what World War II was like. They'll most likely tell you that everyone was behind the war effort and sacrificed quite a bit to win that war.

If a nation is to wage war against another, the people in those nations must back those war efforts and be willing to sacrifice money and lives to meet the war's objectives.

In Vietnam and in Central America, the American people were never given a chance to decide whether or not these were wars worth fighting. War was never declared and the results were disastrous.

Undeclared wars just don't cut it.

Wright aide: Book was part of job

By Tim Ahern
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A former aide to House Speaker Jim Wright was quoted today as saying he thought working on a book written by his boss was "part of my job" rather than the volunteer project described by Wright.

Wright's aide, Newt Gingrich, said, "I did think it was part of my congressional job. That was my understanding at the time, and I still think that."

The statement by Gingrich, published in the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, contrasts with statements by Wright, D-Texas, who said today that Gingrich had volunteered and that the important thing was the aide gave full value for taxpayers' dollars.

"It is common practice for people on the staff to help in preparation of articles, books and speeches," Wright told reporters, adding that such action is proper if the writing involves matters of public policy.

"Was that (Gingrich's work on the book) public work? I think it can be argued that it was."

Cossolotto was on Wright's staff at the time and Wright has said Cossolotto worked on the book on his own time, rather than while he was supposed to be at his job.

But Cossolotto disputed that. "I never understood it (the book) to be personal time. Nobody ever said this was a project to be done around personal time. It was pretty clear."

Cossolotto, now in private business in Washington, said of the fact that his statements differ from Wright's "I don't want to characterize it as a conflict."

"I do have a recollection of it, and the speaker has a recollection of it," he was quoted as saying.

Wright said Sunday the congressional investigation of his financial dealings won't hamper him in his role as chairman of next month's Democratic National Convention.

"There is no cloud over my head, no sir," the Texas Democrat said. "I've done nothing unethical, nothing illegal, nothing violative of the rules of the House."

Wright said the allegations are "a partisan political ploy" by Republicans seeking to deflect attention from ethical violations by current and former members of the Reagan administration.

Wright, when asked if he would step down from the chairmanship of the party's convention if asked, said, "I don't expect to."

"I haven't done anything dishonest or illegal," he said. "I'm convinced I haven't violated any rules of the House."

"I may have done some things, at one time or another in my career, that were bad judgment," he said. "But whatever mistakes I've made have not been dishonest mistakes."

Wright refused to say if he thinks the ethics investigation should be conducted by an independent counsel, rather than the committee. "I don't have a preference," he said.

"I'm not trying to tell the committee how to do its business," Wright said on ABC. "I asked them to look into it thoroughly. I asked them to do it promptly. Now, anything that can be done is fine with me so long as it gets the facts out and gets them out soon."

"I want this resolved, and I'm convinced that the resolution is going to be that I haven't violated any rules."

The committee's inquiry was originally suggested by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., one of Wright's harshest critics in the House. But the panel said its investigation will be wider in scope than that suggested by Gingrich.

Wright received a 55 percent royalty totaling about $55,000 on his book. Questions have been raised about Wright's use of a congressional staffer to work on the book, purchases of the book by friends and lobbyists and about the royalty percentage, which is higher than those usually paid to authors.

Wright said "there was nothing wrong with the contract" and joked that "the royalty proceeds are going to my favorite charity — Mrs. Wright and me."

The book was published by William Carlos Moore, a friend of Wright who also received large printing contracts from Wright's re-election campaign.

The Star-Telegram article Sunday concerned purchases of the book by Fort Worth developer S. Gene Payte.

Payte said he bought 1,000 copies at a cost of $6,000 because federal election laws limit individual campaign contributions to $1,000 for each election.

"If I wanted to help Jim and wanted to give him some money, I couldn't do it," Payte told the Star-Telegram. "But I could buy his books."

Presidential race tightens, polls show

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — A Harris poll released today indicated a closer presidential race than public opinion surveys last month, with Democrat Michael Dukakis holding a slim five-point lead over Republican George Bush.

Dukakis' lead was within the poll's margin of sampling error and was slightly down from his seven-point advantage in a Harris poll released last month. Dukakis had a double-digit lead in some other surveys in May.

The new Harris poll, conducted by telephone June 1 to 6, found 49 percent support for Dukakis, who has clinched the Democratic nomination, and 44 percent for Bush, the Republican nomination campaign winner. Seven percent were unsure.

Lou Harris & Associates contacted 1,258 likely voters, and the margin of sampling error in its survey was plus or minus three percentage points.

A USA Today-CNN poll conducted June 7 to 9 and released last week also showed a single-digit lead for Dukakis, 6 points.

Shamir deports activist leader

By Karin Laub
The Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israel Monday deported Arab-American activist Mubarak Awad, an expulsion Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said was necessary to deter violence.

Awad, wearing a white shirt and carrying a jacket, was accompanied up the stairway to the TWA aircraft by two police officers before other passengers boarded. He waved briefly and appeared to make a V-for-victory sign before entering the jetliner.

Police barred reporters from the tarmac at Ben Gurion International Airport and took identification documents from several journalists who ventured near the plane. Armed border patrol guards forced news photographers off the roof of the terminal building.

Shamir last month ordered Awad, a 44-year-old advocate of non-violent resistance to the Israeli occupation, deported despite U.S. objections. The prime minister told Israel radio today that Awad's expulsion "will have a deterrent influence" on other Arabs.

Shamir maintained Awad played a leading role in the six-month-old Arab uprising in the occupied lands. The rebellion has adopted some of the methods advocated by Awad, including use of commercial strikes and boycotts of Israeli products.

About a dozen Israeli supporters held placards at an airport entrance. One, written in Hebrew and English, read: "Mubarak: Next Year in Jerusalem."

Awad issued a written statement today in which he urged Israelis and Arabs to "learn to take a risk for peace."

"It would be unfair and cowardly on our part to postpone our conflict for the next generation," the statement said.

Awad, who has a home in Wapakoneta, Ohio, also vowed to return to his native Jerusalem.

Early today, in the West Bank town of Abwein, Israeli troops shot and killed Dib Mahmud Hussein, a 43-year-old Palestinian man, after he failed to obey an order to halt, according to Yasser Obeid, director of Ramallah Hospital.

Hussein's family said he did not stop because he was deaf and could not hear the order. The army said it was checking the report.

The death brought to 207 the number of Palestinians killed in the uprising that began Dec. 8 in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East war. Two Israelis have also died.

On Sunday, Shamir told Israel radio as he toured a factory near Tel Aviv that Israel would respond to an upsurge in Arab attacks "swiftly and aggressively."

Referring to an unprecedented firebomb attack Sunday at Tel Aviv's main shopping mall, he said: "This is more proof that they (the Arabs) are not just talking about the (occupied) territories but that the conflict is one for our survival. These are blows against our existence."

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Industry Minister Ariel Sharon spoke out about a need to use guns to punish firebomb-throwers and arsonists who have destroyed Israeli forests in recent weeks.

Rabin told the weekly Cabinet session Sunday that he had authorized Israeli civilians in the occupied territories to shoot at Arabs holding firebombs, the Jerusalem Post daily reported.

Sharon, a former defense minister, said on army radio that Arab firebombers should be shot dead "not only after they (the firebombs) are thrown. They must be shot with the intention to kill to allow normal life for both Arabs and Jews."

Court revives polio lawsuit

By James Rubin
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled Monday the government may be forced to pay damages when a vaccine it licenses causes the disease it was intended to prevent.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices rejected Reagan administration arguments that the government always should be shielded from lawsuits in such cases.

In another case, the court agreed to judge the constitutionality of a new sentencing system for people convicted of federal crimes.

The court reinstated a suit by the parents of a Pennsylvania boy who contracted polio after receiving a dose of federally approved vaccine.

Justice Thurgood Marshall, in his opinion for the court, said governmental immunity from suit only extends to instances in which an official exercises discretion or judgment.

"The discretionary function exception, however, does not apply if the acts complained of do not involve the permissible exercise of policy discretion," Marshall said.

If a federal policy "leaves no room for an official to exercise policy judgment in performing a given act, or if the act simply does not involve the exercise of such judgment," the government may be sued for causing personal injury, Marshall said.

The court revived a suit in behalf of polio victim Kevan Berkovitz, who was less than three months old on May 10, 1979, when his pediatrician in Charleroi, Pa., gave him a dose of Orimune.

The drug, manufactured by Lederle Laboratories, is a form of Sabin oral vaccine. Orimune was licensed by the government in 1963.

Kevan was stricken with polio within a month and the U.S. Communicable Disease Center determined he contracted the disease from the vaccine. He is paralyzed and deformed and breathes with the help of a respirator.

The Berkovitz family contends that negligence by a government worker caused the child's polio.

The parents said the vaccine approved by the government violated its own standards for safety and that policy-making discretion by the government was not involved in approving the defective vaccine.

The Reagan administration argued that even when an employee is negligent, the government agency that employs the worker may be using its discretion in approving the vaccine.

Justice Department lawyers said if the government can be sued in such cases, it will be forced into becoming an insurer of vaccines and may withdraw from licensing them.

Federal officials said Sabin oral vaccine, administered routinely to all children in the United States, has all but eliminated polio even though each year a few who take the vaccine have adverse reactions.

Today's ruling overturned a decision by the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals based in Philadelphia which threw out the Berkovitz suit last year.

Terrorist warning cancelled in China

BELJING — The U.S. Embassy has begun notifying American residents that they no longer need limit their movements to avoid a possible terrorist attack. On Thursday, the embassy warned the more than 1,500 Americans living in Beijing to take precautions. The Chinese government had told it unidentified terrorists from a third country might attack U.S. citizens in the capital.

On Sunday, the embassy canceled its warning after the Chinese assured U.S. officials the danger was over.

Late Saturday, the official Xinhua News Agency issued a statement by the vice minister of public security, Gu Linfang, saying "necessary measures" had been taken and "the problem has been solved." Gu did not elaborate.

The embassy also recommended that Americans avoid restaurants or bars known to be gathering points for Americans and avoid wearing clothing that clearly identified them as American.

Gorbachev warns against Pakistani aid

UNITED NATIONS — Soviet troops are leaving Afghanistan "faster than we all expected," the U.N. mediator who negotiated the withdrawal said Monday.

Diego Cordovez refused to say how many Red Army troops have pulled out since the Geneva Accord took effect May 15.

He also said he is disturbed by allegations the pact is being violated.

The Soviets said they had 100,300 troops in Afghanistan as of May 15 and would withdraw one-fourth of them by early June. Western intelligence agencies had estimated Soviet troop strength as up to 115,000.

In Moscow, Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev and Afghan President Najib on Monday spoke of "resolute retaliatory measures" if Pakistan continues to aid Moslem guerrillas battling the Kabul regime.

The warning was the first of its kind directly from Gorbachev. It came as sources in Pakistan said Soviet forces had returned to some cities in eastern Afghanistan to fight guerrillas who raided posts defended by Afghan troops.

Najib and Gorbachev distributed a joint statement over the official Soviet news agency Tass saying: "The Soviet Union and Afghanistan believed that the U.N. Mission monitoring compliance with the Geneva accords would adopt ... effective measures to curb the practice (of Pakistan's aiding the guerrillas) which, if continued would make it necessary to undertake the most resolute retaliatory steps."

Japanese Youth labeled threat

PHILADELPHIA — A Japanese student charged with trying to sneak weapons aboard a jetliner remained jailed Monday without bail.

"He is a threat to the community and a risk of flight," Assistant U.S. Attorney Marsha McClellan told federal Magistrate Richard Powers.

Powers denied bail and scheduled a hearing Thursday on a government motion to hold Yoshino Kosugi, 18, a Drexel University engineering student, for trial.

Kosugi, en route to Japan to spend the summer with his family, was arrested Sunday morning minutes before the scheduled takeoff of a Northwest Airlines jetliner for Tokyo.

He had a round-trip ticket and was scheduled to return in September when classes resume.

A routine check of his luggage uncovered four practice grenades with live primers, blank rifle ammunition, a small bottle of flash gunpowder, smokeless powder, a carbon dioxide pellet gun with cartridges and pellets, 50 feet of detonation cord, homemade firecrackers, road flares and three knives.

The discovery led authorities to close one of five terminals at Philadelphia International Airport for three hours while the bomb squad examined the explosives.

The government charged that Kosugi "did willfully and without regard for the safety of human life" try to place the seized items aboard an aircraft. If convicted, he faces a maximum of five years in prison and a $25,000 fine.

An affidavit filed with the court said Kosugi "freely admitted that the items located in his luggage belonged to him and were packed in his luggage in a concealed manner by him for transport to his destination, Yokohama, Japan."

FBI agent John Kundts, who participated in the questioning, said Kosugi maintained that he collected military paraphernalia. His items were all obtainable from an Army surplus store.

Koop, forum address AIDS

U.S. reports: 1 case every 14 minutes

By Paul Raeburn
The Associated Press
STOCKHOLM, Sweden — New AIDS cases are being reported in the United States at the rate of one every 14 minutes and an estimated 365,000 cases will have been reported by 1992, the latest U.S. government figures show.

Dr. James Curran, director of the AIDS program at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, said today that it is difficult to tell whether the AIDS epidemic is leveling off.

But he also said that, in his view, that is not a very important question.

"We had a thousand cases reported in the United States last week," Curran said in an interview during the Fourth International Conference on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. "Does it matter whether it's going up or not? It might level off like lung cancer or heart disease — and that's not good," Curran added.

He said an increasing number of people are contracting AIDS through heterosexual contact in the United States, but that no explosive increases in the heterosexual spread of AIDS are likely.

"The data is too incomplete for firm conclusions," Curran said.

In Europe, 12,221 cases of AIDS have been reported as of March 31, more than double the number reported a year earlier, Jean-Baptiste Brunet of Claude Bernard Hospital in Paris, said today.

AIDS among drug abusers is increasing rapidly in Spain, France and Italy, Brunet said. He added that an estimated 300,000 to 800,000 people in 30 European countries are now believed to be infected with the AIDS virus.

On Sunday, the director of the World Health Organization's AIDS program told the conference's opening session that as many as several hundred million people around the globe may be at risk of getting AIDS, which is now present in virtually every country in the world.

"No country is immune," Dr. Jonathan Mann said.

"We do not — we cannot — have precise numbers, but it is likely that several hundred million people around the world may have behaviors which make them potentially vulnerable to infection with HIV," said Mann, one of 7,000 scientists and doctors attending the largest AIDS conference ever held. He estimated that 150,000 people will develop AIDS in 1988, doubling in one year the estimated number of cases in the history of the epidemic.

In other developments, researchers at the National Cancer Institute reported that a widely used AIDS drug appears to dramatically reverse the devastating effects of the disease on the brains of children.

Dr. Philip Pizzo said children who have lost their speech as the result of AIDS infection in the brain subsequently recovered their ability to talk and other functions of the brain.

Pizzo's study of 21 AIDS-infected children aged 14 months to 21 years showed that their IQ scores rose about 15 points after they took AZT, the only drug that has been shown to help delay the onset and severity of AIDS symptoms.

Mann painted a grim picture of the AIDS epidemic but noted that the world has never seen a mobilization of the kind that has been mounted to fight the deadly disease.

As an example of the ferocity with which AIDS can spread among drug abusers, Mann described the situation in Bangkok, Thailand.

Two years ago, virtually no one in the city had antibodies to the AIDS virus. The presence of AIDS antibodies indicates an individual has been infected with the virus.

In 1987, 1 percent of the population had antibodies to AIDS. In the first three months of this year, the infection had spread to 16 percent of Bangkok's population.

"This epidemic curve — already documented in New York City, Edinburgh and Milan — threatens every community of IV (intravenous) drug users in the world," Mann said.

"AIDS is changing the world," he said. "It has become a key part of the history of our time."

The number of AIDS cases officially reported to the World Health Organization stood at 96,433 as of June 1. The number of actual cases is now estimated to be 200,000, Mann said.

Although AIDS was not identified until 1981, the origins of the epidemic have been traced back to the 1970s, the time of what Mann calls "the silent pandemic."

"A virus spread across the world, and we didn't even know it existed. . . . It is — or should be — shocking to our modern pride that such a global expansion could occur without even being detected," he said.

Participants in the four-day conference were scheduled to make about 3,600 presentations, but no breakthroughs were expected in ways of curing or preventing the deadly virus.

Koop claims good reaction to AIDS flyer

By Bernard Schoenburg
The Associated Press

CHICAGO — A government brochure sent to more than 100 million households explaining in frank language how the AIDS virus can be spread is getting a good response, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said Monday.

The federal government mailing this spring was designed to reach every household in the country as part of a campaign to teach people how to avoid the risks of catching the fatal disease.

"I think that a number of people who planned to be shocked, who planned to criticize . . . have been surprised that it is a good piece of education," Koop said at a news conference before he delivered a commencement address to graduates of the University of Health Sciences-Chicago Medical School in suburban North Chicago.

"People have heeded my request," he said. "They have taken the family together and presented this to them as a problem that they all should understand."

He also said there have been a "tremendous number" of calls to a hotline asking for the brochure in Spanish. Koop said no good way could be found to determine which households in the country would need the Spanish language version when the brochure was mailed.

C. Everett Koop

Koop also cautioned against overreacting to what may seem to be new and frightening findings to be presented at the Fourth International Conference on AIDS which opened Sunday in Stockholm, Sweden.

"Don't be misled that something has just happened in the last week and now we're in real trouble," he said.

Dry spell raises issue of land use

The Associated Press
Scattered thunderstorms increased and intensified rapidly Monday afternoon over the foothills of the central Rockies and into the central high Plains. But a drought continued in northern Illinois and caused problems in Michigan.
Most of the thunderstorms were over Colorado and eastern Wyoming.
Hail, two inches in diameter, occurred early Wednesday afternoon about 20 miles southeast of Denver. Small hail was reported at Laramie, Wyo.
A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect until Monday evening for a large part of southeast Wyoming and eastern Colorado and a small part of the Nebraska panhandle, while showers and thunderstorms over Minnesota and northern Iowa diminished.

Thunderstorms were widely scattered over coastal sections of southeast Florida, Louisiana and Texas.
The drought, which has withered lawns and crops and caused watering bans across northern Illinois, entered its 20th day.
Since May 24, no measurable rain has fallen over Chicago — the longest such period for this time of the year. The only year that comes close to the current dry spell was in 1886, when a tenth of an inch fell from May 24 to June 12.
Compounding the problem is that rainfall across northern Illinois was much below normal throughout April and May as well.

Wind and dry conditions fueled a fire that burned through thousands of acres of a rural Michigan area Monday as more than 100 firefighters fought to contain it. Officials were helping evacuate an undetermined number of people whose houses lie in its path.
Elsewhere in Michigan Monday, hot weather continued breaking or tying high temperature marks. Afternoon readings were in the lower 90s at many locations. Marquette, Mich., broke its record high for the day with an 88-degree reading and Alpena, Mich., tied its record for the date with 92 degrees.
In New England, it was hot, too. The temperature at Logan airport in Boston reached 94 degrees before a sea breeze set in during the early afternoon. The temperature at south Weymouth Naval Air Station in Massachusetts reached 98 degrees at 2 p.m. Most readings across New England were in the upper 80s to lower 90s.

Much of the remainder of the eastern half of the nation had temperatures about 90 degrees but with low relative humidities.
The low humidity helps to keep the air feel reasonably comfortable, but the downside is that it is maintaining the dry weather plaguing portions of the Midwest and the Southeast.
Cloudiness and spotty light rain kept temperatures across Montana on the cool side. Afternoon readings were mostly in the 50s to lower 60s.

West of the Rockies, sunshine and mild temperatures prevailed. Early afternoon readings were mostly in the 60s and 70s but ranged up to the 90s in the desert Southwest.
Temperatures around the nation at 3 p.m. EDT ranged from 51 degrees at Livingston, Mont., to 97 degrees at the Weymouth Naval Air Station; Needles, Calif.; and China Lake Naval Station at Inyokern, Calif.
The low for the nation Monday morning was 28 degrees at South Lake Tahoe, Calif.
The National Weather Service forecast scattered showers and thunderstorms extending from the upper Mississippi Valley across the northern Great Plains and western portions of the southern Plains to eastern Colorado. Thunderstorms were predicted to be most numerous over North Dakota and northern Minnesota. Scattered showers were expected over northern Maine and showers and thunderstorms should continue over central and southern Florida.

High temperatures were forecast for the 80s to mid-90s over much of the nation. Highs will be in the upper 60s and 70s along the Pacific Coast and from the northern and central Rockies across the northern Plains to northern Minnesota. Readings were expected to climb to between 95 and 105 degrees in the desert Southwest and the big bend area of southwest Texas.

Dennis Osterbauer, 32, and his son Tommy, 3, examine a drought-stricken field where the hay crop should be about thigh-high on their Dresser, Wis., farm. Osterbauer said last week his fields that normally average 100 bales of hay per acre gave him only about 25 per acre from the first cutting.

Great Plains, Central U.S. still ravaged by drought

DES MOINES (AP)—An Agriculture Department official, arguing "it's too early to panic," Monday said he'll resist efforts to press the state's most fragile land into production because of drought.
That position could set up a conflict with Iowa political leaders, some of whom have pushed for that step and others who won't rule it out.
Peter Meyers, an undersecretary at the Department of Agriculture, told a Des Moines civic club on Monday that USDA officials oppose using the land, which is generally known as the Conservation Reserve Program. Under that program, farmers are paid to take the most fragile land out of production for 10 years.
Meyers said he was worried about the dangers to wildlife — because the idled land is heavily used as cover — and about potential erosion dangers to the most fragile lands.

His comments do not represent a new position for the USDA, but restate what the agency's policy has been.
"Right now we are not intending to release CRP acres," Meyers said.
Rep. Jim Ross Lightfoot, R-Iowa, last week wrote to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng urging the CRP land be pressed into service, while Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, said this year's drought has been so severe it may be nearing time to consider that step.
"I believe it's too early to panic. Right now we feel we have a chance to make a full crop," Meyers said. "We are listening to people like Congressman Lightfoot. It would be done only with certain caveats."
Lightfoot noted that he isn't seeking a complete opening of the idled acres but instead only wants a limited use of the hay.
"Somehow that distinction isn't being made," he said.

A spokesman for Gov. Terry Branstad noted that the governor has not recommended that step yet but refused to rule it out if the drought worsens.
A group of farm experts Branstad has assembled to monitor the drought were to meet today, said spokesman Richard Vohs.
"They're going to be considering the options facing us," Vohs said. "In the past, we've not had recommendations for Conservation Reserve Program land, but every option will be considered."
Farmers usually plant hay or other cover crops on those lands and are forbidden from using that crop as part of the program.
Under pressure from this year's drought — which in some parts of the state is the worst since the 1930s — farmers are pressing to use that hay for grazing and feed for livestock.

campus clashes.
The protesters demanded that the government release students arrested Friday in major street clashes across the capital.
Those battles broke out when riot police blocked thousands of students trying to march to the North Korean border for talks with northern students on reunifying North and South.
There was more violence Sunday when riot police clashed with thousands of students during a funeral march for a radical who committed suicide in an anti-government protest.
The students burned Olympic flags during the funeral march. Seoul is the host of the 1988 Summer Olympics, which begin Sept. 17. The radicals back North Korea's demand to be a co-host of the Games.

Police said Monday that 600 of the 908 students arrested Friday had been freed and that 229 others were facing minor charges.
Police charged 47 students with assault or with violating national security laws.
"Ensure our life!" street vendors shouted as they marched in Seoul after a rally at Sungkyunkwan University.
News reports said at least five vendors were injured when police moved in to disperse them. The reports said one vendor was seriously hurt by a punch in the face.
The vendors shouted anti-government slogans and accused authorities of cracking down on their street stalls to keep the streets clean as part of beautification and urban renewal projects for the Olympics.

Grades

UI Faculty Senate President Peter Shane said there is no single grading system that will satisfy all parties.
"Whenever you have a system with blunt categories like A,B,C,D,E, the typical complaint is that the gradations are not fine enough to differentiate between students," Shane said. "Then when you do have a system that is finely divided, the typical complaint is that the numbers suggest a fine gradation that doesn't really exist."
Shane said in the UI College of Law, where he is a professor, students are graded on a number scale that typically ranges from 58 to 92. The median, or average score, is 75, but can range from 72 to 78 in graduating classes.
"One problem I have with our system is employers sometimes look at a person with a score of 76 and think that he must be better than a person with a score of 72, which means they may be making a judgment that the numbers do not justify," he said.
In a letter to liberal arts faculty last fall, College of Liberal Arts Associate Dean James Lindberg highlighted specific policies governing the new system, including:
• The use of the plus/minus system is optional. Departments and individual faculty are free to use the old system or the new system, but must apply the same system to all students in a given class.

• The grading system used by an instructor must be the same for all sections of multi-section courses.
• An instructor should announce at the beginning of the semester the grading system to be used.
• Grades of D- will be counted as passing grades toward collegiate requirements. For courses taken pass/nonpass, grades of C- or better will count as passing.
• Recommended grade distributions for larger courses in the College of Liberal Arts will remain the same. For example, the recommended portion of A's awarded is 12 percent for elementary courses, 16 percent for intermediate courses and 20 percent for advanced courses. If recommended grade curves are followed, the average grade point would be 2.40 in elementary courses, 2.55 in intermediate courses and 2.70 in advanced courses.
Lindberg also said none of the Liberal Arts College policies based on G.P.A.s — including the graduation requirement of a 2.0 G.P.A. — will be modified by the plus/minus system.

Local Iowa City team, Bell and Shore, cut LP

By Brian Jones
The Daily Iowan

It's not often that one hears musicians as disparate as Roger Miller, Capt. Beefheart and James Brown mentioned in the same sentence. But Nathan Bell, one-half of the country/folk duo Bell and Shore, sounds entirely comfortable citing those names, along with David Allan Coe, John Prine and Otis Redding, as among his songwriting influences. But Bell, 28, is unwilling to stop even there.

"I also take much from movies, from books and years and years of overload," he says. "I tend to really attack a subject matter." Bell is quick to point out that most of his songs are not autobiographical, in sharp contrast to the work of many songwriters.

Bell and partner Susan Shore's debut album, "Little Movies," was released in March on the respected independent Flying Fish label.

On the album, according to Shore, 33, the duo, "wanted to get a pretty broad sweep of the things we do. It does a pretty good job of representing what we do, from bluegrass to heavy-duty country." Although it's still too early to know how well the album is selling nationally, Bell says that "Little Movies" is receiving airplay "all over the country."

The album was actually recorded over 18 months ago, at Chicago's Lakeside Media studios, which Bell describes as "a little basement studio with absolutely no ambience but lots of atmosphere." Bell produced the album himself, with assistance from Shore and the studio's engineer.

Bell says that he and Shore decided to call the album "Little Movies" because the songs can be viewed as a series of vignettes with a nearly cinematic quality. "I write a lot about people with absolutely no redeeming qualities, but I try desperately not to make any judgments about whether or not they're good people," he explains.

Bell's father is famed poet and UI Professor Marvin Bell, so it's probably only natural to wonder to what extent the senior Bell's writing influenced his son's.

"My father's influence, since he is a writer," says Bell, "is what made me a writer. But my mother, who's the reader in the family, really pushed me into words. Seeing how Dad edited, though, taught me how to edit. I'm a pretty fierce editor." Bell, who writes about 200 songs yearly, says that he sometimes nearly completes a song in his mind, only to realize that the song isn't going where he wants it to. Then, he says, it's a matter of simply starting over.

Shore, who is originally from New Jersey, studied music history at the Adult Degree Option in Cambridge, Mass., after "about three semesters" at Hampshire College. The Adult Degree Option, says Shore, "is one of those non-traditional programs, which allows independent adults to study independently. I crammed 800 years of Western music into six months."

Bell attended Boston University for one year, but "never went to class and paid absolutely no attention. My formal education really ended at (Iowa City's) City High."

Bell and Shore leave soon on a tour which, according to Shore, could last up to a month. Dates are definite in North Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia, says Shore, but other shows on the tour are still being booked. Shows are booked thus far in a combination of both clubs and colleges. The duo performs between 80 and 100 shows yearly.

Both Shore and Bell are philosophical about the meaning of their performances. "Sometimes," says Bell, "I think I do nobody any good. It's kind of a self-involved existence. Our performances are a chronicle of people who exist in this world."

"It's therapy to a certain extent," adds Shore.

"I'm not from the Suzanne Vega school," explains Bell. "I don't want to stand onstage and bitch and moan about my life. I think I was put here to write about other people, people who aren't necessarily like me. You don't have to be a skydiver to write about skydiving."

Hancher, UI Theatres buck trend; sales, attendance up

The Daily Iowan

IOWA CITY — In the face of a recent Harris Poll showing a national erosion of arts attendance, UI arts organizations have just completed a record-breaking year.

University Theatres and Hancher Auditorium, the only campus arts groups with an extensive season of ticketed events, both set all-time sales records in 1987-88. Both organizations' seasons correspond to the UI academic year, which was just completed. Other UI arts units, including the School of Music, Dance Department and Museum of Art, also have reported steady or increased attendance for the past year.

University Theatres bucked the national trend by playing to 95 percent capacity during its seven-production season, the highest attendance percentage on record and an increase of 7 percentage points from the 1986-87 season. Of a total season capacity of 19,145, only 980 tickets were unsold.

Led by the world premiere run of the Joffrey Ballet's "Nutcracker," Hancher set a record for ticket revenue with a season total of $1,168,154.72. Ticket sales surpassed the previous record of $862,778, set at the end of the 1981-82 season, before midseason.

Both organizations appear to be maintaining their momentum. Sales for University Theatres Summer Rep festival of comedies by Joe Orton are ahead of last season's sales pace for an all-Noel Coward summer festival, and Hancher has already reached 80 percent of its subscription sales goal for its 1988-89 season of professional touring events that was announced in April.

Theatre Arts awards annual departmental scholarships

The Daily Iowan

IOWA CITY — The UI Department of Theatre Arts has awarded its departmental scholarships for the 1988-89 academic year. Twelve students have been selected for the scholarships, which total nearly $20,000.

Law named to U.S. Select team

Iowa junior Jollette Law has been named to the 12-player United States Select team which will compete at the R. William Jones Cup games, officials of the Amateur Basketball Association of the USA announced Monday. The Jones Cup competition will be held June 22-28, in Taipei, Taiwan.

Law, a 5-foot-3 point guard from Florence, S.C., started every game for the 1987-88 Iowa team, which won a school record 29 games and was ranked No. 1 in the nation's polls for eight consecutive weeks.

Law, who averaged 8.4 points, three steals and 30 minutes per game for Iowa last year, was the only Hawkeye to try out for the U.S. Select team.

Other Big Ten competitors on the team are forward Nikita Lowry and guard Lisa Cline, both of Ohio State. Joining Law at the guard spot are: Jennifer Azzi, Stanford; Felicia Braddy, Kansas; Edna Campbell, Maryland; Tonya Edwards, Tennessee; and Deanna Tate, Maryland.

In addition to Lowry, Portia Hill of Stephen F. Austin and Dale Hodges of St. Joseph's will play at the forward position. Tennessee's Sheila Frost and Angelique Lee of Long Beach State were chosen as centers.

Colorado Coach Ceal Barry is the head coach of the U.S. team, while Debbie Leonard of Duke will serve as the assistant coach.

Iowa's Shanda Berry and Franthea Price were members of the U.S. team which won the Jones Cup last summer in Taipei. The 1988 team is currently training in Colorado Springs and will depart for Taiwan June 17.

Britt, Iowa, wrestler named all-America

DES MOINES (AP) — Britt heavyweight Pat Kelly was the only Iowan named to the top unit of the 1988 High School All-American wrestling team selected by Asics Tiger Corp.

Kelly, who signed with Iowa, was a two-time Class 1A state champion. He had a career record of 107-6, including a 36-0 mark as a senior.

Tim Anderson of West Des Moines Dowling, a two-time Class 3A champion at 132 pounds, was named to the second team. He will attend Notre Dame.

Iowa State recruit Brad Knouse of Irving, Texas, was a first-team pick and another future Cyclone, Matt Johnson of Brighton, Colo., earned second-team honors. Iowa recruit Troy Steiner of Bismarck, N.D., was chosen for the second team.

Three Iowans received honorable mention — Shane Light of Lisbon, Rick Coltvet of Eagle Grove and John Oostendorp of West Liberty.

Atlanta's Chaney named Rockets' coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Don Chaney, chosen for his ability to communicate with his players, today was named head coach of the Houston Rockets.

Chaney, a former University of Houston player and former head coach of the Los Angeles Clippers, was the early favorite to replace Bill Fitch, fired June 3 after five seasons with the Rockets.

Chaney arrived in Houston Sunday afternoon and the Rockets quickly called a news conference today to announce his selection. Chaney, the eighth coach in the 21-year history of the franchise, signed a multi-year contract.

Chaney came out of Baton Rouge, La., to team with Elvin Hayes and lead the Houston Cougars to the NCAA College Final Four two straight years, the last in 1968.

Chaney played for the Boston Celtics in the NBA and was head coach of the Los Angeles Clippers and had two assistant coach assignments with the Detroit Pistons and this season with the Atlanta Hawks.

The Rockets finished last season with a 15-17 record over their final 32 games and lost three of four games to the Dallas Mavericks in the first round of the playoffs.

Army, Navy will clash in Giants Stadium

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Army and Navy will play their annual football contest at Giants Stadium in 1989, officials announced Monday.

The New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, which operates the stadium, outbid proposals from Dallas, Jacksonville, Fla., Baltimore and Philadelphia.

Philadelphia has hosted 42 of the last 43 games. The 1983 game was played at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

The 1989 game will be played Dec. 9, and the schools' athletic directors, Carl Ulirsch of Army and J.O. "Bo" Coppedge of Navy, say the decision to play at Giants Stadium next year doesn't mean Philadelphia isn't still considered the home for the game.

Giants Stadium will be the 12th site for the game, which was first played in 1890. Navy holds a one-game edge in victories, with a record of 41-40-7.

NHL honors Park, Esposito, 2 others

MONTREAL (AP) — Brad Park, one of the top scoring defensemen in NHL history, and Tony Esposito, one of the top three goaltenders in career victories, were among four players selected to the Hockey Hall of Fame Monday.

Guy Lafleur, a high-scoring right wing with the Montreal Canadiens, and Buddy O'Connor, a center who played for Montreal and the New York Rangers in the 1940s, were the other players named by the Hockey Hall of Fame Selection Committee.

O'Connor was a posthumous selection in the newly-instituted Veterans Category.

The four will be inducted into the Hall Sept. 7 in Toronto.

Attorney: Jury biased in Royals case

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Kansas City jury that rejected California businessman Michael Shapiro's breach-of-contract suit against Royals co-owner Ewing Kauffman last year was biased, an attorney said Monday.

Shapiro contended Kauffman changed terms of a sale agreement at the last minute, making it impossible for Shapiro to gain the financial backing he needed to buy the American League club. The suit, which was tried in U.S. District Court at Kansas City, is being appealed here before the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Steven Kramer, who argued Shapiro's case, contended that U.S. District Judge Scott O. Wright refused to consider a public opinion poll presented by the plaintiffs that indicated a fair trial would be impossible in Kansas City, where Kauffman was "the next-best thing to sliced bread."

Kramer also contended that a Kauffman lawyer was unfair to ask Shapiro's financial backer, Jack Singer, on the witness stand, "Isn't it true that you were going to move the Royals?" He said the question was not relevant to the contract and was designed to arouse jury members' feelings of loyalty to the city.

Shapiro's suit against the Royals, Kauffman's Marion Laboratories Inc. and Avron Fogelman, a Memphis, Tenn., businessman who bought 49 percent of the ballclub months after Shapiro's deal fell through, sought $50 million in damages and a re-opening of the negotiations to buy the team.

Iowa Cubs pound Syracuse, 8-3

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa relied on home runs from Dwight Smith, Phil Stephenson and Brian Guinn to defeat Syracuse 8-3 Monday night in Triple A Alliance baseball.

The Chiefs opened the scoring in the third inning with Alex Infante hitting a double to score Ken Rivers. Iowa answered in the bottom of the inning with a two-run homer by Smith.

Iowa scored four more times in the fourth including RBI singles by Dave Meiers and Rick Wrona. Stephenson stretched the Cub lead with a solo shot in the sixth.

Kelly Heath hit a two-run home run for Syracuse in the eighth inning. Iowa's Guinn hit a solo homer in the bottom of the eighth to cap the scoring.

Buoniconti says Citadel negligent with his injury

By Bruce Smith Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Marc Buoniconti was paralyzed in a 1985 football accident because the team doctor and trainer at The Citadel were negligent in treating his neck condition, Buoniconti's lawyer charged Monday.

But, as Buoniconti's suit against the military college went to court two years after it was filed, school lawyers said the accident was Buoniconti's fault.

"When you play football, you assume the risk of some danger. But you do not assume the risk the doctor treating you is going to be negligent," Buoniconti's lawyer, Robert Wallace, told the six-man, six-woman jury.

School lawyers countered that Buoniconti was paralyzed because he tackled an East Tennessee State player with his head down, in violation of the rules.

"It wasn't because Marc Buoniconti had a sore neck... it was because he made a mistake," said Dawes Cook, an attorney for the school. "He violated the rules of football but he also violated the rules of nature" by making such a tackle, he said.

Buoniconti, the son of former Notre Dame and Miami Dolphins star Nick Buoniconti, was the starting inside linebacker for the Bulldogs when he suffered a crushed spinal cord during a game on Oct. 25, 1985.

Buoniconti, sitting in a wheelchair wearing a blue blazer and white slacks, was joined in the courtroom by his parents during the first day of what is expected to be a three-week trial before Judge John Hamilton Smith in Charleston County Court.

Wallace asked the jury to award a verdict that will fully compensate Marc Buoniconti for all his expenses up to now and in the future.

Jurors reviewed a videotape of the accident several times and Buoniconti's former high school coach — Dennis Larell of Columbus High in Miami — testified he thought Buoniconti made "a good tackle."

"I didn't think it was a vicious hit at all. I thought it was a normal one," he said. Lavell said that Buoniconti, as a linebacker, was "as good as we've ever had" and knew the fundamentals of tackling. He said Buoniconti was never penalized for spearing while in high school and said he did not know of him having any neck problems at the time.

The suit alleges that Citadel officials failed to warn Buoniconti that an existing spinal condition made it dangerous for him to play football.

It charges that when Buoniconti enrolled at the college, an X-ray showed a congenital narrowing of the spine that made it dangerous for him to play.

Buoniconti suffered neck injuries the two games before the East Tennessee State game and wasn't allowed to have any contact in practice the previous week, Wallace said. Despite that, he said, Buoniconti played the game after being fitted with a special collar and strap to prevent injury to his head and neck.

Although a number of college officials originally named as defendants, several have been dismissed since the action was filed.

The action now names as defendants The Citadel, team trainer Andrew Clawson and team doctor E.K. Wallace Jr. The two Wallaces are not related.

During his opening statement, Wallace's lawyer, Bobby Hood, said Buoniconti had X-rays both in high school and at The Citadel which showed a flattened vertebra in his neck.

Probably not.

Hockaday isn't sure of his status on next season's Iowa team, but he said he hopes the win will help his chances.

"This season I walked on but didn't really get a chance to play," he said. "Maybe the coach will give me a try next year."

A list Letterman would love?

See, it has been a while since I've watched an original "Late Night with David Letterman." It has been all reruns since that writers' strike which has left Letterman fans in a quandary. Some have even turned elsewhere to get a fix of perhaps the most important part of that particular talk show — the top 10 list.

Oh, but look no further those of you who live on Dave's top 10 hysteria.

1. In an order only Letterman would love, here are the top 10 things the Iowa Athletic Department should take a look at during the 1988-89 school year.

10. Think about giving Iowa gymnastics Coach Tom Dunn a raise next year. He's been the most consistent coach, sending his team to the NCAA meet and finishing in the top six for years running. Quietly and effectively he has built a national power that would even have Hayden Fry smiling.

9. Think twice about Iowa women's gymnastics Coach Diane DeMarco. The top members of her team are from out of state, prompting one to ask if there's simply no talent in Iowa. And a quick gander at the individual school records, which are mostly in the range of 9.45 to 9.55, shows that this program is far from being on a national level much less a regional contender.

8. Keep an eye on Iowa baseball Coach Duane Banks' team next season. The Hawkeyes should be one of the best in the Big Ten with a pitching staff that looks solid and a field full of now-experienced players.

7. Make sure nothing ever happens to Iowa men's basketball Coach Tom Davis and women's basketball Coach Vivian Stringer. Stringer built a strong program and Davis has maintained one; and both have turned down offers from other schools. Bravo. Hopefully the Hawkeyes won't lose a coach to big bucks or glorified tradition.

6. Give the recruiting award of the year to Iowa men's tennis Coach Steve Houghton, who brought in Claes Ramel from Sweden. Ramel won all-Big Ten honors on the court and academic all-Big Ten honors in the classroom.

5. Push harder for more academic all-Americans. Some coaches and administrators differ on whether the classroom or sports come first. Make sure the classroom is just as important, especially to those who believe they can make hundreds of thousands of dollars in professional leagues.

4. What's the deal with the Iowa men's golf team. Despite one of the school's best seasons in recent memory, Coach Chuck Zweiner, who also runs Finkbine Golf Course, hasn't taken a team to the NCAA meet in more than 30 years.

3. Give yourself a pat on the back for waiting for Beth Begin to finish her career as the captain of the U.S. Olympic Field Hockey team. She'll likely miss two-thirds of her first season as coach at Iowa, but like Iowa Women's Athletic Director Christine Grant noted, "We went after the best."

2. Console Iowa men's track Coach Ted Wheeler about all of the injuries his teams seem to fall into. They happen. Unfortunately, they happen so much that it's fairly rare that he can put forth a team with depth, much less a fully competitive team.

1. Continue to laud and encourage the talents of those who excel in the classroom. Former Iowa women's basketball player Jolynn Schneider's winning of the Post-Graduate Scholarship is a shining example. No. 1 may be a repeat of No. 5, but academics are important enough to merit its own list.

Striving for excellence in all sports as well as in the classroom is not too much to ask. Still, it has never been truly done before by any other

Larry Brown

Brown jumps to San Antonio

By Doug Tucker
 Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Larry Brown, less than three months after coaching Kansas to the NCAA basketball championship, said today he is leaving for a "once-in-a-lifetime opportunity" to coach the NBA's San Antonio Spurs.

Kansas fans, already put through an emotional ringer by Brown's accepting and then declining an offer to coach UCLA, enjoyed five 20-victory seasons under Brown, two appearances in the Final Four and their first national title since the early 1950s.

San Antonio media reports have said the Spurs' offer to Brown included a salary of $3.5 million over five years. His total package at Kansas, including radio and television shows, summer camp and shoe contract, was thought to total about $500,000 a year.

"Kansas has been a very special place to me," Brown, 47, said in a brief statement released through the school's Sports Information Office. "And it was a very difficult decision to leave. I can't believe that any college coach in the country has a better situation than I did at KU. And I'm grateful, too, to (Athletic Director) Bob Frederick and the chancellor for that.

"The offer at San Antonio was simply a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity which I couldn't turn down," Brown said in the statement.

In April, the week after beating Oklahoma in the NCAA title game, Brown accepted the head coaching job at UCLA but changed his mind that same day in a bizarre succession of events.

"After I made the decision not to go to UCLA and stay at Kansas, I had no intention of leaving any other job," Brown said in his statement. "But the San Antonio situation presented itself and I didn't think it would be fair to my family not to consider it. I love this place, Kansas, the people and everything they did for me. It will always be special."

Frederick scheduled a news conference this afternoon but a Kansas spokesperson said Brown would not be available.

Brown was 446-265 in nine pro seasons with Carolina, Denver and New Jersey.

Hawkeye walk-on drives for victory

By Brent D. Woods
 The Daily Iowan

The old golf saying, "Drive for show, putt for dough" couldn't have been more wrong Monday at Finkbine Golf Course.

At local qualifying in the Michelin Long Driving Contest, they were driving for the show and the dough.

Iowa senior Kurt Hockaday, a walk-on member of the Iowa golf team this past season who was competing in his first long driving contest, launched the winning poke at a distance of 335 yards, 6½ inches.

The win qualifies Hockaday for sectional competition at the State Amateur tourney in Dubuque in July. The victory was an ironic one for Hockaday, who was eliminated in the semifinals of state match play Sunday at Finkbine by eventual winner Scott Chipokas.

In that match, his tee shots let him down.

"Yeah, it does (make up for the loss)," Hockaday said. "That's (driving) what lost it for me yesterday. I was way right, then duck hooking it. But today there was no pressure and it was a lot easier to swing."

Hockaday had another factor apparently in his favor — a new club.

"I have a different driver today," he said. "I didn't hit it until this morning."

Hockaday, the competition's first hitter, saw his first three balls go wide of the 40-yard fairway markers.

The second contestant, Duane Beale of Moline, Ill., then purchased 18 balls (three for $5) and took the lead with a 334-4 blast. Hockaday bought six more balls and stroked the winner on his first shot.

Beale, who finished second in the event last year, eventually settled for the same finish this year after hitting $60 worth of balls.

"I really enjoy it," Beale said of the competition. "It's (driving) always been the best part of my game, so I might as well try and do something with it."

Beale, whose longest drive in competition is 357 yards, said the other parts of his golf game are not quite that stunning.

"Some days it's pretty good; some days it's terrible," he said.

Jim Staub of Cedar Rapids took third (315-10½), Allan Fitzgerald of Cedar Rapids was fourth (312-8) and Steve Krotz of Cedar Rapids was fifth (280-7).

NHL board turns down Devils' appeal

By Ken Rappoport
 Associated Press

MONTREAL — The NHL Board of Governors Monday turned down an appeal by the New Jersey Devils of their playoff fines and said that any team going to court against the league in the future could be fined up to $1 million.

The Devils were fined $10,000 and Coach Jim Schoenfeld was suspended for one game and fined $1,000 after Schoenfeld's confrontation with referee Don Koharski during a playoff game May 6.

The Devils obtained a temporary restraining order allowing Schoenfeld to coach Game 4 of the Wales Conference final against Boston on May 8. Referee Dave Newell and his crew, citing safety factors, then walked off and were replaced by amateurs.

At a hearing before Game 5, Schoenfeld's suspension was upheld and the regular officials returned that night. The restraining order was vacated by a New Jersey court.

"We took steps to deter clubs from going into court," Ziegler told a news conference following the Board of Governors meeting that took most of the day.

"If any club gets a restraining order lifting a suspension and can't make it a permanent one, the club will be fined $1 million. A court might still uphold the club's order. The only question is whether the team wants to take that chance."

Ziegler said the new bylaw to the league's constitution was instituted to "prevent any team from taking away from the entertainment value" of the NHL.

"We tried to put a deterrent against anyone doing that. We found by this incident that anyone could get a restraining order and interfere with the competition. We had a bad moment in New Jersey. Everybody is concerned about that and concerned about the image of the league," Ziegler said.

Ziegler said the governors discussed censuring the Devils but decided against it. He also said the walkout had caused him to lose respect for the officials union.

On other topics, Ziegler said it "was not impossible" that a proposal to reduce rosters by one player would be passed. Teams want to cut their rosters from 20 players to 19 but the proposal was deferred by the governors until after they meet with the Players Association to discuss the issue.

The governors also changed some playing rules, voting to allow a substitute goaltender to take a two-minute warmup and increasing the penalty for a player with a facial guard who instigates a fight.

Grayer improves shot at Olympics

By David Ginsburg
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Iowa State standout Jeff Grayer has assured himself a spot in next month's tryout camp for the 1988 U.S. Olympic basketball team, Olympic Coach John Thompson said Monday.

By virtue of his performance at the current camp on the campus of Georgetown University, Grayer will not accompany the U.S. Select team that leaves for a six-game European tour on Tuesday. Most of the players on the select team will vie for the right to join 17 players, already assured a place at the closed practices that begin July 17.

Grayer arrived in the nation's capital Thursday and needed only a few days to make a favorable impression on Thompson.

"We've seen enough of what we wanted to see (of Grayer) at the practice sessions," Thompson said. "We want to give some other players the opportunity to get more playing time, so we're permitting him to return home. He will be back on July 17."

Grayer, a 6-foot-5 forward, is the leading scorer in Iowa State history. He finished his career in March having scored 2,502 points, the fourth-highest total in Big Eight history.

A native of Flint, Mich., Grayer led the Cyclones in scoring and rebounds last season, averaging 25.3 points and 9.4 rebounds a contest. He capped his four-year career by being voted second-team all-America by the Associated Press and first-team all-Big Eight for the third straight season.

Thompson has said he will take 12 players with him to Seoul, Korea, for the 1988 Summer Games.

Former Navy center David Robinson will soon receive millions of dollars to play basketball. But for now he's focusing his efforts on playing for free as a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic team.

Robinson, who spent most of the past year fulfilling his commitment to the Naval Academy, came to the campus of Georgetown University last week to spend six days practicing with several other Olympic hopefuls. He and 10 other players will embark Tuesday on a six-game tour of Europe, a trip that as much as anything else will serve to whip Robinson back into prime playing shape.

Soon after Robinson finished his basketball career at Navy last spring, the San Antonio Spurs made him the first player selected in the NBA draft. The club subsequently signed him to a lucrative contract, but because of his military obligations the 6-foot-11 all-American will not be able to cash in on the pact until the 1989-90 season.

Drought worries farmer

By Heidi Mathews
 The Daily Iowan

The current dry spell caused drought conditions in much of the Midwest, Johnson County unscathed, according to farmers and Johnson County officials.

The average rainfall in Johnson County in mid-June is 4.5 inches. This year, it has dropped more than 5 to 6 inches.

According to Steve Johnson, Johnson County Farm Bureau president, the drought is in the causing damage which is unusual because it is so late in the planting season.

"If the drought occurred earlier in the year there would have been alternatives opened up for farmers as far as the crops," said Johnson. "Crops are tilled up now and will remain for the most part until next season."

Already, some farmers have resorted to tilling up crops. Several of the farmers have contacted the Farm Bureau and complained about crops that didn't get corn crops that are a bright white.

But the crops that are most at risk are the harvest crops and wheat. Over 60 Johnson County farmers have the Farm Bureau emergency grazing on "And we haven't even for a week!" said Johnson.

Applications for grazing and hay land are only forms of aid available to farmers at the present time. But Dale Shires of Johnson County Extension said that if the corn and soybeans are hurt severely, loans may be available.

"But even these loans are approved unless the drought continues throughout the season," Shires said.

The only other type of aid may be available in the form of post-disaster aid in the form of the emergency deferred-acre program. These programs would enable farmers to purchase grain prices and to use all land for crop purposes.

But it is not just the drought damage that local farmers such as Iowa farmer Harry Seelman are concerned about. "Farming is a long reaching operation," said Seelman. "The damage brought about by the drought will be both immediate and delayed. We will expect aftermath for as much as three years down the road." Seelman compares

Physicists energy

By Paula Roesler
 The Daily Iowan

In an attempt to decrease the number of physicists, UI Physics workers will set thermostat in academic buildings at 65 degrees Fahrenheit beginning July 1. Students and staff will be kept energy going to a minimum.

"We're going to need the support of all the people at the university," UI Physical Plant Director James Howard said. "Measures to reduce utility and janitorial costs are sought by UI Physical Plant Director James Christensen, UI Vice President for University Services Susan Johnson in March after the physics department failed to receive an increase in funding for fiscal year 1989. "We've had an energy conservation program (at the UI) for years, and I hope we can
