Drought wears on in Iowa

Weather worries farmers

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

The current dry spell which has caused drought conditions in much of the Midwest has not left Johnson County farmers unscathed, according to local farmers and Johnson County farm officials.

The average rainfall for Johnson County in mid-June is 11 to 13 inches. This year, the average has dropped more than 50 percent to 5 to 6 inches.

According to Steve Carson of the Johnson County Farm Bureau, the drought is in the process of causing damage which is worse than usual because it is occurring so late in the planting season.

"If the drought would have occurred earlier in the spring, there would have been more alternatives opened up to the farmers as far as the replanting of crops," said Carson. "If the crops are tilled up now, they will remain for the most part useless until next season."

Already, some farmers have resorted to tilling up their failing crops. Several of these farmers have contacted the Farm Bureau and complained about soybean crops that didn't germinate and corn crops that are already turning white.

But the crops that are suffering most are the harvest crops of hay and wheat. Over 600 Johnson County farmers have applied to the Farm Bureau for use of emergency grazing or hay lands.

"And we haven't even been open for a week!" said Carson.

Applications for emergency grazing and hay lands are the only forms of aid available to farmers at the present.

But Dale Shires of the Johnson County Extension Office said that if the corn and soybean crops are hurt severely, low-interest loans may be available for next year.

"But even these loans will not be approved unless the drought continues throughout the summer," Shires said.

The only other type of aid that may be available in the future is post-disaster aid in the form of the emergency feed and deferred-acre programs. These programs would enable farmers to purchase grain at reduced prices and to use allotments of land for crop purposes.

But it is not just the immediate drought damage that is worrying local farmers such as Tiffin, Iowa, farmer Harry Seelman.

"Farming is a long-range, far-reaching operation," Seelman said. "The damage that is brought about by this drought will be both immediate and delayed. We will experience the aftermath for as much as two to three years down the road."

Seelman compares this year's drought to the drought of 1934.

"We've had an energy conservation program (at the UI) for several years, and I hope we make some field receives rain in the next week in order to avoid damage. However, weather forecasts predict more dry temperatures.

Dry spell panics conservationists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farms across the nation's midsection must have rain soon or a fierce drought that is scorching fields could become a national disaster, Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng told lawmakers Tuesday.

"I guess the best thing for us to do is pray for rain," Lyng told the Senate Agriculture Committee. But he said USDA already was providing drought aid, and he agreed with lawmakers that congressional action may be necessary.

But he told the panel, which is considering legislation to bolster drought-plagued farmers, that it is too soon to assess the full impact of the drought.

"It is still a little bit soon to say we have a general disaster nationwide, but the potential is there," Lyng said. "It is still only mid-June and July weather is more important."

USDA authorities say crops over much of the Corn Belt and the South are surviving on moisture stored in soils and that a good dousing once a week would be enough to restore the crops. But some wheat fields in the North Central states have been hit to hard to expect much of a crop.

USDA last week revised downward its forecast for the winter wheat harvest to 1.57 billion bushels. That was 3 percent or 50 million bushels below the department's forecast a month earlier.

The department said that while the new figure still was slightly ahead of last year's winter wheat harvest, inadequate moisture and disease had hurt the crop in the central and northern Great Plains in May.

The drought already is driving up crop prices as wheat fields turn brown. That in turn threatens to shrink income-support payments the government makes to farmers.

Some farmers are thus faced with the prospect of having no crop they can take to market at the same time that their federal payments are drying up.

"The emergency is upon us," declared Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., "The disaster is here."

"If the skies open up, it looks like we have lost 40 percent to 50 percent of the crop," said Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D.

One concept under discussion among lawmakers would guarantee minimum income-support payments to farmers. These amounts, formally called deficiency payments, represent the difference between market prices and target prices that are set by Congress and adjusted annually by the secretary of agriculture. As market prices move up, the difference becomes smaller and smaller and thus the farmers receive less from the government.

The system is supposed to work that way, except that when drought destroys crops the farmers do not receive the benefit of the higher market prices.

The shrinking deficiency payments mean cost estimates for farm programs "are moving downward in the hundreds of millions of dollars," said Ewen M. Wilson, assistant secretary of agriculture for economics.

Lawmakers are talking about recycling the savings and using them to bolster farm incomes in drought areas.

Lyng said he still was not ready to change USDA rules to allow hay cutting and livestock grazing on Conservation Reserve Program lands. But he appeared to open the door to a crack to reversing course if the drought worsens.

Livestock producers in the Dakotas and in Minnesota say they are desperate to obtain feed because the hay on their lands has been shriveled by drought. Hay and other potential feed on Conservation Reserve Program acreage was planted earlier and remains in better condition.

Lyng had rejected the idea a day earlier when a Minnesota contingent headed by Gov. Rudy Perpich visited the Agriculture Department to make such an appeal.

The Conservation Reserve Program, established in 1985, aims to take 45 million acres out of agricultural production for a decade and keep it protected with grasses and trees.

Farmers receive government rent for placing their acreage in the program. USDA said actual and estimated rents are $677 million for fiscal 1987, $1.864 billion this year and $2.16 billion next year.

Cutting hay or allowing livestock to graze on these lands is barred under the program, but the secretary can drop that prohibition in an emergency.

RVAP swamped with case increase

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

Although the nation has become more aware of sexual assault in the past few years, only during the last year have many women given themselves permission to get help, according to Iowa City Rape Victim Advocacy Program Director Karla Miller.

As a result, UI Rape Victim Advocacy Program workers are swamped.

In a nine-month period this year, RVAP has had more than twice as many crisis calls and visits as during the same period last year. The increase, combined with an already overworked staff, has forced Miller to get help from the National Coalition Against Sexual Assault.

A $2,200 grant will allow RVAP to bring in two people from the coalition who will provide training for sexual assault victims and program workers. RVAP will also purchase training materials with the money.

But Miller said RVAP, currently employing the equivalent of 1 1/4 full-time staff workers, still needs volunteers.

"I do not want to lose (the staff) to burnout," Miller said in an informational letter. "For this to happen would be a great disservice to both the victims and the communities we serve. I think a lot of times people don't consider this a very good time of year to volunteer, but with vacations and students going away, our volunteer pool drops in the summer."

Miller attributes the increased number of reports of rape and assault to a combination of factors, including local and national media attention and RVAP's heightening visibility in the community.

"In this past year some very good books and movies have come out about the topic," Miller said. "As a result of a 'Cagney and Lacey' episode we had lots of calls. We always know when Oprah Winfrey is doing a show on abuse — we get more calls then, too."

Miller also said she thinks the quality of the RVAP staff has encouraged women to seek help from the center.

"The staff is incredibly sensitive and good at what they do, and that's a factor that has gone into the increased reports," she said.

Although law enforcement officials say victims are less likely to report sexual assault cases to the police than to an agency like RVAP, they have also reported an increase in the number of reports of sexual abuse — specifically the sexual abuse of children — in the past few years.

"Often victims are reticent to call us because of the length of the investigation, because they don't want to think about it or because they don't want publicity," Detective Dave Henderson from the Johnson County Sheriff's Department said.

But Henderson said there has been a large increase in the number of calls about child molestation, and he connects the increase with the attention schools have been giving to abuse.

"Schools are beginning to give information about abuse, so kids are not getting the message that this is something that is taboo to talk about," he said.

Detective Tom Widmer from the Iowa City Police Department also noted an increase in child sexual abuse reports, along with an increase of general sexual assault reports within the last two weeks.

Physical plant to begin new energy-saving measures at UI

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

In an attempt to decrease operational costs, UI Physical Plant workers will set thermostats in UI academic buildings at 78 degrees Fahrenheit beginning July 1, and students and staff will be asked to keep energy use to a minimum.

"We're going to need the cooperation of all the people at the university," UI Physical Plant Associate Director James Howard said Tuesday.

Measures to reduce utility, maintenance and janitorial costs were sought by UI Physical Plant Director James Christenson and UI Vice President for Finance and University Services Susan Phillips in March after the physical plant failed to receive an increase in funding for fiscal year 1989.

"We've had an energy conservation program (at the UI) for several years, and I hope we make some strides with the new effort," Phillips said, adding that an announcement of the new energy conservation measures will appear in this month's issue of FYI.

UI Physical Plant officials estimate operational costs for fiscal year 1989 to increase by $3.3 million. Except for money for salary increases, funding will remain at last year's level, said Christenson in the plant's newsletter, Pipeline.

According to Howard, the UI Physical Plant's budget for 1988 is $23,780,298.

The addition of two more buildings to the physical plant's utility and maintenance list accounts for most of the projected increase in costs, Howard said. South Quadrangle Residence Hall — where ROTC practice was moved after the UI Armory's destruction — and the new UI Human Biology Research Facility will both be serviced by the physical plant this year.

But energy conservation measures, including restricting the number of hours air conditioning units can be in operation to 50 hours a week in most academic buildings and setting thermostats at 68 degrees F in the winter, are expected to reduce energy costs by $1.3 million annually, according to the newsletter.

Deferring maintenance and transferring some buildings to non-physical plant accounts will also help reduce costs, Howard said.

"The Carver-Hawkeye Arena's maintenance and operation costs will not be taken out of the athletic fund (from ticket receipts)," Howard said, adding that arena maintenance amounts to nearly $400,000 annually.

Howard said the UI will also defer payment of the bond used to obtain a new boiler at the UI Power Plant until fiscal year 1989.

Ordinance goes into effect

A new weed control ordinance requiring property owners or residents to mow grass and weeds becomes effective in Iowa City today.

Each owner or resident is now required to maintain the property, along with adjacent parking, alleys and public ways (including the area to the center line of such ways), so that grass and weeds are less than 18 inches high. Pedestrian and vehicular traffic must not be obstructed in these areas.

Owners or residents of property which adjoins a waterway or water course must keep the flat or level part of the bank free of weeds and grass higher than 18 inches. If the waterway is within a street or alley right-of-way, the adjacent property owner or resident must also keep the flat or accessible portion of the bank free of weeds and grass more than 18 inches in height.

Natural or conservation areas are not required to be mowed, but all noxious weeds must be removed or controlled. Sidewalks or other public ways which lie adjacent to or extend through a natural or conservation area must be open to pedestrian or vehicular traffic.

A county weed official will inspect areas of complaint and notify the owner or resident of any ordinance violations by certified mail.

If the violation is not eliminated within 10 days after the violation notice is mailed, the city will hire someone or city crews will complete the job. The fee for the job will be assessed against property taxes of the owner in question.

Questions or complaints should be directed to the Iowa City Department of Parks and Recreation at 356-5110, beginning June 15.

Public library holds service

A memorial service honoring Hazel Westgate, former children's librarian at the Iowa City Public Library, will be held for the public on June 19 at 2 p.m. at the public library, Meeting Room A.

Westgate served as children's librarian for 39 years until her death last month. The program will include highlights of Westgate's career and reminiscences from individuals. Those attending may also speak.

The library is collecting written remembrances to permanently display in the children's room there. Anyone interested in writing a remembrance should pick up a special form at the library.

Council sponsors trip

The Johnson County Extension Council will sponsor a trip to the twilight session of the Southeast Iowa Research Center Field Day, June 30.

Participants will view a variety of research projects established by Iowa State University, including variety trials for soybeans and oats, herbicide and insecticide evaluations, disease studies, home garden and orchard demonstrations, native grass establishment, nitrogen management study, weed identification nursery and winter rape, winter wheat and alternative crops.

Council-sponsored cars will leave the 4-H Fairgrounds at 5:15 p.m. and return at 9:45 p.m. Those interested can make reservations by calling the extension office at 337-2145.

Groups sponsor breakfast

The New Pioneer Co-Op and the Iowa Center for AIDS/ARC Resources and Education will sponsor an Open-Air Pancake Brunch at Black Hawk Mini Park in Iowa City on June 26. Brunch includes four varieties of pancakes, sausage and beverages.

Breakfast will be served from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Cost of the brunch is $5 for adults and $3 for children under age 12. Tickets may be purchased at the door or in advance at Prairie Lights, Things & Things & Things, Getman Optical, Active Endeavors, Farmer's Market and That's Rentertainment. All brunch tickets are tax-deductible and proceeds will go to ICARE.

Board may let citizens apply to county for well permits

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors may soon take action that would allow private citizens to apply to the county instead of the state for water well permits.

Under a groundwater bill enacted in 1987 by the Iowa Legislature, the Iowa Department of Natural Resources will become eligible July 1 to delegate the authority to issue well permits to counties.

Johnson County Health Director Graham Dameron asked the supervisors at Tuesday's informal meeting to consider exercising the county's new right to apply to the IDNR for the authority to issue well permits.

Dameron emphasized that the "turnaround time" for processing the well applications and delegating the permits would be considerably less at the county level than at the state.

"It would take the state a minimum of one week to process the application and send out the permit, just because of the mailing time to Des Moines," Dameron said. "People could come directly to our Iowa City office if the county were responsible, and we could usually process the application and delegate the permit the same day."

Dameron pointed out that the Johnson County Health Department already has a water well permit application program in use which allows for limited delegation of permits.

Currently, permits for wells are required if the well is providing water for human consumption or is under major reconstruction. The new bill will extend the requirement for permits to all new wells for private, domestic, monitoring, livestock, irrigation, heat-pump, recreational or industrial use.

The bill also will allow Johnson County to apply to the IDNR for $11,000 in funds to aid in testing well water and assisting citizens with proper abandonment of contaminated, dry or useless wells.

Dameron suggested the board apply for these funds immediately, although he added that he felt the amount of money available was insufficient to cover the cost of testing and closing wells.

After allotting 25 percent of the $4,000 available for well abandonment to administrative costs, the county would be left with only $3,000 to close wells, Dameron said. At $200 per well, he pointed out, only 15 wells could be properly abandoned with the funds.

Help might come in the form of leftover funds that would become available for use if other Iowa counties fail to apply for their earmarked aid, Dameron said.

The board will vote on both proposals at Thursday's meeting.

In other business, a salary increase of 0.8 percent in the annual cost-of-living-adjustment for 13 county employees was tentatively agreed upon by the board, and if approved Thursday, will go into effect July 1.

The increase, originally set at 2.5 percent, was raised to 3.3 percent and will affect a total of 13 "supervisory personnel" who have either been appointed by the board or who aren't covered by union contract.

Babysitter arrested for kidnapping

MUSCATINE, Iowa (AP)—The boyfriend of a Muscatine woman was charged Tuesday with first-degree kidnapping in the disappearance of the woman's 7-month-old daughter, whose decapitated body was found four days later.

The charge was filed Tuesday when Leslie Ray Brockert, 28, of Muscatine appeared in court.

Brockert was ordered held on $287,000 bond. For his safety, authorities moved him from the county jail to the Muscatine city jail.

Brockert was the live-in boyfriend of the mother of Amber Marie Hayes.

"The individual was charged with kidnapping in the first degree," said Roger Timko of the state Division of Criminal Investigation. "Other than that, all I can say is we are continuing our investigation."

"Kidnapping is the most appropriate charge at this point," Muscatine Police Sgt. John LeMar said.

LeMar would not rule out the possibility of further charges against Brockert and said Brockert is considered a suspect in the child's death.

Convictions on either first-degree murder or kidnapping carry mandatory life prison terms with no chance for parole under Iowa law. The county attorney's office would not say when Brockert would enter a plea to the kidnapping charge.

Authorities said Brockert was baby-sitting the child Wednesday night and the tot was missing when her mother, Mary Hayes, returned home early Thursday. She told police Brockert left the house when she walked in the door.

The partial remains of the baby were discovered by two youths Sunday afternoon about 12 miles south of Muscatine in a remote area of Louisa County.

Courts

A warrant for the arrest of a Coralville man was issued Tuesday after he was charged with second-degree criminal mischief for assault and causing damages to a Porsche, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Pat John Crone, 24, 2038 Ninth St., allegedly went to the victim's apartment about 1 a.m. Tuesday and began a verbal argument with her after he found the phone number of another male there. Crone allegedly struck the victim several times in the face, causing the victim to suffer a fat lip, black eye and possibly a broken nose.

Crone was arrested for the assault charge and released on his own recognizance, according to court records.

A subsequent examination of the victim's Porsche revealed recent damage to the hood and five shoeprints on it. The prints matched those of Crone's shoes. Damage to the car occurred by walking or jumping on the hood, according to court records.

Damage to the hood is estimated at over $1,000. When arrested, Crone will be admitted to Johnson County Jail on $25,000 bond, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the assault case is set for June 28.

Beer was reported stolen by two men from the L & M Mighty Shop, 504 E. Burlington St., early Tuesday morning, the second night in a row such a theft has occurred from the store, according to police reports.

A similar theft occurred early Monday morning, according to Monday's police reports.

An employee told police that two males took the beer and ran out of the shop and up the stairs leading to a parking lot east of the building. One suspect was described as blond, about 5-foot-9 with a large, muscular build and wearing a white T-shirt. The other was described as about 5-8 with black, curly hair and wearing a long-sleeved shirt, according to the report.

The descriptions of the subjects in Tuesday's theft were not the same as the ones reported in Monday's theft, according to the report.

Theft: A juvenile was arrested and charged with second-degree theft Tuesday for allegedly having a stolen bicycle in his possession at the Dubuque Street Parking Ramp, according to police reports.

The juvenile was arrested after police had received a report that someone was lighting something on the top level of the parking ramp.

Theft: An Iowa City man reported early Tuesday that a window had been broken in his car and that an Alpine AM/FM cassette stereo valued at $350 was stolen, according to police reports.

The man reported that the incident occurred while the car was parked in the lot outside his apartment and that he saw someone fleeing along a nearby pond. No description of the suspect was given, according to the report.

Theft: An Iowa City man reported Tuesday that two hubcaps, valued at $333.63, had been stolen from his 1980 Oldsmobile Cutlass Brougham sometime the previous night, according to police reports.

No arrests were made, according to the report.

Report: The Iowa City Fire Department extinguished the remnants of a trash fire behind a house on North Dodge Street at about 12:45 a.m. Tuesday, according to police reports.

An Iowa City police officer, responding to a report of smoke in the area made by a resident on North Dodge, requested the assistance of fire officials, according to the report.

Theft: An Iowa City man reported to police Tuesday morning that the right rearview mirror had been stolen from his motorcycle sometime after 10 p.m. Monday.

The estimated cost of replacement is $25, according to police reports.

Upward Bound readies students

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

About 50 high school students participating in the UI Upward Bound program were told about the importance of education at a panel discussion Tuesday night.

The students, in grades 9 through 12, are attending the summer session in Iowa City to take college preparatory classes.

Jane Mullin, an Upward Bound administrative assistant and teacher, said the purpose of the program is to stress the importance of graduating from high school and completing a college education.

"The program has been extremely successful," Mullin said. "About 80 percent of the students go on to college and 100 percent graduate from high school."

To qualify for Upward Bound, students must meet two of the following criteria: be from low income families, the children of non-college educated parents or a member of an ethnic minority group.

The Upward Bound students, comprised mainly of blacks and Hispanics, heard from minority speakers who discussed the importance of learning.

Luis Vasquez, a doctoral student, and Iowa City West High Vice Principal Renoto DeLeon told about their personal educational experiences.

Vasquez said his father did not think education was important until years after Vasquez graduated from college and became a successful counselor.

"Education is good," Vasquez said. "Your bachelor's degree will get you an open door in a lot of places."

Vasquez said the most important skill is communication and stressed that minority students must remember they deserve to be educated.

"One thing I've learned with all the education I've had is if you don't learn to communicate, you can't get anywhere," he said.

Vasquez, who received a minority fellowship, said funding for such programs will not always be available. He said education requires work but encouraged students to weigh the alternatives.

DeLeon also discussed keeping various possibilities in mind when making decisions as well as anticipating outcomes.

"There are a lot of doors that unless you think a little ahead, will close to you," he said.

DeLeon said his parents emigrated from the Philippines to Northwest Iowa when he was 16 years old. He said his parents decision reflected their strong support for education.

"Choices are going to be one of the things that are going to be important to you," he said.

Arnolodo Gonzalez, from Donnellson, Iowa, said he has attended Upward Bound for the past three years because it has helped him prepare for college.

"Three years ago my parents made me come up here," Gonzalez said. "This year I am taking a university calculus class."

He said he plans to attend college following his high school graduation and would like to come to the UI.

UI Upward Bound students will go to Davenport later this summer to get together with Marycrest College's Upward Bound program and have an outing at a waterslide park.

Council considers subdivision

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

The preliminary plat for the Idyllwild subdivision was sent back to the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Committee for reconsideration by the Iowa City Council during its meeting Tuesday night.

The 68-lot, single-family subdivision development was proposed on an undeveloped tract located south of Foster Road, west of Dubuque Street and north of Taft Speedway. The council unanimously denied the original plat on May 17.

Council member Susan Horowitz said she still had strong concerns over the proposed location of the subdivision.

"I feel very strongly that Planning and Zoning needs to take another look at this," Horowitz said. "Every ounce of common sense in me says it is wrong to put a subdivision there."

A letter was submitted Monday by a lawyer for subdivider Jim Glasgow Construction Co., asking the Iowa City Council to defer any action on the plat.

According to the letter, the deferral would allow Glasgow to further investigate new platting alternatives. Iowa City Planning and Program Development Director Don Schmeiser said Glasgow was looking at a completely different design plan for the land.

Glasgow had resubmitted both original preliminary and final plats to the city planning department to clear up a previous deficiency. The deficiency was found when nine lots along the Taft Speedway were not in accordance with the city's flood plain ordinance.

The plan will now return to Planning and Zoning for further consideration.

In other business Tuesday night, Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins informed the council that Iowa Electric Light and Power Co. had presented a host plan for Johnson County in the event of a nuclear plant evacuation. Atkins said the plan needed to be approved by the council and signed by June 21.

Atkins said he had reviewed the plan and found many holes in it.

"There is no way employees of Iowa City could provide for evacuation of 20,000 people," Atkins said. "We don't have enough manpower or equipment."

As part of the host plan, Iowa City would be responsible for a possible 20,000 Cedar Rapids residents in the event of an evacuation. Council members said they were reluctant to approve the plan since it was being rushed so it could be signed by the June 21 deadline.

Stephen Atkins

Several council members said they didn't feel it was appropriate to sign the plan even as a formality and even if the loopholes were later corrected.

Republican platform likely to spark convention fight

DES MOINES (AP)—Republicans have drafted a conservative state platform on issues ranging from AIDS to abortion that's likely to spark a convention fight later this month.

Drafters of the platform have called for elimination of the Iowa lottery and for a 10 percent cut in the number of state employees, and they vow to fight any effort to increase the minimum wage.

With the Republican presidential nomination virtually settled, conservative activists who flocked to precinct caucuses for former television evangelist Pat Robertson and Senate GOP leader Bob Dole have only the platform fight to express their views.

"It is a conservative document," said Iowa Republican Chairman Michael Mahaffey. "The fact is that the activists and the people who tend to be most concerned about party platforms tend to be conservative."

"I wouldn't be surprised to see some very spirited discussion," Mahaffey said.

The document began with resolutions at the precinct caucuses and county and district conventions. A drafting committee then put together a proposed document synthesizing all that, which delegates to the state convention will be asked to approve June 25.

The platform praises Republican Gov. Terry Branstad but doesn't always agree with his positions. The platform formally opposes any effort to eliminate the ability of Iowa residents to deduct federal tax payments on state tax returns. Branstad last year proposed eliminating federal deductibility.

In addition, though Republicans officially call for a freeze on state spending, each of Branstad's budgets has been substantially larger than the previous year. He has supported several big new spending programs, including a $92.5 million teacher pay hike.

It's no fun

A federal appeals court in Atlanta has ruled that illegal aliens who are not paid minimum wage or fairly compensated for working overtime may sue their employers — regardless of the fact that they are not legal residents of the United States. The paradoxical ruling, which is sure to spark controversy among employers and the courts alike, is based on sound premises yet will be largely ineffectual.

Although the United States has had recurring problems with the influx of illegal aliens for many decades, especially in the South and Southwest, the stream of aliens coming through our borders has increased drastically in the last 10 years. The methods which have been implemented to stop the flow have, for the most part, failed to reduce the sheer numbers coming across the borders. The slap on the wrist that border patrols and immigration officials dole out provides virtually no deterrent effect on either first time offenders or recidivists. Ergo, aliens continue to migrate north and seek employment within U.S. borders.

This is where the problems really begin — after they're "safely" inside the country. Unethical and uncaring employers exploit these immigrants by paying them bottom wage for the worst imaginable jobs. The hours are long, the pay is minimal and housing conditions, usually arranged for by the employer, are atrocious. Many workers become too sick to continue working and are turned away in a flash.

For the thousands of employers who exploit the physical labor of these aliens, this ruling represents a tiny thorn in their sides, a very tiny one. Although victimized aliens may have the legal right to sue, those who do will risk deportation after their illegal status is established.

Stronger leadership

Americans are awash in information about AIDS these days. Within the past few weeks, the federal government's AIDS brochure was mailed to the nation's households, the presidential commission on AIDS issued a draft of its final report and, most recently, an international conference on AIDS convened in Stockholm.

But, while the news about AIDS has been plentiful, it has very rarely been good. Grim statistics confirm that Americans and others around the world continue to contract acquired immune deficiency syndrome at alarming rates. According to information released in Stockholm, 65,000 AIDS cases have been reported in the United States and a new AIDS patient is diagnosed every 14 minutes.

The rest of the planet has not escaped the epidemic, either. Researchers estimate that the number of AIDS cases in Europe doubles every 11 months. The African continent is waging a desperate battle against the disease, and there are indications that AIDS is beginning to make inroads in Asian nations as well.

Perhaps the only good news from all this is that public health officials appear to be providing stronger leadership in the battle against AIDS. The federal government's brochure, "Understanding AIDS," was remarkable for its straightforward discussion of the threat, including the sexual practices which constitute risky behavior. The presidential commission's draft, which called for new treatment centers, federal anti-discrimination laws, confidential testing and new education initiatives, won widespread approval based on its comprehensive approach to combatting the disease.

These efforts clearly deserve praise, but the true test will be in the efficacy. Until the spread of AIDS is checked, or reversed, these attempts remain just that — attempts — rather than effective solutions.

Precarious position

What does Jesse Jackson want?

This question has taken up so much media time lately that it is easy to forget Jackson is not still running for president. But he may be running for vice president, and that is giving the Dukakis people nightmares.

The genesis of Jesse Jackson as power broker is the history of a political outsider coming in from the cold. Abandoning his spoiler status of four years ago, Jesse Jackson has, through the sheer poetry of his person, awakened a slumbering black electorate and vitalized his party on behalf of social justice. Certainly he has earned the right to be heard, to have the ideas he champions — naming South Africa a "terrorist state," for example — taken seriously and made a part of the Democratic Party platform. One hopes that Mike Dukakis could, if elected, include this gifted and visionary man in his administration, perhaps with a cabinet appointment.

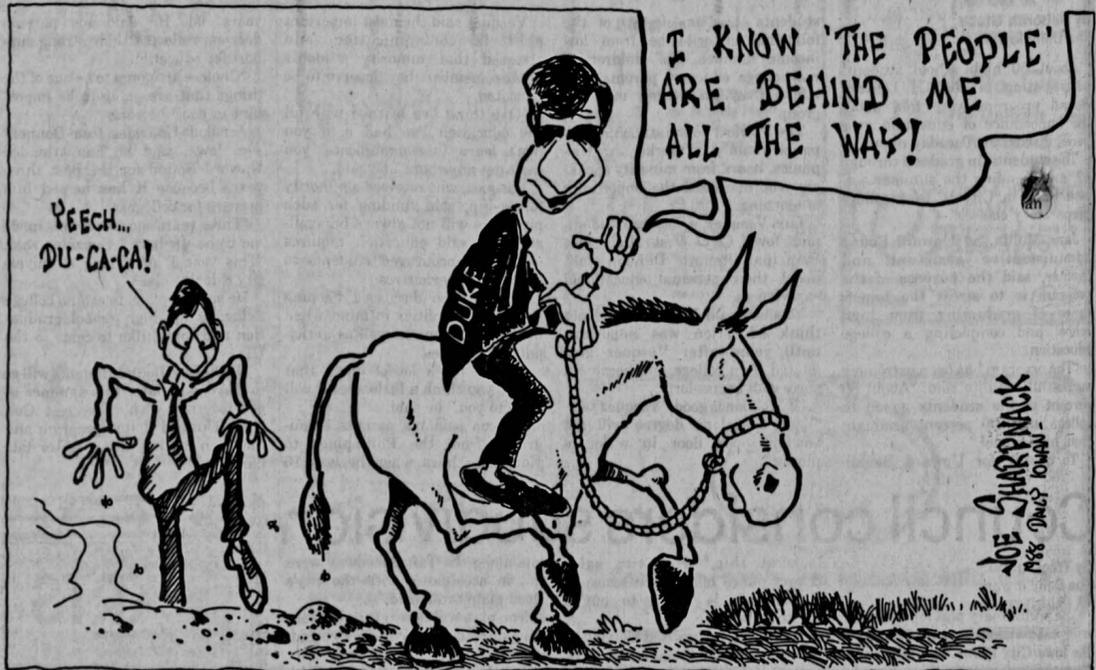

But Dukakis, for better or worse, is his party's nominee, and the privilege of selecting a running mate is his alone. Polls are only polls, but the current numbers say that a Dukakis-Jackson ticket would lose in November, Dukakis-anybody else would probably win. Sad but true; America is not ready to elect a black man to the highest office in the land, or even the second highest.

But what Jackson wants — or should want, if he is serious about working within the system on behalf of all disenfranchised Americans — is for the Democrats to take the White House in 1988. Therefore, he must not seek the V.P. spot on the Democratic ticket.

The alternative is four more years of watered-down Ronald Reagan. And nobody in the Democratic Party, especially Jesse Jackson, wants that.

U.S. pursues own interests

In the last two months, largely as a result of the U.S.-Iranian shootout in April, the U.S. Navy has quietly broadened its protective services in the Persian Gulf, beyond even the 11 reflagged Kuwaiti tankers. The Reagan administration contends this new posture simply reaffirms its commitment to freedom of navigation in the gulf. Yet the administration has a host of ulterior motives wrapped up in its commitment of American warships to that part of the world. Our Navy is in the gulf to grind an ax with Iran and to perpetuate the Iran-Iraq war. By perpetuating the war, the administration can keep the belligerents weak and preoccupied and prevent Texas from sliding into the sea, taking the U.S. oil industry and Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. with it.

The U.S. government has often conducted foreign policy under false pretenses. Such practice has ranged from the minor fib to the outrageous lie. With the ascension of an actor to the presidency, U.S. foreign policy has become consummately deceitful. President Ronald Reagan, of course, is a product of Hollywood, which is a product of theater. This is significant because, as critic Edwin Black has noted, theater "lies even as it proclaims itself as true because it is an institution dedicated to pretense. . . The very word hypocrite is derived from the Greek term for actor." Reagan has deceived us, and perhaps himself, about much. In the Persian Gulf he continues to do so.

In the 8-year-old Iran-Iraq war, the record is clear. Iraq first invaded Iran. Iraq was the first belligerent to attack neutral shipping in the Gulf. Iraq has attacked more tankers than Iran. Only Iraq has used chemical weapons (mustard gas, cyanide, etc.), though both sides have the capability. Iraq has fired three times as many missiles at civilian targets as Iran. Iraq attacked the U.S.S. Stark, killing 37 sailors. The record thus indicates that smaller, less populous Iraq is fighting dirtier and posing the greatest threat to shipping in the gulf. Nevertheless, the United States protects ships carrying Iraq's cargoes (to undamaged Kuwaiti and Saudi ports), but not Iran's.

According to the Reagan administration, the U.S. Navy's mission in the gulf is to enforce "freedom of navigation in international waters" and to protect passage of oil through that waterway especially. We're really only enforcing freedom of navigation for some ships, however, and the low and stable price of oil indicates that its supply is not in jeopardy. Why is the U.S. Navy really parading in the gulf and periodically shooting up Iranian oil platforms, speedboats and warships?

The first and most obvious motive stems from Iran's unwillingness to cooperate with one of the administration's earlier shams. We now know, thanks to Iran and a Lebanese newspaper, that Reagan was shipping thousands of anti-tank and anti-aircraft missiles to Iran ("for hostages") while he was simultaneously talking tough about terrorism and urging the rest of the world to stop supplying Iran and Iraq with war materials. Reagan, evidently, is getting even for being proven a hypocrite.

By perpetuating the war the administration can keep the belligerents weak and preoccupied and prevent Texas from sliding into the sea, taking the U.S. oil industry and Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation with it.

There are a couple other, more subtle reasons for our current presence in the gulf. Our Navy is there to prevent the resolution of the Iran-Iraq war because a number of things would probably happen if that war ended: Iraq would resume greater sponsorship of terrorism against Israel. Iran would resume greater sponsorship of terrorism against everyone, particularly us. And both shattered nations, unencumbered by attacks on tankers and their port facilities, would be able and anxious to greatly increase their oil exports. That would flood the oil market, driving already low oil prices through the floor — and that might be the death knell for such oil-producing states as Texas and for the FDIC, which is currently straining to keep the banks of such states solvent.

The collapse of oil prices since their peak in 1981 (and the collapse of real-estate markets) in Texas has pushed hundreds of banks in that state to the brink of failure. According to The Washington Post, "Texas banks have been failing at the rate of once a week for more than a year, consuming $2 billion of the $3 billion paid out last year by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation." The deposit insurance fund, created to help prevent another Great Depression, has never been tested as it is being tested now. A new and greater flooding of the oil market by Iran and Iraq would ravage domestic oil production and the FDIC further, certainly "a threat to national security."

The Reagan administration may be hoping Iran will be foolish enough to attack — and sink — a large U.S. warship, killing hundreds of servicemen. Such an action could be compared to Pearl Harbor and provide the administration with an excuse to dispense with its current policy of "proportional response" to attacks in favor of "massive retaliation." By wreaking havoc on what's left of Iran's oil industry and navy, the administration could get even with the Ayatollah and preserve or even bolster current oil prices at the same time.

Dukakis quietly gets the nod

Up, the tough political realities are rearing their ugly heads, and they are far to hideous to be ignored any longer.

The big question has got to be, why the Duke? Short, boring, ethnic, Mike Dukakis didn't look like presidential material last February. However, to those watching closely, he looked like a shoo-in after Super Tuesday.

To anyone watching from the outside (this includes most of the electorate), America's electoral process more resembles a Byzantine circus than an orderly transition of power. But the endurance contest of the primaries has its own twisted purpose. It exposes the candidates and their staffs to the "white-hot heat" of the media for many months. The working theory here is that if they can cope with the insane trauma of The Trail, then they should be able to govern effectively.

It is a process and theory that does not exactly lend itself to producing bold policymakers and flashy campaigners. As we have seen, the Dukakis campaign embodies neither of those qualities.

What the process does encourage is juggernaut-like organizations which raise incredible amounts of money. The Dukakis campaign has from the outset outthusted, outorganized and most importantly, outfund-raised the rest of the field. It is a campaign that has had all the right moves.

The campaign took a cavalier attitude toward the Iowa caucuses. They didn't spend even close to as much as Simon and Gephardt. They knew, in the words of Gephardt, that "this year Iowa would be worth Idaho." In the South, the Duke avoided the big mistakes of his rivals by focusing only on narrowly targeted areas instead of running himself ragged and going broke campaigning in every Super Tuesday state.

Even the campaign's mistakes, like spending $400,000 in Illinois for no delegates, were minor. When you have $24 million to throw around, slip-ups like that are no sweat. And other mistakes like the Biden episode, upon long-term examination, were in reality shrewd, if Machiavellian, strategic moves.

Which brings us back to the "big picture" — the real reasons for the Duke's victory. Way back last summer the campaign leadership knew that the nomination would go to the candidate who said the least. All the other candidates had a clear message to offer with the exception of Biden. Simon — traditional democratic "New Deal" values; Gephardt — a trade bill and neo-populism; Babbit — reform and taxes; Jackson — the progressive agenda; Gore — neo-liberalism.

Connor Anderson

They saw earlier than anyone else that the public doesn't want harsh realities and tough specifics. They want someone who acts like they know what they're doing and who appears to be above the fray.

In July, Dukakis' staff knew that the nature of the primary campaigns would leave room for two likely candidates, theirs and Biden. Only Biden was raising the same kind of money. Only Biden had the same kind of cranked-up campaign staff. And only Biden had the same general Democratic "happy talk" message. But Biden had the things the Duke didn't. Biden had Bork and Biden had Charisma.

Through memos in July and August, campaign manager John Sasso and communications director Bill Tully indicated Biden's momentum from the Bork hearings was ominous. It was common knowledge in Washington that Joe had skeletons. People knew that, given the "white hot heat" Joe Biden had spoke of, it would be exposed sooner or later. Was it Mike that decided that it would be sooner rather than later?

They knew all along that if they had the money, if they had an organization, their clearly vague message would see them through. They were visionaries. They saw earlier than anyone else that the public doesn't want harsh realities and tough specifics. They want someone who acts like they know what they're doing and who appears to be above the fray. No glitz this year, just a nice safe manager. Dukakis has been that candidate from the word go. It has been inevitable since last September that he would be the nominee; it just took a long time for the smoke to clear.

Anxiety sufferers may find relief with the help of a new drug. The UI research is currently in progress.

In July researchers at the UI's Medical Laboratories began a yearlong study of the new anti-anxiety drug, Xanax.

Preliminary tests of the drug indicate it may reduce anxiety in persons with generalized anxiety disorder, a condition with less severe symptoms than panic disorder.

The UI research will continue to study the drug's effect on persons suffering from anxiety.

UI student overcomes disability's limitations

By Noelle Nystrom
Special to The Daily Iowan

Mary Ann Cull is not unlike many students at the UI. She studies hard, spends time with her close friends and enjoys swimming and skiing. When Mary Ann attends her pharmacy classes in the UI Medical Laboratories, however, she enters through the freight entrance.

"It's quite interesting," she said. "Occasionally I see a cadaver or two, and some days I come across a goat or another kind of animal they are bringing in for examination."

Cull is a senior pharmacy major from Alburnett, Iowa. She is usually confined to her wheelchair, but can walk with crutches.

"I haven't used my crutches much since I came to college because walking a block for me is the same as running a block for a normal person," Cull said.

When she was 9 years old, Cull's ballet teacher noticed she was having difficulty with her dance steps. After visiting specialists of every kind in Cedar Rapids, neurosurgeons at UI Hospitals and Clinics eventually discovered a vascular formation on her spine.

After four lengthy surgeries, the growth was removed, but doctors were unable to determine if it was malignant or benign because all test results were inconclusive. Cull said there is still a chance that cancer may be present.

Besides ballet, Cull said she loved gymnastics and running as a child. After her operations, when she was confined to her crutches, Cull said she became frustrated and angry with her limitations.

During junior high, Cull said she was "happy on the outside, but miserable inside."

In high school, Cull said she decided to concentrate on academics, an area where she had no limitations.

Now Cull said physical barriers are something she rarely considers.

"I have tried so hard to adapt and adjust to my situation that it is hard to think of any serious obstacles," Cull said.

Cull said winter weather can pose problems.

"I remember one day when I was wheeling myself back from the library," Cull said. "My wheels got stuck in the snow and I couldn't move. A man walking by helped me all the way back to Rienow. It made my day."

Cull said there are moments when the full realization of her disability hits hard.

Although she is learning to play tennis in her wheelchair, Cull said it is sometimes difficult to watch others play because she will never be able to play the game fully.

Cull said she lives in Rienow Hall because it is close to both the Pharmacy Building and Med Labs, the two places she spends most of her time.

When she gets up in the morning, she takes a shower in a specially-equipped shower stall down the hall. At breakfast, a member of the food service staff helps carry her tray to a table. After eating, she wheels herself to the Pharmacy Building and seats herself at the front of the class.

"I have to give a lot of credit to my friends who carry my books, push my chair and open doors for me," she said. "I appreciate them because they see me as a person and not someone who sits in a wheelchair."

Cull believes that most people have good attitudes toward the disabled.

"I have had few problems in the classroom dealing with bias," she said. "Sometimes I am somewhat of a pain to have around because of my chair, though."

She remembers having a lab that required her to wheel down narrow aisles while carrying hydrochloric acid and trying not to bump into anyone.

"It was tricky at first, but every- one was very helpful and we managed to get along," Cull said.

New anti-anxiety drug study will begin at UI next month

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Anxiety sufferers may find relief with the help of a new drug to be tested at the UI and three other universities specializing in clinical research.

In July researchers at the UI Medical Laboratories will begin a yearlong study of the effects of a new anti-anxiety drug, ZK 112-119. Preliminary tests of the new drug compound indicate that it may reduce anxiety in persons suffering from generalized anxiety disorder with less severe side effects than drugs currently used.

The UI research will analyze the drug's effect on approximately 25 persons suffering from the disorder. Anxiety disorder afflicts about one in 20 adult Americans.

Extreme anxiety disorder patients are characterized by excessive anxiety or worry, muscle tension, restlessness, palpitations, sweating, feeling on edge, irritability and insomnia.

Dr. Russell Noyes, professor of psychiatry in the UI College of Medicine, said the study participants will make six weekly visits to the UI Psychiatric Outpatient Clinic to test the new drug.

He said participants will either take ZK 112-119 in varying doses for a four-week period or receive capsules containing an inactive ingredient, which is a standard procedure in testing the effects of new medications.

Noyes said the UI will join the psychiatry departments at Yale University and the Universities of South Carolina and Pennsylvania in the research project.

The study is funded by Sandoz Pharmaceutical Corp., the East Hanover, N.J., firm which developed the compound.

Noyes said current anti-anxiety medications can sedate patients and interfere with their memories and coordination.

Noyes said he hoped ZK 112-119 would provide a better medication for anxiety sufferers, but added if the drug proves effective it would not be available to the public for three to four years.

South Korean students stage protest at DMZ

IMJINGAK, South Korea — Radical students shouting anti-U.S. slogans staged a protest Tuesday at the edge of the Demilitarized Zone dividing North and South and called for reunification of the peninsula.

About 1,300 students from two universities in Seoul held a peaceful sit-down protest for several hours in front of a fortified bridge, blocked off by steel barriers and rolls of barbed wire. The bridge is the only access for civilians to the border with Communist North Korea.

"Drive out Yankees who hinder unification!" and "Advance unification!" students shouted as they briefly marched along barriers at the bridge.

U.S. troops who normally guard the bridge stayed out of sight. A few South Korean personnel guarded the crossing.

The students went to Imjingak, the last civilian area before the DMZ, in a convoy of 30 buses. Professors escorted them to prevent trouble at the heavily militarized area. It was the first report of teachers accompanying radicals to prevent violence.

Soviet withdrawal delayed by guerrillas

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Moslem guerrillas have punched through defenses of Afghanistan's second-largest city and delayed Soviet troop withdrawal, Western diplomatic sources said Tuesday.

The sources, speaking on condition their names not be used, said the guerrillas have penetrated the defenses of Kandahar, a provincial capital of 20,000 people about 270 miles southwest of Kabul, Afghanistan's capital.

One diplomatic source, quoting a Kandahar resident, said guerrillas have been entering the city's bazaars daily to hunt communist military and government personnel.

The diplomatic sources also said fighting there and at the Afghan army garrison at Spin Buldak had slowed the Soviets' pullout from Kandahar province and increased speculation they may reinforce the area with additional troops. Spin Buldak is 60 miles southeast of Kandahar, on the Pakistani border.

Shultz lashes Sandinistas

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George Shultz lashed out at Nicaraguan authorities on Tuesday, accusing them of renegeing on promises to create democracy and of subjecting Contra negotiators to harassment and intimidation during talks last week.

But Shultz, after a meeting with the Contra leadership, declined to say whether the failure of the peace negotiations between the leftist Sandinista government and the Contras means the administration will seek military aid for the rebels.

Meanwhile, Nicaraguan Ambassador Carlos Tunnermann held the Contras responsible for collapse of the peace talks, contending they had made "demands so outlandish and unacceptable" that they knew in advance the Sandinista negotiators would reject them.

In a letter to House Speaker Jim Wright, Tunnermann said that on the last day of the talks, the Contras introduced "an entirely new set of demands" and insisted that the government accept all of them within two hours.

Soviets apologize for death of U.S. soldier

WASHINGTON — Three years after the fact, the Soviet Union's highest-ranking military official has apologized for the 1985 shooting death of an American Army officer inside East Germany, the Pentagon said Tuesday.

The apology was extended by Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Yazov to Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci at a private meeting May 31 during the Moscow summit, said Dan Howard, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

Yazov offered no new details or explanation for the March 24, 1985, shooting of Maj. Arthur Nicholson Jr. by a Soviet soldier, nor did he respond to previous U.S. demands for financial compensation to Nicholson's family, Howard said.

Nonetheless, "we feel we have received the appropriate apology from the Soviets, yes," the spokesman said. "The request for, or the demand for, an apology, we feel, has been responded to appropriately by the minister."

Dow up 25, bond market rallies

NEW YORK — Stocks hit a post-crash high Tuesday after rallying hard on a better-than-expected trade report, but a late wave of profit-taking prevented the market from posting even sharper gains.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had been up more than 38 points during the session, finished at 2,124.47, up 25.07. Broader market indices also closed at post-crash highs.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 227.15 million shares, up sharply from 125.31 million in the previous session.

The report also sparked a rally in the bond market and helped push the dollar higher against the major currencies.

Shultz addresses UN on arms control

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz told the United Nations Monday that it will have no role in superpower nuclear weapons reductions, and he ignored the Soviet Union's invitation to ban nuclear tests.

Instead, he stressed the momentum for arms control achieved during the Reagan administration.

"We have made major progress toward a treaty to cut U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear arsenals (long-range missiles) by 50 percent," he said. "I do not know whether we will be able to conclude such a treaty this year, but we will make our best effort."

"It is the United States' top arms control priority," he added.

Shultz's speech to Monday's special U.N. session on disarmament underlined past accomplishments, including the newly ratified U.S.-Soviet treaty to destroy intermediate-range nuclear missiles and the verification procedures that go with it.

Last week Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze used a speech to the conference to call on the United States to take on future disarmament challenges.

He proposed abolishing all nuclear weapons by the year 2000, an immediate mutual ban on nuclear tests and an immediate cut of 500,000 troops each from the Warsaw Pact and NATO.

Shultz replied that the United States will "concentrate on results which will eliminate the disparities (in conventional arms in Europe) that threaten stability, not schemes for 'equal reductions' which will have no such effect."

NATO claims the Soviets have an advantage in conventional arms in Europe.

In his speech, Shultz also ignored the Soviet call for a mutual test ban.

The United States similarly failed to join a 1½-year unilateral Soviet moratorium on testing that began in August 1985.

Shultz also rejected the Soviet call for a U.N. arms reduction verification agency to coordinate and monitor disarmament pacts.

"Some tasks, such as work to reduce nuclear arsenals, must be strictly bilateral in negotiation, verification and implementation," Shultz said. "But others — above all, the negotiations to ban chemical weapons and the need to control nuclear proliferation — are global problems."

"Ballistic missile proliferation is a new and urgent challenge," particularly in the Middle East, Shultz said. His advice to Iran and Iraq was to exercise "mutual restraint" and not buy or launch such missiles.

Shultz urged nations attending the special conference on disarmament to "apply themselves" to a global ban on chemical weapons which are easily made in fertilizer and pesticide factories, but he did not suggest any solutions.

The potential spread of nuclear weapons to other countries, especially in Southeast Asia, was a central topic in the U.N.'s session on disarmament, and Shultz urged rivals Pakistan and India to work on the problem.

Later this week, delegates to the 159-member General Assembly will begin drafting resolutions on chemical, nuclear, conventional and space-based weapons for this third special session on disarmament in 10 years.

Trade deficit narrows more than 15 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade deficit shrank to $9.89 billion in April, its best showing in more than three years, the government said Tuesday in a better-than-expected report which sparked a big rally on Wall Street.

The Commerce Department said that the April deficit narrowed by 15.5 percent from a seasonally adjusted March deficit figure of $11.70 billion, with all of the improvement coming from a steep drop in imports.

Many economists had been braced for a widening of the deficit to around $12.2 billion based on an assumption that exports could not hold at the record level set in March. Exports did edge down by 2.5 percent, but the small drop still left them at $26.22 billion, the second highest level on record.

Meanwhile, imports plunged 6.4 percent to $36.11 billion, reflecting big drops in American purchases of foreign cars and capital equipment, including computers.

Private analysts said the string of better trade numbers virtually assured that President Ronald Reagan would win his veto battle with Congress over trade legislation.

"The argument for protectionism is fast disappearing as our trade deficit improves," said Frank McCormick, senior economist with Bank of America.

For the first four months of the year, the trade deficit has been running at an annual rate of $141.8 billion, a big improvement from the record $170.3 billion deficit suffered in 1987.

While many economists had been expecting a decline to around $150 billion, some said they were now revising their forecasts to show even more of an improvement this year.

Baker resigns; Duberstein to be chief of staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — Howard Baker Jr., who gave up his presidential ambitions to help President Ronald Reagan run the White House after the Iran-Contra scandal, has resigned as chief of staff and will be replaced by his deputy, Kenneth Duberstein, it was announced Tuesday.

The changeover will take place July 1. Baker said he will return to his home in Huntsville, Tenn., where his wife and his stepmother are in poor health.

"I really relish the thought of getting back to private life," Baker, an attorney, said in an interview. "It has been an extraordinary experience working with Ronald Reagan."

"I expect to go back and do nothing for a while. I'm going to rest a little bit," Baker said.

With the accomplishments of the past 16 months and the health problems in his family, Baker said, "it seemed like a logical time" to go.

Prominently mentioned as a possible running mate on the Republican presidential ticket with George Bush, Baker said he would not turn down the No. 2 spot if it were offered, but he doesn't expect the offer.

"You don't turn down requests of that sort if they are made," Baker said. "It's really something that is presumptuous in the extreme to say, 'No, I would not do that.' But I do not want to do that, I do not expect to do that and I think it's extremely unlikely I would be asked to do that."

Baker said he had told Bush he was quitting, but did not raise the issue of whether he might be available as a running mate. Laughingly, Baker added, "More important, he's never discussed that with me."

Reagan accepted Baker's resignation with "deep regret" and praised him as "a steady hand in the operation of the White House while the Iran-Contra investigations were being conducted."

Duberstein, 44, will be Reagan's fourth chief of staff, responsible for directing the flow of paper and visitors to the president's office and coordinating his schedule. He will oversee a White House staff of about 325 people, including speechwriters, counselors, press officials and policy specialists.

President Ronald Reagan meets with Howard Baker, who resigned Monday as chief of staff, and his replacement Ken Duberstein in the Oval Office.

Like Baker, Duberstein is renowned for his expertise in dealing with Congress. He was the White House's chief legislative strategist during part of Reagan's first term, and after a stint with a business consulting firm, returned to the White House as Baker's deputy on March 23, 1987.

"Ken will be my principal aide and will lead the White House staff as we head into the home stretch," Reagan said in a statement. "He is an outstanding manager and skilled strategist who has been fundamental to the significant accomplishments, foreign and domestic, we have achieved."

Baker's departure caught Washington by surprise.

"This hits me like a cold towel," said House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill.

Indeed, Baker once had promised, "I'm going to be here to lock the door and turn out the lights" when Reagan leaves office next Jan. 20.

He denied that his resignation signaled unsteady times at the White House.

"My leaving does not signal a mass exodus from the White House," Baker said.

However, White House communications director Thomas C. Griscom intends to leave his post, but has not said when he will leave, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Tuesday.

Praise for Baker's job came quickly on Capitol Hill.

"He's done a superb job as chief of staff for the president," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said Baker "did much to help to calm and quiet and make things more serene there. He has performed a great service not only for the president but also for his country."

Baker, in his interview with the Associated Press, said he had accomplished the goals he set when Reagan tapped him to replace Donald Regan. Regan, a former Wall Street executive and treasury secretary, was ousted from his job Feb. 27, 1987, tarred by the Iran-Contra arms and money scandal and at odds with first lady Nancy Reagan.

'Who's a Jew' amendments defeated in Israeli parliament

JERUSALEM (AP) — Parliament narrowly defeated two proposed laws Tuesday intended to "maintain the purity" of the Jewish people by changing the definition of a Jew and, in effect, limiting who could immigrate to Israel.

Votes of 60-53 and 60-51 on the two proposals followed intense debate during which Rabbi Meir Kahane, an American-born member, was ejected from the chamber.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir had told American Jews he would not support the so-called "Who's a Jew amendments," but he voted for them in the Knesset and enforced party discipline on others of his Likud bloc to follow suit.

The proposals would have recognized as Jewish only those converts who were brought into the faith by Orthodox rabbis, not those converted by Reform or Conservative rabbis.

Jewish communities abroad, particularly in the United States, had a special interest in the legislation because of Israel's unique Law of Return, which guarantees automatic citizenship to all Jews who qualify under Israeli law.

"Anyone who is willing to agree to this is betraying the fundamental principle of Zionism — the ingathering of the exiles," said Elazar Granot, a left-wing member of the Knesset. "Since when is a state a religious concept?"

"Since Mt. Sinai!" Kahane shouted, referring to the mountain in the Sinai Desert where God gave Moses the Ten Commandments.

Kahane, who is known for outspoken anti-Arab views, was taken from the hall after interrupting speakers on three occasions. One member shouted at him: "Leave the hall and leave the nation!"

One proposal would have amended the Law of Return and the other would have put the Orthodox rabbinic in Israel in charge of determining who was a Jew.

The 120-member Knesset also rejected a bill providing pardons for Jews now jailed for terrorist acts against Arabs, including murder.

Avraham Verdiger, who proposed the Who's a Jew legislation, said it would "maintain the purity" of the Jewish people, preserve the "uniqueness" of Jews and help stop Jews in other countries from assimilating into the general population.

"Our arm is too short to save their souls," he said.

Even Mubarak Awad, a Palestinian-American activist deported on Monday, could undergo one of the "fictitious" conversions conducted by some rabbis abroad, Verdiger charged.

Awad considers converting to Judaism, seeking re-entry

NEW YORK (AP) — An Arab-American deported from Israel said Tuesday that he would consider converting to Judaism, if necessary, to return to Israel.

Mubarak Awad, an advocate of non-violent Palestinian resistance, was deported Monday by the Israeli government, which accused him of subversion.

Awad, a U.S. citizen who was born in Jerusalem and returned there in 1983, said he might convert from Christianity to Judaism and seek re-entry under Israel's Law of Return "if everything (else) fails."

"It's going to take a lot of guts to do it," Awad said at a news conference. "Maybe I have to do it."

"I am here, but not by choice," he said. "I was deported just because I am a Christian. If I were a Jew, I would not be deported."

Under the Law of Return, any Jew can enter Israel. But the privilege is not absolute; gangster Meyer Lansky, for example, sought Israeli citizenship under the law in 1970, but was forced to leave in 1972 following allegations of his continued involvement in organized crime.

Pressed on the subject of conversion, Awad said, "I'll tell (a rabbi) frankly... it's not my belief. It's a political statement that I'm persecuted because I'm a Christian."

Leaders of reform Judaism, meanwhile, issued a letter saying that "extraneous motivations, political motivations, are not sufficient reason" for conversion.

"No one can rule out the possibility of a sincere conversion in anybody's case, but this must be proved at the end of a long period of instruction," said a letter sent to 1,500 Reform rabbis in the United States and Canada.

But Awad said he would first pursue other avenues to return to Israel, including appealing to international public opinion. He said he planned meetings with officials at the United Nations, in Washington, Europe and the Soviet Union.

In ordering Awad deported, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir alleged that he played a key role in this year's Arab uprising in the occupied territories.

Writer shoots invading swimmer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Syndicated columnist Carl Rowan, who has written frequently of the need for stricter gun control, shot and wounded a teenager who had taken a pre-dawn swim in his backyard pool Tuesday.

Police said a record check indicated that Rowan's handgun was not registered as required, and the case was being referred to the local federal prosecutor's office.

Ben Smith, 18, of suburban Chevy Chase, Md., was treated at Georgetown University Hospital for a wrist wound and released. He and a young woman companion were charged with unlawful entry, but the charges were withdrawn later.

Rowan said he was awakened at 1:55 a.m. by a noise at his bedroom window.

"Then I heard a woman shout or scream and I thought it was on my property," he said in a telephone interview with the Associated Press.

"I peeked out and saw four people and called the police. I waited for the police with my revolver. When I saw the police cars arriving, I opened the pool door assuming the police would want to come in that way."

"I was confronted by a tall, young man striding over as if coming into my house."

"First I said, 'Freeze.' Then I said, 'I warn you, I have a gun.'"

"He said, 'Aw hell, man,' and kept coming."

"I fired a warning shot, and it hit him in the wrist."

Police apprehended Smith and Laura Bachman, 19, of Bethesda, Md. Rowan said others in the group of teenagers got away.

In an interview with radio station WMAL, Smith acknowledged he was on Rowan's property, but he said he made no threatening gestures.

"He had no right to shoot me. I mean I guess I was trespassing. That's no reason to shoot a person — for swimming in his pool," Smith said.

"I was in my underwear soaking wet. I had just climbed out of the pool. I never spoke with him — he just shot me," Smith said.

Wright reveals details of his book sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright on Tuesday listed more people who bought bulk quantities of his controversial book, including a Washington lobbyist, a Boston insurance company and a fellow congressman.

When reporters asked Wright to enumerate who had bought multiple copies of the 1984 book, "Reflections of a Public Man," the speaker disclosed several names not previously disclosed. The book is part of a broad congressional inquiry into Wright's financial dealings.

One, Gordon MacKay, a senior vice president of the New England Life insurance company in Boston, said his company had invited Wright to speak to a management group about three years ago, and bought $2,000 worth of Wright's books instead of giving him an honorarium. Wright was then House majority leader.

There is a limit on the amount of honoraria a member of Congress may receive each year, but there is no limit on income from book royalties.

MacKay said he found the book "enjoyable. It gave insights into the man." The company sent its 336 copies of the slim, 117-page volume to be distributed to local high school civics classes, he said.

The House Ethics Committee is investigating, among other things, the deal under which Wright got a Fort Worth, Texas, friend, William Carlos Moore, to publish the book and give Wright a 55 percent royalty totaling $55,000.

The book was sold primarily at political rallies and to bulk purchasers. Wright received $3.25 for each $5.95 copy sold. Nearly all 20,000 copies printed have been sold.

Moore also has done some $600,000 worth of campaign work for Wright over the years.

Critics of the speaker have charged that the purchase of large numbers of books by special-interest representatives constitutes a conflict of interest because it is a way for them to funnel money directly to Wright for his personal use.

Wright has defended the book deal, saying it is proper for members of Congress to be able to sell books and make money on them. He contends the criticism of him is a political attack by right-wing Republicans.

The ethics panel, formally known as the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, also is looking into the propriety of Wright's assigning a congressional staff member to compile and edit the book and using tax money to pay the aide's expenses for a three-week final editing trip to Fort Worth in late 1984.

Craig Raupe, a former Wright aide who now lobbies Congress for a long list of private businesses, also bought numerous copies, the speaker said. Raupe said he bought only 10 copies and gave them away to family members.

Raupe also said he arranged for the copies to be purchased by the New England Life insurance company. "I'm not saying he's a great author or anything, but I'd do this for him whether I was on staff or not," Raupe said.

Drought

dry spell to the drought of 1955 and worries about the economic pressure it will put on the farmers and consumers in the area.

A damaging chain reaction has been set off that will affect consumers earlier than they think, Seelman said. Because the grain crops are failing, it is going to be more expensive to feed the livestock. Therefore, prices will soar in the local areas where they are marketed.

The produce prices will not be affected as strongly, according to Seelman, because there is so much corn stored under government programs that Iowa's present weather conditions will not affect the nation's overall supply.

Seelman said a dent will be put in the national supply, however, if the weather gets worse and the precipitation level stays well under average for the remainder of the summer.

But while the farming scene in Iowa — and particularly Johnson County — is bleak right now, Seelman is looking optimistically at one good thing that might come of the dry spell.

"I hope that more people will open their eyes to what rich agricultural land our nation has," Seelman said. "Then I wish they would see how thinly the farmers are being forced to spread themselves."

"If the government would help us to use all of our land more efficiently, maybe we would always have more than enough of a back-up supply to help us overcome something like the drought that is hurting us now," Seelman said.

Gallup poll puts Dukakis over Bush

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis maintained a double-digit lead over Republican George Bush in a Gallup poll released Tuesday, a larger margin than his advantage in two other recent public opinion surveys.

The poll, conducted by Gallup for the Boston Globe and Boston television stations WEEI and WCVB, found 52 percent support for Dukakis and 38 percent for Bush. The same poll a month ago gave Dukakis his greatest lead, 54-38.

Another opinion poll in May gave Dukakis a double-digit lead, 10 points in a CBS News-New York Times survey. Two more recent polls had single-digit leads for Dukakis, 49-44 in a Harris poll conducted June 1-6 and 45-39 in a USA Today-CNN poll June 7-9.

Duck's Breath's Kessler muses on career, future

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

"Zadar! Cow from Hell!" is a wrap. One by one, the Ducks, producers, managers and directors are packing up and jetting back to that soon-to-fall-into-the-ocean land of cool wonder and hot waves, California.

But hanging around town for a few more days is that "misanthropic Yuppie pundit" (Newsweek) — the "grouch with a rapid-fire, dead pan delivery" (Newsweek again), that "nimble-witted nihilist" (New York Times), "the acidulous rapid-fire rock 'n' roll and film critic" (Los Angeles Times). Yes, here to push his new novel (that's right, a novel) is America's Fastest-Talking, Supercynical Social Critic, star of print, stage, screen and sometimes "Nightline": Ian Shoales.

The book is "Ian Shoales' Perfect World" and, as ghost-penned by Ian's creator, alter-ego and confidante UI graduate Merle Kessler, tells the manic tale of one slightly surreal day in Ian's woebegotten life. The first-person narrative rides a roller coaster of adventure and angst while finding time to sound off on absolutely everything rotten, silly and dangerous in today's less-than-perfect world. The highly readable and hilarious result is best compared to a heinous menage-a-trois between Raymond Chandler, Douglas Adams and Andy Rooney.

Ian will be at Prairie Lights Bookstore, 15 S. Dubuque St., today for a "happy-hour signing" from 4 until 6 p.m. In the meantime, Merle Kessler has been quietly relaxing in Iowa City for a few days with his family before he and Ian take off for a two-month publicity and performance tour.

Kessler and Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre left Iowa City in 1976 for San Francisco. They'd been performing three times a week at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., and felt they were ready for a bigger venue. "We were totally naive," said Kessler. "We thought we'd be famous inside a year, because we were so good."

Twelve years later, Duck's Breath, a critical success (a short play featuring Ian and the other Ducks received a favorable review from the New York Times last fall) and certainly legendary in Johnson County, is still waiting for the big break that'll put the troupe on the cover of Time, or at least People.

"Zadar!" could be it. "Everything seemed to go without a hitch," said Kessler of the production, which completed shooting last Saturday — "on schedule and not too much over budget." Bob Hughes, the film's director, will remain in town this summer to edit the film, which everyone hopes will find a distributor and be out for Christmas (with its premiere at Hancher, of course).

"We've been together for 13 years," said Kessler of Duck's Breath, "and it would be nice to have a project that would pay off on all those years we put into it — you know, get a little recognition." However, Kessler said that despite the wait, "everything's happened just right" for the troupe. "We didn't have the self-confidence earlier (in our careers) — or the haircuts. (Back then) we didn't have combs, and we didn't bathe."

Personal hygiene aside, Kessler noted that there are advantages to not being Rich and Famous. "One of the reasons I guess I stuck with Duck's Breath is that I like the idea of having a direct relationship with your audience," he said. "It's really hard in this present day and age for those kinds of relationships to exist. There are all sorts of people in between (the performer and an audience — they help you to get to the audience, but along the way you lose a lot of things — you lose the wacky haircuts; you get slicker as you hone your act."

Paving the road to Fame and Fortune is a possible Duck's Breath special on the "Cinemax Comedy Experiment." ("That project and the 'Zadar!' project started at about the same time," noted Kessler, "and 'Zadar!' is in the can, while we just got the go-ahead to write a scenario for the Cinemax project").

And of course for Kessler there is Ian Shoales and his "Perfect World." Though Ian was created to mock social commentators, he rocketed to semi-fame on the strength of his own belligerent commentaries. But Kessler said it's "sorta tiring to have an opinion on everything," and would like to phase out the commentating while continuing to use Ian in a whole series of novels — sort of "The Ian Shoales Adventures." ("Ian) is a nice voice to have for writing, because it gives you an angle on every event," said Kessler, "but you can still stick to a story — I've always liked storytelling more than opinion-making."

And how does Kessler feel about being better known as Ian than as Merle?

"I don't mind that at all," he said. "I would prefer to have some other person mobbed at airports, and I could just stay home and eat barbecue."

Kessler wrote the screenplay for "Zadar!" and said both he and Ian would like to make more movies. "I don't have much interest or ability in directing films," he said, "but I would like to write or produce films — having a voice in the 'look' of a movie." Kessler said he would love to write more movies if it was a situation like "Zadar!" where "I was left pretty much alone and the script turned out the way I intended it."

As shooting ended, there were nasty rumors circulating about the possibility of the Ducks returning to Iowa the same time next year to do it all again, but no one's making any promises or commitments yet.

Future projects for Merle and Ian include a musical called "Suicide Blonde," which Kessler described as "a hard-boiled murder-mystery set in a Los Angeles hotel, with Shoales as a character."

Further down the line, Kessler doesn't see himself exclusively writing comedy. "I never started out to be a comedy writer," said Kessler, "but I'm sure there'll always be an element of humor in (my work) just because I can't take myself that seriously."

with Peymann.

The director said "this country is a madhouse" and that he was often involved in "dreadful things of the most banal kind." He even suggested that the famed Burgtheater be torn down.

Reaction was swift. The Socialist politicians who appointed Peymann in 1986 predictably defended their choice, arguing that the director had brought life and exciting art to the marble halls of the Burg.

Conservatives offended by Peymann's stark productions of beloved German classics seized the chance to call for the director's resignation.

The Burgtheater actors were quick to criticize Peymann for cutting salaries and for changing the way tickets, rehearsals and roles are allocated.

Nearly everybody attacked Peymann for bringing in 15 actors from West Germany. Most of them are friends from Peymann's days as director of the West German theater in Bochum before he was lured to Vienna.

The newcomers have gotten almost all the leading roles in Peymann's new productions. But locals ridiculed the new actors for their northern German vernacular, which offends the ear of an audience used to the distinctive delivery long considered among the Burgtheater's greatest merits.

"One can only shake one's head in amusement and despair," wrote Rauscher. "Are these really our worries? This orgy of small-mindedness? These childish quarrels?"

Ex-agent wins book battle with British

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Author Peter Wright says he has much more to tell about Britain's MI5 intelligence service but plans no sequel to "Spycatcher," the memoirs the British government failed to suppress here.

"There are 10 major stories which I have not put in and probably others if I thought hard enough," Wright told the Australian Broadcasting Corp. Monday.

It was the first time Wright had spoken publicly since the High Court ruled against the British government on June 2, ending a three-year court battle to block Australian publication of his story.

Wright said it was the stories he had not told that led the government to fight so hard to suppress the book.

"They have always been frightened of what I know and what I might say publicly, and they still are," he said.

Viennese stage hosts battle

VIENNA, Austria — The country's foremost theater is gripped by a real-life drama that rivals the classics presented on its historic stage.

The star is West German Claus Peymann, imported to direct the Burgtheater and embroiled in battles with his actors and the Vienna cultural establishment.

A premier of "Oedipus" Sunday night turned into a demonstration for and against Peymann, with banners unfurled on stage and the divided audience booing and cheering.

A city that relishes scandal and prizes its theaters and opera got the first whiffs of sensation on May 26, when the West German weekly Die Zeit published an interview with Peymann.

The director said "this country is a madhouse" and that he was often involved in "dreadful things of the most banal kind." He even suggested that the famed Burgtheater be torn down.

Mount Vernon boy wins junior title

GRANGER, Iowa (AP) — Sean McCarty of Mount Vernon defeated Waterloo's John Berg in a one-hole playoff Tuesday to win the 1988 state junior boys golf tournament. McCarty birdied the par 4 No. 7 hole to capture the title after he and Berg tied at 152 for 36 holes.

Trailing Berg by one stroke at the start of Tuesday's play, McCarty shot a 5-over-par 76 in hot, windy conditions to produce the tie. Berg, who shared the lead with three other golfers after the first 18 holes Monday, closed with a 77.

Curt Berggren of Cedar Falls finished third at 153, while Mark Hanson of Cedar Rapids came in fourth at 154. Doug Brown of Des Moines and John Locher of Mount Vernon tied at 155.

Clinton golfer takes junior girls title

NEVADA, Iowa (AP) — Maureen Roushar of Clinton shot her second straight 76 Tuesday to win the girls state junior golf championship by two strokes over Aurelia's LeAnn Lockin.

Roushar finished the 36-hole tournament at 152, 10 over par on the Indian Creek Country Club course. Lockin closed with a 3-over-par 73 to match the best round of the day, but she had an 81 Monday and finished at 154.

Sarah Britt of Davenport was four strokes back at 158, followed by Michelle Smothers of Marshalltown at 159, Tammy Cox of West Des Moines at 160 and defending champion Heather Deke of DeWitt at 163.

Minnesota ousts Brooks...

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Herb Brooks is out as Minnesota North Stars coach, at least for now, and Jack Ferreira is in as general manager, the NHL team said Tuesday.

North Stars co-owners George and Gordon Gund said during a news conference that not only has Ferreira been hired to succeed resigned General Manager Lou Nanne, but all personnel "in the hockey department" have been fired.

That includes Brooks, who wanted the dual assignment of coach-GM but was told shortly after Nanne resigned Jan. 28 that the Gunds didn't think one man could handle both jobs.

Ferreira, the new York Rangers' director of player development before signing a multi-year contract as Minnesota's GM and vice president, said he had several coaching candidates in mind.

A teammate of Brooks and Nanne on the 1967 United States National hockey team, Ferreira said he talked with Brooks Tuesday morning. He called Brooks "a candidate, a stronger candidate" for the position.

Brooks, however, said: "I'm confused. I consider myself released. I expect to talk to the new general manager again in a few days. Whether I'm going to reapply, I don't know."

He said he didn't know he had been fired until Tuesday afternoon, when a reporter called for his reaction to the day's proceedings.

Brooks led the 1980 U.S. hockey team to a gold medal. The North Stars, whose 19-48-13 record was the NHL's worst this season, had an average attendance of only 11,440, lowest since 1979. And the 11,440 includes the thousands of ticket-holders who elected not to show on many nights.

... and Penguins fire Creamer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The Pittsburgh Penguins today fired Pierre Creamer after one season as head coach of the NHL team. Creamer, 43, led the Penguins to their best record since their 1978-79 season, but Pittsburgh failed to make the Stanley Cup playoffs even with Mario Lemieux, the league's leading scorer and Most Valuable Player.

No replacement was named.

Jets' Kensil resigns after 10 years

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Kensil is leaving as president of the New York Jets, the Associated Press learned today. He will be replaced by Steve Gutman, the NFL club's secretary and administrative manager.

Kensil has been the Jets president and chief operating officer since 1977. Before that, he was league's executive director, and earlier, the league's director of public relations.

Kensil, 57, has been told by doctors to reduce his work load, a source said.

Rich buys team, may start academy

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — National Baseball Congress President Robert E. Rich Jr. said Tuesday he had signed a letter of intent to buy the Class AA Wichita Pilots and planned to expand the NBC and possibly start a baseball academy.

Rich, who also owns the Buffalo Bisons of the American Association, reached a tentative agreement with Larry Schmittou, who brought the Pilots to Wichita in 1984 after the Class AAA Aeros were moved to Buffalo to become the Bisons.

West Germany blanks Denmark, 2-0

GELSENKIRCHEN, West Germany (AP) — Juergen Klinsmann scored in the ninth minute and Olaf Thon scored with three minutes left Tuesday, leading West Germany past Denmark 2-0 in the European soccer championships.

Weather Channel: Drought affects baseball

ATLANTA (AP) — Home runs are down about 25 percent this year because of unusually dry weather, according to the lead reporter for the Weather Channel.

Fer DiAngelo said Tuesday his research indicates that in Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco there has been unusually low rainfall since opening day, leading to a corresponding drop in home runs.

DiAngelo's theory says that since water vapor is lighter than other gases in the air, there is less air resistance when it is humid and baseballs travel farther.

"Baseballs don't carry as far in dry weather, and this year is a lot drier than last," DiAngelo said.

Former Knight aide gets Marycrest post

DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — Ray Swetalla, a one-time assistant to Bob Knight, has been named basketball coach and athletic director at Marycrest College, the school announced Tuesday. Swetalla most recently was the head coach at Wisconsin-Milwaukee. Before that, he was on Knight's staff at Indiana. Swetalla succeeds Joe Heuer, who resigned earlier this year.

Sports

Wrestling

"Climbing the ladder" is more difficult for some than others.

Kistler, who petitioned into this meet after suffering a knee injury during practice that kept him participating in Topeka, said it was a clear disadvantage to have to work up the ladder.

Wrestlers who advance each day will have to make weight each day, a task most grapplers would rather not deal with.

Kistler, a 163.5 pounder, said he will have to remain psyched up for the whole meet.

"Even then," he said, "there's going to be some down points."

The two-time national champion for Iowa said it probably won't be worth it to continue his career if he's defeated this week.

"I feel like this might be my last wrestling tournament," he said.

Chiapparelli, also a former national champion, heads into the meet with his usual confidence, knowing that he went through the ladder during last year's National Sports Festival.

"Basically, the first couple of guys will be a warmup," he said.

Chiapparelli, competing at 180.5 pounds, said he has increased his training, both physically and mentally, in the last three weeks.

"You've got to be ready both ways because I've got to go through the ladder," he said.

Kreimeyer, a former wrestler at Northern Iowa and currently the head coach at Kansas City (Kan.) Bishop Miege High School, took about four months away from his job as an interior finish carpenter to make his attempt at the Olympics.

This is his first attempt at an Olympic berth even though he was in the middle of his collegiate career with the Panthers during the 1984 Olympics.

Goldman, who took fourth at Topeka at 198 pounds, said anything can happen in Pensacola. Wrestlers have met so many times there are expectations about matches.

"Sometimes it's like wrestling a shadow. You've seen them so much," he said.

Goldman said he is trying to bulk himself up for the meet, noting that the difference between him and the three who finished in front of him at Topeka was one of size.

Davis, who recently completed his first season as an assistant coach at Iowa under Dan Gable, cruised through the Topeka meet to the No. 1 seed at 125.5 pounds.

While waiting for his chance on Saturday, he'll be watching his probable opponent just in case something changes in the opponent's style. Davis said he watches films of opponents to notice their tendencies and probabilities.

Already a two-time Olympian in 1980 and 1984, Lewis goes into the final Olympic Trials knowing his mission. He doesn't even have to think about it.

John Smith, who had his string of 131 straight victories broken in Topeka by Lewis, may follow in his brother Lee Roy's footsteps.

Lee Roy Smith lost the battle with Lewis in 1984 that even went as far as the courts.

With the cloud of 1984 far behind, Lewis looks with confidence at the 1988 challenge.

"I think it's going to be me and (John) Smith. And there's no way anybody is going to beat him two out of three except me," he said.

Sailing

13th, with junior Joey Grandgennet at the helm.

Lubben said she wasn't prepared for the choppy waters and the winds that at times reached 35 miles per hour.

"Considering the rough conditions I thought we did well," she said. "We just weren't used to the big waves."

Woodward said the road to the national championships began last fall when he, Vickers, and senior Gunther Lubben sketched out three goals for the 1987-88 season. "We wanted to finish in the top three in the Midwest, to finish in the top 20 in the country, and to go to nationals," Woodward said.

By the end of the season the Iowa team met those standards, finishing second only to Michigan's team in the Midwest women's and dinghy championships.

Trips to both coasts to compete against the best collegiate teams were a key to this year's success, Woodward said. A commitment to year-round training and competition is another distinction between this year's team and teams of the past.

"In February we would put the boats in by the canoe house on the Iowa River," he said, "and the spray from the water would freeze on the boats. You had to watch out for ice chunks floating in the river."

Brown University took the women's trophy and California-Irvine won the dinghy title.

Each year teams from the coasts consistently dominate the competition. Woodward said the main difference between these teams and the Iowa team is many of the coast schools have a varsity sailing team. These schools also fund their teams, which can make a difference in a sport as financially intensive as sailing.

For example, Woodward said Stanford has a director of sailing and a sailing coach on staff. The director simply organizes events and raises funds.

"They probably spend $60,000 each year on staff," Woodward said. "It's hard to compete with that in my situation. It's like trying to imagine Hayden Fry managing the local Hy-Vee and just coaching the football team one a week."

Beth Janacek, membership chairman of Iowa's club, said the group had almost 300 members last summer. The 20 team members are selected from the club, which has a $30 membership fee.

The club will have an informational meeting on the club tonight at 7 p.m. in lecture room 1, Van Allen Hall.

Soviets enjoy day at races

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—About a half-dozen well-dressed men ran up to the betting window at Churchill Downs Tuesday, waving their money in the air.

"Number nine," one said with uncertainty as he handed two $1 bills to the clerk. "Number seven," said another.

With their $2 win tickets in hand, the group, visitors from the Soviet Union, went to watch the race—and try to figure out why they had done.

The rest of 18 visitors chose to sit out the first race at the track, one of the last stops on the first day of their two-day tour of Kentucky.

Vitale avoids a scrubbing

Throw away your toothbrush, Dick Vitale. Forget about buying kneecaps.

During the last college basketball season, Vitale, the television commentator who can talk up a storm that would flatten the corn in Kansas, said that he would clean the floor of Allen Field House with a toothbrush if Larry Brown was still coaching the Jayhawks when next season begins.

Vitale knows his nomads. "I'm brokenhearted," Vitale said. "I was looking forward to scrubbing the floor. I had my toothbrush ready. But I said all along Larry's a soap opera. He's bigger than Luke and Laura on General Hospital."

On Monday, Brown said he is leaving Kansas, where he coached the Jayhawks to the national basketball championship April 4, for the Land of Oz, which happens to be Texas. The good witches of the Southwest are the San Antonio Spurs of the National Basketball Association, who will reportedly pay Brown $3.5 million over five years.

"A once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," Brown called it.

"I don't think there's that much money in Kansas," Athletic Director Bob Frederick said. Brown had five-year contract with Kansas that rolled over every year. Including television shows, a summer camp and a shoe contract, he was thought to total about $500,000 annually.

The day before the Jayhawks beat Oklahoma for the NCAA title at Kansas City, Brown said in answer to a question of why nobody seemed to want the fired Walt Hazzard at UCLA:

"Leaving UCLA was the worst mistake I ever made."

Brown left the NBA to become the third coach at UCLA after John Wooden, who won 10 national titles in 12 years. But Brown never gave himself a real chance to become another Wizard of Westwood. He left UCLA after a 22-10 record in 1979-80 and an appearance in the Final Four, in which the Bruins lost 59-54 to Louisville in the final, and a 20-7 mark in 1980-81.

The UCLA job was the first as a college coach for Brown, who coached Carolina of the old American Basketball Association in 1972-73 and 1973-74, Denver of the ABA for the next three seasons and Denver of the NBA in 1977-78 and 1978-79.

It looked as if Brown was going to rectify his mistake. He visited UCLA three days after Kansas won the title, and officials of the California school scheduled a news conference to announce a new coach.

Back in Kansas the day after talking to UCLA, Brown announced he was staying as coach.

"I just didn't think I could face the kids — and Freddy (athletic director Frederick)," Brown said of his change of heart.

However, after time for thought, perhaps Brown remembered that one of the kids he wouldn't be facing next year at Kansas is Danny Manning, the college player of the year who was drafted by the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Clippers job is not open.

It might also have dawned on Brown that one of the players he will be coaching at San Antonio in the 1989-90 season is David Robinson, the college player of the year two seasons ago at Navy. Robinson is now completing his military obligation.

Of the San Antonio offer, Brown said, "I didn't think it would be fair to my family not consider it."

It wouldn't be, but Larry Brown seems to be a man who feels the ball is always bouncing higher on somebody else's court.

Wrestlers ready for Olympic Trials

By Eric J. Hess
 The Daily Iowan

Six members of the Hawkeye Area Wrestling Klub, including 1984 Olympic medalists Barry Davis and Randy Lewis, will attempt to make the 1988 Olympic freestyle team when final qualifying begins today.

Davis, a 1984 silver medalist, and Lewis, a gold medalist, join Marty Kistler, Rico Chiapparelli, Duane Goldman and Paul Kreimeyer in Pensacola, Fla., at the meet which will determine who will represent the United States in wrestling at the Olympic Games in September at Seoul, South Korea.

Davis and Lewis both qualified as the No. 1 wrestler at their respective weights in a meet in Topeka, Kan., last month. The two will not have to wrestle until Saturday's final round.

However, today the other four wrestlers will be placed in a mini-tournament in their respective

Sailing club finds nationals humbling

By Neil Lewis
 The Daily Iowan

Before the hulls even touched the salty waters at the national championships in California, the Iowa Sailing Club's teams had already accomplished a season-long goal — their first trip to nationals in 15 years.

The dinghy team (two people per boat), and the women's team traveled in early June to their respective championships in San Francisco and Santa Cruz, Calif. Competing in fields of 16 teams, the women turned in a 13th-place finish and the dinghy team came in last.

The women's team's 13th place effort may not sound like much, until one considers that Iowa didn't have a women's team until last fall.

Iowa's top performance was a first-place finish skipped by senior captain Bill Vickers in one of the 15 races of the dinghy competition.

"It's really an accomplishment when you realize some of the people he was competing against were all-Americans and Olympic contenders," Iowa Coach Bob Woodward said.

The women's A crew, captained by senior Kara Lubben, averaged an 11th-place finish. The women's B team turned in an average finish of Detroit's Isiah Thomas, originally listed as questionable for Tuesday's game against the Los Angeles Lakers, drives past Byron Scott during first quarter action in the Pontiac Silverdome. Detroit won, evening the best-of-seven series between the clubs at two games apiece.

Pistons rebound to drop Lakers, even series 2-2

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Adrian Dantley scored 27 points and Detroit outscored the Los Angeles Lakers 25-8 during a second-half spurt that gave the Pistons a 111-86 victory in Game 4 and evened the NBA championship series at two games apiece.

The Pistons took advantage of their superior depth on a hot night, increasing the tempo and drawing fouls, something they could not do in losing Game 3 on Sunday.

Detroit had 46 foul shots Tuesday, compared to 12 in Sunday's defeat. Dantley alone was 13-for-15 from the line.

The Pistons, 8-3 at home in the playoffs, will play host for one more game at the Silverdome on Thursday night before returning to California for Game 6 Sunday and, if necessary, a seventh game two nights later.

The Lakers, who are in the NBA finals for the seventh time in the last nine years, are trying to become the first team since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics to repeat as champions.

Isiah Thomas, who missed practice Monday and Tuesday with a sore back, had 10 points, 12 assists and nine rebounds to lead the Pistons, while Vinnie Johnson added 16 points.

Magic Johnson led the Lakers with 23 points, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Byron Scott had 13 each.

Los Angeles, trailing 58-51 at halftime, hit three of the first four baskets of the second half to get within three points.

But the Lakers hit only two field goals in the last 10:40 of the period, falling behind 83-65 going into the fourth quarter.

The Los Angeles offense was especially dormant after Johnson was called for his fourth foul with 7:03 left in the third quarter. The Lakers scored only four points the rest of the period.

A basket by John Salley in the first minute of the fourth quarter completed the 25-8 spurt and gave the Pistons an 85-65 lead.

Johnson, trying desperately to bring the Lakers back, scored their next nine points, but the Pistons continued to extend the margin. Los Angeles got no closer than 15 in the fourth period.

Detroit is making its first appearance in the finals since moving to Michigan in 1957. The Pistons won
