FBI wiretaps Pentagon in fraud probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two top Pentagon officials whose offices were searched and sealed off in a procurement fraud probe have been using office telephones that were tapped by the FBI, government sources said Wednesday.

The FBI placed a court-authorized wiretap in the office of Victor Cohen, the civilian official responsible for buying tactical battle command, control, communications and computer systems for the Air Force, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

A court-authorized tap also was installed in the office of James Gaines, deputy assistant secretary of the Navy for acquisition management, international programs and congressional support, said the sources.

The offices of both officials were searched and sealed off Tuesday as the FBI issued search warrants Tuesday and Wednesday at 38 locations in 12 states.

The sources added that conversations gained from the wiretaps had led federal investigators to the defense contractors and consultants. The wiretaps and search warrants were part of a probe involving allegations of fraud and bribery by defense contractors, consultants and U.S. government employees.

Law enforcement sources said the investigation involves the alleged sale of information by Pentagon officials to defense contractors through middlemen who were acting as consultants to the contractors.

One warrant sought information from two offices at Cubic Defense Systems Inc. in San Diego, Calif., about a sophisticated electronic pilot training system used by the Air Force and Navy, said William C. Stewart, vice president and general counsel at Cubic Corp.

Stewart said the firm used a consultant whose office files also were searched in the probe, William Galvin of Washington.

Government sources said federal investigators also questioned two Cubic employees who spoke frequently with Cohen.

Schools attack drugs

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board got its first official look Tuesday night at a proposed school district substance abuse program designed to establish a drug- and alcohol-free environment in Iowa City schools.

The board gave its preliminary support to the four-point proposed plan, which includes points on preventive education; a school-based Student Assistance Team; a supportive school environment; and a strictly enforced prohibition of possession, sale, use or trafficking of any controlled substance on Iowa City School District property.

The proposal emphasizes preventive education as the most important component in any successful school-based substance abuse program. By implementing a curriculum for grades K-12 designed to promote students' personal, emotional, intellectual, physical and social growth, the program would strive to increase the awareness of both faculty and students about the dangers of using controlled substances.

UI lures Texas science professor

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

A handicapped professor recently hired as an endowed chair of biocatalysis in the UI Microbiology Department said the UI's willingness to accommodate his disability attracted him to the position.

At their May 25 meeting, the Iowa state Board of Regents approved $639,000 for renovations to provide working space for Professor David Gibson. Gibson is currently director of the Center for Applied Microbiology and a Professor of Microbiology at the University of Texas in Austin, Texas.

"One of the reasons that I am coming to Iowa is that they have really gone out of their way to make things accessible to me," Gibson said.

Gibson, who will join the UI Microbiology staff August 1, said his research focuses on the use of the enzymes of microorganisms to produce compounds of commercial interest or in treatment of hazardous waste.

He said the biocatalysis position is the first endowed chair in the UI Microbiology Department.

UI Pharmacy Professor John Rosazza, who led the search committee for the endowed chair, said Gibson was hired after a worldwide search to fill the position.

"Gibson is one of the most highly respected people in the world in his area," Rosazza said. "He has a marvelous teaching record and is really a tremendous individual."

Rosazza said the UI's financial investment in renovating Gibson's office space would pay dividends later.

"He's handicapped and he has to have access. Renovations always cost money, but it isn't a cost-only outlay in terms of dollars and cents for the university," Rosazza said. "The money Gibson will bring here from his research will be much more than the cost of the initial renovations."

"I hate to talk about these things strictly in terms of dollars and cents," Rosazza said. "The value of bringing Gibson to the University of Iowa is more intellectual. It will bring his research focus and teaching focus to this campus. He brings to the University of Iowa many, many years of excellent research experience."

Gibson was born in Yorkshire, England in 1938. He received his bachelor of science and doctorate from the University of Leeds, England.

Gibson said he has been disabled since a 1983 bird watching trip to the Gulf of Mexico.

"We were down there watching whooping cranes, an endangered species," Gibson said. "One afternoon, I had some severe back pains and by the time I got back to Austin I was completely paralyzed."

Doctors could not explain why Gibson was suddenly paralyzed, but Gibson said a virus was the most likely cause for his paralysis.

Gibson said he hoped the renovations would make the Bowen Science Building more accessible to other disabled persons, adding he would be "a staunch supporter of making the campus more accessible to the handicapped."

UI Services for Persons with Disabilities Coordinator Donna Chandler said she anticipated the renovations would make the Bowen building more accommodating for disabled students as well as Gibson.

"I would assume that they will attempt to make the building's facilities accessible to more than one person," Chandler said.

Chandler said bringing a high profile educator with a physical disability to the UI will increase attention to the problems of the disabled.

"I think anytime that you hire a person with a visible physical disability who is a person of high status, it helps make people with disabilities more visible," Chandler said.

Gibson said the UI position will enable him to advance his interdisciplinary research.

"The University of Iowa has some excellent people in some interdisciplinary areas," Gibson said. "My main interest at the moment is to use interdisciplinary research to attack problems of societal importance."

Gibson said he enjoys teaching both undergraduate and graduate courses in addition to his research.

"At Iowa, as at Texas, my function is as an educator," he said.

Suit delays opening of Lands' End

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

The sign in the window at 10 S. Clinton St. reads "Coming soon . . . Lands' End 'Not Quite Perfect' Store," but for UI students Kate Krause and Mike Moore, it is not soon enough.

Krause and Moore are two of 22 employees who were hired and trained in April to staff a new Lands' End store in Iowa City which was scheduled to open April 23. But due to legal complications, the store has yet to open.

For newly trained Lands' End employees this delay meant the beginning of another job search.

"They told us on the last day of training that there could be a problem and that we might want to look for another job," Moore said. "I waited a few days and then started searching for another job. Luckily, I found one."

"The situation has always been a little 'iffy.' In May they told us to seek other employment, but said that when the Iowa City store opened we would still have a job," Krause said. "I was inconvenienced and had to seek other employment, but I have no negative feelings toward Lands' End. They had no idea this would happen."

The store's opening is being delayed due to a lawsuit filed in Johnson County District Court in late March by the owners of Seiferts clothing store. Grafton Group Inc. — the parent corporation of Seiferts — is seeking to stop Lands' End from leasing Seiferts' former store location on Clinton Street.

Grafton Group Inc. claims in the suit there was a breach of contract when the owners of the property then leased the space to Lands' End, according to Johnson County District Court records.

When Seiferts moved to the Old Capitol Center in early 1984, the storeowners signed an agreement to terminate their lease with the owners of the property, Center City Properties and Dey Building Corp. In that document, both parties agreed that "for a period of seven years after the termination, it (Dey and Center City) will not use or lease the premises for use as a retail store selling women's clothing and related accessories including footwear."

On Feb. 17, 1988, Center City, which was then the sole owner of the property, signed a purchase agreement with Dean Oaks. Oaks received the property title on March 14, said Carol Barker, Oak's realtor.

"The question now is whether the agreement between Seiferts and Center City still applies to the property or whether it was simply an agreement between the tenant and the property owner and is now void," Barker said.

When Lands' End signed a lease with Oaks, "the building was already sold to a third party," according to Kevin Hanick, the realtor for Lands' End.

"The former tenants of the property would like to believe that their agreement with the former owners would carry onto another landlord," he said.

But for now, the case still awaits a decision from the Johnson County District Court.

Regardless of the outcome of the court case, a Lands' End store will soon appear here. "One way or another, our store will be in Iowa City. That is definite," said Carla Argall, who will be manager of the store here.

Researchers from Lands' End chose Iowa City as the Iowa location. See Lands' End, Page 3

Armenian leader demands annexation

MOSCOW (AP) — The Armenian Legislature defied central Soviet Communist Party authorities on Wednesday by siding with demonstrators who for months have demanded annexation of a region in a neighboring republic.

The chairman of the Armenian Supreme Soviet, Grant Voskanyan, emerged from a five-hour session of parliament to announce the decision to thousands of people gathered outside the Legislature's headquarters in Armenia's capital, Yerevan, according to a television journalist.

The parliamentary session was broadcast live on Armenian television, a first for the republic. And the official Soviet news agency Tass reported that the Armenian parliament "decreed to give its consent to the inclusion of the Nagorno-Karabakh Autonomous Region" into the Armenian republic.

The Tass dispatch, also read on the nationally broadcast television evening news show "Vremya," or Time, did not explain the dispute.

In Moscow, several hundred Armenians applauded and raised clenched fists as Tiran Gureghian, the Armenian church representative in the capital, told them the vote had been unanimous to annex the Nagorno-Karabakh region. The region is populated mostly by Armenians who are Christian but is located in neighboring Azerbaijan, which is predominately Moslem.

The vote by the Armenian parliament transforms the issue, which has caused bloody ethnic violence, into a national constitutional crisis because the Soviet constitution requires that the central government and all republics concerned approve any territorial changes.

And central Soviet Communist Party authorities have already rejected Armenian annexation of Nagorno-Karabakh.

Sackter remembered in fifth annual Iowa City celebration

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Today's Fifth Annual Bill Sackter Day celebrates the memory of an Iowa City man who triumphed over a learning disability and endured years of abusive treatment in a mental institution before his death in 1983. "Bill Sackter Day is a time to remember that Bill, despite his disability, was able to provide love, care and inspiration to all who knew the man or his story," UI social work Professor Tom Walz said. Walz said he expects 40 or 50 people to attend the open house that starts at 1 p.m. in Bill's Coffeeshop in North Hall. "Bill had an incredible personality," he said. "He was a very innocent man who communicated a sense of peacefulness and love, although he had every reason not to be that way, having been abused in a mental institution. "Sackter's story is truly inspirational because he symbolized a quality of love and caring for others," Walz said. "Children were attracted to him, he was like the Pied Piper with his harmonica." Mae Driscoll, Sackter's landlady, cook and friend for the eight years that he lived in Iowa City, described Bill as "everybody's friend." "He was a wonderful guy," Driscoll said. "I wish I was getting more renters like he was." At 86, Driscoll isn't feeling well enough to attend the festivities today, but she hopes to go next year. Sackter was brought to Iowa City by Barry Morrow, Sackter's friend and guardian, after 44 years of confinement in a mental institution. Morrow became a staff member at the UI School of Social Work, and he later wrote the television movies telling Bill Sackter's story. Morrow's creations, "Bill" and "Bill: On His Own," will be shown today at 1:30 in North Hall Room 208. According to Walz, Morrow also has a new movie coming out. "The Rain Man" will star Dustin Hoffman and Tom Cruise. Morrow will be the keynote speaker at the Sixth Annual Bill Sackter Day festivities next year. This year's activities will include a dinner at 6:30 p.m. and a program immediately following with informal reminiscences and music. Walz said that there will be no charge for the dinner. However, donations will be accepted to cover the cost of the meal. UI student Robert Finch will be given this year's Friends of Bill Award which is presented to a student or someone from the community who has made a contribution to the purpose and function of Bill's Coffeeshop. Finch organized and arranged "Coffee House," which provides musical entertainment in a smoke-free and alcohol-free environment for students and members of the community.

Council acts on takeover of land

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council took the first step Tuesday night in taking control of an industrial park owned by financially troubled Business Development Inc. The council decided to "buy" the property by agreeing to pay $176,000 in special assessments on the land. The decision means if Business Development Inc. is unable to find a way to pay the assessments within a period of two years and nine months, the city will own the land. "Buy" is a strong term," Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said. "This will give us a certificate of purchase, which would allow BDI to redeem the land within the two years and nine months. If nobody purchases the land, the city will end up owning it." The park is located in southeastern Iowa City. Atkins estimates the value of the land between $400,000 and $500,000. "It's worth substantially more than the special assessment," Atkins said. Business Development Inc. is a civic organization established in 1956 to promote the growth and development of business and industry in the Iowa City area. The company is currently in default to the city on its taxes for the industrial park land and is negotiating financing with several Iowa City banks. Atkins said as far as he knew, the company currently had about $2,000 in its account. He pointed out, when interest and penalties are assessed, the company will end up having to pay "substantially more" than the $176,000 special assessment. While he does not expect any other bidders for the land at this point, Atkins said he was unsure whether the city would end up with the land. "It's hard to say what will happen right now," Atkins said. "If BDI comes up with the financing, they could end up taking over the property again."

School board votes to raise school superintendent pay

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City School Board voted to give Iowa City Schools Superintendent David Cronin a $1,900 raise in salary Tuesday night, but the board held back on extending Cronin's current three-year contract.

Last year, the board renewed Cronin's contract for three years. The board did not add to that contract, but said in a statement that Cronin now has two years remaining in his capacity as school superintendent.

Cronin's raise, added to a $5,192 annuity, will increase his salary from its current $63,000 to $64,900. This year's increase is down $1,100 from last year's increase of $3,000.

Cronin, who is in his 10th year as Iowa City schools superintendent, was also asked by the board to incorporate innovative administrative and leadership techniques in the future. In the statement, read by Iowa City School Board President Lynne Cannon, it was revealed that Cronin and an additional administrator will attend a course this July to learn new management methods.

Board member Orville Townsend, referring to Cronin's future leadership approach, said the board wants to encourage diversity of opinion in the district.

"Basically, I would like to see a form of leadership where everyone has a say-so, where any staff member feels free to make a recommendation and will be respected," Townsend said.

During Cronin's evaluation last year, he was asked by the board to focus on teacher and staff morale problems within the district. Townsend said that he thought great strides have been made in this area in the past year.

"I see the biggest improvement in the past year as being a better staff morale," Townsend said. "I think the staff feels much more comfortable."

The board's statement also suggested that Cronin have more meetings with persons who possess skills or qualities that could add to his contribution as superintendent; attend seminars offered by educational institutions; and participate in events sponsored by school administrators and school board associations at the local, state and national level.

school district and a member of the committee which wrote the proposal, the idea of starting a comprehensive program that could be enforced by the school district has been discussed for several months. She said that the Federal Substance Abuse Grant awarded to the district helped solidify plans to create the program.

"We had heard interest from parents and school officials for a drug and alcohol prevention program before, because it's such a big issue nationally," Spalj said. "When we received the grant, we realized that our current procedures already implemented in the schools weren't enough."

The plan also includes a detailed description of a new concept called the Student Assistance Team, defined as "a multi-disciplinary school-based team composed of certified employees that meets on an ongoing basis to address high-risk issues, including substance abuse."

A group of this nature would be in place in every Iowa City school to provide assistance and intervention resources for students involved in substance abuse, according to the proposal.

At Tuesday's board meeting, the board had only minor suggestions for revising the plan. Most of the revisions concerned rewording sentences referring to the district's role in providing professional help for students who have alcohol or drug abuse problems.

Iowa City School Board President Lynne Cannon praised the proposal after the discussion.

"I think this is a very timely proposal in that obviously the public perception out there is that there is a problem in the schools with substance abuse, and I'm very appreciative that we are doing something about it," Cannon said.

tion for the store "due to the community's acceptance of the store and the need for a Lands' End to be there," Argall said.

"Iowa City represented a good potential market for us," said Terry Wilson, Lands' End vice president of communication.

"This would be our third 'Not Quite Perfect' store on a college campus," he said. "Our stores in Madison and Evanston have been successful, and we thought a store would work in Iowa City."

The store here would carry catalogue returns which have "some imperfections in appearance, but which are high in quality," Argall said. Merchandise will be priced at 40 to 60 percent below the catalogue price, she said.

The store would carry men's, women's and children's items from the catalogue, Argall said.

Ignorance prevails

An extremely alarming and equally sickening set of findings was recently published by the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force concerning the escalating violence perpetrated against members of the gay community in our country. According to Kevin Berrill, director of the organization's Anti-Violence Project, a record 7,008 incidents, ranging from simple assault to murder, were reported to the task force in 1987.

These 7,008 cases represent an increase of 42 percent from the previous year and, infuriating as it may be for those with double-digit IQs, experts are attributing this increase in violence to fears of the heterosexual community concerning the spread of AIDS.

These irrational phobias and unfounded hatred of a relatively large sector of our society is nothing less than abominable. It seems many people have taken the spread of this debilitating and painful disease to be a sign or a calling to intrude into the lives of others with messages delivered with violence.

Despite the occurrence of the relatively recent sexual, social and racial revolutions that took place across the United States and supposedly enlightened our nation and illuminated its shortcomings, plain and undisguised ignorance still prevails. That we are trying to educate the public on the methods of prevention, transmission and precautions concerning the spread of AIDS is all well and good, but obviously we need to do more.

Thus far, education concerning the spread of the AIDS epidemic has been the single greatest weapon we as a nation have wielded in fighting this disease. Now it appears we must use this same process of education to better serve the same people on simpler subjects — such as right and wrong. Perhaps also, the judicial system could help discourage this sort of barbaric behavior and set needed precedents by imposing stiff fines and sentences for crimes of this nature.

No smoking gun

Though it is only half over, 1988 will doubtless be remembered as the year of the war on cigarettes. Curious then that despite so many shots fired at the tobacco industry, so little damage has been done.

Monday's federal court jury award of $400,000 to Antonio Cipollone is a case in point. Cipollone, whose wife died of cancer in 1984 after 40 years of smoking, brought suit against Liggett Group, Inc. on the grounds that they had contributed to his wife's death.

The Cipollone decision is a landmark occasion — the first time a cigarette manufacturer has been found even partly culpable in the death of a smoker.

But if Cipollone's attorneys found a chink in the armor, it was not the gaping chasm they had hoped to discover. Although the jury agreed that Liggett had violated its promise — made in advertisements in the 1950s — to produce a safe product, they rejected the plaintiff's claim of conspiracy by the three major tobacco companies to conceal the dangers of smoking.

Obviously cigarette companies have understood the dangers of smoking for many years, obviously they are at least partly liable for the suffering their products cause.

But changing a pattern of behavior as deeply entrenched in the American psyche as smoking will take more than the lawsuits of bereaved loved ones, the legal equivalent of slamming the barn door after the horse has escaped. For changing behavior — not punishing tobacco companies — is ultimately what the war on cigarettes is about.

Cipollone's award is substantial and deserved. But ultimately, it is compensation for a private grief, having less bearing on the future of smoking than one might think. And if this year is any indication, Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's dream of "a smoke-free society by the year 2000" is optimistic indeed.

Can't get enough

Let's pop a cork to the victory of the glorious revolution! The cold war is over, and we won. Trudeau is right, let's have a parade!

All over the world totalitarian communist regimes are falling all over themselves to install western market-type economic reforms.

China can't get enough of private enterprise, and even the dreaded "democratization" seems likely. As for the Evil Empire, it might as well have hoisted the white flag the minute Michael Jackson and Pepsi went on TV. There's just no way Lenin can stand up against the "Bolshoi Mac."

The minute these poor, oppressed people were exposed to Western values the war was won. The bottom line is that endless sacrifice for the eventual perfection of the proletariat state just can't stand up against Billy Joel and PepsiCo.

Gorbachev and Deng Xiao Peng made the tacit concession of defeat the moment they made moves toward market-style reforms. The rest of the erosion of communism is just a matter of time.

The big foreign policy push now should be toward economically linking these soon-to-be market economies to the West. Then, as they are irrevocably linked to us culturally and economically, the "threat" will disappear as surely as cans of Pepsi in Gorky Park.

Setting the record straight concerning IRA terrorists

Concerning a letter by J. Conroy, The Daily Iowan, April 13, regarding the involvement of the Irish Republican Army in Northern Ireland: As a native of Belfast, it has become apparent to me that several misconceptions concerning Northern Ireland exist in the United States.

First, Northern Ireland is British in the same way England, Scotland and Wales are British, and their citizens have repeatedly voted at general elections that this continue. Secondly, the military presence is not one of occupation, seeking to subjugate an already oppressed people. Rather, this presence is to be found in areas of terrorist activity — such as the border region — to protect the populace from terrorist attacks.

Several points made by Conroy give me cause for concern, as I feel they are inaccurate and must be redressed. To begin with, Long Kesh is a modern prison 20 miles from Belfast. It is unfair to make the allegation of torture without providing supporting evidence. Conroy's letter suggests that a systematic campaign of torture is carried out against IRA prisoners, when in fact no such situation exists. It has long been a tactic of IRA propaganda to levy this allegation against prison officials in the absence of evidence.

Secondly, the Diplock court system was formed in the 1970s for the trial of suspected paramilitary terrorists. The sectarian prejudices which exist in some areas of Northern Ireland mean that a suspected member of the IRA may not receive a fair trial under a predominantly Protestant jury and that the same suspect, if guilty, may not be convicted under a predominantly Catholic jury. In addition, experience has shown that intimidation of jurors and their families does occur.

In place of a jury, three High Court magistrates sit in judgment and, by circumventing social prejudice and intimidation, strive to ensure that justice is served. Many terrorists, Catholic and Protestant, have been convicted or acquitted under this system of trial. Conviction of suspected terrorists in Diplock courts is not grounds for labeling them "unjust."

Further, the activities of the IRA include the shooting and bombing of innocent civilians. Members of this organization have often been intercepted during a bombing mission or shooting incident. It is the duty of the police to apprehend these criminals, which often results in the use of deadly force when the suspects flee the scene. In the majority of the cases, the terrorists are armed. Police and army officers abide by a strict code regarding the use of firearms and are permitted to return fire when fired upon. This scenario does not constitute "execution without trial" as Conroy states in her letter. Finally, Bobby Sands and the other convicted terrorists referred to participated in a hunger strike until their deaths in order to coerce the government of Northern Ireland into recognizing them as prisoners of war rather than treating them as criminals. The government did not give into this demand. To do so would only have legitimized the 15 years of murder the IRA has conducted. The course of action taken by Bobby Sands and his colleagues was their choice and theirs alone. The government of Northern Ireland cannot be held accountable for Sand's decision because it did not give in to this form of blackmail.

The IRA is an organization which has existed for many years and has been engaged in its present murderous tactics for almost two decades. It is time to recognize group members for what they are — terrorists — whose goal is the overthrow of a democratically elected government without regard for human life, whether it be Protestant or Catholic. Any misfortune which befalls members of the IRA is of their own making. They continually harp about injustice! But do they consider justice when planting a car bomb in a shopping district, fire bombing a crowded hotel or shooting unarmed civilians in front of their families?

Colin G. Adair submitted this piece as a letter to the editor. Due to its content and length, it was published in full as a guest opinion.

Suggestions for weathering the summertime dog days

So, you think it's going to be a long, hot summer. Well, you're right. Take a moment to think clearly what that means. For instance, when did you last see a mad dog? Snarling and foaming, snapping at its tail, trolling the streets of your neighborhood for nuns and orphans to maim and kill?

That's right. In the dog days. Not just of August, but of June and July, too.

And when was the last time you got third-degree burns hopping into your car, roughly parking your fanny on a black vinyl seat roughly the temperature of the sun's core?

That's right. It was summer.

Summers in the Midwest have a special brand of meteorological meanness to them. It's easy, standing on the bleached prairie beneath wispy, rainless clouds to believe that somewhere, not too far, the world has actually caught fire.

It's easy to do some snarling, foaming and snapping of your own. Those who keep track of such things say that in summer, you are considerably more likely to be the victim of a homicide — which means you are considerably more likely to commit one, too.

Here, for what it's worth, is a list of things you might try on behalf of mental hygiene when the heat is on and you catch yourself rifling through the cutlery drawer. Call them preemptive strikes.

Go cow-tipping. Maybe this is a time-honored tradition in Iowa, like putting one of those "How 'bout them Hawks?" bumper stickers on your RV, but if you don't know how to tip-cow, it's a simple matter.

Newcomers to the sport of "countrified kings" often confuse cow-tipping with cow-compensating, as in "Thanks, cow, for that milk/cream/calf, here's a little hay for your trouble." Don't be among them. Tipping means tipping-over.

First, with a group of like-minded cronies, drink so much beer you don't know what color you are. (Unless you have cows very handy to where you live, one of your company should probably skip the beer — he or she can be your "designated cow-tip driver.")

Next, find a cow. It is a little-known feature of our bovine friends that they sleep standing up. The dozing Guernsey, heifer or Holstein weighs in at a little under half-a-ton, but its center of gravity is rather high. No occasion for dainty physics equations here, when you're in no shape to do anyway. Just run up, en masse, and knock the stupid thing over. It won't bat a lash, and the sound a Black Angus makes when it hits the heather is among the most pleasing anywhere.

A final word of caution. Never, ever, go bull-tipping. Iowa City isn't Madrid, and you ain't a matador. No one throws roses at a dead bull-tipper, besides.

Drive to the beach. I don't mean Coralville Reservoir, that dingy, beer-can covered stretch of imported sand, brown water and Iron Maiden spewing forth like industrial sludge from pickup radios. I'm talking about the Atlantic Ocean — the "Big Wet." Drink a strong pot of coffee, pack your plastic shovel and Smurf beach towel and point your car in the direction of the rising sun. The 2,000-mile drive should only heighten your enjoyment when you arrive.

Read travel brochures. There isn't a travel agent in the world who would kick you out of the office just for reading. But if they do give you any trouble, just say, "Excuse me, but I'm a very, very rich person, and I'm busy reading."

Remember: Reading about anywhere you aren't in is nice, but right this minute it's winter in Tierra Del Fuego, where the toilets flush counter-clockwise, a beguiling spectacle, though one rarely captured on film in travel brochures.

Watch heroic amounts of television. Sooner or later "Ice Station Zebra" and "A Night To Remember" are bound to come on.

Hang around in bars. Even on the hottest day, bars are dark, cool places. They sell numbing beverages. Even now, a cold beer is waiting with your name on it.

Plus, being sloshed during the day carries the weight of philosophical statement. It's as if you're saying, "Hey, God, I don't think I like what you're up to outside. Not one bit."

Justin Cronin is a graduate student in the Writers' Workshop beehive, not quite, not yet. But wait a week or two.

The flare scare, too, is more than just an ugly rumor. Flared trousers have been spotted in some designer collections, and you know what that means.

Only last week USA Today reported that coffee houses are making a comeback. Is it just a matter of time before we're all clamoring to go to hootenannies?

Those of us old enough to recall those years know the '60s weren't all trash, but you'd never guess it by this alleged '60s revival we're living through. It's the worst of the '60s, all over again.

Well, maybe not quite the worst. They haven't brought back the Freddie. Not yet, anyway. Remember the Freddie? Dances come and dances go; some dances come back again, and some dances never go away.

The Freddie was promulgated by a group called Freddie and the Dreamers, part of the so-called British Invasion, only in their case it was more like the brutish invasion. The Freddie came only once and has never come again, with good reason.

For all I know, though, somebody somewhere may be doing the Freddie as I write this. That's the problem with this stuff. You don't know it's back until it is, and then it's too late. All you can do is brace yourself and hope it goes away again — soon.

But it's safe to say there are some things that will never come back. No, on second thought it's not safe to say that at all. Let's amend that. Let's just say that there are probably some things that won't come back, that probably shouldn't come back, but who knows? Things like:

Ironing hair. At some point in the '60s we let down our flips and our bouffants and our beehives and draped our hair over our ironing boards in order to press it as stick-straight as possible. Fashion magazines actually published tips on the best ways to iron hair. Permanent press was the recommended setting.

Platform shoes. Here's one of those bad ideas that keeps coming back every 20 years or so. Are they due again? Close your eyes and picture Sonny Bono in full '60s plumage. Did we learn nothing the last time around?

Smoking banana skins. Back then some people would go to any lengths to get high, but this was ridiculous, even by '60s standards.

Love beads. Does anybody know what distinguishes a love bead from a regular bead? Or were love beads strictly in the eye of the beholder?

Bell-bottoms. If flares are on the way back, can bell-bottoms be far behind? Say it can't be so. Picture Sonny Bono again. The trousers are as tight as possible in the vital parts, then flare wildly to cover the platform shoes.

Shirts with wide collars. The bell-bottom concept applied to the torso. The shirt fit like a second skin, the collar had a two-foot wingspan. Sonny Bono, again, set the standard.

Fu Manchu moustaches. This is the last time I'll bring up Sonny Bono, but it seems he embodied so much of what was awful about the style of the late '60s.

Crocheted clothes. It was fashionable for a while in the '60s to look like a cross between an afghan and a flea-market toilet paper holder. No one knows why.

UI's Elderhostel program takes off

By Stephen Horan
 The Daily Iowan

The number of older students returning to school has steadily risen over the past decade, and if the UI's Elderhostel program is any indication, those figures will continue to climb.

The program, a writing workshop for elderly students, will have a total enrollment of roughly 1,500 students over the summer session.

According to the workshop's co-founder, Peggy Houston, the program is extremely successful and appears to improve every year.

In the last five years, the Iowa City program has focused exclusively on writing. Previously, the subject matter ranged from Galileo's work in astronomy to Shakespearean theater.

The session in progress offers students the opportunity to write poetry and critique their peers' material in either one- or two-week sections. Future sections will focus on short story and novel writing.

"Most beginners start out in the one-week program, while returnees opt for the two-week section. It's not exactly a pilgrimage, but it can be addictive," poetry student Ray Apel said.

Although the Elderhostel program is a national organization, the Iowa City program is the only one specializing in writing. Citizens over 60 can apply at the organization's headquarters in Boston for admittance into the program.

"When I applied for the program I was asked to submit five examples of my work. Still, this doesn't affect the selection process, which I believe is random," poetry student Walt Johler said.

The students' past experience in the areas they select varies widely. Students with many published works to their credit mix easily with elders less experienced in writing.

Unfortunately, not all applicants can be admitted into the program, and even returnees may face difficulties in being placed. Johler recalled being the 10th name on a long waiting list.

The students are staying in Stanley Hall, which allows them to participate in a number of on-campus activities, such as today's Bill Sackter Day celebration.

"The manner in which the workshop is run borders on a family," Apel said. "The driving force behind each workshop is Peggy Houston. The fact that she can recall each participant involved in the workshop is amazing."

At the end of each session students are invited to contribute samples of their work to a book published by the UI. The book can be purchased for $8.

Mother of slain infant speaks on radio show

MUSCATINE, Iowa (AP) — The mother of a 7½-month-old baby found killed and dismembered said she feels brutalized on all sides — by the media, the police and the community of Muscatine.

"There's no punishment worse than I have now," Mary Hayes told the Muscatine Journal Wednesday. "My baby is dead and gone."

Several Muscatine residents have publicly criticized Hayes, 24, for leaving her daughter, Amber Marie, with her live-in boyfriend, Leslie Ray Brockert. Brockert, 28, has been charged with first-degree kidnap. An in connection with the disappearance and death of the baby.

When a Muscatine radio station talk show host told listeners he would not leave his child with someone like Brockert, Hayes called the radio station, KWPC, to tell her side of the story.

"I've known Les Brockert ever since I was 10 years old. . . If I thought he'd do something like this to my baby, I'd never leave him with her. . . Nobody knows the hell I've lived through and nobody has the right to blame me for the death of my baby because I was a good mother," Hayes said.

Hayes left the baby with Brockert last Wednesday night when she went out with a friend. When she returned after midnight her daughter was missing.

In response to criticism from a caller Tuesday night, Hayes said, "Did that woman know I sat home for two months with that baby and I needed a break? I'm only 24 years old. Do I have to sit in my house all my life?"

"Is it a sin to go have a break, to get away?" Hayes asked.

The baby's mother said she knew of Brockert's criminal record, but never suspected he would turn to violence.

"Burglary is a far cry from kidnaping and murder isn't it?" she said.

But now, Hayes said, she feels hatred, hurt and confusion regarding Brockert. He was abused as a child, but yet was capable of "acts of love," toward the children, Hayes said Wednesday.

"He would treat them to ice cream and sit up with Amber when I was trying to get some sleep," Hayes said.

"I don't know what happened; I don't know why," she said.

Hayes also faulted police for not notifying her promptly of details in her daughter's death.

Youth dies in freak baseball accident

SUTHERLAND, Iowa (AP) — A 10-year-old little league outfielder has died of a blood clot that formed after he was hit on the head by a thrown baseball.

"It was just a freak accident," said Linda Lottman, Sutherland, mother of Matt Lottman.

The boy was playing catch at a friend's house last Thursday when he was hit on the side of the head. A doctor told the parents, Linda and Gary Lottman, that Matt appeared to be all right but that he should be kept quiet.

Mrs. Lottman said that evening, Matt fell asleep and went into a coma. He was taken by air ambulance to the Sioux City Marion Health Center where doctors operated on a blood clot on his brain.

He died Monday afternoon.

"It was just something that developed slowly," the mother said. "There was nothing they could do. It's a terrible shock. By the time we noticed the symptoms, it was too late."

Myron Albertson of Waterloo, executive director of the Iowa Head Injury Association, said it's rare for baseballs to cause death but that head injuries must be taken seriously.

He said the public, accustomed to seeing television characters knocked unconscious with little lasting effect, underestimates the brain's vulnerability.

"People believe that the brain is a sturdy organ that can't be injured," he said. "That's absolutely false."

Iowa high court orders new trial in murder case

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Supreme Court has reversed a murder conviction that stemmed from a $5.25 Southern Iowa robbery, ruling the man convicted should have had a chance to convince jurors that alcohol spurred the slaying.

The court Wednesday ordered a new trial for Jerry Dean Broughton, who was convicted in the rural Lucas County slaying of Harold Horner during the robbery.

The slaying took place in December 1979, but Broughton, now 36, wasn't arrested until 1986. He was convicted last February.

During his trial, Broughton had attempted to convince jurors that he had an alibi placing him elsewhere at the time of the slaying. Failing that, he wanted jurors instructed that his drinking on the day of the slaying should have lessened his responsibility.

A lower court judge refused, noting that those two arguments weren't consistent.

"Intoxication, of course, is not a complete defense to a crime," the court noted. "It is relevant, however, in proving the person's specific intent."

The court said judges have "a duty to instruct on all issues raised by the defense."

Broughton was convicted of first-degree murder, and one element of that crime is premeditation.

Court records said the case began when Broughton and two other men were driving around Iowa and Missouri and decided to rob Horner in his home just outside Russell.

"A coin purse yielded $5.25, which they took," the court noted.

The other two men left the house, heard a shotgun blast and went back in to find Horner lying on the floor, court records said.

Prosecutors had defended the judge's ruling, arguing that using an alibi on one hand while claiming that drinking reduced responsibility on the other were not merely inconsistent but mutually exclusive.

"Broughton concedes that the defenses of alibi and voluntary intoxication are inconsistent," the court noted. "The state contends they are more than inconsistent; they necessarily disprove each other; and to allow a defendant to affirmatively deny involvement in the crime, yet receive an instruction on an affirmative defense such as intoxication only serves to encourage perjury and confusion."

The court said, however, the lawyers have a right to pursue differing strategies at a trial in order to assure that their clients get the best possible defense.

"Even assuming the defenses were inconsistent, the decision to advance two differing theories of non-culpability is a trial tactic or strategy," the court said.

The court said evidence about Broughton's mental condition could be crucial to a jury's decision on what specific charge to settle on.

"We believe the same rationale applies in the present case," the court said. "The jury may disbelieve Broughton's alibi evidence yet believe that not all of the specific elements required for first-degree murder, particularly an intent to kill, were present."

The court noted that "evidence of intoxication was not particularly strong" but conceded that "we cannot say that a rational fact-finder could not conclude Broughton was intoxicated to the point of being unable to form specific intent to kill."

Conviction is upheld in multi-state abduction

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of a man charged with the multi-state kidnapping of his girlfriend, son and another woman and the murder of his girlfriend's father.

The court rejected a claim by Ernest Frederick Walters that his trial should have been moved even farther from the Cedar Rapids area where the case drew widespread publicity.

"There was extensive news coverage of this case, and it was well-documented in the proceedings and exhibits," the court noted. "But the record does not disclose, as defendant would have it, sensational reporting of a routine crime."

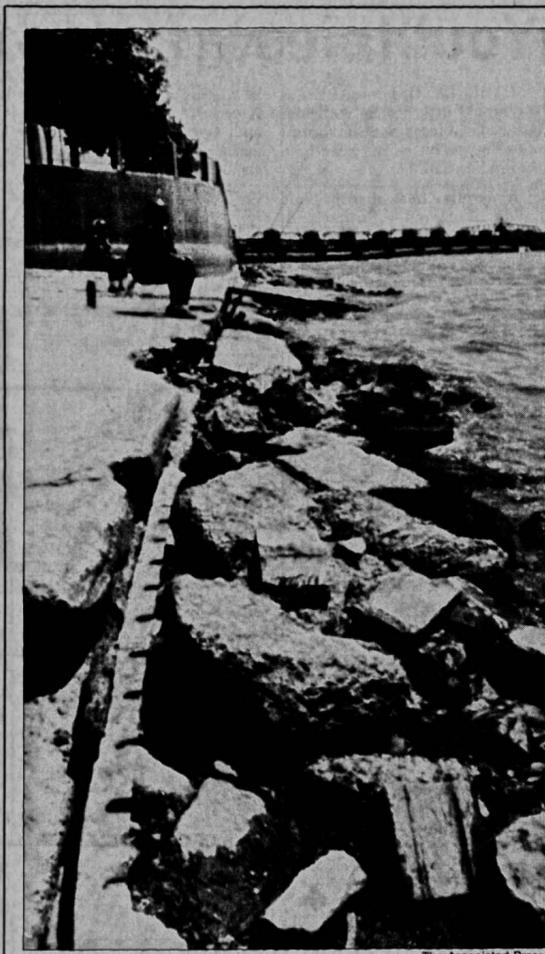

"Rather, there was routine reporting of a sensational crime," the court said. "We find nothing in the news coverage which went beyond direct relating of unvarnished facts."

"There is no evidence that the newspaper articles or television and radio broadcasts were unfair or inaccurate," the court concluded.

The court said publicity about a case must be "so pervasive and inflammatory that prejudice must be assumed" before a new trial can be ordered and said that wasn't the case in Walters' trial.

Walters sought to have the trial moved from Jackson County because of the publicity. The trial was shifted to Muscatine County, but Walters argued that wasn't far enough because Muscatine County was still within the viewing range of Cedar Rapids television stations.

"Merely exposure to news accounts does not amount to a substantial likelihood of prejudice," the court said.

Drought continues under cloudy sky

DES MOINES (AP) — As clouds teased Iowa on Wednesday with a threat of thundershowers, cattle farmers were sending cows to slaughter and mowing roadside ditches for weeds to feed remaining animals trying to survive one of the worst droughts in more than 50 years.

"This drought is probably the last thing a farmer in the state of Iowa needs to see," said Peter Brent, who operates a hotline for troubled farmers.

While a dry winter followed by a dry spring has already created a crisis for livestock farmers, those who rely on row crops such as corn and soybeans are still holding out for rain to salvage 1988 yields.

Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, toured farms in his northwestern Iowa district over the weekend.

"I saw stressed corn," he said Wednesday. "The farmers weren't quite concerned yet, but everyone said 10 days could make a difference between having a serious condition and a critical condition."

"There is potential damage to a lot of row crops if we don't get some rain."

"If we get 35 an acre, we'll be tickled to death," he said. "We need a week of rain."

Closely-watched clouds crossed Iowa Tuesday and Wednesday, but substantial rain skirted the state.

"For cattle producers, things are critical. As far as the corn and bean crop, it's kind of borderline right now. We're probably looking at a reduction in yields," Brent said. "The majority of crops I saw look pretty good."

Brent's hotline, sponsored by the rural advocacy group Prairiefire, originally was intended to help farmers struggling to cope with the farm debt crisis of the 1980s. He's now fielding different queries from farmers, but says their pleas are not as urgent.

"It's not a disaster as of yet," Brent said.

However, weather forecasters see no significant relief in sight for Iowa and the rest of the Corn Belt that stretches from Missouri and Iowa through Ohio.

That area will get below-normal precipitation in the next 30 days, while dry conditions should ease with above-normal rains in the South and southern Plains states, according to a forecast by the National Weather Service.

"I am not encouraged by these 30- and 60-day forecasts," said Grandy, who also noted that persistently strong winds have contributed to the drying of Iowa.

"In Iowa, nobody has taken into consideration the high winds that probably dry out land more than anything else," he said.

Just west of Cedar Rapids, well-drillers are being kept busy digging for water in Twin Knolls, an area where new homes are being built.

18-year-old found guilty in murder

DES MOINES (AP) — An 18-year-old man described by prosecutors as a man who has a violent hatred of homosexuals was convicted of first-degree murder Wednesday in the stabbing death of Des Moines teacher Kenneth Eaton last February.

Gary Titus of Des Moines showed no emotion as the verdict was read. Titus testified that his accomplice, James Michael Green, was the one who stabbed Eaton, but the jury ruled that Titus was guilty.

Titus will be sentenced next month. The mandatory sentence for first-degree murder is a life term in prison with no chance for parole.

Smith said Titus has an intense hatred for homosexuals and killed Eaton after he and Green met Eaton at a popular gathering place for homosexuals in Des Moines. Eaton was a homosexual.

Palestinians battle despite cease-fire

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Fighting broke out between Palestinian factions in west Beirut's two refugee camps Wednesday and a Palestinian official said Libyan military observers will be deployed there to enforce a truce.

Also on Wednesday, the conservative Ad-Diyar newspaper reported that Syria and Iran reached an agreement calling for the gradual release of 18 foreign hostages held by Shiite Moslem extremists in Lebanon. The daily gave no details and there was no way to verify the report.

Police said six people were injured at the Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh camps after clashes began at dawn, with skirmishes continuing until nightfall.

The U.S. stood at 19 dead and 101 wounded since the new round of fighting flared last week between Fatah — the mainline faction headed by Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat — and Fatah-Uprising, a breakaway faction headed by Col. Saed Mousa with Syrian support.

Palestinian sources in the Syrian capital of Damascus, speaking on condition of anonymity, had said Tuesday that a truce between the two factions had been successfully worked out.

Israeli soldiers see brutality on film

TEL AVIV, Israel — Israeli soldiers will be shown a film documenting their abuses of reporters and Arabs in the occupied lands to discourage such behavior and show troops how news reports of brutality damage Israel's image.

The 22-minute army film, entitled "The Camera Sees All," shows disturbing images of troops responding to stone-throwing by beating Arabs, vandalizing their shops and tying Palestinian children to jeeps.

The images "prove there is no law and order and that the army has lost control," narrator Michael Karpin of Israel Television says in the film.

The army showed the film to foreign journalists on Wednesday at the military's main headquarters in Tel Aviv.

Army officials said commanders were ordered this week to show the film to all soldiers serving in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Human rights violations rampant

LONDON — U.N. declarations on human rights are violated by more than half of the organization's 159 member states, Amnesty International said today.

The London-based human rights organization said that since January it had taken up 487 cases in 85 countries of people jailed for the non-violent exercise of their rights as defined by the Universal Declaration of Human Rights.

This brings the number of cases investigated by the group to 3,352 cases in the 85 countries, said a release on Amnesty International's work during the first four months of this year.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights, adopted by the U.N. General Assembly in 1948, promises civil, political, economic, social, and cultural rights for all people.

Amnesty said it had issued 115 urgent appeals in the first four months of 1988 to help more than 450 prisoners in 45 countries whom it feared were at risk of torture, death in prison, or other flagrant violations of international norms.

Soviets cancel tests, books flawed

MOSCOW — Soviet educators have canceled history exams scheduled this month for students finishing middle school because new official disclosures show the students' textbooks to be inaccurate and untruthful.

"Canceling the exams was the only possible sober and honorable decision," the government daily Izvestia said last week. "Everyone — teachers, parents, students — can feel only relief and thanks toward those who had the boldness to say that these exams would not take place."

The new disclosures about previously taboo chapters of Soviet history have been among the most spectacular developments of Communist Party chief Mikhail Gorbachev's campaign for "glasnost," or openness.

"Children read some things in the papers, then they read something in their textbook that is completely different. They don't know what to believe," said Igor Parabrin, editor of international relations for the educational newspaper Uchitel'skaya Gazeta.

Ariane rocket launch successful

KOUROU, French Guiana — The European Space Agency launched its new, powerful generation of Ariane rocket today, lifting three satellites into orbit and showing future customers that the vehicle is ready for service.

Ariane-4 blasted off without a hitch from the European Space Agency space center on the north coast of South America at 7:19 a.m. Sixty-six seconds later the first-stage boosters fired according to plan, with the final, third-stage rockets firing at 5 minutes 49 seconds after takeoff.

The space shot was designed by Arianespace, the agency's commercial arm, to demonstrate the space readiness of the Ariane-4, Europe's biggest and most versatile rocket ever.

Twelve minutes and 46 seconds after takeoff, the rocket reached orbit with its international payload, the European Meteosat-2P and AMSAT-3C and the American PAS-1.

Computer terminal law passed

HUPPAUGE, N.Y. — The nation's first law designed to protect workers from eyestrain and other complaints associated with long-term use of computer terminals could serve as a model for other measures, proponents say.

"There's no doubt that this will greatly encourage many labor groups to put this on the top of their legislative agendas," said Louis Slesin, editor of VDT News, a New York-based industry newsletter that estimates 15 million workers use computers nationwide.

Stock market slow, gains little

NEW YORK — The stock market finished higher Wednesday as a spurt of buying minutes before the close helped to solidify the sharp gains posted in the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which jumped 25 points Tuesday, managed to inch past that level by 6.93 points to close at 2,131.40, its second post-crash high in as many days.

Volume on the floor of the NYSE came to 150.26 million shares, down from 227.15 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trading at regional exchanges and on the over-the-counter market, totaled 175.70 million shares.

Peruvian agitators execute U.S. man

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Leftist rebels dragged a U.S. agricultural adviser and a Peruvian colleague from their farm truck and killed them, officials said Wednesday. It was the second death of an American in Peru's insurgency.

Police Col. Cirilo Pacheco said a group of Shining Path rebels halted the agronomists' pickup truck Monday evening on an isolated road in the central Andes Mountains, checked their papers and then executed each man with two gunshots in the back of the head.

Pacheco and the National Agrarian Research Institute identified the victims as Constantin Gregory, 38, of the United States, and Gustavo Rojas, a 35-year-old Peruvian. Gregory's hometown was not immediately available.

The two men and Gregory's American wife, who is expecting a baby, were living in Aramachay, a hamlet without electricity or piped water 15 miles north of Huancayo, a major city in the central Andes 125 miles east of Lima, institute officials said.

Gregory's wife, whom the officials could not immediately identify, was not in the pickup truck.

The attack came four days after pro-Cuban guerrillas fired three mortar rounds at the residence of U.S. Ambassador Alexander Watson in Lima, causing minor damage but no injuries.

Although the embassy refused on the record to identify the victims or confirm their nationalities, an embassy official said: "Everything points to it involving an American citizen, but we can't be sure until we positively identify the bodies."

The Shining Path, an 8-year-old Maoist insurgency, has frequently assassinated development workers in Peru's impoverished highlands in an effort to spawn economic chaos.

Aid convoy faces uncertain future

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — A convoy of aid to Nicaragua sat poised at the Mexican border today as a congressman and notables including Jesse Jackson and actor Ed Asner urged the U.S. government to allow it to pass.

The 106 members of the Veterans' Peace Convoy to Nicaragua were ready for a showdown today with federal officials at Laredo's No. 1 bridge spanning the Rio Grande, said Gerry Condon, one of the convoy's organizers.

About 200 convoy members and supporters held a rally Tuesday night at its northern Laredo camp. Many shouted, "Viva Nicaragua libre!" ("Long live free Nicaragua!") when candles were lit during the rally, which featured leftist folk songs and an appearance by Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas.

"I'm here to do what I can to see to it that the convoy gets across the border and to Nicaragua to deliver the humanitarian aid that they have," Leland said.

Leland met earlier Tuesday with U.S. Customs officials in Laredo and spoke by phone with Treasury Secretary James Baker, trying to persuade him to ease the ban on donating vehicles to Nicaragua, said convoy member Tom Hansen.

The convoy left from four different regions of the United States on May 21 and has been camped in Laredo since June 7.

Vice president responds to polls

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush on Wednesday blamed his poor showing in recent public opinion polls on a primary season filled with Democratic candidates "shooting at you every single day" and held out the possibility that he might name a woman as his running mate.

The vice president, in an interview with the Associated Press, also said that while he would pursue President Ronald Reagan's efforts for the rebel Contra forces in Nicaragua, "I'd want to do it practically to see: Let's be sure what we do will pass."

The administration has repeatedly encountered broad congressional opposition to its attempts to provide military assistance to the Contras.

And, while the all-but-certain Republican nominee said he wasn't advocating a change in direction from that policy, he suggested he would try to work more closely with Congress.

"I'd love to find a way to take a package to the Hill and get it passed," Bush said.

Bush insisted that he still hasn't given thought to a possible running mate, saying he will wait until after the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta, July 18-21.

"The number-one criterion is will this person be capable of taking over if something happened to the president? Enough experience, enough stature, to do that. But, having said that, man or woman, I would say: Look, the gender question was crossed when Geraldine Ferraro went on the (Democratic) ticket (in 1984)."

Asked if he would name a woman if polls suggested such a ticket would help him, Bush said: "Anyone who would help me in the polls would be a factor — a man or a woman."

Recent polls also show Bush receiving high negative ratings, but the vice president said, "I think the answer on the polls is, if there are negatives there, to turn them into positives by getting out what I feel on the issues."

"But when you're sitting out there in a primary process with two candidates shooting at you every single day and a lot of editorial media attention on controversial matters, I think it would be surprising if things were any different," he said.

"So I feel fairly relaxed about that. I think we have time to be sure that a positive image is out on who I am and what I feel and where I'll take the country. And I'll readily concede that some of that's not that clear yet," he said.

Dukakis focuses on crime fight

FRAMINGHAM, Mass. (AP) — Democrat Michael Dukakis, portraying himself as an effective crimefighter, said Wednesday that misguided Reagan administration action in fighting illegal drugs was "one of the reasons I'm running for the presidency."

The Massachusetts governor and probable Democratic presidential nominee touted the declining Massachusetts crime rate.

He also accused President Ronald Reagan of hampering the war on drugs by cutting Coast Guard funds. "It energizes me on the presidential trail," Dukakis said of the reduced anti-drug patrols.

"How can we possibly be serious about fighting a war on drugs when we're cutting Coast Guard patrols by 55 percent," he told reporters outside the state police academy. "It's that kind of thing — one of the reasons I'm running for the presidency."

Dukakis, who is to begin a Southern campaign swing Thursday during which he will continue to focus on crime, was at the police academy to meet with his anti-crime council and salute the state's Violent Fugitive Arrest Squad, which has made more than 700 arrests in its 2½ years of existence.

Asked if he felt his likely Republican opponent, Vice President George Bush, would be able to portray him as being soft on crime, Dukakis cited his state's crime rate, which has dropped 14 percent in the past four years.

Then, lumping Bush with Reagan, he added: "They've got lots of answers to do for what's been happening over the past eight years."

The governor broke into a broad smile when asked what he thought of Bush's comment that he was a "Brookline, Mass., liberal."

"If you come from Milton..." Dukakis said before breaking off in mid-sentence. Milton, in the same county as Brookline, is Bush's birthplace.

Jackson unsure of No. 2 position

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jesse Jackson said he held a "meaningful preliminary discussion" on Wednesday with the Michael Dukakis' campaign aide interviewing potential running mates, but said he has not decided if he wants the spot.

Following a meeting with the Congressional Black Caucus, in which members urged him to seek the post, Jackson revealed he had talked to Dukakis' campaign chairman Paul Brontas earlier in the day about the matter. But he added, "I do not choose to talk about the meeting at all."

"It was a very meaningful preliminary discussion," he told a news conference.

Dukakis, who already has the delegate strength to win the Democratic presidential nomination at the party's convention in July, has designated Brontas to prospect for running mate possibilities.

Dukakis has previously said that Jackson will be considered, but not that he will get any special consideration by virtue of his runner-up status.

Jackson made clear he would like the offer to be made to him, although he has declined to say that publicly, instead stating that it is Dukakis' option.

Black Caucus Chairman Mervyn Dymally, D-Calif., said there was a consensus among the caucus members that "we ought to urge Reverend Jackson to seek the second spot on the ticket."

He said Jackson reacted privately with the congressmen as he does publicly on the issue and did not go further in disclosing whether he would accept.

"I've not yet made that decision," Jackson told reporters. "I have stated very clearly I've earned the right of serious consideration."

Despite all the talk of the vice presidency, Jackson has not officially conceded the presidential nomination to Dukakis. He said earlier Wednesday that he has no intention of throwing the governor his support before the convention and said of his former Democratic rivals who are lining up behind Dukakis: "They lost and surrendered. I did not. We're not in the same category."

The Black Caucus members said they want to meet with Dukakis and lobby him to put Jackson on the ticket as his running mate.

"We come in with a candidate... It seems to me that Governor Dukakis has to come up with a better candidate or at least be prepared to share with us why he does not believe that Reverend Jackson is the best candidate," if he does not choose Jackson, said Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y. He added "nobody in this room" can think of a better choice than Jackson.

IRA bombing ends race; 5 British soldiers killed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb exploded in a crowd gathered for the end of a footrace Wednesday night, killing five soldiers and injuring at least 11 other people, police said.

The Irish Republican Army claimed responsibility for the bombing and for the shooting death earlier Wednesday of a Protestant loyalist paramilitary chief in Belfast.

Belfast police said 10 of the injured in the bombing were believed to be civilians and that the 11th wounded was a soldier.

The bomb exploded in a blue truck in the marketplace of central Lisburn, the main base of the British army in Northern Ireland, 7 miles southwest of Belfast.

Police called it a "no-warning bomb" and said it went off shortly after 3 p.m. CDT.

A number of soldiers were taking part in the race, and the soldiers killed were all in an unmarked military van located near the truck.

The death toll was the highest against the army since the outlawed IRA killed 18 soldiers of the Parachute Regiment in 1979 with two bombs at Warrenpoint, Northern Ireland.

Reporter Daryl Fitzsimons of

The Associated Press

Soldiers stand at the scene of a bombing in Lisburn, N. Ireland that killed at least five people, four of whom were British soldiers.

Downtown Radio, a Belfast station, who was at the scene, reported: "The bomb exploded ... blowing the heart out of the town center. The device in a lorry (truck) went off as the fun-run race was about to end."

Eyewitness Sandford Fitzpatrick said on the broadcast: "I saw one person in the middle of the road with blood coming out of his head.

... It's absolute chaos here. ... There were thousands of people in the town for the race from all over Ireland."

The man killed in Belfast earlier Wednesday was identified by the Royal Ulster Constabulary as Bobby "Blood" Seymour, 33, a known gunman for the outlawed Ulster Volunteer Force.

Pentagon takes larger role in effort to halt illegal drugs

WASHINGTON (AP)—America's defense contractors will soon be ordered to provide a "drug-free workplace" for their 3.2 million employees, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci told Congress on Wednesday.

Carlucci's announcement came as he and the nation's uniformed military leaders voiced strong opposition to new moves by Congress to increase the Pentagon's role in the country's effort to halt the use of illegal drugs.

The hundreds of defense contractors would be required to develop extensive education programs about the dangers of drugs and employees with security clearances could also be required to undergo mandatory drug testing, Carlucci said.

An estimated 3 million workers on Pentagon contracts have security clearances of various types. Carlucci did not say if the testing would be required of all employees with clearances or just those with the more sensitive access clearances.

The nation's 2.1 million uniformed military personnel are now subject to random, mandatory drug testing, Carlucci told a pair of congress-sional panels those tests have been a key factor in sharply reducing drug abuse among the military services.

"We have told our soldiers that drugs will not be tolerated in the military, and reported drug use has decreased at least 67 percent since 1980," Carlucci said. "Ask our commanders and they will tell you that drug testing works."

He said that "it would be my intent to issue" the regulation covering contractors but did not say exactly when the order will be made.

Carlucci testified before an unusual joint meeting of the House and Senate Armed Services committees, which are now trying to work out a compromise version of a Pentagon budget bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

In its version of the bill, the House voted to tell Reagan to order the Pentagon to essentially seal the U.S. borders against illegal drug trafficking.

The Senate bill did not go quite as far, but it did require the Pentagon to provide more intelligence help to civilian anti-drug agencies and also granted arrest powers to Navy officers aboard warships which stop suspected drug boats in international waters.

"None of the interdiction approaches, in and of themselves, will work," Carlucci said. "I believe that these are not solutions to the problem, but rather the result of our rising frustration at our inability to find a real solution."

Reagan suggests counsel for Wright ethics investigation

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ronald Reagan suggested Wednesday that "everyone would feel that it was more proper" if House Speaker Jim Wright were investigated by an independent counsel instead of the House Ethics Committee.

The committee is looking into allegations by Rep. Newt Gingrich, R-Ga., and others that Wright, D-Texas, has violated House ethics rules by misusing his office for personal gain and improperly intervening with federal regulators.

Some Republicans, including Vice President George Bush, have suggested that it would be better to have the investigation conducted by an independent counsel.

Reagan, asked whether he agreed, said: "I have to wonder if it should not be an independent counsel from the standpoint of the relationship of the speaker to the majority of the committee. And I think everyone would feel that it was more proper if it was done by an investigator outside — an appointed investigator."

Although Reagan spoke of the majority of the committee, the panel is actually evenly divided among Republicans and Democrats, with six members from each party.

House Majority Leader Tom Foley, D-Wash., a staunch defender of the speaker, said, "I think it is further indication of the politicization of this matter, which is most unfortunate."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president was "not talking any specifics" in terms of what kind of independent investigation should be undertaken but was "just saying he thinks an independent investigation is appropriate."

Fitzwater said he believed the only legal possibility would be an independent investigator appointed by the committee. He said there was no legal authority for an investigation of the speaker by an independent counsel of the kind set up by law to look into allegations of wrongdoing by officers of the executive branch. The Justice Department has challenged the constitutionality of that law.

Reagan hints at more Contra aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ronald Reagan said Wednesday it was vital that the United States "restore the threat" of military pressure on the Sandinista government in Nicaragua to bring about democratic reforms.

While Reagan said he had not decided whether to ask Congress for a new military aid package for the Contra rebels in the wake of their collapsed peace talks with the Sandinistas, he did say, "I think it is so apparent that this is what is necessary, it would be ridiculous for us — for anyone — to oppose it."

The president renewed the prospect of pushing a military aid package as leaders of the Contra resistance met with members of Congress and Secretary of State George Shultz, who said the peace-making progress "needs an extra shove."

Shultz also said he thought there was increasing sentiment in Congress in favor of new military aid. The president, in an interview with journalists from each of the seven countries taking part in the economic summit beginning Sunday in Toronto, Canada, said, "It is apparent that the Sandinistas are not going to democratize."

"We went along with the peace plan that was agreed to among all the Central American states ... to give it a chance. ... They're resisting at the same time that they demand the Contras set a date for laying down their arms. But they won't set a date for when they will meet the other terms of that peace plan," the president said.

Reagan said it has become clear the Sandinistas feel they need to make no concessions to the Contras in the areas of democratic reform and human rights. "Now, if we want them to continue meeting and arriving at the settlement that the peace plan was supposed to bring about, well, I think then that we've got to restore the threat to the Sandinistas — that they must see that the people of Nicaragua do have a force there that can be used to bring about an equitable settlement," Reagan said.

The cease-fire agreed to in late March is still being observed by the Sandinistas and the Contras, although each side has accused the other of violating it.

Discussing the breakdown of peace talks, Shultz said, "the reality of the situation is beginning to sink in" in Congress. "Whether it has sunk in to the point where the results of a vote would be changed remains to be seen."

Wearing seat belts saves lives. And in Iowa, it's our law.

Playwright Joe Orton's work featured in summer festival

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

This summer, University Theatres brings British playwright Joe Orton's work to Iowa City, beginning on June 24 when the Joe Orton Summer Theatre Festival commences with a performance of his "What the Butler Saw."

Orton had only completed three full-length plays and a handful of one-acts when he was murdered at the age of 34 by his homosexual lover. Despite this relatively small body of work, Orton had achieved quite a bit of fame in his brief life, even working on a film script for The Beatles during his peak in the 1960s.

Eric Forsythe, artistic director of the summer festival, said Orton's work has given rise to a term all its own: "Ortonesque" — Kind of a comedy of menace. In other words, this is a funny, farcical view of menacing, frightening things.

Forsythe's involvement includes directing "Entertaining Mr. Sloane," a comedy which won the London Drama Critics Award as Best New Play of 1964 and which concerns a lodger coerced into blackmail and murder. Orton's other plays likewise court laughter on the most sensitive or unsettling of subjects.

For example, "Loot" involves a young bank robber who hides the stolen money in the coffin in which his mother had been lying in state, hanging the body upside down in the closet when police come searching. The slapstick elements are so deftly orchestrated that the audience finds itself laughing at events that are intensely macabre.

New York actor Victor Lazarow, who stars in "Loot" and "What the Butler Saw," considers this duality a challenge.

"(Orton's work) is not exactly light farce," Lazarow said. "It's 'dark comedy,' but what is 'dark comedy?' It's a weird kind of mixture of lightness, farce and just ugliness, yet it's fun. These are comedies, although they have an undertone of some very sinister doings."

Jennifer Bacon-Blaine, who's here in Iowa City for the summer to perform in the festival, likewise considers Orton's work particularly demanding for the razor's edge it walks between tastelessness and frankness.

"It's difficult," said Bacon-Blaine. "It's very tough stuff — macabre a lot of the time, but still really good stuff."

"In order for this sort of thing to be successful, you have to get inside the playwright's head, and Mr. Orton (makes that) very difficult. To get the language — to get the laugh — you have to be in Orton's head, or it'll fall flat on its face."

Summer theatergoers can expect sharply controlled comedy which rambles all over the stage yet deals with some gripping subjects. Forsythe is confident that this dichotomy will be well received.

"It seems that it's a time for rediscovering Joe Orton," he said of the exposure Orton's work has received — all out of proportion to that which other playwrights of the mid-1960s have been given. "(The mid-1960s) was such a period of turmoil and innovation," he said, "and yet not too many playwrights have lasted through the '70s."

That Orton's work has thrived is a blessing, said Forsythe. That a festival such as University Theatres is even possible is an added bonus: "We're one of the few theaters in the country that has such a supportive audience that allows us to do this. That kind of support really helps to give rise to a national reputation. A festival like this is a great opportunity for us and for our audiences, too."

Lazarow agrees that the opportunity is rare and valuable: "Iowa's lucky to have this kind of thing going on in the summer. It's very rare because Orton's plays are so tough to do."

"It's funny stuff, awfully funny," said Bacon-Blaine, commenting on Orton's special genius. "And I think that's it: It's awful and funny. Orton picks scabs on society, and nothing is sacred with him."

University Theatres' Joe Orton Summer Theatre Festival will run through July 23 in the UI Theatre Building, and tickets for the plays and one-acts are available through the University Box Office.

'Ulysses' flawed, critics say

NEW YORK (AP) — Random House is considering withdrawing the new edition of James Joyce's novel "Ulysses," because of criticism from scholars who say the corrected edition is more seriously flawed than its predecessors.

"We're going to leave it to... a group of experts to advise us," said Jason Epstein, editorial director of Random House. "But I'm inclined to think that the edition we're publishing now is seriously flawed."

No single comprehensive manuscript of "Ulysses" exists. The novel, first published in Paris in 1922, was written during a seven-year period in longhand that is often illegible. Joyce then added 100,000 words to the page proofs.

To further complicate matters, the book was typeset by hand by French printers who did not speak English.

A team of German scholars produced the new edition two years ago, saying it corrected about 5,000 omissions, transpositions and other errors in previous editions.

At the time, scholars and critics hailed the new edition as a landmark of textual scholarship, and it replaced earlier editions in classrooms and most of the nation's bookstores.

John Kidd, of the University of Virginia, is leading the criticism of the new version, known as the Gabler edition after its principal editor, Hans Walter Gabler of the University of Munich.

Among Kidd's complaints are assertions that the edition is the 18th edition, rather than the 11th; that the version is not a purified text of Joyce's conceptions; that the researchers relied on facsimiles of manuscripts, making it impossible to separate Joyce's work from that of his assistants and printers; and that some of the changes made are "patently un-Joycean," thus endangering the fabric of one of the most acclaimed English novels.

Kidd makes his arguments in "The Scandal of 'Ulysses,'" an article appearing in the June 30 issue of The New York Review of Books.

Gabler disputed or denied all of Kidd's charges, although he said he had not seen the article.

He said that while "the charges sound damaging," he has heard them before and that they usually dissolve "into thin air."

Soviet play premieres in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — The show will go on, albeit a different one, for the 23 members of the Maly Theater of Leningrad whose status on the American stage had remained up in the air until now.

"Stars of the Morning Sky" will run for 16 performances at the American Place Theater beginning Monday or Tuesday, according to producer Ken Marsolais.

Until last week, the troupe had been scheduled to present a two-evening, seven-hour play called "Brothers and Sisters" as part of the First New York International Festival of the Arts.

The production was abruptly canceled because Marsolais was not able to raise $100,000 of the $450,000 needed, said Martin Segal, festival chairman.

The troupe had been staging "Stars of the Morning Sky" in Toronto. When the run ended, members flew to New York, but 37 members of the company who were to have flown to New York from Leningrad for "Brothers and Sisters" remained in the Soviet Union. Plans to bring over the remaining troupe members were scrapped along with the production.

Lev Dodin, director of the Maly Theater, said he feels "bitterness about something that was to have happened but hasn't."

The funds raised for "Brothers and Sisters" will be used instead to produce "Stars of the Morning Sky," Marsolais said Tuesday.

France names Vitez to post

PARIS (AP) — Minister of Culture Jack Lang on Wednesday named Antoine Vitez to head the Comedie Francaise, France's premier national theatre.

Vitez, the 58-year-old former director of the Chaillot Theatre in Paris, replaces former Comedie Francaise General Administrator Jean Le Poulain, who died in March.

In addition to running the Chaillot, Vitez, who speaks fluent Russian and Italian, recently has directed productions of "Tartuffe" in Moscow and "The Triumph of Love" at the popular Piccolo Teatro in Milan. He is known for his knowledge of classic theatre, the specialty of the Comedie Francaise.

Established in 1680 by the royal decree of Louis XIV, the Comedie Francaise had the sole right to perform plays in French in Paris until the French Revolution in 1789. It remains the nation's great protector and promoter of French classics by playwrights such as Moliere and Racine.

CBA may expand to Cedar Rapids

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Continental Basketball Association officials and arena managers say they're close to concluding a deal that would bring a league expansion franchise to Cedar Rapids beginning next season.

The CBA is preparing for its league meeting June 24 under the assumption Cedar Rapids will field a team, league commissioners said this week.

Dana Warg, vice president of Ogden Allied, which manages Cedar Rapids' Five Seasons Center, indicated that only details of the contract remain unresolved.

Williams, Triplett apply for UNI job

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Simpson Coach Jim Williams and South Dakota's Dave Triplett have applied for the football coaching job at Northern Iowa.

They are among about 25 applicants for the job, which opened up May 26 when Darrell Mudra resigned. Athletic Director Bob Bowsby said applications will be accepted until Friday, when a search committee will begin narrowing the list of candidates.

Williams is a former Iowa State assistant who had a successful stint at West Des Moines Dowling High School. Triplett, who played under Williams at Dowling, guided South Dakota to the NCAA Division II playoffs last fall.

Bowsby said Northern Iowa either will hire a coach from outside the school or name a member of Mudra's staff as interim coach. Mudra has pushed for one of his assistants to get the job — Mike Kolling, Walt Klinker, Dennis Remmert or Terry Allen.

MISL names rookie of the year

Doyle had 12 goals and seven assists to lead all rookies in scoring. Media members gave Doyle six first-place votes and 45 points. Cleveland Force defender Brian Bliss was second with 37 points.

Doyle, the Comets' No. 1 draft pick from Campbell University, began the season on the team's developmental squad. He was signed to a 10-day contract in February, 32 games into the season, and scored six points in his first six games.

Fan violence threatens soccer match

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — English, Dutch and West German soccer fans skirmished Wednesday after a European Soccer Championship match and hundreds of riot police roamed the city hoping to prevent any large-scale eruption of violence.

More than 200 people had been detained as of late Wednesday, but police said most were expected to be freed later in the night.

West German television late Wednesday showed a pistol confiscated from one of the fans, but did not identify its owner.

Most of the bars in Duesseldorf's Old City were boarded up or closed to avoid the kind of damage that resulted from clashes between West German and English fans the night before.

Odds narrow on heavyweight bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A flurry of recent bets on challenger Michael Spinks, which bookmakers credit to reports of turmoil in the life of heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, has narrowed the odds slightly for their June 27 fight in Atlantic City.

Tyson remains a heavy 4-1 favorite, but Las Vegas oddsmakers say an increasing number of small bettors are taking a chance on the underdog.

"A lot of people are putting emphasis on his problems, feeling maybe that he's not training as well as he should," said Sonny Reizner of the Frontier Hotel sports book.

Samuel sets double play record

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Second baseman Juan Samuel of the Philadelphia Phillies set a National League record and tied the major-league mark Tuesday night by starting five double plays in one game.

Five others had shared the National League mark of four. The American League record is held by Detroit's Gerry Priddy, set on May 20, 1950.

Despite the five double plays, the Phillies lost 9-0 to the Montreal Expos in the first game of a two-night doubleheader.

the Hawks yes this year." Stokes may have gotten the best of Bullard in the paint, but after missing his first few shots Bullard exhibited great range, hitting four three-pointers.

Stokes recently returned from a tryout with the NBA's Los Angeles Clippers and said he thinks his chances of making the team are good.

"I feel great about the tryout," he said. "I was hitting my jumpshot and did a good job running the floor."

Ex-Hawkeye Bill Jones led Southgate in scoring, collecting 23, many of which were on the break. Jones always shaves a few strokes off his score in the car on the way home.

Then there's the oldest: male, 60 and over, has a nice IRA, owns his own car, waited his entire life to play golf every day.

I fall into the prior category now and hope to enter the latter someday.

But this addiction doesn't play favorites. It hits some women just as hard, a fact which breaks the female ranks a bit. As long as we men have a few female traitors teaming it up with us, we feel more justified in our neglect of all else in pursuit of the 18-hole fix.

Little girls to little old ladies, they can all get hooked.

Like any habit, it has its rewards and its drawbacks. The sweet click of a squarely struck drive, the dull thump of a stiff approach shot landing close to the pin, the dice-like rattle of a drained 20-foot birdie putt - these are the highs that keep us coming back.

Then there's the dust-covered textbooks, the foot-tall grass in the yard, a garage that doubles as a junkyard, a less-than-thrilled wife and kids who haven't seen dad on a Saturday since their birth.

For us, the worst thing about our addiction is not knowing when we will get to play our next round. Incidentally like work and family obligations have a way of encroaching on our tee times. That makes us paranoid.

But if the bleak reality of a golf-less weekend presents itself this weekend, all won't be lost. I'm sure I'll find a way to catch the U.S. Open on TV.

It's not the same as playing, but junkies can't be choosers.

Dantley

Johnson, however, did it to his friend Isiah Thomas Tuesday night when the series took on a more physical tone. The Pistons dished out forearm and elbows and the Lakers vowed to respond in Game 5 Thursday night.

"You might see a step back in time these next couple of games," Los Angeles center-forward Mychal Thompson said.

Dantley's experience helps him handle the punishment he receives game after game.

"It doesn't wear me down because when I do get fouled, I have my body protected," he said. "I have my forearm up. I see guys coming at me and I'm protecting myself."

He felt he didn't get enough protection from the referees in the third game when he took just two free throws but thought he was fouled many more times.

"You've got to live with that," Dantley said. "You've got to go to the basket so hard (that) you've got to make the referee call that foul."

"You've got a lot of teams that might have great athletes but they don't know the game."

A summer love gone too far

No matter what we do, no matter how hard we try to deny it, we all eventually give in.

Some years we can fight it all the way through March and April, but not usually. By May, the urge becomes overwhelming. The air is balmy, and it smells like cut grass. Cut grass, that's always the clincher.

The sights and smells of summer don't signal the desire to swim upstream, return to the city of our birth or begin our mating rituals (in most cases), but the urge we get is just as primal — just as singular.

And it demands to be appeased. We're golfaholics, and it isn't pretty.

Oh, sure, you say. Compare the hobby of batting a little white ball around a glorified pasture with some serious affliction, a painful addiction.

But as many addicts can tell you, golf has a way of making one do out-of-character things on bright sunny days. Example: Money is tight, you have $20 left until your next paycheck, and there is no food in the house. You leave your home, innocently headed for the grocery store by order of your wife. Four hours later you stumble home, delirious, suntanned, satisfied and broke. You don't know exactly how it happened, but it did.

Recognizing a golfaholic isn't as easy as one might think, as we come in many forms. There's the stereotype: male, 20 to 45, sports fan, decent athlete but not half as good as he would like to think,

Prime Time League starts 2nd year

Ingram powers Fitzpatrick's

By Eric J. Hess
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Michael Ingram exploded in the second half to lead Fitzpatrick's to a 107-104 victory over First National Bank in the first round of the Prime Time Basketball League action Wednesday at Iowa City High School.

Ingram, a junior transfer from Missouri, led a second-half comeback, bringing Fitzpatrick's back from a 15-point deficit.

Greg McDermott, a former Northern Iowa player, added 33 points. Dale Turner Jr., who will enter Northern Iowa in the fall, added 20 points.

"It was the first time we played together," Ingram said. "We hadn't even practiced. As the game went along we began to mold."

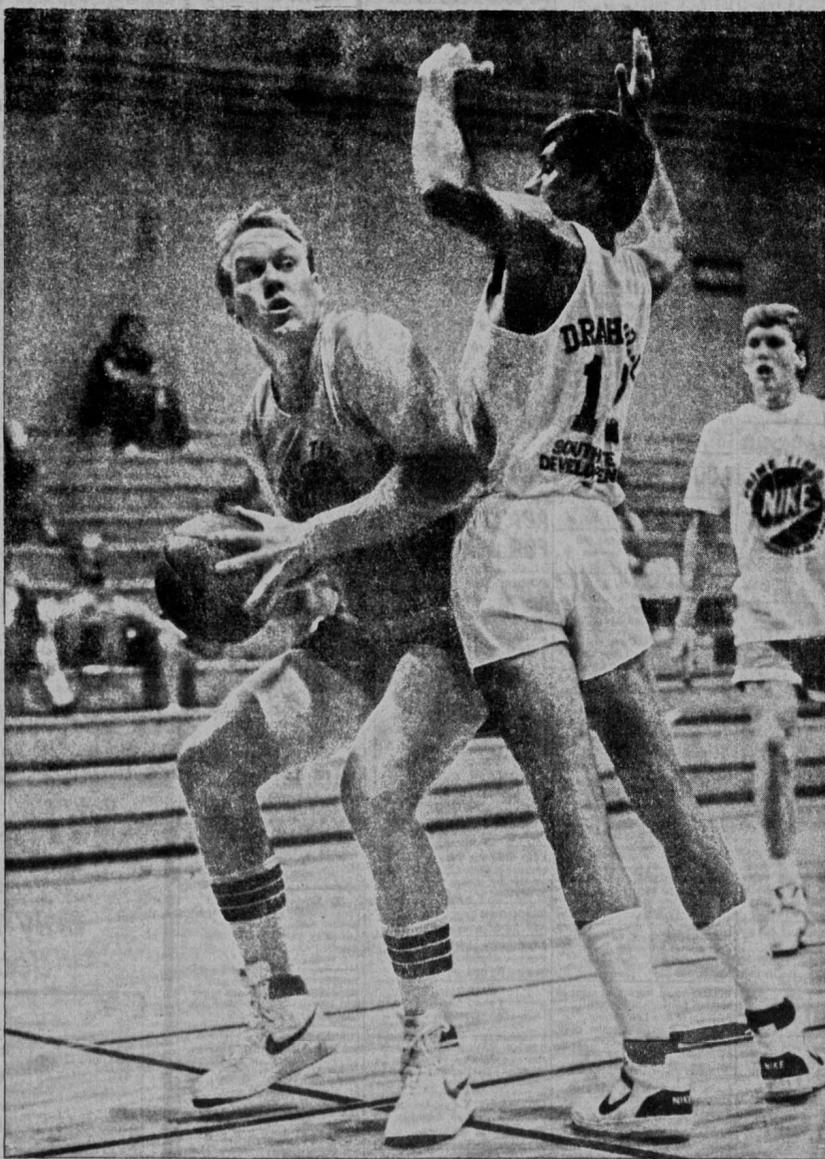

Ingram, who figures to be battling for a starting position in Iowa Coach Tom Davis' starting lineup next season, said his opponents were playing with a lot more heart than he expected.

"It's better than I thought it would be," Ingram said of the Prime Time League.

Troy Washpun, a former guard at Wyoming, powered First National Bank with 30 points. Iowa's Ed Horton followed with 23 points and a team-leading 13 rebounds and four assists.

In the opening game of the second season for the Prime Time League, Greg Stokes poured in 22 points and grabbed a league-high 19 rebounds as Southgate Devel-

It wasn't exactly a basketball technician's delight, but the Prime Time League opener Wednesday between Iowa State Bank and Southgate Development certainly didn't lack action.

Southgate Development, a squad dominated by ex-Iowa players, defeated Iowa State Bank 108-89 in contest between two of the league's expected favorites at Iowa City High School.

And for many of players, the game was a chance to measure their conditioning and knock the rust off their game.

"I'm really sore — a little bit rusty," Iowa senior Roy Marble said. "I've been lifting a lot of weights, and I think I overdid it yesterday."

Marble, who poured in 21 points and made several passes that drew oohs and ahhs from the crowd, said he has been working on his total game.

"I've been trying to improve everything," Marble said concerning his upcoming senior season at Iowa. "It's like, I already know what's going to happen this year. I'm going to go out there and do everything that Roy Marble can do and not worry about expectations."

When Southgate wasn't running its fastbreak, the game featured an impressive inside matchup between ex-Hawkeye great Greg Stokes and much-heralded Iowa newcomer Matt Bullard, who scored 25 points for Iowa State Bank.

"I missed my first two jumpshots, and I started to get a little nervous," said Stokes, who scored 22 points and grabbed a game-high 19 rebounds. "I've been looking forward to getting a chance to see Bullard, and I've heard so much about him. He's a real good player and seems like a nice guy. He's really going to help

Pistons, Lakers set to clash

Silverdome hosts final game

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — The Detroit Pistons will be playing their last game at the Silverdome tonight and it will be their last chance to gain an edge in the NBA championship series.

The Pistons, who will move to the Palace at Auburn Hills, Mich., next season, must beat the Los Angeles Lakers in Game 5 or be faced with having to win two games at the Forum next Sunday and Tuesday.

"If we lose Thursday, I still have to tell the players we can win it, but I don't know if they would believe me," Pistons coach Chuck Daly said Wednesday. "The Lakers have so much talent at every position that every game in the series is a must-win for us. We're looking at our vacation if we lose Thursday."

"We have to win Thursday and that's all there is to it," forward Adrian Dantley said. "We have to go back to L.A. with a lead."

"When they say they can't realistically win two games in Los Angeles, they are stating the obvious," Lakers coach Pat Riley said. "But both teams feel they have to win Game 5."

The Pistons defeated the Lakers 111-86 Tuesday night to even the best-of-seven series 2-2. Detroit shot 46 free throws, 34 more than in Game 3, and Los Angeles shot 37 as the series moved up several notches in intensity.

The Lakers were still upset with themselves Wednesday because of the way Detroit pushed them around.

"The war came to us and we retreated," Magic Johnson said. "We were soft. We're not mad at Detroit. They did what they had to do."

"If they think they have to be ferocious, then we have to be ferocious as well."

"The word motivation didn't mean much to us Tuesday," Riley said. "The desire wasn't there. I'm beyond upset and irritated. I'm disgusted with the way we played."

Riley and Johnson said the three championship series between the Lakers and Boston taught them how to play a physical game.

"We wouldn't have won four championships in the last eight years if we didn't know how to respond to a physical game," Riley said.

Pistons guard Isiah Thomas, who missed practice Monday and Tuesday because of an injured back, played well in Tuesday night's game, but was absent from practice again Wednesday.

Thomas had difficulty jumping, but he had 10 points, 12 assists and a team-high nine rebounds in Game 4.

"He's the catalyst, the core of this team," guard Joe Dumars said of Thomas. "He runs the show, on and off the court, and he showed how much heart he has the way he played."

Daly said Thomas proved he could be effective in the role of big scorer or in a more traditional role of a perimeter shooter.

12th-year star Dantley pushes on

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Adrian Dantley remembers the old days when a drive in the lane was no walk in the park. It was an invitation to decapitation.

Those days are gone, but Dantley, whose game is built on rushes to the basket, is still around. The Detroit forward finds the path to the hoop still filled with obstacles but less bruising.

"Bob Lanier," he said Wednesday, recalling the hulking former center for Detroit and Milwaukee. "I remember the first time I played him. 'AD, you like to go to the hole? You ain't going to go to the hole tonight. I'll take your head off.'"

"I went into the lane and he took my head off," he added. "You don't want to go in again."

But the 6-foot-5 Dantley, now in his 12th NBA season and second with Detroit after seven with Utah, kept doing it and emerging in one piece. That style got him into 11th place on the all-time NBA scoring list with 21,058 regular-season points.

In the Pistons' 111-86 victory over the Los Angeles Lakers Tuesday night that evened the NBA championship series at 2-2, six of Dantley's seven baskets came on layups. He also made 13 of 15 free throws and led all scorers with 27 points.

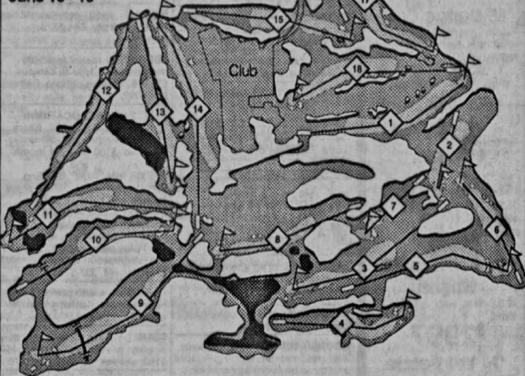

Getting into the lane is less punishing than it once was, he said.

"Magic (Johnson) coming down the lane, Michael Jordan coming down the lane, you're not going to see them get fouled hard," Dantley said. "You're not supposed to do that."

"You get to be friends with somebody and he comes down the lane, you're not going to hit him that hard."

156 tee off today in U.S. Open play

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Greg Norman, Seve Ballesteros and Sandy Lyle rank as the men to beat in the 88th United States Open golf championship. Play among the 156-man field begins today.

Jack Nicklaus, 48, will have set an Open record of 32 consecutive appearances in the American national championship when he tees off today at The Country Club.

The elder statesman Nicklaus also has a chance to become the first man to go over $5 million in career earnings. He needs $2,450 to reach that mark and, with $1 million in total prize money available, needs only to qualify for the final two rounds to surpass that figure.

"The last couple of weeks I've worked a lot on my game," Nicklaus said. "I'm hitting the ball really quite well. I have no problem with the way I'm playing," he said.

But even he must take a secondary role to Norman, Ballesteros and Lyle.

After an off-season last year, Norman rebounded with four foreign victories this year, plus a triumph in the Heritage Classic and two playoff losses in the United States.

The low-key Lyle has been the outstanding player in the first half of the season. He's the only three-time winner on the American tour and is the leading money-winner with $608,479.

Ballesteros, winner of two British Opens and as many Masters, ended a slump with a playoff victory in the Westchester Classic last Sunday.

The UI has instituted a freeze effective immediately on faculty and staff positions. President for Finance and University Service Susan Bartenhagen announced at a Thursday press conference.

"A hiring freeze simply means that as people leave they are not replaced, which could have serious attrition effects," Phillips said. "We'll be monitoring the situation and making adjustments as necessary to ensure accurate our forecast for both tuition projections and length of the freeze."

The freeze, the first implemented since 1986, will remain in effect as long as necessary, she said. "The most recent hiring freeze lasted about six months."

"My most optimistic guess is that the freeze will be lifted by the end of this fall," she said. "My pessimistic guess is that it will remain in effect for the full year."

The length of the freeze will depend on how many positions are vacated and how strictly the freeze is followed, she said, and action should generate l

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A woman said she was looking for her son when she thought her son was the unidentified, impaired boy found last year deriding the streets of Juarez.

Camille Muller thought the boy strongly resembled her grandson, Philippe Muller, a 13-year-old boy who was located in El Paso, an FBI spokesman said.

Muller said Thursday she had just returned to Paris that she had just returned to Paris with her son, Philippe, her daughter, and her four grandchildren in good health.

Since January 1987, she heard from her son, who was in a restaurant called "JJ de El Paso."

"The FBI arrived at the restaurant as I was talking to Mrs. Muller said. For all the mystery of this child is now an am delighted for me and upset for this child."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan is preparing a bill that requires the Congress of any cover within 48 hours of its Defense Secretary Frank Rosten to a House committee.

Carlucci told the Foreign Committee he believes the bill is compelled to measure, the resulting tension between the White House and Congress would cause a trust that would take years.

But several members said they believed the bill should be held to a standard to prevent abuses exposed by the Iran-Con
