Athletics give $500,000 to UI

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

In an unprecedented move, the UI Men's Athletic Department officials announced Friday the contribution of $500,000 to UI Libraries and minority student and faculty scholarships.

UI Athletic Director Chalmers "Bump" Elliott said the money will go to the Iowa Endowment 2000 campaign over the next three years. UI Libraries will receive $200,000, and Opportunity at Iowa, an intensive recruiting program designed to attract minority students and top-flight minority professors, will receive $300,000.

Iowa Endowment 2000, a campaign by the UI Foundation to raise $150 million by the year 2000, has reached $70 million in pledges with the latest donation, according to UI Foundation President Darrell Wyrick. The campaign's purpose is to upgrade the UI's academic standing by promoting excellence in its human resources, faculty and students.

Wyrick said the UI is fortunate because its athletic program is producing enough revenue so it is not only self-supporting, but also able to provide assistance to other programs.

UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Philip Hubbard said the contribution to the Opportunity at Iowa program will help the UI meet financial aid promises made to minority students earlier this year.

"This is a tremendous asset," Hubbard said. "We've promised some money and we're very happy we can deliver on what we've promised."

The UI's internal reallocation process will provide $200,000 for the program during the upcoming year, Hubbard said, but added all those funds are earmarked for minority faculty salaries.

Hubbard said he had been optimistic that the Iowa General Assembly would approve a $1.25 million request to fund Opportunity at Iowa during fiscal 1989.

The state Legislature held an educational subcommittee hearing on minority recruitment earlier this year, Hubbard said. The legislators seemed aware of the need for increased minority recruitment, but the request was denied, he said.

"(The subcommittee members) were very sympathetic and asked very intelligent questions, and when we left that meeting we thought they would approve the funding," Hubbard said. "The big problem is that the governor had not mentioned it in his speech to the General Assembly — it just got lost in the shuffle."

UI Librarian Sheila Creth said the contribution to UI Libraries was badly needed.

"This is an extremely generous contribution which comes at a particularly challenging time for the University Libraries, and it is a gift that constitutes support of the entire university community — students, faculty and staff," Creth said.

Creth added the donation will benefit more than just the university community. UI Libraries, with about 2.8 million volumes, is a statewide resource used by other colleges, high schools, business and industry, and citizens throughout the state.

Assistant UI Librarian Ross Atkinson said library officials have not yet determined where the money will be used, but added the additional funds will be a benefit no matter how they are allocated.

"This will provide funding in the middle of a critical time for us," Atkinson said. "But there are morale implications which are almost as important as the budgetary implications."

Atkinson said library budget increases have not kept up with cost increases in recent years.

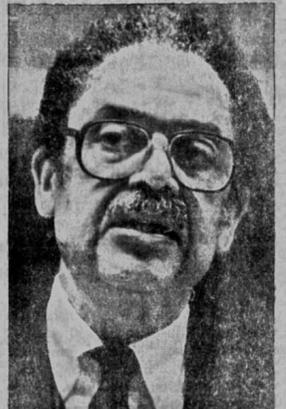

"But that's not unusual," he said. "That's a common trend at libraries all over the country."

The funding sources for the gift are unbudgeted revenue from NCAA basketball tournament appearances, football bowl games and profits from the Iowa Hawk Shop. Elliott said the gift does not include any private contributions to UI men's athletics or other budgeted income from ticket sales and TV rights.

The UI men's basketball team has appeared in the NCAA tournament nine of the past 10 years, while the football team has played in seven consecutive bowl games.

Ann M. Rhodes, UI assistant vice president for finance and university services, said the donation is the first direct contribution from men's athletics to the UI, but added it is by no means the first tangible support.

"At the University of Iowa, men's intercollegiate athletics receive no state subsidy," Rhodes said. "It is totally self-sustaining, unlike programs at many other state universities."

Pentagon scandal unfolds

WASHINGTON (AP)—The investigation of alleged bribery and fraud in Pentagon weapons-buying shows the "good old boy network" in the Reagan administration was more worried about winning huge defense budgets than about making sure the government spent its money wisely, four key legislators said Sunday.

Meantime, President Ronald Reagan, attending a summit meeting of the leaders of western democracies in Toronto, refused to comment on news reports that former Navy Secretary John Lehman Jr. may have warned his long-time ally, military consultant Melvyn Paisley, that Paisley was under investigation.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, a sharp critic of Pentagon waste, said the affair arises from "the good old boy network; it's an ethic within the Defense Department that breeds an attitude among the defense industry, 'catch us if you can.'"

Grassley was interviewed on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation," along with Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. Dingell's panel has investigated Pentagon waste as has the Senate Judiciary

Charles Grassley

Administrative Practices Subcommittee, which Grassley has chaired.

Both said their committees turned up evidence of Pentagon waste, but nothing was done.

"We've been aware of this stuff for a long time, except nothing was done about it," said Grassley. "It's both an institutional problem, but it's also a case of personal greed. It's part of the culture of the military-industrial complex and we have been trying to send this message for five years to prosecutors, to the Justice Department, to get interested in this sort of thing."

Grassley said investigators have contacted his subcommittee staff members to discuss information which came to light in a series of 1985 hearings focused on similar

Pioneer craft is 5 years past Pluto

By Stephen Horan
The Daily Iowan

Boldly going where no machine has gone before, the Pioneer 10 space probe eventually will reach the outer boundary of our solar system.

Last Monday marked the fifth anniversary of Pioneer's passage beyond the orbit of the planet Pluto.

UI physicist James Van Allen is one of the main contributors to the space probe's success. Van Allen used UI-designed instruments carried aboard the Pioneer 10 space probe to make the first survey of the radiation belts of Jupiter in 1973 and to discover and survey the radiation belts of Saturn in 1979.

Van Allen elaborated on the current principal objectives of Pioneer 10 at a Pioneer 10 Press Conference held June 13 at the Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

Two specific aspirations of the Pioneer 10 mission are obtaining data through the outer boundary of the heliosphere (the sphere of influence of the sun) and penetrating into the nearby interstellar medium.

One might ask how the scientists working closely with the space probe will know when they get there.

As Van Allen explained in the press conference, instruments within the space probe will send back to earth observable evidence of Pioneer 10 reaching interstellar space. This evidence is related to changes in the solar wind, cosmic ray intensity and the universal magnetic field.

The Pioneer 10 space probe was launched on March 3, 1972, with the original objective of making fly-bys of Jupiter and the asteroid belt. The space probe is still in operation, functioning far beyond its creators' original predictions.

"We take a detailed failure analysis on every instrument we build and, truly, we usually take what you might call a relatively pessimistic interpretation of the probability of failure," Van Allen said.

According to Van Allen, the space probe functions like a huge TV set and could give out due to some "stupid" episodic failure. If these failures can be avoided, Van Allen predicts Pioneer 10 could reach the interstellar boundary before 1992, at least two years before the space probe's nuclear-electric generators cease functioning and the radio goes dead.

Given all the knowledge gained from Pioneer 10 and its sister probe Pioneer 11, one might question the wisdom of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's policy of "phasing out" the unmanned expendable launch vehicles since 1972. From the beginning, Van Allen opposed this

Teenager falls from Iowa City parking ramp

A 15-year-old boy was transported to UI Hospitals at approximately 10:30 p.m. Saturday night after he fell from the parking ramp at the corner of Linn and Burlington streets, according to Iowa City Police Department records.

The boy was transported to UI hospitals for treatment of injuries sustained from the fall, according to police officials.

An attendant at the parking ramp, Kevin Joyce, said the boy apparently fell from the third floor. Joyce added that he did not know any other details. The ramp janitor on duty at the time, Robert Kistler, was unavailable for comment Sunday.

The incident is under investigation by Iowa City police, but no foul play is suspected, according to a release issued by the police department.

A police spokeswoman said no further information was available Sunday night.

Economic summit begins in Toronto

TORONTO (AP)—Amid extraordinary security and some arrests, leaders of the world's seven richest nations opened an economic summit Sunday billed as a showcase of harmony and a farewell to President Ronald Reagan.

With the world economy in good shape, there were no problems requiring immediate answers. No dramatic initiatives or breakthroughs were expected, and the biggest threat to an argument-free meeting was the volatile issue of agricultural subsidies.

However, President Reagan signaled that he would not press his case for ending all subsidies by the year 2000, instead letting the issue slide until the end of the year. "We're going to meet and discuss all of these things," Reagan said as he sat at an octagonal table at the opening round of the three days of talks.

Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, the host of the meeting — the 14th of its kind — said, "We will work hard." He banged his gavel down hard several times to get photographers, cameramen and reporters to leave the room so the formal talks could begin among the leaders of the United States, Japan, Britain, West Germany, France, Italy and Canada.

The first session lasted 40 minutes longer than had been planned, and Reagan told reporters that it was "fine." British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher agreed, saying all had gone "very well."

"We had a very good, almost three-hour discussion," Mulroney said. He said the issues on Sunday's agenda included the environment, the economy and agriculture. He described the session as "a spontaneous exchange of views, lots of give and take."

Each of the visitors was welcomed one by one earlier at a ceremony featuring the honor guard of the 48th Highlanders militia, clad in kilts and black bonnets and playing bagpipes and drums.

Behind the pageantry, there were ever-present reminders of concern about possible terrorism. A 3,000-person security force was deployed on the ground, on rooftops and in helicopters to protect the leaders as they met in a windowless underground room in a convention center, sealed off by concrete barriers and a high chain-link fence.

Several arrests were reported as some of the demonstrators hurled themselves over the barricades and into the arms of blue-suited police tactical squad officers. The fracas took place a mile from the place where the leaders were holding their first round of formal talks.

The demonstrators, dressed in colorful garb, espoused a host of causes ranging from opposition to U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels to urging more help for victims of the deadly AIDS disease.

Outside the fence, eight Japanese Buddhist monks in yellow robes chanted for peace and pounded drums under a banner calling for a new human consciousness of non-violence.

Security fears were underscored by the arrest of Michael Derrick Collins, suspected of being a low-key Irish Republican Army operative, on charges of overstaying his visa. Collins, 31, is being sought by authorities in British-run Northern Ireland, according to a spokesman for British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Under rules of protocol, Reagan, the longest-serving head of state, was the last to arrive at the official welcoming ceremonies. The first was Jacques De Lors, president of the European Economic Community, followed by Italian Premier Ciriaco De Mita, Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl, Mrs. Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand and Reagan.

Reagan and Mitterrand met for 35 minutes in a downtown hotel just before the first session, discussing disarmament and the challenge of improving education in their countries, said French spokesman Hubert Vedrine.

Reagan asked Mitterrand, re-elected last month, what his priorities were for his second seven-year term, and the French president replied that his top concerns were education, research and training.

Mrs. Thatcher apologized to Kohl for the hooligan behavior of British soccer spectators in West Germany and urged stiff jail sentences, officials said.

Local recreation area presents programs

The Macbride Nature Recreation Area, located near Solon, will present three evening nature programs beginning with "Fireside Tales," an evening of songs, laughter and reflection, between 8:30 and 10 p.m. on June 25.

The program will feature stories, campfire songs and guitar strumming by Sharon Kaufman, naturalist with the Des Moines Conservation Board. The rain date for "Fireside Tales" will be June 26.

A second Macbride Nature Recreation Area program will be "The Night Sky," taking place between 9 and 10:30 p.m. on July 9. Lon Clay Hill, astronomy instructor at the University of Northern Iowa, will serve as an informal guide to the stars, constellations and planets as seen through stories, mythology and direct observation.

The alternate date for "The Night Sky," in case of rainy or overcast skies, will be July 16.

The third recreation program, entitled "Owling," will be held between 8 and 10 p.m. on July 23. Burke Thayer, founder and director of the Raptor Rehabilitation Center at the recreation area, will help participants learn to distinguish between the various types of owls at the center and will lead an "owling adventure" in the surrounding woods.

In the event of rainy or overcast skies, the alternate date will be Aug. 6.

All programs are free and open to the public. Program reservations are requested, and directions to the meeting sites may be obtained by calling the UI Division of Recreational Services at 335-9293 at least one week before the scheduled program date. Group sizes for the programs will be limited.

Registration begins for basketball leagues

Nurse's aide takes own life in restroom of UI Hospitals

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

A UI Hospitals and Clinics nurse's aide was found dead of suffocation in a restroom in the hospital last week, apparently a suicide.

The death of Brian Diggins, 26, 410 Second Ave., Coralville, was declared a suicide by Johnson County Coroner T.T. Bozek. Diggins was found dead Wednesday night.

Bozek said no motive for the suicide had been discovered, despite a thorough investigation. "It's very strange from the standpoint that usually there is a cause that can be discovered," Bozek said of the suicide. "But at least at this point, none has been revealed."

Bozek declined to reveal the method of suicide, saying it was "wise not to give people ideas."

Diggins — who is survived by his wife, Laura — is the second UI Hospitals employee in less than a year to commit suicide in the hospital. A UI Hospitals nurse, Dorothy Gergis, died Dec. 29, 1987, of an overdose of fentanyl while on duty at the hospital. Gergis' death was ruled a suicide by a state medical examiner's report.

In an unrelated matter, the Johnson County Sheriff's Department is continuing to look for motives in the case of a group suicide which took the lives of three Iowa City residents Thursday morning.

The three, Cecilia L. Williams, 40, of 320 S. Gilbert St.; Delbert L. Williams, 31, same address; and Ronald D. Phillips, 37, of 108 S. Linn St., were found dead in a car parked in a field about one mile west of Coralville, victims of carbon monoxide poisoning.

John Phillips, the brother of Roland Phillips, said Sunday the three had apparently met while being treated at an Iowa City mental health clinic.

"I believe that's where they met, although I don't remember for sure," Phillips said.

Phillips, who lives in Solon, Iowa, said his brother had been diagnosed as a paranoid schizophrenic and had been in treatment for about 20 years.

"He has been in treatment on and off for about 20 years," Phillips said. "It's strange, because for the past year he's been as well as he's ever been. The mental clinic in Iowa City had really done a lot for him."

Phillips said he had seen his brother on the Monday before and he had seemed fine at the time.

"It really surprised me, what happened," Phillips said. "He really seemed to have improved a lot."

Summer food program provides lunches to low-income children

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Beginning today, the UI Hospital School and Willow Creek Neighborhood Center will distribute about 175 free sack lunches a day to participants in the U.S. Department of Education's Summer Food Service Program.

The Food Service Department at the UI Hospital School will be preparing the lunches for distribution at Willow Creek Neighborhood Center, catering to residents of Pheasant Ridge Apartments and Cedarwood Apartments. The free lunch program will run until Aug. 12.

This summer distribution is similar to the U.S. Department of Education's program that provides free school lunches to low-income children through their school cafeterias.

The Willow Creek Neighborhood Center, 2530 Bartelt Road, is a community center that provides various programs for people who live in Pheasant Ridge Apartments, a low-income housing project. The center offers courses in English as a second language and organizes various after-school activities for area children.

Katy Doyle, a practicum student in the UI School of Social Work and a staff member at the Willow Creek Center, said the program acts as an extension of school-year programs so the children of low-income families can continue getting one nutritious meal a day.

Judy Amundson, supervisor of nutrition and food services at the UI Hospital School, said the meals will consist of two ounces of meat, fruit, vegetable, bread and one cup of milk. The meals must represent one-third of the daily nutritional requirements.

"We use the standard school lunch regulations as mandated by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and I feel that we go well beyond those standards for school lunch many days," she said.

This is the program's fourth year in Iowa City, but it is only the first year lunches will be provided for residents of the Cedarwood Apartments, another low-income housing project.

Recipients of the free lunches have been "very appreciative" in the past, according to Doyle.

Doyle said people interested in the summer food program should contact the Willow Creek Center to fill out an application, whether they live in the low-income neighborhood or not.

Applications will be accepted any time before the last day of the summer program.

The lunches will be provided free to participants without regard to race, color, national origin, sex or handicap. Participants must be children from 1 to 21 meeting the financial requirements defined by the U.S. Department of Education.

DES MOINES (AP) — Farmers are facing the loss of $1 billion in federal payment crop prices keep rising because of 1988's dry weather.

The main source of the loss is the crop subsidy program in recent years has reduced farmers from low crop prices. The program currently guarantees a farmer $3-a-bushel corn in for idling 20 percent of cropland acreage, but it is designed with drought in mind.

Dry weather has pushed the price of corn up to about $2.75 a bushel, and the price rises to $3 or more if the government would cancel subsidies, or deficiency payments.

"If there's a full-blown drought there won't be any deficiency payments," said a spokesman for the government. "The government would demand repayment of the current portion of deficiency payments paid to farmers in advance of the year."

'Free' UI parking lot closes for construction of new facility

Barricades now block the entrance to the lot at 324 Madison St. where 30 "free" parking spots were located. The UI closed the unofficial parking lot there at 6 a.m. Friday.

Construction of the estimated $2.2 million engineering research facility is now beginning on the lot, located at the former Breesse's Auto Parts location on the corner of Madison and Court streets.

The UI is remodeling the existing structure to serve as labs for the Engineering College, said Allen Stroh, UI administrative assistant for the Office of Facility Planning and Utilization.

"We (the UI) acquired the property some time ago and are now beginning the construction project. The fence at the location signifies that the building and site are now in the hands of the contractor," Stroh said.

The closing of the lot does not signify a decrease in UI parking, though.

"Anyone who has parked there for the last nine or 10 months has been parking for free. That lot has been a no-man's land since the university acquired it and is now closed so that construction can begin there," he said.

"That lot is not an official university parking lot now," said David Ricketts, director of parking and transportation.

"Several things have happened in that area in the past few years which have cut down on the free parking there, and this trend is just going to continue," Ricketts said.

"Students always think we're conspiring against them and taking away their parking spaces. This is one time when we were not involved in the decision to close a parking lot," Ricketts said.

Farmers may lose federal money if drought continues to hike prices

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa farmers are facing the loss of nearly $1 billion in federal payments if crop prices keep rising because of 1988's dry weather.

The main source of the loss would be the crop subsidy program, which in recent years has rescued farmers from low crop prices. The program currently guarantees a farmer $3-a-bushel corn in return for idling 20 percent of customary corn acreage, but it was not designed with drought in mind.

Dry weather has pushed corn to about $2.75 a bushel, and if that price rises to $3 or more, the government would cancel its cash subsidies, or deficiency payments.

"If there's a full-blown drought, there won't be any deficiency. Corn prices will be up, but nobody will have any to sell," said James Arndorfer, who grows corn and soybeans with his son, Robert, in Decatur County.

The government would also demand repayment of the 40 percent portion of deficiency payments paid to farmers in advance this year.

"It would be a double kick in the teeth," said Robert Arndorfer.

That prospect, coming on the heels of the farm debt crisis, has members of Congress from farm states scrambling.

"From Maine to Montana, senators and congressmen will be introducing drought relief legislation," said Rep. David Nagle, D-Iowa.

Nagle is a member of a House/Senate task force studying drought aid proposals.

Some members of Congress want the federal government to let farmers keep their advance deficiency payments, regardless of market prices or harvest yields.

Another proposal is to allow farmers to retroactively switch to the so-called "zero-92" plan, under which they could receive 92 percent of their cash subsidies in return for not harvesting a crop.

Still another plan would give farmers disaster relief grants, which would not have to be repaid.

Meanwhile, farmers in Iowa and other states hope for rain to rescue crops.

Iowa State University agronomist

Garren Benson said much of the state crop has been holding its own despite below-normal rainfall. The need for rain will become more crucial in early or mid-July during the silking period for corn, he said.

For soybeans, the key period is early to mid-August, when pods begin filling.

Some experts, like Ray Daniel of Wharton Econometrics, say the situation is not dire.

According to Daniel, the only real damage so far has been to the hard wheat crop in the Dakotas.

"The only thing that does is raise pasta prices for the yuppies," he said.

Others cringe at the thought of making light of the situation.

"Farmers are strong people who have been through a lot, but their faith may be a little bit shaken," said Lester Manderscheid, chairman of the Agricultural Economics Department at Michigan State University.

"They had to tolerate adverse economic conditions and now God's getting them, too."

Sister says Brockert incapable of murdering 7-month-old child

MUSCATINE, Iowa (AP) — The sister of a man accused of kidnapping in connection with the death of a Muscatine infant said he is a kind and soft-spoken person who is incapable of murder.

"I have two kids of my own and he gets along great with them," said Shelby Casteel, whose brother, Leslie Ray Brockert of Muscatine, is charged with first degree kidnapping in the death of 7-month-old Amber Hayes. Police said Brockert may also face murder charges.

"My kids adore him," Casteel said. "They are really close. He's a great guy. He has always loved kids. He loved Amber. Every time I went to the house, he was the one with the baby."

Brockert, 28, is the live-in boyfriend of the baby's mother, Mary Hayes of Muscatine. He was charged after parts of the infant's decapitated body were found in a wooded area June 12.

Hayes said she left the child in Brockert's custody when she went out for the evening June 9. She returned to find the child gone and called police.

Brockert has not discussed the case with police on advice of counsel, but Casteel said her brother said an unnamed woman came into the house and abducted the child.

"He said that's exactly the way it happened, and I believe him," she said.

Police say there is no evidence that anyone but Brockert was in the house that evening, and that he is the only suspect in the case.

Iowans favor Dukakis over Bush, 2-1

DES MOINES (AP) — Michael Dukakis holds a lead of more than 2-to-1 over George Bush among Iowans likely to vote in the November presidential election, a new poll shows.

The Massachusetts Democratic governor would get 60 percent of the Iowa vote to just 28 percent for the Republican vice president, according to the Des Moines Sunday Register's Iowa Poll.

The poll is the newspaper's first measure of Iowa voters since Dukakis and Bush clinched their parties' nominations. It uncovers the same weaknesses that led to Bush's third-place finish behind Bob Dole and Pat Robertson in Iowa's Republican caucuses in February.

Dukakis finished third in Iowa's Democratic caucuses behind Richard Gephardt and Paul Simon.

While 73 percent of Republicans said they would vote for Bush, 15 percent said they would choose Dukakis. Another 11 percent said they are undecided, while 1 percent supported neither candidate.

Among Democrats, Dukakis has 88 percent support, with just 5 percent saying they would vote for Bush, and 7 percent undecided or supporting neither candidate.

The big swing comes among independents, who support Dukakis over Bush by a 65-16 percent margin.

When voters are grouped by age, Dukakis gets 70 percent of those 18-24. Iowans 65 and older support

Dukakis by 48-37 percent over Bush.

Iowans who identify themselves as evangelical and fundamentalist Christians support Dukakis by a slight margin over Bush, even though more members of those groups said they were Republicans than Democrats.

Iowa voters have reversed their early intentions in previous presidential races. In August 1976, Democrat Jimmy Carter held a 56-35 percent lead over Gerald Ford, but Ford narrowly carried Iowa in the November election that year.

Sunday's poll shows Dukakis' Iowa support could slip if he selects Jesse Jackson.

Contractor implicated in aircraft bribe case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pratt & Whitney may have written its bids on two major aircraft engine contracts with secret knowledge about what its chief competitor was proposing to the government, according to details of a search warrant in the Pentagon bribery case.

Investigators are seeking documents relating to Pratt & Whitney's use of a pair of defense consultants to help win contracts for two major jet engine programs, the warrant showed.

The warrant, obtained by the trade paper Defense Week and made available to The Associated Press, was signed last week by U.S. District Judge John H. Pratt.

The four-page warrant permitted the FBI to search the office of Eugene Tallia, vice president of Pratt & Whitney and head of the company's Washington office. Pratt & Whitney is a subsidiary of United Technologies, the nation's eighth-largest defense contractor.

P&W hired Melvyn Paisley within a week after Paisley resigned in April 1987, as assistant secretary of the Navy for research, engineering and systems.

The firm also hired William Galvin, another consultant closely associated with Paisley.

The search warrant seeks documents, notes, reports and other materials that Paisley and Galvin provided to Tallia.

Specifically, the warrant targets P&W's effort to develop engines for the JVX, an experimental plane under development by the Pentagon, and the FA-18, the twin-engine jet that will be the Navy's top fighter.

allegations.

In answer to questions, Grassley said, "I'm not suggesting there's a cover-up" by top Pentagon or Justice Department officials.

Dingell complained that administration officials didn't want to act. "Nothing discernible was done," he explained.

"We have found consistent instances where the buddy-buddy approach would prevent vigorous actions by the Defense Department into these kinds of abuses," Dingell said.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said the Pentagon has had "a serious management problem... for a number of years."

"I also knew that we did not have the kind of people in the Pentagon at high levels that really had background in management," said Nunn. "We had people being selected for their ideological beliefs, for their salesmanship, but not for good, sound management."

System failure

Though it is still too early in the developing Pentagon procurement scandal to responsibly comment on the details — who is culpable, who will be indicted, what these indictments will mean to the future of the defense industry — it is not too early to see the larger, emerging picture. And to no one's surprise, it is a veritable mural of greed.

We have always known defense procurement — indeed, defense decisions at all levels shy of the battlefield — to be driven by special-interest groups. Defense contractors live from contract to contract, as do members of Congress from districts where weapons are developed, manufactured or deployed. Even the four branches of the armed services, who ought to work together in the business of waging war, compete with one another out of sheer vanity for exotic weapons systems and are part of the wheeling and dealing which virtually defines modern defense procurement.

If everybody played by the rules — and the rules themselves were clear and enforceable, which they probably aren't — some special-interest competition in weapons procurement wouldn't be so bad. The competition for defense contracts would likely yield better, cheaper weapons, manufactured and deployed where they would do the most good.

But of course, not everybody plays that way. In what has been described as a "revolving door of influence peddling," defense contractors have corrupted legislators and Pentagon staffers, whose willingness to sell information and influence created an environment of working corruption in the first place. Time and time again, this has produced faulty weapons at huge cost overruns, while meanwhile $5 to $6 billion dollars are spent annually on conforming to congressionally defined procurement protocols.

Clearly the system doesn't work, and it hasn't been working for some time. From the halls of the Pentagon to the halls of Congress to your neighborhood bomb factory, the ultimate special interest is human greed, and a country which devotes 6.9 percent of its gross national product to defense is a candidate for the most outrageous abuses. Simply too much money changes hands, and, as we are learning, very little of it is in the interest of national security.

Unjust sentence

"We are obviously very disappointed by the harshness of the sentence," Geraldine Ferraro was quoted as saying last week after her son was sentenced to four months in jail, fined $1,500 and ordered to perform 300 hours of community service after being convicted of selling $25 worth of cocaine to a female undercover police officer at Middlebury College in Vermont.

John Zaccaro Jr., son of former vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, was 22 when he committed this heinous crime while attending Middlebury, and, not surprisingly, felt dismay last week because of the severity of Vermont District Judge Francis McCaffrey's sentence.

Zaccaro's attorney, Charles Tetzlaff, asked the judge to accept a probation officer's recommendation when sentencing Zaccaro. The probation officer recommended that Zaccaro receive a suspended sentence, probation and community service for selling a quarter gram of cocaine to what appeared to be a fellow student. Usually a probation officer's report is given weighty consideration when a judge makes a sentencing decision, especially when a first-time offender is involved. Obviously, this time it had no bearing on the decision.

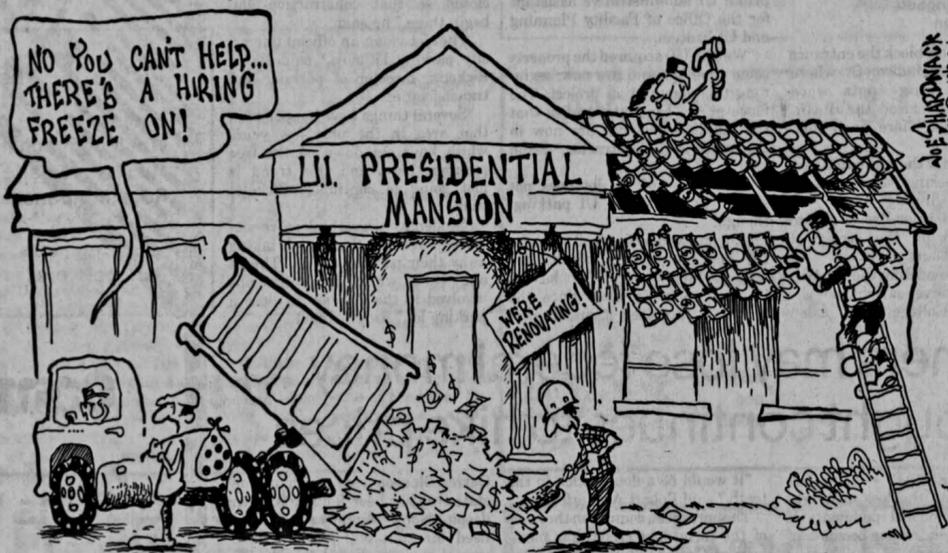

Admittedly, the crime that Zaccaro was charged for was serious in nature. Any time controlled substances are used and/or sold, there will be a price to pay if the police get involved. That Zaccaro was guilty was never in question. But to rule that he was guilty of a crime which necessitated a four-month stint in jail, an excessive fine and 300 hours of community service is ludicrous.

Zaccaro is now in the process of appealing the sentence, and the case will most likely drag on for another year. Tax-paying citizens must surely wonder though, considering the cost of planting an undercover officer, the cost of incarcerating Zaccaro and the cost associated with the trial and appeals process, if in the end it was worth the trouble.

Americans have distorted view

Vishwas Gaitonde

I still remember the enthusiasm that fired me after watching a particularly exciting Western movie as a small lad in India. On returning home from the theater, I bombarded my grandmother with details of the movie in which those brave, dashing cowboys had finally pulverized the sly, slinky red Indians.

My grandmother, though amused at my excitement, did not share it. After my ardor had subsided, she quietly remarked, "You know, those red Indians had been living on that land for ages before the cowboys came and took it away from them."

I was taken aback. Within the space of a minute my grandmother had converted the heroes into villains and given me something to think about. It was my introduction to the bias of communication.

Now I'm in the land of cowboys and red Indians; I find that it's not just Hollywood that has adopted the cowboy slant. In a way, a lot of people seem to have done so, too.

You may tell me that the American Indians have their privileges as a minority group and that there's a lot being done for them. But it is part of America's story that cannot be narrated with pride. The way the Indians were subdued is sad, the later unjust agreements forced on them sadder.

However admirably their reservations are being developed, it is a shame that the people who once had the freedom of the land are now confined in so many ways. They should be integrated into the mainstream while still retaining their culture — a tightrope act, but people have walked tightropes before. During World War II, 25,000 Indians joined the military and about twice that number the war industry; this contact with the mainstream benefitted them.

Sudden liquidation of the reservations isn't the answer, though. (This was attempted in the 1950s and caused many tribes much hardship through loss of timberland.)

But before all this is done the Indians must be accepted as an integral part of the scene. In subtle ways, this does not seem to be so.

"You are from a country with a history going back 5,000 or 6,000 years. You'll find nothing here more than 200, maybe 300 years old. We're new, compared to you." I have heard this statement, or others to its effect, over and over from many Americans.

How they all arrive at the magic figure of 200 years makes interesting reflection. There seems to be a generally held consensus that everything started with independence, or at least that the pilgrims who sailed the Mayflower from England were the trailblazers. Terms like "our Founding Fathers" add to that impression. The term may be accurate in as much as the Founding Fathers did lay a foundation on which a new system was established. But they didn't start it all.

It's not just the American Indians who are ignored by this attitude. Christopher Columbus, Amerigo Vespucci (who, ironically, gave his name to this land), Juan Ponce de Leon and all their merry men from Spain have been gently shelved, dust and cobwebs slowly accumulating on their forgotten faces.

Last month I visited the city of St. Augustine, Fla., reputedly the oldest city in the continental United States. It was here that Ponce de Leon landed in search of the fabled Fountain of Youth and, in the process, claimed Florida for the Empire of Spain. There's a cross there that archaeologists have unearthed, purportedly laid by Ponce de Leon to mark his arrival. It has 15 stones vertically and 13 horizontally to designate the year of his landing — 1513.

The city was established in 1565 by Pedro Menendez de Aviles, and since then there have been a few interested parties who have battled for its possession — the Spanish, the English, then the Americans of the newly formed republic, to say nothing of American Indians and pirates. 1565 — that's a good 200 years beyond 200 years.

An Indian settlement called Seloy existed on the site prior to Ponce de Leon's arrival. Among other things, archaeologists have unearthed a burial ground used by Timucuan Indians that dates from between 500 and 700 A.D. That's 1,200 years beyond 200 years.

There are bound to be more such places in other regions which are very much part of America. Yet, when every little town completes 100 years — or even part of 100 — there is jubilation, as though history has somehow been made. I don't deny the locals have every reason to be proud. It's because

You may tell me that the American Indians have their privileges as a minority group and that there's a lot being done for them. But it is part of America's story that cannot be narrated with pride. The way the Indians were subdued is sad, the later unjust agreements forced on them sadder.

They should be integrated into the mainstream while still retaining their culture — a tightrope act, but people have walked tightropes before.

what happened before keeps being ignored that it all seems rather banal.

History is a term that is bandied about freely. Presidents attend historic summits and sign historic agreements. Every development in various spheres of life is somehow hailed as historic. How much better if people brushed up on their history before going on to create it.

Vishwas Gaitonde writes periodically for the Viewpoints page.

The campaign beat goes on

Do you remember when the number of presidential candidates was at 10? How about 12 or 13? KICKBACK Records does. And it's brought back all the sounds of the campaign trail in an amazing new record offer. No record of the 1988 presidential campaign will be complete without a melancholy Bob Dole singing "You Can't Always Get What You Want" or Paul Simon singing "Born To Be Wild."

Yes, all the melodies that have made this campaign the most beloved in decades can be yours in "Dropped on the Campaign Trail" — a special double album with all your favorites. You'll get Pat Robertson singing "God Only Knows"; Joe Biden's "Yesterday Once More"; "Dick Gephardt's 'Is That All There Is?'; Al Haig, Pete DuPont and Bruce Babbitt joining together for "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry," and much, much more.

But wait, there's more. When you order "Dropped on the Campaign Trail," you'll get absolutely free, Gary Hart singing his heart out in "What I Did for Love," "You've Got to Have Heart," "I Wonder Who's Holding Donna Now," "Caught in the Act," "I Can't Help Myself," "To All the Girls I've Loved Before," "What's Love Got To Do With It," "Let's Get Drunk and Screw," "Donna" and "Your Cheatin' Heart."

And there's even more. Act before midnight tonight and you'll get as an added bonus George Bush on his own for the first time singing "When I Grow Up To Be a Man," "Soul Man," "Somethin' Stupid," "Ain't No Crime," "How Long Has This Been Going On" and "What Kind of Fool Am I?"

This offer won't be around forever, so send a blank cashier's check to KICKBACK Records today.

Who could ask for more than Cleveland?

Don't expect much today — I'm on break. By the time you read this I should be basking on the shores of Lake Erie, back home again in Cleveland for a week of sheer joy.

Cleveland takes a lot of ribbing from people who haven't been there, but I'm not going to pretend it's some undiscovered version of Paris. It beats Paris by plenty.

First off, Paris doesn't have even one decent corned beef sandwich. (Neither does Iowa City, of course, but you don't hear folks call this the "City of Light.") Paris doesn't have Major League Baseball, either, or a tavern every 75 feet. In Cleveland, those things are required by law.

Let people talk. Any town that produces a Jackie Presser and a Don King in one generation reeks of intellectual ferment, not to mention savoir-faire. And it was Cleveland, don't forget, where car bombing first became a mass-participation sport. Not Belfast. Not Beirut. Cleveland. It's like late 19th-century Vienna with a twist of pure America.

I don't get back there often anymore, so I'll do it up big-time. I'm at the stadium for three Indians games, two against the Yankees, one against the Red Sox. Figure a half-dozen hot dogs per game — Cleveland Stadium mustard is the best in the world — and I'll slip an extra 20 to the beer vendor to make sure the cold ones keep coming all game.

My pal Joey got us good seats, so I'll be able to scream insults directly at Billy Martin, and maybe even arrange a post-game brawl at the Crazy Horse Saloon, home of the "Businessman's Lunch — Served Topless!" The New York Yankees are one of the few groups in the world I don't feel guilty for hating, and Billy Martin, if you ask me, is garbage wrapped in skin.

Joey also got third-row seats for Bob Dylan out at Blossom Music Center, a large meadow on the way to Akron. I've always loved Dylan — it's my weakness for wordsy, whiney Semites, I guess — but never saw him in concert. I'm excited, yet I'm also worried that, as usual, I'm too late. I never got around to seeing The Who until after Keith Moon died, and whatever fun was left had died with him. By the time I saw The Stones they were nothing but fools prancing for fools. And my cousin Susan once had Beatles tickets, but the show fell on Yom Kippur, and we were 12, too young to take things into our own hands.

Still and all, Dylan's Dylan, and I'll be close enough to scream insults if I must. Speaking of screaming, I'll also have a ticket to see my favorite working comedian, Sam Kinison. (My favorites, Lenny Bruce and Andy Kaufman, no longer do live shows.) I know Sam is anti-gay, anti-women and racist, but what the hey. I've always believed that a cheap laugh is better than no laugh. Also that louder is better, and that anger, given free play, will lead either to wisdom or murder, sometimes both. Sammy's the master of loud and angry, and one hell of a good-looking guy, to boot.

Oh yeah, the corned beef: There's a little deli called Slyman's on St. Clair Avenue at East 31st that serves two slices of soft, seeded rye around a mountain of warm, fat, salty, moist, pink heaven for around three bucks. Baby!

Spiritually, it's going to be a refreshing week. No Hy-Vee smiles for me this week, no Iowa shucking and grinning and driving 13 miles an hour. This week it will be strangers glaring with open contempt on the street, insane drivers racing from red light to red light and service workers who despise you for walking in the door.

On Wednesday, I'm going to pack a lunch and go to the post office for stamps. Thursday, we'll dress in blackface and head over to Little

Italy for the annual "Run for Your Life."

You're jealous, I know, but I hasten to add that it won't be all play and no work. Cleveland State University is holding a dedication ceremony for the Raab Study Carrel in the Main Library. It's a little nook on the fourth floor of Rhodes Tower where my wife-to-be and I did extensive research on the "Kamasutra" and the "Tibetan Book of the Limp." I'll have to cut the ribbon and make a little speech.

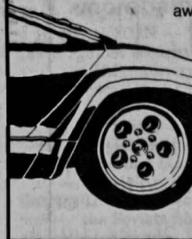

I'm due back next Sunday for bagels and lox with Marv Pomerantz. We're going to shmooze a little, and he's going to fill me in on this Rawlings III fella.

See you soon.

Haitian president continues reforms

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — President Leslie Manigat made more changes in the armed forces Sunday, retiring the Port-au-Prince police chief and transferring about two dozen officers including the head of the presidential guard.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, the fired military commander, remained under house arrest, a close associate said.

Soldiers outside Namphy's walled-in residence compound in Bon Repos, 15 miles north of the capital, waved automatic weapons at reporters who approached and shouted: "No contact! No contact!"

Manigat retired Namphy as commander in chief of Haiti's 7,000-man army on Friday, charging him with insubordination in ordering the transfer of lower-ranking officers three days earlier.

The firing raised fears of a clash between the civilian government and the army, but no confrontation has occurred and some Haitians said Manigat had won his first taste of public approval.

"Most Haitians are saying Manigat became president the day he retired Namphy," Foreign Minister Gerard Latortue said in an interview Sunday. "Before, they said Haiti had no president."

Western activists sent from Czechoslovakia

VIENNA, Austria — More than 30 Western activists have been expelled from Czechoslovakia for attending an unofficial East-West seminar organized by Czechoslovak human rights and peace groups, participants said Sunday.

At a news conference sponsored by the International Helsinki Federation, which monitors human rights in Eastern Europe, four Americans who had attended the seminar said 32 people were expelled Saturday.

They were among 35 foreign activists from 16 countries who attended the seminar organized by the Czechoslovak human rights group Charter 77 and the newly established Czechoslovak Independent Peace Association.

It said a group of Charter 77 members had "tried to misuse Czechoslovakia's active peace efforts for anti-socialist aims" by organizing "a provocative seminar."

U.S. unprepared for Soviet INF inspectors

WASHINGTON — The Defense Department is ill-prepared to guard against security breaches when teams of Soviet inspectors arrive on U.S. military bases July 1 as part of the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty, a magazine reported Sunday.

The treaty also allows the Soviets to send inspectors to 26 sites in the United States and Europe to make sure the missiles have been destroyed as agreed. The U.S. military will send inspectors to 133 Soviet-bloc bases.

However, U.S. News & World Report said in this week's edition that the United States does not have enough trained personnel to prevent the Soviets from seeing facilities and equipment they are not supposed to see.

Toxic fumes leave thousands homeless

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Half the people evacuated for two nights because of chlorine fumes from a factory fire returned home Sunday after firefighters doused the blaze, but thousands of others still were barred from their neighborhoods.

The fire was out by Sunday afternoon, fire officials said, but overheated pellets of chlorine continued to spew the toxic yellow-green gas that authorities said sent 275 people to the hospital, including nine firefighters.

"I'm miserable, inconvenienced, sweaty, hot, uncomfortable and I want to go home," said Shellie Spencer Jr., 30, from his cot at Municipal Hospital where he and his family have stayed since early Saturday.

Up to 25,000 people were evacuated in Springfield and Chicopee because of a series of fires that began Friday at the Advanced Laboratories facility, which manufactured chlorine pellets for swimming pools. Authorities permitted 10,000 to 15,000 people to return home Sunday but kept those living closer to the plant away.

Florida divers explore submerged caves

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Four divers claimed records for the longest and deepest traverses of an underwater cave system Sunday after emerging from an 8,440-foot limestone tunnel near where a companion died in a preliminary dive.

They surfaced several minutes after 6 p.m. They had spent more than an hour breathing specially blended gases to decompress from the journey that took them 240 feet beneath the surface of Leon and Wakulla counties south of here.

"My lungs are a little scratchy from breathing all that (oxygen). Other than that, I'm fine," said Parker Turner, director of safety for the National Association for Cave Diving. "It went real smooth. But boy, if you had a problem, it would have been distressing."

U.S., Japan sign trade pact

TOKYO — Japan and the United States signed an agreement today to end the dispute over Japanese imports of U.S. beef and oranges, officials said.

The agreement was signed by U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter and Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries Minister Takashi Sato, said ministry sources. They refused to discuss details of the accord.

Japanese television showed the two men signing the pact and shaking hands.

A commentary carried with the program by Japan Broadcasting Corp. said the basic agreement calls for Japan to liberalize its imports of U.S. beef and oranges after three years and orange juice in four years.

Shultz denounces Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz on Sunday labeled Nicaragua a "rotten apple in the barrel" of emerging Central American democracies and said neighboring countries must help the United States "get them into this fold."

Describing the Central American mission he will embark upon late this month, Shultz said that "I'm going to carry the U.S. message of what our objectives are, and our program and ideas for getting there."

In an interview on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press," the secretary said that he thought the Reagan administration's doctrine of pushing democracy, freedom and economic development in the region had been mostly successful, and he cited changes in Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras.

But when asked directly to name his primary foreign policy disap-

Ortega calls for further peace talks with Contras

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega called Sunday for another round of talks this month between his leftist Sandinista government and the U.S.-supported Contra rebels to reach a permanent truce in the war.

"We consider it very important to hold another meeting here in Managua before June 30," Ortega told a news conference. A truce that began March 21 ends at the end of June.

In a first meeting March 23 in the southern border post of Sapoa, the two sides signed an agreement on steps to end the war, but they have remained deadlocked on details for implementing the accord.

The two sides mostly differ on a timetable for the peace process and on democratic reforms to be taken by the government.

The Contras lobbied in Washington last week for renewed U.S. military aid. That aid ended at the end of February, and Congress voted down a renewal.

The Sapoa agreement bars the rebels from receiving anything but humanitarian aid.

The rebels said at the end of the last talks on June 9 that there would be no further meetings.

At the last minute, they presented a proposal that called for moves previously rejected by the Sandinistas.

pointment, Shultz pointed to the continuing rule of Nicaragua by the Marxist Sandinista government headed by President Daniel Ortega.

"In spite of the fact that we've made great strides there (Central America), . . . the fact is we still have this bad, rotten apple in the barrel in the form of Nicaragua," he said.

Shultz described the continuance in power of Panama's Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega as "a gnawing problem," but predicted anew that Noriega will not surmount pressure to step aside.

The secretary of state refused to be drawn into lengthy questioning about the administration's options for getting new assistance to the Contra rebels, saying no decisions had been made on that matter. Administration officials have acknowledged that it would be very difficult to win congressional approval of direct U.S. military aid to the rebels, notwithstanding the failure of the Contra peace talks with the Sandinistas.

The State Department announced on Saturday that Shultz would travel to Central America June 29 through July 1 for talks on the collapse of the peace negotiations. Veteran diplomat Max Kampelman, who has been instrumental in U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations, has been holding talks in the region.

Shultz maintained in the NBC interview that administration policy in Central America has been largely successful.

"The odd man out is Nicaragua," he said. "That's a problem, and we want to somehow, through some combination of pressure that's generated internally to Nicaragua . . . to get them into the fold."

"The situation in Nicaragua is really lousy, both from the standpoint of the suppression, repression and from the standpoint of the absolute terrible situation of their economy," Shultz said.

Israelis shut down 3 schools

JERUSALEM (AP) — The army Sunday closed three Arab schools where student protests have erupted, and a spokesman for Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said Rabin had met with Palestinian leaders in an effort to resolve the uprising.

"He's trying to create a dialogue, to ask what is happening and about the future, what they suggest" as solutions, spokesman Eitan Haber said. He would not elaborate.

The daily Haaretz reported that the defense minister recently met with an author of the Palestinian National Charter, a platform of the Palestine Liberation Organization. The report did not name the Palestinian or give the date of the meeting.

The decision followed the June 7 stabbing and wounding of the Israeli-appointed mayor of the West Bank town of El Bireh, Hassan Tawil.

The army closed two schools in the West Bank and one in the Gaza Strip on Sunday after student protests erupted, the military government spokesman said. The schools closed in the West Bank were in Tubas and El Khader. A school in the Ein el Sultan refugee camp near Jericho was closed last week.

The refugee camp school in Ein el Sultan is run by the United Nations Relief and Works Agency. In the camp, an 18-year-old was shot to death by a civilian bus driver last week after young men threw stones at the bus.

Israel radio reported that the Tubas school was closed after students came to school Sunday morning but refused to attend classes and stood outside the building. Classes are normally held Sunday.

Soldiers also shut a U.N.-operated junior high school for girls in the Gaza town of Bani Suheila following anti-Israeli demonstrations on Saturday and several previous occasions, said a spokesman for the Gaza military government. He said the school would remain closed until the school year ends at the end of June.

Arab schools in the West Bank and east Jerusalem were closed for about four months by authorities who said they were staging grounds for disturbances in the uprising.

The schools reopened in late May

Experts claim new FAA rule is inadequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Aviation Administration rule aimed at reducing the threat of collisions near airports between jetliners and small planes is inadequate, some safety experts and airlines say.

The FAA rule announced last week calls for sharply expanding the airspace in which small, private planes must have equipment that tells controllers their altitude.

But because of intense pressure from private pilots, who sent 80,000 complaint letters to the FAA and Congress, the requirement was dramatically scaled back from one suggested by the FAA four months ago.

"We thought (the FAA rule) was going to go much further," Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said in an interview. He called the aspect of the regulation that applies to 116 airports with moderately busy air traffic as "clearly inadequate."

"It brought some improvement, but didn't go as far as it should have," said John Mazon, a spokesman for the 40,000-member Air Line Pilots Association.

Iranian rebels occupy city; seek overthrow of Khomeini

MEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian fighters opposed to the regime of Ayatollah Khomeini captured the Iranian border town Sunday.

The town, mainly a pile of rubble from earlier battles between Iranian and Iraqi armies, was filled with cheering fighters of the National Liberation Army.

Mehran, beside the border on the central front, is about 100 miles east of the Iraqi capital of Baghdad.

On Sunday there was no indication of a major battle in the town — no bodies, no wounded, no destroyed vehicles or fires.

In a statement sent to The Associated Press office in Baghdad, the group's commander, Massoud Rajavi, said the capture of Mehran Sunday morning "is a great victory and a basic step toward the overthrow of Khomeini's oppressive regime."

The group, formed last June, is built around the Mujahedeen Khalq (People's Warriors) that helped Khomeini overthrow Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi. It later was outlawed by Khomeini's Islamic fundamentalists and created a base in Baghdad.

Members of the Mujahedeen Khalq describe themselves as Islamic socialists seeking a secular regime.

ArtsFest stars local artists

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

Artsfest '88 begins today, ringing in an entire week of celebration of regional arts. Artsfest, an annual event that has become a tradition in Iowa City, involves the cooperation of local organizations to promote the visual, performing, literal and theater arts of local and regional artists.

"The Johnson County Arts Council was the spawning place," said coordinator Kristen Summerwill. However, nobody seems to recall exactly when Artsfest began, either 1981 or 1982. Perhaps it's difficult to recall because of the many precedents set before Artsfest materialized. In its current form, Artsfest is family-oriented, is located downtown and is entirely free to the public.

Local businesses first approached the Arts Council to persuade it to hire traveling artists from the Minnesota Renaissance Fair for local promotion in Iowa City. This, however, promoted the arts of Minnesota, not Iowa City. The Johnson County Arts Council argued that Iowa City should be delving into the rich resources of local artists rather than importing them. Thus began the first twinking of Artsfest.

The problem was funding. "Some artists ended up performing for free," said Summerwill. In early years, Artsfest (then known as Arts Around the Plaza) was supported by the sale of buttons, T-shirts, local grants and "Stars in the Bars," a program in which, for a small fee, one could visit performances three nights in local bars. Since this essentially left the kids and teens out of participation, "Stars in the Bars" was dropped to lean more toward family-oriented activities. This was made possible due to the marketing strategy of Nancy Burham, said Summerwill.

"We sold up to 250 shirts," said Summerwill, whereas before Burham, they felt lucky to sell 60. Artsfest events used to be spread about over the city as well. Dance companies in residency, such as the Joffrey, would perform for small groups on the Hancher Auditorium lawn as part of Artsfest until three years ago. "We got involved with the (Iowa City) Downtown Association," said Summerwill, and events have been increasingly centralized downtown ever since.

The largest event which takes place downtown — the Midsummer Night's Revel — has the flavor of a Shakespearean celebration. The evening includes music, dance, mime, jugglers, clowns and the Downtown Association's Brat Bar-B-Q. The Midsummer Night's Revel takes place on Friday evening from 6 to 10 p.m.

Saturday the 25th will feature an entire day of performers and Art Fair '88. Art Fair '88 is a juried show of artists' work, with all pieces for sale. Last year was the first time the show was juried, a process which ensures the high quality of the works being exhibited.

Artsfest culminates on Sunday the 26th with Children's Day, coordinated by the Iowa City Public Library. It runs from noon until 4 p.m. and features art events for children such as face-painting and dragon-making. Music, jugglers, clowns and a calliope played by Ray Minor will also be featured.

According to Sara Brown, Midsummer Night's Revel coordinator, the goals of ArtsFest are to make the community aware of the wealth of art and activities right here in Iowa City and to support local and regional artists. This public exposure for the artists, it is hoped, will result in local employment for them — and it often does. Recently, Artsfest has been expanding beyond Iowa City with the inclusion of eastern Iowa artists such as the Eastern Iowa Brass Band.

ArtsFest operates on a budget of around $10,000 a year. The money goes to cover publicity costs and to pay the artists for their participation. The pay ranges from $25 for an individual performer to $300 for a large group.

"It depends on what the going rate is," said Summerwill. Only the artists are paid — not the administrators — which is unusual for a community function.

Allison injured in Miller 500

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Veteran driver Bobby Allison was injured in a first-lap accident Sunday in the NASCAR Miller 500 auto race that left him unconscious.

Allison, 50, of Hueytown, Ala., was listed as unconscious when he arrived at the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center with a possible bruised heart, broken ribs, and broken legs, track officials said. The driver had to be pried out of his car.

"He's still being treated in our shock trauma center," said hospital spokesperson Rob Stevens at 3:30 p.m. Stevens said Allison arrived at the hospital about 1:30 p.m.

"Because they are still working with him, I have no condition to report at this time," Stevens added.

Allison's son, Davey, also was in the Father's Day race and officials said the younger Allison remained in the race but kept in touch with his pit crew by radio in an effort to learn more about his father's condition.

The accident happened on the second turn of the first lap on the 2½-mile oval at Pocono International Raceway.

Allison's crew chief, Jimmy Fennig, said a tire on Allison's car blew out. The car then hit the wall, and was struck on the driver's side by Jocko Maggiano's. Maggiano was treated at the track for a cut chin and hand.

Allison was driving a Buick for Miller High Life, the race sponsor. Geoff Bodine won the $478,120 race with Mike Waltrip taking second. Davey Allison finished fifth.

Turner took a drop when her second shot landed in ground under repair just off the green, and her chip stopped nine feet from the pin. Her par putt then slid past the hole.

Furlong and Turner had finished regulation play tied at 205, 11 strokes under par in the 54-hole event at the 6,348-yard, par-72 West Course of the Hershey Country Club. Furlong came from three shots off the pace with the day's lowest round, a 65 that featured seven birdies, while Turner had six birdies against a lone bogey in a round of 66.

Jacobsen fires 64, 8 birdies at Open

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP)—Tour veteran Peter Jacobsen shot a course-record 64 in a final U.S. Open round at The Country Club Sunday that featured 12 one-putt greens and eight birdies.

Jacobsen finished the tournament 2-over par, well behind the leaders, but drew a winner's ovation as he strode up the 18th fairway.

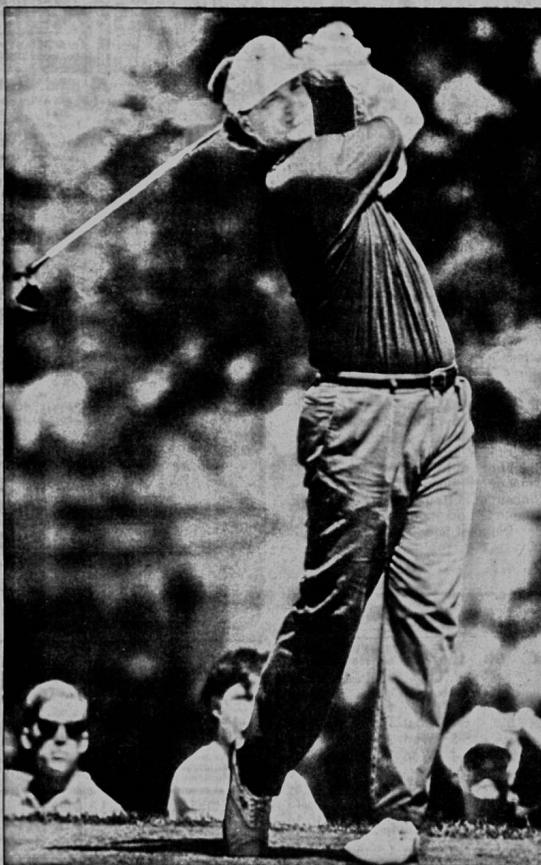

The 34-year-old Oregonian said he felt loose going into the last round since he was no longer in the fight for the lead. And a putter switch on the last day of the open accounted for his flawless work on the greens.

In addition to breaking the course record of 66 by two shots, Jacobsen tied Hubert Green's 1980 U.S. Open record for the most consecutive threes, racking up seven straight on the first seven holes. "I've played a lot of pros where it took guys eight holes to make their first four. It's just that those weren't preceded by threes," he said.

"I really enjoyed myself out there today. It was work but it was a lot of fun," Jacobsen said. "I've been using a center-shafted putter for five or six years," he said. "I went to a lighter blade putter. I liked the way it felt yesterday on the practice green."

A trip to the movie theater the night before might have helped, Jacobsen said.

"I was very loose, very relaxed today and I just kind of let it happen. It was like the movie 'Bull Durham' I saw last night. The catcher says to the pitcher, 'just don't think.' So I kept saying to myself, 'don't think.'"

Peter Jacobsen watches his drive off the fifth tee Sunday in the U.S. Open. Jacobsen, who was not among the leaders after the third round, shot a course-record 64, breaking the previous mark of 66 at The Country Club in Brookline, Mass. Jacobsen made eight birdies.

Jacobsen broke the previous course record of 66 set Saturday by Mark O'Meara and Scott Simpson Friday. Going in to the Open, the lowest competitive round over the 7,010-yard layout was 69 at the 1982 U.S. Amateur.

Beginning with a six-iron to three feet on the first hole, a 452-yard par 4, Jacobsen shot five-under 30 on the front nine.

cutive points for a one-point lead. Magic Johnson and Thomas exchanged baskets before Dumars converted two free throws for a 102-99 Detroit lead with a minute to go.

A jumper by Scott got the Lakers within one, before Thomas missed and Worthy rebounded with 27 seconds left, setting up Abdul-Jabbar's game-winning free throws.

The Lakers are in the NBA finals for the seventh time in the last nine years, and they are trying to become the first team since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics to repeat as champions.

The Lakers have won four titles in this decade and 10 overall, the first five when the franchise was located in Minneapolis.

Detroit is making its first appearance in the finals since moving to Michigan in 1957. As the Fort Wayne Pistons, they appeared in the championship series in 1955 and 1956, losing both times.

The Pistons won their first division title this season and they are playing in June for the first time in franchise history.

went in front with a 10-foot birdie putt on the 10th.

"I felt like I was pretty much in control after that," he said. "And I was. But I just putted so poorly on the back."

He also sent a uniformed policeman into the gallery to chase away a man who had been heckling him. Strange missed a birdie opportunity from about seven feet on the 14th and dropped back into a tie for the lead when Faldo made his only birdie of the day, from about eight feet, on the 15th.

On the 16th, Faldo got into a bunker and Strange's approach ran through the green.

NBA, CBS: Which is worse?

The NBA on CBS. It's F-a-n-tastic. No it isn't. The NBA on CBS is simply awful.

It's bad enough the championship series lasts longer than a Jimmy Stewart acceptance speech, but it's turning into more of a joke than it has been the past several years. At its best, it is an almost perfect display of grace and power. At its worst, it is a drawn out series that resembles a roving boxing match more than a basketball game. I've seen less action on ESPN's kick boxing specials.

Game 5 in Pontiac's Silverdome Thursday was the final game in that arena. Fans in attendance were treated to a memorable ending, an elbow-throwing tiff between best friends — Los Angeles' Magic Johnson and Detroit's Isiah Thomas — while fans at home were treated to an equally displeasing performance: CBS' attempt at covering the game.

When the network wasn't showing one of its 43 slow-motion replays of Bill Laimbeer complaining to an official, it was showing one of its 43 slow-motion replays of Laimbeer fouling somebody.

Sunday's game was no better. Intentional fouls in the final five seconds turned it into a pseudo-hockey game, complete with players grabbing jerseys and referees grabbing players.

CBS interspersed its coverage with in-depth, investigative interviews of the FEMO sort. You know, FEMO — For Enquiring Minds Only. Thursday's up-close and personal look at Van Halen by CBS' Pat O'Brien was a good one. The only thing missing was a cry of "Rock and Roll, dudes!" from bassist Michael Anthony. Great reporting from O'Brien, who stood there with a stupid grin on his face the whole time.

Later, with the game in hand, O'Brien combed the sidelines and came up with Stuart Susk. Yes, that's right, Stuart Susk. Looks like his name — 5-foot-3, looked more like an accountant and spoke in numbers. The only thing missing was a bow-tie. Susk charted all the Pistons' plays, and he had absolutely nothing worthwhile to talk about. But that didn't stop O'Brien from standing there with a stupid grin on his face.

While O'Brien was inept on the sidelines, play-by-play announcer Dick Stockton was expounding brilliant observations at every given moment.

With five minutes remaining in the game, Stockton came up with this immortal gem: "I think you'll see phenomenal defense from here on in." Thanks, Dick. You major in philosophy?

But it was the background during the halftime report that was a comfort from all of the above. At least people didn't have to watch a boring scoreboard. They watched the Seagram's Game Summary. It was enough to make me want to crack one open every time I saw a high five.

Future Hawk nets 25 in Prime Time play

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Two incoming Iowa Hawkeyes got their first taste of Prime Time League basketball Sunday in helping Fitzpatrick's to a 152-107 victory over Hills Bank at Iowa City High School.

Wade Lookingbill and Troy Skinner will be on the Iowa roster next season as Coach Tom Davis' two in-state recruits.

Lookingbill, who led Fort Dodge High School to the 3A state title, scored 25 points, the fourth-leading scorer in the contest behind Fitzpatrick's Michael Ingram (36), Dale Turner Jr. (30) and Hills Bank's Brian Garner (44).

"I've been playing a lot of ball lately," said an exhausted Lookingbill, named Iowa's Mr. Basketball this past season.

The duo will be playing together in the Dr. Pepper North-South All-Star game Wednesday in the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls, Iowa. Next week the two first-team all-stars will head to Alexandria, Va., for the 19-and-under AAU tournament.

"I got home at midnight last night and then I had to drive five hours to get here today," said Skinner, who was the runner-up for Mr. Basketball honors for Palmer High School this past year.

Both said Davis hasn't talked to either about their status for next season.

"I'm just happy to be a part of it (the 1988-89 team)," said Skinner, who finished Sunday with three points.

Lookingbill said he will be making a transition from playing the center position in high school to playing a wing forward at Iowa. But as far as next season, no mention of redshirting has been made.

In Fitzpatrick's win, Ingram led the way with 26 first-half points as his team rolled to a 79-48 halftime lead.

Fitzpatrick's, which leads the league with a 3-0 record pending

Sunday's late games, finished with six players in double figures. Hills Bank, meanwhile, played with seven players. Three of its top four picks in the Prime Time draft did not show up to play Sunday.

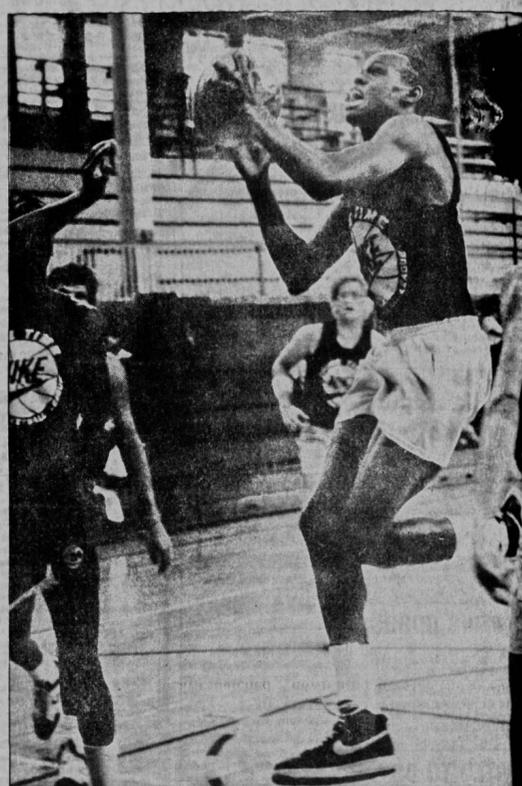

In Sunday's other early game, First National Bank topped The Athlete's Foot 140-120 as Iowa's Ed Horton tossed in 24 points and Northern Iowa's Steve Phye followed with 23 for the winners.

Todd Hutcheson, formerly of Western Illinois, led The Athlete's Foot, scoring 38 points and grabbing a game-high 12 rebounds.

Northern Iowa's Kent Pollpeter and Mankato State's David Venzke scored 25 and 19 points, respectively, for The Athlete's Foot.

In Sunday's late games, Southgate Development met Hargrave-McEleney in a battle of the unbeaten and Iowa State Bank played Eby's Athletic Company.

League play continues Wednesday with four games. The matchups are The Athlete's Foot vs. Hargrave-McEleney and Southgate Development vs. Hills Bank in the 6 p.m. games. At 7:30 p.m., it will be Fitzpatrick's vs. Eby's Athletic Company and Iowa State Bank vs. First National Bank.

Iowa's Brian Garner, playing for Hills Bank of the Prime Time League, poured in 44 points in a losing effort Sunday at City High.

Strange, Faldo head for U.S. Open playoff

Title on line in 18-hole shootout

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Curtis Strange saved par from a bunker on the 18th hole Sunday and finished tied with Nick Faldo after the regulation 72 holes to force an 18-hole playoff for the 88th U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Final U.S. Open scores

The playoff will begin at 1 p.m., CDT, Monday at The Country Club in suburban Boston.

Both Strange and Faldo, the current British Open champion, finished regulation play at 278, six shots under par.

Strange, a leader by one stroke at the end of three rounds, played the final 18 in 72, one over par. Faldo, also playing in the final twosome, shot 71.

Strange, a record-setting money-winner on the PGA Tour in two of the last three seasons and needing only a major championship title to confirm his stature in the game, had this title in his grasp until he three-putted from short range — about eight feet — on the sloping 17th green.

The bogey dropped him into a tie with Faldo, the phlegmatic Englishman who won the 1987 British Open with 18 pars in the final round at Muirfield, Scotland.

They were tied at the 18th tee. Faldo drove the fairway and Strange's drive trickled into light rough.

Faldo played his second to the left fringe, some 25 feet away. Strange's face took on a grim cast when he put his approach in the right-front bunker.

Strange and Faldo, each of whom had some problems with spectators earlier in the day, had to fight their way through an unruly, stampeding gallery to get to the green.

With their wives standing side-by-side in the gallery, Faldo surveyed his putt and Strange considered his situation.

Strange played a magnificent sand shot to about 18 inches and stood, leaning on his putter, while Faldo tried the putt that would make him the first British subject to hold both major national championships since Tony Jacklin in 1970.

It missed. Both tapped in for par and the playoff was on.

D.A. Weibring, Mark O'Meara and Steve Pate, winner of two PGA Tour titles this season, tied for third at 280, two shots back. Pate closed with a 67, O'Meara matched par 71 and Weibring had a 72.

Defending champion Scott Simpson and Weibring each had a share of the lead at one time or another over the front side, but by the turn it was a two-man struggle between Strange and Faldo.

Faldo made nine consecutive pars over the front while Strange had some adventures.

One stroke in front, he surrendered his lead with consecutive bogeys on the second, where he took three from the fringe, and a third, where he failed to get up and down after missing the green.

Strange blew an opportunity to draw even when he missed a three-foot birdie putt on the fifth but got a share of the lead with a 30-footer on the seventh.

Lakers survive series scare, sneak past Pistons in Game 6

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar hit two free throws with 14 seconds remaining and Magic Johnson scored 11 of his 22 points in the fourth quarter as the Los Angeles Lakers defeated the Detroit Pistons 103-102 Sunday and evened the NBA championship series at 3-3.

Johnson had a record 14 of his 19 assists in the first half of the Lakers' win, which sets up a title-deciding meeting at the Forum Tuesday night, the first NBA game ever played in the summer.

That game will either give Los Angeles the first repeat championship in 19 years or Detroit its first NBA title. If the Lakers beat the Pistons, they will become the first team to win three seven-game playoff series in one season.

Isiah Thomas was brilliant in defeat for Detroit, scoring a finals-record 25 of his career playoff-high 43 points in the third quarter. James Worthy led the Lakers in scoring with 28 points.

After Abdul-Jabbar's free throws made it 103-102, Joe Dumars of the Pistons missed a jumper and the Lakers' Byron Scott was fouled immediately with five seconds remaining. Scott missed both free throws but the Pistons were unable to get off a shot that would have won it.

Johnson's 14 first-half assists broke the previous mark of 13 he shared with Houston's Robert Reid. Johnson holds the championship series record of 21 assists for a game.

Worthy, held to seven and 14 points in the two Los Angeles losses at the Silverdome, nearly reached that total in the first half with 19 points on 9-for-14 shooting.

Eleven of Worthy's points came in the second quarter when the Lakers outscored Detroit 33-20 to turn a six-point deficit into a 53-46 halftime lead.

Thomas hit six of seven shots and 14 points in a span of 4:38 early in the second half as the Pistons closed the gap to 64-62 with 6:23 left in the third quarter.

Los Angeles responded with six consecutive points to rebuild its margin to eight, and it was 74-66 with 3:46 left before Thomas got hot again.

Recent money-saving may solve the UI's financial problems, but the steps are almost sure repercussions that run long-term goals.

At a press conference last week, Vice President for Financial Services Susan Sussman defended the hiring freeze and other money-saving steps as appropriate measures. The action is necessary because the Legislature approved a budget for $27 million less than officials had wanted, she said.

While such a deficit action of some sort, Phillips threatens to delay the achievement of major goals and projects of the UI's progress.

The recent hiring freeze and questions about how the university will need to wait for departmental vacancies to expand new programs in departments are facing fewer faculty members to preserve existing academic programs.

"We don't know what the Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Ken Sussman said. We're going to have to live with an eye toward a few people as possible."

Betsy Altmaier, faculty committee chairperson, said Thursday's announcement immediately postponed additional faculty cuts and opportune time.

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti. Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, military government Minister, announced his resignation after the 4-month-old civil administration of President Manigat.

The 55-year-old career named a 12-member cabinet and included only one civilian member. He would rule by decree as president.

Manigat, who was seized during an evening at his hillside villa in Port-au-Prince, arrived in Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, with his family, said military officials. The president, 57, was staying at the Dominican Concorde Hotel, a spokesman said.

In a short, live broadcast run television from the Palace, Namphy said "betrayed your confidence" and "labeled the constitution upheld."

"The future of democracy is at stake," said the general, accompanied by elements of the 7,000-man army.
