Analysis

The 1997 UI study, "Building a Better World," which included 60 interviews with public institutions in the United States, was conducted by the University of Iowa's Richard Hendee Research Associates. The study's main objective was to determine which aspects of public institutions were perceived as positive by the public. The study also aimed to identify strategies that could be used to improve public relations and enhance the image of public institutions. The study's results indicated that public institutions were perceived positively in terms of their educational, cultural, and community development activities. The study recommended several strategies, including increased communication, greater transparency, and more active engagement with the public.

Departments endure constraints on staffing

By Mary Still

The recent hiring freezes at public universities have increased the need for departments to revise their staffing plans. As the number of faculty members decreases, departments must find ways to maintain the quality of education and research.

Most departments are still struggling to meet their obligations, even with the new funding. The budget cuts and the freeze have forced departments to make difficult decisions about who to keep and who to let go. The freeze has also made it difficult for departments to attract new faculty members.

Iowa City residents give school district grade of B

By Heathcliff Mahler

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents gave the Iowa City School District an overall grade of B in a recent survey conducted by the statewide Iowa Parents for Education. The survey revealed that a majority of Iowa City residents are dissatisfied with the school district's performance.

In the preliminary report released by the IPE, the survey showed that 54% of local citizens believed that the school board was doing a good job, while 46% thought the board was not doing a good job. With a scale ranging from 1 to 10, the 10th-grade citizens who took the survey rated the school board with a rating of 2.5.

In the highest rating in the survey was for the district's reputation. The citizens believed that the reputation is the public's way of condemning the school board for their management practices.

The Iowa City School District is one of the highest-rated school systems in the nation, according to the Iowa State Board of Education. The district is comprised of approximately 1,500 students in grades K-12.

The survey also revealed that students had a high school policy of suspending students for a maximum of 10 days.

School officials said that the survey results reflect the community's concern over the district's performance.

In the lowest rating in the survey was for the school's budget. Citizens believed that the budget is the public's way of condemning the school board for its management practices.

Across the board

It is easy for a city dweller to see the world as a minor amusement. After all, farmers are the ones affected by the lack of rainfall.

Then, there's the fact, the years of depressed commodity and land prices, many farmers looked to the next year as a year of salvation. 1988 promised to be a year to turn the corner out of the agricultural depression and drive toward economic prosperity.

The ultimate paradox of the drought is that while commodity prices struggle to reach record levels, the farmer does not have a crop to sell. He can't even plant his crops — the drought has destroyed his crops.

Iowa City offers unique opportunities to liberal arts students here from New York or San Francisco if they just had eyes to see. It exposes them to an incredible program of study and jobs. I would say that the core of what's ailing our music, our culture, our entertainment business is the core of what's ailing our society.

I'm sure if Beethoven, Mozart and Bach were here, they would not have written the music that they did.

Iowa City is a treasure. It's a great place to be.

I believe in the church, but I am a Brooklyn Dodger fan. I've been watching the Dodgers all my life, but I never thought they would win a world championship. In 1955, we had a great team, but we lost to the New York Giants. In 1957, we had a real good team, but we lost to the Milwaukee Braves. This year, we have a great team, and we're going to win the World Series.

I've been watching the games on television, and I think the Dodgers are the best team in the league. They have great players like Sandy Koufax, Don Drysdale, and Maury Wills. I think they'll win the pennant and then win the World Series.

I'm happy that we have a great team, and I'm looking forward to seeing them in action. I'll be rooting for the Dodgers all the way.

Faldo, the 32-year-old Englands who had struggled through a 75 in the 20th round for the American national championship.

The victory was the first of Streek's career in one of the greatest upsets in golf, and a fitting climax for a week that has proved a gold mine for the game's greatest players.

With those strokes stood as he matched the 14th hole at the Country Club at Brookline, Streek sliced a theorizing shot into the rough for a double bogey.

The 15th victory of Streek's 13-year career and his third this season, was worth $385,000 from the $2 million tour at his own urging to be better suited to the Open. In the Open, he has finished 10th in four of his last five rounds.

Just minutes after Streek hit his 14th hole, he was asked whether he was surprised at his performance. He was.
