UI hiring freeze may cripple new projects

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Recent money-saving measures may solve the UI's fiscal 1989 budget problems, but these same steps are almost sure to have repercussions that run counter to long-term goals.

At a press conference last week, UI Vice President for Finance and University Services Susan Phillips defended the hiring freeze and other money-saving steps as appropriate measures. The actions were mainly necessary because the Iowa Legislature approved a fiscal 1989 budget for $27 million less than UI officials had wanted, she said.

While such a deficit demands action of some sort, Phillips' plan threatens to delay the realization of major goals and projects crucial to the UI's progress.

Analysis

The 1987 UI self-study, "Building on Strength," suggested as a goal that the UI move into the top 10 among public institutions in the nation. UI Interim President Richard Remington has also called for the university to become a top-10 research institute.

The UI Laser Center, along with the top-notch scientists it promised to attract, was intended to be a major contributor to the UI's rise as an eminent research center.

But plans for the laser center have gone awry. Former UI President James O. Freedman said about two years ago three of the top research scientists in the country were ready to join the laser staff.

At present, the UI is still trying to fill the three endowed chairs in physics, chemistry and engineering. And according to UI Vice President for Academic Affairs Philip Hubbard, the hiring freeze may affect these positions.

"There's really no telling what areas the freeze will affect," Hubbard said. "The freeze is university-wide, but if we had a laser scientist who was highly qualified, we would have to consider making an exception."

And even if the laser staff is ready, the building may not be.

UI Director of Planning and Administrative Services Dick Gibson said Monday the report on laser center design development has been withdrawn from the agenda for the June 22-23 state Board of Regents meeting in Sioux City.

"We just received cost estimates for construction, and we're over budget," Gibson said. "We didn't expect this to happen."

But Phillips said last week a second year of double-digit faculty salary increases would help offset detrimental effects of the freeze and would allow the UI to continue progressing toward a ranking among the top public institutions in the nation.

"Setting salary increases as our highest priority was absolutely the right thing to do," Phillips said. "Faculty salaries are crucial to achieving our goals. If we are not competitive, we are not going to achieve excellence."

But according to UI Student Senate President Melinda Hess, salary increases will do little to increase the UI's standing when coupled with the hiring freeze.

"It seems like the antithesis of what we should be doing," she said.

In addition to ironing out problems with future projects and faculty, the UI will have to resolve difficulties with existing buildings and programs.

The UI Physical Plant has a projected deficit of $3.3 million for fiscal 1989. The UI has increased

Departments endure constraints on staffing

By Mary Brill
The Daily Iowan

The recent hiring freeze raises questions about how long the UI will need to wait to replace departmental vacancies and to expand new programs. Many departments are faced with having fewer faculty members to preserve existing academic programs.

"We don't know what to expect," Associate Vice President for Academic Affairs Kenneth Moll said. "We have to save some money. We're going to do this with an eye toward hurting as few people as possible."

Betsy Altmaier, faculty welfare committee chairperson, said last Thursday's announcement to immediately postpone hiring additional faculty came at an opportune time.

"It's certainly a lot better to know now than at the beginning of the fall semester," she said. "There's tremendous pressure to offer the same amount, and yet we're short people to cover these courses."

Most departments are still uncertain how profoundly the freeze will affect their programs.

"All we've been told is that all hiring will be frozen, but you can appeal to have a certain position unfrozen," said Bruce Gronbeck, chairman of communication studies. He said his department will be down about 15 percent in instructional power.

The UI School of Art and Art History's drawing and painting program also has vacancies.

"We are doing something in the art school we've never done

Iowa City remembers Stonewall Uprising

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

Nearly 20 years ago, in the midst of Vietnam War protests and civil rights rallies, an incident in New York's Greenwich Village became a catalyst for another American movement — the push for lesbian and gay liberation.

Coined the Stonewall Uprising, those three nights of gay rioting (in response to police harassment at the Stonewall Inn bar) in June 1969 triggered the creation of the first militant gay organizations and the growth of gay support groups around the country.

And Iowa, along with several other spots around the country, continues to commemorate the Stonewall Uprising and celebrate the local gay and lesbian community during Gay and Lesbian Pride Week, being held this year June 17-25.

"The Stonewall incident caught the public's fancy for some reason, but the liberation movement was something that built up over at least 20 years of activism in the gay community," Don Engstrom, a Pride Week organizer, said.

Engstrom said Iowa City was one of the first centers of gay activism in the early 1970s.

"Iowa City was a real magical place at that time," he said. "There was a lot of energy here — people were willing to put in lots of hours of work, and that's what it took."

Appropriately, then, Iowa City has been chosen as the location for the state Pride Week parade and rally Saturday at noon on the Pentacrest, according to David Tingwald, a Pride Week organizer.

"Within a week of our parade, there will be parades all over the country," Tingwald said.

"There's an internally focused aspect of it that is a celebration of our survival and growth as gay and lesbian individuals and as a community," he said. "It's also a time to show ourselves to the straight community and share what we have to offer."

Tess Catalano, another Pride Week organizer, said she considers the week to be a cultural event.

"We try to offer some kinds of cultural events that will be fun for the gay community and also for the heterosexual community," Catalano said. "I quite definitely think it's a different culture. If you don't fit the norm, you're going to see the world in a different way — out of that comes a different culture. We all probably still do our laundry on Sunday, but it does affect how we live our lives."

The week's events include: a slide show on the gay athletic competition Gay Games in the Union Lucas-Dodge Room at 7:30 p.m. today; a multimedia presentation by Eric Garber titled "Tain't Nobody's Business: Gays and Lesbians in Jazz-Era Harlem" in Phillips Hall Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday; a concert of women's music performed by Tess Catalano and Rosi Gowdy in Communication Studies Building Room 101 at 7:30 p.m. Thursday; a picnic at Happy Hollow Park at 3 p.m. Saturday (after the parade); and a talent/culture show at 7 p.m. Sunday at 10 S. Gilbert St.

Namphy, military take control of Haiti

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy formed a military government Monday with himself in charge, after deposing the 4-month-old civilian administration of President Leslie Manigat.

The 55-year-old career soldier named a 12-member Cabinet that included only one civilian and said he would rule by decree as the new president.

Manigat, who was seized Sunday evening at his hillside villa outside Port-au-Prince, arrived in the Dominican Republic on Monday with his family, said military sources in Santo Domingo. The ousted president, 57, was staying at the Dominican Concorde Hotel, a hotel spokesman said.

In a short, live broadcast on state-run television from the National Palace, Namphy said Manigat "betrayed your confidence and violated the constitution he swore to uphold."

"The future of democracy was at stake," said the general, who was accompanied by elements of every unit in Haiti's 7,000-member armed forces. "The army must protect the superior interests of the country and must head the country. To this end, a military government has been formed."

Namphy, who spoke in French for about five minutes, pledged to "guarantee that all the conquests of Feb. 7 (when his three-man junta turned over the government to Manigat) will be respected. To our powerful friends and to international organizations, I guarantee the respect of all commitments."

State Department spokesperson Phyllis Oakley said in Washington: "The United States government strongly condemns this serious blow to hopes for democracy in that troubled land."

Namphy's action halted, at least for now, the slow journey toward democracy begun after President Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country Feb. 7, 1986, ending the 29-year dictatorship founded by his father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier.

The general, who was Jean-Claude Duvalier's chief of staff, led the junta that ruled Haiti until Manigat won presidential election this year with the army's help.

Haiti, a nation of 6 million people and the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic.

Henri Namphy

Manigat won presidential election this year with the army's help.

Haiti, a nation of 6 million people and the poorest country in the Western Hemisphere, shares the Caribbean island of Hispaniola with the Dominican Republic.

Manigat began his disastrous confrontation with the army, the traditional base of power since independence in 1804, by removing Namphy as commander on Friday. Manigat also reassigned two dozen other officers Sunday, many of them Namphy's allies.

He accused Namphy of insubordination for ordering the transfers of several officers without presidential permission, including Manigat's main military ally, Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Paul. The barracks of Paul's command, the 700-man Dessalines Battalion, is directly behind the National Palace.

Paul, who has been indicted by a U.S. federal court on charges of drug trafficking, was in the group standing around Namphy during the television appearance Monday, but whether he had allied himself with the general was unclear.

At first, Manigat's move appeared to be a significant political coup, but it backfired almost immediately.

On Monday, Namphy said the president "attacked the army and shook its high command to make it a docile instrument of personal power. The future of democracy and liberty was at stake."

He was flanked by Gen. Williams Regala, who also was on the provisional three-man junta; Col. Paul; and Paul's wife and child.

A few hours later the military announced the new Cabinet, dissolution of the National Assembly and Namphy's intention to rule by decree.

Col. Gary Leon, general secretary of the armed forces, read the names of the Cabinet members on television. Regala, who was defense minister under Manigat and signed the order retiring Namphy, will be minister of defense and interior.

No public opposition greeted Namphy on his first day back in the palace. There were no anti-government demonstrations, statements by opposition leaders or rallies for Manigat, whose political headquarters was ransacked.

The international airport in Port-au-Prince was closed, along with most schools and businesses in the capital.

$5,000 found in hotel room

DES MOINES (AP) — For the second time in five months, maids at a Motel 6 have found a bundle of cash worth thousands of dollars inside a room.

"What, again?" asked police detective Warren Martin after a cleaning woman reported finding $5,000 on Sunday.

Martin has been trying to locate the owner of the last batch of money, about $10,000, at the budget motel.

Officer Larry Smiley said the maid who found the latest money was "really pretty calm about it. I can see someone forgetting their toothbrush, maybe even their luggage. But all that money?"

Iran-Contra probe indicts ex-CIA man

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA's former station chief in Costa Rica was indicted Monday on charges he participated in an illegal conspiracy to arm the Nicaraguan rebels and lied to his superiors to keep the operation secret.

Joseph F. Fernandez, 51, also known as Tomas Castillo, was charged with helping former National Security Council aide Oliver L. North and arms dealer Richard V. Secord ship arms to the Contras in 1986 when Congress had banned U.S. military assistance to the rebels.

The five-count indictment also charges that Fernandez obstructed the Iran-Contra investigation conducted last year by the presidential commission headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, by stating falsely that he did not know that North was involved in covert aid to the Contras or that supplies Fernandez helped deliver included weapons and ammunition.

The indictment alleges that Fernandez oversaw construction of an airstrip in northern Costa Rica to help delivery of arms to the Contras and encouraged rebel leaders to reopen the so-called Southern Front of Nicaragua's civil war with promises of military assistance.

He also is charged with lying to an official of the CIA's Central America Task Force and later the CIA's Office of Inspector General about the true nature of the airstrip.

The indictment by the special federal grand jury investigating the Iran-Contra affair signalled that independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh is continuing his probe while preparing to try North, Secord, former national security adviser John M. Poindexter and arms dealer Albert Hakim on a separate conspiracy charge.

The judge in those cases, Gerhard A. Gesell, strongly indicated last week that he was ready to set a date for North to go to trial in U.S. District Court.

Gesell has ruled that North and his co-defendants should be tried separately on charges they conspired illegally to divert U.S.-Iran arms sale profits to the Contras.

Laurence Shtasel, an associate independent counsel, said the grand jury was continuing to meet and suggested that its 18-month term would be extended when it expires next month.

"The grand jury's investigation is ongoing. I have no further comment as to what you should or shouldn't expect," Shtasel told reporters outside the U.S. Courthouse after the indictment was returned by the grand jury. Fernandez, who was named as an undicted co-conspirator in the charges returned March 16 against North, Poindexter, Hakim and Secord, is accused of conspiring to defraud the U.S. government by participating in a clandestine arms-supply network for the Contras.

The indictment charges that in 1985, Fernandez "worked in coordination with his co-conspirators in establishing a clandestine supply network to support military and paramilitary operations in Nicaragua by the Contras" at a time when direct U.S. military aid was banned by Congress.

As part of the conspiracy count, Fernandez is charged with making a false statement to an official of the CIA's Central American Task Force in late September 1986 during a meeting at the agency's headquarters about the true nature of the airstrip.

$49.7 million collected by Johnson County

State Auditor Richard Johnson reported last week that Johnson County collected $49.7 million in property taxes during the fiscal year which will end June 30.

This sum includes $4 million in tax credits from the state, according to a state audit report.

Cities, townships, school districts and other taxing bodies in the county received $38.9 million of the tax income from the county.

Other county receipts included $2.1 million from the state, $1.3 million from the federal government and $859,276 in interest on investments.

Tax income spent for county operations decreased by 7 percent from the previous year, totaling $17.9 million.

Other programs receiving county funds included $3.2 million for roads and transportation, $4.2 million for mental health and $2.7 million for public safety.

UI will help produce health care videodiscs

The UI announced Monday it will join a consortium of 15 institutions in the United States and Canada in producing a series of educational health care videodiscs.

Partially supported by IBM, the program calls on each school to produce five videodiscs in a variety of medical disciplines, said the project's director, Rex Montgomery, associate dean of the UI College of Medicine.

He said the project is the first of its kind from both an educational aspect and a technological point of view: All modules produced will be used with the IBM Info-Window system which can overlay computer generated text and graphics on top of a videodisc image. It also allows use of a touch screen as well as keyboard input.

"The completion of this project will add significantly to our teaching tools and give us experience in a technology that expands the horizons of the classroom," Montgomery said.

After the videodiscs are reviewed, each institution will share the discs they have produced with all other consortium members at no cost, he added.

At the UI, the project is a joint effort between the College of Medicine and the Weeg Computing Center. By the end of 1989, departments in the colleges of Medicine and Dentistry will develop the videodiscs in human genetics/modern medicine, basic ophthalmology, ophthalmic pathology, somatic complaints/etiology unknown and diagnosis of head and neck pain.

Iowa City residents give school district grade of B

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents gave the Iowa City School District an overall grade of B in a recent survey conducted by the American College Testing Program.

In the preliminary report released by the ACT last week, over 400 local citizens were asked to use a five-point scale to rate the quality of Iowa City schools in terms of district administration, teaching staff and school curriculum.

With five equaling an A and one an F, district-level administration received the lowest rating in the survey — 3.44, a grade of C, as did the school board, with a rating of 3.49.

The highest rating in the survey was for the district's reputation — 4.31. Ranking higher than both the administration and school board were elementary school faculty and principals with a 4.16 and secondary school faculty and principals with a 3.87 rating.

Board member Orville Townsend attributed the low rating the school board received to the fact that this year's board is comprised of all new members.

"Basically, I think we're in a transition period," he said. "This board is different than previous boards, and I think the election last fall was an indication by the voters that they wanted a change."

"As a result, this board has been more involved this year than in the past — more involved than we really want to be and more visible than we would like," he said.

Close to one-half of the survey respondents felt computer proficiency, a business or vocational course, a fine arts course and a community service project should all be mandatory requirements for high-school graduation.

Other changes advocated by those surveyed included the addition of Japanese language classes to school curriculum and an increased emphasis on mathematics, English skills and foreign languages — the classes determined to be most important.

Approximately 20 percent of the respondents agreed that a shortage of funds is the biggest problem the district faces, putting substance abuse second in concern.

District teaching staff and diversity of school curriculum were voted the most impressive aspects of Iowa City schools, and 18 percent of those surveyed agreed strongly that teachers and principals are open to the needs and opinions of the community.

An enrichment tax to raise funds for the district was favored by 40 percent of the respondents, while 40.6 percent were opposed to the idea of an added tax. The tax was recently proposed as a possibility by Iowa City Schools Superintendent David Cronin.

Townsend said Monday that he appreciated the ACT survey because "any information from the public is a plus." He added that the results of the survey showed that Iowa City residents are well informed and in tune with the concerns facing the school district.

"We have a high-caliber school district here in Iowa City, and this is the public's way of saying they want to keep it that way," he said.

Plan for nuclear evacuation concerns Iowa City officials

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

A revision of a plan meant to deal with the possibility of a nuclear emergency at the Duane Arnold Nuclear Power Plant has become the source of widespread discontent among Johnson County officials, who charge the plan is both inadequate and vague.

The plan calls for Johnson County to serve as host for 22,120 evacuees in the event of a nuclear accident at the plant, which is located near Palo, Iowa. The plan is a revision of a 1985 plan which originally called for the county to host a higher number of evacuees.

Both the Iowa City Council and the Johnson County Board of Supervisors have agreed to approve the plan, but members of both groups indicated they had reservations.

The Iowa Electric & Power Co. is currently working with the Iowa City Council on a letter being sent to the Federal Emergency Management Administration, which says the city council will sign the proposed nuclear evacuation plan but with reservations, Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins said.

Atkins said there are still a lot of problems with the plan. He wants Iowa Electric to answer questions such as how to monitor incoming evacuees, how to feed and house the evacuees and how to get people adequately trained to deal with such a crisis.

For example, Atkins said, when Gay's Meat Locker burned down this spring the city had to evacuate about 500 people.

"That evacuation tied up our communication lines completely," Atkins said, adding that a larger number of evacuees could create even more complications.

"What happens when you deal with radiation when you can't see or smell it? Iowa City isn't far enough — people will want to go to Missouri," Atkins said.

Frank Begley, FEMA chief of Natural and Technological Hazards Division, said the evacuation plans are still not final and sections of the plan have not been completed. He added that if the council sends him a letter stating its reservations of the plan he could not accept it.

"We will hold Iowa City accountable for implementing the plan they approve," Begley said. "And we will exercise this plan to insure the protection of the people."

Begley said FEMA runs tests of these plans by creating a scenario and then making sure the people are trained and available to handle the crisis. In the event that the plan was ineffective, Begley said FEMA would issue a negative finding and begin the investigation process on a new plan.

Begley said it is difficult to determine the damages of an accident at the nuclear plant because there is a wide range of disasters which could occur. He added everyone must be prepared in the event of a disaster.

Iowa Electric was advised to iron out details of the plan with Assistant County Attorney Linda McGuire. She raised her concerns about contamination monitoring, availability of equipment and employees to carry out the plan, as well as what would happen in the event of an after-hours accident.

The current plan provides for evacuees to be housed in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the UI Field House, the UI Recreation Center, City High School, West High School and Southeast Junior High.

Courts

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with third-degree theft Monday after he allegedly didn't have money in his bank account to pay for checks he wrote in December 1987, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Roger Clarke, 26, RR 1, signed a check to K-Mart on Dec. 22 for $56 and on Dec. 29 for $151. He did not have money in his Hills Bank and Trust Co. account to cover the checks, according to court records.

On Feb. 9, 1988, Clarke was served a personal notice from the Johnson County Sheriff's Office demanding payment of the checks. Clarke allegedly made contact with K-Mart in an attempt to take care of the checks, according to court records.

Clarke was sent a notice stating Hills Bank and Trust Co. had closed his account for failure to cover the payment of the checks. A preliminary hearing in the case is set for July 7, according to court records.

State s in farm

DES MOINES (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Dale asked Monday for greater help from farmers on fragile land and cheap feed for cattle farmers but warned that farmers must be careful not to panic.

Cochran said a drought will coordinate delivery of hay, and a state task force will monitor the near-record prices.

"Every day that goes by without relief from the skies is a day of concern for all of us," said at a news conference.

U.S. Rep. David Nagle, at the same news conference, said it is likely that U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng will cut the acres "as rapidly as possible."

Cochran said Lyng should cut hay on Conservation Reserve Program acres for 30 days. That is highly land that farmers have been kept out of production years.

Lyng has freed that land in Iowa counties, and Cochran should be allowed statewide.

In addition, Cochran should allow farmers access to emergency livestock feed where they can buy feed at a percentage of the loan rate.

"We need to have a coordinated response to this emergency from the state, federal government," said. "We must be careful not to panic, however."

DES MOINES (AP) — The Moines Chamber of Commerce led what is increasingly expensive to impress Iowa lawmakers disclosure documents on Monday.

The Des Moines business spent nearly $10,000 on breakfasts and dinners during the week and ended up spending more than $11,000, making it one of the winners in the wining and dining sweepstakes.

To head off a repeat performance, legislative staffers launched a campaign to remind special interest groups that legislators have time to conduct business that next year's social already lists as many events a night.

Legislators are touchy about relationships with lobbyists, especially since a legislative party at Mingo blew charges of nude dancing and sexual misconduct.

That shyness hasn't stopped an increasing flow of special interest groups to make sure lawmakers are and have their thirst quenched.

UI committee to bestow affirmative action honor

By Hilery Livengood

To honor groups on campus that have contributed to the advancement of minorities, the UI Affirmative Action Award Committee is reviewing applications for its 1988 award.

The second annual award will be given to the UI department or unit within a department which has made outstanding achievements toward affirmative action on campus.

"We're looking for the department which has shown an increase in the number of underrepresented individuals on their staff or which has made any type of affirmative action towards affirmative action," said committee Chairwoman Claspie Hoyle, an associate professor in the College of Dentistry.

"We want to honor any progress in teaching, research or service which has made a difference for minorities on campus," she said.

Seven departments have applied to date, and Hoyle expects two others to send applications soon. The selection committee will send its letter of recommendation to UI Interim President Richard Remington by July 1. Award winners receive $1,000 and a plaque.

The Affirmative Action Award is the third part of an affirmative action initiative program proposed by June D. Cargile, director of the UI Affirmative Action Office, and endorsed by former UI President James O. Freedman.

The first part of the plan was the development of an administrative internship program at the UI which would place minorities in high-level administration positions within the UI, according to 1987 award committee Chairwoman Ann Rhodes. This program was implemented during the 1987-88 school year.

Also included in the initiative program were two awards to faculty members which would provide funding for summer education programs off the UI campus, Rhodes said. The Affirmative Action Award was first awarded last year. The UI College of Law Admissions Department and the Women's Research and Action Center were the 1987 co-winners.

"A good example of a meritorious department is last year's co-winner, the law school admissions department," Rhodes said.

"The law school had a 10 percent minority enrollment rate for several years when the Board of Regents asked state law schools to aim for an 8.5 percent minority enrollment rate last year," Rhodes said. "It is a credit to that college that they had been doing that for several years."

All departments at the UI are expected to support affirmative action, though.

"We expect that everyone will have an interest and commitment to affirmative action. This award honors a group which has done something above and beyond the call of duty in that area," Rhodes said.

State seeks drought relief in farmland, feed programs

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa Agriculture Secretary Dale Cochran asked Monday for greater access to hay being grown on fragile farmland and cheap feed programs for cattle farmers but warned "we must be careful not to panic."

Cochran said a drought hot line will coordinate delivery of scarce hay, and a state task force will monitor the near-record dry weather.

"Every day that goes by without relief from the skies is a great deal of concern for all of us," Cochran said at a news conference.

U.S. Rep. David Nagle, appearing at the same news conference, said it is likely that U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng will open the acres "as rapidly as is warranted."

Cochran said Lyng should allow cutting of hay on Conservation Reserve Program acres for the next 30 days. That is highly erodible land that farmers have been paid to keep out of production for 10 years.

Lyng has freed that land in 11 Iowa counties, and Cochran said it should be allowed statewide.

In addition, Cochran said Lyng should allow farmers access to an emergency livestock feed program, where they can buy feed for 75 percent of the loan rate.

"We need to have a coordinated response to this growing emergency from the state and federal government," Cochran said. "We must be careful not to panic, however."

"As of today, the soybean crop has been cut little and the corn crop only a few percentage points,"

Dale Cochran

Cochran said. "Timely rains could save most of the crop."

"Our most acute needs lie with the hay and pasture lands," he said.

"Although we cannot abandon hope that we will have timely rains, I believe that government agencies have to be ready to respond with assistance should the worst occur," Cochran said.

The hot line being established by the Department of Agriculture is designed to provide information about the availability of hay and other feed.

The drought has affected the state differently in different regions.

"The hot line will help distribute supplies more evenly and get feed to those who need it most," Cochran said.

The hot line went into operation

Monday. Cochran said he would name the members of the task force today. It will include experts from the state's colleges, commodity groups, soil and water conservation experts and weather forecasters.

The group is to coordinate the state's immediate response to the drought and to look at long-range trends, Cochran said. He also said he'll ask officials in other Midwestern states to form a regional task force.

Nagle and Cochran met because the 3rd District Democrat is a member of a Congressional task force studying the drought.

Nagle has spent the weekend touring drought-stricken northeast Iowa, and he said the dry weather carries with it the potential of putting a damper on the state's fragile economic recovery.

"I cannot tell you the frustration you get on Main Street," Nagle said. "We were almost out of the trough. We may just have to hunker down and fight through."

Though Nagle has been a frequent critic of administration farm policies he refused to criticize Lyng's response to the drought.

"Every day it doesn't rain, the secretary's enthusiasm for remedies grows," Nagle said.

Both warned against what they called an overreaction.

In the past, Cochran said, farm leaders have followed a drought by pushing for a big production year, and that's contributed to instability in farm programs.

"We cannot abandon a good federal farm program," Cochran warned.

Des Moines business group heads list of lavish lobbyists

DES MOINES (AP) — The Des Moines Chamber of Commerce Federation led what was an increasingly expensive effort to impress Iowa lawmakers this year, disclosure documents on file Monday said.

The Des Moines business group spent nearly $10,000 on receptions, breakfasts and dinners during January and ended up spending more than $11,000, making it one of the leaders in the wining and dining sweepstakes.

To head off a repeat performance, legislative staffers launched a mail campaign to remind special interest groups that legislators need time to conduct business, noting that next year's social calendar already lists as many as four events a night.

Legislators are touchy about their relationships with lobbyists, particularly since a legislative bachelor party at Mingo blew up with charges of nude dancing and sexual misconduct.

That shyness hasn't stemmed an increasing flow of spending to make sure lawmakers are well fed and have their thirsts quenched.

The disclosure documents on file Monday show a trend to big-ticket receptions and dinners costing thousands of dollars as a way to impress lawmakers. Interest groups also are aiming efforts at key committees.

For example, a lobbyist for the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation spent $678 to treat the House Agriculture Committee to dinner, and the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce spent nearly $500 for a luncheon where members of committees handling business legislation could hear an Agriculture Department official talk about farming.

The Des Moines group also spent $760 for a luncheon featuring Iowa State University President Gordon Eaton and members of the Senate Appropriations Committee at a Des Moines club.

Precise spending levels and a complete ranking of groups doing the entertaining are difficult to calculate because of complex reporting procedures, which allow lobbyists to charge off spending against a number of clients.

January was a big month as lobbyists sought to make a strong first impression. The Des Moines business group spent $1,680 for a dinner, $5,431 on a reception at a downtown mall and $1,853 on a dinner with women legislators.

Iowans for Tax Relief opened its wallets to spend $1,046 entertaining lawmakers during the month, while the Iowa Motor Truck Association spent $2,541 on a reception.

February saw the Alliance of the Mentally Ill of Iowa spend $6,183 on a reception, while the Association of Homes for the Aging spent $4,083. The lobbyist for the state's teachers union reported spending $1,011 to entertain lawmakers.

The Iowa Association of Realtors spent $3,106 on a reception and the Iowa Blue Flame Gas Association $2,423.

Ed Yelick, a former aide to Gov. Terry Branstad, reported spending about $2,800 in April. Major lobbyists like Thornton and James West got together for a $1,558 reception in March.

Several times this year, key legislative debates were postponed or stalled because so many lawmakers were attending events.

To head off conflicts in the future, legislative staffers are sending out notices that lawmakers should be available for business from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. each day, with lunch from noon to 1 p.m.

"Please be aware of these times when you are scheduling your event, and we would appreciate your assistance in avoiding conflicts," said a letter from Joe O'Hern, chief clerk of the House.

House staffers maintain the crowded legislative social calendar but O'Hern warned "we will not indicate times outside the above guidelines."

But lobbyists have not been dissuaded.

The calendar for next year is fast filling up. For example, on Jan. 11, the third day of next year's session, there are already four social events set.

Mother smothers son, attempts suicide

WATERLOO (AP) — A Waterloo woman was arrested Monday and charged with first-degree murder after she told police she smothered her 7-year-old son to death and then tried to kill herself, court papers said.

Carol A. Hundley, 27, of Waterloo, told officers Sunday that she gave her son Nathan some sleeping pills and then smothered him with two pillows, an affidavit to a search warrant filed in district court said.

Mrs. Hundley also told officers she attempted to kill herself by sitting next to an open stove with the gas turned on, the court papers said.

William Hundley, the woman's husband, told police he returned home from work around 2 a.m. Sunday and found Nathan on the living room couch. Another son, Seth, 4, was not injured.

Hundley said he smelled gas fumes and found the gas to the kitchen stove turned on, the court records said. He found his wife near the couch on her knees.

Police investigators found a note by Carol Hundley at the residence. The contents of the note were not made public.

Waterloo firefighters had to set up ventilation fans to draw the gas fumes out of the home.

Neighbors described the Hundleys as great parents who were always friendly.

Lyle Harris said his grandchildren often played with Nathan and Seth while visiting. "We're concerned about them," Harris said.

"We saw them all the time," Loretta Albrecht said. "We thought they were just a lovely family. Their dad was out playing ball with them Saturday morning."

Ms. Albrecht said Carol Hundley seemed "to be very nice with the children."

"You couldn't ask for a nicer family or nicer neighbors," George Albrecht said.

its energy conservation program, but the same causes of this year's deficit — increased utility rates and more buildings to service — will still exist next year.

In 1986, a fire marshal's inspection found 25 UI buildings in violation of fire safety codes for not having central fire alarm systems. Sixteen buildings were found to be without proper second exits. Currently, 24 buildings still have inadequate alarm systems, and 15 have still have poor second exits.

UI officials have estimated it would take more than $6 million to bring all UI buildings into compliance with fire safety codes.

In a letter last week to UI deans, directors and departmental executive officers, Phillips said there were many expenses the UI could delay no longer.

"While the long-term solution to our financial problem requires additional funding, and those funds will be sought in our next budgetary cycle, we still must meet the immediate demands on the university budget," Phillips wrote in announcing the hiring freeze.

But the departments and programs the UI cuts from to balance its books this year are sure to be in even more desperate need of funding next year, placing a burden on the UI that the state Legislature may not be able to relieve.

before," drawing and painting program Director Joseph Patrick said. "Heretofore we've never had to have basic drawing and painting classes taught by T.A.s."

Patrick said he hopes to hire someone for the spring 1989 semester.

The Russian Department has been searching for an applied linguist to teach upper- and graduate-level courses since 1987. The position is temporarily held by an instructor who doesn't meet hiring requirements.

"You have to be realistic about it, but of course I don't like it... I'm sure they have a good reason," department Chairman Ray Parrott said.

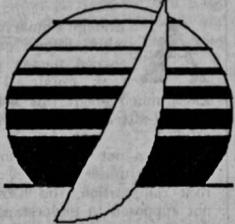

French and Italian Department Chairman Jacques Bourgeacq said the Italian program will be affected because the program only has one person. If no additional faculty is hired the current professor may leave to seek a better job situation, Bourgeacq said.

"One person isn't enough," he said.

But Bourgeacq doesn't see the hiring freeze as anything particularly new to his department.

"We are used to working understaffed," he said. "We are a humanities. When you don't have what you like you have to like what you have... You have to be stoical."

Botha to appoint black cabinet minister

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — President P.W. Botha said Monday he would appoint a black Cabinet minister, but his government would not give blacks a one-man, one-vote system despite increasing pressure from anti-apartheid campaigners.

"(Such) systems have failed in Africa," Botha said in a speech to Parliament. "Africa is a graveyard of failed experiments with Western models and systems rammed down its throat."

He reiterated his intention to name a black Cabinet minister as a means of giving the 26 million black majority a voice in the central government, but said his government would press ahead with social reforms based on group rights, not individual rights.

The South African president described as "absolute nonsense" a proposal by Democratic Party policymakers in the United States to designate South Africa "a terrorist state."

"To declare South Africa's actions against terrorists to be terrorism is to call a fireman an arsonist," Botha told a joint sitting of Parliament, which includes white, Asian and mixed-race chambers.

East German police stifle press in Berlin

BERLIN — East German police with electrified cattle prods attacked Western television crews and arrested dozens of youths gathered near the Berlin Wall to hear Michael Jackson performing in West Berlin, witnesses said Monday.

West Germany protested the Sunday night incident, and one federal official in Bonn said it had damaged relations with East Germany.

The East German government rejected the protest and denied that the journalists had been mistreated, the communist nation's official news agency ADN said Monday.

"Reports of an action against correspondents from the Federal Republic (West Germany) are totally without foundation, and claims of mistreatment by electronic shocks are pure fiction," ADN reported, quoting a government statement.

Shouts of "The wall must go!" rang through the East German audience during the concert, witnesses said.

Stalin reassessed by Soviets

MOSCOW — The Communist Party newspaper Pravda published a denunciation Monday of Josef Stalin's friendship treaty with Nazi Germany and accused him of crippling the Red Army by purging the officer corps just before World War II.

Publication of a full-page article challenging Stalin's image as a brilliant wartime leader was another major step in the process of re-examining Stalin, which has become a condemnation of the man who ruled the Soviet Union for nearly three decades.

Many articles in recent months have attacked Stalin for purging those he called "enemies of the people" and for the violent way in which he collectivized agriculture and forced the country to industrialize.

His reputation as the leader who galvanized the Soviet nation to resist the Nazi invaders and drive them out had been left largely intact, but on Monday the party newspaper published a chapter of a new biography by Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov reassessing the dictator's role.

"In our opinion it was a major political lapse to sign the treaty on friendship and the border between the U.S.S.R. and Germany on Sept. 28, 1939," the article said. "The line should have been drawn at the signing of the non-aggression pact the month before, which evidently was a forced step."

Canadian soldiers die in safety exercise

CHILLIWACK, British Columbia — An explosion Monday during a demolition safety demonstration at a Canadian Forces base killed up to six people and injured at least three, military authorities said.

The accident occurred during what was supposed to be a "routine training day" on the safe handling of explosives for officer trainees at Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack, about 60 miles east of Vancouver, said Lieut. Rose Garlinski, assistant base information officer.

"The people involved were officer trainees and at the moment our emergency response people are on the spot," she said.

Ms. Garlinski could not say how many people were in the training group or whether all the victims were trainees.

Navy drops fatal rescue drill

PENSACOLA, Fla. — The Navy's Rescue Swimmer School reopened Monday but its curriculum no longer includes the "sharks and daisies" rescue drill that was in progress when a panicking recruit died, officials said.

The school at the Pensacola Naval Air Station was closed shortly after the March 2 death of Airman Recruit Lee Mirecki, 19, of Appleton, Wis.

"I can tell you the 'sharks and daisies' exercise is not in the new curriculum," said Lt. Cmdr. Dennis Hessler, public affairs officer for the Naval Education and Training Command headquartered in Pensacola.

In that drill, instructors randomly grabbed students in head holds to simulate people panicking in the water. A student was supposed to pull his instructor underwater to break the hold and then make the rescue.

"Instructors will not personally participate in practical application drills" under the revised procedures, said Lt. Lee Saunders, a spokesperson for the Naval Air Training Command in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Instead, students will practice the drills on each other.

Slow session sends stocks slumping

NEW YORK — The stock market weakened Monday in the second slowest session of the year, which brokers attributed largely to recurring fears of drought-spawned inflation and talk that interest rates will rise.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped at the opening bell on Wall Street and remained lower throughout the session, finishing at 2,083.93, down 20.09. Broader market indicators also fell.

New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 116.75 million shares, the slowest since a 1988 record low of 102.64 million shares traded May 23. It also was about one-third the volume of the year's record high of 343.92 million shares traded Friday, when dividend-capture strategies and expiring contracts on futures and options grossly inflated the volume figure.

Jackson calls for foreclosure moratorium

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Democratic presidential contender Jesse Jackson called Monday for a moratorium on farm foreclosures, saying debt-ridden farmers hit hard by the drought could fall victim to land speculators.

"What we must do is declare a moratorium on foreclosures," Jackson said during a visit to the southeastern Minnesota farm of Dale and Nancy Snesrud. "There is nothing we can do about an act of God. But we must stop an act of the devil."

Jackson examined the stunted corn crop on the Snesrud farm and criticized Reagan administrative farm policies, which he blamed for driving 650,000 farmers out of business in the past eight years. He said those farmers who have survived have no financial cushion to carry them through the drought.

Grassley: Justice Department 'asleep'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan Justice Department was "asleep at the switch" three years ago when a Pentagon investigator discovered that defense contractors and private consultants were illegally obtaining Pentagon weapons secrets, Sen. Charles Grassley said today.

Attorney General Edwin Meese denied the accusation, saying at a news conference that the prosecution of defense procurement cases has been one of the department's top priorities and that "at no time has this department had to be dragged into any indictment where the evidence is there."

Grassley, R-Iowa, said in a floor speech that a top Justice Department official grabbed the microphone from the investigator in October 1985, as the investigator was about to testify about his findings.

Grassley, who chaired the House Judiciary subcommittee at the time, said, "I stopped the hearing at that point. I wish now I hadn't. There wasn't anything in that testimony that could have jeopardized that case."

"The Justice Department could have pursued this aggressively more than three years ago but they didn't," he said in an earlier interview with The Associated Press.

The Associated Press

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson and Attorney General Edwin Meese defend the Justice department against criticism in the current probe of procurement practices in the Defense department.

The 2-year-old probe has focused chiefly on Navy weapons-buying. It became public last week when FBI and Naval Investigative Service agents conducted coast-to-coast raids on the offices of past and present Pentagon officials, private consultants and contractors.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson said privately that perhaps as many as 200 indictments could be expected out of the investigation, a government source said Sunday.

Grassley said Justice Department officials blocked the testimony of Robert Segal, a Defense Department investigator who was the Pentagon's liaison with the Justice Department's Defense Procurement Fraud Unit. The DPFU was a special Justice Department office set up to investigate waste in the military budget.

It was well known in the Justice Department that some elements of the Pentagon and the Justice Department held DPFU in low esteem, and there is speculation that when the current allegations first came to light the matter was steered away from the agency and into Hudson's office.

Segal, who worked for the Pentagon's Defense Criminal Investigative Service, was prepared to testify that private consultants regularly received classified Pentagon documents that should not have been available outside the government, Grassley said.

Segal's testimony, which he never got to deliver but which was released publicly at the time, said that a defense procurement criminal case against GTE Corp. "is but the tip of the proverbial iceberg. . . . The investigation involves at least 25 companies. . . . Many of those companies are household words. . . . The primary focus of the case is . . . the indiscriminate distribution of both proprietary and highly classified government documents by individuals within and without the government."

Rebels claim Iranian helicopter shot down

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian rebels who captured a town just inside Iran over the weekend said Monday they shot down an Iranian helicopter that tried to attack their positions in the area.

A statement from the National Liberation Army, a rebel group based in Iraq, said its units shot down the Cobra helicopter with anti-aircraft fire on the second day of heavy fighting around Mehran.

The rebels, also known as the Mujahedeen Khalq, captured Mehran in an offensive that began at midnight Saturday. Both sides have reported heavy combat.

Mehran has been largely deserted since the early days of the Iran-Iraq war, which began in September 1980, and has changed hands at least five times. The rebels are expected to withdraw to their bases in Iraq.

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Iraq repeated that the force crossing the border to take the town consisted entirely of Iranians. It called the battle "an internal Iranian affair."

Tehran's news reports late Monday made little reference to Mehran, except to say its warplanes attacked Iraqi positions five times.

A communique carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency said "Iran's Moslem combatants continued their battles with Iraqi troops with artillery, mortar and heavy weaponry."

The agency said Iraqi warplanes were spotted Monday over the central city of Ilam once and over Kurdistan in the north. It said a Kurdish rebel group in northern Iraq had mined the Koliikan-Erbil road and destroyed two truckloads of Iraqi weapons.

Iraq said Monday its aircraft flew 406 sorties — 119 by jet aircraft and 287 by helicopter gunships.

Although the number of missions by gunships was well below the 433 reported Sunday, their activity still indicated a high level of fighting on the ground. Earlier Monday, Iranian rebels reported mopping-up operations around Mehran and said they would send captured tanks and other military hardware back to their bases in Iraq.

Hassan Abdin, a senior rebel official, said without elaboration that his units would withdraw "to new defensive positions." The force that took Mehran in a three-pronged offensive called "Forty Stars" was expected to follow the usual pattern of withdrawing to Iraq after inflicting as much damage as possible on Iranian forces.

In previous operations, the rebels seldom have stayed in the country more than 48 hours.

Mahmoud Attai, the rebel army's chief of staff, said in a statement: "We are contemplating much larger offensives for which the capture of the city of Mehran is considered only a prelude."

The rebel leadership said 22 brigades seized Mehran and high ground to the north and south along a 30-mile front. How many fighters were involved was not clear because the Iranian rebels do not disclose the strength of their units, but a force of that size would involve several thousand.

It was believed to be the largest rebel offensive since Mujahedeen Khalq leader Massoud Rajavi formed the military organization a year ago.

Statements said the rebels engaged two divisions of Iranian Revolutionary Guards estimated to total 14,000 men.

Thousands of Iranian soldiers were killed or wounded and 1,400 captured, the rebels claimed, and gave their own losses up to Sunday night as at least 48 killed.

Arms, drugs, terrorism discussed at summit

TORONTO (AP) — Western leaders saluted President Ronald Reagan on Monday for his nuclear arms negotiations with the Soviet Union and encouraged Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev to pursue domestic reform, saying it could "reduce mistrust and build confidence."

The leaders of the seven major industrial democracies also endorsed President Reagan's call for tougher action to combat terrorism and illegal drug trafficking.

Specifically, they agreed that once a hijacked aircraft has landed in a country, it should not be allowed to take off again. Moreover, they called for international cooperation "to trace, freeze and confiscate the proceeds of drug traffickers and to curb money laundering" through legitimate banking institutions.

In a separate statement that cited violence on the Israeli-held West Bank, the leaders called for a Mideast peace conference — a step which Israel opposes.

Reagan and the leaders of Japan, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy and Canada expressed their positions in a political declaration on their second day of talks. A final economic communique is to be issued at the close of their summit today.

Posing later with his colleagues for a group picture at the University of Toronto's Hart House, Reagan was asked how he felt about this being his eighth and final economic summit. "I'm going to miss them all," he said.

Urging Gorbachev to press ahead with more freedom and openness in the Soviet Union, the summit leaders promised, "Each of us will respond positively to any such developments."

Holding out the prospect of increased trade with Soviet-bloc nations, the summit leaders said, "We take positive note of Eastern countries' growing interest in ending their economic isolation."

They also urged Eastern European nations to improve respect for human rights, but did not link that issue to an expansion of East-West trade.

Officials emphasized a spirit of harmony at the summit and played down any differences. "There was no controversy involved here," said Assistant Secretary of State Rozanne Ridgway.

However, French President Francois Mitterrand objected to a U.S. proposal for a task force to seek improved cooperation in the battle against narcotics. Mitterrand said the seven summit nations should not act as a kind of world directorate, with activities outside the scope of their annual meeting, according to his spokesman, Hubert Vedrine.

Image, illusion and reality focuses of Arts Center show

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

Continuing through to the end of this week is an exhibition of photographic works at the Arts Center in the Jefferson Building. Local artists Doug Barkey, Jeanette Buffington-Weiser, John Busse, Lloyd Dunn, Kimberly Liedel, Sarah Sheets McKeag and Robbie Steinbach are showing their work as a group. The title of the exhibition is "Reflex: Impulse-Habit-Reaction." It includes works of diverse concerns.

Barkey's work deals with the illusion of reality that television imparts to our culture. "I intend my photographs to question the truth values encompassed on the screen. This activity takes two avenues: making political statements about values and examining the fragility of the televised cultural experience." Barkey does this largely by using text for the former. For the latter he interlocks images of TV and reality. This interlocking mutually unlocks meaning between the two realms.

In her work, Jeanette Buffington-Weiser explores "... the idea of sensation and response ... My wish is to engage the viewer in a response to the emotion of my gesture, to feel the non-tangible by not just viewing the images as an appearance of a recorded memory." Her current work, she said, is largely experimental in trying to express, through photography, her interest in autobiography and journals.

John Busse deals with language and television imagery. He juxtaposes words with television images. These pieces he further groups together for extended insight.

Lloyd Dunn works with the photocopy medium. He works with photocopying because it's a technology available to everyone, which gives power to the individual through the manipulation of images. Dunn has pieces in the exhibition from his "Power Series" (1988) and "The Cathode Ray" (1985). These works, on the surface, deal with political issues and televised issues, respectively.

Kimberly Liedel's work entails "how my image is a manifestation of my inner self." Liedel includes earlier works for which she used a conventional camera, but her recent works utilize the pinhole camera and the photogram.

A pinhole camera is simply a Quaker Oats box painted black and having a tiny aperture pierced into a bit of foil put into the curved side of the cylinder. The resulting photograph is one of confusing perspective and severe distortion of objects. A photogram is the result of exposing a piece of photographic paper to light while objects are placed upon it. Liedel's photograms are mural-sized and consequently are known as "Liedelgrams" to local artists. Liedel's pinhole pieces have unique textural qualities, a result of her use of paper negatives instead of film.

Sarah Sheets McKeag, of Montezuma, Iowa, also creates large works. In this exhibition, she includes a large black-and-white half-tone corner image and some color pieces on which she has used oil pastel extensively. Half-tone is the process by which newspapers print photographs with tiny pixels. Sheets McKeag said it has taken four years for the half-tone piece to evolve to this stage.

Robbie Steinbach, of Bettendorf, Iowa, says of her work, "I am what I am to the camera ... But which woman is me — the student, the teacher, the wife, the mother, the housekeeper, the aging Jazzerciser? I am what I am." Steinbach uses herself in her images, which portray her as all of these people. She examines the women of the '80s and how they are perceived by themselves and society.

Deanne Wortman, president of the Arts Council, described the origins and functions of the community arts program. The Arts Center and the Arts Council were started as a co-op of local working artists not connected with the UI.

The Arts Center, an entirely member-supported organization, currently provides space for 11 exhibits a year (none in August) for local or emerging artists. The Arts Council reviews proposals and slides from applicants for the following year's shows during the first months of the year.

Barkey orchestrated "Reflex: Impulse-Habit-Reaction" with a group proposal and the submission of slides of the artists' works for the group show to the Arts Center last year. This show, as all shows at the Arts Center, was selected for exhibition on the criteria of high quality and serious artistic intent. The Board of the Arts Council does not censor works for exhibition, unlike most spaces in Iowa City.

The Arts Center is in the basement of the Jefferson Building, 129 E. Washington St., and is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

"Reflex: Impulse-Habit-Reaction" is sponsored by University Camera, 4 S. Dubuque St. All shows at the Arts Center are sponsored by local businesses, which basically entails footing the bill for the opening of a show in exchange for a year's free membership in the Iowa City/Johnson County Arts Council.

Dear Dr. DeWayne

The opinions of Dr. DeWayne L. Feldspar III do not represent the editor of The Daily Iowan, the staff of The Daily Iowan or probably anyone else living or dead. If you have a question or a problem and aren't real picky about where you find the answer, write: Dear DeWayne, c/o The Daily Iowan, 201 Communications Center, Iowa City, IA 52242. His answers will appear on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Olivia Newton-John-John-Newman Olivier. Something to think about huh? — CINDY

Dear A JUNIOR NAME: CINDY: Get a job. You got too much time on your hands.

Dear Dr. DeWayne: My wife has been nagging me all week to get rid of the grunge in my bathtub, but I can't seem to get rid of it. Do you have any suggestions? — KNEE DEEP IN GRUNGE

Dear KNEE DEEP: Try steel wool and a good brush torch.

Dear Dr. DeWayne: My boyfriend flirts with other women all the time. Is there any way I can get him to stop. — FRUSTRATED WITH FLIRTING

Dear FRUSTRATED: See above response.

Dear Dr. DeWayne: I read in The Daily Iowan last week about a 570-pound male ape who saw a female ape for the first time in his 22-year-old life. What would it be like to go 22 years without sex? MONKEY BUSINESS

Dear MONKEY BUSINESS: I don't know. I'm only 20 years old.

Dear Dr. DeWayne: I'm a freshman from Sac City, Iowa. I just started summer school, and so far it's really neat. But I've got a question. Last night I snuck into one of those big bars downtown and met a really nice lady who said she was a graduate student. We started talking about the Cubs and the drought when all of a sudden she leans over and says she wants to take me home and spank me. Weird. My question is: are graduate students allowed to do this? I'm not even in her class. It seems like kind of a goofy policy to me. — MATT FROM SAC CITY

Dear MATT: Yes, but only with freshmen from Sac City, Iowa.

Dear Dr. DeWayne: For years I've been reading and hearing how sick the Ayatollah

Khomeini is. Every day for the last week, news reports have said that he's near death. What's taking the old donkey's butt so long to die. — KHOMEINI DEATH WATCHER

Dear DEATH WATCHER: Hell is all booked up.

'Bull Durham' is summer fun

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

"I believe in the church of baseball," begins "Bull Durham," and from that point on we are worshipping at the altar of a national pastime that, in the eyes of many, rightfully deserves its equal billing with God, Mom and Apple Pie.

One slow, hot Southern summer Annie Savoy (Susan Sarandon) — a self-appointed carnal batting coach — takes under her wing a gifted, but wildly dim-witted rookie pitcher (Tim Robbins) for the Durham, N.C., Bulls.

But as much as Ebby "Nuke" LaLoosh is the reckless youngster, his catcher, Crash Davis (Kevin Costner), is the seasoned and weary veteran. Crash sees in Annie a kindred spirit, but instead of sharing her bed, he is relegated to babysitting Nuke for the season, teaching him the basics of big-time ball on and off the mound.

"Bull Durham" delivers its pitches with a humor that's never silly, with melancholy that's never mucky and a slow, smooth, sexy heat that never dries out into baseness or boredom. This is more than just another "summer" comedy — it is a film about summer, a film that moves and plays with the feeling of slow, steamy sunsets — brief moments between days and nights of life's minor league triumphs and major league disappointments.

Director/writer Tim Shelton orchestrates the dugout proceedings with a seeming effortless that captures the mood of a humid summer night at the ballpark. He brings to the script an authenticity (having himself played in the minors) that infuses "Bull Durham" with the kind of rich detail that lets the viewer slowly sink into the film. Most of all, Shelton understands that the true joys of the sport lie deeper than the stats or facts. You certainly don't have to be a fan to have fun at "Bull Durham" — the film may revolve around baseball, but, like "Broadcast News," the real box scores tabulate matters of the heart.

Costner is the Star that will no doubt put "Bull Durham" safely into box office lists this summer — his portrayal of Crash is perfectly enjoyable. It's refreshing to see Costner back in a less stoic role after his stone-faced performances in "The Untouchables" and "No Way Out." But the young, endearing, self-possessed, amiable goofball of "Fandango" and "Silverado" has grown up a little and has begun to stray toward an annoying self-seriousness. When Costner stops listening to Crash's "bull" and lightens up, he generates some of the film's best moments (such as his dancing in kimono and sweat socks to "60-Minute Man").

The rest of the cast sparkles with nifty performances, including Tim Robbins who holds his own nicely, drawing Nuke as the portrait of cocky befuddlement. Trey Wilson and Robert Wuhl provide much managerial amusement as the Bull's exasperated skipper and his assistant/sideman.

Most of all, "Bull Durham" finally serves up Susan Sarandon the cinematic boost her career has lacked since "The Rocky Horror Picture Show." The highly talented actress plays Annie beautifully, using her whole body — wide eyes, strained neck, quant figure — to lewdly lilt from coy flirt to sandlot guru to maturing woman. It's unfortunate that Sarandon and Annie must take a commercial and narrative back seat to Costner and Crash.

If "Bull Durham" must have a flaw it would be that the film conveys the illusion of character and philosophical depth without really building a solid emotional or intellectual base. "Bull Durham" throws so many beliefs — fruitcake, cynical or otherwise — on life, sex and baseball and the metaphysics that cosmically bind all three at you that some of them almost start to make sense, but true to its laid-back seasonality, the script never bothers to stick to any particular point of view.

Belief is all in "Bull Durham" — more than once characters speak of their convictions, be they Christian, voodoo or simply sandlot superstition — but they all boil down to a common denominator: the game of baseball.

When intellectual push comes to artistic shove, "Bull Durham" winds up as nothing more than light summer fare. But it presents its fare, light as it may be, with so much charm, feel and humor that the film rises to the top of its division. Entertainment-wise, you could not want more from "Bull Durham" — it nears a pinnacle of classy summer-pop perfection.

Driver Allison remains hospitalized

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Veteran driver Bobby Allison remained hospitalized Monday after being knocked unconscious and suffering multiple injuries from a first-lap accident in the NASCAR Miller 500.

Allison, 50, of Hueytown, Ala., was taken to the Lehigh Valley Hospital Center Sunday with a concussion, a fractured left leg, "blunt abdominal trauma" and possibly internal bleeding, track officials said. He had to be pried out of his car.

Six hours after the accident, Allison remained unconscious in critical but stable condition, hospital spokesperson Rob Stevens said.

The accident happened on the second turn of the first lap on the 2 1/2-mile oval at Pocono International Raceway.

Player's mother continues probe

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dissatisfied with the results of her son's autopsy, the mother of Tennessee football player Leon Baxter said she will continue to investigate the cause of his death.

Bettie Jefferson on Sunday contradicted medical findings published in The Tennessean, Nashville's morning newspaper, that said her son was following a radical diet less than a week before being stricken with a fatal illness on Feb. 8.

In Monday editions, The Tennessean reported that a copy of the autopsy obtained by the newspaper lists Baxter's cause of death as acute fulminant hepatitis, a liver ailment.

The autopsy also states that tests were "basically inconclusive for significant toxic injury," leaving the exact nature of Baxter's Feb. 8 death unknown.

Medical records also indicated Baxter had fasted and ingested only water in the four days before his admission to the University of Tennessee Medical Center in Knoxville Jan. 28.

Baxter was declared brain dead on Feb. 7. Life-support systems were removed the following day, and he died.

Boxer fought without medical clearance

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A boxer who died of a brain injury after a 10-round fight last week was reportedly under suspension in the United States and didn't have medical clearance to go into the ring.

Brian Baronet, 27, who died Friday after a fight last Tuesday with American Kenny Vice in Durban, had been suspended by the New Jersey State Athletic Commission for 60 days, the Sunday Times reported.

The newspaper said the junior welterweight could not fight again in the U.S. until he had a complete medical checkup, including a brain scan. Baronet was making a comeback from a knockout in Atlantic City, N.J.

Cowboys' White maintains innocence

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys quarterback Danny White, responding to newspaper reports that his ailing pickup parts corporation is the target of federal agents and creditor lawsuits, says he has done nothing wrong.

White was subpoenaed to testify in connection with a fraud suit filed by an investor in his company, Cowboy Krome Accessories, The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday.

Federal authorities are conducting a mail fraud probe of the company's activities, according to records filed in the civil case, the newspaper reported.

"To my knowledge, I haven't done anything wrong," White told KRDL Radio. "Whether or not anything was done wrong from a criminal standpoint or not, I guess is the question."

In the suit, the investor claims he was defrauded of a $30,000 stock purchase by White and his business partner. The News said other angry creditors were questioning the activities of White and his partner, Paul Linford.

The newspaper reprinted a letter White wrote on Dallas Cowboys stationery to a Houston investor noting White's claim that he never used his influence as a prominent football player to raise funds for his company.

Police warn of further fan violence

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — English soccer fans have left Frankfurt, leaving a trail of chaos and violence behind them, but police in Munich warned there could be further trouble from a traveling "horde" of West German thugs.

Since the European Soccer Championships started June 10, more than 800 fans had been arrested in six West German cities.

Frankfurt police said Sunday that three straight nights of soccer-related disturbances had apparently come to an end after 98 more rowdies — most of them English — were rounded up during the previous night.

While most of the attention was focused on the English, authorities also pointed the finger at West Germans, including 16 right-wing extremists arrested Saturday in Frankfurt.

The next round in the European Soccer Championships is slated for Tuesday in Hamburg, as West Germany plays the Netherlands in a semifinal match in the two-week-long championships.

Cubs announce night game dates

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs announced they will play their first night game at Wrigley Field Aug. 8, hosting the Philadelphia Phillies.

The first game will be broadcast on WGN-TV, the television station owned by the Tribune Co., which also owns the National League team.

The first night game and four additional night games in August will begin at 7:05, a team spokesperson said.

The Cubs will play at night against New York Aug. 9 in a game broadcast nationally on NBC-TV, against Houston Aug. 22 and Aug. 23 and against Philadelphia Sept. 6.

The Cubs will then play two more night games, each starting at 6:35, he said. They will play the Mets Sept. 7, and the Montreal Expos Sept. 20.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported in today's editions that Cubs officials are attempting to get President Ronald Reagan to throw out the first ball and possibly do an inning of play-by-play.

Knight privately weds ex-coach

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indiana University basketball Coach Bob Knight and a former Oklahoma girls' high school coach are married, a clergyman confirmed.

Methodist Bishop Leroy Hodapp, a friend of Knight's, said he performed the ceremony for Karen Vieth Edgar, 41, and Knight, 47, at the Indiana Interchurch Center May 23.

"There was no attempt to keep it secret. But Bob wanted to keep it private, without the press, so we did it here in my office," Hodapp said Friday. "He had just gotten all that attention about the Mexico job and really didn't want to deal with it again."

Knight had been considering the head coaching job at New Mexico but turned down the offer two weeks before the wedding.

Jim Steele, director of communications for the Methodists, said the only other person at the wedding was Hilda Van Arsdale, whose sons Dick and Tom were basketball All-Americans at Indiana before moving on to successful NBA careers.

Edgar resigned for personal reasons in 1987 after coaching the Lomega High School girls' basketball team to three Oklahoma state championships.

McMillen lashes out at NCAA

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — U.S. Rep. Tom McMillen, a former basketball All-American, told an NCAA top Monday that college and university recruiters mislead athletes.

"We are selling a myth in this country," said McMillen, who starred at Maryland and then for 11 years in the NBA. "The chances are less than one in 10,000 that a youngster will make it to the professional ranks."

see a Mazda U.S. Open and a Pizza Hut Masters.

These days, when Deane Beman talks in his sleep about how he has improved the game, it is a stream of consciousness that sounds like, "Nabisco, K mart, Honda, Hertz, Chrysler... Kemper, Nissan, AT&T, Deposit Guaranty, Panasonic... Hardee's, J.C. Penney, MCI, USF&G, GTE, Shearson Lehman... Isuzu, Oldsmobile, Seiko..."

It is all so uplifting I can hardly contain my joy.

No tournament ever wanted a corporate sponsor. But 37 of them, to date, have had to find one in order to keep increasing their purses, so some nameless pro who's never won a tournament can make $27,000 for finishing in a tie for 32nd place, and, more to the point, so Deane Beman won't kick them off the tour.

Recently, a few of the oldest golf tournaments in golf, among them the Western Open, the LA Open, and the Colonial — events that built the PGA Tour — have been ordered by Beman not only to continue increasing their purses but to come up with an extra $5.4 million each over three years for a TV network that is either too lazy or too inefficient to sell the commercials itself.

If a tournament doesn't do this, it will run the risk of not being televised, of losing its dates, of getting booted off the circuit, in fact.

Blackmail, of course — and so much for loyalty on the part of Beman and his nameless rank-and-file touring pros.

The funny part is, it's all so self-defeating. By giving the tour a corporate sameness, Beman has only enhanced the reputation of four majors — U.S. Open, Masters, British Open, PGA — which he would like to see diminished in stature but which are now, more than ever, the only tournaments any discerning fan cares about, or attends, or watches on TV.

The biggest joke is on the touring pros. Almost without exception, they like to think of themselves as staunch political conservatives, the essence of the entrepreneurial spirit in America. They got this way through the generosity of sponsors, but Beman has turned them into a trade union.

Imagine their surprise when it finally sinks in on them someday that, thanks to Deane Beman, they have become the auto workers of the sport.

Lakers in Game 7 at Boston in 1984, but before that Washington won at Seattle in 1978 and Boston won at Milwaukee in 1974.

Isiah Thomas, who scored 31 of his 43 points in the second half despite a third-quarter ankle sprain that had him on crutches after Sunday's game, isn't concerned about the Lakers' supposed homecourt advantage. He even admitted that the Pistons came to Los Angeles believing they would need two games to win.

"The best team will end up the winner," Thomas said. "We know it's going to be tough. We're expecting to play two hard basketball games, and so were they. That's what we're going to do."

The Lakers have won 10 championships, five of them before moving to California from Minneapolis, and are seeking to become the first team since the Celtics in 1969 to repeat as champions.

Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said Thomas' condition will decide whether the Pistons have a chance to beat Los Angeles and win their first NBA title.

"It depends on Isiah," Daly said. "We'll be the underdog because they're at home. We'll monitor Isiah's condition."

Thomas said that the Pistons need to get forward Adrian Dantley back into the offense. Dantley scored 14 points Sunday and was only 3-for-10 from the field. He averaged 28.6 points in the Pistons' three victories and 15.7 in their three losses in the series.

"I'm sure both teams will make adjustments for Tuesday's game," Thomas said. "We will have to adjust to the way they defended A.D. so we can get easier jump shots when they double-team him."

The Pistons also believe that the way the first half is played could decide today's game.

"The team that comes out and sets the tempo early on will win the game," backup center James Edwards said.

"It seems like we're a foreign car, because it takes awhile for us to get warmed up," Dennis Rodman said. "We have to come out aggressive in the first quarter on Tuesday. We can't wait until the second half to get started. But it's not going to be that difficult to be ready for this next game."

Rodman sent a message to the Lakers for Game 7 even before Game 6 ended.

Wimbledon

and closed out the match with an ace.

"The way it started today, I think I should be very satisfied," said Becker, who was upset in the second round last year by Peter Dohhan. "It could not get any better than that."

Lendl, a natural baseliner who has never felt comfortable on grass, was pleased with his opening-round play.

"I served quite well, which I didn't do in practice," said Lendl, who appeared to be recovered from a shoulder strain suffered during a quarterfinal loss at the French Open.

"I didn't have to hit many volleys and the few times that I did, they were pretty easy."

Other seeded players advancing to the second round were No. 3 Stefan Edberg of Sweden, No. 7 Henri Leconte of France, No. 10 Tim Mayotte, No. 11 Anders Jarryd of Sweden, No. 13 Emilio Sanchez of Spain and No. 15 Amos Mansdorf of Israel.

The only seeded player to lose on opening day was No. 7 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria, who was beaten by Pascale Paradis of France 6-4, 6-3. In other women's matches, No. 12 Zina Garrison beat fellow American Wendy White 6-3, 6-1 and No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria beat Anne Simplin of Britain 6-1, 6-0.

The showers and a couple of long matches backed up the schedule and forced officials to postpone 10 contests, including fifth-seeded Jimmy Connors' opener against Leif Shiras of the United States.

Aranxa Sanchez, who upset Chris Evert in the third round of the French Open, was eliminated by Kumiko Okamoto of Japan 6-3, 6-4.

Sanchez's brothers also played and made history.

Emilio beat his younger brother, Javier, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. It was the first time since 1898 that brothers had played each other at Wimbledon.

Most of the women's seeds, including No. 1 Steffi Graf and eight-time champion Martina Navratilova, begin play on today, as does second-seeded Mats Wilander, who like Graf is halfway to a Grand Slam after winning the Australian and French Opens.

Also starting play today is eighth-seeded John McEnroe, whose opening-round match was moved back a day because his opponent, Horst Skoff of Austria, was involved in a tournament in Athens, Greece, until late Sunday.

Mayotte, a Wimbledon semifinalist in 1982, used his big serve to defeat fellow American Matt Anger 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

 U.S. Open?

BOSTON — Excuse my delirium but I've been enjoying a few unique days in golf, one of the rare, precious weeks out of the year when the logo-laden touring pros were involved in something infinitely more important, more elegant, than another of those dreary, meaningless K mart Klassics or Nabisco Boondoggles that now contaminate a PGA Tour that once stood for class and dignity in the sports world.

Up here on hallowed ground, at The Country Club of Brookline, Mass., only five miles from Beacon Hill, they've been playing the Open Championship of the United States Golf Assn., the U.S. Open, our National Open.

I say hallowed ground because, as you no doubt have been reminded many times by now, The Country Club was where, 75 years ago, a young amateur named Francis Ouimet defeated England's fabled Harry Vardon and Ted Ray in the Open of 1913, a shocking accomplishment that put golf on the front pages for the first time.

Because of Ouimet's feat and what followed, namely Bobby Jones, Ben Hogan, and Jack Nicklaus winning the championship a total of 13 times between them — and to some extent the fact that Sam Snead never won it — the U.S. Open gleams as the most coveted trophy in golf.

I don't know if the majority of today's touring pros — the lower echelon — would agree with that. Most of them would wear a turban if someone paid them to endorse it, but there was a time in the not-too-distant past when even the least-known among them, were he to win the Open, would have said, "Just give me the title, you keep the money."

This is an attitude, I'm afraid, that no longer exists today in any professional sport — love of the game, a sense of history about it. But I know one thing about the U.S. Open: Along with the Masters, which is played every April at the Augusta National Golf Club in Georgia, it will be one of the last two tournaments to have an image-cheapening corporate sponsor, principally because the Open and Masters are out of the control of the touring pros and their commissioner, Deane Beman, who misconstrues money for style, who equates the letters CEO with a highly celestial intelligence.

The gentleman who conduct the Open and Masters tournaments have assured me in my lifetime, and theirs, happily, we will never

Strange wins 88th U.S. Open

Curtis Strange of Kingsmill, Va., anxiously watches a putt on the third hole during the playoff round of the U.S. Open Monday.

Faldo falters in 18-hole playoff, loses by 4 strokes

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — Curtis Strange achieved a personal goal Monday with a par 71 that provided him with a four-stroke victory over Nick Faldo in their 18-hole playoff for the U.S. Open Golf Championship.

Faldo, the stolid Englishman who owns a British Open title, struggled to a 75 in the 28th playoff for the American national championship.

The victory was the first of Strange's career in one of the game's recognized major championships and installed him in the front rank of the game's great players.

With three strokes in hand as he marched up the 18th fairway at The Country Club, the smiling Strange saluted a cheering gallery with a raised, clenched-fist salute, first with his left hand then with his right.

His wife, Sarah, tears of happiness streaming down her face, hugged Strange's twin brother, Allan, and then embraced Faldo's wife, Gill.

The 15th victory of Strange's 11-season career, and his third this season, was worth $180,000 from the total purse of $1 million, lifting his season's earnings to $548,525.

More importantly, it answered a nagging question and confirmed his stature in the game. The question Strange no longer has to answer concerned what had been a gap in his record, the lack of a victory in one of golf's Big Four, the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

He recognized that shortcoming after winning the Memorial tournament last week.

"I want to win a major," the 33-year-old Strange said.

He got it in his next attempt. But it was far from easy.

It was, in fact, a scramble throughout a warm afternoon in the Boston suburbs. Strange, prematurely at age 33, may have added a few more by hitting only seven fairways and as many greens in regulation. Yet he never trailed Faldo in the playoff which was set up when both finished regulation play on Sunday at 6-under-par 278.

Strange led the rest of the way after dropping an eight-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole. The margin was only a single stroke, however, until Strange engineered a two-stroke swing on the 13th hole.

His birdie putt of 29 feet found the cup while the 30-year-old Faldo three-putted from 30 feet, missing an eight-foot putt for par. That put Strange three in front with five holes to go.

Faldo cut one off that margin with a six-foot putt for birdie on the par-5 14th and on the 15th had a great opportunity to reduce the deficit to one.

But he failed to capitalize.

Strange was bunkered in two and played out well beyond the cup. Faldo was in the right rough in two and had a chance to chip close. But his shot from the rough ran through the green and into the rough on the far side. Strange missed his par putt and Faldo had to one-putt for bogey.

That maintained Strange's two-stroke lead with only three holes to play.

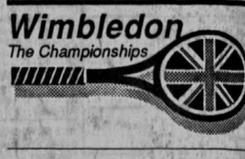

After each parred the 16th, Strange again had to save par from a bunker on 17. Faldo put his second shot through the green and his chip down the slick slope went about 12 feet beyond the hole.

Wimbledon 1st-round favorites win easily

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Defending champion Pat Cash, top-seeded Ivan Lendl and two-time champion Boris Becker overpowered their first-round opponents Monday at the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Lendl and Becker each served 20 aces, while Cash used a strong service return to win their matches at the All England Lawn Tennis Club.

Cash, playing the first match on Centre Court, defeated 17-year-old Todd Woodbridge of Australia 6-1, 6-2.

6-1, 6-2. Lendl beat David Felgate of Britain 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 and Becker defeated John Frawley of Australia 6-3, 6-1, 6-2.

Lendl, runner-up at Wimbledon the past two years, breezed past Felgate in 84 minutes before early evening showers caused a one-hour rain delay.

"I just couldn't pick his serves up," said Felgate, ranked 362nd in the world. "I couldn't figure where they were going. I tried everything, but it didn't make any difference. He was just pounding them down."

Cash had only one ace against Woodbridge, but his service returns were deadly.

"I just returned so well today and that set everything up," Cash said. "The court is pretty slow, so you have some time to get the ball back."

Becker, the champion in 1985 and 1986, overcame three break points in the final game against Frawley.

57-year-old Detroit Coach Chuck Daly has never won a national championship...

Pistons, Lakers hunger for title

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers believe the homecourt advantage will give them just the edge they need to win the NBA championship against the Detroit Pistons tonight.

"The pressure is on both teams now, but I give us the advantage because we're home," said 41-year-old Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who will be making his 222nd career playoff appearance in Game 7.

"It's worth something," the Lakers' Magic Johnson said of playing the game at the Forum. "But you've got to make it worth a lot. It's worth something, but you've got to make it worth more than that by coming out here ready to play and make it a real advantage."

The Lakers forced the seventh game by winning 103-102 Sunday. They trailed 102-99 going into the final minute, but a jumper by Byron Scott and two free throws by Abdul-Jabbar with 14 seconds left kept Los Angeles alive.

"We want the championship bad, and in order to get it you've got to overcome things like this," the Pistons' John Salley said. "We'll be all right."

Thirteen NBA finals have gone the seven-game limit, and the home team has won 10 of them.

In the Pistons' favor, however, is the knowledge that two of the last three seventh games have been won on the road. Boston beat the ... while Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley will try for his third tonight at the Forum.

Range draws fire

By Heather Maher
 The Daily Iowan

A proposed outdoor firing range in the Iowa City landfill to law enforcement personnel angered some residents who live in close proximity to the five-acre tract of land range is being planned.

Neva Haman, whose land is adjacent to the landfill, expressed concern with the noise level range would produce because I believe it will be a nuisance to the neighborhood. The site is being planned as an alternative to the current training program, which having personnel commuted to Cedar Rapids to the Cedar Rapids Police men's practice range.

A Detective Michael Goldberg of training for the Iowa Department, the current expenses for taxpayers.

"Every time we go to lose one-and-a-half hour time at a considerable city and taxpayers," he having a local firing range could do on-site training officers who are being respond to duty calls.

Iowa City Police Chief Miller said he also is firing range is greatly "save big bucks" and landfill is an ideal site.

"Right now we're paying overtime to go to Cedar Rapids," he said. "And the range some other would have to pay big costs."

The advantage of constructing a firing range on the landfill is already owned by the wide-open spaces and formed by using dirt and mally unearthed by landfills.

Floyd Pelkey, assistant of Iowa City's Solid Waste said he is not worried plans and feels the construction of the range will not hinder our flow of operations.

"As we trim our dirt we would have to haul it, we could just as easily where they need it," Pelkey said.

"It's not in our way, referring to the site, hinder our flow of operations in any way, so I have no problem with it going in."

Goldberg assured the considerable effort had into the search for an site, and the firing range were sensitive to the area residents.

But Mary Hebl, a property adjacent to the site, said she was still concerned the plan. She told the she was worried the values would decrease if the area were allowed to be built.

"I think the proper devalued — we've got raceway and the mod field now," she said. stop more noisy thing from going in?"

Haman said approx residents who live near are opposed to the plan. She added that she felt loper should ever want the area, no one would purchase the homes.
