Gay rally draws 150 to UI

By Heather Maher

The Daily Iowan

The graffiti bilests, hustlers, prostitutes and crowds that made the Penton Block a sort of university Tijuana for a single Saturday afternoon, have returned to the area. The honcho of the last year and a half was none other than Gay and Lesbian Pride-PC Inc.

Spokesmen for Iowa State University, Grace College, the Iowa, University of Iowa, Drake University and those gathered in the gay community discussed the need to stand together. The groups formed as a result of the conservative, homophobic and AIDS systemic issue.

"We will not retreat. If we do, we may as well close the university gates to everyone," said Robert Greif, an official of the Iowa State University Gay Pride organization.

"We are here because we're not afraid to be ourselves," said Mark Forrest, an official of the Pride organization. "We are here because we're not afraid to be ourselves, we are beautiful.

We are beautiful."

"We are beautiful," said the other group leader, Dina House, "and I'm a homosexual," Mark Forrest said. "This is the first time I've seen that in front of a group of people and it makes me smile."

"We've got to stand up, ... and our rights and our identity," said Robert Greif, an official of the Iowa State University Gay Pride organization.

Although the sound stilled light traffic nearby, the rally raged on with a few new crews dressed in clown pants with writing on the backs. "I am a non违章," one of them said. "No, I'm not," said the other. "You're a non违章," the other said.

The sound continued for a few hours with shouting slogans such as "We want peace!" and "We want equality!"

Jackson chides party platform

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix (AP) - Jesse Jackson, a Caribbean convert and 1988 Democratic Party candidate, told a Christiansted, St. Croix, crowd Friday night that the platform was "spurious and false." He added that he doesn't want a revamp of the Democrat party platform.

Jackson added that his presence in the N.J. spot at a point in the Democratic convention's long process of determining its presidential ticket was a bit like finding a needle in a haystack.

"I've been the most influential member of the Democratic party from the past. I must mean stability for the present and stability for the future," Jackson told nearly 300 political party members in the tiny town of Kirkland on the U.S. Virgin island.

Jackson explained "there's always some reason against international changes for the national ticket. A black is he, he said, "You know you might be controversial if you're an African American."

"We could never be considered by traditional prime convention people. If they want you considered they [they] had better consider you," Jackson said. "We had better consider American blacks."

"I've been here for a new tradition. We need to re-examine our commitment to affirmative action programs," Jackson said.

Jackson reminded his audience that he was introduced to the world as a young black preacher in the Virgin Islands, in which he, Alexander Family said, "Whatever decision you make in the next couple of years, "renewing our relationship with you and me with you, ten-thirty, suspense.

The territory sends five delegates.

The Daily Iowan

Mary Engelhardt always wanted to be a nurse. Yet after her high school graduation in 1952, she stayed home.

After years as a wife and mother, her long journey to a hospital career began last fall.

"I was 17 a year now that we had demanded a baby. My parents taking the hiring of the job and helping for the first few years," she said. "It was like working with the parents."

The Cuddler is by matching volunteers, parents and public to serve in hospitals in the area.

"It seems to me now that we should demand a baby. My parents taking the hiring of the job and helping for the first few years, we want to take the hiring of the job and help for the first few years," she said.

The Cuddler Program is designed to provide extra attention to children undergoing hospital care. Volunteers work with parents of ill or sick children, who are five-month volunteers at Grinnell College, Des Moines, IA.

Officials report on search costs

By John Barton-Hargroves

The $13,000 cost for the 3-month search process that resulted in the hiring of University President Donald J. Flaherty ($13,000 set aside for out-of-town expenses) and chairman of the search committee, said "It seems to me that a search committee's task is to find a competent candidate; equal importance should be given to the finding of a competent president."

Barton and the cost for the search was higher because of Brown's salary and the time it took to find an acceptable candidate. Brown's salary was set at $35,000 for the remainder of the 12-month search.

State and advises community hospitals across the state to Heidrick and potential candidates and $3,667 to Heidrick and potential candidates.

"I hope we can reach a conclusion about the search before the end of the year," said Flaherty. "If we don't, the cost of the search will increase."

The University's $13,000 to Heidrick, a consulting firm that specializes in university president search, was set aside for out-of-town expenses for candidates and for travel expenses for the search committee members.

"We hope to have a new president in place by the end of the year," said Flaherty. "If we don't, the cost of the search will increase."
Library lacks

The name of the program sounds innocent, even beneficial. It's called the Library Awareness Program. It probably initiates schizophrenia among University of Iowa students. Who in their right mind would use a library to check out sensitive information? After all, who needs a library? Under the program, the FBI is asking library staffs to assist in identifying suspects by checking over records and monitoring the use of certain documents.

Question: What is the name of the program mentioned in the text?

Answer: The program is called the Library Awareness Program.

M y favorite long-running "morally correct" comic strip, "Dilbert," looked a lot different when I was a kid. I didn't realize it when I was young, but it was called a cartoon by the FBI right? They probably introduced it to your parents before they even started worrying about the weather. You know who might have helped them? The FBI.

The Dilbert comic strip is a fine example of how the government (or in this case, the FBI) can use its influence to change public opinion. The Dilbert strip shows a Dilbert character who is constantly being undermined by his boss, Mr. Doofus.

On one strip, Mr. Doofus tells Dilbert that he needs to clean up his act. He suggests that Dilbert should start dressing more professionally and stop taking breaks during the workday. Mr. Doofus even offers to buy Dilbert a new suit if he agrees to make these changes.

Dilbert, of course, refuses to change his ways. He tells Mr. Doofus that he is comfortable with this contradiction, but others should not draw the same conclusions. He even goes so far as to say, "You can't judge a book by its cover." Mr. Doofus is not impressed and threatens to fire Dilbert if he doesn't start acting more professionally.

Dilbert, however, remains steadfast. He tells Mr. Doofus that he is too busy fighting the government to worry about his appearance. Mr. Doofus, feeling defeated, signs off the strip.

The Dilbert comic strip has been running for over twenty years and has become a favorite among many people. It often deals with topics such as corporate greed, office politics, and the absurdities of modern life.

Not self-serving

To the Editor:

In an article in The Daily Iowan, a reporter states that the state's highest-income earner paid less in personal income taxes than the lowest-income earner. This statement is false.

The reporter failed to mention that the state's highest-income earner paid more in personal income taxes than the lowest-income earner. In fact, the state's highest-income earner paid over three times as much in personal income taxes as the lowest-income earner.

This is a clear example of the state's tax system being designed to benefit the wealthy. The state's highest-income earner is able to deduct the same amount of money from their gross income as the state's lowest-income earner, but because they earn more money, they pay more in taxes.

It is clear that the state's tax system is not fair and that it benefits the wealthy at the expense of the poor.

Sincerely,

Task forces meet to discuss effects of Iowa dry spell

DESMOND IOWA...— It may well be a dry spell, but drought-dreaded Iowa this year, and especially the southern part of the state, have reason to smile at the task force. When a task force, whose members are fund raising for Iowa drought retirement, met recently in Coralville, they heard good news from a number of sources. The task force's purpose was to provide a forum for a broad discussion of the drought conditions in Iowa and to help raise funds for the drought retirement of those who need a bigger handout. The task force has disbursed the funds it has raised to support a number of drought relief projects. The task force has been able to raise funds in Iowa to support a number of drought relief projects.

MANY OF THE members of that task force met at the hotel in the eastern part of the state. The task force was able to raise funds in Iowa to support a number of drought relief projects. The task force has been able to raise funds in Iowa to support a number of drought relief projects.

Newspaper cites allegations of misconduct by Paisley

WIMUM (AP) — Mervyn Page, a central figure in the group that claims to be the Democratic movement, has been accused of sexual misconduct. Page has denied the allegations, saying he was acting in self-defense. The group he represents, the Democratic Movement, has been accused of corruption and abuse of power.

Page's lawyer, who declined to comment on the allegations, said the group had not yet decided whether to file a counterclaim.

"Butler" opens summer fare

By Bill Stuelke

The house was packed for the opening night. "What the Butler Does" is the first play in the Iowa City Young Writers Festival, and it is a spin-off of the Festival's focus on the nation's bicentennial year. The play opened without a hitch on Thursday night in the new downtown location of the Iowa City Public Library. The audience was engaged and excited, and the atmosphere was electric.

"The Butler" was written by Bill Stuelke, a local playwright. The play follows the life of a young Virginia woman who comes to Iowa City to study drama at the University of Iowa. The woman's talent is quickly recognized, and she is offered a role in the upcoming production of "The Butler." However, the role is a minor one, and the woman feels frustrated by the lack of opportunities available to her.

Despite this, the woman perseveres and eventually finds success in her acting career. She returns to Iowa City to direct a production of "The Butler" for the University of Iowa, and the production is a huge success. The woman's talent is recognized, and she is offered a role in the upcoming production of "The Butler" at the Iowa City Public Library.

The play is a touching story about the power of determination and the importance of pursuing one's passions. The audience was moved by the performance of the cast, and the play was a huge success. The Butler" was an excellent opening to the summer fare at the Iowa City Public Library.
1 A steady starter hole. No. 1 at Finkbine is just difficult enough to make one earn a birdie or par. It’s a pretty short dog leg, but a good drive will set you up nice. A good shot to the left side of the green will offer a chance shot to the buried green.

2 A straight-away hole which will no doubt be difficult for many. Burnets guard both sides of the green, and a fairway bunker on the right will come into play on the second shot.

3 This is Finkbine’s version of the “Road Hole.” A large tree bounds on the right side of the bunker, but many of the greens can call the dog leg right by going over it and sloping toward the green. Look for some difficult Nan.}

5 The better players will be approaching the hole with long irons, but the average golfer needs a tee shot. A deuce is possible from left to right.

6 This is the only blind hole on the course. A good drive will approach this hole on a fly, and the green is visible but usually not mistaken for it. A solid second shot to the left will be preferable, and you can offer problems for later and saved.

7 Left of right players will love this hole, and right will be appreciating the elevated green. A short second shot will give the approach a good bounce, and a drive hit left for right can be troublesome.

8 This flat par 3 looks easy, but a middle iron shot will probably be needed, depending on the wind. Stiffers will have to gape much on the right. A layup is possible from the left, but leave only a wedge or less, and a vertical bunker and a new old tree for the tap.

9 The tee shot must be played uphill and left and over a large fairway bunker that will cut you out. No problems for long hitters, but a number of those who have the sound of a “ping” in the water before hitting one of the many dual greens.

10 The big green at the 4th is the target. It is quite large, and the pin is tucked in the back. A bunker on the left of the green also comes into play on the approach.

11 A great reachable in two, or a true par 4. Those who nextProps week could force some three-putts.

12 Sharp dog leg left. Many players who had to hit over the trees are the sand traps off the tee. The uphill second shot is hit into a daunting green.

13 With the water hole, as it is commonly referred to. It’s own and left with the pin being back and left. For those who have the sound of a “ping” in the water before hitting one of the many dual greens.

14 The 13th green could be used in the approach. It is quite large and there is a fair hole in the fairway could be very real, and this hole adds to 84 points and because of it’s uphill terrain. Out bunker could also come into play on the approach.

15 The 14th tee box could be used in the approach. It is quite large and there is a fair hole in the fairway could be very real, and this hole adds to 84 points and because of it’s uphill terrain. Out bunker could also come into play on the approach.

16 Long hitters love this hole. But it can chew them up if they don’t take it nice and easy. Hole here must be taken advantage of.

17 A streaky uphill hole. The tee shot has to clear the trees to the right and is much easier from the club selection pin location for the shot.

18 The crossing hole adds a player in close left. A safer first shot is right as the danger left. A bunker on the left of the green also comes into play on the approach.
