ATHENS, Greece (AP) — A car bomb believed planted by a left-wing terrorist group exploded Tuesday and killed the U.S. military attache in Greece, hurling his armor-plated car off the road, authorities said.

U.S. Navy Capt. William Nordeen was driving to work when the blast threw his sedan across the small tree-lined street and lodged it in a steel fence, police said.

The victim's body was found several yards away in the front yard of an abandoned house.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the blast, but senior police officials said they believed it to be the work of November 17, a left-wing urban terrorist group blamed for 11 political assassinations in the past 13 years.

The United States and Greece both condemned the bombing, which came at a crucial time in relations between the two countries.

"The United States condemns this terrorist outrage in the strongest possible terms," said chief Pentagon spokesman Dan Howard. "It was a senseless and cowardly murder of a highly regarded U.S. military officer."

Sotiris Kostopoulos, a spokesman for Foreign Minister Carolos Papoulias, said the Greek government voiced "disgust at the murder."

"All Greeks, irrespective of their political leanings, unreservedly condemn the would-be undermining of the U.S. military officer."

Drought may mean no fireworks show

Fire chief says park must have rain

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan
and Associated Press

Barring an unforeseen accumulation of rain within the next few days, Iowa City will not see a fireworks show on the Fourth of July in City Park this year.

Iowa City Fire Chief Larry Donner told the Iowa City Council Tuesday the fire department had decided to cancel the show unless rain in the next few days rectifies the dryness of City Park.

"The drought conditions have made things extremely dry in the park," Donner said. "Much of the vegetation in the park is just tinder-dry. Any heat could cause the area to light up quickly."

Donner said while the decision to cancel the fireworks show in the park — which was being sponsored by the Iowa City Jaycees in conjunction with the American-Soviet Peace Walk — is not definite, it looks very doubtful the show will be held.

"We'll take one last look before we make the final decision," Donner said. "But realistically, we would need at least two or three days of soaking rain before we could consider having a show. I haven't heard any predictions that will occur."

A press conference will be held this morning in City Park to announce the department's final decision.

Donner admitted the decision to cancel the fireworks would be disappointing to some.

"For the Jaycees, it's quite a sacrifice," Donner said. "They rely on donations from people at the fireworks to pay for the fireworks."

Iowa City officials said they agreed with Donner's decision to cancel the show.

"It's a dangerous situation, and with the liability that exists we really don't have a choice," Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said.

Officials of the city of Coralville said Tuesday the city still plans to hold its fireworks show on the Fourth of July as scheduled.

In a similar matter, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad said Tuesday there is concern about fire danger in Iowa this weekend but that he won't impose a statewide ban on fireworks during Fourth of July celebrations.

"That should be decided on a local basis," the governor said at a news conference.

The governor was asked about a fireworks ban after the governor of Wisconsin issued such a restriction but Branstad said he's reluctant to step in and halt celebrations which in some cases are longtime community traditions.

State Fire Marshal Wilbur Johnson has stopped open burning in nine of the state's driest counties — including Johnson — and is banning it in another county effective July 1.

There are currently bans on open burning in Johnson, Clinton, Cedar, Dubuque, Mahaska, Audubon, Scott, Wapello and Van Buren counties. A Wayne County ban goes into effect Friday and burning also has been banned in the city of Osceola, the Orient Fire District in Adair County and the De Soto Fire District just west of Des Moines.

Some local officials have argued that this year's near-record dry weather has left lawns, trees and bushes extraordinarily dry, and that leaves them vulnerable to fires caused by sparks from fireworks.

Locally, Donner urged Iowa City residents to reconsider using legal fireworks such as sparklers and "snakes" this Fourth of July because of the dry conditions.

"My recommendation would be not to use sparklers or snakes," Donner said. "As dry as it is, there is a real potential fire danger from anything like that."

Iowa City Council defers action on firing range plan

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday night to defer action on a proposed firearms training facility to be built on the Iowa City Sanitary Landfill near Melrose Avenue.

The proposed firing range has raised concerns from residents living close to the site. About 15 residents appeared at the council meeting to address the council.

Most of the residents who spoke expressed their concerns about the danger and noise of gun shots, the devaluation of property values and the number of days police would be practicing at the outdoor firing range.

"This area has already had its share of burdens. It's becoming a dumping ground," Diana Thrift, a neighbor of the site, said. "I sincerely hope you'll oppose this firing range."

Iowa City Police Department Training Coordinator Michael E. Goldberg told the council in a letter the new firing range was proposed to reduce departmental costs, save travel time and permit more frequent training and practice by police officers.

For the last five years the absence of a local facility has forced Iowa City police to travel to Cedar Rapids to conduct practices. With their own facility, Goldberg said, officers could train in Iowa City and still be on duty to receive calls.

Goldberg said in his letter to the city that costs associated with time lost to travel is approximately $2,000 per training session. As of now police are training once a year at the Cedar Rapids site, but Goldberg said it would be ideal to have quarterly training sessions.

"With our conversion to the nine millimeter gun the need for increased training is essential," Goldberg said, adding the new gun is smaller and quieter and would be used along with the shotgun for firing range practice.

But residents near the landfill said even when the gun was tested Monday morning at the landfill they could still hear the shots.

"Their test the other day was a joke, because I could hear them at my place," a neighbor of the site said. "We put up with everything from papers and plastic bags to seepage — we don't need anything else."

Residents also expressed their concern that they are currently dealing with noise from BMX bikes, model planes and garbage trucks and do not want added noise from gun shots.

The proposed firing range would have a fence-enclosed target range and range house tower approximately 12-15 feet high with a public address system, according to Goldberg. The range would consist of a 25-yard and 50-year firing line and earthen berms 10-20 feet high would frame the range on the north, east and west sides. The facility would be used for training between 6 a.m. and midnight.

Goldberg said the plans for the site are negotiable and the range hours and days could be limited.

The city originally purchased the landfill property from Iowa City resident Neva Haman in 1972. The contract the city signed with Haman said the land could be used for a sanitary landfill and/or park. Goldberg said the firing range is not in violation of the contract.

But Haman's lawyer Ralph Neuzil, who spoke on behalf of Haman at the meeting, said although her remaining 20 acres of land is zoned agriculture, there is no reason that in the future she could not sell it as residential — a prospect that would be difficult with a firing range so close.

Council member Darrel Courtney said he wants more questions answered before the council decides on the issue. He said he wants details on ballistic reports, if bullets would ricochet, number of days officers would be practicing on the range, cost of building the facility and why the particular chosen area of the landfill.

Union will face charges in U.S. federal court

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government on Tuesday sued the International Brotherhood of Teamsters to force reforms on the nation's largest labor union, calling it "a major American scandal" dominated by the Mafia.

The civil racketeering lawsuit — in the works for more than a year — was filed in federal court in Manhattan, N.Y., by U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani.

"We are not seeking overall control of the Teamsters union," Giuliani told a packed news conference. "This is a use of the racketeering statute in a surgical way to attempt to take back from the Mafia the Teamsters union."

Meanwhile, two U.S. senators and the AFL-CIO, of which the Teamsters is a member, attacked the lawsuit as overstepping government authority.

Giuliani stressed that "this lawsuit is not in any sense an attack on trade unionism or on the many, many Teamsters who are honest, hard working people."

Named as defendants were: the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers of America; the 18-member general executive board of the 1.6 million-member international union; and 26 alleged members or associates of the American Mafia, or La Cosa Nostra and the mob's ruling "Commission."

Twenty-five of those 26 defendants already have been convicted of Teamsters-related crimes such as labor peace extortion, embezzling union funds or taking labor pay-offs. The board consists of Teamsters President Jackie Presser, Secretary-Treasurer Weldon Mathis and 16 vice presidents.

The government wants a federal judge to remove from office any Teamsters officers found at trial to have violated federal racketeering laws.

U.S. District Judge David N. Edelstein granted the government a temporary restraining order that bars the board from making large expenditures of union funds or destroying union records. The order also banned the 25 previously convicted mob defendants from participating in union affairs.

The lawsuit also sought appointment of a union trustee to ensure free and fair union elections.

Prosecutors planned to "attack and reverse once and for all, a major American scandal: organized crime's alliance with the Teamsters," Giuliani said.

Officials at Teamsters' headquarters in Washington, D.C., had no immediate reaction. Mathis and the union's other active executive board members were meeting in Montreal.

"They're just now getting a copy of the complaint," said one official in the union's headquarters. "They want to review it before commenting."

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, the ranking Republican on the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said the suit sets "a terrible precedent."

"If there are union officers who are corrupt or are connected with the Mafia, then the government should come down on them with dispatch," Hatch said on the Senate floor. "But I have great difficulty in the trusteeship of an entire international union. I don't think the government or any court in this nation is capable of being a trustee over a union."

Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., echoed Hatch's remarks. "I think we're getting on very, very thin ice

Trial of Teamsters leader postponed due to illness

CLEVELAND (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser, who is suffering from brain tumors, was taken by ambulance Tuesday to a hospital, officials said.

Presser, 61, was alert and conscious when he was brought to Lakewood Hospital's emergency room, said John Kerezy, a hospital spokesman.

Presser's symptoms and condition were not immediately known, Kerezy said, adding that he could not say whether Presser would be admitted.

Presser's condition was unrelated to the brain tumors, Kerezy said.

Earlier this month in Ohio, U.S. District Court Judge George White postponed Presser's July 12 trial on racketeering and embezzlement charges, citing Presser's illness. Two of Presser's co-defendants are to be tried July 12.

White ruled after Presser's physicians said he was undergoing radiation treatment and might have less than six months to live.

Dr. Leslie Sheeler of the Cleveland Clinic, in a May 26 letter, said Presser had virtually no short-term memory and added, "I doubt that he will possibly ever have substantial improvement from his current status."

He was released June 13 from the Barrow Neurological Institute in Phoenix, Ariz., where he had undergone treatment for the tumors.

Presser gave up his duties as president of the nation's largest union temporarily on May 4 because of poor health.

A May 1986 indictment accused Presser of taking $700,000 from his Cleveland local's union office and paying it to "ghost" employees who performed no work.

3 locals to serve as delegates

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

The excitement of the Iowa caucuses has come and gone for most people, but for Marilyn Simpson, Deborah Ann Turner and Robert Downer the excitement is still there — later this summer these three Iowa City residents will serve as delegates in the Democratic and Republican National Conventions.

The Democratic National Convention will be held from July 18-21 and will take place in Atlanta. Iowa's delegation will consist of 61 members who will be given the opportunity to voice their opinions and vote on platform issues.

Iowa City's Marilyn Simpson, 39, is one of Iowa's Democratic delegates. Simpson was voted as a delegate on an "at large" ticket, which can be filled by anyone. To do so, Simpson went through the process of filling out paperwork that indicated her desire to become a delegate and collecting support signatures.

Simpson explained that during elections for "at large" delegates a male-female gender balance is maintained, whereas district-level delegate slots can be filled by an uneven number of males and females.

An active Michael Dukakis supporter, Simpson said she doesn't know quite what to expect from a national convention, but added she

From DI staff reports

Donations needed after UI student's death

Donations are being sought to cover the costs of cremating the body of Jinhong Ahn, a UI doctoral student in computer science who drowned June 24 at Kent Park. Sali Gosula, a graduate student in computer science, said Ahn had planned to return to his home in Seoul, South Korea, June 18 but temporarily postponed the trip. Ahn came to the UI in the spring of 1987 and recently earned his master's degree. Those wishing to contribute should make checks payable to the Korean Student Association Memorial Fund. Checks should be sent to Hosae Lee, 541 Hawkeye Drive.

Library holds hearing to discuss new plans

The Iowa City Public Library Board of Trustees will hold a public hearing on a proposed outline of the new initiatives and revised priorities of the library on July 28 at 7 p.m. at the library in Room A. Copies of the report "On Track for the '90s" will be available at the library's information desk by July 10. Those unable to attend the hearing may call any board member to comment.

Church holds 24-hour vigil to pray for rain

In support of drought-stricken farmers, a 24-hour prayer vigil at St. Andrew Presbyterian Church will begin with a service on July 1 at 7 p.m. This ecumenical outreach program will petition God to bring rain. Resource material will be available at the church.

School district now taking nominations

Two directors for the Iowa City Community School District will be elected at the school elections on Sept. 13. Any person who is a citizen of the United States, 18 years of age or older and a resident of the school district may be a candidate for the school board. Nomination papers may be secured from the office of the board secretary, 509 S. Dubuque St., or from the county commissioner of elections, and must be filed with the secretary of the board of education between July 11 and 5 p.m. Aug. 4. The nomination petition must contain the signatures of at least 10 eligible electors of the school district. An affidavit acknowledging the candidate's eligibility must also be filed with the petition.

Slide show sponsored on Iowa Constitution

Schools and community groups will have the opportunity to learn about the conservation of the Iowa Constitution, from a traveling slide show put together by the UI Libraries and funded in part by a recent grant from the Iowa Humanities Board. The state constitution, written in 1846, is currently undergoing extensive preservation work at the UI Libraries Conservation Lab. The slide show, to be produced this summer, will document the increasingly important process of book and paper conservation, as well as provide historical background on the constitution itself. The completed show will tour the state accompanied by a facsimile of the Iowa Constitution. The Iowa Humanities Board grant of $1,100 will be used primarily to fund the cost of videotapes needed to produce the slide show.

Household toxins create environmental hazards

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County may soon become one of the first counties in Iowa to initiate a public toxic waste education and cleanup program. Tracy Grigsby, a UI science education student, told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday that Iowa groundwater is being threatened by hazardous household toxins that people send to landfills with their normal trash. She asked the board to apply for a grant available from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources that would make Johnson County a prototype for a countywide hazardous waste cleanup project. "You have a concerned and well-educated public in Johnson County who are as frustrated as we are," she said. "What we want to do is try and avoid this waste from going to the landfill where it seeps into the groundwater." The county cleanup would last three to six days, according to comment.

Grigsby, and involve a per-day commitment of $30,000 to $60,000 from the IDNR. The state would help coordinate a dropoff point where people can take their hazardous material, as well as carry out the treatment and neutralization of toxins. Common household products that are considered hazardous include oven cleaners, spot removers, floor wax, drain cleaners, motor oil, antifreeze, paint strippers and weed killers. These products contain carcinogens, lead, arsenic or asbestos and are extremely dangerous to humans, animals and the environment. City garbage collectors would not be involved in the cleanup. Instead, citizens would bring their own waste material to a designated spot. Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said she was in favor of the project and recommended that the county designate Johnson County Health Department Director Graham Dameron to apply for the grant. "I know that the health department has a big interest in this, so we should get them involved," she said. Board member Dick Myers was also in favor of the proposal and mentioned that a similar Coralville Cleanup Day in 1975, where people brought their waste to a designated collection point, was a great success. But he also recommended that the plan be brought before the Iowa City Council, since a law governing landfill operations might jeopardize plans to dispose of treated toxins at the landfill. Grigsby said that a large part of the project includes educating the public on which products are considered hazardous and how to either avoid buying these products or minimize the danger they pose to humans and the environment. "It would take require a lot of public relations to educate the people — many people don't even realize that they have toxic waste under the kitchen cabinet," she said.

Excellence award given to UI for off-campus telecourses

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

The UI Tuesday received an award for excellence in its use of telecourses in off-campus courses. "This award is a tribute to the faculty who have committed their extraordinary talent and energy to serving the university's continuing education mission by adapting their campus-based courses to statewide telecourse delivery," Emmett Vaughan, dean of the UI Division of Continuing Education, said. "It is also a testimony to Iowans' dedication to lifelong learning and continuing education." The UI received the award, one of 10 given nationally, from the Annenberg/Corporation for Public Broadcasting Project, a project created in 1981 to support programs enhancing the quality and availability of higher education. At the award ceremony, Bobbi Kamil, director of academic utilization for the Washington, D.C.-based project, congratulated UI faculty and administrators for recognizing the potential benefits telecommunications and information technologies hold for adult learners. "We are gratified that television and print materials we have funded are proving to be important and useful to the University of Iowa and the students it serves off campus," Kamil said. Television courses are especially convenient for people who want to earn academic credit, but who don't have time for a traditional on-campus schedule, she added. According to Wayne Prophet, UI assistant director for Off-campus Courses for Credit Programs, telecourses use specially designed television material as a component in a class. Students enrolled in a telecourse receive UI credit. Since the telecourses are aired by the Iowa Public Television Network, they may be leased and offered by any institution in the state, Prophet said. To date, the UI has enrolled more than 1,000 students in telecourses, he added.

An Iowa City man was charged with second-degree theft Tuesday after he allegedly removed stereo equipment from boats docked at GS Marine in Iowa City, according to Johnson County District Court records. Russell W. Arwood, 18, No. 3 Riverview Estates, indicated his participation in the theft. Arwood and four others allegedly removed the stereo equipment on June 23 from four boats. The total value of the equipment at the time was approximately $2,600, according to court records. A preliminary hearing is set for July 12. An Iowa City man was charged with leaving the scene of a personal injury accident after he allegedly ran from the scene of an accident with his truck, according to Johnson County District Court records. David O. Davidson, 28, 502 N. Dodge St., allegedly was the driver of a truck that struck a parked car, a garage and a tree on May 27. A passenger in Davidson's truck was injured and transported to UI Hospitals and Clinics, according to court records. Davidson was also allegedly injured but fled the scene of the accident on foot before officers arrived, according to court records. A preliminary hearing in the case is set for July 12.

A stolen car was recovered Tuesday on South Van Buren Street, according to police reports. The car, a blue 1983 Renault Alliance, was reported stolen Monday after the owner parked it on South Gilbert Street two weeks ago and later could not locate it, according to the report. Report: An Iowa City woman reported that a male was sitting outside looking into her window Monday night, according to police reports. Police arrested Timothy L. Brooks, 31, address not available, in connection with the incident, according to the report. Report: A Fairfield, Iowa, man was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct Monday night after allegedly walking over the trunk, roof and hood of a car, according to police reports. Jonathan Racherbaumer, 21, was seen walking on a brown Plymouth Horizon in the 200 block of East Washington Street. There was no known damage done to the vehicle, according to the report. Theft: A car that was reportedly stolen overnight Saturday was found Monday, but with several personal items missing from the vehicle and a damaged transmission, according to police reports. The owner of the car inspected it at Holiday Wrecker and Crane Service, 211 10th St., Coralville, where it was towed from an Iowa City intersection after the theft, according to the report. The items reported stolen from the vehicle include: a Mizuno baseball glove, valued at $85; a pair of Spottville spike shoes, valued at $55; a red cassette tape case containing about 10 tapes, valued at $90; the car's tire iron; the cigarette lighter; and the knobs off the car's stereo. The car owner told police the transmission had been damaged so that it was not possible to change gears, according to the report. Theft: A 12-speed bicycle belonging to an Iowa City woman was reported stolen Tuesday, according to police reports. The bike was reportedly stolen Monday between 11 and 11:30 p.m. The bike, a new Bower male's 12-speed, is valued at $300, according to the report. Report: A 32-year-old female allegedly caught shoplifting at J.C. Penney, Old Capitol Center, was transported to UI Hospitals and Clinics and released to a doctor for evaluation Monday night, according to police reports. The woman was a mental patient, according to the report.

Hunter gored by wounded buffalo

HARARE, Zimbabwe — A hunter was gored to death Tuesday by a fatally wounded buffalo he was tracking through the bush, according to friends.

Clive Swemmer died en route to a hospital in the town of Kariba, said friends, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He was hunting in the Zambezi Valley bordering Zambia on Friday when one of his companions shot and wounded the buffalo.

Swemmer plunged into thick bush to put the injured and angered animal out of its misery, the friends said. The buffalo apparently turned on him and gored him before it died beside him.

Heidnik's attorney uses insanity defense

PHILADELPHIA — Gary Michael Heidnik committed "horrible" acts by chaining women and torturing them, two until they died, but he is insane, not guilty of first-degree murder, his lawyer said Tuesday in closing arguments.

"This man conducted repeated sadistic acts on six defenseless persons," the prosecutor, Assistant District Attorney Charles Gallagher, said. "What he did was premeditated, deliberate murder."

Heidnik, 44, was arrested in March 1987, after one captive escaped from Heidnik's car and alerted police. He is accused of luring women to his basement torture chamber, where he chained them and raped them repeatedly in hopes of breeding a "superior race," between November 1986 and his arrest.

He used a chain saw to cut up the remains of one woman and then fed the remains mixed with dog food to the other women, according to police and trial testimony. The body of the second woman was found in the woods in New Jersey.

Professor guilty of slaying prostitute

LOS ANGELES — A former Fresno State University professor was found guilty of first-degree murder Tuesday in the slaying of a teen-age male prostitute whose body was found cut into pieces that were scattered as far as 200 miles apart.

Max Bernard Franc stood calmly beside his attorney as the verdict was read in a silent courtroom.

The victim, Tracy Leroy Nute, was an 18-year-old runaway from Kansas City, Mo., who came to California to be a movie star and wound up working as a prostitute.

Franc's arrest came after a chainsaw he had rented was returned with bits of flesh and blood in its inner workings.

Testimony about Franc's lifestyle disclosed the double life he had lived for years.

Reagan backs Israel, but not its use of violence in Mideast

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration Tuesday reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to Israel's security, but told Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin the Jewish state should not use violence to quell Palestinian unrest in the occupied territories.

"Neither should violence nor controls on violence become ends in themselves, making a political solution more difficult," the White House said in a statement summing up Rabin's talks with President Ronald Reagan, Vice President George Bush and other administration officials.

The statement also urged Israel to show more flexibility in the U.S. push for a Middle East peace settlement.

The administration has been reluctant to criticize Israel's use of force against Palestinians in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, where 210 Palestinians and four Israeli settlers have been killed since Arab unrest began in December.

In its statement the White House said: "While Israel should not be expected to make concessions under the threat of violence, the preservation of order in the territories must neither provide a justification for civilian lawlessness nor act as an excuse for avoiding political discourse with the Palestinians of the West Bank and Gaza."

Following his meeting with Reagan Tuesday, Rabin told reporters he was "going back home quite satisfied" with his expectations of continued U.S. aid.

"The framework of the support will be basically the same as it used to be," he said. "We also are aware of other problems that the United States faces. We know of the problems about foreign aid bills and about the defense bills."

Israel, the largest single recipient of U.S. aid, received about $3 billion in total military and economic assistance in the current year. Under legislation now before Congress an identical appropriation is proposed for fiscal 1989, which begins Oct. 1.

Meese's frequent travels in FBI jet are questioned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese's frequent use of an FBI jet is under scrutiny by Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., chairman of the House government information, justice and agriculture subcommittee, who says Meese may have violated President Ronald Reagan's mandate to hold down travel costs.

English, who directed the General Accounting Office, the investigative wing of Congress, to attempt to cut through a shroud of secrecy the FBI and Justice Department have placed over Meese's travels.

Between June 3, 1986, and May 11, 1987, Meese used an FBI airplane on 40 occasions, compared to 37 trips by the FBI and other Justice officials, and only six by FBI director William Webster, according to a House Government Operations Committee staffer who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Where Meese went, however, remains a state secret because the FBI has failed to disclose any specific data about his travels, English said in a letter to Comptroller General Charles Bowsher, head of the GAO.

English said that when GAO asked the FBI for flight logs for the FBI aircraft, the bureau supplied only an incomplete summary report of its use and declared the entire document classified.

"The questionable use of the classification system to protect information relating to the attorney general raises a concern that classification is being used to keep embarrassing information from public view," he said.

ers of the country's institutions and democratic normality," Kostopoulos told reporters at a news briefing.

Police said the Toyota packed with explosives was parked 100 yards from Nordeen's two-story home in the northern suburb of Kifissia, where many American and foreign diplomats live.

The blast shattered windows and blew out doors in surrounding houses. Trees, fences and walls were blacked by smoke after fire engulfed both cars.

"We heard a tremendous bang, and the house rocked back and forth. Pieces of the car were thrown into our house," Panagia Kapodistria said. The car's twisted rear axle lay in her front yard.

Nordeen, 51, of Centuria, Wis., was due to retire in August after 30 years in the Navy, said his sister, Carla Anderson. He had been stationed in Greece for three years.

here," he said.

The government used a similar suit two years ago under the Racketeer-Influenced Corrupt Organizations Act to place Teamsters Local 560 in New Jersey under the control of a government-appointed trustee. Giuliani said it was the ninth time prosecutors had used civil provisions of the RICO laws to attack alleged mob control over unions or businesses.

"That control is so pervasive that for decades the IBT's leadership has permitted La Cosa Nostra figures to dominate and corrupt important Teamsters locals, joint councils and benefit funds," prosecutors said in court papers.

The AFL-CIO issued a statement calling the lawsuit "a clear abuse of the government's prosecutorial power and . . . if sustained, would undermine a free trade union movement."

Iowa City high schools receive $25,000 donation

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Iowa State Bank and Trust presented the Iowa City School District with a $25,000 check Tuesday night to fund improvements in the business technology departments at West and City High Schools.

Iowa State Bank President W.R. Summerwill presented George Matheson, president of the School District Foundation, with an oversized replica of the check and told the board to "use it with our blessing." He also thanked the board for giving the bank the opportunity to use its resources in the "valuable area of our children's education."

"We are very pleased to be in a partnership with the school district and be able to enhance the quality and level of education in our school district," he said.

In accepting the check, Matheson said he saw this donation as the first step toward a greater cooperation between the business community and the school district.

"This shows that Iowa State Bank recognizes the need for funds and were willing to help us. It furthers the partnership between business and schools," he said.

Iowa City Community School District Business Technology Coordinator Connee Riley, who is responsible for dispersing the grant money, told the board she was excited to be part of the project and added that she was pleased the Iowa City School District was able to double the grant to $50,000 for much needed equipment, staff and curriculum development.

In other business, a committee that has been studying a proposal to put an enrichment tax on the ballot in September to raise money for the district's general fund recommended against the move, saying it would be "ill-advised."

John Balmer, who co-chaired the Enrichment Tax Levy Committee, reported the committee's findings and said the main reason the tax was turned down was that there were no specific plans to use the money — only to put it in a general fund for various uses.

"This tax has no specific uses that it can be programmed to — it's not definable or saleable to the voters," he said. "We felt that to have any prospect at passing this, we would have to have a specific plan for the funds the tax would raise."

But board member Betsy Hawtry emphasized the district's need for raising funds, saying that the quality of the Iowa City School District was eroding.

is familiar with the process of platform acceptance and nomination and is looking forward to taking an active part in the voting.

"From the start I have supported Mike Dukakis, and I am excited to continue that support," said Simpson. "I am primarily impressed with the views he has toward economic issues. Because I have two teenage daughters, I am especially concerned about how the future's economic stability is going to affect them."

Simpson took a leave of absence from her job as a secretary for the UI Hospitals and Clinics' Pediatrics Department in order to support the Dukakis campaign.

Since mid-December of 1987, Simpson has been involved politically here in town, coordinating phone banks and participating in them herself. She has also taken upon herself the responsibility of making people in the area aware of upcoming visits by Dukakis and his representatives.

Simpson said she fully supports Dukakis across the board, especially his views toward job and health coverage, childcare and his proposal to implement and emphasize certain industry boosts for specific areas of our nation.

Other Democratic delegates from Iowa City who will be joining Simpson and Turner on their trip to Atlanta are alternates Maureen Taylor and Taylor's daughter, Anne Marie.

Shortly after the Democrats meet in Atlanta, the Republicans will follow suit in New Orleans where they will hold their national convention August 15-18.

Robert Downer, 48, an Iowa City attorney, will be representing Iowa at the Republican Convention as a district-level delegate. There will be a total of 37 delegates representing Iowa at the convention.

"I have been involved in politics for a very long time — ever since high school," said Downer. "And, this year I have become especially involved in Kansas Senator Bob Dole's campaign."

Downer was the chairman of Dole's campaign in Johnson County and was also very involved in statewide business and industry concerns.

Because of Downer's political involvement, he was chosen as one of three delegates from Iowa's Third Congressional District.

UI recruitment plan targets minorities, high achievers

By Mary Brill
The Daily Iowan

The UI Admissions Office is trying a new recruiting strategy to bring academic talent and diversity to the UI campus.

Director of Admissions Michael Barron hopes to reach highly motivated and minority students by having "Peterson's Competitive College Guide" locate these students and send them free copies of the guide. For a fee of approximately $1,000 Peterson's offers this service to any of the 225 academic institutions listed in its catalog, according to Barron.

Participating universities offer guidance concerning the academic quality and background desired of the high-school students who receive the free catalog. Peterson's uses Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test information to determine which students are qualified. Peterson's will also send a form which these students may fill out to receive additional information about the participating universities, Barron said.

"It allows us to reach a national sample of very high-achieving students, about 20 percent of whom are ethnic minorities," Barron said.

While this is the first time the UI has tried the offer, and only 50 of the 225 listed institutions participate, Barron says he is optimistic about its potential, having successfully used Peterson's offer as a recruiting tool while working at another university.

"Experience tells me this works when this is a good school," Barron said. "We expect to receive several hundred responses."

"We want to enroll more minority students," Barron said. "We think it's good for Iowa to have a better awareness of cultural diversity within our own society. Many states are having ethnic non-whites as a majority of the state population."

"Nobody told us we have to do this," he added. "We enroll a higher percentage of minorities than the percentage in the state population."

The UI is currently meeting requirements with a minority enrollment of 5.64 percent, according to the state Board of Regents' Special Report on Regent University Enrollments.

"The value of Peterson's is it tells you those are colleges that are . . . reasonably selective or challenging," Barron said.

The primary statistics used to determine which schools are profiled in the guide include: the percentage of freshmen who scored 600 or above on both the math and verbal sections of the SAT, or at least 26 on the ACT; the percentage who scored over the national average on the SAT or ACT; and the percentage who ranked in the top half or the top 10 percent of their class, Barron said.

He added that the guide is useful to college-bound students who want a source for objective information about a variety of academic institutions. Sending high achievers free copies takes this one step further by aiding universities, Barron said.

"They are helping make sure that good students get good information," he said.

Desperate for votes

Vice President George Bush's most recent idea to fight the drug crisis in America is to execute convicted drug kingpins. Bush's proposal is as ridiculous as it would be ineffective.

To begin with, drug dealers already work in an extremely hazardous occupation, one in which they routinely blow each other away with AK-47s and Uzi submachine guns. After living with the fear of death every day, they're supposed to be afraid of the electric chair?

Bush's proposal is, quite transparently, a political ploy to win votes. It is an attempt to make Michael Dukakis look soft on drugs and an attempt by Bush to put his own hated "wimp" label on Dukakis. By appealing to the macho vote, Bush hopes to draw attention away from the fact that the Reagan-Bush administration has failed to halt the importation and sale of illegal drugs. From a moral standpoint, a promise to kill people, even drug dealers, as a means to obtain votes is repugnant to say the least.

Bush's idea is that of a desperate man — desperate for votes and desperate for anything that will look like a solution to the drug problem. If Bush were realistic about the drug crisis, he would see that it will continue as long as the reasons people take drugs exist. A more effective means to stop drug abuse would be to get serious about such things as drug education, drug rehabilitation, job training and working to eliminate poverty and hopelessness. But then again, those things are more difficult to do than frying people in an electric chair and have the added disadvantage of not attracting the macho vote.

Pathetic parking

"Hello, I'm Robin Letch, and welcome to another edition of LIFESTYLES OF THE POOR AND OPPRESSED! This week I'm coming to you LIVE from the University of Iowa, and I DON'T KNOW WHY! All I know is that I'd rather be at PRINCETON! But be that as it may, I was surprised, as you will be, at these incredibly lush and impressive surroundings! The UI's got a LASER CENTER that's going to be really famous if it ever gets built! It's got JAMES VAN ALLEN, although I don't know why, because this university stinks at faculty pay! And — oops, I almost forgot — it's got NO PLACE TO PARK! And students get charged a monstrous and unfair fee for NO PLACE TO PARK! And the state Board of Regents just voted to raise parking fines, even though there's still NO PLACE TO PARK!"

A recent UI report on the new parking fees reads: "The primary consequence of the growth in parking encroachment is that it becomes more difficult and expensive to provide parking to our priority users such as patients, visitors and faculty/staff." The person who composed this brilliant report evidently forgot that without students — about 30,000 of us, many of whom drive — the "priority users" wouldn't be driving here in the first place.

Oh, the sympathy is there. When asked about the local parking situation, officials always nod their heads and say, "We realize there's a parking shortage." But with the next bang of the gavel, these same officials see fit to RAISE parking fines.

Why should we be forced to pay so dearly for parking — a necessity — because the regents see it as a luxury? Perhaps when the next board meeting is held in Iowa City, each regent should be forced to fight for a parking spot behind EPB and then pay the accumulated $30 in fines.

Stop the sparring

Sometimes it takes a "super-event" — the stock market crash, the explosion of the space shuttle, natural disasters — to make people wake up to reality. Frequently these events are brutal and shocking, leading people to wonder why they were ever allowed to happen.

On Monday night, a super-event of another variety took place when heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson pounded the daylights out of challenger Michael Spinks. By boxing standards the bout was far from spectacular — since Tyson required only 1 minute 31 seconds to dispose of Spinks, many of those in attendance barely had a chance to make a fashion statement, let alone savor the cultural significance of the evening.

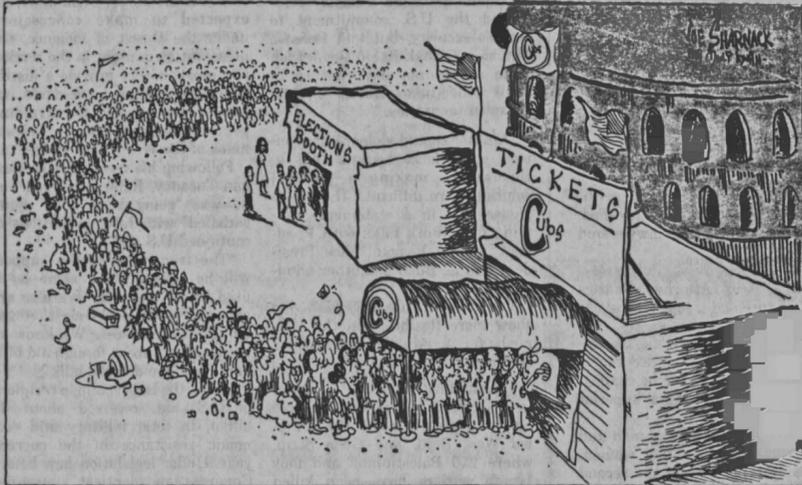

Still, this display undoubtedly pleased many. People like real estate mogul Donald Trump, fight promoter Don King, cable television executives and gamblers of all sorts love a good fight — and they love the money it brings even more. But there is another, more serious, side to boxing.

Consider the words of William Hotchkiss, president of the American Medical Association, as he describes boxers: "They will rain repeated blows to each others' bodies, as many as possible to the head, causing the brain to bounce around inside the skull, tearing blood vessels and producing clots. If one of them is lucky, he will deliver a cerebral concussion, which results in the loss of consciousness, popularly known as a knockout . . . (Boxing) is the only sport that exists for the express purpose of damaging the brain."

When the event is so vividly described, rather than in euphemistic sports jargon ("brilliant combinations, withering uppercuts, solid body punches, . . .") it appears in a different light. Perhaps these more faithful descriptions, along with the fact that Monday's fight generated such widespread interest, will bring stricter regulation, if not the banning, of professional boxing.

Poor priorities are evident: Politics assumes back seat

A typical complaint of many contemporary U.S. citizens is that politicians are impotent or tyrannical, insensitive or corrupt. Such thinking inevitably leads to the conclusion that participating in the political process — by voting or otherwise — is irrelevant. So instead of exercising our relatively unique political freedoms, we all go to Hawkeye games. However, there is little reason to expect U.S. politics to improve as long as the nation remains fanatically devoted to collegiate and professional sports.

Historian Don Fehrenbacher notes that 17th- and 18th-century Americans "found keen enjoyment in political activities and bestowed upon them all the devoted attention that many later Americans would reserve for athletic contests. Politics was a favorite form of mass entertainment, and the larger meetings were holiday affairs, attended by whole families looking for diversion from their daily routines." Put more bluntly, intellectual Russell Jacoby contends, "A public that once snapped up pamphlets by Thomas Paine or stood for hours listening to Abraham Lincoln debate Stephen Douglas hardly exists; its span of attention shrinks as its fondness for television increases."

Reasonable critiques. Consider what UI students and alumni pay annually for tickets to Hawkeye sporting events. Now imagine how much they contribute to the political candidate or party of their choice. Consider how many Hawk fans travel to Ann Arbor, San Diego or Honolulu to cheer our teams on to victory; now imagine how many travel to witness a particular political event. Consider how many of us know the pass-completion, E.R.A. or rebound statistics of so-and-so of the Hawks,

Keith Yellin

Chicago, etc.; now imagine how many of us know the voting records of our members of Congress. Generally, we're much more qualified to debate the merits of starting one player over another than we are qualified to select which person should be our next president . . . or school board chair.

In fact, we don't really forget politics when we go to ball games. Indeed, sporting events celebrate our American political heritage. Before every contest, for instance, players and spectators pause for a few teary-eyed moments and sing the national anthem. Somehow, crushing bones and cartilage is more noble after we've been reminded of our political values. Then there are the Olympics. What could be more political? Nations boycott this gathering or are boycotted, are well-received by the international sporting community or are not, almost exclusively because of their politics. And don't we really view Olympian contests as tests of political superiority? Since we can't nuke the Russians, we derive great satisfaction from checking them into the boards. If we can check them into the boards and win, Thomas Jefferson is again proven the superior of Karl Marx.

One hundred and sixty-three years ago this month, Daniel Webster proclaimed before an audience of thousands, "politics and government. This is the master topic of the age." That age has surely passed. Today, 20 times as many people attend a single Hawkeye football game as Johnson County residents participated in the Feb. 8th presidential caucuses. True, the nation no longer confronts the monumental issues of separation from Britain, slavery, civil war or economic depression, but we still face some serious questions. We shiver at the thought of a nuclear holocaust, grow nervous over the federal budget and national trade deficits, complain about crime and drugs and traffic in the cities, pity the homeless, wonder how long we can dispose of our mountains of garbage. But downtown we would recognize Iowa football Coach Hayden Frye or basketball Coach Tom Davis more quickly than we would Govs. Terry Branstad or James Thompson.

Ours is the age of spectator sports. So comfortable have we become sitting on the sidelines, we have forgotten how to participate in the biggest game of all: popular politics and government.

As citizens, then, we want government of the people, by the people, for the people, but not really. We'd like a wise, honest, efficient and representative government, but we're unwilling to educate ourselves about issues and politicians or to participate vigorously in the political process to ensure it is such. Instead, when we're not working or studying, we stand in line for sports tickets; we pay good money for them; we sit in traffic before and after contests; and we shout ourselves hoarse while we're at them (or we do a variation on the theme at home in front of the tube). Is criticism of politics fair? Like most things in life, you get out of them what you put into them. The United States has the finest collegiate and professional sports system in the world. We are also governed by mediocre politics — government that functions remarkably well, actually, for all our inattention.

Keith Yellin is a UI graduate student of rhetoric and public address.

Teach your cat simple tricks Reap great fame and fortune

June is Adopt-a-Cat Month. And what better reason to adopt a cat than to teach it to do tricks?

Why settle for the pedestrian joys of mere feline companionship when you could turn your cat into a star who can do stupid pet tricks on Letterman?

Everyone knows cats don't do tricks, you're probably saying, if you're still with me, which, I realize, you may not be. But this is not necessarily so. Cats can be taught to do tricks, according to George Ney, and who would know better than he?

Ney (rhymes, as he himself points out, with "not shy") is trainer of what he describes in his book "The Educated Cat" (E.P. Dutton, $8.95) as "the nation's largest multiple-cat performing act." I confess I was somewhat surprised to see that phrase, implying as it does that there is more than one multiple-cat performing act in the nation, but who knows? Maybe cat training is a concept whose time has finally come.

Ney certainly thinks so. He writes, "Through the ages virtually no one thought to train a cat to do tricks. That's why, even in a high-tech age of infinite possibility, performing cats continue to amaze."

Now, thanks to Ney, you can train your cats to play dead, to jump through hoops, to sit up and beg. Well, you can try.

Diane White

Unfortunately, you will not find instructions in his book on how to teach your cat to do anything useful, like quit clawing the furniture to shreds, but hey, we're talking show biz here, breaking into the big time, the cat show circuit, what Ney calls "the feline equivalent of Hollywood."

The George Ney story begins on a dramatic note in the little town of Fox Grove, Ill., with the failure of his carpet business. Stuck with a lot of odd-sized leftover carpeting, Ney cast about for a way to use it and hit upon the idea of making furniture for cats — scratching posts, perches, tunnels and so forth.

To his surprise, his line of feline furniture was an immediate success. As a promotional gimmick he acquired a kitten, a Scottish fold named Tasha, to perch on his furniture. Between customers, Ney began teaching Tasha to do tricks. She caught on. One trained cat led to another, and soon Ney's cat chorus line was the toast of the cat show circuit.

The Educated Cat is illustrated with photographs of cats doing tricks, and looking, frankly, rather undignified. In one photo a grinning Ney presides over the supine bodies of several cats, their little feet sticking up in the air. The caption reads, "At a cat show, with four felines playing dead at one time."

Ney concedes that there are cats who will never learn tricks. "These cats can be sweet and loving in their own way on their own terms," he writes, "but do not try to turn them into performers."

So I was not surprised that The Educated Cat was not a great success in my house. Killer was not amused when I tried to teach him to play dead, a trick I imagined might come naturally to him. It didn't. Repeated attempts to teach him the simplest of Ney's tricks failed, even with the inducement of his favorite treats, kippers and asparagus.

It's probably just as well. If Killer learned all those tricks he'd get himself a good agent and leave home.

Diane White's column appears on the Viewpoints page periodically.

Trash the poor waste solutions

Two television news stories this weekend on the CBS Evening News may be the first indicators that we're playing roulette with our future on earth, and we're missing the signals.

The first story dealt with the greenhouse effect. The greenhouse effect, for those who haven't sat through lectures on it in class, happens when the waste gases (carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide) which result from burning fossil fuels (coal, oil), trap sunlight in the earth's atmosphere. This trapping causes the earth's temperature to rise.

The temperature increase changes the ecology of various regions of the world. Two such changes reported by the story included birch trees dying in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina and the Midwestern drought.

Rising temperatures accelerate evaporation, so that less water is available to crops and trees. Future effects could be, according to the CBS story, a gradual lowering of water levels in the Great Lakes. The Great Lakes are a major source of drinking water and a chief shipping route for much of the Midwest.

Supposedly we could shift to nuclear energy and solve the problem. But in reality, we'd be shifting from one problem to another, because no permanent solution exists for nuclear waste disposal. The best that exists is putting spent fuel rods in sealed containers and depositing them in either the ground or the ocean.

We've tried that "out-of-sight, out-of-mind" solution in the past for non-nuclear, industrial toxic wastes. It doesn't work. The materials that are encased end up being more potent than we thought they were, and the material they're encased in doesn't seem to last as long as it's supposed to.

That leads to the second story on CBS, which described plans to dump all sorts of waste products in the deepest recesses of the oceans. They mentioned that past efforts to bury wastes (including nuclear wastes) in shallower waters close to shore didn't work. But they quoted scientists as saying that deep-ocean dumping would be safe. It would be safe simply because, according to the scientists, fewer people depend on living things from the deeper parts of the ocean, so fewer people would be affected.

As the reporter mentioned, not many people are buying this argument. Good. Instead of trying to fix things after we've screwed up, working at the back end of the problem, maybe it's time to work at the front end.

A good example of front-end thinking exists here in Iowa City. Because of the Iowa Bottle Bill Law — a form of tax incentive — people save their empty beer and soda pop cans and bottles instead of throwing them away.

To enlarge this, maybe we should have higher gasoline taxes to encourage people to shift to more fuel-efficient automobiles. Japanese and European cars are usually more fuel-efficient than American cars for the simple reason that these countries tax gasoline to the hilt.

Maybe energy-use taxes across the board should be higher. Some of the money could be used to help low-income people adjust to the higher energy prices, and the rest could help pay off the federal budget deficit.

Although we've made progress on the conservation front, much more needs to be done. Japan and Western Europe manage to get by quite nicely on less than two-thirds as much energy per person as we do. Some of that difference is due to their higher population densities and shorter distances of travel. But most of it is due to their high energy taxes, which discourage waste and encourage efficiency.

Fear and loathing on the U.S.S. Riverside

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

For the third summer in a row, last Saturday they beamed down to humble Riverside, Iowa (pop. under 1,000), to celebrate the birthplace of one James T. Kirk — Starfleet's commander extraordinaire and Riverside's favorite future son.

Some cynics have scoffed at the silliness of building a tourism industry on the basis of a half-baked notion from a cult television show. But you need only to look at the town — which calls itself "Riverside," yet has no river — to understand the kind of whimsical and imaginative fun-loving spirit that spawned the whole Kirk birthplace thing three years ago.

Today Riverside is a town with a purpose. As you enter the city from the east, just past Bud's Custom Meats, a billboard proclaims: "Riverside — Where the Trek Begins!" Riverside's citizens walk taller, keep the streets cleaner and talk proudly of their little burg. Make no mistake, they are behind their starship 100 percent.

Though the festival had officially begun Friday night with a volleyball tourney and the opening of the beer truck, things really got going Saturday morning with the parade. Some parade-goers may have been confused by the apparent anachronism of science fiction-oriented floats featuring a variety of spaceships, saucers and rockets followed by a large selection of tractors and other farm machinery. But one should remember that it's very likely Capt. Kirk's Riversidean ancestors were themselves in the farm implement business.

Following the parade, most folks headed for the center of the festival where the volleyball tourney continued and all future-minded folk could feast on porkburgers and sno-cones while browsing among the tents where fan clubs sold a plethora of "Star Trek" memorabilia.

The advent of the "Star Trek" films as well as the "Next Generation" television series has caused the amount of "Star Trek" stuff to grow geometrically in recent years. Three different U.S.S. Enterprise models are now available — and it's still near-impossible to get those engine mountings to stay in place. There was also a wide selection of posing dolls — or rather, "action figures" — from the show. One display asked $85 for one of the figures, the proprietor pointing out that the booth across the way was selling the same figure for $125. He only grinned when reminded that nobody bought the ugly things eight years ago when they sold in stores for under $10.

As you enter the city limits from the east, just past "Bud's Custom Meats," a billboard proclaims "Riverside — Where the Trek Begins!" Its citizens walk taller, keep the streets cleaner and talk prouder of their little burg. Make no mistake, the good folk of this town are behind their starship 100 percent.

Kirk will be born 246 years from now at a site behind what is now the Future Designs by Carol Styling Salon. The Riverside Community Club sold vials of dirt from the site. However, intrepid visitors could seek out the sacred plot themselves.

It's not much to look at now — the lot filled with green apples and beer cans, the only landmark an overturned concrete post base — but one shivered in anticipation of the blessed event a few centuries down the road.

Adm. Cyndee Davis, the delightful head of the Des Moines fan club, Starbase 17, said she could see James Kirk spending his formative years in Riverside, keeping in mind that "nobody knows what kind of metropolis this could be 246 years in the future — it could be as big as Des Moines by then!"

Davis' 5-year-old group is a "non-profit organization whose focus is the interweaving of the positive philosophies, concepts and goals of both science fiction and science fact, with its roots in the philosophies embodied in 'Star Trek.'

The Des Moines group exemplified all that is fun and enjoyable about "Star Trek" worship — good, clean goofiness with just the right amount of whimsical dedication. However, when you move up to the national level of "Trek" fandom, you start to encounter a disturbing blurring of lines between fact and fantasy — some of these folks just aren't spending a whole lot of time in Realityville.

Other fan clubs attending Trek Fest '88 included a rather frighteningly militaristic group from Chicago who, for the most part, looked like a motorcycle gang with phasers. They were members of Star Fleet Headquarters, the "largest fan-based organization in the world" (over 10,000 members).

In addition to the usual trinkets, their booth sold expensive copies of starship manuals and reports that members had written and illustrated themselves, including an R-rated packet describing the sexual habits of the alien "Zadvart" species (a beast with a long aardvark-like snout — you figure it out from there).

Finally there was the Riverside Fan Club — "the Official Fan Club of the Future Birthplace of Captain Kirk."

Meanwhile, at the Demolition Derby folks paid $3 for grandstand seats ($5 for the pit seats, if you signed an insurance form) to watch the locals recreate that classic episode of "Star Trek" when the evil Malachians forced Kirk and Spock to battle to the death in "Chevys" (they escaped only when Kirk tricked the Malachians by faking a cracked engine block).

As the sun set on the little town of Riverside Saturday, the Trekkers and Trekkers beamed off to wherever they'd come from, turning the streets over to Washington County teenagers — the "Star Trek" uniforms and communicators replaced by black Iron Maiden T-shirts and switchblade combs.

Cynicism be damned, there was quite a bit to amuse and entertain at "Trek Fest '88." After all, any event that was part small-town celebration, part good, clean, imaginative fun, part crass commercialism and part looniness was bound to have something for everyone.

'Loot' takes the stage in the Joe Orton fest

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

"Loot" by Joe Orton opens tonight at 8 in E.C. Mabie Theatre. This is the second play in the Summer Rep season of the UI Theatre Department. Orton was a playwright most famous for his work of the early to late '60s. He is considered one of the world's great comic geniuses.

Orton was a writer of what became known as the Black Humor movement. Most of his work ("Loot" included) harshly criticizes authority. In the play, the Scotland Yard detective Truscott kicks the tar out of a young boy and later says, "If I ever hear you accuse the police of using violence on a prisoner in custody again, I'll take you down to the station and beat the eyes out of your head."

Another Orton trait is rigorous wordplay. For example, we find in "Loot":

TRUSCOTT: "Have you never heard of Truscott? The man who tracked down the limbless girl killer?"

HAL: "Who would kill a limbless girl?"

TRUSCOTT: "She was the killer."

HAL: "How did she do it if she was limbless?"

TRUSCOTT: "I'm not prepared to answer that question to anyone outside the profession. We don't want a carbon-copy murder on our hands."

Jim Hanna of Lincoln, Neb., says his character, Hal, is a "naive, innocent, bumbling kind of criminal. His only fault (is) that he could never lie." Indeed, Hal is a pathological truth-teller. He does not hesitate to tell the truth on cue, no matter how indicting or embarrassing.

Actress Jennifer Bacon-Blaine is a visiting artist from Dallas, Texas. She just received her master of fine arts degree from the University of Texas-Austin. She described her character, Fay: "She's a black widow. She's had seven husbands over the span of a decade. She's very nice when people do what she wants." Fay is what might be called the villain of the story. She is a nurse who has a long history of having people conveniently die while in her care. "She's practiced her own form of genocide for a decade and called it nursing," says Truscott. Now she's back to wielding her implements.

Cosmo Catalano, chairman of the UI Theatre Department and director of "Loot," says Orton's work is similar to that of Aristophanes. "It's the comedy of political satire," Catalano said. At the time "Loot" was written, the stabs taken at authority would have been considered shocking. Now, says Catalano, people won't find the action so shocking. Our society has become numb to this kind of disrespect.

Unlike Orton's "What the Butler Saw," which opened the season last week, "Loot" is not a farce. "Loot" opened in Cambridge, England, in 1965 and was a miserable flop. Orton attributed its failure to the comic style of direction and acting. "Loot" is a serious play. Unless it is directed and acted perfectly seriously the play will fail," Orton wrote.

Orton was wrong, though. The play was staged again and became a roaring success, going on to Broadway after its sweep in England. The direction and acting, however, did not become serious, but remained in line with that of a comedy.

Bacon-Blaine said of the play: "It's naturalistic, but you can't play it naturalistic." Orton was a young genius and didn't have much experience in theater. "You have to give the audience permission to laugh," she said.

Catalano said of directing the play, "You have to find what's genuine in it." It's necessary to examine the psychology of a situation, then decide how each character should act. According to Catalano, the audience must know the extent of the seriousness, but also the extent of the comedy.

"Loot" walks a fine line between theater realism. "Obviously, he (Orton) had a comic genius," says Hanna.

Tyson files suit against manager

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Mike Tyson says in a lawsuit that he never would have signed a contract allowing Bill Cayton to take over his affairs if he had known his late manager, Jimmy Jacobs, was dying.

At a news conference Tuesday, Cayton, who now manages Tyson, revealed that he had been served with papers for the lawsuit just minutes before Tyson's successful title defense Monday night in Atlantic City, N.J., against Michael Spinks.

The suit seeks to dissolve Tyson's contract with Cayton, who currently gets one third of all of Tyson's boxing earnings.

"I am very disappointed and outraged," Cayton said. "I never thought Mike would file a lawsuit against me."

In the suit, Tyson contends that Cayton knew Jacobs was dying before the contracts were signed Feb. 12 and that he was never told of Jacobs' illness or that Cayton would take over in the event of Jacobs' death.

In his suit, Tyson contends that if he had known all this, he "would not have signed the document. . . ."

The suit says that Tyson and Jacobs entered into a personal services contract, but the contract did not have any term.

Kansas hopes to find new coach soon

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The Monday deadline for applications for the basketball coaching job at Kansas has passed, and Athletic Director Bob Frederick says he hopes to hire Larry Brown's successor by the end of the week.

Frederick originally set the deadline for June 20, but the university's affirmative action office pushed the date back to Monday.

Frederick has spoken to five candidates in the last week and was scheduled to meet with the search committee today in Lawrence to discuss the next step.

Brown, who led Kansas to the 1988 NCAA national championship, left for the San Antonio Spurs June 13.

Coaches Gene Keady of Purdue, Eddie Sutton of Kentucky, Bobbie Cremins of Georgia Tech, and Eddie Fogler of Wichita State all have released statements indicating they were not interested in the job.

Frederick has said he is seeking a coach with "national name recognition" that would be highly respected in national basketball circles.

Skinner leads Iowa prep team to win

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Troy Skinner scored 33 points to lead the Iowa Gold team to a 142-109 win over Metropolitan of New York City Monday in the 19-and-under AAU national tournament.

The Iowa team also got double-figure scoring from Jay Rodman (29), and Chris Street and Morgan Wheat, both with 21.

Whalers sold for $31 million

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The Hartford Whalers, who play in the NHL's smallest U.S. market, were sold Tuesday to two of the city's top corporate power brokers for $31 million.

The sale, pending the approval of the team's 16 community partners, represents the biggest cash price ever paid for an NHL team, new co-owner Donald G. Conrad said.

"Maybe I've done a favor for all the other owners in the NHL, now that we see what the Hartford market is worth," Conrad joked at a news conference announcing the deal.

NHL refs dislike rating proposal

TORONTO (AP) — The union for the NHL's referees and linesmen said Tuesday the league's proposal for a new system to rate on-ice officials could lead to dismissals based on "personality clashes" rather than performance.

The issue dominated a four-hour meeting Tuesday. When the meeting ended, both sides said it was too early to predict if the officials would strike before the 1988-89 season begins.

The current agreement expires Aug. 31. Talks now have been adjourned until Aug. 8.

Clemens will pitch despite injury

BOSTON (AP) — Two-time Cy Young Award winner Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox was given medical clearance Tuesday to pitch his next scheduled start despite a slight muscle tear in the groin area.

Clemens suffered what he first believed was a cramp in warming up before a game with the Baltimore Orioles.

Unable to pitch through the pain, he allowed six runs on seven hits and two walks in just 2 1/2 innings, equaling the shortest effort of his career.

Clemens, 10-5, threw on the side as scheduled Monday. He was examined by team physician Arthur Pappas Tuesday and given an OK to start against Cleveland Wednesday night barring any aggravation of the injury.

Raines goes on disabled list

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Tim Raines of the Montreal Expos Tuesday was placed on the disabled list for the first time in his eight-year career.

Raines pulled a hamstring last Friday in a 5-3 loss to the Pittsburgh Pirates and has not played since. He was placed on the disabled list retroactive to last Friday.

Raines is batting .274 with seven home runs and 30 runs batted in and 22 stolen bases.

Giamatti agrees with call reversal

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — National League President Bart Giamatti said Tuesday night that umpire Paul Runge was "exactly right" in reversing a wild pitch to a foul tip after viewing an instant replay and conferring with the other umpires.

"Runge saw the scorebook but he did not change his mind because of the replay. He changed his mind because of the conference (with the other umpires) and, therefore, did the right thing," Giamatti said.

Golfing Tips

Golfing tips on "How To Spot A Hustler:" (Excerpts taken from Pigeons, Marks, Hustlers and Other Golf Bets You Can Beat by Sam Sneed and Jerry Tarde.)

"I figure that the first time you get hustled it's his fault; the second time it's your own fault. How do you head off a hustler?"

"Son, no matter how far you travel, or how smart you get, always remember this: Someday, somewhere, a guy is going to come to you and show you a nice, brand new deck of cards on which the seal is never broken, and this guy is going to offer to bet you that the jack of spades will jump out of this deck and squirt cider in your ear. But, son, do not bet him, for as sure as you do you are going to get an earful of cider."

— Damon Runyon

Rule 1

1. Bet with a stranger only after he's become a friend.

2. Try to get a look at your opponent's left hand. If there's a noticeable callous running across the base of the ring and little fingers, think again.

3. Beware of anyone with a suntan darker than your own.

4. Keep your betting simple. Don't allow an opponent to distract you with multiple side wagers or confusing gimmick bets.

5. Check your opponent's handicap. If you both belong to the same club, take a minute on your way out of the locker room to inspect his latest handicap. If you're playing someone from another club and the wager is sizeable, invest in a phone call.

6. Bet with your head, not your ego. Someone will probably have the edge going off the first tee. Make sure it's not the other guy.

7. Never bet a sick man. An opponent who's hurting doesn't have room in his mind for anything but his golf game. I shot a course-record 64 at the Cascades one day when I was so hoarse I couldn't talk. Somebody asked me what I'd have shot if I felt good, and I said 71 or 72.

8. Don't play against an unemployed golfer. Either he doesn't have any money or he practices all day. You can't win either way.

Wimbledon

When the match resumed, Navratilova quickly won the first five games and went on to win 6-4, 6-2.

The 31-year-old Navratilova said she was inspired by watching a tape of Mike Tyson's fast knockout of Michael Spinks in their heavyweight championship fight Monday night.

"He knocked the breath out of me just watching," she said. "Tyson's awesome. He never took a step back."

Navratilova, a Czechoslovakian defector who was knocked out of the French Open by Natalia Zvereva, was asked if she got special satisfaction in beating Zvereva's countrywoman.

"I'm on a mission against all Russians," she said with a smile. "That's my idea of glasnost."

While Navratilova was completing her fourth-round match, top-seeded Steffi Graf and third-seeded Pam Shriver enjoyed Evert in the semifinals.

Graf, 19, kept her Grand Slam

Rule 9 Never play a golfer with a 1-iron in his bag, especially if his handicap is in double figures.

Rule 10 Run — do not walk — away from an opponent who asks for fewer strokes than he's been getting and at the same time wants to increase the bet. This is the oldest hustler's play in the book. A golfer tried to pull it on me once a few years ago. He said he was a low 80s-shooter, so I gave him 14 strokes — or a shot a hole on everything but the par 3s — and we played a $10 Nassau. I shot four straight rounds between 66 and 68, but we broke exactly even each time. Then one morning he said, "I feel hot today. Let's play $250 a side, and you can give me 12 strokes instead of 14." I said, "Thanks, but I'll pass." Later I learned that he really was a scratch player, capable of shooting in the low 70s. He'd just come from Hollywood, where he'd hustled on the movie stars out of $100,000.

Iowa City polo club falls

By Hilery Livengood The Daily Iowan

For the fifth time in five years, the Des Moines Polo Club emerged victorious over the Iowa City club at Sunday's 7-4 match in Des Moines.

The two four-member clubs met at "Polo on the Green," a benefit for the Des Moines Ballet and the Des Moines Polo Club. There 900 spectators watched an exhibition of a variety of equestrian sports, including polo, show-jumping and fox hunting.

The polo match began at 2 p.m. when Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, safe inside a car, threw out the first ball to open the first of six chukkers.

Iowa City took the lead in the opening minutes of the first chukker - a seven-minute period, 7 1/2 minutes in overtime - when Dick Meade, from North Liberty, Iowa, scored the first goal of the game. Des Moines club member Monte Antisdal then evened the score with a goal later that in the chukker.

The only fall of the day also occurred in the first chukker when Antisdal fell from his mount, Lauren. He was not injured and the game continued when he remounted his horse.

Des Moines club member Jim Goode dominated the second chukker with three goals, bringing the score to 4-1. In the third chukker, Iowa City missed a chance to score when Des Moines' Jim Smith stopped an Iowa City shot inches from the goal posts.

Spectators entered the field during halftime and joined in on divot stomping, a polo tradition in which spectators cross the field to level the tufts of dirt dug up by galloping horses. After that, the polo field at MoMont Dels, used for the first time Sunday, was dedicated and the Moingona Hunt foxhounds were paraded.

Two goals by Iowa City's Meade narrowed Des Moines' lead to 4-3 during the fourth chukker and brought Iowa City back into the game.

But two goals during the fifth chukker by Des Moines' Smith gave Des Moines a three-point lead and dashed Iowa City's hopes for a win. In the sixth chukker, Meade scored for Iowa City and Goode responded with another goal for Des Moines. The match ended at 7-4.

The fundraiser began at 12 p.m. with a hunter/jumper exhibition featuring eight Des Moines-area riders. A $40-per-plate champagne brunch followed the exhibition. General admission tickets were sold in advance for $5, and for $7 on Sunday.

Co-chairman Molly Kurtz Antisdal estimated the event raised between $15,000 and $20,000, "80 percent of which goes to the ballet and 20 percent of which goes to the betterment of the club's polo facilities," she said.

"This was a perfect example of how the business community and volunteers are willing to band together and support a good cause," she said.

"This match has exposed the sport to a lot of people here in Des Moines who didn't know it was here," Antisdal said. "We hope more will come to watch our matches now. We have every walk of life out on the field now and also want a wide variety in our crowd."

The history of the Des Moines club is closely related with the Iowa City club, Antisdal said. Three of Sunday's players had played on both the Des Moines and Iowa City clubs during their polo careers.

"The Iowa City team has been very active in getting the Des Moines club rolling. Bart (Hicklin) started playing there when he went to school at Iowa and brought it here in 1982," Antisdal said.

Despite their close relationship, there is still stiff competition between the two clubs.

"We (Iowa City) could beat Des Moines any day if we had all of our players and a field to practice on, and they know it," said Meade, a polo competitor since 1968. "We went out there cold turkey on Sunday and our defense wasn't very strong."

Des Moines club member Jon Moeller joined the Iowa City club of Meade, Nate Spencer and Paul Williamson for the match.

Title fight is American nightmare

What a Country! Where else could it happen? Where else could two men from underprivileged backgrounds pick up a payday like the one Mike Tyson and Michael Spinks did Monday night.

Two men from any background, for that matter.

To the casual observer, it appears that Spinks cleared at least $13.5 million for his 1 minute, 31 second, dose of humility and Tyson will bank at least $20 million for battering the poor sap silly in the first round.

As horrific as the amount seems in a by-the-minute format, it's unthinkable when examined, yes, you guessed it, by the second.

Tyson, for all his trouble, netted $219,780.21 per tick. We pay the President of the United States $200,000 per year.

It's the American way. Get what you can how you can with what you got.

Interesting priorities.

And Spinks, who really came out on the short end, got only $148,351.64 per count. And he used at least $1 million worth of his time on the canvas. How else can a tidy million be earned while unconscious.

The Cardinals' Ozzie Smith makes in a year what Tyson made in 10 seconds. The Phillies' Mike Schmidt makes in a year what Tyson made in about five seconds. Wayne Gretzky, three seconds; Babe Ruth in his prime, one-fourth second; John Elway, six seconds; Walter Payton, five seconds.

Somebody, stop me, please. I know fighters train hard for their moments in the ring. But so do other athletes, and they have to play a bit more often than once or twice a year.

But it's what America is all about. It's the American way. Get what you can how you can with what you got.

But it's disgusting.

I'm not going to be a bleeding-heart liberal and bring up the fact that thousands of Americans are homeless and live in the streets or that people are starving in Africa or that with proper funding AIDS and just about any other disease could be cured much sooner.

But oops, I just did. Let's face it, sports fans, this thing has gotten out of hand. It's time to put a salary cap on boxing.

After all, there's a little bit of socialism in all the great sports. The NBA has a salary cap, and it has worked quite nicely. The NFL teams split television revenues evenly, despite which team makes more, and for years it was next to impossible to control one's own playing destiny in major league baseball.

Those sports had to do it to survive.

Here's a proposition: How about a cap that mandates that no boxer can make more than $1,000 per second in a fight. If the bout goes the 12-round limit, the most each combatant could make would be about $4.7 million per fight.

It might put a crimp in their lifestyles, but with some sound financial advice they could still squeak by.

The sad thing is that enough people will pay $25 to watch a fight on closed-circuit TV or pay thousands of dollars for a ringside seat. As long as that is the case, it can only get worse.

But I guess that's as it should be. As long as the sporting public is that stupid, we deserve to be taken to the bank.

Manning, Smits, Smith selected as NBA's top 3

NEW YORK (AP) — The Los Angeles Clippers, the NBA's biggest losers for 12 years, put their youth movement in high gear Tuesday by capturing Danny Manning, Charles Smith and Gary Grant, three first-round draft picks.

The Clippers, after making Manning, Kansas' All-America forward, the obvious first choice, were involved in a blockbuster trade that gave them rights to Smith and Grant. Grant was an All-America point guard at Michigan, and Smith a forward at Pittsburgh.

"Christmas is definitely here," Clippers Coach Gene Shue said. "This was a fantastic day."

"We got three bonafide All-Americans," General Manager Elgin Baylor said. "They have the type of talent we want. We want to play an up-tempo game. You really can't predict how it's going to be next season."

"I can't think of any team in the history of basketball that had a better draft than we had today."

The triumph did not come cheaply. As part of the dealing, the Clippers lost their best veteran player, rebounding champion Michael Cage.

The Clippers, winners of a total of 29 games the last two years, were the only franchise not to make the playoffs for the past 12 seasons. In the 1987, they had three first-round picks, but still won only 17 games.

"I need to work on my rebounding," said the 6-foot-10 Manning, who could start on a front line with Smith and center Benoit Benjamin. "I like to play small forward. It will be nice to get away from zone defenses. I think our future is bright."

Jazz pick ex-Hawk guard Moe

By The Associated Press

Two players from the state of Iowa who each served as the emotional spark plugs for their respective teams — Jeff Moe and Jeff Grayer — were chosen Tuesday in the first two rounds of the National Basketball Association Draft.

Moe, tabbed by some as one of the best sixth men in college basketball last season at Iowa, was the 42nd player picked in the second round of the three-round draft. He goes to the Utah Jazz, where he will join former Hawk-eye player Bobby Hansen.

Grayer, Iowa State's career scoring leader, was the 13th player picked in the first round, going to the Milwaukee Bucks.

Moe, a native of Indianapolis, wasn't immediately available for comment, but Iowa Coach Tom Davis said Utah made a wise selection.

"Jeff's selection really pleases me. I'm as excited as Jeff is. It couldn't happen to a nicer guy. He's tough, competitive and hard working. I think Coach (Frank) Layden and the Utah people were aware he would have a great attitude," Davis said from Iowa City.

"He was always positive and he always did his best," said Davis. "He can come in and give you some great defense. He can score, and his ball-handling has really improved over the last two years."

"The good thing about Jeff Moe is that he is open-minded and will go where Utah wants him to go as far as offense or defense," Davis said.

Moe was known among fans as "Mr. Hustle" because of his scrappy play and for thrusting his fist in the air after an Iowa basket. He averaged 12.9 points and 2.1 rebounds per game last season.

Jimmy Connors smashes a shot back to Patrick Kuhnen during their fourth-round Wimbledon match Tuesday.

The 22-year-old Kuhnen upset 35-year-old Connors, a two-time Wimbledon champion.

2-time champion Connors ousted by unseeded foe

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Jimmy Connors, who has thrilled Wimbledon crowds with amazing comeback victories the past two years, ran out of miracles Tuesday.

The 35-year-old two-time champion hurdled a match point in the fourth set before falling to hard-hitting Patrick Kuhnen, ranked seventh in West Germany and 90th in the world.

Kuhnen, 22, moved into the quarterfinals with a 5-7, 7-6, 7-6, 6-7, 6-3 victory in a match that was halted by rain and darkness Monday at 6-6 in the third set.

It was only the third time in 17 Wimbledon that Connors failed to make the quarterfinals. It was also the first five-set loss for Connors here since 1981, when he lost to Bjorn Borg in the semifinals.

"I played perfect tennis the last three games," said Kuhnen, who won 14 of the last 15 points. "But he never gives up. He's the biggest fighter in the game."

Also advancing to the quarterfinals were two-time champion Boris Becker and 10th-seeded Tim Mayotte, the only American man left in the singles competition. Becker beat American Paul Annacone 6-3, 6-4, 6-4, while Mayotte downed No. 7 Henri Leconte of France 6-4, 7-6, 4-6, 6-2.

In women's play, old rivals Chris Evert and Martina Navratilova advanced in straight sets on a cold, wet day on which play was delayed five hours by a steady drizzle. Fifty-six matches were postponed because of the weather, but all of the important singles matches were completed.

Navratilova, seeking her seventh straight singles title and ninth overall, was trailing 4-2 Monday evening when her fourth-round match against Larisa Savchenko of the Soviet Union was suspended by rain.

Nearby towns a haven for biking

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

To many bicyclists, riding the roads of Iowa City and Johnson County means straining up hills and wrestling with traffic, but becoming familiar with routes and traffic laws can make things easier.

Bicyclists of Iowa City, BIC, in addition to forming racing and touring groups and holding time trials, organizes weekend bike trips that tour rural Johnson County. Many people take these rides, according to Gloria Marchman, publicity director for BIC, only for the maps the club provides for each ride.

BIC began 12 years ago and currently has more than 600 members, though Marchman said not all the members are active.

She said many members became interested in the club because of RAGBRAI, the annual bicycle trek across Iowa that begins July 24 in Sioux City, Iowa. "One hundred sixty people from BIC are going on RAGBRAI," she said. "It's recommended that people ride 1,000 miles before they go on RAGBRAI, and our trips are a good way to train."

Cyclists throughout the United States ride in RAGBRAI, according to Chuck Murphy, president of BIC, because it is the largest and oldest race of its type.

Murphy, who pedals about 3,500 miles each year, adds BIC is also concerned with laws affecting bicycling and bicycle safety. "Until about two years ago, a bike rider was almost considered a nuisance," he said, "and had the same rights as a pedestrian. Now a bicyclist has the same rights as someone driving a car."

Marchman said Iowa was one of the last states to recognize bicycles as legal vehicles. Because of this legal privilege she said, her club encourages students to follow traffic laws, especially within city limits.

Copies of the monthly BIC newsletter, which contains the club's ride schedule, are available at each of the four bicycle shops in Iowa City.

For beginners, here are two rural routes by nearby towns. Each is 25 miles approximately:

• Sand Road, which goes south out of Iowa City toward Hills, is a very popular, flat ride, according to Marchman. Take Sand Road to county road F62, then F62 west to Sharon Center. From Sharon Center W62 winds northeast to Highway 1, detours for one mile east on Highway 1, then continues north into Iowa City.

• The Sugarbottom Loop is a hilly but scenic ride. Prairie Du Chien Road, F8W, W70, and F28 combine for the northwest route crossing the Iowa River just south of Lake MacBride. F28 continues south-west through North Liberty and into Coralville, which becomes 12th Avenue.

Regents OK lounge restoration

By Hilary Livengood
The Daily Iowan

A time schedule and plan of steps for restoring the lounge to the UI International Center destroyed by fire three months were released Wednesday by the UI Office of Facilities Planning and Utilization.

"We now have a preliminary target schedule," said Jim Bees, manager of the Office of Facilities Planning and Utilization. "Under the present plan, the restoration is scheduled to be completed by mid-January."

The state Board of Regents given the plan preliminary approval.

"Dick Gibson (UI Director of Planning and Administrative Services) indicated to me that he has discussed it at the recent meeting," Coombes said. "Regents told us to go ahead with the job done and that they were supportive in the funding."

Restoration work on the lounge will begin next Tuesday. The area will be chemically floor sanded, the room of its odor removed and made safe for humans, Coombes said.

Next Thursday workers from UI Physical Plant will "clean up loose debris and install temporary lighting," Coombes said. "Furniture will also be replaced that day."

By the end of August, UI Physical Plant will have developed a contract for restoration, and by mid-September the contract will be issued for bid.

"We'll take bids during the week of October and award the contract in mid-October, and restoration will also begin," Coombes said.

The repair work will be extensive, we'll be starting the ground up," Coombes said. Included in the restoration are wall, floor, ceiling, window and lighting repairs.

The estimated cost of restoring the lounge to its pre-fire condition, including an improved fire alarm system — is $250,000, Coombes said. That figure will be completed in October when the UI award the contract.

The wood-trimmed lounge, a 50-year-old building, formerly housed the Law Building and since the International Center destroyed by fire on April 15, the entire southeast wing of the building also suffered extensive damage as a result of the fire, which was started by an unidentified arsonist.

"We still don't know the name of the person used to start the fire, although we do know the fire was set. We have no suspects — with either catch them within 24 hours or you don't catch them," Coombes said.
