Reagan responds to shooting

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Ronald Reagan, in a careful diplomatic venture following the U.S. downing of an Iranian jetliner, urged Iran to work with the United States to end the Persian Gulf war despite the icy distance between the two nations, it was disclosed Tuesday.

Reagan's message, sent Sunday through Swiss intermediaries, expressed "deep regret" that an American warship earlier that day had shot down the Iran Air passenger plane over the gulf with 290 people aboard.

"It was not an intentional act," Reagan said in the message, which was made available at the White House and the State Department on Tuesday.

But even while the president called the downing by the Vincennes of Iran Air Airbus A300 an accident, U.S. officials delayed a decision on paying compensation to the victims of the disaster at least until a Navy team completes an on-the-scene investigation in about two weeks.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater called the inquiry the "first order of business." A senior State Department official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said "we have not made a decision" and that neither Iran nor the families of the victims had made any claims.

A six-member Navy investigating team arrived on the warship Tuesday to sort through conflicting computer records, including a determination by another American ship in the gulf that the jetliner was flying above 12,000 feet rather than at about 7,000 feet when it was shot down.

At the Pentagon, chief spokesman Dan Howard said the Iranian airliner had been broadcasting a radio identification signal on a frequency used only by military aircraft, leading the skipper of the Vincennes to believe he faced attack.

Howard said the Iranian aircraft was broadcasting over a radio transmitter known as Identify Friend or Foe "in two modes. It was squawking on Mode-3, which is . . . a common identifier for both military and civilian aircraft, used in air traffic control."

"It was also sending signals on a military mode, Mode-2," said Howard. "And the signals that . . . the Vincennes was receiving from that aircraft, were signals that we had previously identified or associated with an F-14 jet fighter. 'No commercial airliners use Mode-2,' he said.

In other developments Tuesday: ● Iran's military commander-in-chief, Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, declared in a report on Tehran Radio: "We cannot allow ourselves to refrain from taking revenge. The choice of timing is up to us and not to America."

● A man purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad claimed the pro-Iranian faction would kill one of two American hostages it was holding, but police in Beirut said the deadline passed without incident. It was not possible to authenticate the call.

● Peggy Say, sister of hostage Terry Anderson, said she had been told that he might be released over the Fourth of July weekend, but those hopes were dashed by Sunday's attack in the Persian Gulf.

● An Airbus spokesman said the downed jetliner had been delivered to Iran Air six years ago with two transponders that should have responded to identification requests from the Vincennes.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said his panel will be briefed on the incident Wednesday afternoon by the Defense Department.

Judgment should be reserved, Nunn said, until answers have been provided for such questions as: "What intelligence did we have regarding any threats? What were the rules of engagement and the command decision-making chain for this situation? What are the technical capabilities of the Aegis system? How have we previously handled commercial airline traffic in this region?"

Lawyers at the Defense and State departments were researching U.S. statutes before making their

UI students, citizens respond to jet attack

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

A sign stuck on the brick front of a UI building reads, "One dead white equals terrorism, 290 dead Iranians equals 'accident.'" Another asks, "Was it really an accident?"

The signs mirror the bitterness some Americans and Iranians in the area are feeling about the U.S. shooting of an Iranian passenger jet Sunday.

"It's not acceptable with this advanced technology that they made this kind of mistake," UI graduate student Abdul Najafi said. "I agree with the Iranian ambassador to the United Nations — and an apology is not enough."

The Aegis cruiser, the USS Vincennes, fired two missiles Sunday, downing Iran Air Flight 655 on the Persian Gulf and killing all 290 passengers. Government officials said the Navy fired because it thought it was under attack.

President Ronald Reagan said although he regretted the incident, he would wait until after a U.S. investigation of the shooting to decide whether to compensate the victims' families.

But an Iranian UI graduate student, who wishes to remain anonymous, said he thinks the U.S. government should take immediate responsibility for the incident.

"They are to apologize to the Iranian people, do as much as they can for the families of the victims and withdraw forces from the Persian Gulf," he said.

"I cannot say if this was intentional or not," he said, "but if it was, the U.S. deserves to be punished."

Although Reagan said he has no plans to advocate the withdrawal of U.S. military ships from the Persian Gulf, most agreed the shooting should prompt the United States to pull out its military forces.

"I'm angry with the policy of American forces being in the Persian Gulf," Jahangir Sadeghi, an ophthalmologist in Muscatine, Iowa, said. "It may have some

Edwin Meese

Meese to resign from post

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese on Tuesday announced that he will resign this summer, even though he said a 14-month investigation into his personal ethics "fully vindicates me."

"This decision is something I made totally on my own, and I was not pressured by anybody," he told reporters here. He said he submitted his resignation to President Ronald Reagan early Tuesday afternoon by telephone.

Meese said he expected to leave office at the end of this month or early in August and that no successor had been designated. One of Reagan's closest confidants — an aide who served Reagan in California and then as a key member of his White House staff — Meese has had a stormy tenure at the Justice Department since arriving in March 1985.

Meese took the step after independent counsel James McKay filed his report on the investigation into Meese's conduct in office. The 830-page report, filed with a federal court, was not made public. The report concluded there was no basis for filing a criminal indictment.

Meese said he had remained in his post until now because he refused "to allow myself to be hounded out of office by false accusations."

The McKay report details Meese's ties to the scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp., an Iraqi pipeline project and two other enterprises. Questions of improper conduct will be referred to a Justice Department ethics unit, which itself could take months to review the case.

Meese said "false allegations have been put to rest" by the McKay report, but conceded he had not seen it and did not know precisely what was in it.

Nonetheless, in a news conference here where Meese had been working on an anti-drug program, the attorney general said "with the burden of false allegations now lifted" he would look ahead to return to private life.

Meese is a longtime confidant of the president who served during Reagan's first term as White House counselor. He succeeded William French Smith as attorney general after surviving contentious confirmation proceedings.

His tenure at Justice was marked by more controversy. Aside from the McKay probe, he spearheaded two failed Supreme Court nominations and just recently the Justice Department has been criticized for failing to follow up early indications of the Defense procurement scandal.

Soviet marchers compare culture with local hosts

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Tatiana Gnativk and Oleg Nefedkin did something very unusual for them during their stay in Iowa City on the Fourth of July.

They tasted marshmallows for the first time ever.

Gnativk, 24, of Kiev, which is in the Ukraine, and her friend, Nefedkin, 32, also of Kiev, had the opportunity to toast marshmallows as they celebrated the Fourth of July at a traditional Midwestern barbecue in Iowa City.

Both are peace marchers in the American-Soviet Walk, which stopped in Iowa City over the weekend on its way across the United States.

They were joined by fellow marcher Tom Gabrielson of Durango, Colo., for an overnight Fourth of July stay at the home of Kathleen Renquist, 1000 Tower Court. While at the home, they spoke with a group of Americans about the similarities and differences between the American and Soviet cultures.

Gnativk compared the Fourth of July celebration to the Soviet equivalent — the anniversary of the October Revolution, which brought the Communists to power in Russia.

"Our holiday is celebrated on Nov. 7 due to a shift in days after the Revolution took place," Gnativk explained. "The way in which we celebrate this holiday is very much the same as how Americans celebrate the Fourth of July. Many people walk in large parades holding banners, and in the evening there are family gatherings where large meals of salads, entrees such as chicken Kiev and desserts are served."

"And, of course, there are fireworks," she said, adding that the fireworks shows are held in the capital cities of the Union Republic, which are tagged as "hero cities" due to the suffering their people experienced during World War II.

A strong believer in promoting peace and understanding between the Soviet Union and the United States, Gnativk said there were more similarities between the two countries than differences.

"The similarities have struck me the most," she said. "People from both cultures want to lead happy, fulfilling lives. Everyone wants to enjoy life and establish a sense of security for themselves and their children."

Since 1982, Gnativk has been meeting with American students in the Soviet Union. With the help of several of her friends, she has organized a friendship society and has been meeting young American travelers through Intourist, a Soviet travel bureau.

Intourist organizes trips and lecture series for young foreigners. Gnativk and her friends work as interpreters for the bureau.

"My friends and I enjoy our informal time together with the Americans the most," she said. "It is hard to talk lightly in lecture halls. We end up having enough of showing each other what is wrong with our countries — it's more fun to go into the streets and see the cities together."

Gnativk's job as a professor of English at the University of Kiev takes up more time than her part-time interpreting. She has been teaching English to students for the past two years and designs many of her own teaching methods.

The majority of the class period is spent studying from a textbook,

Congress, colleges aim at lower default rates

By Paul Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The U.S. Congress is currently discussing various proposals to help institutions of higher education decrease their student loan default rates, but according to a UI financial aid official, the responsibility for such defaults may be misplaced.

Susan Palmer, UI financial aid Guaranteed Student Loan manager, said since lending institutions determine eligibility requirements for student loans at the UI, those institutions should shoulder more of the responsibility for decreasing GSL default rates.

The UI Financial Aid Office is required to arrange exit interviews with student borrowers to remind them of their commitment and answer any questions, she said, adding that it is difficult for her small staff to contact and speak with all student borrowers.

"They want us to do more exit counseling, explaining to students how the repayment system works," Palmer said. "We mailed information to 2,000 (student borrowers) in the spring, and only about 50 showed up at sessions to discuss the program."

"Where I think the counseling should come from is the lender," she added. "The lender is the one making money from the loan."

But according to Lori Detweiler, a loan officer at First National Bank, 204 E. Washington St., Iowa banks enforce — but do not create — eligibility requirements set by the Iowa Department of Education.

The bank will provide counseling for students who request it, she added.

"We do exit counseling if the students come in here and ask for the counseling," Detweiler said. "Some students obviously aren't interested, but that doesn't necessarily mean they won't pay, either."

"The problem is we don't always find out when a student is not in school," she said. "It's such a big system."

Detweiler said trying to contact defaulters is time consuming, but most Iowa lenders do not consider defaults a major problem.

But the federal government apparently does.

Palmer said there has been an onslaught of different plans introduced in the last few years to combat rising student loan default rates across the country.

Under a plan currently debated in the U.S. House of Representatives, colleges and for-profit trade schools would be required to take steps to lower the default rates of students enrolled at their institutions. But even if such institutions failed to reduce the default rates, those institutions would not be penalized if they made some effort to reduce them.

If this proposal is adopted, it would supersede a stricter plan proposed last year by U.S. Education Secretary William Bennett.

Bennett's plan would require colleges with default rates of more than 20 percent to reduce default rates within two years or risk losing all of their federal student aid.

But Palmer said measuring defaults in percentages can be misleading.

"There may only be two loans out at a college," she said. "If one of those borrowers defaults, the default rate is 50 percent."

The default rate at the UI is 5 percent, Palmer said.

"If you look at it, 95 percent of our students pay back their Guaranteed Student Loans," she said. "Any banker I know would be happy if he could say that about

UI will add 1,830 parking spaces, plans other construction projects

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

The building of parking facilities is among the nearly 50 construction projects to be completed at the UI within the next two years.

A total of 1,830 parking spaces will be gained by the lots and ramps, although "most of the spaces will merely be replacement parking," David Ricketts, UI director of parking and transportation, said.

"The stadium ramp and the Finkbine commuter ramp are the only new facilities. The other two are simply replacements for other lots that we lost to new construction projects," Ricketts said.

"There's a heck of a lot of parking construction going on now. The growth in parking demand has gone through the roof in the last few years," Ricketts said.

Although the amount of parking construction is now greater than usual, overall construction on campus has not significantly increased this year.

"I don't know that we're too far from the normal number of construction projects, although there does seem to be a lot of them going on now," said Richard Gibson, UI director of planning and administrative services.

The decrease in student population during the summer session also has not affected the number of construction and repair work projects currently under way.

"We just have three months in the summer, and there aren't many major projects you can accomplish in just 90 days, although we do most of the work in the classrooms over the two breaks and during the summer," said Allen Stroh, UI administrative assistant for the UI office of facilities planning and utilization.

"Some projects mess people up whenever we do it. It's more important to us to get things built so that we can use them," Stroh said.

Iowa City Construction Projects

- Human Biology Research Facility construction: A $26 million facility, west of Bowen Science Building, to house research activities for the College of Medicine with a completion date in July.
- Stadium Parking Ramp construction: A $6.8 million ramp, to house 550 automobiles and hospital records, September completion date.
- Field House addition: A $5.6 million project to house recreation facilities including six basketball courts and a 100-space elevated parking ramp, spring 1989 completion date.
- Renown Hall repair: Replacement of windows and water pipes, with an estimated cost of $720,000 and a summer 1989 completion date.
- Engineering Research Facility construction: Laboratories for engineering research, with a $2.2 million estimated cost and a January 1990 completion date.
- Main Library repair: A new $460,000 chiller and cooling tower project with a fall 1988 completion date.
- Chemistry-Botany Building remodeling: A fire and environmental safety project with an estimated cost of $8.5 million, to be completed end of summer 1989.
- Laser Laboratory construction: A $25.1 million project, with construction to begin this fall.
- Chilled Water and Parking Facility: A $9.8 million project, with construction to begin in September.
- President's residence remodeling: A $298,000 project, will include roof replacement, exterior repairs, painting and new carpeting.
- Finkbine Commuter Parking Facility construction: A $6.6 million project, will house 800 parking spaces, to be completed by September.

Courts

By James Cahoy
The Daily Iowan

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for July 22.

An Iowa City man was charged Tuesday in Johnson County District Court with public intoxication and assault causing injury after an incident which occurred Saturday night in front of Joe's Place, 100 Iowa Ave., according to Johnson County District Court records.

Gerald Donald White, 26, 440 S. Johnson St., allegedly admitted to striking the victim in the face. The subject's nose was bleeding and there was obvious swelling on the left side of his nose, according to court records.

White allegedly ran into Dooley's, 10 S. Clinton St., after the incident. He was identified by the victim and two other witnesses. When police spoke with White, his eyes were bloodshot, his speech was slurred and his balance was unstable, according to court records.

A West Des Moines man was charged with criminal mischief Tuesday after allegedly throwing personal items belonging to an Iowa City resident into a lake, according to court records.

Dennis Lee Carlson, 47, allegedly was alone in the victim's apartment Saturday, located on Woodside Drive. When the victim returned home, Carlson allegedly told her, "By the way, it's all in the lake," according to court records.

The victim called the police and found that Carlson had thrown all of her clothing and personal items from the apartment into the lake behind the apartment building. The victim's estimate of value of the items was about $3,000, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing in the case is set for July 19.

An Iowa City man was charged with criminal mischief after he allegedly caused damage with his car to three trees in Scott Park in Iowa City, according to court records.

Mark Andrew Fay, 19, 102 Schrader Road, allegedly ran over three trees with a car in Scott Park sometime last week, causing an estimated $900 worth of damage, according to court records.

Police investigating the incident were able to match the license plate and the tire prints of the car Fay was driving. In addition, branches and leaves from the damaged trees were found wedged underneath the car, which Fay borrowed, according to court records.

A preliminary hearing is set for July 19.

Police

A rental car was reported stolen from an Iowa City rental agency after a customer allegedly failed to return it three days after it was due, according to police reports.

The incident was reported by Bill's Rentals, 105 E. Burlington St. The car was rented by an Ottumwa man who allegedly gave false telephone numbers, according to police reports.

The man reported Tuesday that the rental car was stolen from him. He told police he had contacted Bill's Rentals and an employee said the establishment had already reported the car stolen Friday, according to reports.

The man told police he had rented the car in the name of a friend who knew nothing about his action, but that he had used his own credit card to rent it. He also said that he had a verbal agreement with Bill's Rentals to have the car longer, according to reports.

The Ottumwa man told police that a girl had the car and that she had moved. He said he did not know where the car was, since it was not where he had last seen it. He also said he was at a party Monday night and that someone could have taken it then, according to reports.

The man was advised by police that he must locate the girl who last had the car or he may be charged with fraud and/or auto theft, according to reports.

The car, a gray, four-door 1986 Honda Civic, was reportedly due back at Bill's Rentals on June 28, according to reports.

Report: Iowa City Police responded to about 45 calls reporting the use of fireworks Monday, according to police reports.

Charges were not made in most incidents, but fireworks were confiscated in many cases. One written warning and two verbal warnings were issued, according to reports.

In one incident near a UI fraternity house, two men, Erik Waterkotte, 724 N. Dubuque St., and Kent Meyer, 203 Woodside Drive, were charged with possession of fireworks, according to the report.

Report: Two 18-year-old Iowa City men were arrested when police responded to a call that people were on the fire escape of a residence on South Summit Street, according to police reports.

Brian Aaron Randall, 18, 3328 Shamrock Drive, was charged with drinking under the legal age. Christopher Alan Roberts, 18, 28 Amber Lane, was charged with possession of alcohol under the legal age, according to the report.

A bold stroke

The push to reform the nation's languishing public schools took a step forward Monday when the National Education Association, the nation's largest teachers union, endorsed a proposal that each state name one school district a "learning laboratory."

The measure, passed by overwhelming voice vote at the union's annual convention in New Orleans, would put one school district per state entirely in the hands of educators, freeing them to try virtually anything — from new methods of financing to experimental teaching techniques — on behalf of reform.

As a cooperative venture between parents, teachers and government, educational reform has too long suffered from the kind of bickering and suspicion that chokes just this sort of progressive thinking. While nearly all interested parties agree that the public schools are in a sorry state, more energy has been spent doling out blame (incompetent teachers, biased parents, government in general) than in effecting concrete solutions.

But counterproductive as it is, this bickering underscores the truth of the situation — there is so much wrong with our schools that no single entity is responsible, no single solution adequate. Real solutions will ultimately come at the local level, and teachers are the logical choice to lead the charge.

The NEA proposal is a bold stroke on behalf of reform, and a challenge to states and school boards to join teachers in a great experiment. If adopted, it will create a nationwide network of schools where the best ideas of educators are tested, and put reform back where it belongs: in the classroom, where students can profit by it.

Decisions needed

The much-feared greenhouse effect may already be here. Scientists have been warning us for several years that burning fossil fuels such as coal, oil and natural gas releases carbon dioxide into the atmosphere which then prevents the sun's heat from escaping back into space. This trapping of heat is referred to as the greenhouse effect, which, in a worst-case scenario, will be responsible for drastically altering the Earth's climate and wreaking global havoc.

James Hansen, a NASA scientist, recently told a congressional committee that he believes the recent global warming trend is not a natural variation, but is in fact related to the greenhouse effect. If Hansen is right, we're in for some tough times ahead.

Dealing with the greenhouse effect will require cooperation on an unprecedented global scale. Global leaders will have to provide courageous, effective leadership. Emerging nations will have to be persuaded that they should make expensive sacrifices to deal with a problem that the affluent nations created. Many difficult choices with no pleasant alternatives will need to be faced. Among the difficult choices facing our leaders and ourselves will be whether to rely more heavily on nuclear power. New sources of energy, such as solar, geothermal and wind, will need to be developed. Alterations in our lifestyles and decreases in our standards of living may be necessary. All of these choices will be unpleasant, unpopular and expensive, but may be the only way to prevent global suicide.

It is not the purpose here to recommend specific proposals or solutions. Rather, this is an effort to sound a warning bell that a crisis is developing which will not conveniently disappear. If drastic measures are not taken to deal effectively with the greenhouse effect, global catastrophe may be the only alternative.

The real solution

The Soviet-American Peace March which came into Iowa City over the weekend brought the most important factor in nuclear build-up much closer to home — people.

Approximately 220 Soviets and 130 Americans came through Iowa City. They were walking for peace, trying to show the importance of nuclear disarmament and cultural understanding. As people from Iowa City walked with and met the Soviets under the bright Iowa sun, a sense of unity flowed through the air.

But as the sky turned a darker blue and the sun sank into hues of red and orange, a different warmth filled the atmosphere. For an evening or two, the "big" questions were put aside as Soviets and Americans learned to understand each other — one at a time.

Questions floated into laughter as "obscene" words were exchanged. Gifts of buttons, stickers, coins and cigarettes were given. Guitars and voices rang out together to "Back in the USSR," "Yellow Submarine" and "Yesterday." Ears and eyes watched intently as they heard beautiful, haunting Soviet melodies late, late into the night.

The Soviet-American Peace March is not the first walk for peace. Nor is it the last, as several others are being planned. But rather than being redundant, each march is unique and necessary. America has draped many faces and voices over the countries labeled "Soviet Bloc." But for the most part, these are not the faces and voices of the Soviet people. And because it is the American and Soviet people who will become victims of nuclear war, they should be the ones who are talking — and listening.

And underneath all the smiles and music this past weekend, louder than anything else, could be heard, "dru-jya-ba" and "mir," meaning "friendship" and "peace."

Phil Morris is a deadly friend

When you're down in the dumps, it's good to have a buddy, someone who understands and is supportive. And I'm lucky. I have such a pal.

There I was this morning, sitting at my desk and feeling miserable about an old problem. My wife was furious because I've been sneaking puffs on cigarettes. Some of my friends were mad at me for the same reason. And I was disgusted with myself for not having enough will power to quit once and for all.

Then as I morosely flipped through the newspaper, I found my buddy — someone who wasn't mad at me, someone who understands and even supports my nicotine habit.

My pal's name is Phil. More formally, Philip. As in Philip Morris Corporation — the giant international conglomerate.

One of the things Phil does is make cigarettes. Phil makes Marlboro for the virile smoker, Benson and Hedges for the more dapper sort, Virginia Slims for the modern woman, and other brands.

And how did my pal Phil buck up my spirits? With a new ad campaign. You may have seen it. There was a full-page spread in various newspapers. It said:

"America's 55.8 million smokers are a powerful economic force. If their household income of $1 trillion were a gross national product, it would be the third largest in the world. The plain truth is that smokers are one of the most economically powerful groups in America. They help fuel the engine of the largest economy on the globe.

Mike Royko

"The American smoker — an economic force."

Well, I felt good I was part of a vast economic force, although my share of that $1 trillion is modest.

And it was obvious why Philip Morris took out this ad. To let all the non-smokers know just what sort of economic powerhouse they're dealing with.

As a spokesman for Philip Morris Magazine, which placed the ad, explained:

"The reason for the ad campaign is that we feel the economic strength of smokers has been overlooked and underrated for far too long.

"We're trying to say that businesses and municipalities should think about what they're doing before they discriminate against a large segment of their employees, customers and voters."

So take that — all you hotels, restaurants, employers and politicians who have been imposing new no-smoking and limited-smoking laws. You'd better think twice before you discriminate against us. We just might put you into bankruptcy.

I felt so good about having a buddy like Phil that I showed the ad to my friend Slat Grobnik, a reformed smoker.

See? I said. Somebody is on my side.

Slat sneered and said, "You think that when you croak from smoking Phil Morris will send flowers to your funeral?"

"Some people are always negative. Must be in the genes. So I took a different approach, pointing out that Philip Morris was letting the non-smokers know that we are a force to be reckoned with and that they shouldn't discriminate against us."

"Big deal," Slat said. "Dope peddlers are an economic force. Should we hold a parade for them? So are unfaithful spouses, pimps and hookers. A lot of motels would fold without 'em. And what about boozers?"

What about boozers?

"Go in any bar after work and look at the people pouring them down. At five o'clock, all over America, the hooch is flowing. The booze industry could figure out that boozers represent a big part of the economy and take out an ad just like Philip Morris did."

"The ad could say: 'Boozers — an economic force.' And they would send a warning to politicians who pass tough drunk driving laws or laws that say what time saloons have to close and to employers who don't want their workers getting loaded or coming in hung over. But they don't do it. You know why?"

Why?
"Because it would sound stupid,

like the Philip Morris ad."

That's no way to talk about my new pal Phil.

"Some pal. If they're going to tell about what an economic force smokers are, why didn't they get into some specifics?"

Such as?
"How much extra business you provide for doctors when you mess up your ticker or your lungs turn to canvas. And for fire departments, when you fall asleep and burn the house down. Or how much business they generate for oxygen tanks. Speaking of oxygen, you remember the Marlboro Man?"

Who doesn't? A rugged cowboy, up on a horse, smoking a cigarette. He was on every billboard in America.

"Yeah, he was selling Phil's cigarettes. And you remember what he died of?"

Slips my mind.

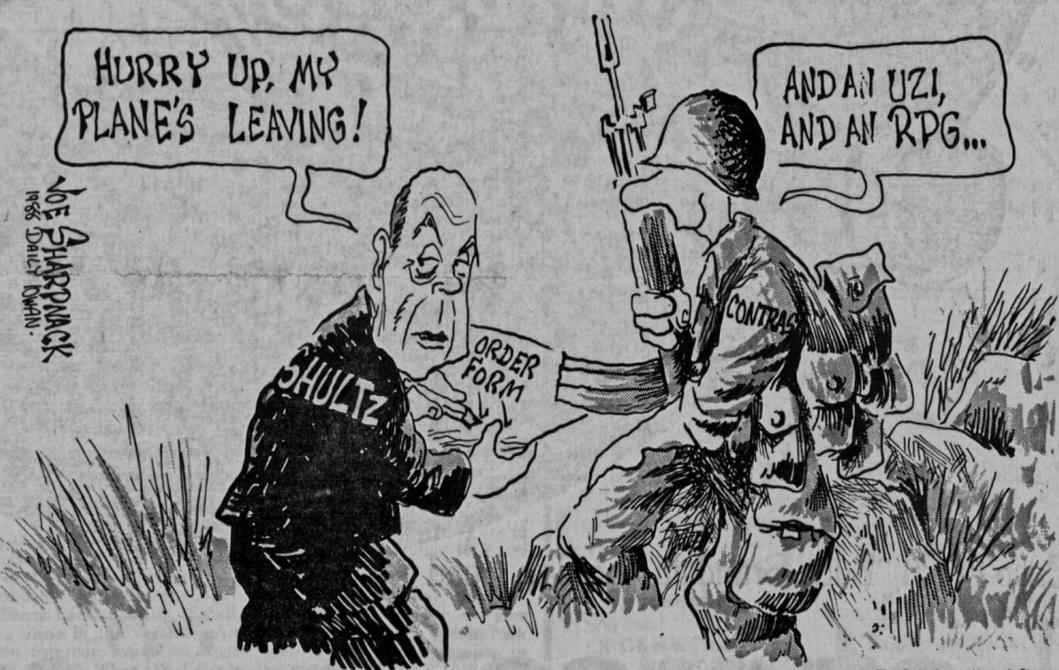

"Why don't you ask his widow? And ask her what she thinks of your pal Phil's ad."

It wasn't a bad idea. So we called her. And the Marlboro Man's widow said: "Emphysema killed him, and it was brought about by smoking. And it's reprehensible to encourage people to poison themselves."

Phil, on second thought I really don't think you're my pal after all. And I think you are not sincere.

Tell me the truth. You won't send flowers to my funeral, will you?

Letters

The other side

To the Editor:

The editorial "Setting the record straight concerning IRA terrorists" (The Daily Iowan, June 16) has not set any record straight. My guess is that Colin Adair sincerely believes his views are correct. I would further suggest that, as a native of Belfast, he has formed those views from the more comfortable side of the double standard which prevails in that area — much as we Americans are taught things like "I remember the Alamo" and Custer's last stand from a viewpoint that no Mexican or Native American would recognize as factual.

Irish history did not begin yesterday, and through 800 years of British rule majorities carried just as much weight as they do currently in South Africa. The six counties, or two-thirds of Ulster, currently called Northern Ireland did not exist as a separate unit prior to 1920. It came into existence contrary to the will of the majority, and this system was proposed as a temporary measure during the Irish War for Independence. It was only after it was carved out of Ireland and bolstered into place with gerrymandering and voting restrictions — such as property ownership — that majority rule became the sacred pretext for continuing partition.

Since the newly created minority fared badly in the new little statelet, a civil rights movement began in the 1960s. The unarmed civil rights demonstrators were attacked and beaten by the Royal Ulster Constabulary, and when the movement persisted British troops opened fire on them, killing 14 and wounding 29 in January 1972. British troops continue to kill civilians and unarmed IRA members, but this generally receives little publicity and these acts are not branded as terrorist. One writer in the DI (also in a guest editorial) has suggested that the "permanent removal" of some unarmed people without trial is now all right (permissible? expedient? moral?) as long as the proper government has defined them as terrorists. But to my knowledge, no one has suggested that the IRA members in Gibraltar were anything but gunned down. This causes me some confusion. Since the SAS is acknowledged to "shoot first and ask questions later," and Britain will not publicly concede that it is at war with the IRA, and if the IRA are terrorists, what then are the SAS?

To suggest that there is no evidence for the tortures at Long Kesh is absurd. I have no idea who is currently imprisoned at Long Kesh — the prisons, internment camps and interrogation centers change constantly, but evidence for the tortures which occurred after the policy of internment went into effect has been offered by, among others, the Committee for Justice in Northern Ireland. This is a non-sectarian group which gathered information by name, date and specific form of torture and presented its material to members of the U.S. Congress in 1972, Amnesty International and the European Commission on Human Rights. The latter found Britain guilty of violating Article Three of the European Human Rights Convention which states, "No one shall be subjected to torture or to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment." The commission did vacillate somewhat on the use of the terms "torture" and "ill treatment." I am willing to avoid quibbling on the terminology, as I believe one's definition of torture may well vary depending upon which side of the military baton one's genitals are located.

Amnesty International was also involved in the demand for an inquiry into the methods of interrogation used by those subject to the Diplock Court system. This led to the Bennett Report, which did concede injuries to prisoners which "were not self-inflicted and which were sustained in police custody." I have neither the space nor the legal finesse to wend my way through the ins and outs of the Diplock Courts, but I think it is fair to say that a 94 percent conviction rate, with confessions often based on such as the above, abolition of bail, and trial by jury, is not a step forward in the cause of human rights.

Adair is correct that the IRA has been around for some time — since 1919 in one form or another, always with the goal of a reunited Ireland, free of British rule. Though membership had dwindled by the early '60s, it increased in response to the brutal treatment of civil rights marchers, loyalist rampages, the policy of internment and use of the Special Powers Act. Another fact often overlooked is that the IRA plays a protective role to the ghettoized minority, surrounded by hostility and denied police protection. Perhaps if Adair had grown up in the Bogside of Derry he would have a better understanding of the designation, the People's Army.

It is also correct that Bobby Sands and his fellow hunger strikers can be said to have made a choice — not an easy one, nor one likely to be undertaken by those who are allowed valid political outlets — but still a choice. They asked that their cause be recognized as political and hoped to arouse consciences. Sands himself, for those who may not know, had been burned out of his home at the age of 15, sentenced to 14 years imprisonment for owning an illegal gun and was elected to Parliament by those whom Prime Minister Thatcher regards as British subjects. If Adair chooses to see allowing 10 young men to die slowly and painfully, rather than attempting a solution to the problems of Ireland, as the noble act of a righteous government, I cannot argue I can only sadly disagree.

Supervisors review dispute over driveway construction

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday advised two Swisher, Iowa, property owners to present the county engineer with surveys of their properties as the next step toward a possible driveway construction between their two adjacent properties.

"We need to have these two property owners (Walter Plotz and Jim McGinnes) show us where the property line is, then the county can make a decision," said County Engineer Glen Meisner.

This recommendation is the latest step in what Johnson County Board of Supervisors Chairman Don Sehr calls "a genuine neighborhood feud that I don't feel the county should be involved with."

McGinnes is seeking to build a driveway connecting his property to a nearby county road. However, Plotz believes that he owns part of the land where McGinnes want to put the driveway.

The status of that parcel of land is now questionable, Meisner said. It is part of a section which Plotz gave to the county for a public highway easement in 1980. Since the road's construction did not consume the entire section contributed by Plotz, it is undecided whether the county or Plotz now owns the land.

"Rather than deciding where the property line is, we need to determine who owns the strip of land left when the road was moved," Chairman Dick Myers said. "If you move a road and it creates a no man's land, then the county still owns it."

Surveys of the properties are needed before any other action can be taken, Myers said.

"We have to have some legal basis to make a decision," he said. "I don't see how we can make a decision until we have the current information."

Due to the costs involved for county officials to survey the land, the board recommended that Plotz and McGinnes each present a survey to Meisner. For county officials to perform that task, "you're looking at $2,000 to $3,000 easily to survey this land," Meisner said.

However, the Board of Supervisors may not be able to solve this problem for the two property owners.

"I don't know how we can make a decision at all. I think it's going to end up in court," Sehr said. "We're dealing with a lot of variables here. It will be difficult to decide just where the line's going to be."

UI summer program teaches readers to gain confidence

By Laurie Black
Special to The Daily Iowan

For 27 children with reading, hearing or speech problems, the UI Summer Residential Program is an opportunity to learn communication skills and gain confidence in their abilities.

The UI Summer Residential Program was founded 42 years ago and is now directed by UI Clinical Psychologist Robert Schum.

The participants in the summer program are children who are "getting yanked out of the classroom for extra help and being singled out by their peers," Schum said.

According to Schum, the children have been constantly told they are not dumb, but they have a hard time believing it.

The children, between the ages of 7 and 13, have been referred to the program by their parents, schools or UI Hospitals and Clinics' Child Development Clinic.

Schum said the reading clinic's motivating motto is "I can do it, and you can do it too."

"We're attempting to turn kids on to reading and make it fun," Schum said.

During the six-week program, the children residing in South Quadrangle Residence Hall are supervised by a staff of trained childcare workers and counselors.

Schum said the counselors work with the children, teaching them valuable lessons in "little doses." He cited the example of basketball, in which "the children learn that by cooperating you score more points."

The program also attempts to help the students improve their overall self-esteem with activities outside the instruction time.

"We teach them that, socially, they can add to a group and be competitive and keep up with the others," Schum said.

Swimming, picnicking, roller-skating and fishing are a few of the activities in which the kids participate.

"It's just like a camp for the kids," Schum said. "We basically have six weeks to help these kids become better communicators."

Schum noted an Iowa City youth who attended the program during his fourth-grade summer and asked his school principal to hold him back in sixth grade so he could "go to the clinic and get better before he went on."

UI Associate Professor of Educational Psychology Cathy Roller heads the reading division, which provides four to five hours of instruction each day for the children who are one-half year to three years behind their grade's normal reading level.

Roller said an important step for the children is getting them to choose books for themselves which they can read and are on their appropriate reading levels.

Roller said the children are learning to read in a very natural way.

"We are teaching them to read like you teach a child to speak," Roller said.

Absent from this clinic are the school readers and workbooks associated with learning how to read. Roller said the children get to choose which books they read, enhancing the positive feelings they get from reading.

"Children aren't going to read if it is too hard a task," Roller said. "We want this to be fun and easy for them."

The clinic not only provides a service to young people who need help, but also trains UI students who are interested in learning the newest teaching methods and innovations for reading instruction.

Approximately 30 students, ranging from undergraduates to veteran teachers, are enrolled in the class. Each day the students attend class, tutor a child and work with the child's class.

Chris Elliot, a UI elementary education major, said the class is demanding but believes she is getting a lot out of the program.

Elliot said the program allows her to "listen to the experienced teachers and get advice from them as well as from our instruction in class."

Pier plank knocks out police chief

ARNOLDS PARK, Iowa (AP)—A plank from a collapsing pier knocked out the police chief of Arnolds Park in a holiday weekend incident one officer described as a case of "too many people and too much beer in too small of an area."

Police Chief Wayne Fitchett was hit in the head at the Arnolds Park beach Monday as law officers tried to remove a crowd from the dock.

Mayor Roy Sams said the crowd on the 60-foot wooden dock, built in May, was not unusually unruly.

"There was no riot or anything of that type," the mayor said.

The middle section of the dock began bowing Sunday and gave way Monday afternoon, officer Bryce Denker said. Sams said there was no estimate on how many people were on the dock when it started to come apart.

"We just had more people on it than it would hold," Sams said. "There wasn't anything serious about it. We just had a good crowd is all."

When Fitchett arrived at the dock, a bystander jumped into the water, sending a loose 12-foot plank flying, Denker said. The wooden plank hit Fitchett in the face, Denker said.

"It knocked him cold," Denker said. Fitchett was treated at a local hospital and released.

"It was simply a matter of too many people and too much beer in too small of an area," Denker said.

The crowd on the dock Monday would not go quietly, the officer said. He said many of the partygoers moved onto adjacent Highway 71.

Officers were called in from the State Patrol, the Dickinson County Sheriff's Department, the Okoboji and Spirit Lake police departments and the Department of Natural Resource's Water Patrol, Denker said.

The officer said a no-drinking policy at nearby Terrace Park Beach may have caused drinkers to converge on Arnolds Park beach.

Denker said some in the crowd of young people tried to help officers. Two bystanders reached for Fitchett when he was hit in the head and grabbed him before he fell into the water, Denker said. Another young man dove into the water to retrieve the police chief's eyeglasses, he said.

Soviets

but Gnativk also plays American music for her students and coaches them along until they learn the lyrics. She said Beatles songs have become a favorite in her classroom.

And now that the Soviet government has knocked down another barrier in the area of communication, Gnativk is permitted to show American newsreels in class as well.

Gabrielson, who had participated in a peace march in the Soviet Union in the summer of 1987, said many barriers are being broken down in the country.

"I was surprised by the amount of freedom we had (in the Soviet Union)," Gabrielson said. "Initially, I thought there would be police lining the streets in order to restrict our interaction with other Soviets who might be dissidents, but there weren't any."

"I was even allowed to stay in Soviet homes when people invited me in at the last minute," Gabrielson added. "Here in the United States the host families are screened, and in the Soviet Union I stayed with families whenever the opportunity arose."

According to Gabrielson, one of his overnight stays in the Soviet Union was with Nefedkin, the other Soviet who was celebrating the Fourth of July with the group.

Nefedkin, who had been sleeping through most of Gnativk and Gabrielson's conversation, woke up just in time for dinner and made a strong effort to communicate with all the new faces he saw.

Default

his portfolio." The national student loan default problem has been blown out of proportion, Palmer added.

"The loan default problem occurs in pockets of the U.S., but as far as default as a national problem, it's not as big a deal as they're making it," she said.

According to Iowa College Aid Commission Executive Director Gary Nichols, about 10 percent of students who take out GSL's in Iowa will default. The commission puts out biannual reports on student loan default rates in Iowa, he added.

"The colleges (in Iowa) with default problems are already dealing with the problem at the state level, so they'll be years ahead of any plan that is adopted (to decrease default rates)," he said.

Most students default because they don't have the resources, he said. But even those students considered "high risk" should be able to take out loans so that higher education remains accessible, he added.

According to Palmer, one- and two-year colleges are most likely to have the highest percentage of students defaulting on their loans.

Some students default because they don't understand their loan agreement. For example, many students will move out of the state and forget to give the lender a forwarding address, she said.

"I think what's happening now is students are really getting in over their heads, taking out too big of loans," she added.

The UI Summer Rep's 1988 festival of Joe Orton comedies gets into full swing tonight at 8 with the premiere of "Entertaining Mr. Sloane."

"It's a great play," said UI drama student Brad Schnurr, who plays Mr. Sloane in tonight's production. "A great play in the sense that it tends to take the audience's expectations and turn them around on themselves. They'll leave agreeing they've seen a different play than they expected."

"Entertaining Mr. Sloane" was Orton's first successful full-length play, written shortly after his release from a jail sentence served for defacing library books. The play concerns a young man, Sloane, who has murder in his past when he takes a room at the boarding house where the landlady, Kath, and her homosexual brother, Ed, have designs upon him that are decidedly ambiguous. In addition is Kath's crusty old father, the only witness to the murder in Sloane's past.

These sordid and arresting characters form the crux of a play Iowa City audiences will doubtless find more complex — and perhaps more rewarding — than the earlier summer season productions "Loot" and "What the Butler Saw." Allison Pace, who plays Kath, hopes it's a difference audiences will appreciate.

"Butler" and "Loot" are done in a broad farce," she said. "Sloane" is very naturalistic and easier to misinterpret. If you take the play too seriously, it can be very depressing, but laughs are encouraged."

Director Eric Forsythe called "Sloane" "a touching play, a brutally funny play, in which we laugh at people and at the same time, I think we feel sorry that we're laughing."

"Sloane" opened in 1964 and stunned many English critics, some negatively. The play contains material as likely to offend some audience members tonight as it did 20 years ago, but the coarseness is part of Orton's rough-cut genuine voice. Schnurr commented wryly on this dark tone to the "Sloane."

"The style is certainly a challenge in the fact that it deals with a young bisexual man who's also a murderer — not a lot of method work you can do on that sort of thing."

Forsythe said Orton's characters in "Sloane" have a sad, sympathetic side which will present the audience with a mixed bag of emotional responses. "It's a roller coaster," he said. "It's the most mixed (of Orton's plays) in terms of tone. There is a kind of pathetic, sad aspect to some of the characters, and then there's this silly, racy quality on top of it. It's funny and sad at the same time."

Schnurr agreed that the darkly farcical nature of Orton's work would probably be disturbing to audiences. "It certainly makes you think," he said. "And I'm not sure if being disturbed is such a bad thing."

"Entertaining Mr. Sloane" will also be showing at 8 p.m. on July 7, 13, 16 and 22 in E.C. Mabie Theatre. Tickets are $8 for the general public and $6 for UI students, senior citizens and people 18 and under.

Winwood makes 'happy' LP

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Nearly 25 years after he hit the British pop music scene as a teen-age vocalist, Steve Winwood is recapturing the popularity of his youth with the help of Nashville and Memphis session men.

The Grammy award-winning artist's new album and hit single of the same name, "Roll With It," hark back to his days in the mid-1960s with the rhythm-and-blues-styled Spencer Davis Group.

The move to Tennessee, he says, gave him the chance to go back to his musical roots on the new album.

"It certainly reflects the fact that I've been in Tennessee," Winwood said in an interview. "It has a Memphis feel to a lot of the songs. Since I've been down here I've had a strong interest in the musical history of the area."

Winwood had his first taste of stardom at the age of 16 when he was the lead vocalist on the Spencer Davis Group's hit "Gimme Some Lovin'." He later had stints with Traffic and Blind Faith before going on to a solo career.

Two recent albums, "Arc of a Diver" and "Back in the High Life," went platinum, and the single "Higher Love" from the latter won Winwood Grammys for record of the year and best male pop vocalist in 1986.

He calls his latest release a "happy album."

"There's nothing melancholic about it," he said.

Winwood credits several factors for the upbeat mood of the LP.

"At 40 years old, I'm having the best album and the best part of my career that I've ever had. I'm also very happily married, and I have a beautiful little girl," he said.

On his latest work he tapped trumpeter Wayne Jackson and saxophonist Andrew Love of the Memphis Horns for the album. Nashville's Mike Lawler plays keyboards and Michael Rhodes plays bass on the album and during Winwood's 31-city tour this summer.

Winwood loves the rhythm-and-blues sound that first made him popular with the Spencer Davis Group, and he still listens to it. But when asked if a reunion was possible, the veteran rocker said it isn't likely.

"There are no plans at all for a reunion. I couldn't say it isn't entirely impossible but my brother (former band mate Muff) hasn't played bass in 10 to 12 years," he said. "Roll With It" has a distinctive rhythm-and-blues sound that comes with the gutsy brass of the Memphis Horns and the pop of the Hammond B-3 organ. Winwood is unsure if renewed interest in the blues among American audiences is contributing to his success.

"I'm never quite sure about audiences," he said. "I am getting more influenced by rhythm and blues. But about audiences, I don't really know. I tend to think it's a mistake to aim for a certain audience."

Though he now lives and works in the country music capital of the world, Winwood seemed a bit surprised by the diversity of musicians available. He plans to collaborate with more Nashville musicians although he hasn't decided who.

"I will use, and am using, musicians from Nashville, but I don't think it will have the obvious effect. I won't be using a fiddle player or steel guitar," he joked. "But there are great musicians here not only in the country field but great rock 'n' roll players."

"I don't think it will affect the music so much. It won't affect the writing. Wherever I go it usually comes out sounding like a Steve Winwood album."

Summer Art Workshop ends

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

Though you certainly couldn't tell from the turnout at the closing reception, the UI Summer Art Workshop for High School Students is perhaps one of the most overlooked events of the season. Students from all over the state were munching nuts, drinking punch, recounting events of the past two weeks and saying their final good-bys to new friends who had already grown close. Standing amid the art they had made, they gave each other final hugs and made promises to keep in touch.

Two weeks ago, the students began a rigorous schedule of classes, including drawing, art history, sculpture, papermaking, bookmaking, photography and printmaking. "It's a blast!" said Patrick Stamps-White, a sculpture student from Iowa City. The workshop is a relatively new program. "I think this would be the eighth year," said Marilyn Zurmuehlen, head of the UI Art Education Department. "There is a long tradition for people in the arts going to some special place for summer," she went on. Students who are interested in art come to the UI to participate in the workshop. They must submit a portfolio of their work and write a statement explaining why they want to come to the workshop. Only 18 to 20 students get accepted each year, a number limited by the small studios at the UI.

The workshop costs $350, including room and board. Commuting students pay $195. Some students are given scholarships by their local art associations. Scholarships this year included sponsors from the Blandon Museum in Fort Dodge, Iowa; Amana High School; and Roosevelt High School.

The students not only worked hard, but they played hard. Wendy told the story of a Sunday picnic

Some students were playing volleyball when they were sabotaged with water balloons. The victims retaliated with gallon jugs brimming with water. After the battle was finally over, "we played volleyball again all wet," she said.

Not even the teachers were immune from the high jinks. "Carrie dropped gum in Pat Fahey's hair, and they had to cut it out," Wendy laughed.

Pat Fahey, coordinator of the Summer High School Art Workshop, gave the farewell address to the students and their parents. He said: "People got to know each other and share experiences. We got to know peoples' love for certain foods, grooming habits and work habits."

"Looking back, we got to learn more about ourselves, to understand our own artmaking, to share past experiences and to form a community," Fahey said.

Contras mount attack against Sandinistas

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — The Defense Ministry said Tuesday the U.S.-supported Contra rebels mounted their biggest attack since signing a cease-fire with the government three months ago. Five soldiers and seven civilians died in the ambush, the ministry said.

But Contra spokesman Jorge Rosales said he could not confirm or deny the report.

"I am seriously concerned about this campaign to create incidents to justify whatever action against our units," he said in an interview from his Miami office. He added that the rebels have been ordered to fire only in self-defense.

The leftist Sandinista government and Contra leaders on March 21 agreed to a truce and to seek a negotiated settlement to the nearly 7-year-old war.

Newspapers quoted the Defense Ministry as saying the Contras on Monday ambushed a Soviet-made Jeep and a military truck full of government troops and civilians.

The reports said the rebels, using anti-tank mines, rifles and grenade launchers, attacked the vehicles in the village of Buenos Aires in central Chontales province, about 100 miles east of Managua.

The Defense Ministry said 10 people — two civilians and eight soldiers — also were wounded in the attack.

Trial begins for accused hijacker Hamadi

FRANKFURT, West Germany — A court on Tuesday recessed the trial of a Lebanese Shiite Moslem accused in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner, after he refused to take part in the first day of proceedings.

Mohammed Ali Hamadi, who is charged with murder and air piracy, cited disputes over his interpreter and his legal representation for his refusal to participate.

"I don't say anything important until we have an interpreter," he said in broken German. The trial is scheduled to resume Thursday.

West German attorney Rainer Hamm said the parents of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem of Waldorf, Md., who was killed in the 17-day hijacking, were in the courtroom for the first day of the session.

Hamm, who represents 11 Americans who have intervened to prosecute the case, said he hopes Richard and Patricia Stethem's presence would be seen as a "gesture of trust and not of mistrust" in the German judicial system.

But Hamm said the location of the trial in West Germany was influenced by "terrorists in Hamadi's circles" who had taken two West Germans hostage in Lebanon after Hamadi's arrest in Frankfurt in 1987.

"The crime has been committed, but it has not yet ended," Hamm said.

FBI wiretaps reveal fund-raising deal

NEW YORK — Conversations that were secretly taped as part of the government's investigation of Pentagon contracting show a defense consultant raising money for projects of a powerful Florida congressman, according to a report broadcast Tuesday.

NBC News said it had obtained transcripts of federal wiretaps of Charles Gardner, a former official of Unisys Corp. now working as a consultant for defense contractors.

Gardner organized a charity golf tournament in the district of Rep. Bill Chappell Jr., chairman of the House defense appropriations subcommittee, that raised nearly $100,000 from defense contractors, NBC said.

The FBI is investigating the tournament, which was held this spring to raise funds for Daytona Beach Community College, the report said.

It is not clear if Chappell acted illegally, but it was clear that he knew Gardner was asking the defense contractors to contribute to the tournament, the report said.

Fire destroys desert town of Nothing

NOTHING, Ariz. — Nothing was left of Nothing on Tuesday after a fire swept through this tiny desert community, destroying its only business and the trailer homes of its four permanent residents.

The combination grocery store and service station in Nothing, about 100 miles northwest of Phoenix, had been a popular stop for travelers on U.S. 93, the main route between Phoenix and Las Vegas, Nev.

"People would stop there, have a pop and kick back for a while, because it is just about the only thing between Wickenburg and Wikeup," Jim Bell, a firefighter with the Hualapai Valley Fire Department, said Tuesday. The two towns are about 75 miles apart on the highway.

"I guess they won't be stopping anymore because there's nothing left in Nothing."

Stock market hits post-crash high

NEW YORK — The stock market climbed Tuesday to its highest levels since the October crash in moderate, post-holiday trading driven by futures-related buying.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials gained 27.03 points to finish at 2,158.61, its highest post-crash level since it closed at 2,152.20 on June 22. Volume on the floor of the NYSE totaled 171.79 million shares.

Ethnic dispute sparks Armenian strike

MOSCOW (AP) — Thousands of people went on strike in the capital of Armenia, apparently unhappy over the Armenian leadership's presentation of an ethnic dispute at the national Communist Party conference, a newspaper said Tuesday.

The Soviet government daily Izvestia said the strike began Monday, one day after "many thousands" of people met in the Theater Square of Yerevan, the capital of the southern republic.

Most flights in and out of Yerevan were canceled, it said.

In a Tuesday edition, Izvestia said: "Like yesterday a series of the city's industrial concerns aren't working or are working with less than a full work force." It said food stores and industries, as well as restaurants and medical services, had been working Monday.

The newspaper said farm work was going on in Stepanakert, the largest city of the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region, but that many other industries and institutions there also were shut down.

Nagorno-Karabakh is at the center of a territorial dispute between Armenia and the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan. Nagorno-Karabakh is part of Azerbaijan, but the mountain enclave's predominantly Armenian population has been agitating since February to be annexed to Armenia.

Armenia supports the demand. Azerbaijan is against it.

At least 32 people were killed in riots over annexation which broke out in Sumgait, Azerbaijan, at the end of February.

Izvestia said the thousands of people who gathered on the Yerevan city square Sunday listened to a television broadcast by delegates to the four-day party conference in Moscow, which closed last Friday.

Armenian party leader Suren Arutyunyan said in remarks broadcast on Soviet TV during the conference that authorities could not normalize the situation in Armenia, where large demonstrations frequently have occurred in support of Nagorno-Karabakh's demand. He proposed that the conference take up unspecified amendments to the Soviet constitution.

The disagreement between Armenia and Azerbaijan has sent the issue to national authorities, and the constitution specifies no way to solve the dispute.

Delegates who spoke on television supported Arutyunyan's call for restraint and went directly to the square to talk to the crowd.

But Izvestia said that after a "stormy debate" on the square, a committee was formed that called for a general strike after laying down a series of demands, including a quick, favorable resolution of the Nagorno-Karabakh issue. The committee demanded that the Soviet Supreme Court take over the trials of those charged in the Sumgait violence and demanded full information about the alleged poisoning of workers at a factory in the town of Masis.

Izvestia provided no more information about the Masis incident.

The party conference called for greater attention to republics' calls for economic autonomy, but said authorities would not make efforts to whip up ethnic tensions.

Besides Azerbaijan and Armenia, delegates from the Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia also brought up ethnic questions at the conference.

About a dozen protesters demanding freedom for three Estonian political prisoners had gathered more than 6,000 signatures by Tuesday during a five-day demonstration in Tallinn, Estonia.

Airports beef up security following Iranian threats

Airports in Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles stepped up security Tuesday following Iran's vows to avenge the deaths of the 290 people in a jetliner shot down by an American warship.

"Our police and security people are very much aware of the situation and the potential for what could happen with talks of retaliation," said Ron Wilson, spokesman at San Francisco International Airport.

"We're sensitive to the Iranian incident, and we've taken immediate steps to increase our security posture," Dale Harris, superintendent of operations at Los Angeles International Airport, said Monday.

Officials at airports in Atlanta, Baltimore, Miami, Oklahoma City and Dallas-Fort Worth said no changes were made.

Boston's Logan International Airport spokesman Phil Orlandella said security was beefed up, but added, "It's stuff that probably can't be seen."

Lynn Tierney, a spokeswoman for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates Kennedy, Newark and LaGuardia airports in the New York metropolitan area, declined comment on security.

Vincennes' mission in Gulf remains hazy

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The USS Vincennes, the first cruiser of the high-tech Aegis type to serve in the Persian Gulf, is a lot of ship for what an American skipper once called "a lake in a desert."

It was ordered here with such speed that some officers seemed to have only a hazy idea of its mission. When the billion-dollar warship entered the Persian Gulf on May 27, however, the nighttime passage through the narrow Strait of Hormuz left its 385 crewmen in no doubt they were in a war zone.

Off of Oman, salvage tugs battled fire on a Norwegian ammonia tanker attacked by Iranian gunboats the day before. On the Iranian side, flames licked at ships still burning from an Iraqi air raid two weeks earlier on Iran's big Larak Island oil terminal.

The assignment began in mid-April with a rush departure from home port in San Diego.

It is scheduled to last about three months, but the Vincennes could be withdrawn earlier as a gesture to reduce tensions caused by its shooting down of an Iranian airliner Sunday. U.S. officials say the Airbus A-300 was mistaken for an Iranian F-14 fighter.

Members of a Pentagon news pool taken aboard the ship before it entered the gulf found some officers and crew somewhat puzzled over the orders that brought them 13,000 miles in 32 days, on a million gallons of fuel.

Some officers noted it was the first tour in the narrow confines of the gulf by one of the Navy's Aegis cruisers, which have computer-linked radar and missile systems designed for fleet defense in open sea.

The shallow waterway, 600 miles long and no more than 120 miles across for commercial shipping purposes, was described last year by the captain of an older cruiser as "a lake in a desert" with many threats, all close at hand.

One officer of the Vincennes was asked what he thought the gulf mission would be for a ship whose phased-array "Spy" radar and weapons are designed to fight an enemy hundreds of miles away. He replied: "You tell me."

Even Capt. Will Rogers III, the skipper, seemed to have trouble with the question, suggesting the multiple functions of his supersonic might enable the Navy to reduce the strength of its gulf force. That has not happened.

Rogers told reporters the next day the Vincennes would provide "a lot of battle management" and "maybe we will be able to reduce the force level in the gulf and back away from the recent tensions in the area."

Gen. George Crist told reporters in Manama on June 1 the cruiser's air defense radar could cover the entire gulf and called it a "quantum leap forward" in deterring a new Iranian anti-ship missile site nearing completion in the strait. The four-star Marine general heads the U.S. Central Command in Tampa, Fla., which is responsible for the gulf.

Threat to hostages ends with no action

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A man purporting to speak for Islamic Jihad claimed Tuesday the pro-Iranian faction would kill one of two American hostages it was holding, but police said the deadline passed without incident.

"The threat appears to be a hoax," said a police spokesman.

The caller told the Voice of the Nation radio station that either Americans Terry Anderson or Thomas Sutherland would be executed to avenge the downing of the Iran Air jetliner by a U.S. Navy missile cruiser in the Persian Gulf on Sunday.

The Sunni Moslem radio quoted the caller as saying the group would kill one hostage by 8 p.m. (1 p.m. EDT) and dump the body in the Syrian-policed seaside neighborhood of Ramlet al-Baida in west Beirut. But the deadline passed with no developments, police said.

"We have patrols along the coastal boulevard where the kidnappers said they will throw the body. But we haven't received any report about any corpse," said the police spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The caller did not elaborate, and it was not possible to authenticate the call.

Earlier Tuesday, a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem cleric, Sheikh Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, said the 18 foreign hostages in Lebanon should not pay the price for the U.S. Navy's action in the gulf.

"I find no justification for making the hostages account for a matter with which they have no link," said Fadlallah, spiritual guide of Hezbollah, or Party of God, which is believed to be an umbrella for the underground factions holding 18 foreign hostages.

The statement was published by the Sohofiya News Agency, a newsletter based in west Beirut.

A State Department official in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said of the anonymous radio threat: "There is no confirmation there is any connection to Hezbollah or that this is a legitimate thing."

recommendations to Reagan on compensation.

The president would make the decision in tandem with Congress because of the "implications" and the fact that any compensation would be so substantial that Congress would have to provide the money, the State Department official said.

"Obviously, questions remain and we are going to get answers to those questions before we discuss reparations" said Phyllis Oakley, a State Department spokeswoman.

Apparently the most relevant law is one that provides for compensation in "combat-related" situations. It empowers the Pentagon to settle claims for such losses. The Iranian jetliner was shot down over waters patrolled by U.S. warships protecting tankers carrying oil to Europe and Japan.

While the commanders have orders to fire if attacked — and have done so — the United States is not at war with Iran.

The call for compensation came loudest from Capitol Hill, led by House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Sen. John Warner of Virginia, the senior Republican on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

short-term benefit, but in the long run it is not in the interest of the U.S. because it makes people feel hatred toward the American government.

"I think they brought themselves into this situation by going there," UI Islamic Society President Salim Chowdhury said. "They should not have been there in the first place."

But UI Campus Review Editor Jeff Renander said American military forces have a valid reason to stay in the gulf.

"I say we have the right to be there to protect the ships that are flying American flags and our allies. It is international waters," he said. "It's illegal for Iran to be bombing."

But UI New Wave member Bruce Nestor said the U.S. is provoking Iran by its presence in the gulf.

"We're interfering on the side of Iraq and doing so in an aggressive manner which is designed to provoke a response from Iran," he said.

But despite differing views on U.S. military tactics, all labeled the incident as tragic.

"It is shameful that you see some innocent people and children being killed because of such an incident," Sadeghi said. "I'm very shocked."

NL umpire Weyer dies of heart attack

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — Lee Weyer, a National League umpire who worked two of baseball's most historic games, died of a heart attack after playing basketball with fellow umpire Ed Montague's children, authorities said Tuesday.

Weyer, 51, died Monday night at Mills Hospital, said Hugh Swaney, senior investigator with the San Mateo County coroner's office. Earlier, Weyer was the first base umpire at the Chicago Cubs-San Francisco Giants game.

Weyer, a 26-year veteran umpire, was pronounced dead at 11:35 p.m. An autopsy Tuesday showed he died of acute myocardial infarction, or heart attack. No drugs or alcohol were found in his body, Swaney said.

Weyer umpired games in which two of baseball's most celebrated records were broken. In 1974, he was the third base umpire when Hank Aaron hit his 715th homer to pass Babe Ruth. Weyer was behind the plate in 1985 when Pete Rose singled for his 4,192nd hit, breaking Ty Cobb's record.

Foster: I will make Olympics despite injury

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two-time world champion high hurdler Greg Foster said Tuesday he will try to make the U.S. Olympic team despite a broken arm that required surgery to repair and medical opinion that the goal may be impossible.

Foster, 29, broke his left forearm when he tripped on a hurdle in practice Monday at Cal Poly Pomona.

Foster's arm was placed in a large brace rather than a cast. He said he will have to wear the device for 10 to 14 days. After that he will have to wear a lightweight brace.

The U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials are scheduled this month, with heats for the 110-meter hurdles to be held July 22. The Olympics will be held in Seoul, South Korea, in September.

Ueberroth wants no expansion

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball commissioner Peter Ueberroth says he does not want to see any new teams in the major leagues until at least 1993.

"We're going to do it right this time," Ueberroth said. "In the past it has been done in a herky-jerky manner. Franchises have suffered."

Ueberroth, who will leave his job in 1990, was quoted in Tuesday's editions of USA Today.

The most recent expansion teams are the Seattle Mariners and Toronto Blue Jays, who began playing in 1977.

Last-place Phillies extend Elia's contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The last-place Philadelphia Phillies extended manager Lee Elia's contract through the 1989 season Tuesday.

Elia, who will be 51 next week, took over as manager June 18, 1987, after John Felske was fired and led the Phillies to a 51-50 record over the last 3 1/2 months of the season.

But the Phillies are 35-44 this year, 15 1/2 games behind the first-place leading New York Mets in the NL East and two games behind fifth-place St. Louis.

The contract extension was announced by new personnel director Lee Thomas in Atlanta, where the Phillies met the Braves Tuesday night.

Free agent Chambers signs with Suns

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Veteran forward Tom Chambers became the first unrestricted free agent to go to another NBA team, signing a five-year, multi-million-dollar contract Tuesday with the Phoenix Suns.

Chambers, 29, who played out his option last season after five years with the Seattle SuperSonics, was allowed to sign with any NBA team without his former club receiving any compensation of having the right of first refusal.

The 6-foot-10, 230-pound Chambers earned $956,000 last season with Seattle and reportedly had a four-year, $5 million offer from the SuperSonics.

Ex-world boxing champ advances at Trials

CONCORD, Calif. (AP) — Former world champion Darin Allen, who fell from the rankings after a series of defeats, rebounded Tuesday to beat U.S. Amateur champion Jerome James and advance in the U.S. Olympic boxing trials.

Allen, who gained a spot in the Trials only by special invitation, took the fight to James in the third round to score a unanimous 5-0 decision and gain the semifinals in the 165-pound weight division.

Albright testifies at Buoniconti suit

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — The condition of Marc Buoniconti's neck when he enrolled at The Citadel wasn't unusual for a football player and didn't require he retire from the game, Iowa's team physician John Albright said Tuesday.

Albright took the stand as Buoniconti's $16.5 million negligence suit against Citadel team physician E.K. Wallace Jr. entered a fourth week in Charleston County Court of Common Pleas.

Albright, an orthopedic surgeon and director of the department of sports medicine at Iowa, testified a study indicated a third of the freshmen football players at Iowa show abnormalities on their neck X-rays when they enroll.

"The incidence is directly related to how long they played the game and how good they were," he said.

NFL to hold supplemental draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Tennessee State punter David Hood and running back Brian Davis, who flunked out of Pittsburgh, are among the 17 players available for the National Football League's supplemental draft Wednesday.

The draft is for players who were not eligible for the regular college draft in April and will be held as a weighted lottery, giving the teams with the poorest records the most chances.

Desmond Moreland, listed as a wide receiver from Purdue, will participate in the draft although the school said it had no record that he ever played.

Also eligible is Ian Howfield, a kicker from Tennessee who is the son of former Denver and New York Jets kicker Bobby Howfield.

Also available in the draft are: David Caylor, linebacker, Long Beach State; Melvin Ford, tight end, Bethune-Cookman; James Frary, tackle, Western Kentucky; Brian Greenberg, defensive lineman, San Jacinto; Craig Lashley, offensive and defensive lineman, San Antonio Junior College; Jerome McLaurin, offensive lineman, Mississippi State; Antonio Merritt, quarterback, Nassau Community College; Keith Mullen, defensive back, Indiana State; Eric Naporski, linebacker, Connecticut; Perry Oliver, defensive lineman, Texas Southern; Anthony Robinson, wide receiver, Elizabeth City State; Mike Schloemer, linebacker, Brooklyn, and Pierre Archeval, center, Western Ontario of Canada.

Arizona's Steve Kerr and Kentucky's Rex Chapman also were players who played on the Select Team but were not extended further invitations. Shelton Jones of St. John's withdrew his name from consideration last week.

A nine-game exhibition schedule including games against teams comprised of NBA players has been set. It begins in Providence, R.I., on Aug. 7 and concludes in Los Angeles on Aug. 30.

As defending gold medalist, the United States qualified for the Olympic competition as did the host nation. In addition, Australia, Brazil, Canada, Central African Republic, China, Egypt and Puerto Rico have qualified for the tournament with three berths still to be decided.

Edberg, Graf look to prove youth trend is here to stay

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — They have long blond hair, shy personalities, Olympic titles and nearly identical first names. Now, Steffi Graf and Stefan Edberg have something else in common — their first Wimbledon crowns.

Graf, however, can set herself apart in September.

If the 19-year-old West German wins the U.S. Open, she will become the first player since Margaret Court in 1970 to sweep the four major tennis tournaments in the same year.

"I like her chances," said Don Budge, who won the first Grand Slam in 1938. "She's sensational. She plays like she wants to get the match over with."

In the women's final, Graf ended Martina Navratilova's bid for a seventh straight singles title and ninth overall at Wimbledon. After the match, Navratilova maintained her perspective, if not her grammar.

"Eight ain't so bad," she said.

Edberg's victory means there will be no Grand Slam this year by a male player. His fellow Swede, Mats Wilander, was halfway to a Grand Slam after winning the Australian and French Open championships. But he was beaten in the quarterfinals by Miloslav Mecir, who then pushed Edberg to five sets before falling in the semifinals.

In the rain-delayed men's final, Edberg's deadly serve-and-volley game stopped Boris Becker's bid for a third Wimbledon title in four years.

The win was sweet revenge for Edberg, who had lost finals to Becker at Queen's Club and Dallas this year. Edberg lost his final service game at Queen's Club when he double-faulted twice in a row, prompting Becker to question the Swede's nerves.

"I think it was the other way around today," Edberg said Monday after handing the West German his first defeat on Centre Court.

Edberg went home following the victory, but he didn't have far to travel. The 22-year-old Swede moved to London three years ago and lives a short cab ride from the All England Club.

During the tournament, Edberg told reporters that he enjoyed living here because he was not widely recognized on the streets. He knows that will change now, but he doesn't think he will face the kind of publicity problems Becker did after winning his first Wimbledon at age 17.

"I think you make your own problems sometimes," said Edberg, who won the men's competition at the 1984 Summer Olympics when tennis was a demonstration sport. Graf won the women's championship at the same Games.

"I'm going to just be myself," Edberg said. "My life may change a little bit, and people may recognize me more, but if I respect people, people will respect me back."

While the future looks bright for Graf and Edberg, it is uncertain for a trio of former Wimbledon champions from the United States.

When John McEnroe, Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert were knocked out of the tournament, it was unclear whether they would ever come back.

"I'm going to just be myself," Edberg said. "My life may change a little bit, and people may recognize me more, but if I respect people, people will respect me back."

McEnroe, 29, returned to Wimbledon for the first time since 1985 with high hopes. But the three-time champion only made it to the second round, where he was beaten by Australian Wally Masur.

McEnroe indicated he would be back. But with a wife, two children and a lot of interests besides tennis, no one can be sure.

Connors and Evert were each playing in their 17th Wimbledon. Both hedged when asked if they would be their last.

Connors, 35, staged another one of his great Wimbledon comebacks in the third round against Derrick Rostagno. But he ran out of magic in the next round, losing a five-setter to Patrick Kuhnen of West Germany.

Evert, 33, made it to the semifinals for the 16th time before losing to Navratilova in a tight three-setter. The match ended with a disputed line call that left Evert staring at the umpire, the fans booing and Navratilova feeling "like a Martian."

Ivan Lendl felt pretty strange himself after failing again to win his first Wimbledon title.

The top seed, who was runner-up in 1986 and 1987, had to win two straight five-setters to reach the semifinals.

WIMBLEDON
INSIDE SPORTS
With their wins at Wimbledon, Stefan Edberg and Steffi Graf have claimed their places in professional tennis.

Ed Schuyler Jr.

Tradition a lost art in sports

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rain delays and suspensions of play due to darkness are as much a part of the Wimbledon tradition as strawberries and cream.

Tradition. It's something that seems to be vanishing from the American sporting scene.

The U.S. Open Championships were switched from historic Forest Hills to a place which lies in the flight path of LaGuardia Airport because the U.S. Tennis Association wanted a bigger facility.

Baseball, a nine-man game, is played with 10 men in the American League. A game for grass, it is played in many places on carpets. A daylight game, it is played almost exclusively under lights and, even worse, sometimes under roofs.

Come August, there will even be night baseball at Wrigley Field. Lights at the historic Chicago ballyard — it's enough to make one shudder. But then the Cubs might make the playoffs or World Series — conceivably in the near future — and American television, that bastion of tradition, likes those events to be held at night.

If the merchant princes of sports in America got their grip on Wimbledon, they'd put powdered creamer on the strawberries.

There's no thought of installing lights at Wimbledon. Who wants to sit through a night of rain delays?

There also was a study about putting a dome over Centre Court, but it was found that the present structure would not support a roof. To dome the facility would have meant putting tradition in the path of the wrecking ball. A dome would also lead to switching from grass to a synthetic surface, thereby ending the last great grass tennis event in the world.

"The words always and never are very bad words to use, and it would be ridiculous to say that we always will be the way we are and that we will never change," said Buzzer Hadingham, chairman of the All England Lawn Tennis & Croquet Club.

Wimbledon, which began in 1877, is a jewel in a triple crown, which highlights this part of the British sporting summer. The other two are Henley Regatta and the cricket Test match at Old Trafford. This year it was the West Indians, who trounced the English, who invented cricket.

Wimbledon is much faster paced than the Test and much less reserved than the Henley Regatta. Wimbledon also is a much bigger financial venture.

Writing in the Sunday Times, Godfrey Smith, author of "The English Season," said: "The oddity about Wimbledon is that despite the astronomical sums involved... the actual ambiance is decidedly unfashionable, not to say suburban."

It certainly is suburban. Listen to Smith on the exclusivity of the stewards' enclosure at Henley and the members' enclosure at Wimbledon:

"However, Wimbledon has its way of coping with little local difficulties like men who forget their ties and jackets. They can be hired at a discreetly negotiated price."

Asked how Wimbledon differed from other tournaments, Ivan Lendl, the world's top-ranked player, said: "You have to wear ties and badges and you have to stop everything at four o'clock sharp for tea."

Olympic dream ends for Armstrong

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Iowa's B.J. Armstrong was not among the 21 players who were invited Tuesday to begin training later this month for a berth on the U.S. men's Olympic basketball team.

Twenty-one players, ranging from 1987 College Player of the Year David Robinson to high school standout Alonzo Mourning, will report to Georgetown University on July 17, and the final roster of 12 players must be sent to the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee by Sept. 2. The Games begin Sept. 17.

In addition to Robinson, who played at Navy and will play in the NBA for San Antonio after serving his military obligation, and Mourning, who will play collegiately for Olympic Coach John Thompson at Georgetown, other centers invited to the camp were Stacey King of Oklahoma and Dwayne Schintzius of Florida.

Danny Manning, who led Kansas to the national championship in April and was the first pick in the recent NBA draft, led a group of forwards that included Charles Smith of Pittsburgh, Sean Elliott of Arizona, Danny Ferry of Duke, J.R. Reid of North Carolina, Dan Majerle of Central Michigan and Dyrion Nix of Tennessee.

The remaining players invited were Willie Anderson of Georgia, Stacey Augmon of Nevada-Las Vegas, Vernell Coles of Virginia Tech, Jeff Grayer of Iowa State, Hersey Hawkins of Bradley, Randolph Keys of Southern Mississippi, Todd Lichti of Stanford, Mitch Richmond of Kansas State, Brian Shaw of Cal-Santa Barbara and Charles Smith of Georgetown.

A list of players invited to the Georgetown camp was announced after the Olympic Trials in May. Augmon, Coles, Mourning, Nix and Schintzius were added to that list after playing with a USA Select Team in Europe in June. Robinson, Majerle and Charles Smith of Georgetown also played on that team and Grayer worked out with the team before it left on its tour.

"The purpose of the Select Team tour was not to evaluate a player statistically," Thompson said. "Individuals were judged on their functional merits both offensively and defensively in the various positions being considered. Consistency across the board is still a grave concern of mine. It has been my experience that players are easily motivated for the big games. My worry is the games en route to the Gold Medal. You never reach the big game if you have players who can't get up and play consistently. All of these young men

ACC may lose bid for Citrus Bowl

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The Atlantic Coast Conference will lose its bid for an automatic berth in the Florida Citrus Bowl, the Orlando Sentinel reported in Tuesday's editions.

The conference has offered to commit its league champion to the bowl game every year, but would give the Citrus Bowl the option of turning elsewhere for a host team in alternate years.

In the past dozen games, the Orlando bowl has matched two at-large berths.

"They (the ACC) need a New Year's bowl and we need a national championship game," Citrus Bowl president Paul Roddy said. "We're going to hold a meeting just to see if we have an interest in an affiliation. There are upsides and downsides to this."

An ACC delegation, including Commissioner Gene Corrigan, Clemson Athletic Director Bobby Robinson and North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford recently made a presentation in Orlando to Citrus Bowl Executive Director Chuck Rohe and several officers, the Sentinel said.

Roddy confirmed the presentation and that a full executive committee meeting was called for Tuesday to act on the proposal.

"We had a nice discussion. Right now, we're in the dating stage," said Corrigan from his home in Greensboro, N.C. "I don't know if either of us is ready to slip on a ring. I love the Citrus Bowl, personally. There are so many positives with that bowl."

But an informal survey of the majority of the Citrus Bowl's 11-member executive committee indicated that while there is a desire to maintain good relations with the ACC, there is little sentiment for an automatic tie-in with the conference.

Most bowl committee members indicated that the freedom of two at-large berths has been a factor in the bowl's rapid rise in the postseason pecking order, the newspaper said.

Some members also expressed concern that an ACC tie-in would compromise relations with Florida State, Florida and other Southern powers that have been vital to the bowl's growth. Having an ACC host team virtually would eliminate other Southern teams because of the need to provide ABC-TV with intersectional matchups, the newspaper reported.

In its early history as the Tangerine Bowl, the game had automatic tie-ins with the Southern Conference and then the Mid-American Conference. The latter arrangement expired with the 1975 game.

Giel fired as Minnesota AD

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Paul Giel, one of the greatest athletes in University of Minnesota history and the men's athletic director at the school since 1971, was fired Tuesday in the wake of a series of problems and allegations.

In addition, Frank B. Wilderson Jr., vice president for student development and Giel's immediate supervisor, was stripped of his role in the university's Athletic Department, interim President Richard Sauer said.

"In making these changes, I want to make it clear that I am not acting on new or undisclosed information related to the ongoing investigation and prosecution of the Office of Minority and Special Student Affairs case," Sauer said.

"That case obviously raises questions about administration and supervision of men's athletics, but I have based my decisions on a more general judgment that new leadership is necessary at this time."

University Board of Regents Chairman David Lebedoff said he supports Sauer's decision.

"I think he (Sauer) felt that strongly that it was important to get a fresh start in all these areas. We support that," Lebedoff said.

Giel, 55, was offered a job in the university's development office, heading external relations and fund-raising for university athletic programs and facilities, Sauer said.

Geil has not said whether he would accept the new position, Sauer said.

"This afternoon's announcement... was totally unexpected and has left me surprised and shocked," Giel said in a statement. "I will have no further comment until I have had a chance to give this whole affair further thought."

Giel became the first Athletic Department casualty after 2 1/2 years of renewed problems that began when three Minnesota basketball players were charged with sexually assaulting a woman after a game in Madison, Wis. The three were later acquitted.

Earlier this year, the basketball team was put on probation but will be eligible for postseason competition next season.

Most recently, the Athletic Department came under investigation for alleged illegal payments to football and basketball players as well as other NCAA violations.

The latest trouble concerns Luther Darville, former acting director of the school's Office of Minority and Special Student Affairs, who was indicted by a Hennepin County grand jury in May on three counts of felony theft by swindle. Darville, whom authorities are trying to extradite from his native Bahamas, reportedly gave payments to football players.

Sauer said he would name an acting athletic director Wednesday afternoon and that a search committee to assist in the selection of a permanent AD would be appointed as soon as possible.

With both Giel and Wilderson out of the fold, the men's and women's athletic programs will report to Sauer, who did not specify to whom the next athletic director would report.

Robert A. Stein, dean of the university's law school, has agreed to assist Sauer in overseeing all athletic programs. Stein has served as Minnesota's faculty representative to the NCAA and the Big Ten since 1981. The athletic director reported to Stein while Stein was vice president for administration from 1978-80.

Wilderson, who was present during the announcement, said he was not disappointed with the move and that he would essentially be returning to the duties he held before the spring of 1983, when the Athletic Department came under his jurisdiction.

As athletic director, Giel has the usual one-year appointment for administrative personnel until June 30, 1989.

Baseball trading insights allowed

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of baseball's Player Relations Committee said Tuesday that information trading by teams was allowed under the collective bargaining agreement.

The head of the players' union meanwhile accused the owners of using legalities to distort the issue of the alleged conspiracy.

And while the sides traded accusations, George Nicolau, the arbitrator who will decide the 1986 collusion grievance, gave no indication Tuesday on when he would issue a ruling.

Barry Rona, executive director of the PRC, responded to articles by The Associated Press on Monday that revealed the union's brief. He said that the collective bargaining agreement permitted the discussions that took place among owners and general managers and that Commissioner Peter Ueberroth encouraged it.

"Our past practices with respect to the dissemination and exchange of information had not been any different for the last 10 years," Rona said. "The difference in 1986 is that it apparently had an impact and when it had impact, the players' association said that it was violative of the agreement. As long as it did not have impact, they were perfectly willing to at least acquiesce to our interpretation of the practice."

Donald Fehr, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, claimed the information exchange was conspiratorial.

"You can have an information exchange and a free market. Then you would have a well efficient, informed market and that would be the best of things," Fehr said. "What happens though when people exchange information and the purpose is to say 'Bid under, don't compete with me.' Then you have price-fixing, collusion, conspiracies, monopoly...."

"They will rationalize on the grounds that everything done was permitted. That nobody said, 'Don't do this.' Since everybody knows what the purpose (of meetings are) what you say doesn't mean much," Fehr said. "What they're saying is just a legality. The key thing is not what information is permitted but for what purpose the information is transmitted."

Convicted murderer James Mayberry, who is currently serving a life prison sentence for the murder of an Iowa City resident, has requested a new trial, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Mayberry was convicted July 2, 1985, stabbing the wife of a local businessman, Julia Wise at the Hilltop Court in Iowa City. He was accused of trying to rape her then stabbing her to death.

U.S. seizes 72 tons of marijuana

SEATTLE (AP) — A Panamanian registered ship seized on the seas with more than 72 tons of marijuana was towed into Wednesday, and the Coast Guard said its capture was the largest drug bust ever on the West Coast.

Officials said the Encountered had endured 60 rounds of machine-gun fire about 600 miles offshore last Friday and surrendered only when threatened with a cannon fire.

The ship was towed into port under tight security by the Coast Guard cutter Boutwell, which is flying a makeshift "pot" flag.

The crew of 18 — though only three are American — from England, one from New Zealand and 13 from Indonesia, land and Singapore — were graphed and fingerprinted at the Boutwell in preparation for an appearance before a U.S. court.

Admiral Robert Kramek, in his last week as regional commander, used the occasion to criticize the Coast Guard's handling of the seizure. He said the crew was "the best ever on the Coast Guard."

"This ought to indicate to the public that it's a flourishing business and for the government not to get involved in it is foolhardy," Kramek said.

Agents from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration were on shore for the oil-rig supply ship and for security for the crew and cargo, which will be burned in a controlled environment.

If it can be proved they are headed for the United States, they could face felony charges. Prison terms of a few years are possible, DEA spokesman Gary Liming, DEA agent-in-charge.

"Consulting advice and information is there if a club wants to avail itself of it. A club can use it or not as it sees fit. There has been greater use in recent years than in the late 70s or early 80s. If you want to attribute that to Peter Ueberroth's encouragement, that is fair to do," Rona said.
