MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government on Monday ordered U.S. Ambassador Richard Melton and seven other embassy officials to leave the country within 72 hours, accusing them of state terrorism.

It also closed the opposition newspaper La Prensa for 15 days, shut down the Roman Catholic radio station and arrested an opposition leader.

The actions came a day after police clashed with thousands of demonstrators at an anti-Sandinista rally.

President Daniel Ortega on Sunday described the demonstration as being part of a U.S. plan to undermine his government and vowed to "act with force" against any violations of public order.

Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto, who announced the decision to expel the Americans, said they were engaging in "activities complementary to the state terrorism the administration of U.S. President Ronald Reagan is carrying out against Nicaragua."

He said he called Melton to his office Monday afternoon to advise him of the decision and gave him a sealed letter advising U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz of the same.

Speaking with reporters at a Foreign Ministry news conference, D'Escoto described Melton as "a robot of the maniacal (Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs Elliott) Abrams."

Melton presented his ambassadorial credentials to the Nicaraguan government in May. When he arrived in Nicaragua April 12, Melton, 52, said it was a "decisive moment in U.S.-Nicaraguan relations."

D'Escoto said U.S. Embassy officials were at Sunday's opposition demonstration in Nandaime, about 40 miles south of Managua.

Melton, he said, came "in his mind to fill a leadership vacuum in this country and he became confused."

The government earlier accused Melton of carrying out a destabilization plan against Nicaragua.

Melton filled the post left vacant since July 1987, when Ambassador Harry Bergold returned to Washington.

In closing Radio Catolica, the Interior Ministry accused the station of "inciting to violence, disorder and lack of respect for constitutional government."

Monsignor Bismarck Carballo, the station's director, called the order "unjust and arbitrary."

An official in the Interior Ministry press office, speaking on condition of anonymity, said police arrested Secretary-General Miriam Arguello of the Conservative Party for "being the principal instigator of yesterday's events in Nandaime."

The government closed down Radio Catolica in January 1986 but allowed it to reopen last October under a Central American peace agreement that Ortega and four other Central American presidents signed in August 1987.

Pedro Joaquín Chamorro, one of the five directors of the U.S.-backed rebels known as Contras, said in Miami on Monday: "The Sandinistas are demonstrating once again that they are not prepared for democracy."

Chamorro said the Contras have been negotiating in good faith with the Sandinistas but that continued repression inside Nicaragua would leave them little choice but to return to armed struggle.

Reopening Radio Catolica was among the steps toward democratic reforms envisioned in the Central American pact.

Board expected to OK hospital administrator

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

The state Board of Regents Friday are expected to approve the appointment of William D. Petasnick as UI Hospitals and Clinics administrator.

Petasnick will be the chief operating officer under the Director of UI Hospitals and Clinics John W. Colton, UI Hospitals Information Director Eldean Borg said.

If the regents approve the appointment, Petasnick will assume the post August 1, 1988, at an academic-year salary of $135,000. He will be replacing Cliff Eldredge who left the post — then titled deputy director — last year.

Petasnick comes from North Carolina Memorial Hospital at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. Over the past seven years, he has served as the hospital's director of operations and chief operating officer, the school of medicine's assistant dean, and an associate clinical professor in the Department of Health Policy and Administration in the School of Public Health.

"He's an exceptional administrator, and there are many things he did that will live on past his tenure," North Carolina Memorial Hospital spokesman John Stockes said Monday.

Stockes said Petasnick was a leader in management development.

"He started the management institute in the school of business," Stockes said. "It brought members of the hospital staff and members of the medical staff together."

Stockes said Petasnick was also responsible for the initiation of several employee recognition programs and for the creation of a mission statement which outlined the goals and purposes of the hospital. Petasnick has also held the posts of associate director and assistant director for a total of seven years at the University of Michigan Medical Service Plan. He has been the assistant director of the University of Michigan Hospital. And he has worked with the National Center Officer of the U.S. Public Health Service for two years.

Petasnick graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in June, 1968, with a bachelor of arts degree. He went on to get a master of arts degree in Hospital Administration from the University of Minnesota, June, 1970.

The regents are also expected Friday to approve the appointment of Michael S. Chibnik as chair of the Department of Anthropology. The three-year term appointment would be effective August, 1988, at an academic-year salary of $36,000.

Fire marshal declares fourth blaze in UI International Center arson

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

A fire in a cement storage room in the basement of the UI International Center last Tuesday night was the fourth fire at that building in the last four months.

"The fire was set by an arson," said Iowa City Fire Marshal Larry Kinney. Custodial workers reported the fire when "they smelled smoke from the basement area and called security," he said.

"The situation is still under investigation and we are working on suspects at this time," he said. The approximate cost of the fire's damage is $1,500.

Kinney and the UI Department of Security are investigating the incident.

UI Security Chief Donald Hogan said the fire was started by paper that was set on fire in a cement room. "Structurally there was very minor damage," Hogan said. "The light fixture in the room was melted and there was smoke damage." The area remained relatively unharmed because the fire was set in a cement room, he said.

There is a possible connection between the four fires, Hogan said, but he didn't have any other information at this time.

The International Center was one of 25 UI buildings identified between 1979 and 1986 as having fire alarm deficiencies by the State Fire Marshal.

Since then, three fire safety projects have been completed at the center. Projects completed in 1987 with $40,500 of UI building repairs funds included removing asbestos, enclosing stairwells and covering asbestos pipes.

But still on the list of uncorrected problems at the International Center are fire alarms, openings — areas in walls, ceilings or floors that have not been sealed — and exit lights.

The installation of the fire alarms, along with the plans for the restoration of the main lobby, which was destroyed by fire on April 4, are presently being developed, Jim Coombes, UI office of facilities planning and utilization manager, said.

"The installation of the system, which will include pull stations and fire heads, will cost between $40,000 and $50,000," he said.

Since 1979, 102 UI buildings have been cited for fire safety deficiencies. The Iowa Legislature has appropriated $2,750,000 towards fire safety improvement at the UI in the past nine years.

But the UI has received none of the $500,000 in fire safety funds it requested in 1987. The 1988 request of $500,000 is still pending consideration, Coombes said.

"We have received no word at this point about the specific appropriation to the UI. We have the promise (of funds), but not the money in our pocket," Coombes said.

"(The state) Legislature has indicated that they will make every effort to make fire safety funds available to the three universities," he said.

Gunman kills 9 aboard Greek cruise ship

More than 50 passengers injured in attack at sea

PIRAEUS, Greece (AP) — A man sprayed automatic gunfire on hundreds of tourists aboard a cruise ship and hurled a hand grenade at the liner's smokestack, killing at least nine people and wounding 53, police said. The gunman escaped on a waiting yacht.

Earlier Monday, an explosion killed two people and destroyed a car parked near a marina where the cruise ship, the City of Poros, was to dock in the Athens seaside suburb of Paleo Faliron. Police speculated the car blast and the shipboard attack were connected.

Police said 15 of the 53 injured were in serious condition. They said three people died from bullet wounds in Piraeus hospitals and six others were found dead on the deck of the cruise ship. At least three of the dead were foreigners.

Many of the 570 passengers on the City of Poros were European tourists, from Sweden, Britain, Italy, France and Denmark, authorities said.

The attack occurred at 8:40 p.m. as the City of Poros, on a one-day cruise, left the island of Aegina in the Saronic Gulf to head back to a small marina in Paleo Faliron, port police said.

Passengers Jean Wogewda of Lorient, France, and his wife, Natalie, were both wounded by the gunman. Wogewda was shot in both legs but still managed to crawl away.

"I was on deck when I heard automatic fire. I turned around and was thrown into the air by the impact of the bullets hitting my legs," Wogewda said as he lay in a Piraeus hospital.

"I saw the man who was shooting and I couldn't believe it and thought it was a joke. When I saw others falling to the deck, it turned out to be real."

"I only saw one gunman as he reloaded his weapon. Then he hurled a grenade at the ship's smoke stack, setting off a fire. Then he approached my group and started firing at us again," he said.

Wogewda said panic set in and many passengers scattered quickly for cover. Others grabbed life jackets and jumped over the railing and into the water.

In the confusion, the gunman boarded a small yacht that had pulled alongside the liner and sped away, police said.

The 208-foot City of Poros, smoke pouring from its side, steamed 16 miles to the port of Piraeus at full speed. Port police said at least 53 people were wounded and were taken to hospitals.

Police said the two occupants of the car that exploded in Paleo Faliron were believed to be of Arab origin. The car had been rented to a 36-year-old Lebanese man, Hamoud Al Hamid, police said.

The car contained explosives, hand grenades and automatic weapons, police said.

Police said the two people killed in the car explosion could have been connected to the gunman and may have been waiting for the City of Poros to arrive at Paleo Faliron.

An amateur photographer aboard a hydrofoil passing near the City of Poros after the gunmen fled shot film that was screened on Greek TV. The film showed a helicopter hovering over the liner and at least 10 smaller vessels coming to the ship's aid.

The Greek Merchant Marine ministry said the City of Poros is a day cruiser that specializes in visiting islands in the Saronic Gulf.

Port police said coast guard vessels had begun a search for the yacht.

Two weeks ago, the American military attaché to Greece, Navy Capt. William E. Nordeen, was assassinated by a booby-trapped car that exploded as he drove past in his bullet-proof car on his way to work. The terrorist organization known as November 17 claimed responsibility.

Four Palestinian terrorists on Oct. 7, 1985, hijacked the Italian luxury liner Achille Lauro during a Mediterranean cruise. The terrorists killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer and threw the body and the wheelchair of the 69-year-old invalid overboard.

Italian courts later convicted seven Palestinians of planning or carrying out the attack, including Mohammed Abbas, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Front who was tried in absentia and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Abbas was on a plane carrying the four hijackers out of Egypt when U.S. fighter planes forced the Egyptian airliner to land in Sicily, where they were arrested. Italian magistrates said then they didn't have enough evidence to hold Abbas and let him leave the country Oct. 12.

No aid is in sight for drought-affected farmers

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad's declaration late last week of Iowa as a drought disaster area is only one of the many steps that needs to be taken in order to secure monetary aid for Johnson County farmers, according to local farm officials.

"Disaster and low-interest loans aren't available as of yet (for farmers affected by the drought)," said Dick Harris, director of public affairs with the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation in Des Moines. "Branstad's declaration is the first step that has been taken that could lead to federal aid."

"Basically, what the state of Iowa is allowed to do now (under the state of emergency) is use its own resources to help its farmers. An example of this is when the National Guard is used to haul water," Harris said.

Harris said the U.S. House Agricultural Committee will be working on a Drought Assistance Bill for the remainder of this week, but that the bill wouldn't have a chance to be passed by Congress until mid-August.

"There's still time for it to rain before all the crops are lost," said Harris. "We can't predict the severity of the drought right now." According to Harris, the soybean crops in Iowa still have a chance to survive even though there will inevitably be a loss. He said a good percentage of those crops could still be salvageable if there is substantial precipitation in the next four weeks.

Even though the soybeans have a chance to be saved, the hay and pasture areas in Iowa have suffered terribly. Harris said that most pasture areas have been deemed useless and the second cutting of the hay crop in the state has produced an overall 70 percent loss.

William Riggley, 51, a North Liberty farmer, said he is worried about how long his corn crop will hold out.

"Some of my corn is already firing at the bottom," said Riggley. "This is a very critical period of time in terms of corn pollination — we need rain very soon or the crops will die."

As to his expectations of federal aid, Riggley said he is very wary about the type of aid he will receive, if any.

He said he had faced a similar drought situation last summer and pointed out that even though he lost over half of his corn and bean crops, he received no monetary aid.

Riggley has applied for federal and state assistance this year through the Johnson County Farm Bureau along with many other area farmers who are in the same predicament.

According to Larry Barnes of the Johnson County Farm Bureau, approximately 900 farms have applied for hay, grazing land and aid via the emergency feed program. But he said the bureau has not been able to offer loans as of yet.

"All we're going to have to do is wait," said Riggley, referring to farm aid. "We (farmers) don't know what we're going to get in the way of help until the last minute — all we can do now is pray for rain."

The reading is sponsored by the Iowa Summer Writing Program.

Hancher receives grants for programs

Hancher Auditorium has been awarded $11,612 by Arts Midwest to support six performing arts events during the 1988-89 season.

Arts Midwest is a private, non-profit, regional organization that supports arts programs in a nine-state area with funds contributed by federal and state arts agencies, private citizens, businesses and foundations.

Two of the awards will support performances of works commissioned by Hancher. Arts Midwest reserved $2,106 to support a performance of "United States" by David Gordon and the Pick Up Company on Feb. 11, 1989, and $761 for the April 2, 1989, concert by the Kronos String Quartet.

Wallace elected as Dance/USA trustee

Wallace Chappell, director of Hancher Auditorium, has been elected to the board of trustees of Dance/USA.

Dance/USA, based in Washington, D.C., was formed in 1982 as a service organization to artists and administrators in non-profit professional dance.

The 32-member Board of Trustees includes prominent choreographers, dancers, artistic directors, dance company administrators, dance educators and administrators of dance presenting and service organizations.

Reparation plan aids crime victim's widow

By Traci Auble
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Crime Victim's Reparation Program has come to the aid of an Iowa City woman whose husband was struck and killed by a van while riding his bicycle April 22.

Donna Coons received a total of $14,500 from the program, including $10,000 for her husband's medical bills, $2,500 for funeral expenses and $2,000 for lost support.

Brian Coons, 32, was struck from behind about midnight when he was riding his bicycle southbound on Riverside Drive. He underwent surgery the next day for head injuries but then died at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

The driver of the van, Eliot C. Jones, 30, 932 Deforest Ave., collided with the bicycle on South Riverside Drive in front of the Alexis Park Inn. Jones was charged with operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated, but the charge was changed to vehicular homicide on May 12. His trial is scheduled for Sept. 19.

The Crime Victim's Reparation program helps reimburse people if they are innocent victims of a violent crime committed after Dec. 31, 1982, according to Johnson County Victim Witness Program Coordinator Christie Munson. Victims of child abuse, domestic abuse and dependents of an innocent victim of a violent crime can also receive reparation.

"The money for the victim reparation comes from a surcharge on court fines," Munson said, adding that compensation for pain and suffering is not included in the reparation.

A victim can receive up to $10,000 for medical care, $6,000 for loss of support for dependents of the victim, $2,500 for funeral expenses and $2,000 for loss of income due to bodily injuries as the result of a crime. Other monetary compensation is awarded as long as it follows the program's guidelines.

Munson said during the Sept. 19 trial, Coons' prosecutor will ask for restitution from Jones to help cover remaining costs not awarded by the reparation program.

Munson said she often refers her clients to the reparation program and works closely with the program in her position as coordinator of the Johnson County Victim-Witness Assistance Program.

"I keep victims of crime notified about progress in their cases,"

Munson said. "I also help them get to court if they are unable, and I work on getting restitution from defendants."

Munson said she also tries to keep victims and witnesses notified about the outcome of cases. She helps them through the often emotionally difficult process of being a victim or witness of a violent crime.

Munson said there isn't a problem with fraudulent reparation applications because of the paperwork involved. She added that reparation can be awarded without a conviction since criminals sometimes aren't apprehended and evidence can be lost or ruined.

"By the time it gets to us, we're pretty sure the crime happened," she said.

To apply for reparation in most cases, the crime must have been reported to the local law enforcement agency within 24 hours of the crime. The victim must file the claim application with the Department of Public Safety within 180 days after the date of the crime or within 120 days of the death of the victim.

Although the process can take up to eight to 10 months, Munson said it is usually worth it.

Owners of Gay's Meat Market plan to rebuild burned locker

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The blaze that destroyed Gay's Locker and Meat Market last May has not meant the end of the Gay family's 75-year involvement in the meat market business.

Plans for rebuilding the meat locker at 1421 Waterfront Drive are already getting under way, according to Tim Gay, son of Gay's Locker and Meat Market co-owner Richard Gay.

Gay said that plans for rebuilding are still in the early stages but that they hope to start actual construction on the new facilities within the month.

"We're in the process of getting together the plans, and we're working with an engineer in Minneapolis right now," he said, adding, "We hope to be building by next month, and we're shooting for completion by November but that may be dreaming."

The original building was built in the early 1900s when W.A. Gay started the company as a slaughterhouse for Iowa City. The structure was added onto many times before the fire destroyed it, causing $300,000 in damages.

The remodeling will do more than just replace the old structure — it will expand the retail area of the business to three times its original size. Gay said the expansion was planned for some time before the blaze and that the fire served to hasten renovations.

"We're expanding our retail area when we rebuild. We were headed that way for some years anyhow, so now we'll just do it a little sooner," he said.

The new larger facilities will require additional land, and Gay said he will appear before the Iowa City Council this month to investigate rezoning possibilities.

Although unable to carry out the normal operations of the business, employees at the meat locker are kept busy demolishing an existing shed to make room for the new facility and working in a makeshift office restoring the business' books.

Gay said the rebuilding process is a long and complicated one, and things like building deadlines and material costs are uncertain factors.

"Right now we're going through a lot of changes — we have no idea how much it will cost," he said. "We haven't even gotten to the point where we can go for a bid — nothing is concrete."

"Every step has a lot of red tape," he added. "We are still trying to get through all that."

Gay also said the November completion date was crucial because the Christmas season is traditionally the meat market's biggest selling time.

Branstad plans to 'sell' Iowa to East Coast

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Terry Branstad hopes to convince Boston businesses that Iowa is a good place to expand.

The governor and 10 representatives of private industry will take a "sell Iowa" trip to Massachusetts today and Wednesday.

Principle Financial chief executive officer John Taylor will accompany Branstad in meetings with Boston executives in insurance and biotechnology, among other expanding fields.

Taylor and Iowa Insurance Commissioner William Hager plan a side trip to Hartford, Conn., for a reception targeted at insurance companies.

Iowa economic development officials said they decided to take the Eastern excursion after what they termed successful public relations visits to San Francisco and Chicago earlier this year.

During those trips Branstad has polished Iowa's selling points. "Our state can offer businesses many advantages, including America's best educated and highly productive workforce, an excellent education system, two world-class research universities, a business environment that nourishes entrepreneurial enterprise and a quality, affordable lifestyle," Branstad said.

The delegation includes business executives from Red Oak, Fort Dodge, Avoca, Dubuque, Mason City, Cedar Rapids, Clear Lake, Grinnell and Ames.

Courts

Accused murderer Mark R. Peterson was granted the right to hire expert witnesses at the state's expense for his murder trial scheduled for Aug. 1, according to Johnson County District Court records.

If the costs exceed $1,000, the court will review the necessity of approving additional allowances. The court will also determine on July 14 which witnesses will be excluded from expanded media coverage during the trial, according to court records.

Peterson was charged with first-degree murder after allegedly fatally stabbing former UI Power Plant Manager Marshall Stewart, 61. Stewart was reportedly stabbed in his home on March 24.

A wallet that was reported stolen from an Iowa City woman's apartment early Monday morning reportedly turned up in a mailbox in Tiffin about seven hours later, according to police reports.

The woman contacted Iowa City police at about 1 a.m. after someone, who had apparently gained entrance through a screen door, took a wallet and ran from her residence in the Willowwind Apartments, according to the report.

She described the suspect as a tall male with dark hair wearing flowered shorts and no shirt, according to the report.

Someone from a post office in Tiffin called her at about 8:10 a.m. and said her wallet had been found in a mailbox there, according to the report.

The only thing reported missing from the wallet was about $20 in cash.

Report: A male flasher was reportedly seen near the Union early Monday, according to Iowa City police and UI Campus Security reports.

The man was reportedly wearing a white T-shirt and jeans. Iowa City police checked the area, but could not locate the suspect, according to the police report.

Report: An Iowa City man reported Monday that someone was calling area businesses claiming to be selling radio spots for KKIC-AM, according to police reports.

The man told police the caller claimed to be working on a child abuse campaign and was selling the spots for $300. When the man who reported the incident contacted KKIC, the radio station had no knowledge of any such campaign or salesman, according to the report.

Report: An Iowa City man was arrested and charged with public intoxication Sunday after Iowa City police received a complaint of a noise disturbance outside a residence on South Van Buren Street, according to police reports.

'Dutch' may radio

DAVENPORT (AP) — WOC radio, where Ronald Reagan landed out of college, said he would like to have the microphone once he visits the station next week.

WOC News Director Nick said White House haven't released Reagan's visit Thursday. He would like to have participate in a question-answer session with him.

Reagan worked at WOC in 1932, fresh out of Eureka, Ill., Minn. "He worked here for a while with WHO (a Des Moines station). He did sports and recreating (Chicago games from a ticker-tack. "I believe he got his first game."

He said the president's nickname "Dutch" at the time he started working for WOC is celebrating his anniversary this year.

Newton Humic

NEWTON, Iowa (AP) — note of one of Iowa highlights, a Newton festival is observing National Festival Week later this week.

"We wanted to honor our experience in our first thing to come to a high humidity," said a marketing director at Radio.

The festival sports "Non Est Calor Est," which is Latin for "heat, it's the humidity." "We checked with a linguist for the words," Groust.

'Dutch' Reagan may ride again at radio station WOC

DAVENPORT (AP)— Officials at WOC radio, where President Ronald Reagan landed his first job out of college, said Monday they hope to put the president behind the mic once again when he visits the station later this week.

WOC News Director Mark Minnick said White House officials haven't released details of Reagan's visit Thursday. But he said he would like to have the president participate in a question-and-answer session with listeners.

Reagan worked at the station in 1932, fresh out of Eureka College in Eureka, Ill., Minnick said.

"He worked here for a few months. At that time there was a simulcast with WHO (a Des Moines radio station). He did sports mainly, like University of Iowa football games and recreating (Chicago) Cubs games from a ticker," said Minnick. "I believe he got $5 for his first game."

He said the president acquired the nickname "Dutch" at WOC before he started working for WHO radio. WOC is celebrating its 65th anniversary this year.

Minnick said he was excited about Reagan's visit, but he still must go about his regular duties and try to ignore any interruptions by Secret Service agents and the president's advance staff team.

"It hasn't been too bad. They haven't disrupted anything, so nothing is out of whack," he said. "But it will be, as far as telephones, metal detectors, tighter security in the parking lots and staff briefings."

"I'm excited about the president coming," Minnick said. "It's something you dream about doing, but you hope you never have to."

Because the station wasn't built for big crowds, Minnick said he doubted crowds of reporters who usually follow the president will be allowed in the studios.

Even some radio station staffers might be assigned to the basement studios during the presidential visit, he said.

Following the tour of the radio station, Minnick said Reagan is expected to speak at the Palmer College Alumni Auditorium, where 1,200 tickets have been sold by the Quad Cities Area Chambers of Commerce.

Ronald Reagan

Like Minnick, police officials said they also will be putting in extra work because of the presidential visit.

"That's an understatement," said Davenport Police Chief Ernest Lester.

"We've had to prepare for vice presidential visits seven times in the past 18 months, mostly because of the (Feb. 8) caucuses, so we're used to it somewhat," he said.

"But there's a little more attention to detail when you're talking about the president of the United States," Lester said. "It puts a strain on the department."

Lester estimated he will be spending between $3,000 and $5,000 on overtime because of Reagan's visit.

Newton radio station notes Humidity Festival Week

NEWTON, Iowa (AP)— To take note of one of Iowa's summer highlights, a Newton radio station is observing National Humidity Festival Week later this month.

"We wanted to honor something we experience in our country during the summer months, and the first thing to come to mind was the high humidity," said Jamie Grout, marketing director for KCOB Radio.

The festival sports the slogan "Non Est Calor Est Humiditas," which is Latin for "it's not the heat, it's the humidity."

"We checked with a Latin teacher for the words," Grout said. "There isn't any Latin word for humidity, so we had to make it up."

"We've always felt that Iowa has the highest quality humidity in the nation, so why not celebrate?" he said. "I'd say our humidity is cleaner than the kind they have in New York."

Numerous events are planned for July 25-29, including an imaginary parade along Main Street on the 27th.

"Radio is the theater of the mind, you know," he said. "It's a word picture. Our station faces First Avenue, which is Main Street, and we'll set up out there and describe a parade" on July 27th, he said. So far, some 30 businesses have bought "floats" in the parade.

"We appreciate humidity quite a bit," said Grout, with tongue firmly in cheek. "It really designates Iowa. Humidity is good for us. It helps us perspire, makes us thirsty. It's something you can't experience everywhere. The people in Arizona, they don't know what humidity is. All they have is dry heat."

Other events include free swimming at the municipal pool for Newton residents, a watermelon feed and a contest to determine when a large block of ice will melt. The winner wins free ice for a year.

Anarchy rules

All is not golden for the Minnesota Gophers these days. An anonymous artist summed up the situation best with this message printed on a Minneapolis underpass: "Gopher Football. Anarchy Rules!"

A revelation, this is not. After all, the Minnesota basketball program was placed on two-year probation March 10 for violations that included misappropriation of funds and rape. (The NCAA frowns on that, especially the misappropriation of funds part.)

And now it has come to light that, while basketball players were assaulting women in hotel rooms, the Minnesota football program was busy hogging its share — or lots more — of university funds and giving the money to players.

Since the allegations have come to light during the past three months, former Minnesota football players like Pudgy Abercrombie and Valdez Baylor have come forward with some scary stories — stories of shopping sprees at the mall, free airline tickets and envelopes crammed with hundreds of dollars in cash.

There seem to be two key offenders at the crux of this whole shameful mess: A man named Luther Darville and a screwy minority admissions procedure.

Luther Darville was a university athletic counselor who also worked in minority affairs. He was indicted May 24 on theft charges — he allegedly stole $186,000 of university money to give to athletes. Darville has since fled to the Bahamas; federal authorities are currently attempting extradition.

The problems posed by Minnesota's minority admissions procedure are a bit trickier than Darville's flagrancy, but even more damaging. For a number of years, in an attempt to boost the university's embarrassingly low number of minority students, an open admissions policy offered acceptance to anyone holding a high-school diploma. In the words of Ron Edwards, president of the United Black Front advocacy group, "The athletic department became the plantation wing of the university."

Only 3,400 of the 45,000 students at Minnesota are black. Little is done on campus — academically or administratively — to help blacks deal with problems specific to their minority status.

Thus, Minnesota combines a corrupt athletic department and students who don't meet scholastic requirements but can play some mean ball. While this style has been effective in breeding winning teams at some universities, the glory can't last. Instead, it leads to exploitation of minority athletes or the downfall of an athletic program — or, in Minnesota's case — both.

The tragic element, however, lies in effect, not cause. The NCAA will slap some hands, put some folks on probation, rant and rave about the denigration of athletics — and then Minnesota's punishment will be over. The gold and maroon will once again be worn with "pride."

But what of Pudgy Abercrombie and Valdez Baylor and the host of others who took the plane tickets and the new clothes and the dirty money? For some added insight, the NCAA might want to ask them how it feels to be bought off. Or how it feels to be used instead of educated.

Reparations due

As the story becomes clearer concerning what happened to Iran Air flight 655, members of both parties are discussing the circumstances under which the United States will make payments to the victims' families. Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis has said "some form of humanitarian assistance would probably be appropriate."

Vice President George Bush told of Reagan administration considerations of paying reparations to the victims' families, but said, "I would never, ever under any circumstances offer reparations to the Iranian government."

Bush's belligerent rhetoric undoubtedly receives a large measure of support in Congress and the Reagan administration. However, fairness dictates that the case for reparations be judged on its merits and not on our feelings toward the Iranian government.

Certainly, the behavior of the Iranian government has been both reprehensible and indefensible. The taking of hostages at the U.S. embassy and the sponsorship of international terrorism are the actions of a morally bankrupt government. Even so, Iran's lack of scruples and global immorality does not excuse the United States from its culpability and subsequent responsibility for destroying an Iranian civilian aircraft. If the United States had accidentally destroyed a civilian aircraft owned by Great Britain or France, there would be no question of paying for the destruction of the airliner.

The investigation into exactly what happened in the tragic case of flight 655 should be able to determine whether or not the United States was at fault. If so, payments should be made to the families of those killed and Iran should be compensated for the loss of its airliner.

Dealing with problem parents

A recent headline in a Florida newspaper read: Mother Arrested After 10-Year-Old Daughter Reports Drug Use.

Her story:

It was either a day like any other day or a dark and stormy night, I can't remember. I was in the kitchen pouring myself a cup of coffee, not bothering anyone, least of all Samantha, my 10-year-old daughter.

We had hugged and kissed when I came home from work. Samantha is a pretty little girl and very smart in school. Anyone would be proud to have her for a daughter.

Normally, it was when I reached for the jar of Coffee-mate that Samantha shouted, "Don't do it!"

"Don't do what?" I asked, still calm at that point.

"Just say no!"

"Darling," I said sweetly, "I've been putting non-dairy creamer in my coffee for years."

The sugar bowl was empty so I opened a cabinet and took down a brown bag of sugar and refilled the bowl.

Dan Jenkins

"Oh my God!" Samantha yelled.

"What's the matter?"

"You're an addict!"

"A what?"

"You've got cocaine all over the house! Jason told me what to look for!"

"Who's Jason?"

"He's in my school."

"You mean Jason's a 10-year-old, like you?"

"Yeah, well, don't laugh at Jason. He's had two novels on the best-seller list!"

He was the same Jason Michael-Brent McEasley who wrote Bright Tattoos, Big Trailer and Mysteries of Pensacola.

"I found your Preparation H, too," Samantha said.

"What's that got to do with anything?"

"Samantha, you're making me mad."

"Everybody in school knows a cocaine user puts Preparation H in their nostrils — it opens the nasal passages. You rub it under your eyes, too, to remove the swelling when you've been out drinking and snorting all night! That's why there's more Preparation H stolen out of drugstores than any other product. Jason discovered this first."

"Preparation H is used for something else, Samantha."

"Bull corn! That's what dope fiends want you to think, but you're not dealing with just another silly 10-year-old, like Jo Ellen Simpson, who doesn't know a jar of Coffee-mate from 100 grams of coke. Don't touch that sugar!"

All I wanted was a spoonful of sugar in my coffee, but Samantha now had a gun on me.

"Where'd you get that gun, Samantha?"

"They passed them out in school. We're going to put a stop to drug abuse for good, and we're starting in the home! If you won't say no, we'll say no for you!"

"Samantha, be careful — that gun could go off!"

"Right, and there'd be one less dopehead in the world!"

I told Samantha that she was going to get a very bad spanking when her father came home.

"He won't be coming home," she said. "I nailed Daddy this morning! I caught him red-handed with a box of what he called dishwashing powder and what I knew to be cocaine!"

Holding the gun on me, Samantha called the police.

They were at the house in three minutes. For a break-in or a rape, they usually take three hours, but for a headline drug bust they're very prompt.

I was put in handcuffs and led away.

At the door on the way out, I said, "Samantha, who will raise you if I go to prison? Where will you live? How will you live?"

"That's for me to worry about," she said. "I'm going off on a book tour with Jason. We'll decide when we come back from Beverly Hills."

Dan Jenkins' syndicated column appears periodically on the Viewpoints page.

Lacking ethics

To the Editor:

I feel myself compelled to address these words to your readers, especially since many of them shop in the downtown area. Until now, "Be afraid, be very afraid," was simply a line from the movie "The Fly." But now it is also a line you cannot afford to forget before entering a particular downtown Iowa City store. Here, the monster is not a fly, but rather, Moda Americana.

By using the word "sale," backed up by their no-refund policy, they can lure you into their sales tricks. Tricks like selling me a watch and not being liable when it quits working after a mere two hours.

And don't bother standing up for your rights — for instance, the "presumption of functionality right" as stated in the Iowa Uniform of Commercial Law Code, which states that when a consumer buys a product it is under the assumption that the product will function. Don't bother arguing that you were sold a defective product, as I did, because the owner will tell you to "Take your s--- and get the f--- out," as he did to me on June 30. He will then call the police on you because you're keeping him from doing business.

What's ironic indeed is that this incident occurred during Moda Americana's Third Anniversary Celebration. I would strongly recommend that the owner of Moda Americana take some classes in salesmanship this summer. Or at least take note of AT&T's commercial which says, "You don't sell for the sake of selling, but rather, to keep the customers happy."

Wait for facts

To the Editor:

This letter is addressed to Joseph

Stockett and all the others like him — people who are more than happy to take all the benefits that the United States gives them, but are unwilling to give back even the most minimal support. I refer to Stockett's letter to the editor, (The Daily Iowan, July 7) in which he, like many others, condemned the U.S. as a terrorist nation because of the recent Iranian jetliner incident.

While speaking of terrorist nations, I would like to point out, in case people have forgotten, that Iran has held, and continues to hold, many innocent American hostages for extremely long periods of time. Apparently, American lives are not as important to Stockett as are Iranian lives.

I, too, am very sad and mourn the loss of so many innocent lives. But for all those looking for someone or something to blame, I would ask them to look to Iran for answers to the following questions:

Why was the plane flying at such an unusually and threateningly low altitude? Why was the plane emitting military radar, which is never used on civilian planes? Why did the pilot refuse to respond to calls from the USS Vincennes on both military and civilian frequencies? Why did the pilot refuse to heed repeated warnings? And, finally, what other choice did the commanders of the Vincennes have in view of these facts? Should they have endangered many American lives because an Iranian airplane acting in a threatening manner refused to respond?

I have no doubts that the Iranian people aboard the plane were innocent people. I also believe, however, that this "accident" was the perfect way for the Iranian government to raise public sentiment for the removal of U.S. forces in the gulf.

It is terrible that so many people died. And the fact that so many Americans have suffered at the hands of Iranian leadership does not change that or justify it. But until the investigation is finished and the facts are in, I would ask that Stockett and others like him would refrain from making any judgments which totally ignore the facts of the matter.

Third opinion

To the Editor:

There seem to be two views about the American-Soviet walk which stopped in Iowa City. The first view, promoted by Campus Review, is that the walk brought "200 spies" to Iowa City. The other view, which Marianne Cherni wrote about, is that the walk will lead to world peace and nuclear disarmament. As someone who covered the walk for a journalism class, I would like to express a third view.

I feel that the walk, while helping to build better friendship between the two countries, will not automatically lead to the end of the Cold War.

First, the walk doesn't challenge the leaders of either country to change. For example, the Soviet walkers were selected by the Soviet government, so one must wonder how they can change their government. Also, many American leaders, including Republicans, have endorsed the walk. I have to wonder when the people in charge of the arms race are supporting the walk.

Second, the walk has received very little national press coverage, except in areas where the walkers are. After spending a long time looking through press indexes, I have to wonder about the walk's effectiveness if only a few people know about it.

Lastly, nowhere in the materials or in discussions about the walk has the subject of Third World oppression come up. The sad fact is that both sides have averted war by oppressing Third World countries (Nicaragua by the U.S., and Afghanistan by the Soviets). No serious efforts toward peace can be made without addressing Third World oppression.

So while I feel that the walk is a start toward world peace, it must be accompanied by other actions which challenge the leaders of both sides to really end the arms race and the Cold War.

Chileans protest military regime's policies

SANTIAGO, Chile — Riot police used tear gas and a water cannon Monday night to scatter hundreds of anti-government demonstrators who staged a "March of Hunger" to protest the military regime's economic policies.

Police reported more than 100 demonstrators detained in the downtown melee. One police officer and three demonstrators were injured, none of them seriously.

Five public transportation buses were set on fire, police said. The driver of one of the buses suffered severe burns, witnesses said.

The march was called by several Communist-controlled organizations of slum dwellers and joined by hundreds of other demonstrators, most of them students.

Police fought running skirmishes with the protesters for almost two hours. Scattered groups of demonstrators were repeatedly dispersed by police, but quickly regrouped at a different intersection to resume their protest.

The demonstrators blocked traffic, sometimes with flaming barricades, at a number of busy downtown intersections, as thousands of office workers returned home from work.

Troubleshooter inspects burning oil platform

ABERDEEN, Scotland — Texas oil troubleshooter Red Adair inspected the burning Piper Alpha platform on Monday from a basket suspended above the flames and smoke, but rough weather in the North Sea halted his plans to clear debris.

Chairman Armand Hammer and other officials of Occidental Petroleum Corp., the platform's operators, rejected allegations that warnings of gas leaks went unheeded in the days before Wednesday night's disaster, which killed 166 of the 230 men on board.

Occidental executives have said they believe a gas leak caused the explosions that rocked the structure 120 miles east of Scotland but have maintained the rig complied with all safety standards.

Police meanwhile released the names of two Americans involved in the disaster. They said Carl Busse, 28, of Navasota, Texas, was among those listed as missing and believed dead. Joseph Wells, 33, from Santa Barbara, Calif., survived the blaze without injury, they said.

Hammer said the explosion was so powerful it overwhelmed the structure's sophisticated safety system.

"Our oil rig had every safety device on it that we could possibly have," Hammer said during a visit to Tel Aviv on Monday, where he announced plans for an offshore drilling project in Israel.

Haitian human rights activist killed

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — Lafontant Joseph, a prominent human rights activist, was found beaten and stabbed to death Monday in a jeep near the Port-au-Prince airport, police said.

"This murder is a very serious incident," Jean-Claude Bajoux, director of the Ecumenical Center for Human Rights, told The Associated Press. "It means that the lives of all militants for human rights in Haiti are in danger."

Paul Latortue, a former senatorial candidate who lives in exile in Puerto Rico, blamed the murder on government leader Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

"I have no doubt that this is a political killing," he said. "It's connected with the government."

Joseph, 54, director of Haiti's Center of Education for Human Rights, was found dead in his four-wheel drive vehicle near Mais Gate International Airport, just outside the capital. A passerby recognized the dead man and contacted his family.

The activist's nephew, physician Ronald Joseph, said Joseph had been stabbed once in his chest and two or three times in his back. "The body looked mutilated," he said.

Poll shows Dukakis maintains lead

NEW YORK — Michael Dukakis maintained a slim lead over Vice President George Bush in a national poll Monday, although the likely Democratic nominee was rated favorably by fewer voters and unfavorably by more.

The CBS News-New York Times poll found Dukakis ahead 47-39 percent among the random sample of 947 registered voters surveyed by telephone last week. The margin of error was plus or minus three percentage points.

The lead for the Massachusetts governor was 8 points. In May the same poll found a 10-point Dukakis lead, 49-39.

Twenty-eight percent of respondents in the new poll expressed a favorable view of Dukakis, down from 38 percent in May. Twenty-one percent expressed an unfavorable view, up from 14 percent. Many still had no opinion.

Bush, however, did not benefit from the movement in Dukakis' rating. The all-but-certain Republican nominee's own favorable rating was 26 percent, down from 33 percent, and his unfavorable rating was 31, about the same as his 35 percent in May.

Stocks off to sluggish midsummer start

NEW YORK — Stock prices crept ahead in quiet trading Monday, getting off to a sluggish start on a midsummer week.

Analysts said declines in commodity prices and interest rates worked in the market's favor but failed to stir up any great signs of enthusiasm among traders.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.16 to 2,111.31. Volume on the floor of the big board came to 123.30 million shares, down from 136.07 million in the previous session.

Reagan plans payment for families of victims

WASHINGTON (AP) — With few comparable parallels to go by, the Reagan administration began work Monday on the "huge job" of assembling the data necessary for compensating the families who lost relatives aboard an Iranian airliner derailed by a U.S. missile last week.

A State Department official said the task will be "highly discretionary" because of the unique nature of the incident, in which a U.S. Navy warship fired on the passenger plane after mistaking it for an F-14 fighter.

It is not clear yet, the official said, whether a flat amount will be paid for each victim or whether the age, number of dependents and earnings of the victims will be taken into account in assessing compensation.

Also to be determined is what role Congress will be required to play in providing the funding, said the official, who briefed reporters on the condition that he not be identified.

"We have a huge job ahead of us," he said. "We have a lot of facts to investigate."

The official said it is common practice in such incidents for the government to seek a statement from the families of each victim releasing the U.S. government from further liability for the accident.

He added that the outcome of a Navy investigation will not affect the government's decisions on compensation. The decision to compensate was based on humanitarian concern, the official said, adding that such issues as negligence or culpability by either Iran or the United States will not influence the process.

The law does not specify a maximum amount the U.S. government may pay in such cases.

Reagan appoints Meese successor

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan has chosen former Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh to replace Edwin Meese as attorney general during the remaining six months of the Reagan presidency, a knowledgeable administration source said Monday.

The source, who declined to be identified by name, said that Thornburgh, a moderate Republican who once headed the Justice Department's criminal division, had accepted the offer.

Elsie Hillman, head of George Bush's presidential campaign in Pennsylvania and a Republican National committeewoman, said in Harrisburg, Pa., that she was told by Bush campaign officials that Thornburgh had been asked to take the job. Thornburgh served two four-year terms in the Pennsylvania state capital in Harrisburg.

Thornburgh, who will turn 56 on Saturday, has been mentioned as a possible running mate for Bush on the 1988 Republican presidential ticket. His acceptance of the Justice Department post would appear to rule out that prospect.

Reagan told reporters earlier Monday that there would soon be an announcement of a successor for Meese.

The attorney general, under fire ever since his arrival in Washington with Reagan, his longtime associate, announced his decision to leave the Justice Department on the day last week that independent counsel James McKay ended a 14-month investigation into Meese's ethical behavior in office.

McKay's 830-page report has not been made public, but reportedly he decided not to seek an indictment of Meese. That prompted the attorney general to declare he had been "vindicated."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater declined to confirm or deny that Reagan has settled on

Richard Thornburgh

Thornburgh. Fitzwater said "it's probably likely that he (Reagan) has decided, but he has not made an offer."

Cable News Network reported that Thornburgh had been interviewed by White House general counsel A.B. Culvahouse.

Thornburgh is no stranger to the Department of Justice. He was the U.S. attorney in Pittsburgh from 1969 to 1975, then moved to Washington as assistant attorney general and head of the criminal division from 1975 to 1977. He served as governor from 1979 until 1987 and now directs the Institute of Politics at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government.

Thornburgh was born in Pittsburgh and has an engineering degree from Yale and a law degree, with high honors, from the University of Pittsburgh. He and his wife, Virginia, have four sons.

Fitzwater had said earlier that the administration wanted to announce the nominee before Congress adjourns Thursday for the Democratic National Convention. The convention begins Monday in Atlanta.

Jackson says he would accept vice presidency

By The Associated Press

Michael Dukakis huddled at home with his closest adviser Monday as time grew short to pick a Democratic vice presidential running mate. Jesse Jackson openly sought the nomination widely expected to go elsewhere, saying, "If it was offered to me I would accept it."

Vice President George Bush said he might consider Bob Dole or another former Republican rival as his partner when he picks a running mate next month.

Dukakis met with Paul Brontas and then sent his longtime confidant to Washington to meet with Jackson, runner-up in the primaries and widely regarded as unlikely to receive an offer to join the ticket.

Jackson, one of seven known candidates for the vice presidential nomination, termed the session "an oral interview and/or exam" on the topic. He said he gave Brontas his "candid view as to the office of vice president . . . and what I thought my qualifications might be."

He said it was "self-evident" he would like to be vice president.

"I don't expect there will be any so-called floor fights over the platform," he said.

Jackson adviser Ron Brown wasn't ready to go that far, although he said the two sides are continuing to negotiate in an attempt to work out remaining differences. "There might be some very serious issues of principle that go to the floor of the convention," he said in Atlanta. Jackson supports calls for higher taxes on the wealthy and a five-year freeze in military spending; Dukakis opposes both.

The governor spent part of the day at his statehouse office working on a Massachusetts budget crunch, and the balance of the day at home. His aides said Dukakis was mulling his choices. He met during the morning with Brontas, and an evening session was possible.

"He hasn't made up his mind yet," said one Dukakis aide, speaking on condition he not be identified by name. "Or if he has, he hasn't told anybody."

Brontas flew to Washington to meet with Jackson, regarded as too liberal and too controversial to get Dukakis' nod.

He joked about the subject at one point, saying, "So far, Dukakis has not accepted my offer and I have not refused his."

But later, Jackson turned serious. "If I am not on the team, then the governor must determine who the team members are and what role they will play," Jackson said before the session began.

He added, "Certainly I am convinced that we have the challenge and the obligation to work together to win for the fall. But beyond that we must establish a partnership of equity and shared responsibility."

But more likely candidates were Sens. Bob Graham of Florida; Lloyd Bentsen of Texas; John Glenn of Ohio; Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee and Reps. Richard Gephardt of Missouri and Lee Hamilton of Indiana.

Administration pressures Congress on missile sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration intensified its pressure on Congress Monday to approve the purchase of Maverick missiles by Kuwait even after the Persian Gulf shiekdom announced a separate weapons deal with the Soviet Union.

The drive to clear the air-to-ground missiles coincided with the opening of a weeklong visit by Crown Prince and Prime Minister Sheikh Saad Al-Abudullah Al-Sabah, the first trip to the United States by a Kuwaiti leader since 1968.

Last week, the Senate voted to strip the Mavericks from a $1.8 billion arms package that included 40 F-18 fighter-bombers for the tiny oil-rich gulf country. Critics contended the missiles could be turned against Israel in the event of a Middle East war.

But a senior U.S. official, briefing reporters at the White House on Sheikh Saad's visit, said Israel still would retain a strategic edge over any combination of hostile Arab countries, even if the purchase were approved.

The official also suggested that the American economy could be damaged if the deal fell through.

Briefing under rules of anonymity, the official said the arms sale could help improve the U.S. trade imbalance, add $3.8 billion to $4 billion to the gross national product, provide 10,000 man-years of work annually and involve contracts in 39 states.

He said Kuwait had a right to defend itself with U.S. weapons, and if Congress blocked them, the Kuwaitis "have the means and the determination" to buy arms elsewhere.

Tyson now says he will fight for five more years

NEW YORK (AP)—Mike Tyson said Monday his "retirement" would last one or two months, that Kevin Rooney may be out as his trainer and confirmed that Donald Trump is advising him.

The heavyweight champion, speaking at a news conference in a Manhattan hotel, was surrounded by Trump, attorney Michael Winston, wife Robin Givens, mother-in-law Ruth Roper and Rory Holloway, a long-time friend. Tyson said he wanted to dispel the swirling stories about his future but he may have started more than he stopped.

"I called this press conference to set the record straight. I call all the shots," the heavyweight champion said in a pink and mauve ballroom, surrounded by 46 pink spotlights, 22 candelabras and 28 ionic columns.

Thirteen days ago Tyson said he was quitting. "It's time to move on. It's time to call it a day," he said then.

"I didn't say I was retiring," he said now. "I love fighting."

How long will the layoff last? "This is something I have to consider. Perhaps a month or two."

Tyson, who is 22, had been tentatively scheduled to fight Frank Bruno this fall. He didn't talk about that fight but said he would fight for about five more years.

"Nobody wants to be in the gym getting your body hit at 35," he said.

Rooney, Tyson's trainer, was in the ballroom but left before the news conference started.

Tyson said that Rooney, who has trained him since his start as an amateur, will be dropped if he sides with Bill Cayton in the litigation begun two weeks ago.

All-Star time offers a break

CINCINNATI (AP) — It's hard to tell who enjoys the All-Star break more: those who play in the game or those who don't.

"I need to get away from baseball for a few days," Oakland catcher Ron Hassey said. "I'm going to Lake Tahoe."

For most players, the All-Star break is a much-anticipated time to rest, relax and recuperate. Three full days to spend with family and friends is more than they'll get all summer.

"I'm going to upstate New York with my family," Willie Randolph of the Yankees said. "We'll do some swimming, horseback riding and have picnics."

"You know, kids of ballplayers don't get a chance to do things like that with their fathers during the season," said Randolph, a five-time All-Star. "I think this should be a good experience for all of us."

Tim Raines and Mike Schmidt, each perennial All-Stars, have been slowed by recent injuries and are not playing this year. That's fine by them.

"I'll get to go home to Florida during the season for the first time ever in my career," Raines said. "I'm looking forward to it. It will also give me three extra days to get ready."

Schmidt was with the Phillies Sunday in Cincinnati, site of Tuesday night's All-Star Game. He went home to Philadelphia, but was going to spend one day in New York looking at adding another boat to the one he already owns.

"I like playing in All-Star Games and I was picked for 11 of them," Schmidt said. "But as you get older, you reach a point where you also look forward to having the days off."

Detroit's Ray Knight headed straight home to Georgia to be with his wife, golfer Nancy Lopez.

"We're going to camp out on the farm," Knight said. "I think we'll play a little golf, too."

Houston pitchers Nolan Ryan and Dave Smith are having a get-together.

"I'm going up to Nolan's farm and help him breed some cattle," Smith said. "We've got a couple of families going up there just to lay around and fish. I'm just going to take three days off from baseball."

Toronto pitcher Todd Stottlemyre, who has struggled in his first major league season, also intends to get some work done. That means a visit with his father, Mel, a former pitching star and current pitching coach with the New York Mets.

"Dad and I will spend a lot of time talking baseball," Stottlemyre said. "And when I come back, I'll be throwing strikes, that's for sure."

Mets pitcher Sid Fernandez doesn't have time to go home to Hawaii. Instead, the bachelor will hang around New York.

"I'm going to do a little cruising," Fernandez said. "I'm going to take it easy and get ready for the second half."

Atlanta's Ken Oberkfell and Texas' Charlie Hough didn't set up anything special.

"I'm going to sit at home with my wife and kids, probably out at the pool," Oberkfell said. "Probably with cookouts all three nights."

Said Hough: "I'm going to hang around the house, watch the game, play a little golf. Pretty standard stuff."

Hough, however, was one of the few who definitely planned to watch the All-Star Game. For many players, a break from baseball means no baseball, not even on television.

"I'm not going to drop everything to watch it," Davis said.

Echoed Smith: "I think we'll be driving during the game, so I don't think I'll watch. It's Tuesday night, isn't it?"

All-Star Game will debut 30 first-timers

CINCINNATI (AP) — Infused with 30 fresh faces, this year's All-Star Game will be a test of whose new blood is best.

Never have there been so many newcomers — 18 on the National League side, including starters Vince Coleman, Will Clark and Bobby Bonilla.

Starting pitcher Frank Viola is among 12 first-timers for the American League. Combined, more than half of the 56 players are making their first appearance.

"I kind of feel like the old man of the team," said rightfielder Darryl Strawberry, who at 26 is making his fifth all-star start. "There are so many new faces here that it just doesn't seem like the same NL All-Star team anymore. It's good to have some new blood."

Dwight Gooden, Strawberry's teammate on the New York Mets, will start for the NL. It's his fourth All-Star game, but this represents a new start.

"I want to put aside the distractions of the past," said Gooden, who missed the first two months of the 1987 season because of cocaine rehabilitation.

"It seems like when I came back last year, my confidence wasn't quite there," Gooden said. "Also, when I'd go to a movie or the mall, I didn't know if people were staring at me because I was a baseball player or because of the problems I'd had."

"For the first two months, when the temptation (for cocaine) would come around, I'd just think about all the people I'd hurt," he said. "It just takes over. You're not abusing the drug, you're abusing yourself."

Gooden, 11-5, lost his last start Friday night. This time, his support will include such familiar faces as Strawberry and Gary Carter of the Mets, Andre Dawson of the Cubs and Ozzie Smith of the Cardinals.

Viola, 14-2, won his previous start July 6. Instead of the Minnesota Twins, Viola will be surrounded by the likes of Rickey Henderson and Dave Winfield of the New York Yankees and Wade Boggs of Boston.

Both managers announced the batting orders Monday.

Vince Coleman of St. Louis will lead off for the National League and play left field. Second baseman Ryne Sandberg of Chicago will bat second, followed by Dawson in center field.

Strawberry will play right and bat fourth, followed by third baseman Bobby Bonilla of Pittsburgh and first baseman Will Clark of San Francisco.

Carter, a two-time All-Star MVP, will bat seventh and shortstop Smith, the leading vote-getter this year, hits eighth.

American League Manager Tom Kelly said he wasn't sure how his outfielders would line up because Winfield and Jose Canseco have both played right field this season.

Henderson will lead off in one outfield spot, followed by Paul Molitor of Milwaukee. Batting second base although he has played there only twice this season, this past Saturday and Sunday.

Boggs will play third and bat third, with Canseco fourth and Winfield fifth. Cal Ripken of Baltimore replaces injured Alan Trammell at shortstop and bats sixth, followed by Oakland teammates Mark McGwire at first base and Terry Steinbach catching.

But some other perennial All-Stars are not present. Mike Schmidt, Dale Murphy, Tim Lincecum and Eddie Murray are among the big names missing.

Even two of the six umpires are first-timers — Dale Ford and Dan Morrison of the American League.

"It just seems like there are a lot of National League veterans not having good years and a lot of young players doing well," said Rafael Palmeiro, batting .311 for the Chicago Cubs.

There are five Minnesota players on the team, the first time the Twins have had more than one in 11 seasons. They were picked by Manager Tom Kelly, who guided the Twins to the World Series.

Nan Doak-Davis practices Monday at Cretzmeyer Track in preparation for the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials beginning later this week in Indianapolis. Her husband, Barry Davis, already qualified for the Olympics in freestyle wrestling.

Doak-Davis, McGhee look to Trials

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

Peaking at just the right time, former Hawkeye standout Nan Doak-Davis and Iowa senior Pat McGhee are both hopeful about the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials July 15-23 in Indianapolis.

"I'm in the best shape of my life," Doak-Davis said. "I'll probably run the best race of my life."

An all-American at Iowa and 1985 NCAA women's 10,000 meters champion, Doak-Davis said she has nothing to lose.

"Technique doesn't matter," she said, "it's all strategy. It will be God's will who wins, because all the runners have the potential."

Ranked third nationally in Runner's World magazine and 10th in Track and Field News, Doak-Davis is a legitimate contender for one of the three spots on the U.S. team.

McGhee, ranked seventh in the nation by Track and Field News in the men's 400-meter hurdles, is coming off a personal best in the pre-Olympic Trials July 2-3 in Indianapolis.

A positive outlook, McGhee said, has helped the 1988 all-American come back from a knee surgery that forced him to sit out the 1987 season.

"Everything looks real good," he said. "I haven't had any problems with the knee, just a strained hamstring earlier this year."

"I am starting to get a little nervous," McGhee said. But who can blame him, considering the competition he will face for the three Olympic team spots.

Edwin Moses and Danny Harris, who have dominated the event in the 1980s, will both be competing. McGhee said the last time he ran against the two was in the 1984 Athletic Congress National Championships.

"I feel I can run faster," he said.

"I've had good luck on that track (Indianapolis) and that's where I had my career best."

McGhee said he gets ready before a race by just concentrating on having a good time. "I just try to envision myself running a good race," he said.

Doak-Davis, whose husband Barry Davis has qualified for the U.S. Olympic wrestling team, said her husband, parents and a brother and sister will be in Indianapolis to cheer.

"I know Barry will probably be running all over the place," she said, "so I'll have the best cheerleader possible."

CFL may expand to United States

TORONTO (AP) — Some American cities that may be disappointed in their quest for NFL franchises could get a Canadian Football League team, with the CFL dropping its unique rules in an effort to lure American fans.

CFL Commissioner Doug Mitchell said in a recent interview that the league will form a long-term planning committee that will study the prospect of expanding into such cities as Oakland, Baltimore, St. Louis and Jacksonville. All are candidates for NFL expansion franchises, but NFL expansion is on hold pending some settlement of the league's collective bargaining dispute.

Mitchell said he is convinced a new league will be formed in the United States "by 1990 or shortly after that" and the CFL should consider moving first into those cities.

He said he favors expansion into the United States as a means of regenerating fan interest in the CFL and to help give firmer financial footing to CFL teams hurt by declining attendance and television revenues.

Expansion to the United States was rejected by the league's board of governors in February 1987, but at their last meeting they agreed "to retain a consultant to assist us in formulating a long term plan."

The CFL, reduced to eight teams last year after the Montreal Alouettes folded, initiated an operations cap this year to allow teams to meet expenses in the face of declining fan interest and revenues.

At the same time, teams have mounted marketing campaigns to try to win back fans lost in the last five years to baseball, hockey and televised NFL games.

Mitchell said an announcement naming the consultant and committee members would be made in two weeks. He said the committee would then have 90 days to submit recommendations to the board.

"Things of that nature will be seriously considered by the committee," he said.

Mitchell named Jacksonville, Birmingham, Ala., Memphis, Tenn.,

St. Louis, Oakland, Baltimore, Portland, Ore., Sacramento, Calif., and New York as likely entries for a new league or as potential CFL franchises.

Oakland, St. Louis and Baltimore have all lost NFL franchises to other cities.

"I don't think it's something that should be unceremoniously rejected," said Mitchell, who is resigning after five years when his contract expires May 31, 1989.

He said it was unlikely Americans would accept Canadian rules, with a wider field, 12 players to a side, three downs and the "rouge," a single point for balls downed in the end zone.

NCAA alleges violations at Kansas

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — The NCAA is investigating national champion Kansas for alleged recruiting violations in its basketball program, Athletic Director Bob Frederick said Monday.

Frederick said, however, that the university considers the allegations explainable and had been cooperating with the NCAA for about a year. He said he was "stunned" when the NCAA notified the university last month that an official inquiry was underway.

"We feel at this point like we're working hand-in-hand with them to resolve this matter," Frederick said. "The things that we self-reported that they are now saying in the allegations 'You did this, we feel are explainable.'"

Kansas also released a statement from Larry Brown, who coached the championship team, in which he said he would work closely with the university to resolve the matter. Brown, who coached the Jayhawks for five years, resigned June 13 to become head coach of the San Antonio Spurs.

Frederick was not specifically asked about Brown and did not specifically clear him. He said before his session with reporters that he would not mention names.

When asked if one or some of the staff members involved were still employed at KU, Frederick said "some." Frederick also said Roy Williams, named Friday to succeed Brown, was informed of the situation before he took the job.

The allegations, which included providing transportation for and loaning money to recruits, did not involve any member of the team which beat Oklahoma in the NCAA finals, Frederick said. In fact, he said, none of the players involved enrolled at Kansas.

The athletic director declined to release the names of staff members, institutional representatives and recruits involved in the allegations.

Frederick said he became aware of the NCAA interest about two weeks after he succeeded Monte Johnson as athletic director on May 13, 1987.

"There was a long period of time during which we were working with them (the NCAA) which we thought this matter would not end up in an official inquiry," Frederick said. "That's why I feel very confident we're going to get through this thing OK. It's something we want to be up front about. We've asked for the speediest resolution possible."

"We think at least in our own mind that we came as close as we could without coming to that level. There are some matters that we self-reported. Other matters were brought to our attention by the NCAA."

"I think the thing we felt confident about is they felt there was no intent, no consistent pattern of anything," Frederick said.

Dukakis chooses Bontse

BOSTON (AP) — Monday evening when Dukakis asked the four in his kitchen table for recommendations on the potential mates they had been given. The unanimous verdict: Bontsen of Texas.

"That's my choice," said Bontsen. With that, the selection that began June 8 ended. Dukakis would ask the Democratic Convention to nominate as his running mate in capture the White House in November.

A key figure at the table was Bontsen's former Harvard Law School mate who headed Dukakis' campaign.

"We put a call in, and no answer," said Bontsen. "I put a second call in and he answered."

What they didn't know was Bontsen was home but off his telephone because he was getting so many calls from reporters and vice presidential selectees.

The Dukakis adviser when he arrived at Brookline home Monday decision was still open. He did not mislead Bontsen when he told him Jack was under consideration.

Asked at a Washington conference if he was angry, Bontsen replied: "No, I'm too clear, I'm too mad, I'm too angry. I'm focused on must do to keep hope alive."

During the primary season, Bontsen kept insisting he begin thinking about a mate until after he had the nomination.

Professor commends nomination

By Franc Contreras
Special to The Daily Iowan

Massachusetts Governor Dukakis' selection of George Bush as vice president is a probable Democratic victory in the Midwest. It gives him an edge in California, Texas and the South, according to a political science professor.

"Bontsen does not carry in the Midwest, New York, the northern states," said a political science professor. "This is strictly a Southern victory."

Dukakis' vice president will help him in Texas, has voted Republican in two presidential elections. In 1984 Texas voters, making a success behind California and New York (36).

Since both Dukakis are fluent in Spanish they have a political edge in California, Texas and the South, where Hispanics make part of the population. Probable Republican George Bush is expected to carry the vote in urban California and Los Angeles. So it looks like that state, Ross said, must win California in to win the presidency.

Ross said Texas has a good chance of winning the election.
