Reagan addresses drought

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

DAVENPORT—President Ronald Reagan urged Congress to adopt additional relief measures for the drought-stricken Midwest Thursday in a speech that marked his homecoming to the city where he began his career as a radio announcer.

Reagan told a crowd of about 1,500 at Palmer Auditorium that Congress was drafting measures to help farmers hurt by the drought, but warned against legislators using the drought to further political aims.

"Even in an election year, the drought is too big for partisanship," Reagan said. "Partisanship should be kept out of the issue of drought relief. Politics must stop at the parched field's end."

Reagan said he endorsed measures which included forgiving repayment of advance deficiency payments and federal relief programs for farmers growing non-program crops.

Earlier in the day, Reagan toured heat-scorched cornfields on the southern Illinois farm of Herman and Richard Krone. The president was accompanied on his Iowa-Illinois tour by Republican politicians from both states, including Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and Iowa Rep. Jim Leach.

"We can't make it rain, but we can ease the pain," Reagan said. "I'm determined to provide relief to drought-stricken farmers."

Reagan said his administration has already initiated successful relief measures for farmers and called on Congress to quickly enact a drought-aid package to provide additional relief services.

However, Reagan said legislation must not encourage farmers who have not been seriously damaged by the drought to plow up their

Protesters harangue Reagan

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

About two dozen protesters gathered outside Davenport's Palmer Auditorium Thursday to demonstrate against Reagan administration policies as President Ronald Reagan spoke inside.

The protesters chanted and held up signs as the president and his entourage made their way out of Palmer Auditorium and into waiting limousines.

Iowa City Progressive Student Network member Alix O'Gorman, a UI student who led the demonstration, said most of the protesters drove from Iowa City to make a statement about Reagan administration policies.

"I feel responsible to make a presence whenever Ronald Reagan comes to the area," O'Gorman said.

"We are all politically outraged by his political policies so we want our presence felt here," O'Gorman said. "We are showing all the people here who are supporting Reagan that there is an organization against him."

St. Ambrose College student Amy Sheen said she joined the protesters from Iowa City after demonstrating while Reagan dedicated the new WOC communication center.

"I feel that I need to express my feelings about these things," Sheen said. "I don't think the public is getting the whole truth."

"People don't know about the workings of the government," Sheen said. "They get what the press and the government want to tell them. If people did know more, there would be more people down here."

Some members of the crowd jeered and shouted back at the demonstrators as the presidential motorcade pulled away from Palmer Auditorium.

fields in order to qualify for the relief measures.

"Drought relief should be just that — drought relief," Reagan said.

In addition, Reagan said he has appointed U.S. Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, who accompanied the president on his tour, to head a fact-finding team of U.S.-D.A. officials that will tour the Midwest next week.

While the crowd waited for the president to arrive at Palmer Auditorium, Bettendorf Chamber of Commerce President Bob Gallagher praised "strong Reagan administration support in achievement and initiative" that have helped the Quad Cities grow.

Reagan said the economic resurgence of the Quad Cities mirrored successes all across America, including dropping unemployment rates and the creation of new, higher-paying jobs.

But Reagan said many people refuse to accept the economic progress his administration has made.

"I knew there was something wrong when they stopped calling our recovery 'Reaganomics,'" he said.

Reagan said he experienced a "wave of nostalgia that swept over me this afternoon as I arrived here in Davenport."

The president said he felt a sense of "strength and serenity" returning to the Quad-Cities, where he got his start as a radio announcer in 1932 at Davenport's WOC.

Reagan returned to Davenport to dedicate his old station's new communication facility.

During his broadcasting career at WOC, Reagan announced Chicago Cubs baseball and UI Hawkeye football games from the WOC studio.

"I learned something here about being grateful for your opportunities," Reagan said at Palmer Auditorium. "Thank you Davenport, and thank you WOC."

"I'm determined to provide relief to drought-stricken farmers," says President Ronald Reagan.

Annual Iowa beach party expects to attract 20,000

By Cathy Jackson
The Daily Iowan

One family plops its sailboat in the sand as an alternative to sitting on lawn chairs or beach towels; another brings a plastic palm tree.

The sand and water are imported, too, but the World's Biggest Beach Party on "No Wa Wa Beach" still attracts thousands to Williamsburg, Iowa, each year.

The third annual bash, sponsored by Miller Lite, will be held this weekend, and more than 20,000 people are expected to turn out for the festivities, according to beach party organizer Marcia Hopp.

"This year we have a new Hawaiian theme," Hopp said. "The governor of Hawaii and the Hawaii Visitor's Bureau have loaned us two days of their aloha spirit and we will be creating paradise at our beach party."

But instead of the Hula, parties will be doing the Swim, the Bugalo and the Frug — and twisting with the king of Twist, Chubby

"We've built a 24-foot runway in front of the stage so entertainers can go out into the crowd," Hopp said. "The stage is decorated as a colorful South Seas island village scene. It's beautiful."

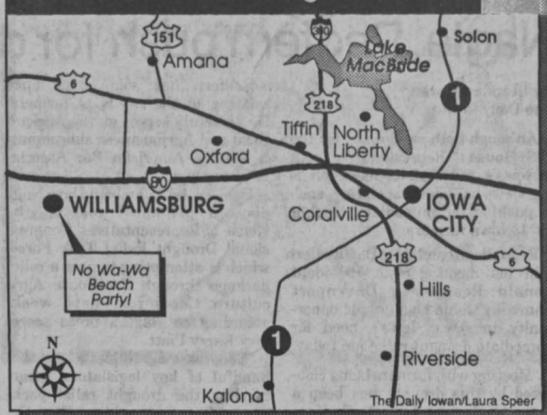

But if you don't want to dance, you won't be left out. The beach party offers something for everyone.

About 20 concession stands, with everything from tacos to wine coolers, will be set up around the beach, which, during the rest of the year, is a 40-acre horse pasture.

Five thousand gallons of water will fill a two-foot deep swimming pool, and those who want to swim are welcome. A designated "sprayer," perched in a lifeguard chair, will periodically spray the beach and everyone on it.

"You'll be surprised. If they are spraying, no matter what band is playing, people will flock to it," beach party organizer Kathy

More than $12,000 worth of prizes will be awarded throughout the weekend, from beach balls and towels to TWA airline tickets to Honolulu for the Seagram's Golden

Girl contest. "It's a family event," Hopp said. "We have everything from a kiddie's beach and kiddie games to a Boy Scout-hosted senior-citizens tent."

The party is 25 miles west of Iowa City, 7 miles south of Interstate 80 at the Williamsburg exit or two miles south of Williamsburg.

Festivities begin at 11 a.m. and end at 8 p.m. each day.

UI plans fire safety precautions

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

UI officials announced Thursday that new safety precautions will be implemented at the UI International Center.

In the past four months, four fires have erupted in or around the building. To help prevent future possible fires, the UI adopted the new safety measures.

Effective immediately, all entrances to the International Center will be locked at 5 p.m. and reopened at 6 a.m., Monday through Friday. The building will be closed at all times on weekends and holidays.

In addition, Campus Security will increase patrols of the building and the general area, UI Security Chief Don Hogan said.

"Whenever arson is committed in that size of a building, it would be hard to control without taking extra precautions," he said. "See Safety, Page 3"

Size of laser center could be reduced

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

A modified design plan calling for a 6,685-square-foot building reduction in the UI Laser Center will be revived at the state Board of Regents meeting in Okoboji today.

The design — which will be finalized if approved by the regents — eliminates nine of the original 78 laboratory modules, four of the enclosed offices and 10 of the open offices.

But with the exception of a shortened laboratory wing on the building's north side, the layout is fundamentally the same as the one presented to the regents last January.

"This has always been identified as an area that could be deleted," UI Director of Planning and Administration Richard Gibson said Thursday.

Gibson said there is room on the plot for additions to the building if needed and laboratories will probably be added to the original building in the future.

The revised plan will allow designers to stay within the budget approved by the board in December 1987, he said.

According to a UI report, the new plan's reduction of square footage will reduce construction costs by approximately $3.6 million.

"It was obvious from the mid-June estimate that the project could not be brought back into budget only by refinement of details and that some space would have to be cut from the project as well," the report stated.

The architects, after consulting with the board, decided to remove 36 feet from the length of the laboratory building plan and to delete office space.

About $1.5 million in funding has also been transferred from the construction, design and administration budget lines to provide equipment allowance that was not provided in the original budget.

The sophisticated equipment needed to conduct advanced laser research is estimated to cost from $14 million to $15 million. But the UI may seek federal funding, grants and contracts to help pay for such equipment.

Also adding considerable unexpected costs to the building are the volume of air needed to cool the laser laboratories, the special air duct and filter system necessary to maintain acceptable levels of air purity, a system to deliver chilled water to cool laser instruments and the exorbitant electricity input needed in the laboratories — about six times that required in a regular laboratory. The total of such special equipment is approximately $2 million.

Construction is scheduled to begin in November. No target date has been set for completion.

The construction administration and management contract has not yet been awarded, but the UI will today suggest that the board award it to the firm of CMPI. CMPI is currently completing the Union renovation project and has completed several other building projects at the UI.

Library elects board of trustee members

Thomas Gelman was elected president of the Iowa City Public Library Board of Trustees at the board's June meeting.

Gelman has served on the board of trustees since 1985. Before his appointment to the board, he served as president of the Friends of the Iowa City Public Library in 1984-85. During the past year Gelman served as one of two library trustees on the library's planning committee, which developed a five-year plan for the library.

Gelman is a member of the law firm of Phelan, Tucker, Boyle & Mullen.

Other offices for 1988-89 are Vice President Ellen Buchanan and Secretary/Treasurer B. Kent Swaim.

Buchanan is a storyteller and community volunteer and Swaim serves as the corporate financial officer for Economy and Banker's Advertising Companies.

Coralville library earns state's accreditation

The Coralville Public Library recently gained accreditation from the State Library of Iowa's Public Library Accreditation Program.

The Coralville library is one of 26 Iowa public libraries to become accredited during 1988. There are 82 accredited libraries in Iowa.

The library will receive a window decal recognizing it as an accredited library and an official certificate of accreditation signed by Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad, the state librarian and the chairman of the State Library Commission.

Each accredited library is reassessed biennially under the Iowa program, which is designed to promote uniform and quality library service throughout the state.

220 Iowa City families helped by Project AIDE

Project AIDE helped 220 needy Iowa City families during the first six months of 1988, the same number assisted during the period last year.

Project AIDE (Add In Dollars for Energy) helps needy people with emergency payment of energy bills or emergency repairs to heating equipment.

Since the project began in November 1982, a total of $115,505 has been donated and contributed to needy Iowa City families.

In Iowa City and the surrounding area, application for assistance should be made at the Iowa City Crisis Center, 321 First St.

UI study shows correlation between price and quality

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

According to a study recently published by two UI researchers, consumers who buy the latest camera or television set may not be getting their money's worth.

The study, conducted by UI marketing Professors David Curry and Peter Riesz, states that over a 20-year period, the price of most durable goods has gone down while the quality has generally improved.

Curry and Riesz found that during the period from 1961 to 1980, as prices of products used repeatedly over a number of years declined, the overall quality of most went up.

"We were interested in the behavior of prices," Curry said. "But more centrally we were interested in the relationship between price and quality."

Using product information and ratings from comparative product test studies conducted by the Consumer's Union and published in Consumer Reports magazine, they investigated the price trends of 4,000 brands of 62 different types of durable products such as televisions, cameras, lawn mowers, stereos, hair dryers and luggage.

The prices of the items were adjusted to 1980 dollars by using 1961-80 price indexes. Over time, the average prices of durable goods fell in almost 80 percent of product categories.

Former Iowa football player arrested on cocaine charges

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan
and The Associated Press

Former Iowa football player Dwight Sistrunk, who signed as a free agent with the Pittsburgh Steelers, was charged Thursday in Des Moines with possession of cocaine with intent to deliver.

The arrest was made at about 1:50 a.m. in Iowa City after federal agents said they found 5 ounces of cocaine and drug trafficking paraphernalia in his apartment.

Sistrunk bolted from the scene but was arrested a short time later, according to police reports.

Sistrunk, 23, was brought to Des Moines for his initial court appearance and then released on his promise to appear for future court dates. He will be allowed to attend tryout camps in Pittsburgh but otherwise must remain in Iowa.

The defensive back appeared in

"While prices have been going down, the overall quality of many product categories has gone up, so for some items, consumers have the best of both worlds," Riesz said.

After reviewing over 900 Consumer Report studies, the researchers developed a correlation coefficient, an index of how product prices correspond to quality over time.

Curry said that in about two-thirds of the products studied, the price-quality correlation declined, indicating that price is less reflective of quality over time.

The study states that, historically, product quality has been treated simply as the mirror image of price.

"If you buy a bicycle on the basis of price alone, usually the higher-priced ones are of better quality, but not always," Curry said.

Riesz said if a consumer waits to buy a new product, the technology matures, competition between producers increases, real prices go down and quality usually goes up.

"We learned that prices go down," Riesz said, "so there are rewards for people who don't go out and buy something just after it hits the market, but wait and learn about the product before they choose."

Curry said consumers also have to be careful in their planning and pre-purchase shopping behavior.

An uninformed consumer is one that doesn't know what to look for in a product and hasn't spent enough time investigating the product category, he said.

"It depends on how astute you are," Curry said. "If you're lazy (in your shopping behavior), you're hurting everybody else's chances for getting high quality, too."

Curry stressed the fact that manufacturers have a social contract with consumers.

"They are not our enemies. They took the financial risk in creating a product and coming up with something that people like and use," he said.

But, he added, consumers have leverage over manufacturers when they operate together through the marketplace.

Curry used Lee Iacocca as an example of how consumer use of mass pressure can convince a manufacturer to improve the quality of its products.

"In the last two or three years, he has been on television telling us about the improvements in their cars. This is a direct result of the problems that the company had — consumers turned their back and went to Ford and other corporations instead," he said.

Consumer pressure, he said, will force a company not only to talk about improved quality, but to do something about it.

"We're taking advantage of ourselves if we remain uninformed," he said. "It gives the manufacturer license to spend money in places other than product quality."

court wearing athletic tights, a sleeveless knit shirt and running shoes. He told a reporter he would have no comment on the case.

Sistrunk was brought to the court in handcuffs and chains although the restraints were removed before he faced Polk County District Court Judge Ray Fenton.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Joe Beck explained that a state judge heard the federal case because all of the federal judges in the district are attending a conference out of state.

Sistrunk, a 6-foot-1-inch, 183-pound native of Dayton, Ohio, is a nephew of former Oakland Raider defensive end Otis Sistrunk.

As a senior last year, Sistrunk was fourth on the team in number of tackles with 80, including 54 solo tackles. He also had five interceptions, seventh in the Big Ten. He was used as a substitute in his junior year when he had 16 tackles.

A complaint filed by federal drug agent Alvin Overbaugh stated that agents found about five ounces of white powder in a shaving kit in the apartment refrigerator.

"Also found was a bottle of inositol, a cutting agent, and other drug trafficking paraphernalia. The substance tested positive for the presence of cocaine," he said in the statement.

Fenton set a preliminary hearing for July 21 in U.S. Magistrate's Court in Des Moines. Sistrunk's attorney, Joe Johnston of Iowa City, also declined to comment.

"There's nothing to tell you at this point," he said.

Sistrunk was kept out of the Hawkeyes' appearance in the Holiday Bowl last season for disciplinary reasons that Coach Hayden Fry did not explain.

Nagle, Redfern push for drought aid

By Stephen Horan
The Daily Iowan

Although both candidates for the U.S. House of Representatives seat in Iowa's 3rd District have differing views on federal spending, each is pushing for immediate drought aid to Iowa farmers.

Republican candidate Don Redfern said his meeting with President Ronald Reagan in Davenport Thursday would be a unique opportunity to stress Iowa's need for immediate drought relief aid today.

"Meeting with farmers being clobbered by this drought has been a depressing experience," Redfern said, adding that something must be done to alleviate the situation.

Redfern has some experience relating to the needs of farmers. He presently serves on the Agricultural and Agribusiness subcommittee of the American Bar Association.

Democratic incumbent Dave Nagle plays a prominent role on the House of Representatives' Congressional Drought Relief Task Force, which is attempting to pass a relief package through the House Agriculture Committee next week, according to Nagle's press secretary Barry Piatt.

"Congressman Nagle is one of a handful of key legislators spearheading the drought relief package," Piatt said, adding that the drought task force was the first group to monitor the situation on a daily basis. Nagle is the only Iowan on the task force.

Redfern spent much of Thursday canvassing the Iowa City area. He expressed interest in debating Nagle, particularly on his role in federal spending. In Redfern's view, Iowa farmers and small business are paying the price in higher taxes and interest rates.

Redfern said he considers Nagle to be one of the biggest spenders in Congress.

"How can Dave Nagle brag about his efforts to reduce federal spending when in 18 opportunities he did not once vote for a deficit reduction?" he asked.

"He likes big spending," Redfern added.

UI researchers garner millions

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

UI researchers raised $115.1 million in grants and contracts during the 1987-88 academic year, a sum that contributed more than $400 million to Iowa's economy, UI officials announced at a press conference Thursday.

A multiplier effect developed by UI economists in 1984 measures the total impact of research grants and contracts on the state's economy. When the multiplier effect is considered, UI researchers contributed $408 million to the Iowa economy during the past year.

According to Duane Priestersbach, UI vice president for educational development and research, one of the latest schemes funded by the UI's research grant money is a project undertaken by two UI biochemical professors — Jonathan Dordick and David Rethwisch.

Recipients of a three-year, $148,649 grant, Dordick, a specialist in the field of enzymes, and Rethwisch, a specialist in the process of separation, are only steps away from perfecting the development of an enzyme-containing liquid membrane.

The membrane will be part of a system which will, according to the co-developers, have a great impact on chemical and drug companies in the future.

Dordick said the system will allow the purification of biological compounds such as amino acids in one step. Current systems involve many steps and are expensive.

It has been taught for many years that enzymes only work in aqueous, or water-based, solutions, Dordick said, but added they hope to prove that enzymes can also work in unconventional environments such as ethanol and gasoline.

"Our process is likely to attract major pharmaceutical companies," said Rethwisch. "It's a system that potentially could be used to produce l-dopa, a drug which is used in the treatment of Parkinson's disease."

Rethwisch added the process could be used to separate products from the fermentation process and that corn is a main feed used in fermentation.

"It will be a big boost for Iowa's economy," he said.

But Priestersbach said Rethwisch and Dordick have already started to contribute to Iowa's economy.

"These two young men are part of an eager faculty who not only intellectually enhance the university by teaching state of the art methods, but who also affect the economy of the state in a positive manner," said Priestersbach.

Dordick and Rethwisch are only two of the hundreds of researchers at the UI who bring in millions of dollars annually in grants and contracts.

Priestersbach is pleased with the influx of research dollars, but said he is also equally impressed with the impact the money has had on the students taught by researchers.

"These professors (Dordick and Rethwisch) combine lectures with hands-on experience in class," he said. "The students are learning up to date material and are actually taking part in the research itself."

Debbie Dry, a UI junior chemistry major from Ames, is one such student.

Dry recently received a grant that would enable her to help with Rethwisch's research — now she is working in the laboratories for the remainder of the summer.

"Actually what I'm doing is making membranes," said Dry. "I'm really learning a lot — it's a good experience because I'm interested in this research."

According to Priestersbach, the educational opportunities Dry and others have received stem from research.

"When faculty members like ours remain on the cutting edge of advances in their fields, their teaching remains on the cutting edge," he said.

"And it's also important to note that the research administrators don't secure the research dollars," Priestersbach said. "The professors are the individuals who have earned the grants and are seeking possibilities to move forward in their fields."

According to the National Science Foundation, Iowa ranks fourth in the Big Ten in federal research money per faculty member, behind the University of Wisconsin, the University of Michigan and Northwestern University.

The UI has ranked between 31st and 35th nationally in the past three years in total research dollars raised.

Coralville man wins jackpot

DES MOINES (AP)—A Coralville ice delivery man claimed his share of the latest Iowa lotto jackpot Thursday and joked that he won't have to scrimp anymore when cold weather puts a crimp in his business.

"You starve in the winter, but I don't think I'm going to anymore," said Dwayne Dahnke, 60, an employee of Wick's Ice Co. who has been delivering ice for 40 years.

Dahnke and a Wisconsin dairy farmer identified Thursday as Gary Oswald, 28, will share the jackpot of almost $4.5 million. Oswald, of Bridgeport, Wis., told lottery officials he would collect his winnings today.

Dahnke said Thursday that the winnings actually belong to his wife, Glenna. The winning combination came on an "easy pick" selection with numbers picked at random by a computer. Dahnke said he bought the ticket for his wife without telling her.

The ice man said he's had quite a lucky streak lately, winning several $50 prizes in the pull-tab lottery game. He said his wife told him, "You buy 'em this week, you've been winning all the time."

He said he originally planned to retire in two years but would probably quit soon now that his financial future is secure.

The other winner, Oswald, bought his winning combination at Mason's Mini-Mart in Marquette, Iowa. There was no answer at his home telephone Thursday afternoon, but the co-owner of Mason's, Jan Mason, said the winner was understandably excited.

"He was excited, but he didn't scream and holler like some people do," she said.

Her store will claim a $22,500 windfall for selling Oswald his winning ticket, or about 1 percent of the winner's share of the prize. The money is not subtracted from the winner's prize.

Mason said Oswald won his prize when he bought one "Pick 8" ticket. A Pick 8 costs $28 and allows a player to play any combination of eight numbers. Oswald had recently become a regular Lotto ticket buyer at the store, Ms. Mason said, but did not always buy a "Pick 8" ticket.

The winning numbers were 6, 10, 14, 32, 34 and 35.

Low rainfall, heat kill thousands of state fish

DES MOINES (AP)—An Iowa fisheries specialist said Thursday the death of about 2,000 fish below the dam on the Shell Rock River near Nora Springs in northern Iowa may be related to the continuing drought.

Jim Wahl of the Iowa Department of Natural Resources said fish in Iowa rivers are especially vulnerable because of low water levels and high temperatures.

Although heavy thunderstorms dropped heavy rain on some areas of the state Thursday, the 30-day forecast for drought-parched Iowa calls for normal or above normal temperatures and a 55- to 60-percent probability for below normal precipitation, the National Weather Service said.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's climate analysis center said the drought is shifting eastward and long-term drought conditions now cover a much larger area of the Great Lakes region and the Ohio and Tennessee valleys.

Wahl said the source of the fish kill has not been identified and pollution could have contributed to the kill.

Today's forecast said highs will be in the mid-90s to 100 degrees with the heat index approaching 110 in most sections of the state.

The forecast for Iowa for Saturday, Sunday and Monday called for a continuation of the heat and humidity with high temperatures in the 90s.

Oklahoman reported dead locates son after 9 years

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—An Oologah woman, reunited with her 11-year-old son in May after courts assumed she was dead for nine years, is working to save other parents from similar ordeals.

Laura Dye, 35, spent the past several weeks talking to government employees and officials of private organizations that deal with missing children, trying to determine what is wrong with the system.

"You can't believe how much I've changed over the past nine years, from a mousy person to someone who will knock on doors," Dye told The Tulsa Tribune in a story published Thursday about the search for her son.

"She had to do her own investigation," said Oologah Police Chief Mel Lunsford, who, as a 20-year veteran of the Los Angeles Police Department, helped Dye trace her son to California.

California courts for years had her on file as having died in a fiery traffic accident in Muscatine, Iowa, based on information provided by her husband, William Dye, Mrs. Dye said.

really can't release too much information regarding the new measures because this is still under investigation.

"Before we just had normal building checks, checking the perimeter of the building and locking and unlocking doors," Hogan said. "The building always was locked up at night, but at 10 p.m., later than the new hours."

Of the four recent fires, there's a possibility that three were started by arson, Hogan said. Most of the fires occurred in the evening hours, he added.

The first fire in March was in a secretary's office. It started when a stack of papers was left on a radiator. An arsonist set the April 4 fire in the main lounge of the building which caused $250,000 damage. Two trees behind the center were set on fire about three weeks ago, and a July 5 fire was started in a cement storage room in the basement of the center. The International Center is one of 102 UI buildings identified between 1979 and 1986 as having fire safety deficiencies.

Several fire-safety improvements in the building were completed in 1987, which included removing asbestos, enclosing stairwells and covering asbestos pipes.

But other fire-safety problems in the building remain uncorrected, including fire alarms, openings — areas in walls, ceilings or floors that have not been sealed — and exit lights.

"We're now considering relooking at the priority on fire alarm installation within our available funds," said UI Director of Planning and Administrative Services Richard Gibson.

The Iowa City Fire Marshal's Office and two detectives from Campus Security are investigating the fires.

Redefined rights

The Indiana Court of Appeals on Tuesday ruled that a husband cannot interfere with his wife's right to have an abortion during the first trimester of her pregnancy. The decision came after Erin Andrew Conn sought to prohibit his wife, Jennifer Ann Conn, from aborting her pregnancy.

The court, in making this decision, quoted heavily from two past Supreme Court decisions which have served in a variety of cases involving a woman's right to have an abortion. These cases, Roe vs. Wade and Planned Parenthood of Central Missouri vs. Danford, have been instrumental in affecting decisions made subsequent to 1973.

In Roe vs. Wade, the Supreme Court ruled that state statutes prohibiting abortion were unconstitutional. In Planned Parenthood vs. Danford, it was established that spousal approval is not a prerequisite for a woman's choice to abort pregnancy. By system of precedent, the Court of Appeals ruled 3-0 that Conn has the right to have an abortion without the consent of her husband.

This ruling makes logical sense and is in line with the philosophy that a woman has the right to make personal decisions, without state interference and imposed standards, concerning what to do with her own body. But the written summation of the court's decision as read by Judge Robert W. Neal is offensive and dangerous in its wording and implication. The statement reads, "We hold that Erin has no right to veto Jennifer's decision to have an abortion as such decision concerns only her."

That Jennifer has the right to make a medical decision based on her own morals, convictions and situational factors is certainly valid. But to deny all responsibility, accountability and the right of the potential father to provide even minimal input into the decision-making process entails myriad legal and moral conflicts. If indeed the wording of this decision by the Court of Appeals is to be taken literally and serve as precedent for future cases, the legal rights and roles of prospective fathers have been radically altered.

Overdue action

The House of Representatives this week passed legislation that would limit the role of Congress in the closing of military bases. The Senate has already approved a similar measure. The House bill would require a Pentagon commission to recommend by Dec. 31 of this year which military bases should be closed. The secretary of defense would then have 15 days to decide which bases, if any, to close. The secretary's decisions could be blocked only by a specific vote of Congress, which the president could veto. If the House and Senate can agree on a compromise version of the bill, the measure is expected to save $2 billion to $5 billion each year.

Such legislation is long overdue. For too long, obsolete and unneeded military bases have been kept open at great expense, mainly because members of Congress fought against the closing of bases located in their own districts. This pork-barrelling was good for votes at home but bad for the taxpayers. By sending the matter out of its own hands, Congress is shielding itself from the pressures and temptations which accompany such lucrative decisions.

One would hope that this measure could serve as a model to limit other Pentagon spending. An enormous amount of money could be saved if the Pentagon had veto power to reject equipment and weapons systems it did not need or want. Further, that equipment which was promoted by those standing to realize a profit from its production would be more objectively scrutinized. The military-industrial complex exerts far too much political influence in this nation. This influence could be diminished if Congress took more steps to shield itself from tempting pork-barrel politics.

No kidding

A federal judge threatens an attorney with imprisonment because she does not use her married name. The same judge finds her co-counsel in contempt when he comes to her defense.

No, this isn't a script idea for "L.A. Law." This scenario actually unfolded last week in a Pittsburgh courtroom.

While presiding over a race discrimination suit, Senior U.S. District Judge Hubert Teitelbaum told lawyer Barbara Wolvovitz that no one can "use that Ms." in his courtroom. When Wolvovitz protested, Teitelbaum replied, "What if I call you sweetie?" And if that wasn't enough, when Wolvovitz' co-counsel, Jon Pushinsky, protested, Teitelbaum found him in contempt of court.

At first, there is only disbelief. But then, sadly, one realizes that it's really not so incredible. After all, Operation Greylord really happened. And one study actually found a strong correlation between skin color and death row. And Edwin Meese is attorney general. Face it — "justice for all" is turning into a great big travesty before our collective eyes.

Teitelbaum, who makes Robert Bork look inviting, was appointed to the federal bench in 1970 by President Richard Nixon. He is 73 years old. Thus, he has enjoyed a long legal career, one in which he has undoubtedly presided over hundreds of cases. It should strike fear into the darkest heart that this man represents justice in America. He would have done well for himself during the Inquisition.

Something fishy's going on

In the wake of the Iran Air tragedy, something is beginning to smell fishy in the Persian Gulf, a body of water columnist William Greiner has aptly termed "Shiite's Creek."

Americans love a good conspiracy, and this latest incident in the gulf only reaffirms that fact. Polls show a majority of Americans feel the captain of the Vincennes did the right thing in downing a civilian airliner on the basis of "electronic intelligence." Most of these people also place the majority of the blame for the incident on Iran. So check out these theories, conspiracy fans.

When the downing of the plane was announced on July 4, the death toll was placed at 290. However, as the bodies began to be removed from the Persian Gulf, Iranian television showed only clean, naked, intact, floating corpses being recovered. If these bodies were the victims of a missile attack, wouldn't they be burned, in pieces and sinking below the surface? All that remained of the airliner was chunks of twisted and scarred metal. After all, even if the passengers survived being trapped in a tin can during an explosion, they fell at least 6,000 feet into rock-hard water. The impact alone would be enough to sever limbs from torsos.

There has also surfaced the "two transponder theory." Military intelligence sources claim that the Airbus 300 carried two transponders, one set on military frequencies, the other on civilian. When taking off, the airliner used the civilian frequencies; then, over the gulf, it switched to the military frequencies to dupe the seaman radar operations technician in charge of hostile intent surveillance into sounding the alarm.

The only thing this theory proves is that high-tech equipment can be rendered useless by good of fashioned ingenuity. For all its sophistication, the $1.2 billion Vincennes could have achieved the same result by posting Tattoo in the crow's nest with a good spyglass ("...de airbus, boss, de airbus!").

After the tragedy, funerals were held throughout Iran, most teeming with anti-American sentiment. Thousands of people took to the streets carrying coffins draped with Iranian flags. In some of the photographs of funeral processions, the coffins were held aloft by young boys and old men — the war with Iran has taken most able-bodied men to the front.

Anyone who has ever been a pallbearer knows that the human body is not very light, especially when encased in a box. But in Iran, coffins were passed among the crowd like fabulous babes at an Iowa football game.

And finally, after a week of vehement calls for vengeance for the actions of "The Great Satan," Hashemi Rafsanjani, the speaker of the Iranian Parliament, begged the people of Iran to show restraint so as "not to do as the U.S. did." His speech on July 8 directly contradicted the vows of revenge made by the Ayatollah Khomeini and other radical Shiites less than a week before. Who's running that country anyway? If the Ayatollah is the supreme ruler, why did Rafsanjani contradict him?

It certainly appears that America's ultra-sophisticated, trillion-dollar Navy was duped into responding to a threat that, on the surface, seemed lethal. But upon further analysis, it is really so far-fetched to think that the Ayatollah might have martyred a crew — note the word CREW — to fly the airliner into airspace where it might provoke a naval response?

What better way to expose "The Great Satan" for the military adventurer that he is, than to trick him into an act of violence against civilians?

And is it equally far-fetched to think that Iran — which has suffered over a million deaths in its eight-year war with Iraq and has plenty of corpses on hand — might plant a few in the gulf to make the disaster more repugnant to television viewers around the world?

Add to this fact that the plane went down in Iranian waters, waters that Iran prohibits Western journalists from entering, and you have the making of a pretty darn good conspiracy.

The net effects of the disaster are threefold. First, Iran has pulled off a major public relations coup. The actions of the American Navy have provoked global sympathy toward Iran and made the Americans look like the bad guys.

Second, the actual worth of the Reagan administration's huge military build-up begins to look paltry when the sophisticated radar on the Vincennes can't even distinguish a French-made airliner from an American-made fighter. Obviously the "shield of the Republic," as the Aegis class cruiser has been called, is more like a sieve than a shield. And these are the same advanced weapons touted as the precursors to Star Wars technology. Feel safer now?

And finally, the gulf disaster proves once and for all that it is time for the American military to be extricated from the gulf. Let Iran wage its insane crusade against Iraq. Let the Japanese, West Germans and French guard their own oil. Let the Saudis, the Kuwaitis, et. al., put all of their advanced American weapons to use in defending themselves. Before we as a people have to make another judgment as to the "goodness" or "rightness" of blasting a civilian airliner out of the sky, or question whether a conspiracy against America really exists, let's leave the Iranians alone before we sail even further up "Shiite's Creek" without a paddle.

We must act now to save Union Field

The UI has many things to be proud of on its campus. From Hancher Auditorium to Carver-Hawkeye Arena, there are many fine structures that dot the campus. Well, perhaps dot is not the proper word. While these buildings and others like them are put to good use, the fact is that there is little else on this campus besides buildings. What little green space there is used by countless students every day. What is tragic is that we are going to lose a very valuable piece of space for a very long time.

The university has decided to bless all of us with a $25 million laser building to be located in the parking lot just north of the Union. While this is old news to many people, there were many who were shocked to hear of the fate of Union Field, which is being cut in half to make up for lost parking space. This parking will be for faculty and staff only during the day, and while this lot is supposed to be temporary, things like this have a way of becoming permanent.

We can let those in charge know that Union Field matters to a great many people and something should be done to preserve it.

The loss of Union Field will hit sometime this fall (the university has not given a date for construction of the lot and destruction of the field), just in time to upset football and soccer games. Those clubs and organizations that used Union Field will be in for a rude surprise once the lot goes in. The argument is made that only half of the field will be taken up, but the problem is that the same number of students will have to share 50 percent less space than before.

The whole problem could have been avoided if the laser center had been located at the Oakdale Campus. There is plenty of space for the laser center there, as opposed to an already crowded campus. The basic idea behind Oakdale was to provide necessary space for the university to grow. This space has been overlooked, and the decision should be reconsidered.

Students and all concerned persons need to ask themselves if anything can be done to save Union Field. To address this problem, people can make a statement to the administration by signing a petition to save Union Field. The administration needs to hear that there is opposition, sizable opposition, to turning Union Field into a parking lot. We all need to realize that if we do nothing at all, then the field will surely be lost. We can let those in charge know that Union Field matters to a great many people and something should be done to preserve it.

The bottom line is, if you like to throw a football or Frisbee, kick around a hacky sack, play softball or soccer, fly a kite or just hang around on a grassy field, then you need to sign our petition. We are asking the university to keep a piece of land that is used almost year-round by a wide and diverse body of students, faculty and members of the community. Yes, we do have many things to be proud of on our campus, and one of those is Union Field. If you feel the same way, then please, sign our petition to save it. Petitions are available at the Student Senate Office and there will be petitioners on the Pentacrest this week. We need to act before the bulldozers start.

Expressing dismay

To the Editor:

One of the pleasures of reading a newspaper involves encountering attitudes and opinions divergent from your own. They present a challenge, stimulation, the possibility of change. However, I don't believe a responsible paper will continue to run material equally inane as it is offensive. I'm speaking of the Scott Raab column (The Daily Iowan, July 11). This offering, with its reference to schizophrenics and Orientals, is debased and stupid. If this is intended to approximate political satire, it falls flat. This writing does not seem to address or represent anything besides the author's silly arrogance. I am dismayed that The Daily Iowan continues to showcase this sort of vapid posturing.

Facts needed

To the Editor:

I understand the fears that editorial writer John Nichols has about Jesse Jackson harming the Democratic Party in the November elections (The Daily Iowan). I take exception, however, to Nichols' line of reasoning concerning Jackson's efforts to become the vice-presidential nominee.

Nichols says Jackson's statement that he would accept the nomination if it was offered to him was "inappropriate" and "ridiculous." It would appear that Nichols is upset because Jackson made this statement publicly. But had Bentzen made the same statement would Nichols take exception? He shouldn't. Such a statement merely indicates a candidate is in the field of possible choices and would accept an offer.

Nichols goes on to say that "Jackson has no excuses for... putting pressure on Michael Dukakis." Nichols says, "This has never been done in the history of American politics." I doubt that this is true, and I also doubt Nichols commands a knowledge of history sufficient to justify his statement.

What is most distressing about Nichols' editorial is the form of the piece itself. Nichols says Jackson's actions were "ridiculous" but he never backs that up with fact, historical evidence or logical reasoning.

The beauty of good editorial writers is that even when you don't agree with them, you cannot refute their position without first attacking the arguments on which it is based. With Nichols, you either accept his theory that Jackson should not pressure Dukakis, or you reject it. He could have made his point in one sentence.

Whether Nichols realizes it or not, most people believe statements of fact that appear in print. When Nichols says that pressuring candidates "has never been done before in the history of American politics" by a potential running mate, and that traditionally, decisions as to the vice-presidential slot have "been made in a vacuum," he is wrong.

When he says that Jackson should not pressure Dukakis, I can accept his opinion. But when an editorial writer makes a statement clearly intended as a fact, he had better possess the information to back it up. Nichols' statements were unprofessional and unsubstantiated and I expect more from The Daily Iowan.

Jesse for defense

To the Editor:

For God's sake, Jesse, put a lid on the vice-presidential bid, will you? Why don't you hold out for an important job — say secretary of defense? "Jesse Jackson — secretary of defense." Just saying that gives me a wonderful mind-movie of all those frigging generals and bribers and bribes running for cover like cockroaches who have just gotten a whiff of Raid.

Armenians stage massive protest, strike

MOSCOW — Thousands of Armenians stayed away from work Thursday to press for transfer to Armenia of a region in neighboring Azerbaijan and 150,000 held a rally for the cause, activists in the southern republic said.

"The people are still not prepared to work," said a Communist Party worker in the disputed southern territory of Nagorno-Karabakh, which has been disrupted by strikes by ethnic Armenians for two months. Strikes in Armenia itself began July 4.

Three-quarters of the territory's 160,000 residents are ethnic Armenians, but the region, roughly the size of Delaware, was assigned to Azerbaijan in 1923.

Police in Moscow arrested 15 protesters who unfurled the Latvian flag and several protest banners near the Kremlin. They were demonstrating on behalf of Baltic nationalities and Ukrainians as well as Armenians.

They called on the republic's 10 deputies to the nation's central parliament to press for annexation of Nagorno-Karabakh, he said.

Armenians believe the Presidium, or executive committee, of the Supreme Soviet, the highest legislative body in the Soviet government, will meet Monday to consider the Nagorno-Karabakh question.

Palestinian guilty of passport fraud

ATHENS, Greece — A Palestinian believed linked to a deadly attack on a Greek cruise ship was convicted on false passport charges Thursday, clearing the way for a U.S. extradition request to be heard.

Greek authorities have said the submachine gun and hand grenade raid on the City of Poros cruise ship may have been aimed at hijacking the vessel in an effort to gain Mohammed Rashid's release from prison.

Rashid, 34, a self-proclaimed "fighter" for the Palestine Liberation Organization, is wanted by the United States for murder, accused of planting a bomb aboard a Pan Am jumbo jet in 1982 that killed a Japanese teen-ager and injured 15 people.

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said in Washington on Thursday, "We strongly believe that the most effective way to fight terrorism in this case is to expeditiously begin extradition proceedings against Rashid."

Woman allegedly abandons baby in lavatory

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. — A New York City woman who allegedly gave birth in an airliner restroom and left her newborn daughter in a mass of blood-soaked towels pleaded innocent Thursday to a charge of child endangerment.

Christina Marie Locasto, 24, appeared in an orange jail jumpsuit at her arraignment on the felony charge in San Mateo County Municipal Court. If convicted, she could face up to six years in prison.

Earlier Thursday, Locasto had been booked for investigation of attempted murder.

"To prove attempted murder we have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt an intent to kill, that by her act she intended that the child would die," said Assistant District Attorney Stephen Wagstaffe. "But the evidence now before us does not establish that."

Detectives identified Locasto, married and the mother of a young daughter, through the passenger list, and she turned herself in Thursday morning, a day after arriving in San Francisco from Newark, N.J., said San Mateo County Sheriff's Lt. Mike Dow.

"We had information she gave birth to the baby on the East Coast before the plane took off, hid the baby... disembarked the aircraft and went to visit relatives," he said. "Which means the baby was beneath the sink for over six hours."

Dukakis aide sends apology to Jackson

CHICAGO (AP) — Jesse Jackson accepted an apology Thursday from a Michael Dukakis aide over the handling of the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket and asked former President Jimmy Carter to mediate tensions between the two camps.

Jackson sounded a conciliatory note after the call from Paul Broutas, Dukakis' campaign chairman, who offered an apology and detailed a series of mistakes that led to a delay in Jackson's being told that Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen had been selected Dukakis' running mate.

"We accept that explanation," Jackson said at a news conference before leaving on a three-day bus caravan to the national convention in Atlanta.

Asked about Carter's response to his request, Jackson said, "He wants to serve in any way he can." Dukakis' campaign manager Susan Estrich said she knew nothing about the proposal.

Dukakis himself did not apologize during a telephone call Wednesday, but Jackson said he did not ask for, and would not seek, a "personal apology."

Jackson learned of Dukakis' selection of Bentsen from reporters as he arrived in Washington Tuesday morning. He received a call from Dukakis about an hour later and before the public announcement that afternoon.

Dukakis said Wednesday he tried unsuccessfully to reach Jackson but word got out.

Dukakis' plans for a show of unity have been clouded by Jackson's hints that he might challenge the selection of the Texas senator. Jackson supporters have threatened protests, and some Dukakis backers also criticized the treatment of Jackson by the Dukakis camp.

Bush speaks to U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Vice President George Bush's speech to the U.N. Security Council, voicing compassion for victims of a U.S.-downed Iranian airliner while insisting that Iran share responsibility, gave the vice president a forum for displaying traits he has hoped to project in his White House campaign.

The high-profile address on Thursday, in which Bush looked straight at his Iranian accuser and told him "of course we care," was viewed by aides as a demonstration of his leadership, compassion and foreign-policy credentials.

Bush's expressions of regret went further than his past reaction to the downing of the plane, which he previously had called "just an unhappy incident" while telling audiences "life goes on."

"Anytime you can go and speak forcefully about bringing peace to this part of the world, it's worth doing," said Bush chief of staff Craig Fuller afterwards. "He didn't do it for political reasons. But I do not believe it will be harmful politically."

Bush, who was U.S. ambassador to the United Nations from 1971 to 1973, denounced as "offensive and absurd" Iranian suggestions that the downing of Iran Air 655 containing 290 people on July 3 was intentional or reckless.

And he told the world organization Iran "must bear a substantial measure of responsibility for what has happened" by refusing to divert the airliner away from a combat zone.

"There are three ways for Iran to avoid future tragedies," Bush said. "Keep airliners away from combat, stop attacking innocent ships. Or better still, the best way is peace."

He called for Iran to immediately adhere to a U.N. resolution calling for a cease-fire in the region.

At the same time, the vice president said this nation's reaction to the accidental downing of the plane "fills our hearts with sorrow" that "transcends political differences and boundaries."

Aides said that Bush's presentation was written by three or four speechwriters, with most of the ideas for its wording coming from him. The text was coordinated with both the State Department and the National Security Council before Bush delivered it, the aides said.

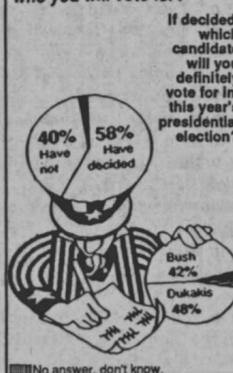

Departing from his prepared text, Bush looked across the semi-circular council table at Iranian Foreign Minister Ali-Akbar Velayati and said in measured tones, "Of course we feel badly about it, of course we have compassion. Of course we care."

"Contrast this with the willful detention, in inhuman conditions, of Americans and others held hostage against their will."

Ortega: Aid to Contras legitimizes civil war

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega said Thursday that any U.S. decision to resume military aid to Nicaraguan rebels would amount to "newly legitimizing" a war in which a truce was declared months ago.

A source close to the rebels, known as Contras, said in the Dominican Republic that the leadership would meet in that island nation's capital, Santo Domingo, this weekend to reorganize the movement.

Ortega spoke to journalists in Campoa, 58 miles northeast of Managua, where he inaugurated an agricultural fair.

"We hope they do not commit this madness, since it would be newly legitimizing" the civil war that began seven years ago, he said. Ortega's remarks were broadcast on the radio, Voice of Nicaragua.

The U.S. House of Representatives voted 385-18 on Thursday to condemn Ortega's leftist Sandinista government for "brutal suppression of basic human rights."

A similar resolution that passed the Senate by a 91-4 vote Wednesday night included the possibility of renewed military aid to the Contras if Sandinista policy did not change.

House members urged Central American leaders in their resolution "to convene immediately to assess the conditions in Nicaragua described in this resolution."

They condemned the Sandinistas for arresting 43 people, including opposition leaders, and closing the opposition newspaper La Prensa and the Roman Catholic Church radio station this week.

Nicaraguan police courts sentenced four opposition political leaders Wednesday to the maximum six months in jail each. Leading opponents of the government said their fight had just begun.

The source in Santo Domingo said more than 50 prominent Contras were expected to attend the weekend meeting, including Adolfo Calero, political head of the organization, and military coordinator Enrique Bermudez.

Internal disputes, notably between Bermudez and the movement's political leaders, have divided the U.S.-supported rebels in recent weeks. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said new leadership was expected to be chosen at the meeting.

Human rights groups say Nicaraguan police courts are arbitrary and unconstitutional. The four people sentenced Wednesday were among the 43 arrested when authorities stopped an anti-government demonstration Sunday in Nandaime, south of the capital.

"This is a very hard dictatorship," Enrique Bolanos said in an interview. He is president of the Superior Private Enterprise Council, an opposition group.

Hare-bashing critic answers: what's wrong with Roger?

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Why bother saying anything about "Who Framed Roger Rabbit?" — you've heard everything you could possibly want to hear about the mega box-office smash feel-good summer fun flick. You've seen this goofy little poor man's Bugs on everything from McDonald's and Coca-Cola commercials (a particularly frightening combination) to key chains and coffee mugs. You know all about the studios, the producers, the directors, the animation, the cameos and every other trivial detail about the film.

"Who Framed Roger Rabbit? Who cares! Enough already! By the time you actually get to the theater, you've seen all the best scenes, heard about all the verbal and visual jokes and read a thousand magazine articles about how they were created. Ninety percent of the film's appeal is the surprise and wonder that the amazing mingling of live and animated action is supposed to produce.

Well, it is amazing and it did produce a gasp of joy and wonder — two months ago, when we started seeing the movie's trailers. Oh sure, Roger's cute and silly and all that, but for $40 million we should get more than "cute" and "silly" — for $40 million that damn bunny oughta jump off the screen and mix you Scotch and sodas.

"Roger Rabbit" seemed so exciting in previews because the film's premise offered more than just visual wonder. The film was setting out not only to combine cartoon characters with live actors, but to also merge the cartoon and detective film genres. The comic potential of such a crossover seemed foolproof. But we must never underestimate the proof of fools in Hollywood. After all the time and money and hoopla, "Roger Rabbit" winds up a one-joke movie with no punch line.

"Roger Rabbit" has some sight gags and generates some giggles. But, aside from the opening 10 minutes (presented as a real cartoon — holy oxymorons!) and a hilarious death scene near the end, nothing in the film comes close to the kind of surreal silliness that the hard-boiled/loony-toon combo should have produced.

Roger Rabbit is threatened by Judge Doom (Christopher Lloyd) with "The Dip" in Touchstone's "Who Framed Roger Rabbit."

Movies

"Roger Rabbit" is not a labor of love, nor a work of art. It is a coolly calculated conglomeration of popular box-office button-pushing that the filmmakers hope will push all the right buttons with all the right audience age groups, breaking all the right box-office records and putting their rotten little rodent right up there with such almost-human American pop culture stars as Benji, E.T., Max Headroom, Spuds MacKenzie, Pee Wee Herman and Michael Jackson.

It's not that "Roger Rabbit" is a bad movie — it isn't — but it's just such a disappointing one. The human-cartoon juxtapositions of worlds held so much promise for more than just visual gags. Maybe "Roger Rabbit" pays nice homage to the classical cartoons of animation's Golden Age. But, unfortunately, this means the writers don't bother to invent any new laughs. To see what "Roger Rabbit" could have been, find a copy of Warner Bros.' hilarious tongue-in-cheek special two years ago that had real-life stars such as Bill

Murray, David Bowie and Jeremy Irons discussing the personal lives and Hollywood scandals surrounding Bugs, Daffy, et. al. Or the SCTV skit that had Quincy, M.E., doing an autopsy on Sylvester the Cat in order to determine the seemingly indestructible feline's cause of death.

Both those pieces juggled human and cartoon realities without the use of any expensive or revolutionary animation effects — they pulled off the joke using only clever writing and performances. It's sad — if not criminal — that when "Roger Rabbit" finally came along with the big budget and technical ability to play the joke out visually, it failed, choosing to rest on its animated laurels rather than bothering to raise the script to an equally impressive level.

But what difference does it make? We'll all go see "Roger Rabbit" 100 times this summer; the rabbit's face will continue to turn up on toothpaste and toilet seats; the film will break all existing box-office records as well as create new ones; and in two years we'll have an even higher-priced sequel that will carefully repeat everything that worked in the first one. We can only hope it'll be titled "Bring Me the Head of Roger Rabbit."

Soprano muses on career

NEW YORK (AP)—Lyric soprano Benita Valente gets the kind of reviews for ravishing tone and precise, yet effortless, delivery that superstars usually receive.

But her name is not a household word. Still, she's philosophical about it.

"I've had a wonderful life and most wonderful career," she said. "I've done most of the things I want to do, worked with wonderful people mostly, done good repertory and made good music. That's all so satisfying."

"I've been able to live a life, got married, had my child. My career would never have been as good if I hadn't gotten married. I think one needs to live a full life."

She was in Paris in June to sing in Brahms' "Requiem" with the Orchestra of Paris. Since 1984 she has been making recordings "fast and furious" — lieder, Christmas music with the Philadelphia Singers, Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" with the Atlanta Symphony, Haydn's "Seven Last Words of Christ" with the Julliard String Quartet.

She also had one big, splashy triumph at the Metropolitan Opera in 1983 in Handel's "Rinaldo." It was a decade after she had made her Met debut.

"Most of the things I've been involved in, I've had a really good time," she said in an interview. "I like to work with good people. I like to be creative and work off other people. Doing opera is my favorite thing because I have a lot of company."

"I love the recital repertory. It's the most lonely of the work I do. On last fall's recital tour I took my son Peter with me. He took a semester off from Marlboro College in Vermont. We had such a ball."

A native of Delano, Calif., Benita Valente was shy as a child.

"Music drew me out of myself," she said. "I couldn't sing in front of my family. I could sing in the next room. I found my outlet was being expressive on the stage."

Her high-school music teacher, Chester Hayden, taught her stage deportment and how to dress and groom. He sent her to audition for coaching by Lotte Lehmann and for Curtis.

"Rinaldo" at the Metropolitan Opera was a gift from the Canadian government for the Bicentennial. The production was put together and performed first in Ottawa.

"Marilyn Horne went to bat for (bass) Sam Ramey and me, although I had been singing at the Met already," Valente said.

"We sold out every night and people were clamoring to get in. The Met never repeated it. We always had the feeling they felt like 'Rinaldo' was pushed down their throats. They acted like we didn't exist, Marilyn included."

The best of the ecstatic reviews were for Ramey and Valente. Did it make a difference in her career? "It wasn't a steppingstone to getting any further at the Met. It could have been a detriment."

"I'm virtually unknown in Italy. I spent 25 years becoming an American singer," she said. "The Met 'Rinaldo' did lead to singing in 'Rinaldo' in a tour of northern houses in Italy. I sang in Handel's 'Samson' in Florence, and conductor Riccardo Muti's wife heard me and told him how good I was. I work with him now and he always says his wife heard me first."

As for recordings, she says, "If you're getting singing jobs, you think they'll come. But you have to set the time aside for them, deliberately."

I never took the time before. Now I feel that I should be documented."

'Mermaids' is warm, human

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

You can smell a bit of a trend forming over at the Bijou these days. One can hardly leave the theater without the words "art," "angst" and "eccentric" popping out of one's mouth. This week's example, "I've Heard the Mermaids Singing," follows in the footsteps of magic and whimsy previously laid down this summer by films such as "Housekeeping" and "Good Morning, Babylon."

"Mermaids," a Canadian independent film written, produced and directed by Patricia Rozema, listens as Polly (Sheila McCarthy) tells of the rise and fall of her relationship with an art gallery curator (Paule Baillargeon). Polly is "organizationally impaired," awkwardly litting through life with a daydreaming lack of attention to the rules of the game. She finds in Gabrielle, the curator, not only an intellectual idol, but also an emotional beacon. But as the tale unfolds, narrative and emotional complications arise. There you have it — art, eccentricity and angst.

Rozema's vision in "Mermaids" is delicate — so far from heavy-handed that the film is nearly two-thirds over before you realize it's started. Like Polly, "Mermaids" sets out to accomplish something, but isn't all that worried about getting it done in a hurry. In one poignant moment, Polly tells the audience (hearing her story through a videotaped monologue), "You don't care how I felt, you just want to know what happens." Fortunately, "Mermaids" carefully balances both, drawing from the film's characters a beauty that transcends the usual romantic, sexual and philosophical trappings of cinematic explorations of love.

"I've Heard the Mermaids Singing" is not a "women's film" — it does not preach, nor does it address ideas and issues relevant only to females. Lesbians in the film are not there to shock, provoke or raise consciousness — they are there simply as characters in a story. And Polly's problems and pains are not "female," but merely human.

If all this sounds horribly cerebral and overwrought, it should be pointed out that with Polly's narrative guidance the film never bogs or wallows. McCarthy gives Polly a wide-eyed, unguarded innocence, showing us a world view eccentric only in its incommunicability to the world. Not only does the film gently coax humor from Polly's naivete, but it also draws equal amusement from the "normal" world around her, hilariously mocking without exaggeration the intellectual doublespeak of the world of modern art.

If "I've Heard the Mermaids Singing" has anything resembling a flaw, it's that the film seems to be wandering down a dramatic dead end. Polly is telling the story of the curator and her, but at times the tale, no matter how heartfelt, feels pointless. But again, trust and patience in Rozema and her cinematic vision pays off as "Mermaids" conclusion provides not only denouement and a nifty tying together of narrative structure, but emotional and thematic cohesion as well.

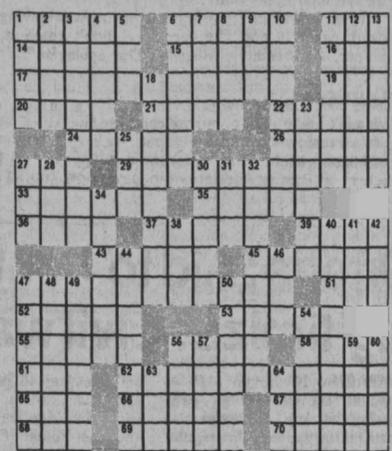

In doing so, this small, quiet film takes on a sheen of brilliance that belies its humble surface.

Cubs trade Martinez to Montreal

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Martinez was traded by the Chicago Cubs to the Montreal Expos Thursday for Mitch Webster in a swap of outfielders.

"It was the fact Martinez never learned how to read pitchers and could not steal bases that led us to this decision," Cubs Manager Don Zimmer said. "We want to take advantage of Webster's switch-hitting ability and we think he can steal more bases than Martinez."

Zimmer said the Cubs had offered Martinez to Montreal three weeks ago.

"I know I'll get a chance to play every day, but I'm still in a state of shock, even though I know I have to accept it," Martinez said.

Webster is batting .255 with two homers, 13 runs batted in and 12 stolen bases. Martinez is batting .254 with four homers and 34 stolen bases.

"I wasn't really surprised," Webster said in Montreal. "I'm happy I'm going somewhere where I'll get a chance to play. The change of scenery should do me good. Chicago is a great baseball city. It would be nice to play there."

Schmidt passes Mantle on home run list

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies third baseman Mike Schmidt hit his 537th career homer Thursday night to move past Mickey Mantle into seventh place on the all-time list.

Schmidt, who announced earlier in the day he wants to play another year, connected for his seventh homer off Houston Astros starter Mike Scott to lead off the sixth inning. Reggie Jackson is sixth on the career home run list with 563.

Three boxers test positive for drugs

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Three candidates for the U.S. Olympic Boxing Team were disqualified Thursday for testing positive for drugs.

The boxers medically disqualified from the Olympic box-offs to be held Saturday at Caesars Palace were Eric Griffin, 106 pounds, of Houston; Lavell Finger, 139, of St. Louis, and William Guthrie, 165, of St. Louis.

They were disqualified after the U.S. Olympic Committee's Sports Medicine Division found that second urine samples also had tested positive.

"In one case it was marijuana and it was cocaine in the other two cases," said Col. Don Hull, president of the USA-ABF.

Brown signs one-year pact with Raiders

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Tim Brown, who lasted until the sixth pick of the NFL draft, signed a one-year contract with the Los Angeles Raiders on Thursday and then reported to their training camp.

Brown signed with the idea that a long-term contract would be worked out shortly, thus nullifying the one-year deal.

"The most important thing was for me to be in camp," the Notre Dame graduate said. "We knew with the relationship of my agent (Marvin Demoff) and (Raiders' owner) Al Davis, we would get things done."

"Hopefully by late next week before the big guys come in, we'll have something we're all comfortable with."

UNI assistant wants out of contract

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Dennis Remmert wants out of his contract as a Northern Iowa assistant football coach since he did not get the head-coaching post that went to former Ohio State Coach Earle Bruce.

"I always wanted to be the head coach at UNI. That was my goal," Remmert said.

Remmert served nearly 20 years with former UNI coach Stan Sheriff and five more under Darrell Mudra, who resigned this spring.

Remmert, 49, wants to remain at the school as a tenured assistant professor in the department of health, physical education and recreation.

"I know Denny was disappointed at not getting the head coaching job," said UNI Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby. "That was his aspiration."

"He's making the move (to resign) on his own volition. If he wanted to stay, he certainly could have."

Jury rules against Buoniconti in suit

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A jury deliberated three hours Thursday and ruled against Marc Buoniconti, who was seeking $22.5 million in damages in a negligence suit for an injury that left the former Citadel linebacker a quadriplegic.

In closing arguments, jurors were urged to award damages to Buoniconti.

"You think of the hope and the dreams and the plans this young man had and look what's left of him," attorney Robert Wallace said during his two-hour closing argument before the six-man, six-woman panel.

Judge John Hamilton Smith charged the jury in the Charleston County Court of Common Pleas courtroom and deliberations began at 3:45 p.m. Thursday — the 23rd day of the trial. The jury returned three hours later with the verdict.

The 21-year-old Buoniconti broke his neck while making a tackle and was left a quadriplegic.

Steinbrenner apologizes for remarks

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner, in an apparent attempt to clear the air, met separately with Dave Winfield, Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson on Thursday and then followed with a closed-door team meeting before a game with the Chicago White Sox.

Steinbrenner had criticized all three players earlier in the week. He met with Mattingly and Winfield for 10 minutes each and with Henderson for less than five.

"Seeing him face-to-face is better than the other way," Mattingly said. "This way at least we could settle some things. The other way, the problems go on and on. I just don't like playing games."

Cardinals ink free agent Quisenberry

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals signed free-agent relief pitcher Dan Quisenberry to a one-year contract Thursday and also activated first baseman Mike Laga from an injury rehabilitation assignment.

To make room on the roster, the Cardinals optioned left-handed relief pitcher Steve Peters and first baseman Mike Fitzgerald to their Triple A Louisville affiliate.

roster," said Haywood Sullivan, co-owner of the team.

Asked how he would change things around on a team that has been a disappointment after some predictions of a division title before the season began, Morgan said pitching normally would take care of itself.

"What we have to do is take advantage of the baserunners we've had, which I don't think we did during the first part of the season," he said.

Left fielder Mike Greenwell said he hoped the change would help.

"Joe Morgan is a great guy. He seems to be a motivator and hopefully he'll put some spark in this club. The talent is here," he said.

"There's been so much talk about it (McNamara's status) all year, it's sort of like the players have been kind of waiting around for the last two months. Well, now it's happened. So now it's all on our shoulders. We got to go out and win."

Other managers fired this season were Cal Ripken of Baltimore and Billy Martin of the New York Yankees, both of whom were in the AL East with McNamara, Larry Bowa of San Diego, Chuck Tanner of Atlanta and Dick Williams of Seattle.

course on England's west coast which has been a burying ground of American hopes.

A United States citizen has not won at Lytham-St. Annes since Bobby Jones acquired the title in 1926.

And the 47-man American field—playing in the gale force winds, occasional driving rain and temperatures chilly enough to send the players burrowing into sweaters, ski-caps and foul-weather gear—did little to indicate that history of frustration would be changed. PGA champion Larry Nelson was at two under par through 13 holes, then bogeyed four of the last five, a stretch called by Michael Bonalack, secretary of the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews "probably the most difficult finish we have."

Nelson had a 73. So did Ben Crenshaw. Fuzzy Zoeller and Craig Stadler were one shot better at 72. Tom Watson shot 74 with 40 on the back. Ray Floyd took 76.

Tyson: I'm the greatest

It's hard to doubt Mike Tyson when he says, "I'm the greatest fighter on the planet." It's just as hard to believe him when he says he is in charge of his life.

"I call all the shots," the champion said this week while admitting he has asked billionaire Donald Trump to advise him.

At least he and Trump say it was Tyson's idea to seek Trump's advice.

"Mike called me," Trump said. But he also said, "My initial meeting was with Winston and Ruth Roper."

Attorney Michael Winston and Roper, the heavyweight champion's mother-in-law, are two of the characters in what resembles a daytime soap opera.

Call it, "As Mike Tyson's World Churns."

Other characters are, of course, Trump in the role of Daddy Warbucks; the beautiful Mrs. Tyson, actress Robin Givens, manager Bill Cayton, who is cast in the role of the villain, and promoter Don King, a man who plays many parts at the same time.

King, who would like to be Tyson's main adviser, has proclaimed he is "one-thousand percent behind Mike Tyson." Some people believe it's better to have the promoter 1,000 percent in front of you.

There is litigation to break Tyson's 3½-year boxer-manager contract and three-year personal services contract which he signed in February with Cayton and the late Jim Jacobs.

Trump said he has "a great relationship with Bill Cayton," but added "I think he (Tyson) has a very strong case."

Trump noted that Tyson was not represented by a lawyer when "he signed a contract with some very sophisticated people."

The people in the champion's increasingly crowded corner contend Tyson would have not signed in February had he known Jacobs was terminally ill. Jacobs, who was close to Tyson, died in March. Cayton's relationship with the fighter has been strictly business.

Givens and her mother called for Cayton to give an accounting of Tyson's finances shortly after the actress and champion were married in February, and Tyson has accused the manager of villifying Robin and Ruth in the press.

He also has accused members of the media of embarrassing his family, although his wife and mother-in-law don't seem to mind talking to the media and his sister-in-law volunteered to one reporter that she had seen Tyson hit Robin.

Tyson denies ever hitting his wife, and she has not been far from his side at anytime since they were married even though he fought twice in that period.

There have been assertions that Givens and Roper are behind Tyson's decision to break with Cayton.

"That's absurd," Tyson said.

It really is not fair to accuse Givens and Roper of not having Tyson's best interests at heart. Nor is it fair to scoff at Tyson for sticking up for his wife and her family.

It's also easy to understand that 22-year-old Tyson could be confused by the problems which accompany fame and fortune.

Calling Tyson, "a fine young man, a champion of the people and a wonderful person," Trump said, "I want to help Mike through this period and with his finances."

Trump said he will donate to charity any money he makes through his association with Tyson.

It will be interesting, however, to see what Trump advises should someone other than himself bid the most money in site fees for a fight involving the champion.

Ballesteros' 67 takes early Open lead

LYTHAM, England (AP) — Despite taking two penalty shots, Seve Ballesteros extracted a 67 from cold, wet, gusty winds and established a two-stroke lead Thursday in the 117th British Open Golf Championship.

"A terrific round. That's a fantastic score under these conditions," Jack Nicklaus said.

"Incredible," said Nick Price. That terrific, incredible round left him two shots ahead of two unlikely challengers, American Brad Faxon, a non-winner in five years on the U.S. tour and Australian Wayne Grady.

A pair of Australians, Peter Senior and 43-year-old journeyman Noel Ratcliffe, and the South African Price were tied with American Don Pooley at 70, one under par and three back of Ballesteros. South African David Frost, David Russell of Scotland and New Zealand's Bob Charles, who won the British Open here in 1963, were tied with Americans Jay Haas and Bob Tway at 71.

Defending champion Nick Faldo of England also had a 71, but a disappointing one. He was tied for the lead with five holes to play, then dropped four shots to par, including a double bogey on the 17th.

Ballesteros also had late trouble, but he had enough of a cushion to save his lead.

"I feel I played the first 13 holes the best that I can play," said Ballesteros, twice the winner of this title and a two-time Masters champion, who played the front nine in 30 and could have done even better had he not missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the eighth hole.

Wind-blown drives got him deep into the bushes twice on the back nine, on the 14th and 18th, and he took unplayable lies rather than try to hack it out. "Even Daniel Boone couldn't have done that," Ballesteros said. "I dropped to a one-putt bogey on the 14th."

"Definitely, it was very difficult to shoot four under in these conditions, but the way I played I deserve any worse," he said.

The conditions were terrible. It was cold. It was windy. It was wet.

Still, a record, opening-day gallery of 35,191 flocked to the humps and hollows and the damp dunes of the course. See British Open, Page 7.

Iowa senior Pat McGhee clears a hurdle during a race. McGhee, a 400-meter and Field Trials in Indianapolis.

McGhee headed for Trials

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

Iowa 400-meter hurdler Pat McGhee will go head to head with the nation's best this morning when the U.S. Olympic Track and Field Trials kick off at Indiana University in Indianapolis.

Nan Doak-Davis, a 1985 graduate of Iowa, will race Monday in the first round of the women's 10,000-meter run. Held in the 1980 Olympics as an exhibition event, the 10,000 meter in Seoul will be an official event for the first time.

A quick start and good speed through the first two hurdles, McGhee said, is the main difference between his best times and the times of runners like Edwin Moses and Danny Harris.

"I usually took 21 steps to the first hurdle," the Iowa senior said, "but this year I've felt stronger and we've gone to 20 steps."

The "we" McGhee referred to is Ted Wheeler, Iowa men's track coach. "Coach Wheeler is out here with me every day, trying to get my time down between the first and second hurdle," McGhee said.

Redshirted in 1987 with a knee injury, McGhee's 49.36 clocking at the July 2-3 pre-Olympic Trials Meet in Indianapolis was a personal best and earned him a national ranking of seventh.

Doak-Davis, who has been training on the streets of Coralville in recent weeks, said it will be a toss-up to see who makes the Olympic team in her event.

"There's six to eight runners who have a chance," Doak-Davis said, "and anyone could go from that group. It's not as if there's a Mary Slaney running."

The diminutive 4-foot 11-inch Doak-Davis said she is a big meet competitor and feels confident about her chances of making the team.

Iowa's first NCAA champion in women's track, Doak-Davis holds school records in the 5000 and 10,000 meters outdoors, and the 5000 meters, two-mile run and three-mile run indoors.

She was raised in Hedrick, Iowa, and was named to the Iowa High School Track and Field Hall of Fame in 1985.

Davey eyes Olympics for England

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa swimmer John Davey is leaving for his home country of England today.

He will return in January, hopefully he says, with a medal from the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

Davey spent five years at Iowa, where he swam for the Hawkeyes and earned numerous Big Ten and national honors.

"I've been here five years now and I'll kind of miss the people around here," he said. "I love Iowa City. This place has got some great memories. It's been a big part of my life."

In the near future for Davey is England's Olympic Trials, which will be held in Leeds, England, from July 27 to Aug. 2.

The four-time Big Ten Swimmer of the Year has been to two previous Olympic Trials in 1980 and 1984.

In his first meet, Davey admitted he was too young for an Olympic trip. A mere 15 years old, Davey was just beginning to think about his choice of colleges at that point.

During the second Trials, he was hit by a shoulder injury and forced to sit out. There were no dreams in Los Angeles.

It's nearly time for a third try. And for this swim to be a charm, he'll have to perform the same way he did for the Hawkeyes.

"I don't usually get nervous until the day of the meet," he said. "I try not to think about it."

Since spring semester classes ended in May, Davey has stayed busy.

He traveled to Boca Raton, Fla., with several of his former college teammates for a two-week intensive training session in and out of the pool.

"That was all hard work," Davey said. "We got pounded into the ground."

Since then, he has competed at a number of summer meets. The meets and the practice have enabled Davey to continue pacework and conditioning to prepare for the Trials and the Olympics.

Davey said he will enter six events at England's Trials — the 100- and 200-meter backstroke, the 200- and 400-meter individual medley, the 200-meter butterfly and the 200-meter freestyle.

His best hope appears to be in the 400 IM, in which he was ranked 12th in the world last year.

With Seoul in his probable future, Davey said there's nothing that will stand in his way, whether it be another swimmer or the threats of terrorists on the Olympics.

"There's nothing that's going to stop me from going. If it's going to happen, it's going to happen," he said. "I've been training all my life. I'm not going to let some terrorist idiot end it."

Sauers shoots 62 for lead in Classic

COAL VALLEY, Ill. (AP) — New-lywed Gene Sauers, playing with a new putter, shot an 8-under-par 62 Thursday for a two-stroke lead after the first round of the $600,000 Hardee's Golf Classic.

Sauers, a 25-year-old Georgia native who won the 1986 Bank of Boston Classic, had an eagle, seven birdies and a bogey over the 6,606-yard Oakwood Country Club course. His score bettered by one stroke the first-round mark set by Fuzzy Zoeller in 1976, when the tourney was called the Quad Cities Open. Five others had since tied Zoeller's opening 63.

Only Mike Smith's 61 in last year's second round was a better 18-hole score than Sauers' opening round in the 17-year-old tournament.

Dan Forsman, Rick Fehr and Sam Randolph were tied for second at 64.

Tied at 65 were Tom Purtzer, Ernie Gonzales, Lance Ten Broeck, Mark Maness, Billy Brown, Mark Brooks, Mark Wiebe, John Snyder and Mike Bender.

A thunderstorm at dawn delayed the tournament's start by an hour and was followed by temperatures and humidity in the 90s the rest of the day.

"The humidity doesn't bother me that much. I carry a wet towel with me," said Sauers, who finished tied for third in last week's Anheuser-Busch Classic.

"They say marriage ruins people. I guess I'm out to prove them wrong," said Sauers, who was married July 4. "Actually I'm probably concentrating more and not looking outside the ropes (at the women in the gallery) more than anybody else."

Sauers didn't need his new putter when he went to eight under by making an eagle on the par-4 16th hole. He knocked in a sand wedge from 102 yards on his second shot.

"The ball landed a yard beyond the hole and rolled back in," Sauers explained.

Despite the heat and humidity, 146 of the 146 golfers broke par.

Two-time U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin was at 66, last week's Anheuser-Busch winner Tom Sieckmann shot 67, defending Hardee's champion Kenny Kan slumped to a 71 and Dr. G. Morgan, the 1987 runner-up here, was at 68.

Most of the big names and leading moneywinners on the PGA Tour are playing in the British Open this week.

Boston's McNamara fired as manager

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox, struggling to keep pace in the American League East after having been picked by many to win the division, fired Manager John McNamara Thursday as play was to resume after the All-Star break.

Third-base coach Joe Morgan was named interim manager.

The abrupt announcement was made as team members and coaches began arriving at Fenway Park for the first of a four-game series with the Kansas City Royals.

Morgan, 57, said he had no advance notice of the decision, which the team said was made by Mrs. Jean R. Yawkey, president of the Red Sox, and delivered by General Manager Lou Gorman.

"Lou Gorman came up to me and said, 'We're going to make a managerial change. You're going to be the new manager,'" Morgan said.

McNamara is the sixth manager fired this season and the third in the seven-team AL East.

Morgan said he didn't have a chance to talk to McNamara before the man who had managed the team for 3½ years left the ballpark.

McNamara, 56, was named the team's 36th manager Oct. 18, 1984, and compiled a 297-273 record. He took the team to the 1986 World Series, won by the New York Mets in seven games.

"I never wanted to take over another man's job in mid-stream, but the chance is here now, a chance I had figured had gone by the boards," said Morgan, who in eight years managed the Red Sox Triple-A team in Pawtucket, R.I., figure that at my age and after 10 years in Triple-A that I probably would never manage in the leagues."

Morgan, who joined the Red Sox in 1985 as first-base coach, said he had been given no guarantee beyond this season, but added "the word interim never entered my vocabulary."

The decision comes as the Red Sox begin the second half of the season with a 43-42 record tied for fourth place with Milwaukee in the AL East, nine games behind Detroit.

"It's easier to change leadership than change the entire 24-man roster," Morgan said. See McNamara, Page 7.
