

Sack charged with 8 local car fires

By Tracy Suplee
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City businessman was charged with eight counts of second-degree arson Monday for allegedly starting eight car fires early Saturday, according to Johnson County District Court records. Michael R. Sack, 22, 522 E. College St., who also was charged Sunday with first-degree arson after he allegedly started a fire in an apartment building on College Street early Saturday, was released from the Johnson County Jail Monday evening after posting $115,000 bail, according to jail officials. Sack allegedly started the apartment fire and the eight car fires around 3 a.m. on Saturday. Iowa City Police Detective Paul Suplee said matches and other items found at the scenes of the fires were similar to those in Sack's possession.

"Matches found at the scene were similar to matchbooks found on him," Suplee said.

All the fires were set within 15 minutes, and Sack was observed leaving one of the scenes at 618 E. Burlington St. Police arrested Sack within a 15-minute time period between 3 a.m. and 3:15 a.m., according to court records.

The eight car fires all occurred within the 200 block of South

Johnson Street, the 600 and 700 blocks of East Burlington Street and the 500 block of East College Street.

Damages in the apartment fire allegedly set by Sack were minimal because a woman chased Sack from the scene after he set a sheet on fire near the entrance of the apartment. When stopped by the police, Sack was panting heavily but stated he had not been running. He then said he had fled from the woman, according to court records.

However, the eight car fires did result in large amounts of damage to the vehicles, with three of the cars having their front seats burned and five of the cars being totally destroyed by the fire.

The fires were set with matches, paper and cloth items in the cars, Kinney said. Each car incurred damages over $500, according to court records.

Iowa City Fire Marshal Larry Kinney said that investigators had not determined a motive for the fires. Several victims of the car fires said Monday they aren't acquainted with Sack and did not know why he would start the fires.

"I have no idea who he is," Lauretta Stringer, whose 1978 Fiat was set on fire Saturday, said. "It's one of those off-the-wall things that happens."

Sack told The Daily Iowan in May he was a co-owner of the Iowa City clothing store Sack's on the Plaza, 130 S. Dubuque St., but a spokeswoman for the store denied Monday that he was an owner and said he was only employed at the store.

A total of 17 cars have been set on fire this month. Kinney said the fires which Sack has not been charged with setting remain under investigation.

"It's still under investigation 100 percent," Kinney said.

Suplee added police investigators do not want to speculate on whether or not Sack can be linked to the fires which have occurred recently at the UI International Center.

The Iowa City Fire Department is continuing to advise residents to keep their car doors locked and windows rolled up while investigation into the other fires continues. All of the cars set on fire in the past month were either unlocked or had their windows rolled down.

The Iowa State Fire Marshal's Office is also offering a $5,000 reward for information about the other arson attempts.

Sack's preliminary hearing for all of the arson charges is set for July 26 in Johnson County District Court.

Jackson, Dukakis negotiate

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis and Jesse Jackson held a summit just hours before the Democratic National Convention opened Monday, with Jackson pledging unity in the fall campaign and Dukakis agreeing to several steps to increase the role of his rival's supporters in the party.

Dukakis insisted there was no deal, no fine print worked out in the nearly three-hour meeting at his hotel, only a better relationship with the man who fought for the presidential nomination until the end.

"I want Jesse Jackson to play a major role in this campaign. I want his supporters, who are out there by the millions, to be deeply involved in this campaign," Dukakis told a packed news conference after the meeting. "And he is going to be involved actively and fully."

The agreement between the candidates includes the financial backing of party funds to pay for Jackson's campaigning on behalf of the ticket and needed personal staff, said Ron Brown, Jackson's convention manager.

"Of course funding will be made available for the travel plans for Reverend Jackson," said Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Bruntz.

"If the man's got to travel, we're not going to let him fly commercial," said Joseph Warren, a long-time Dukakis supporter who has been involved in the negotiations.

The Associated Press

"Make no mistake about it. What Jesse needs, Jesse will get."

In addition, Jackson supporters will get close to half the 25 at-large members of the Democratic National Committee to be appointed on Friday.

"When the Democratic National Committee meets on Friday, it will be more reflective of the new Democratic Party," Jackson said.

This linkage of presidential preference to DNC membership will be written into the party rules with an amendment to be proposed Monday night, Brown said. But Karl Sandstrom, counsel for the convention rules committee, said the matter would come to the floor and would be dealt with at the DNC meeting.

For his part, Jackson was upbeat about the meeting with Dukakis and his running mate — in part because there were no roadblocks to his pushing platform ideas.

"Today we had a great meeting with Governor Dukakis and Senator Lloyd Bentsen, a serious meeting," he added. "In that meeting, there was the good judgment that debate is healthy for democracy."

"I think there was a real meeting of the minds," said Ron Brown, Jackson's convention manager, who sat in on the meeting.

Jackson said he would have a special role in the Democratic campaign in the fall, although the details have not been worked out.

Dukakis was asked about the fine print of the deal with Jackson. He bristled as he responded: "There's no deal and there is no fine print. That is not the way you win elections..."

With call for party unity, Democrats open convention

ATLANTA (AP) — Michael Dukakis won Jesse Jackson's cooperation if not his outright endorsement Monday as the 40th Democratic National Convention opened with a keynote call to end eight years of Republican rule and "get on with the future."

"Nothing's wrong with you... that you can't fix in November," Texas State Treasurer Ann Richards told a prime-time audience as she kicked off a four-day campaign rally for nominee-to-be Dukakis and the Democrats.

"This election is a contest between those who are satisfied with what they have and those who know we can do better," she said in prepared remarks.

The convention cornerstone was laid by former President Carter, who urged the delegates to capture the party's most elusive value: "Unity," he exhorted. "One more time, unity."

Dukakis relaxed in his hotel suite while 4,162 delegates met a few blocks away at the Omni convention hall. His night comes Wednesday, when his nomination is sealed, and again Thursday, when he accepts the party's prize.

Jackson, beaten but unbowed after a gallant primary campaign, set a conciliatory tone in remarks to his delegates and said he was looking forward to helping the nominee

"win in November."

"We did not come here for fireworks. We came here for noble works," Jackson said.

He said he would have his name entered into nomination for president on Wednesday night, but added he had no plans to contest Dukakis' selection of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen for vice president, and would give "no encouragement" to others who might.

That provided an upbeat curtain-raiser for Dukakis' convention, which opened on schedule with the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and a call to order by party chairman Paul Kirk. Few delegates were in their seats when he proclaimed, "The 40th quadrennial national convention of the Democratic party will come to order."

The convention's opening night showcased some Democrats little known on network television and some who were instantly recognizable.

"My name is Jimmy Carter, and I am not running for president. Did you hear that George?" said the

Iran accepts U.N. resolution for truce with Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran on Monday accepted a U.N. resolution for a truce with Iraq in the nearly 8-year-old war that has cost an estimated 1 million lives on both sides. Its military command said, however, that its soldiers would stay at the front.

The United States cautiously welcomed the move, saying it was unsure of the intentions of Iran, which has suffered a recent series of defeats. Iraq said its enemy made the decision for "tactical reasons" and not out of any desire for "real and just peace."

Hashemi Rafsanjani, parliament speaker and acting commander-in-chief, said the decision was made by the 88-year-old revolutionary patriarch, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, who had set Iran's original policy of rejecting a truce.

Security Council Resolution 598 of July 20, 1987, calls for a cease-fire, withdrawal of military forces to recognized borders, prisoner exchange and an investigation to determine who started the nearly 8-year-old war.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, the U.N. secretary-general, said he was beginning consultations with both sides and a cease-fire could take effect within a week.

Iraq agreed to the Security Council resolution long ago, on condition Iran also accepted it, but until Monday the Iranians had said there could be no truce until Iraq was condemned as the aggressor. The Iraqis invaded Iran in September 1980 after several border skirmishes.

On Sunday, President Saddam Hussein of Iraq urged Iranian leaders to accept an "honorable" end to the conflict.

Rafsanjani, who was promoted to military commander last month

Iranian Commander-in-Chief Hashemi Rafsanjani said the decision was made "for the benefit of the Iranian nation and there is no sign of weakness in it."

and has set a less bellicose tone since then, said in an interview on Iranian television Monday: "Since the people of Iran believe in Imam Khomeini's decisions and rely on him and the people in charge, we hereby announce the decision to accept U.N. Security Council Resolution 598.

"This decision is based on many reasons, but since Imam Khomeini is aware of many political and military secrets, he cannot give more explanations at the moment."

He said the decision was made "for the benefit of the Iranian nation and there is no sign of weakness in it."

Referring to the July 3 downing of the Iran Air jetliner by the U.S. Navy that killed 290 people, Rafsanjani said, "We took it as a warning."

"Poisonous propaganda was trying to pretend that we were the war lovers and Saddam (Hussein) was the lover of peace," he said. "Also, inside the country we have enemies who are trying to condemn us because of not accepting the cease-fire," he said in a rare open admission by a top official of discord inside Iran over the war.

"But by approving the U.N. resolution our fight has not ended," Rafsanjani added. "According to the imam's order, we will not have to fight on the war fronts for the moment while we wait to see the U.N.'s final decision."

As Iran's acceptance of the resolution was conveyed Monday in a message to Perez de Cuellar, a statement by Rafsanjani's new military General Command said: "We once again urge the Iranian people to man the war fronts to confront the enemies' aggressive nature and foil their criminal acts."

It praised the Khomeini's "great leadership" and, in a reference to the United States, said the "arrogant worlds" sought to portray Iraq as a "peace-loving regime" because it had accepted Resolution

598. A dispatch carried by Baghdad's official Iraqi News Agency said the Iranian announcement was made for "tactical reasons" and not from a desire for "real and just peace."

The Reagan administration said it welcomed Iran's willingness to accept the U.N. resolution.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., President Ronald Reagan's spokesman Marlin Fitzwater also said, "I think we have to be cautious" because U.S. officials are unsure what Iran's intentions are.

Fitzwater also refused to say how Iran's move would affect the American military presence in the Persian Gulf, although he did say the United States has been prepared to end tanker escorts if peace came to the region.

UI geologists sweat it out in Trowbridge heat

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

A faulty air-conditioning system in the UI's Trowbridge Hall may be fixed as early as the end of this week, UI Physical Plant officials said Monday.

UI Physical Plant Associate Director James Howard said the building's cooling system, which has not been working for much of the summer, should be fixed as soon as a part arrives.

Howard said a pump for the system's absorber needs to be replaced. The pump was supposedly shipped to the UI more than a week ago, he said.

"We can get the system back up if we get the pump," he said.

But in the meantime, faculty and staff in the Geology Department and the State Geological Survey Bureau will have to continue to sweat their way through some of the hottest days of the summer.

"It's frustration, just total frustration," UI Geology Chair Holmes Semken said. "I think you can imagine how it affects us. You can't use the microscopes because the eyepieces fill up with sweat."

"In the laboratories the thermometers go to 95 degrees, and it's gone above that several times," he said.

Semken added the failure of the cooling system has become a regular occurrence.

"The problem is that this has been going on since 1975," he said.

"Essentially, the same part of the unit has been going out. Sometimes we make it through the summer (without the air conditioning failing), but it's rare."

Howard said one source of the ongoing problems was a delay in the installation of the system's absorber when Trowbridge Hall was remodeled 14 years ago. By the time the absorber was installed, the guarantee had run out, he said.

"Then in the last couple of years, we've had leaks in the heat exchanger and we've patched that repeatedly," he said.

UI Geology Librarian Louise Zipp said the lack of air conditioning has significantly affected the operation of the department's library, which was closed two consecutive days last week due to excessive heat.

"It has made at least me feel ill," Zipp said. "And my staff's productivity has been reduced. We're also serving fewer people.

"We've got fans, and they help somewhat, but I'm not sure anything else can be done," Zipp said.

UI Energy Management Engineer Norm Olson said the cooling system in Trowbridge Hall is one of several on the UI campus that needs to be overhauled.

"(The Trowbridge cooling system) is a real old system that keeps getting patched instead of replaced," Olson said. "The funds we need to replace it, and similar systems throughout campus are just not there."

Howard said the physical plant is attempting to maintain the cooling units on the UI campus with what little money is available.

This fall, an absorber in Main Library is scheduled to be replaced, he said.

"The last time that unit was replaced was 28 years ago," Howard said. "Twenty-eight years is just a ridiculous amount of time to try and run an absorber."

But even if the Iowa Legislature doesn't come through with additional funding, future faculty and staff in Trowbridge Hall will not have to suffer in 95-degree heat, he said.

The planned UI north campus parking and chilled water facility should provide Trowbridge Hall with cool air shortly after its completion in the fall of 1989, Howard said.

"Hopefully when we get the chilled water facility working, Trowbridge will be one of the first buildings we hook up to the system," he said.

Board appoints new UI faculty leaders

The appointment of William D. Petasnick as the new administrator and chief operating officer of UI Hospitals and Clinics was confirmed by the state Board of Regents at its meeting in Okoboji, Iowa, on Friday.

Reporting to UI Hospitals Director John W. Colloton, Petasnick takes over the new position Aug. 1 at an annual salary of $135,000. Formerly, the position was titled deputy director.

Colloton also announced the promotion of UI Hospitals Associate Director John H. Staley to deputy administrator with responsibilities for overseeing the day-to-day operations of the institution.

For the past seven years, Petasnick has been with the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill where he has served as director of operations and chief operating officer of the North Carolina Memorial Hospital, assistant dean of the School of Medicine and associate clinical professor in the Department of Health and Policy and Administration of the School of Public Health.

Staley joined the UI Hospitals staff 14 years ago and has held several administrative posts including assistant director and senior assistant director.

Other UI appointments approved by the regents include Professor Michael S. Chibnik as new chair of the Department of Anthropology in the College of Liberal Arts and the reappointments of Professor Peter S. Fisher as chair of the Graduate Program in Urban and Regional Planning and Professor Donald J. Pietrzyk as acting chair of the Department of Chemistry.

The regents also approved the UI's selection of Derek H. Willard, UI associate vice president for educational development and research, as acting director of the Institute of Child Behavior and Development.

Census bureau to gather information

The U.S. Census Bureau will collect current employment and unemployment data for the Iowa City area this week.

Results from this data will be included in July's national labor force picture, to be released Aug. 5 by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The monthly Current Population Survey includes a national sample of 53,000 households. Its purpose is to gather labor force data in order to facilitate future statistical studies done by governmental bodies at the federal, state and local levels.

Information supplied by individuals is required by law to remain confidential. Only statistical totals are published by the bureau.

Iowa agencies enter new project phase

The Iowa Civil Rights Commission and the Iowa City, Dubuque and Des Moines human rights commissions have entered into the second phase of the Iowa Fair Housing Project.

This second phase includes visits by Jan Alderton, the state fair housing project manager, to Iowa's 99 counties. Alderton will visit the counties during the next 15 months.

She will give presentations on the U.S. and Iowa Fair Housing policies and procedures, laws and history to city and county officials, community organizations, landlords and tenant associations and boards of realtors.

This 18-month project is designed to heighten the awareness and knowledge of Iowans regarding fair housing. The agencies hosted a housing conference on April 8, 1988, in Des Moines as part of the first phase of the project.

Guest professor shares Japanese art technique

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

For Professor Shuji Asada, a form of art titled "Katazome" is more than a pastime — it has become part of his life.

Asada, a professor at Kyoto Seika University in Japan, has been practicing the art of Katazome, a method of dyeing using Japanese stencils, since he was 24. Now, at age 50, he enjoys his work more than ever.

"The stencils have many limitations," said Asada. "But it's a challenge for myself as an artist to continue being innovative in my expression."

This week, Asada will be acting as a guest professor for the UI Art Department's summer workshop series.

Each summer, the Art Department invites several internationally and nationally known artists to instruct a small group of people in their profession. Asada will be presenting and teaching the art of Katazome to approximately 15 students.

"We published Professor Asada's workshop nationally," Nancy Purington, a UI fiber arts professor who helped coordinate the workshop, said. "There are mostly Iowans attending, but even so, there is a large mix of students and professionals alike."

"The Art Department is really excited about Professor Asada teaching here," Purington said. "It will be a special treat for the students to use the materials he has brought from Japan such as rice paste, which is used as a resist, and the dyes themselves."

According to Purington, the technique of Katazome is an ancient art form that has been lucky enough to be preserved in Japan after industrialization of the country took place following World War II.

"This type of art is one which has been passed through family lines in Japan," Purington said. "The few people who have made it a point to keep the original form of art alive in the country are referred to as 'national living treasures.'"

Asada studied under one such national living treasure — Nenjiro Inagaki — when he attended the Kyoto Fine Arts University in Japan.

"It was an honor to study under such an individual," Asada said. After graduating from the university in 1961, Asada gave his first one-person exhibition in Kyoto's Gallery 16 in 1962. From that point on, he participated in numerous other exhibitions, both one-person and group. He also became the recipient of seven art awards and has written articles and books which chronicle his work.

The majority of Asada's artwork has been produced on fabric and presented as various types of interior decoration such as wall hangings and curtains.

But, according to Purington, the stencil process was developed to use on Japanese clothing. The process originated as a series of steps through which a design was applied to Mulberry bark paper, he said.

"The stencils were developed to use in the printing of kimonos," Purington said. "Now artists such as Shuji can sell their designs to industries where they are produced in large quantities."

On Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., Asada will be giving a public lecture which will be accompanied by slides of his artwork in the UI Art Building Room E109.

After he completes his workshop in Iowa City, Asada will go on to the Nova Scotia College of Arts and Design to conduct a week-long course similar to the one he is currently teaching.

"I like my work," said Asada. "And I like people. (Teaching) is a way to share my art with others — it is a special delight to me."

Council will fill seat by appointment

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council decided Monday night to appoint an individual to the at-large seat that will be left vacant in August when Councilor Kate Dickson is scheduled to leave the council.

The council decided to fill the seat by appointment after rejecting the option to hold a special election to fill the vacancy.

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said the city would have to spend about $10,000 to $12,000 in order to hold an election for the seat.

"This expense and the fact that there are only one-and-a-half years left in Kate's term lead me to believe that we should take this avenue (of appointment)," McDonald said.

Councilor Randy Larson questioned the effectiveness of the appointment method, saying that the public might perceive the council as being partial to certain individuals.

But Councilor Bill Ambrisco disagreed, pointing out the general public views the council as being representative of the city as a whole.

"Each of us have a certain constituency to which we have access to and interact with," said Ambrisco. "I feel the majority of the people would feel that we were representing them equally."

The council decided that interested candidates for the position should turn in a one-page letter of interest to Iowa City Clerk Marian Karr. Additional information, such as a resume, may be included with the letter for the council to review.

In other business, the council also discussed a proposal to extend landfill boundaries in an area just south of Dubuque Street.

The proposal, which was developed by Glasgow Construction and initially presented to the Iowa City Riverfront Commission, asks for an additional 5,000 cubic yards to be approved for landfill purposes in addition to the 30,000 that have already been filled in that area.

UI Hospitals taxi celebrates 56th year

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

A taxi service provided by UI Hospitals and Clinics for patients without transportation is enjoying a positive reception from hospital administrators around the country during this — its 56th — year.

The Patient Transportation Service began assisting low-income hospital patients who needed rides from the Iowa City bus or train depot to the hospital in 1932.

Since then the service has grown into an operation generating nearly $1 million a year. The service goes right to the patient's front door, anywhere in Iowa, to get them.

Primary users of the service are indigent patients, dependent upon the state for medical assistance. Also, many users are patients who don't own a car and don't have family to transport them to and from the hospital.

Gross cost for the service was $1,060,200 last fiscal year. The service's income totaled $919,747. A majority of the income was paid by the state.

Initially, the state-funded program was intended to service low-income patients who met state guidelines for medical assistance, according to Tim Thatcher, the service's coordinator.

But the service now transports people who don't meet the state guidelines. Still, low-income recipients who do meet the guidelines constitute 93 percent of the service's riders.

Since the cost of transporting the non-qualifying users would not be covered by state funding, these patients must be charged a fee.

The fee paid by the remaining 7 percent was recently reduced from 65 cents per mile to 45 cents per mile. The minimum fee was reduced from $16.90 within a 25-mile radius of Iowa City to $11.70.

The ridership for the transportation service has decreased slightly over the past few years.

Thatcher said the service peaked at about 11,000 riders a few years ago. According to Cathy Lamb, director of patient scheduling, about 8,000 patients were transported during last fiscal year.

Thatcher said he expects to see an increase in the number of people using the hospital car because of the lower fee. It is an effort to reach people who pay their own way and to help out some people who couldn't afford to get to Iowa City, he said.

"I'm proud of (the service). It does a lot of good for a lot of people. It lets them get the health care that they can't get in their own smaller towns," Thatcher said.

"It's a model program for the whole United States. It's the only one in the United States," he said. "I've had a lot of inquiries from other states interested in this, but I'm not aware of another one (in operation) yet."

According to Thatcher, the service employs 14 drivers with "phenomenal safety records." Each driver averages about 60,000 miles per year. The drivers go out in all road conditions but cannot transport patients across state lines.

"In the early days," Thatcher said, "(the service) needed more drivers because it took longer to get places. Now the roads are better."

UI offers C.P.A. review course

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Two-and-a-half straight days of testing is a strain on anyone, but some accountants may find their certification process made easier with the help of a C.P.A. review course offered by the UI beginning Aug. 30.

Members of the UI College of Business Administration Department of Accounting will teach the 23-session course for those wishing to write the November 1988 Uniform C.P.A. Examination.

Accountants across the nation must pass the examination before they are eligible for certification. The uniform test is administered each year in May and November.

UI Professor of Accounting Valdean Lembke said a certificate is not required to work as an accountant, but added that under most circumstances, accountants must pass the test and have two years of experience to become a partner.

Lembke began the course 16 years ago because he said graduating accountants were assumed to have entry-level expertise but needed additional preparation for the test.

He said the four-part course will cover accounting theory, accounting practice, auditing and law — the four topics covered on the examination.

He said the course will meet Saturdays for 3½-hour sections consisting of lectures, short problems and discussions, with two days devoted to practice tests.

The enrollment fee for the entire course is $580 and partial enrollment is available. Applications are available from the UI Center for Conferences and Institutes, Union Room 210.

Lembke added the course is easier to pass immediately following graduation because students are used to reading multiple choice and short-answer problems.

Anne Shield, a C.P.A. at Schoenauer Musser & Co., P.C., 13 S. Linn St., said she benefitted from taking the C.P.A. review course in November 1981.

"It is a good class to help you prepare on how to take a test and how to prepare for the exam," she said.

Shield said the 2½ consecutive days of testing are difficult, adding many capable people do not receive passing scores the first time.

"It is important to be able to take a test without panicking," she said. She said an accountant needs to score at least 75 percent on all four parts of the examination to pass.

Shield added C.P.A.s must have 40 hours of continuing education each year to retain their certification.

For Deborah Turner, serving as a national delegate for Jesse Jackson at this year's Democratic National Convention in Atlanta means looking to the future.

"I feel like I'm on the forefront of a new era of politics in America," said Turner, an assistant professor in the UI College of Medicine and a practicing gynecologic oncologist at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

As someone who has spent most of her life pursuing an education, Turner said she is one of the many people who have been "woken up" by Jackson's campaign.

Although this new surge of interest displayed by Jackson followers is dismissed as a "flash in the pan" by some veteran Democrats, Turner disagrees.

"I don't think that's the case," she said. "If it were one small segment of society that were Jackson supporters, then it very well could be a short-lived thing. But the range of people that support him is just phenomenal."

While Jackson's stands on issues drew Turner to his campaign, diversity in the ranks kept her there. Jackson, who campaigns heavily against poverty and cuts in social programs, has followers from all income brackets and all walks of life, Turner said.

"It's not even a financial thing to an extent," Turner said. "There are people who are well-to-do and there are those who have no money to contribute."

Turner met with Midwestern representatives of the Jackson delegation in Chicago last week. Turner said the regional group of delegates, called together by Jackson for pre-convention strategy, was angry and hurt over Michael Dukakis' choice of Texas Sen. Lloyd Bentsen as his vice-presidential running mate.

For Jackson supporters, Turner said, it was not so much the choice of Bentsen, but rather how it was executed by Dukakis.

"The most upsetting thing about it was how it came down," Turner said. "Because Reverend Jackson was not considered part of the decision-making and not told about the selection beforehand, they were angry and they were hurt."

Some Jackson supporters said they intended to vote for Republican candidate George Bush in November, Turner said.

"It's a reactionary thing," she said. "They vote for the other guy to get back at the guy who made them mad."

Turner said there was no mention of convention floor conflict at the Chicago meeting.

"The press tells me there's going to be a fight," she said.

Jackson spoke of following the rules of the convention, continuing his campaign until the last ballot and looking toward the future, mentioning upcoming senatorial races and alluding to the presidential race of 1992, Turner said.

Turner said she anticipates some "disruption" at the convention, but thinks Jackson will have control over his delegates.

"People respect him enough that they will be willing to follow his direction," she said.

Although she was not pleased with the selection of Bentsen as Dukakis' running mate, Turner said she had concerns about limitations Jackson may have faced in the office of vice president.

"I'm not sure I wanted to see Jesse

Deborah Turner

Jackson in that position," Turner said. "I was concerned that that would be a spot where the country could cool him down."

Despite her personal feelings toward Dukakis and his running mate, Turner said she feels a responsibility as a Democrat to vote for her party in November.

"I'm committed to the feeling that I should vote," Turner said. "I think it's really important that we don't pack up our toys at this point and go home."

Turner said many veteran party members do not see Jackson supporters as "real Democrats," believing they are involved in the process only for Jackson.

former president in a retort that served at once as a revised version of his 1976 campaign slogan and a jab at Republican George Bush, who likes to denigrate Dukakis as a Jimmy Carter Democrat.

In his few moments on the stage, Carter appealed for harmony. "Let us go forth from this convention united behind our candidates and our ideals, — and with our eyes on the prize," he said in prepared remarks.

In her keynote address, Richards sounded the call for change that lies at the heart of Dukakis' drive to reclaim the White House for the Democrats.

Dukakis would "unify this country and get on with the future," said the woman with the Southern accent. But Bush, she scorned, "Poor George... he can't help it, he was born with a silver foot in his mouth."

"What they've done is pit one group against the other," she said of the Republicans. "They've divided this country. And in our isolation we think government isn't going to help us, that we're alone in our feelings and that we're forgotten."

"The fact is, we're not an isolated piece of their puzzle."

In a speech scripted for precisely 33 minutes, Richards praised Dukakis, Bentsen and — lavishly — Jackson, and heaped scorn on President Reagan and Vice President Bush.

"Jesse Jackson is a leader and a teacher who can open our hearts and our minds and stir our very souls," she said. "In contrast," she said, Reagan for eight straight years "has pretended to us that he cannot hear our questions over the helicopter noise."

As for Dukakis' opponent, she said, "For eight straight years George Bush hasn't displayed the slightest interest in anything we care about and now that he's after a job he can't get appointed to, he's like Columbus discovering America — he's found child care, he's found education."

Richards mixed a few words of Spanish with a recollection of growing up in the Depression in Texas.

People then "talked about war and Washington and what this country needs. Straight talk from people living their lives as best they could," she said.

Detroit Mayor Coleman Young cautioned that inevitably, Democrats will have arguments this week. Even so, he said, "Do we want a Democratic president next January? Or do we want a continuation of the drift, decay and deterioration that we see going on in this country today?"

Mayor John McDonald would have to spend $100,000 to $120,000 in order to be elected for the seat.

Turner said she is one of the many people who have been "woken up" by Jackson's campaign.

Although this new surge of interest displayed by Jackson followers is dismissed as a "flash in the pan" by some veteran Democrats, Turner disagrees.

"I don't think that's the case," she said. "If it were one small segment of society that were Jackson supporters, then it very well could be a short-lived thing. But the range of people that support him is just phenomenal."

3 undergraduate degree programs will be eliminated

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

The state Board of Regents Friday approved the UI's request to terminate three undergraduate degree programs in the UI College of Education.

Undergraduate programs in early childhood education, elementary mental retardation and secondary mental retardation will be terminated when all students currently enrolled in them have completed their degrees. Admission of new students into the three UI degree programs will be suspended effective for the fall semester 1988.

After receiving the UI's request in July, the Board of Regents referred the proposal to the Interinstitutional Committee on Educational Coordination for review.

UI Chairman of Early Childhood and Elementary Education Richard Shepardson said early childhood is only being eliminated as an undergraduate major program and remains an option for specialization.

"We generally advise our students to get both elementary education and early childhood majors," Shepardson said.

UI Professor of Early Childhood and Elementary Education Margaret Weiser said some people have misunderstood the decision to eliminate the undergraduate major program.

Weiser said students are regularly advised to obtain an elementary education major in addition to the early childhood major to increase job opportunities. According to Weiser, students with early childhood degrees can only be certified to teach 4- and 5-year-old children.

"The advantage of combining early childhood and elementary education are both philosophical and financial for the student and will result in better teacher education programs at both (graduate and undergraduate) levels," Weiser said.

The UI cited reduced enrollment due to certification changes in the early childhood education major as a principal reason for the deletion of the program.

Termination of the elementary and secondary mental retardation majors was recommended because preparation focus in the field is shifting from undergraduate to graduate specialization, according to the UI's proposal.

Campus Video Systems to charge UI dormitory residents higher rates

By Paula Roesler
The Daily Iowan

UI dormitory residents with basic service subscriptions to Campus Video System will see a 19-percent increase in their monthly bills this fall.

The state Board of Regents Friday approved the rate increase for the 1988-89 academic year. Basic service subscribers who paid $10.50 per month last year will pay $12.50 a month this year.

But Campus Video subscribers will still be paying less for basic service than Heritage Cablevision subscribers in Iowa City, who pay $13.95 for basic service.

The rate increase will enable the Campus Video System — which offers cable television services to dormitory dwellers at cut rates — to meet its financial obligations to the UI.

In December 1986 the Board of Regents approved an agreement between Heritage Cablevision and the UI. Heritage provides the programming which is distributed by Campus Video.

To provide the cable capability for the project, Campus Video Systems spent $375,000 to enhance its telecommunications network, installing several new cables.

The UI funded $100,000 of the project from its general fund and the rest was financed through an internal loan.

Subscription proceeds were to be used to pay off the debt, but subscription rates fell 7 percent short of what service administrators had estimated.

"We didn't get as many as we expected," said UI Assistant Dean for Educational Telecommunications George Klingler, a Campus Video System administrator. "We expected a subscription rate of about 30 percent. We thought we were being a little conservative with that estimate."

"We were a little surprised, but we assumed there were a few students who didn't know it was available," he said.

Klingler said Campus Video Systems conducted a survey this spring to see why the service didn't appeal to more students.

The survey revealed some students prefer studying and other activities to watching television, he said, adding some of the students surveyed who did watch said they avoided the cable fee by watching cable television in locations other than their dormitory rooms.

Abridged assembly

Visions of 1968 were undoubtedly dancing in their heads, but Atlanta police used poor judgment in canceling a march and rally by white supremacists Sunday.

The group in question, the Nationalist Movement, was forced to call off its march outside the Georgia state Capitol because police feared "blood in the streets." This reasoning stemmed from the presence of counterdemonstrators chanting slogans such as "No KKK, no fascist USA."

It is true that certain defenses for the police action sound fairly reasonable. First, the turbulence of that historic Democratic convention 20 years ago still looms in the memory, and with the controversy surrounding this year's convention, caution by police is understandable. Secondly, the Nationalist Movement is a racist organization whose tenets are offensive to many Americans.

But in Atlanta Sunday, one group's civil rights were considered more important than another's because police feared violence in the presence of 200 counterdemonstrators. Angry rumblings were heard, but not one injury was reported. The only person taken into custody was the leader of the Nationalist Movement, and that was for his own protection.

What it boils down to is that Atlanta police ignored the Constitution the very same way it was ignored during civil rights demonstrations in the 1960s. All personal opinions and political convictions aside: The right of the people to peaceably assemble was abridged Sunday. Disregard such as this is not only wrong, it is dangerous.

Convention colors

"All hail to the salmon, eggshell and azure!"

Yes. The traditional red, white and blue are no longer good enough for the Democrats meeting this week in Atlanta, or at least not good enough for the democratic media consultants.

According to these consultants, red, white and blue "look cheap," especially on television. And these consultants ought to know cheap when they see it. They are responsible for bringing the cheesy gala pageantry of the opening and closing ceremonies of the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles and New York's 1986 Liberty Weekend into our living rooms.

Pretty good company for the Democrats. Not only have they used the charisma of Jesse Jackson to expand the party's traditional base, but they hired "yupscale" media consultants to reach a "new and improved" audience.

Gone, too, are the balloons, a traditional staple of post-nomination pageantry. How can anyone with a sense of history forget the wonderfully choreographed ending to the 1968 Republican convention — one of the first to be completely staged — when Richard Nixon triumphantly shot his arms into the air, a V-for-victory formed by both hands, under a shower of red, white and blue balloons.

When Michael Dukakis accepts the Democratic nomination he will be showered with a hail of mylar confetti shot from a cannon.

In an increasingly mediated world, form, or what Rene Lagler, the convention's production designer terms "a more acceptable look to the eye," overtakes function. Political conventions, once one of the last bastions of democratic action, are now "events." They may as well be termed "ceremonies," or even "mini-series" since all of the big questions are worked out prior to the event anyway. Everyone knows the outcome, and no one bothers to care about the substance of the process, only the pageantry and special effects.

No big deal

Recent grumblings from political analysts, newspapers and certain members of the federal government have once again illuminated a controversial, if irrelevant, question concerning the Democratic and Republican national conventions. Namely, should taxpayers help foot the bill — a bill typically including booze, balloons and a host of other political paraphernalia?

As of now, it doesn't matter how you answer that question, because if you're a taxpayer, you are supplementing the cost of the process. The difference between publicly financing the conventions through our taxes and not helping our political process in this manner amounts to about $1 per taxed citizen.

Allowing federal taxes to be used for the party conventions was originally an attempt to keep corporate dollars out of the political process. Supposedly this was to ensure some degree of objectivity. But subsequent to this 1976 law, various rulings by the Federal Election Commission have allowed those same corporate dollars to once again finance the conventions.

So what we see is no real change and we're all out a buck. What's all the fuss about? If Americans can't afford the measly $1 price tag associated with an event of this magnitude, our economic indicators need major revision.

Besides, by supplementing the once again common system of corporation donation, we're allowing corporate giants only a fraction of their previous influence. Because of this, only those most vehement in their quest for monetary political alignment are rewarded, making their true inclinations and political leanings consequently discernible.

Nicaragua: Land of oppression

Ray Bianchi

It was a touching moment when Adolfo Calero, the Contra leader, and Daniel Ortega, the Sandinista president, stood together singing their national anthem. In Washington, Sen. Tom Harkin and all the local Sandinista boosters were thumbing their noses at those war-mongering fools who dared think that the Sandinistas were war-like Communists. How stupid we all were. Daniel Ortega was on the verge of canonization and we were waiting for free elections. The day was at hand, swords were being beaten into plowshares and the true demeanor of the Sandinistas was going to prove us all wrong.

Now we have all heard the great, peace-loving Sandinistas have broken the peace accords. They tried to force the Contras into "holding zones," presumably to exterminate them. The Catholic radio station is now closed. It was a major and progressive force against the dictator Somoza. La Prensa, the opposition paper, cannot print its journal, and the opposition has been outlawed. Many of our friends on the left will say that we, being stupid warmongers, drove the poor Sandinistas to these necessary actions. But the editor of La Prensa is used to this kind of oppression — he and his wife were imprisoned under Somoza.

As we ignore the Sandinistas, they consolidate and move forward. It is essential to examine why the Sandinistas have scuttled peace talks and what America's response should be. The Sandinistas have a problem: Their revolution has failed. The initial successes of the Sandinista revolution, land reform and an improved literacy rate, have now been overshadowed by starvation and oppression.

In Managua last week, 3,000 people protested the government and asked for bread; instead, they received tear gas and imprisonment. These opposition forces are by no means all reactionary. The Social Christian party, for example, is a bastion of liberation theology and advocates more radical reforms than the Sandinistas. Yet they oppose all dissent equally.

The people of Nicaragua are suffering, and it is essential that we, as the most powerful actor in this drama, have a constructive response. There are 10,000 Contras forces fighting the Sandinistas. There have been hundreds of protests against Sandinista oppression. The Nicaraguan economy is collapsing under chafing military budget and arcane bureaucratic strictures. The only way that the Sandinistas can alleviate their woes is to reach out to the opposition.

The Sandinista reaction to starvation and war has been oppression. Much like the Russian Communists in 1920 or the Red Chinese in 1950, the Sandinistas are not going to compromise. In the tradition fostered by the revolutionaries of old, they will destroy the internal opposition, crush all dissent and expand their power.

The Sandinistas are a group committed only to themselves, and compromise is not in their vocabulary. The National Sandinista Liberation Front has scuttled the revolution that all Nicaraguans enacted in 1979.

What's needed is a new strategy in regard to Nicaragua and the Contras. We as Americans should demand that the Sandinistas recognize and respect all of those groups that oppose their rule. If the FSLN does so, we should remove our military support for the Contras. We would then urge our allies to enter the political arena.

Further, it is my assertion that we should hold all nations to this — including South Africa. If the FSLN rejects powersharing, we should use all the means at our disposal to force this result. If we do not force the Sandinistas to recognize their opposition, how can we ever say we support freedom? The Contras may not be the most palatable group in the world, but in the immortal words of Franklin Roosevelt, the first supporter of Somoza, "They're sons of bitches, but they're our sons of bitches."

Political chicanery

To the Editor:

The editorial by John Nichols in the Wednesday edition of The Daily Iowan, July 11) criticizing Jesse Jackson for his statements on the vice presidency was shocking. By dismissing Jackson's claims as "ridiculous," Nichols displays a lack of sensitivity toward minority aspirations. It is not just Jackson who wanted consideration; a vast majority of blacks demanded it.

Ordinarily the vice presidency is a position of little consequence. But in this instance it is of great symbolic import. Had Jackson been offered this position, it would have established this nation's willingness to give its minorities an access to power. Michael Dukakis and the liberal establishment had a unique opportunity to shape history. They squandered it. That is why blacks are angry. That is why they feel a sense of betrayal.

The main reason for Jackson's omission is that blacks are perceived as being nationally unelectable. But no one is willing to admit it. Instead, the issue is turned around by ridiculing his ambitions.

As long as he talks economics, mobilizes a coalition that may help bring a Democrat to the White House and is willing to be taken for granted, he is worth a courtship.

But when he strays into areas beyond his preserve, like claiming a long overdue share in power, he becomes an embarrassment. Liberal henchmen are let loose to vilify him.

This is all political chicanery, a classic exercise in obfuscation. Who are Dukakis, the liberals and Nichols kidding? Certainly not minorities.

Praise for Bush

To the Editor:

In all the negative comments about George Bush I find a high degree of inconsistency. For instance, he "hasn't spoken up" or "taken a stand against" some of President Ronald Reagan's policies. Does an assistant coach second-guess the head coach in public? He would be severely and justifiably criticized by the public for not being a "team man." I'm sure Bush has a mind of his own and will exercise it when he is in command.

On TV he doesn't have "charisma." As president he won't be conducting the affairs of state on TV but in person-to-person relationships. My wife and I have seen Bush in person on three different occasions. Each time he came through with an appearance of confidence, clarity of expression and a presence of true leadership. We might not agree with him in every respect, but we know where he stood on the issues.

The world is rushing headlong into international interdependence and critical interrelationships. To meet the challenges which will arise, our next president will need to know the Washington bureaucracy from top to bottom and have a broad background in foreign diplomacy.

Personal acquaintance with world leaders will be of critical importance. In both these areas, Bush's credentials are impeccable.

Two successive state governors as president have had some bright spots in their administrations but some equally bad fumbles to mar their records. Please, let's not have another state governor in the next administration. Of the two "recruits," which would you like to have on your team? Two resounding "yeas" for George Bush.

Navy helicopter vanishes after explosions

SAN FRANCISCO — A Navy helicopter vanished after a pair of powerful explosions over open sea Monday and searchers feared all eight crew members were killed, military officials said.

Coast Guard officials said there was wreckage but no sign of survivors. The search was complicated by dense fog that reduced visibility to 150 yards, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Thomas Cowan.

The crew of a private vessel, the Northern Lights, reported they heard two explosions about 11 a.m. and then "saw the helicopter disappear from the sky" 11 miles west of the Golden Gate, said Cowan.

The helicopter was involved in a mine-detection exercise, the Navy said.

"There were eight people on board. We expect no survivors," said Cowan. He said search crews found "a lot of wreckage" in the area, and that seven flight helmets were found in the area.

Four helicopters — two Navy and two Coast Guard — joined the cutter Blackhaw, two smaller Coast Guard vessels and the Northern Lights in the search.

Navy spokeswoman Virginia Felker said the helicopter was conducting a routine mine countermeasure operation using radar and "sledge" that is towed through the water.

S. African police quell celebrations

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Police set up roadblocks and guarded schools, private homes and sports fields Monday to stamp out public celebration of jailed black leader Nelson Mandela's 70th birthday.

"This day turned out into what the government wanted to be made of it," said Mandela's wife, Winnie Mandela. "We had every intention of conveying messages of good will here in the country."

"There appears to be no climate in the country for the release of Mandela," she told a news conference.

Mandela, leader of the outlawed African National Congress, has been in prison for 26 years. He is serving a life term for sabotage and conspiracy to overthrow the white-rule government.

Celebrations, protests and church services marking Mandela's birthday Monday were held over the past few days in countries around the world. Numerous foreign governments issued statements calling for the black leader's release.

Azerbaijan retains control of disputed region

MOSCOW — The Kremlin decreed Monday that Nagorno-Karabakh, a region involved in sometimes violent ethnic disputes, will remain part of Azerbaijan, and activists in adjoining Armenia said 200,000 troops patrolled Yerevan, Armenia's capital.

The action is likely to cause more unrest among Armenians, who want the Caucasus Mountain region of Nagorno-Karabakh made part of their republic because most of its people are ethnic Armenians.

Tass, the official news agency, said the 30-plus members of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet reached a unanimous decision after a special session of about eight hours.

Mofsis Gorgisyan, an outspoken supporter of making Nagorno-Karabakh part of Armenia, said in Yerevan that the state-run media there had not reported the decision.

He said security forces patrolling the city of 1.1 million had grown to about 200,000 over the previous 24 hours, indicating authorities expected a strong reaction.

"I knew earlier what the decision would be from the number of troops here. I knew there would be no compromise," Gorgisyan told The Associated Press by telephone.

A woman who answered the telephone at the Hotel Yerevan on the central square said the Armenian version of the national television news program "Vremya" reported the Presidium had met but said its decision would not be announced until Tuesday night.

"All is calm here because our people don't know anything," said the clerk, who would not give her name.

Motorist runs over woman after accident

NEW ORLEANS — A motorist was accused of running over and killing a woman who tried to take his license plate number after his car hit the pickup truck in which she was riding, police said.

Leo Banning, 29, of Springfield, Ill., was held without bond Monday after being booked with murder in the death of Roselyn Kreger Folse, 46, and with attempted murder of the truck's 60-year-old driver, said police spokesman John Bryson.

The driver of the truck told police she got out to talk with Banning after he ran a stop sign and hit her truck Sunday in the French Quarter, Bryson said.

Folse, who was a passenger, went to the back of the car to get the license number, Bryson said. Banning allegedly backed the car over Folse, shifted gears and ran over her again, the spokesman said.

A taxi driver who saw the incident followed Banning to a bar, asked his dispatcher to alert police and pointed the man out when they arrived.

Stocks slump after previous week's gain

NEW YORK — Stock prices lapsed into a sluggish decline Monday amid new worries about inflation and the outlook for interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen 23.30 points last week, dropped 11.56 to 2,117.89.

Volume on the floor came to 156.21 million shares.

Report says Meese probably broke law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese probably broke two tax laws and violated a criminal conflict-of-interest statute, but won't be charged with a crime, independent counsel James McKay concluded in an 814-page report unveiled to the public on Monday.

An attorney for Meese, Nathan Lewin, called the assertions "a very cheap shot."

In a report which concluded his 14-month investigation, McKay wrote that "A trier of fact would probably conclude beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Meese violated a section of the Internal Revenue Code by filing 'a materially false tax return.'" McKay added that Meese probably also violated a section of the Internal Revenue Code for "willfully failing to pay tax at the time required by law."

Meese announced July 5 that he will step down as attorney general later this month or in early August. He said then that McKay's report, which he had not read at the time, "completely vindicated" him. The report originally was filed under seal that day with a three-judge court.

Richard Thornburgh, named by President Ronald Reagan to succeed Meese, has said he will pursue any evidence against Meese wherever it may lead.

McKay said that the Meeses failed to report a net capital gain of $20,706 on the sale of $54,581 in securities in 1985.

McKay noted that Meese finally filed an amended return on Feb. 6 of this year, "shortly after the scheduling of the grand jury appearances for the Meeses' accountants" in connection with McKay's criminal investigation of the matter.

At that time, the Meeses paid $2,875 in overdue federal tax payments and interest with the amended return, declaring a capital gain on the securities sales of $14,606, McKay said, however, that Meese's accountants had made an error in calculating the basis of AT&T stock sold in 1985, under which some $1,000 in additional tax was due the government on an added $6,000 in capital gains.

The proceeds from the 1985 sales were invested for the Meeses by the attorney general's financial manager, W. Franklyn Chinn, who is currently under indictment for alleged racketeering in the Wed-tech scandal. Meese had been referred to Chinn by Meese's longtime friend, E. Robert Wallach, who also figures prominently in the report.

"Mr. Meese had a duty to report the securities sales and to declare his capital gains income on his tax return filed October 15, 1986," said McKay.

"Because that return did not disclose any information about the 1985 securities sales, it was materially false," McKay declared.

McKay also disclosed that Wallach, who is under indictment for alleged racketeering in the Wed-tech scandal, facilitated two loans to Meese totalling $340,000.

The independent counsel examined the transactions in trying to determine whether Meese had accepted a bribe or a gratuity. At Wallach's behest, Meese intervened on behalf of the Wed-tech Corp. in 1981, resulting ultimately in the defense contractor being awarded a $32 million contract. Meese also assisted Wallach in connection with a $1 billion Iraqi oil pipeline project, setting up a meeting between the San Francisco lawyer and then-National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane.

Lewin accused McKay, in a news conference after the report was released, of reaching inappropriate conclusions and of going beyond what "any reasonable prosecutor would do."

McKay said he had decided not to seek criminal charges against the attorney general because "there is no evidence that Mr. Meese acted from motivation for personal gain... there is no evidence that he acted out of self-interest."

Conservatives charge Wright with corruption

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conservative political action committee lodged a complaint with the Federal Election Commission on Monday which charged House Speaker Jim Wright with violating campaign laws, in part by selling thousands of copies of his book to wealthy supporters.

The complaint, by Citizens for Reagan, was filed as Wright prepared to open the first session of the 1988 Democratic National Convention in Atlanta. Wright denounced the complaint as groundless and a blatant political attack.

Peter Flaherty, the group's chairman, made clear his intent was to embarrass Democrats during the week Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis receives the party's presidential nomination.

"If the Democrats want to have someone as corrupt as Wright chairing their convention, that's their business," Flaherty said in a statement.

"But Wright cannot hide from his troubles while he's up on that platform," Flaherty said. "The public is entitled to a thorough investigation of these charges and we want to make sure it takes place."

In Atlanta, Wright said, "Obviously, there are people in the Republican ranks who are trying their fevered and frantic best... to spread mud and slime wherever they can."

"I have always deplored that type of negative politics. I think it degrades the political process," Wright said. He said he believed the public would ignore the charges and "see through" the gesture.

The House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, known as the ethics committee, began its own investigation of Wright's activities earlier this summer.

The Citizens For Reagan complaint centers largely on the sale of Wright's 117-page book, "Reflections of a Public Man," at $5.95 each.

It alleges that the $54,642 Wright received from royalties on the sale of the book actually were concealed campaign contributions by supporters seeking to avoid the $1,000-per-person contribution limit set by law.

The complaint also alleges that book sales may have been used by Wright to evade the legal ban on officeholders receiving payment of more than $2,000 for a single speech.

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — A federal judge ordered on Monday three search warrants and other documents in connection with its massive defense procurement investigation, but allowed 10 days for an appeal of the decision.

The documents pertain to the government's investigation of a senior Air Force procurement officer and two private consultants, all of whose homes were searched as part of the investigation into fraud in the defense industry.

U.S. Magistrate James Kenkel

directed that both the warrants used to search the three homes and the inventory of items taken by authorities be made public.

"The very scope of (this) investigation... has overriding and broad public interest," the judge said, suggesting that the public would be better served if news stories on the subject be based on the legal documents instead of rumor.

Judge Kenkel said the more sensitive affidavits used to support the request for the warrants could remain sealed another 45 days.

The request to unseal the documents were made in a petition filed by The Washington Post, which argued that a month already had passed since the documents were put under seal and there has been considerable public interest in the investigation.

Federal prosecutors heading the investigation argued, however, that disclosure of information contained in the documents would hinder their continuing investigations.

The documents, including the inventory list of items taken by police, "would give a broad outline of what the government is looking for, what the government has found and more important what the government doesn't have," argued Joseph Aronica, assistant

U.S. attorney for the Eastern District where the probe is centered.

He suggested that other targets of the investigation could use the information to fashion future testimony or to destroy documents.

But Kenkel said he wasn't convinced by assertions by Aronica that the federal investigation would be harmed, suggesting that other targets of the probe likely already know that they might be implicated.

The documents ordered unsealed pertain to Victor Cohen, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force in charge of buying tactical command, control and communications systems; William Sanda, a defense industry consultant; and Richard

Seelmeyer, the operator of an air charter service and former congressional staffer involved in defense appropriations.

Aronica said no decision has been made on whether to appeal the decision which requires the unseal-ing of the search warrants and inventory documents within 10 days if no appeal is filed.

Abbott, Favor win Owen honor

Michigan baseball player Jim Abbott and Wisconsin runner Suzy Favor were named the 1987-88 Big Ten-Jesse Owens men's and women's Athletes-of-the-Year by a select 11-member panel of Midwest media and Conference office representatives.

Abbott received seven first-place votes, two second-place votes and one third-place vote for 26 points. Runners-up were former Ohio State linebacker Chris Spielman, Northwestern basketball player Shon Morris, Michigan State football-basketball player Todd Krumm and Purdue basketball player Troy Lewis.

Iowa swimmer John Davey did not receive any votes.

Favor, in the women's category, edged Iowa basketball standout Michelle Edwards and Michigan diver Mary Fischbach.

Edwards, the Big Ten women's basketball player of the year, had two first-place, four second-place and two third-place votes.

Also receiving votes were Illinois volleyball player Mary Eggers and Minnesota runner Eileen Donaghy.

After that, Myricks jumped 28-3/4, 26-5/8 and fouled, while Lewis finished with a foul and jumps of 28-5/4 (the 12th-best ever) and 22-2/4, when he mis-stepped.

It was the second victory in the Trials for Lewis and kept him on target to attempt to win four gold medals in the Seoul Games.

Only Great Britain will be in the eight-team Olympic tournament.

"Our team is known for its speed," she said of Olympics' fifth-seeded U.S. team.

Different teams stand out in different ways. Holland, for example, is considered the best in the world by Koboldt because of their excellent stickwork. South Korea, conversely, is very regimented and is precise with passes.

The Olympics will be a challenge for the United States. After winning a bronze medal at the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, the United States may have some added pressure to place.

The United States' first game of the tournament will be against top-seeded Holland, a team Koboldt said can be defeated if caught at the right time, especially during the early portion of a tournament.

"It all depends on your first round," she said of the U.S. team's chances for medal. "But we really have a chance at a medal."

Mattingly beginning to hit stride

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Mattingly's second-half surge is starting right on schedule. That should stop George Steinbrenner's complaining for now.

Mattingly, whom his boss called "the most unproductive .300 hitter in baseball" at the All-Star Game, is swinging the hottest bat in the majors since.

He's gotten at least two hits in all four of the New York Yankees' games after the break, going 9 for 17 and raising his average from .310 to .322. He's hit two home runs, giving him eight this year, and four more runs batted in give him 45.

"I feel as good as the plate as I have this season," Mattingly said. His streak includes a double and five runs scored.

Mattingly's success may be the result of 40 minutes he spent with Manager Lou Piniella during the break reviewing tapes of his swing. Piniella has worked closely with Mattingly throughout his career, and looking at some past and present film got the star pupil to start pulling the ball more often by relying on his upper body strength.

Then again, Mattingly was due. In his first four full seasons, Mattingly has averaged .329 and 12 home runs in the first half. In the second half, he averages .345 and 18 homers.

Last year, Mattingly was batting .323 with eight homers and 46 RBIs at the midway mark. He hit .331 with 22 home runs and 69 RBIs after that.

"He looks like he's swinging the bat like he always does after the All-Star break. Great," said Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi, who watched Mattingly break loose against the White Sox.

Mattingly has prospered despite a painful foot injury that leaves him packed in ice and limping after games.

"It's just a splinter," he said, not wanting to dwell on a problem that seems a little more serious.

Mattingly also avoided the controversy involving Steinbrenner, instead concentrating on his work. Mattingly did not strike back at Steinbrenner after the owner's criticism, which also was aimed at All-Stars Dave Winfield and Rickey Henderson.

Steinbrenner apologized to the trio during a closed-door team meeting before the Yankees played Thursday night and the team is playing well.

Mattingly has helped himself by making contact with the ball, not the owner. He's the hardest player to strike out in the majors, only 13 times in 298 at-bats.

With two strikes, he likes to hit the opposite way to left field. When he's in a groove, he'll jump on the first pitch and drive it to right, as he did with two singles and an RBI against Chicago Sunday.

"It's a positive start to the second half," Mattingly said. "We want to get some wins and get going."

Ballesteros wins his third British Open

LYTHAM, England (AP) — Seve Ballesteros overwhelmed Nick Price with a 6-under-par 65 and scored his third British Open triumph Monday at the course where he began his rise to golfing greatness.

Playing with Price and Nick Faldo in the final threesome of the day, Ballesteros came from two strokes back to win at the Royal Lytham and St. Annes Golf Club with the lowest round of the tournament.

Ballesteros caught Price with a birdie-eagle-birdie burst at Nos. 6, 7 and 8 — while Price went birdie-eagle-par only to lose a stroke — and he nailed it down with a par-saving chip on the final hole.

The margin of victory will be recorded as two strokes. But that was only because Price was trying so desperately to force a playoff that he three-putted the 18th after going for birdie.

He ran a long putt well by the cup on the final hole, then missed it coming back. It didn't matter. No one else was in the title hunt over the last nine holes of the rain-delayed final round.

Ballesteros, a 31-year-old from Spain, won this major title with a 273 total, 11-under-par, and added it to his previous British Open triumphs in 1979 and 1984 and Masters victories in 1980 and 1983.

It was his third victory of the year and the 54th of his career.

Price, who lists his home country as Zimbabwe but carries a British passport and lives in the United States, did nothing to disgrace himself as he battled Ballesteros head-to-head in some of the most tense golf this tournament has seen in years.

He played the final 18 holes in 69 and finished at 275. Until the final hole, he never trailed by more than one stroke.

Those two, Ballesteros and Price, divorced themselves from the rest of the pack at the turn and engaged in a two-man duel the rest of the way.

Ballesteros broke the tie with a brilliant wedge shot that stopped 3 inches away from the cup on the 16th. He tapped in for birdie and had the edge he needed.

Price had a chance to tie it again, but he missed from about 10 feet.

It was a marked difference from the way Ballesteros played that pivotal hole in his 1979 victory. At that time, the wild-hitting Ballesteros got it up and down from a parking lot for a birdie that sent him on to his first major title.

"I didn't find any cars in the 16th fairway this time," he said.

Ballesteros and Price halved the 17th in pars and went to the 18th with Ballesteros one in front.

When he missed the green far to the left, Price appeared to have the opening he needed. The soft-spoken Price put his approach on the front of the green, some 30-35 feet away.

With the ball nestled down in deep grass some 60 feet away, Ballesteros deftly chipped down to about 4 inches, the ball touching the cup as it went by, and he had it.

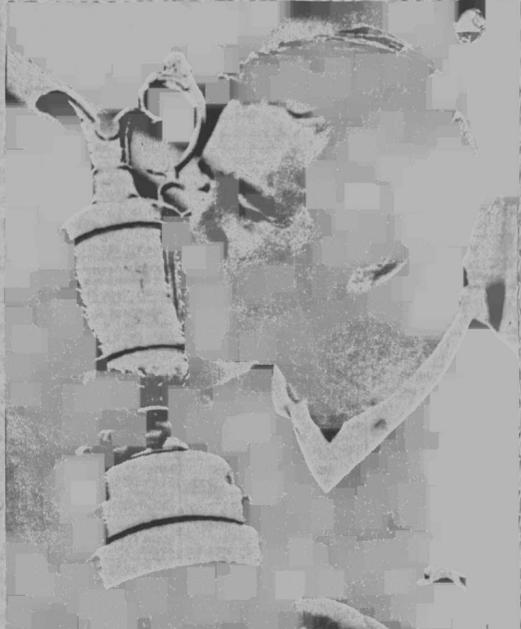

Price's only chance was to hole his long putt, and it wasn't really close.

"If Nick Price keeps playing like this, he will be a champion. He will win this championship some day," Ballesteros said.

Price, who blew a three-shot lead with six holes to play in the 1982 British Open, had no apologies, nor any need for them.

"They say I lost the other one. But this time I played as well as I can. I'm confident in my ability to win this tournament," he said.

Faldo, the defending champion from England, matched par 71 and finished third at 279, six back of the leader.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros tenderly kisses the British Open golf championship trophy after his victory over Zimbabwe's Nick Price Monday at Lytham, England.

Former Hawkeye Koboldt looking for Olympic gold

By Eric J. Hess
The Daily Iowan

Mary Koboldt almost didn't become a field hockey player in high school. Now, at age 24, she's happy to be on the U.S. team which will play at the Olympic Games in Seoul, South Korea.

"Actually I tried out for cheerleading and I didn't make it," she said, recalling her days at Parkway North Senior High School in St. Louis, Mo.

The right amount of enjoyment of the game, coaches encouraging her and hard work has helped Koboldt become "the fastest right wing in the world," according to the United States Field Hockey Association.

Koboldt said she wishes she could change one word in that title. Changing "fastest" to "best" would be preferable and slightly more flattering.

Koboldt said field hockey has fallen into the stereotype of being a private school girls game. But since she attended Iowa, the game has grown somewhat for men's teams and slightly decreased for women's teams, basically because of the growth of women's soccer teams.

For the second-most popular sport in participation in the world behind soccer, field hockey suffers a lack of priority in the United States.

Nations like Holland and Australia have their players learning the fundamentals of the game early in life.

Heading for college, Koboldt was unsure where to turn. She was looking for scholarships at a time when women's athletics were not yet a part of the NCAA. Instead there was the AIAW.

Koboldt had to search on her own for a school. After deliberation she chose St. Louis University.

"I really didn't know what I was going to do," she said.

But she later found out that the coach there, Will Van Beaumont, was fired.

"That night he was fired he called me up," she said. Beaumont told her, "I don't want you to waste your talent in St. Louis."

It was beginning to get late in the signing period, and then-Iowa Coach Judith Davidson had a scholarship left.

It turned out to be a great move for Koboldt. Not only did she join her high school teammate, Deb Brickey, who is a member of the U.S. Reserve team, she earned numerous honors for her efforts, including all-American status in 1984-85, all-Big Ten in 1982-85 and the Big Ten's Offensive Player of the Year in 1985.

It took Koboldt three tries to make the national field hockey team. The first time she said she wasn't ready. The second try was hampered by injury.

"If things went right and the timing was right, I started thinking I could get it (a spot on the national team)," she said.

The third chance was perfect. She was chosen to the national team in 1987 and has been a member ever since.

Since joining the team she has had a chance to play against some of the best teams in the world, many of which will be at the Olympics. Right now, she and the other soon-to-be Olympians from the U.S. team are in Spain for a four-team tournament with Spain, Italy and Great Britain.

Lewis continues to ease through Olympic Trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Olympic champion Carl Lewis outdueled Larry Myricks in a brilliant long jump competition and Steve Lewis ran one of the greatest 400-meter races in history Monday night at the U.S. Olympic Trials.

Carl Lewis, continuing his relentless quest to duplicate his feat of four gold medals at the 1984 Olympics, won the long jump competition with a leap of 28 feet, 9 inches — equaling the fifth-best ever.

What made the jump even more impressive was that Lewis did it on a wet runway. Lewis' leap came shortly after heavy rain had soaked the Indiana University Track and Field Stadium, delaying the meet for about 12 minutes.

He needed such a performance in order to beat the veteran Myricks, who soared 28-8 1/2, the best of his career and the eighth-best ever. This was Lewis' 55th consecutive long jump victory since losing to Myricks in the 1981 national indoor championships.

Myricks, jumping two places ahead of Lewis, took the lead on the first round, sailing 27-8, compared to Lewis' 27-4 1/2.

Then, after Myricks had increased his lead with a leap of 28-0 1/2 on his second jump, Lewis leaped a wind-aided 28-2 1/2 as the rain began coming down heavily.

After the rain subsided, Myricks got off his best jump in round three, but the impetuous Lewis

Doak-Davis advances to final

Former standout Nan Doak-Davis advanced to the finals of the 10,000-meter run at the United States Olympic Track and Field Trials in Indianapolis Monday.

Doak-Davis, running for Athletics West, finished second in her heat with a 34:06.11 clocking. Lynn Jennings, also running for Athletics West, won that heat with a 34:04.77 time.

The fastest qualifying time was recorded by Patty Murray, Nike Coast Track Club, who won the first heat in 33:57.22. In all, 18 runners advanced to Friday night's final.

Doak-Davis, the 1985 NCAA 10,000-meter champion for Iowa, will be running for one of three spots on the U.S. team when she competes Friday.

In qualifying, she would join her husband Barry Davis, a member of the U.S. Freestyle Wrestling team, at the Summer Games. A silver-medalist at the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles, Davis will be wrestling in the 125.5-pound weight class.
