University defends tenure process

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

UI officials say that although tenured women faculty at the UI are greatly outnumbered by their tenured male colleagues, gender is not a factor in the tenure process.

"Tenure is not awarded on the basis of sex, and no self-respecting person would even consider granting tenure on the basis of gender in either direction," said College of Liberal Arts Associate Dean of Faculty Sarah Hanley.

Hanley said the main reason there are fewer tenured women than men at the UI is because there are fewer women faculty members. She said the administration is working hard to correct that imbalance in the next few years through recruitment of qualified women.

"In the reallocation process in the College of Liberal Arts, for example, we put as our top priority last year the hiring of two senior women or minorities in the science department. It was a small step, but to take it was a sign of progress," she said.

Tenure statistics show that for the past four years, the number of tenure denials and approvals at the departmental level are the same for women as well as men, she said.

Results of tenure applications since 1984 are especially telling of the current situation of women faculty members in the College of Liberal Arts — the largest UI college — because it was in 1984 that the Dean's Committee on Tenure and Promotion was established.

"Clearly, this material gets a lot of attention," Hanley said, referring to the fact that the formation of this advisory committee added an extra step in the tenure process and increased the scrutiny with which candidates' records are viewed.

UI Assistant Vice President of Academic Affairs Kenneth R. Moll agreed the tenure review process is free from gender influence.

"I think that women as well as men get close evaluations for tenure," he said. "I think that the one thing that gets quoted are statistics that don't take into account that a lot of women have been added to the UI in recent years, so they haven't been here long enough to get tenure."

Hanley said although the hiring of women faculty is a priority for the UI, it is crucial to recruit the best women in their field.

"These people have to be good teachers as well as publish good works. It's a very crucial point," she said.

"What we're doing now is the same thing that Princeton University did when they found themselves with female students but no female faculty, and the University of Virginia, which became very embarrassed when they had no female faculty," Hanley said.

"Both institutions got some very good people by saying 'there are certain positions we want to fill with the best women or minorities we can find,'" she added.

Increased recruitment of women has already begun at the UI, according to Moll, who said that

Council fills seat; Strait quits

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council appointed former Iowa City Mayor John Balmer to the council Tuesday night, filling the seat councilor Kate Dickson left vacant in August.

Balmer, 39, was mayor of Iowa City from 1980 to 1981 and served on the council from January 1976 to January 1984. He is vice president of Plumbers Supply, Inc., located on Highway 218 in Iowa City.

Councilor William Ambrisco nominated Balmer during the council's informal meeting immediately prior to the formal meeting Tuesday.

"We have a rare opportunity to have an outstanding person such as John on our council," he said.

Councilor Randy Larson announced the unanimous decision of the council and called Balmer a "proven player who I feel can serve us best."

"He was elected to this council twice, and he served as mayor in the seat we all know gets a little hot at times," said Larson, adding, "He handled himself at all times with distinction and under his term, this community moved forward in great strides."

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald praised the ten candidates who applied to fill the seat, saying the field of applicants was the best qualified he had seen in 15 years.

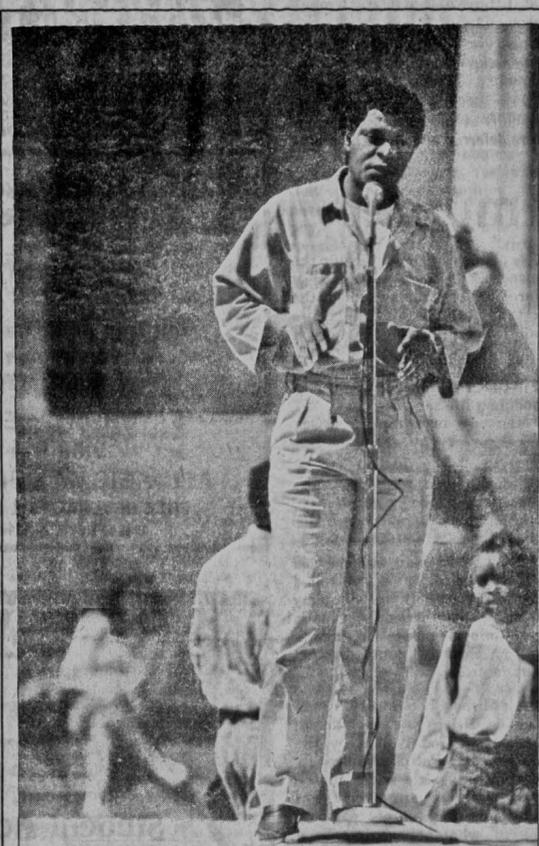

Balmer assumes his seat on the council immediately and, according to Larson, will not run for reelection next year when Dickson's term expires. Dickson left Iowa City earlier this month to marry New Jersey stockbroker John F. Hamel.

Just prior to the appointment of Balmer, councilor George Strait announced he will be resigning from the council effective immediately, to accept a tenured professorship at a Washington D.C. law school.

"I have never been satisfied in retirement, feeling that as long as I have my legs and body in working shape, my mind was still there," he said. "It is extremely flattering for me to be taken out of retirement and have my mind put back to work."

Strait has served on the council for 12 years. Three years remain on his current term.

"It has been a challenge for me to serve here, and I have tried to give back in the 12 years what has been given me. I have by no measure done this," said Strait.

Presidential rivals agree to debate twice on TV

CHICAGO (AP) — Presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis will face each other in two televised debates and their running mates will square off once, Dukakis campaign chairman Paul Brontas said Tuesday.

The presidential rivals encountered loud, hostile demonstrators Tuesday as Oregon shipyard workers shouted "union buster" at the Republican candidate and Illinois anti-abortion activists called the Democratic nominee "baby killer."

"Do not gamble on another liberal Democrat coming out of nowhere," Bush said, shouting to be heard over the boos of workers at Northwest Marine Iron Works in Portland, Ore.

In the Chicago suburb of Niles, Ill., Dukakis was interrupted for several minutes by the anti-abortion protesters early in a speech on economic policy.

After weeks of negotiations, the Dukakis campaign said it is willing to accept the Bush campaign's offer of two presidential debates — one before the first debate and one after the second debate.

Harmon to file guilty plea in assault case

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

Former UI football player Kevin Harmon will plead guilty to a charge of assault causing injury lodged against him after an April 30 altercation on the Burlington Street Bridge.

"Mr. Harmon's attorney notified us and Mr. Harmon will be pleading guilty," Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said Tuesday.

Harmon's lawyer, James McCarragher, would not confirm the plea but said an agreement had been struck between Harmon and White's office.

"We have agreed to a disposition of the case," McCarragher said but deferred further comment to a later date.

Johnson County Sixth District Judge John Sladek canceled Harmon's Tuesday trial after he learned of the plea.

"They will be pleading guilty some time this week," he said, adding McCarragher contacted him directly about the plea.

The serious misdemeanor charge carries a maximum penalty of one year in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Harmon, a Laurelton, N.Y., native was implicated in an April 30 incident on the Burlington Street dispute occurred. Sladek allowed Harmon to attend a Seahawk mini-camp following the charges this spring, despite a prior ruling restricting Harmon's travel to Iowa. Sladek reversed his prior order, although he said it was "standard procedure to keep a person in state until the initial appearance."

Harmon led Hawkeye rushers last season with 715 yards, including a season-best 182-yard effort against Iowa State which earned him UPI Midwest Offensive Player of the Week honors.

Harmon ranked ninth in the Big Ten in his final season while averaging 60.7 yards per game rushing and ranked 10th in all-purpose yards with 97.5 yards per game.

Harmon is one of three former Hawkeyes involved in unrelated legal snares. Former UI free safety Dwight Sistrunk was indicted by a federal grand jury this summer on charges of possession of cocaine with intent to deal the drug. And former UI running back Marshall Cotton is awaiting trial on accusations of assault causing injury in connection with a May 30 incident.

Plus-minus grading draws mixed reviews

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

The new plus-minus grading system recently implemented at the UI was greatly utilized by UI professors and teachers' assistants during the summer session, according to UI officials.

"Plus-minus grades were widely used this summer," said UI Registrar Jerold Dallam. "More plus-minus grades were given than we had expected."

Last fall UI administrators approved the new grading system that allows instructors to differentiate between 13 grading levels, which includes plus and minus additions to grades, rather than grading with the five traditional marks — A, B, C, D and F.

Each of these new grading levels was utilized during the summer session, Dallam said. "Instructors used the entire range of grades, from D-minus to A-plus."

The UI adopted the new grading system this year after a debate regarding the system's implementation between UI students and faculty during the 1987 fall semester.

Students felt the new system would lower overall grade-point averages, while faculty members argued that it would allow them to grade student efforts more objectively.

In the end, the faculty's sentiments emerged as the victor of the grading debate. And that victory is one that will continue to affect all UI undergraduate students throughout their academic careers.

According to UI Collegiate Associations Council President Gordon Fischer, student leaders are concerned the new system will lead to a deflation of grades and an overall decrease in students' grade-point averages.

"I'm really concerned with the effects that plus-minus grading will have," Fischer said. "I think that both top students and students who are barely scraping by will be hurt."

"Even with the A-plus, I feel top students' GPAs will gradually decrease," Fischer said. "And the implementation of the new system will really hurt those who are barely getting by. They will probably have trouble graduating because they're usually the ones getting the minuses."

This decrease in the GPAs of top students is a feature noted at many universities that have recently adopted the plus-minus system.

"The only negative aspect noted at other universities (which recently added the plus-minus marks to their grading systems) was a tendency for students at the very top to have slightly lower GPAs," said James Lindberg, associate dean for academic programs of the UI College of Liberal Arts.

To guard against this, the UI's system "explicitly includes an A-plus to guard against any tendency to lower the GPAs of students at the very top," he said.

However, problems with the new system have already occurred. Many professors resuming classes this fall failed to inform students whether they would utilize the plus-minus system when determining students' marks — a situation which angers both students and student leaders.

"The LASA (Liberal Arts Student Association) office has been getting lots of calls from students who are unaware of the implications of the plus-minus system," said Mary Snyder, co-chairperson of LASA's academic affairs committee.

"Professors haven't said anything about the new system in their classes and it seems some of the faculty may be unaware of the conditions for implementation," Snyder said. "Instructors are supposed to inform their classes right away whether they'll use the plus-minus system or not."

Student opinions of the new grading system vary with each individual class, Snyder said.

"Students enrolled in classes which tend to be more subjective, such as the humanities, generally support the traditional A, B, C, D, F scale," Snyder said. "They feel there is no practical method for a professor to determine 13 different grading levels when grades are based only on the professor's opinion of the work."

"But in a course like chemistry, where instructors keep track of points, students feel the new system will benefit them because it's easy to differentiate between the many levels," Snyder said.

County advisory board changes name, focus

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

The Mental Health and Mental Retardation Advisory Board's imminent name change means more than just changing stationery letterhead, according to Johnson County human services coordinator Marge Penney.

Penney addressed a meeting of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

A state law, which went into effect July 1, officially changed the advisory board's name to the Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Advisory Committee.

"We assume state legislatures changed the law because they wanted committees to also look for services to the developmentally disabled," Penney said. "The new law requires a balance between mental health, mental retardation and developmental disabilities."

To achieve balance, the advisory board must consist of the same number of members exclusively tied to each of the three issues, according to Penney.

On the current board, five members have a primary interest in mental health, two members mainly support mental retardation and one member is involved with developmental disabilities. One seat is open.

In addition, the new committee must include consumers, service providers, service funders, program monitors and advocates within the three areas.

Initially, Penney recommended an increase of seven advisory committee members, bringing the total to 15 members, five supporting each department.

"It's a complicated setup," Penney said. "With a larger committee it's easier to fulfill requirements," she said.

Supervisor Dick Myers said a committee that size would be too large.

"Fifteen people is too unwieldy a number for a committee," Myers said. "Maybe we could add people to the committee so the split will be three, three and three."

Supervisors Robert Burns and Don Sehr agreed with Myers.

"We once had a group that large on the regional planning committee and it was terrible," Burns said.

"Fifteen is ungodly, but we already have five people on mental health," Sehr said.

The law also directly affects the board.

Supervisors also expressed dissatisfaction with the three-level system Penney outlined. Under the new system, the chair of the advisory committee will join the board of supervisors in approving research programs recommended by the advisory committee. The board of supervisors itself will appropriate the money for the programs.

"There is (a step) in there that is totally unnecessary," Myers said.

"Having a sixth person with the board of supervisors, I don't like that. I think that is totally wrong," Burns added.

Supervisors Harold Donnelly and Betty Ockenfels did not attend the meeting.

In the absence of Ockenfels, who originally studied the issue, supervisors deferred action on the proposal.

Peterson pleads guilty to murder

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

A Coralville man pleaded guilty to first-degree murder Tuesday, in the stabbing death of his former boss, according to first assistant county attorney Linda McGuire.

Mark R. Peterson, 35, pleaded guilty to the first-degree murder of Marshall Stewart, McGuire said.

Stewart, 61, was stabbed to death in the bedroom of his home at 1314 Whiting Avenue Court on March 24.

Peterson was to have gone to trial Sept. 12.

Peterson entered the plea against the advice of his attorney, William Yetter. McGuire said she didn't know why Peterson had entered the guilty plea.

"He admitted to breaking into the Stewart residence in possession of a large knife, stabbing him in the chest and killing him," McGuire said. "He said he had done it out of vengeance and that he had driven over there with intent to kill him."

First-degree murder carries a mandatory life sentence.

Peterson is to be sentenced Oct. 21.

Todd Eric Johnson, 24, of 1916 Waterfront Drive, was charged with allegedly entering a residence on Lakeside Drive, sexually assaulting a female in the downstairs living room and striking another female in the residence who was accidentally awakened during the incident, according to court records.

Johnson allegedly fled the scene prior to the police officers' arrival, but both victims were able to give a description of the suspect and he left behind some personal items, including a uniform with a name tag reading "Todd." One of the victims was also able to identify Johnson in a photograph line-up as the man who allegedly assaulted her, according to court records.

Both females injured in the incident were treated at UI Hospitals according to court records.

Bail is set at a total of $85,000 for the three charges. A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 12, according to court records.

A Coralville man was charged with assault causing injury and domestic assault Sunday for allegedly inflicting injury on a woman with whom he had been cohabitating, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David M. Birch, 20, of 1500 Fifth St., was allegedly involved in a physical conflict with the woman. An arresting officer spoke with Birch, who allegedly stated that he "probably did hurt her," according to court records.

Bail is set at $2,500. Birch was instructed not to have any contact, even by telephone, with the victim. A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 13, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was charged with possession of a controlled substance Saturday for allegedly having a hand-rolled marijuana cigarette in his possession, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Peter Michael Bobb, 32, of 2254 S. Riverside Drive, was brought to the Johnson County Jail by the Iowa Highway Patrol for allegedly operating a vehicle while intoxicated. While a jail official was taking inventory of his personal property, what appeared to be a marijuana cigarette was found between the credit cards in Bobb's wallet, according to court records.

A presumptive test on the substance was positive for marijuana, according to court records.

Bobb was released from custody on his own recognizance and must contact the Mideast Council on Chemical Abuse within 10 days of his charge for evaluation and education on substance abuse. A preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 22, according to court records.

Eating cheese may keep acid from decaying your teeth

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

People concerned with the battle against plaque should floss regularly, brush after every meal and eat cheese.

According to the results of a recently completed UI College of Dentistry study, a dozen varieties of cheese are able to eliminate or reduce the plaque acids created in the mouth and keep acidity at normal levels when eaten before a sugary snack.

Dr. Mark Jensen, director of the UI College of Dentistry's Center for Clinical Studies, said the study originated when researchers began looking for natural snack foods that do not harm the teeth.

According to Jensen, even natural snacks like apples and raisins caused harm to the teeth.

"When we started looking at snack food, almost everything looked bad," Jensen said.

Jensen said studies during the 1950s and 1960s provided minimal information on the history of cheese in animal studies.

During the UI study, micro-electrodes were fitted in the mouths of five volunteers to measure changing acidity levels. The subjects were given sugar rinses to create an acid attack on their teeth before and after they ate cheese.

According to the study, all 12 varieties of cheese were able to neutralize an acid attack already in progress. Plaque acids were also neutralized when sugar was consumed after cheese.

Researchers found that cheddar, mozzarella, Muenster, Edam, Gouda, swiss, Romano, Stilton, Roquefort, Port Salut, tilsit and monterey jack cheese all fight plaque acids created in the mouth and help keep acidity at normal levels.

In addition, cheddar cheese was found to aid the remineralization of tooth surfaces that have become depleted of minerals due to plaque acid attacks.

Researchers fitted volunteers with a small piece of artificially decayed tooth-like material. Results indicated that cheddar cheese, eaten four times daily for two weeks, can significantly remineralize decay-weakened tooth surfaces.

Jensen said practical application of the study's findings may result in snack food improvements or the modification of existing snack products. If eaten at the end of a meal, Jensen said cheese can help fight acid attacks on teeth until it is possible to brush.

However, Jensen said other factors are included in choosing snack foods.

"There are certainly other dietary concerns to consider," Jensen said. "Cheese may not be the perfect food, but the dental aspects are important."

Jensen said the dental college will conduct additional research including tests on other varieties of cheese.

The study was funded by the National Institute for Dental Research and the National Dairy Council.

Branstad: Allow porn limits

DES MOINES (AP)—Gov. Terry Branstad on Tuesday said he will ask the Legislature to give cities the power to enact their own anti-pornography laws and to clarify a ban on renting hard-core videos to youngsters.

Branstad said it is "appropriate" to let local governments design their own laws, even if the result is widely differing rules around the state.

Court decisions have endorsed the concept of local standards, and state officials should take the same step, he said.

That call drew an immediate attack from the Iowa Freedom of Information Council, which said Branstad was endorsing "witch hunts" by local governments which would be under intense pressure to pass tough anti-pornography laws.

"I think that's an unqualified call for and the governor sanctioning witch hunts," said Herb Strentz of the council. "I think it would do serious injury to freedom of expression in Iowa and maximize unneeded, unnecessary pressure on school boards, libraries and individual Iowans."

Branstad's comments came during his regular session with reporters as the governor said current anti-pornography laws have been confused by court rulings and need to be revised, in part to respond to prosecutors' pleas that they simply are not working.

"The present law, at least from what I'm hearing from prosecutors around the state, is not doing the job," Branstad said.

Branstad said the tightened law would be aimed at "really heinous types of pornography" including depictions of sadomasochism, bondage and other materials.

The governor's comments came after complaints by some prosecutors that "very strict" interpretations of the state's pornography laws have resulted in a ban on sales of videos to youngsters but excluded rentals which are by far the most common practice.

"It should be amended to make it clear it includes the lease as well as the sale," Branstad said.

The governor said he would move to include video rentals in the ban and would take a more sweeping step by asking cities be given the power to enact their own restrictions, which currently is prohibited.

"In the past I have recommended that we eliminate that restriction that prevents communities from passing ordinances on pornography," Branstad said. "I intend to recommend again that restriction which prevents communities from taking action be eliminated."

Allowing cities to enact their own anti-pornography laws would free local governments to make their own definitions about what constitutes pornography and put in place individual restrictions.

"I think that's appropriate," Branstad said.

But Branstad's position is sure to spark a legislative debate, as Strentz said his group would oppose the effort. Such a law might provoke a court challenge, Strentz said.

"The way to avoid legal challenge is to avoid passing a bad bill," Strentz said.

Pentacrest speakers deliver apartheid concerns at rally

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Four speakers addressed about 85 people on the Pentacrest Tuesday afternoon to begin anti-apartheid week activities.

Jennifer Hix, a member of the Iowa Coalition Against Apartheid, a sponsor of this week's events, said "I'm not sure how many people were here, but I think the rally went really well."

"The audience was quite attentive," she added.

Marothi Ramaube, an undergraduate student at Iowa from South Africa, acted as emcee, introducing the rally's four speakers.

"I think Marothi did a good job introducing the speakers and explaining why we have this commemoration," said William Langeveldt of the South African/Azanian Student Association who attended the rally. "He also explained what happened in South Africa 11 years ago."

In 1977, anti-apartheid activist

Steve Biko died while in detention with the South African government. He has become a martyred figure admired by many anti-apartheid activists.

The first speaker was Tshidi Majela, who spoke about black consciousness and Steve Biko's role in it. His speech was followed by that of New Wave member Catherine Welsh.

Welsh highlighted the importance of Steve Biko because of his contributions to the Black Consciousness Movement in South Africa. She said that locally there is a need for the UI to stand behind a commitment against apartheid.

Shani Sanyika-Brooks, a black American, then spoke about the world-wide oppression of people of color in general, and of black people in the U.S.

Alaa Auda, representing the General Union of Palestinian Students, addressed the issue of Israeli occupation of the Gaza Strip, and how military occupation is problematic for Palestinians and black South Africans.

"There are ties between Palestine and South Africa," he said in a telephone interview. "The phenomena of occupation is almost the same. The same tactics of cooling the uprisings are used."

"There is a disease, and symptoms of a disease (in Gaza). That disease is military occupation," Auda said. "You find the same disease in South Africa."

Auda contends that the similar symptoms of military occupation include the diminished quality of life that the people of both Israel and South Africa have.

"(The people of Israel and South Africa) are underclass—they don't have simple human being rights—they can't vote, own land, they are denied citizenship and they pay high taxes," Auda said.

Kathy Wordlaw, also a black American, represented the Black Student Union at the rally when she spoke about black pride and consciousness.

Paper plans for new plant

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Press-Citizen requested approval Tuesday for construction of a $7.8 million newspaper plant in northeast Iowa City.

Press-Citizen publisher Mary Parks Stier filed a request at City Hall Tuesday to rezone approximately 17 acres of a 36.7-acre tract outside the city, east of Highway 1 and south of the American College Testing building. The paper asks that the area be rezoned from single-family to research and development. The rezoning would allow the paper to build a facility there.

Stier said outdated equipment and need for more space prompted the rezoning request. "We have a 53-year-old press — an old letter press — and we're concerned about how much longer it can function," she said, adding that the modern offset press the newspaper plans to buy will be too large to fit in the present facility.

E.J. Liechty, 79, former publisher of the Press-Citizen said he was pleased with the plan to relocate the newspaper south of Interstate 80.

"I think because of the growth of the Press-Citizen since 1937 that a new building is a necessity," he said.

The new, 40,000-square-foot building will cost about $4 million, according to Stier.

UI salary program discussed

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

The UI Faculty Council discussed a three-year faculty salary enhancement program, which has been in effect for the last two years, at a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Other budget concerns, including the base budget and the state of the general operating budget, were also reviewed in conjunction with the continuation of the salary enhancement program in order to devise a ranking of proposals which will be given to the state Board of Regents Sept. 14 by the council.

Donald G. Marshall, chair of the council's report, budgetary planning and review committee, said the committee was planning to reintroduce the salary enhancement program as a main proposal to the regents. Marshall believes the maintenance of a steady increase in faculty salary will contribute to the UI's faculty retention.

"If we imply that we (the faculty) don't mind if the plan is cut in the middle, it just might happen," Marshall said.

UI Faculty Council President Peter Shane agreed with Marshall's stand, stressing the morale of the faculty, which he says has been boosted due to the previous annual salary increases.

"My projection is that most faculty members support the continuation of the three-year salary enhancement program," Shane said.

But council member Michael Green said that an increase in the base budget would also be beneficial and could be a budget priority for many faculty members.

Upon further discussion it was decided that the report, budgetary planning and review committee would continue to diagram a more extensive proposal outline based on faculty opinions voiced at the meeting.

The council also discussed the proposed addition of another staff seat to the UI Parking and Transportation Committee.

Positions on the committee are occupied by nine members — the student, staff and faculty are represented by three seats each.

Because one of the staff positions is now to be held by a union member, the proposal was made by staff members to the council in order to maintain control over three seats.

After continued discussion, council passed a motion to deny the staff's proposal based on the function of the committee as an advisory agent.

Report: Iowa crops still struggling

DES MOINES (AP)—The harvest of Iowa's drought-damaged corn and soybean crops is under way in almost all parts of the state with yields showing a wide variance across Iowa, the government's weekly crop report said Tuesday.

The report from the U.S. and Iowa agriculture departments said 75 percent of Iowa's corn crop has reached maturity, compared with the five-year average of 21 percent of the corn mature by this time of the year.

The condition of the crop changed very little from the previous week, with 6 percent rated good, 40 percent fair, 39 percent poor and 15 percent very poor. Last week, the report said the crop was 6 percent good, 38 percent fair, 37 percent poor and 19 percent very poor.

The condition of the soybean crop also was little changed from the previous week, with 10 percent reported in good condition, 50 percent in fair condition, 33 percent poor and 7 percent very poor. Last week, the soybean crop was reported 10 percent good, 51 percent fair, 34 percent poor and 5 percent very poor.

The crop report said leaves have turned color on 70 percent of the soybean acreage in Iowa, with the normal for this time of year being 31 percent. Soybeans were mature on 20 percent of the acreage. Last year at the same time, only 7 percent was mature and the five-year average is 8 percent.

The report said 3 percent of the soybean crop already has been harvested.

Subsoil moisture was reported 98 percent short and 2 percent adequate. The previous week's report had subsoil moisture 97 percent short and 3 percent adequate.

Soviet cosmonauts abort return to Earth

MOSCOW — Two cosmonauts, low on food and oxygen, aborted their return to Earth on Tuesday after a faulty system sent them toward a landing in China.

Soviet news reports said 29-year-old Abdul Ahad Mohmand, the first Afghan in space, and Soviet cosmonaut Vladimir Lyakhov, 47, were in no immediate danger but the situation could have become critical unless they descended soon.

"Accident! The engine worked 60 seconds and shut off. A violation of the stabilization regime," Lyakhov told mission control in an exchange reported by the government newspaper Izvestia.

James Oberg, a U.S. expert on the Soviet space program who is familiar with the Soyuz TM-5 design, said: "If they cannot make the burn tonight to push them back into the atmosphere, they will probably only live another 24 to 48 hours before the carbon dioxide building in the capsule will kill them."

Shuttle crew tests emergency procedure

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — With the first post-Challenger space shuttle flight about three weeks away, the astronauts assigned to the mission began three days of emergency and countdown training Tuesday.

The five-man crew flew here from the Johnson Space Center in Houston and plunged into a busy afternoon schedule.

The astronauts, who will ride the shuttle Discovery, were given briefings on launch preparations and shuttle emergency escape procedures, driving lessons in an armored personnel carrier which the astronauts would use to get away from the launch pad in case of trouble and practice runway landings in a jet modified to handle like the shuttle.

Western wildfires threaten canyon towns

COOKE CITY, Mont. — Wind threatened to drive a wall of flame through two small canyon communities bordering Yellowstone National Park, prompting authorities Tuesday to order all residents to leave town.

Facing sustained winds over 20 mph and increasing, fire officials were pessimistic about holding back the unpredictable 61,300-acre Storm Creek fire, only two miles west of Silver Gate, the first town in the fire's path.

"We have about a 25 percent chance of holding the fire out of these two communities," said David Liebersbach, incident commander at Silver Gate.

Gov. Ted Schwinden and federal authorities Tuesday imposed a ban on all outdoor recreation outside Montana's cities and towns. Schindens said the ban will remain in effect until weather eases the fire danger.

13 major fires have burned roughly 1 million acres in Yellowstone and the surrounding national forests in Wyoming, Montana and Idaho. Wholly inside the 2.2 million-acre park, 633,725 acres are charred.

Panda Chia Chia thought to be homesick

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Zoo officials are giving giant panda Chia Chia five days off to see if he can overcome what they believe is homesickness.

Chia Chia went on display Friday at the start of a three-month stopover on his move from the London Zoo to Mexico City. But the zoo administrators closed the exhibit the same day because the panda was staying in his den and acting strangely.

"At first, we thought it was jet lag, but it's taken much longer than we expected," said Jo Gippis, curator of mammals with the London Zoo, who traveled with Chia Chia. "Homesick is exactly the word for what's wrong."

Since Friday, the 290-pound panda has emerged periodically from his den to eat bamboo for a few minutes, then quickly retreated from public view. When keepers tried to lock the doors to his den to keep him in view, the panda became agitated, pacing rapidly and bumping the walls.

Increased interest boosts stock market

NEW YORK — The stock market advanced Tuesday because of increased buying interest from a pre-Labor Day surge, but the trading level remained slow and signaled cautious behavior by large influential investors.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which jumped 52.28 points Friday for the biggest one-day advance in three months, added another 10.67 to close at 2,065.26. Broader market indicators also rose.

But New York Stock Exchange volume totaled only 122.25 million shares, considerably less than the 159.84 million traded in the Friday session, when the Labor Department's report that unemployment rose in August incited some enthusiasm in the markets because it eased fear of inflation.

Minority fund earns Student Senate OK

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

A $2,500 scholarship fund aimed at increasing the number of UI minority students was approved by UI Student Senate Tuesday night.

The UI Opportunity at Iowa Scholarship will award 10 Black, Latino, Asian-American and Native American students $250 each year.

Scholarship applicants will be reviewed on need-based guidelines established by the Senate President, Vice President, the Chair of the Minority Affairs committee and one other senator, according to the bill.

The scholarship committee will award the scholarships to 10 minority students who have the greatest remaining financial need as determined by the UI Financial Aid Office.

The need-based scholarships are part of the UI Opportunity at Iowa Program — designed to increase the number of minority students through financial assistance and other support efforts, according to Melinda Hess, Student Senate President and sponsor of the bill.

Hess said the Opportunity at Iowa Scholarship would help target needy minority students who do not work with Special Support Services or other UI student groups.

Senators Damon Terrill and Dave Starck cast the only dissenting votes for the scholarship.

Terrill said he could not support the bill because race should not be a factor in scholarship distribution.

"What this scholarship says is we don't want the color of your skin to be an issue, but we are going to make it an issue," he said.

But Senator Prasanta Reddy, who supported the bill, said the UI should use all available means to end discrimination, adding the program should be extended if it proves successful.

"I think the money we have right now, with 10 scholarships, is a good goal," Reddy said.

UI Self-Help Scholarships, given to students who work 20 hours a week and maintain a minimum grade-point average, is another award area that could be expanded, Reddy said.

About $4,500 will be added to the self-help scholarship fund from the new student senate discount card.

Senate Vice President Pepe Rojas-Cardona said the new card — renamed "The Hawkeye Express Card" — will be issued the first week of October.

Merchants purchased spaces on the cards for $300 each, allowing the Senate to pay for the cost of the card and have money left to use for the self-help scholarship fund, Rojas-Cardona said.

The new plastic card entitles students to receive discounts from 29 area merchants — 15 more than last year, he said.

The cards will be distributed by member businesses, the Union and local radio station promotions.

Rojas-Cardona added UI Herd Books, comprehensive directories of UI students, faculty and staff, will be also available in early October.

Tenure

the UI College of Engineering will receive its first female faculty member this January.

Moll pointed out that in the past decade the percent of women receiving tenure has increased much more rapidly than the rate for men. He attributed this to the fact that only in the last 20 years have women faculty been actively recruited by universities and colleges.

"If we are successful in our continued recruitment of women, the situation will continue this way in the future," Moll said.

There are certain unique pressures women face that men don't have to face, said Hanley, citing child care as a major consideration in whether or not a female professor might decide to withdraw from the tenure process.

"Women are simply not in the same job market as men are. They do have special pressures on them, and we in the administration try to help with that," she said.

Hanley referred to last year's recommendation by the Dean's Committee on Tenure and Promotion to the Office of Academic Affairs that a faculty member who is the primary care person of a child be given an extra year — or even two — to prepare for tenure.

The fact that women faculty need to be represented on UI committees is a further obstacle to their progress. Since fewer faculty women are available to serve, they end up carrying more of the burden by being on more committees than men. This takes away from valuable research and teaching time.

"This is a problem of having too few women," Hanley said. "It's a two-headed monster because male colleagues are always trying to be fair and put a woman on a faculty committee, but the women are overworked because there's so few of them."

Hanley calls both women and minorities at the UI "terribly overworked from the best of intentions," and said the conflict is a paradox that addresses one of the university's worst problems.

This is the second of two stories on tenure at the UI.

Debate

campaign last week.

On Tuesday, while on a campaign stop in Portland, Bush said of Dukakis, "I have respect for him as a debater." He said Dukakis was "far better than I am" in debating.

Dukakis also had transportation troubles, being forced to cancel an appearance in Columbus, Ohio, when a surprise Federal Aviation Administration safety inspection of his campaign plane prevented his scheduled departure from Chicago.

Campaign spokesman Dayton Duncan complained that "our plane has been parked here since last night and surely, if our plane needed to be inspected, it would have been convenient for us to have it done last night, not 15 minutes before we were supposed to leave."

Iraq: Iran stalling on cease-fire talks

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP)—President Saddam Hussein on Tuesday accused Iran of starting the Persian Gulf war and stalling the cease-fire talks in Geneva.

Also Tuesday, the Iraqi government declared an amnesty for anti-irregularity Kurds and gave them 30 days to return to the country.

The amnesty decree by the Revolutionary Command Council covered "all Iraqi Kurds who have committed any crime punishable by law whether they are outside or inside the country."

But a spokesman for the Kurdish Democratic Party, the main guerrilla group, said it will not use the amnesty without guarantees that prisoners will be released and returnees will be allowed to resettle in their original villages.

"This amnesty has come too late," said the spokesman in a telephone interview with The Associated Press in Cyprus. "When people have lost their homes or their villages or their sons in these chemical bombardments, what would they accept an amnesty for?"

Kurdish rebels have charged that Iraq, after the start of the Aug. 20 cease-fire with Iran, launched a massive assault on the Kurdish population in northern Iraq, using chemical weapons and 60,000 troops. The Kurds, backed by Iran, have been seeking an autonomous homeland in that area of Iraq. Hussein referred briefly to the offensive, saying the operation was over.

In his first major public speech since the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the gulf, Hussein said Iraq has proof that Iran started the hostilities. His address to a conference of Arab information ministers was broadcast on state-run television.

"Now I can reveal for the first time that we have Iranian pilots who were downed by Iraq before Sept. 4, 1980," he said.

Iran claims the war began on Sept. 22 of that year when Iraq launched a massive invasion. Iraq claims the war began on Sept. 4, when Iran shelled Iraqi towns and attacked Iraqi ships in the Shatt-al-Arab waterway.

U.N.-mediated peace talks in Geneva have stalled, in part over Iraq's demand the waterway, its only outlet to the sea, be opened and cleared of sunken tankers. Hussein insisted that Iran is preventing progress at the talks.

"We did not ask for something unrealistic," he said. "What we asked for is free navigation in the gulf and Shatt-al-Arab."

The Shatt-al-Arab waterway, formed by the convergence of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, is located on the southern border between the two nations and is the source of a 400-year-old dispute between Iran and Iraq.

Warfare tactics probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department on Tuesday challenged Iraq's human rights record, but said it had no evidence the Middle Eastern country was engaged in chemical warfare against minority Kurds.

Secretary of State George Shultz will pursue the subject at a meeting here Thursday with Saddam Hamadi, a senior Iraqi diplomat who is involved in negotiations to end the Iran-Iraq war.

The session with Hamadi, minister of state for foreign affairs, was scheduled before reports over the weekend that Iraqi troops had slaughtered hundreds of Kurdish survivors of gas attacks.

Asked about the poison gas allegations, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said "we don't have any information to confirm whether or not those reports are true. If they were to be true, of course, we would strongly condemn the use of chemical weapons, as we have in the past."

During the course of the eight-year Iran-Iraq war the State Department on several occasions accused Iraq of using chemical weapons and condemned Baghdad for doing so.

"I don't think there is any secret," Redman said. "We've said it before."

Military scam shakes Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — A scandal involving citizens paying thousands of dollars to avoid military service has shaken Israel, where the army is considered a sacred institution and most believe their nation is surrounded by Arab enemies.

The story of Israelis paying up to $10,000 in bribes to avoid serving has been front-page news and dominated radio broadcasts Tuesday.

"Shock waves swept through the IDF (Israeli Defense Force, or army) ... following the disclosure that a network of army personnel and civilians had been arranging exemptions from military service in return for bribes," the English-language daily Jerusalem Post said.

Renaan Gissin, the deputy spokesman for the army, said the scheme that was revealed Monday with the arrest of 16 people, including high-ranking officers and doctors, and "touches on the very essence of the Israeli Defense Forces — the sacred principle here is to do military service."

Israel is a nation of 4.1 million residents where both men and women are drafted at age 18, and men do reserve service of up to 62 days a year until age 55. Many job advertisements ask applicants to prove they served in the army. Avoiding service has long been a social taboo.

There are virtually no conscientious draft resisters in Israel and fewer than 300 people have refused service during the last decade in controversial military operations in places such as Lebanon and the occupied territories.

But after the scandal broke Monday, reports surfaced that about 60 people had paid thousands of dollars to escape the draft or reserve service. Newspapers reported Tuesday that several hundred people may be involved.

The army said dozens more arrests are expected.

Gissin called the number of people involved unprecedented, saying: "This is just the tip of the iceberg. The last word has not been said."

The scheme, which investigators say started in November, reportedly involved falsified medical statements and tampering with army computers to show men excused from reserve duty. Those arrested include two lieutenant colonels, two majors and an orthopedic surgeon.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin described the scheme as an aberration, but said he would order a full investigation of the medical exemption system.

"We have to remove this disease from the healthy body of the army with all means available," he said on Israeli television.

Geula Cohen of the rightist Tehiya Party said such corruption is rooted in "an atmosphere of materialism and abandonment of the ideals of national responsibility."

Chicago blocks 'bloodless bullfights'

CHICAGO (AP) — Many Hispanics contend bullfighting is an important part of their culture, but animal welfare officials said Tuesday they don't want any repeats of the city's first "bloodless bullfight."

Peter Poholik, executive director of the city's Commission on Animal Care and Control, said he already has received — and will reject — a request for a permit for another bullfight, on Sept. 18. He said he was asking the mayor and City Council to move as soon as possible to specifically ban the bloodless fights.

Matadors in the bullfights use the traditional cape to taunt the bull, but instead of the "death in the afternoon" immortalized by author Ernest Hemingway, the bull is tagged with Velcro-tipped darts aimed at Velcro patches glued to his back, the coup de grace administered with a Velcro-tipped sword.

"It's a bullfight where they don't poke any holes in the animal," Poholik said.

Nevertheless, he believes the fights violate a city ordinance that forbids "torture, torment or baiting" of animals.

"The bull is not of a good temperament to begin with, and all of the teasing gets him really enraged. ... It's just another example of man's cruelty to animals."

About 1,100 people watched as three 1,000-pound bulls charged matadors' capes, occasionally flipping one of the men, in bullfights Saturday and Sunday.

While Poholik initially denied bullfight promoters a permit, Cook County Circuit Judge Albert Green ordered it granted on grounds the confrontations were no more cruel than rodeos, which the city allows.

"What do you do at a rodeo? The guy gets on the bull and kicks it with his spurs to incite it," Green said Tuesday. "Some people consider a bullfight a ballet."

"It was beautiful," said Bella Jonas, who attended Saturday's fight. "Nobody even hurt the bull, and now they want to stop because of cruelty. It was just plain art."

"All these people, they don't want the Spanish people to have what's theirs," said Homer Alvarado, leader of MEDA, a charity that helps the poor and received meat from the bulls, which were slaughtered after the weekend fights staged and promoted by Jaass

The Associated Press

Matador Ruiz Pantero, left, is kicked by a bull during Chicago's first ever bullfight Sunday. Monday, Chicago city officials angered many Hispanics by moving to close the legal loophole that permitted the bullfight.

Productions. "They're discriminating against us. They have a rodeo. Why don't they stop it?"

But state Rep. Ben Martinez said that "as far as I'm concerned, I'm born in this country and it's not a sport I'm interested in."

Poholik says that while he is "not all that happy about rodeo," it is a recognized sporting event in the United States and as such is allowed.

"We're trying to limit the long list of animal exploitation going on," he said.

Explosion rips Greek tanker; 7 die

PERAMA, Greece (AP) — An explosion that may have been caused by a welder's torch ripped through a Greek oil tanker on Tuesday, splitting the vessel in half and leaving seven people dead and 16 injured, officials said.

In addition to the ship's 28-member crew, about 25 workers were on board the green-and-white vessel for cleaning and maintenance work, officials said.

Many of those injured suffered severe burns. The force of the explosion also shattered windows in stores and offices around Perama.

Harbor authorities in the industrial port 10 miles west of Athens ruled out the possibility of a terrorist attack.

Instead, they theorized the explosion on board the 86,000-ton

The Daily Iowan/Rod Faccio

Anangel Greatness may have been caused by gas fumes left in the vessel's empty tanks.

Investigators speculate welders working on the ship during routine maintenance and cleaning may have ignited the 10:15 a.m. blast.

The explosion came less than two months after Arab terrorists launched a gun-and-grenade attack aboard the City of Poros cruise ship as it returned from a one-day Greek island hopping tour.

Hispanic population on the rise in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanics have increased in number by more than one-third in this decade, growing nearly five times faster than the rest of the population, the Census Bureau reported Tuesday.

More than half of all Hispanics in this country reside in just two states — California and Texas — the bureau said.

It estimated that there were 19.4 million Americans of Hispanic background as of last March, representing 8.1 percent of the nation's population.

That is 34 percent more than the 14.5 million people who listed themselves as Hispanics in the 1980 census. By comparison the nation's non-Hispanic population increased by about 7 percent in the same period.

While people of Spanish ancestry made up a growing share of the nation's residents, they are extremely concentrated geographically, the bureau found. About one-third of Hispanics, 33.9 percent, reside in California, and 21.3 percent live in Texas, meaning those two states account for well over half of all Hispanics in the United States.

While the study did not estimate the Hispanic population of every state, it said that nearly 90 percent live in just nine states.

Those are California, 6.6 million; Texas, 4.1 million; New York, 2.1 million; Florida, 1.5 million; Illinois, 801,000; Arizona, 648,000; New Jersey, 646,000; New Mexico, 543,000, and Colorado, 368,000.

DEA judge: Make pot treatment legal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Drug Enforcement Administration's chief administrative law judge Tuesday recommended legalizing marijuana as a prescription drug for treatment of multiple sclerosis and nausea suffered by cancer patients in chemotherapy.

The judge, Francis Young, found that "marijuana, in its natural form, is one of the safest therapeutically active substances known to man."

"By any measure of rational analysis, marijuana can be safely used within a supervised routine of medical care," Young said in a 68-page set of recommendations and findings.

"The judge realizes that strong emotions are aroused on both sides of any discussion concerning the use of marijuana," he said.

"Nonetheless it is essential for this agency, and its administrator, calmly and dispassionately to review the evidence of record, correctly to apply the law and act accordingly," Young said.

The recommendation is not binding on the DEA's administrator, John Lawn, who must make a final decision on whether to place marijuana on Schedule II, the list of drugs that can be given to patients with a doctor's prescription.

Young rejected as "specious" the argument that medicinal use of marijuana would encourage its use as a recreational drug.

"The fear of sending such a signal cannot be permitted to override the legitimate need, amply demonstrated in this record, of countless sufferers for the relief marijuana can provide when prescribed by a physician in a legitimate case."

"Marijuana can be harmful," Young said. "Marijuana is abused. But the same is true of dozens of drugs or substances which are listed in Schedule II so that they can be employed in treatment by physicians in proper cases, despite their abuse potential."

Kevin Zeese, an attorney for the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, which has sued to have marijuana placed on Schedule II, called the decision "a very important step in the process."

"While it is not binding, we hope that the DEA will look at it fresh and take the facts and reach a sensible conclusion," Zeese said.

The decision by Lawn or his successor will be reviewed by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, which in 1980 ordered DEA to conduct hearings.

The appellate court, which had twice previously remanded the issue to DEA, has been critical of the agency's handling of the 16-year-old case, Zeese said.

DEA spokesman Cornelius Dougherty said Lawn "won't have any comment until he has had a chance to look at" Young's report.

Dougherty said both sides have 20 days to file exceptions to Young's findings. Before making a final decision on the case, Lawn could opt to hold additional hearings, he said.

Young cited the testimony of doctors and patients during 11 days of hearings as evidence to conclude that marijuana is a medically accepted treatment for multiple sclerosis, hyperparathyroidism and the nausea suffered by some cancer patients who undergo chemotherapy.

Young found that marijuana cigarettes were more effective at controlling nausea than capsules containing synthetic tetrahydro-cannabinol, or THC, the chemically active ingredient of cannabis.

When smoked, "natural marijuana is inhaled and generally takes effect more quickly than the synthetic capsule which is ingested and must be processed through the digestive system before it takes effect," Young said.

The opinion also cited efforts by several states — including New Mexico, Louisiana and Georgia — to experiment with marijuana as medicine.

The placement of marijuana on Schedule II wouldn't automatically make it available as a prescription drug. Young noted that state and federal agencies, such as the Food and Drug Administration, would have to pass further judgment.

Marijuana is currently a Schedule I drug along with heroin, PCP and LSD. Its possession carries federal and state criminal penalties.

Under federal law, simple possession of small amounts of marijuana carries a penalty of up to a year in prison and a $5,000 fine. The law carries stiffer penalties for possession of larger quantities where prosecutors can prove there was an intent to sell the drug.

U.S. praises anti-drug efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — South American governments have begun to act decisively to curb narcotics trafficking, but Andean coca production continues to grow, as reflected by a bumper crop this year, the State Department reported Tuesday.

The department's mid-year update on the administration's international narcotics control strategy said the January-June period was characterized by a mix of progress and some frustration.

On the negative side, the report said there has been "a lack of progress in reducing the steadily growing Andean coca crop."

But the report praised the Bolivian government for exceeding its eradication targets and Peru for its commitment to test herbicides for use against coca.

Colombia also was praised for its decision to use military forces against drug traffickers.

The report said the U.S. program to reduce coca production by 50 percent in five years is working. The strategy calls for a program of eradication, enforcement, development assistance, public diplomacy and international cooperation.

"During the past six months, recognition by Latin American governments of the urgent need to address the Andean coca problem has grown significantly," the report said.

"Not only is concern addressed in leaders' public statements, but Latin American governments have begun to act, and act decisively. With U.S. experts predicting our nation's cocaine use levels may have peaked, there is genuine concern in Latin America and elsewhere about where new cocaine markets will open as traffickers seek outlets for the Andes' bumper crop."

The report said Andean governments are taking steps on their own to deal with their narcotics challenges.

"While the U.S. continues to play a major role in assisting Bolivia, Colombia and Peru in eradication and enforcement, these nations have launched important suppression operations separately and together," the report said.

It noted that Latin American enforcement organizations, operating together this summer, made 1,200 arrests and seized a substantial amount of illicit drugs, proving that regional approaches to drug enforcement are more effective than single country approaches.

Deserving scrutiny

Today in Des Moines, a trial begins. Mark Curtis, an area meatpacker, is charged with burglary and attempted rape. If convicted, he could spend 25 years in prison. So, why the fuss over an everyday criminal trial? Curtis and many others believe he's the victim of a political frame-up; this view shouldn't be dismissed out of hand.

First, Curtis is a member of the Socialist Workers Party and a past national chairperson of its youth group, the Young Socialist Alliance. Both organizations have a well-documented history of being victimized by the US government, a fact that recently resulted in their winning a landmark lawsuit against the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Second, Curtis has been personally targeted by the FBI: A lawsuit by the Committees in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador revealed that the FBI had listed Curtis as a leader of the CISPEP chapter in Birmingham where he formerly resided. The FBI has been known to work with "Red squads" and similar units within local police departments; the tactic of attacking a political activist by accusing her/him of a nonpolitical crime is sometimes used by governments to disguise repression.

Third, the Des Moines police are not the noble, progressive law enforcers of TV fantasyland. This summer several officers were accused by other officers of vicious harassment of a female patrolperson and of donning Ku Klux Klan robes to frighten a black officer — all in good fun, of course.

Finally, Curtis was badly beaten in jail. The police of course claim they acted in self-defense, but that's suspect: Curtis was outnumbered and police officers are well versed in submission holds. Even if Curtis had been violent, surely he could've been subdued short of smashing his face with a nightstick.

The truth is, only the participants know for certain what happened that evening in Des Moines. But this case raises enough questions to merit close public scrutiny. If it is a frame-up, and if the authorities can succeed with Mark Curtis, who's next?

Lacking the tools

Orrin must not have thought before he opened his hatch and said that the Democratic Party is the party of homosexuals. Hatch is now open to derision, considering the record.

Thomas Jefferson, generally considered to be a founder and pillar of the party, had a mistress. John Kennedy, a more recent standard bearer, was a notorious lady's man. Harry and Bess Truman are apparently the only President and First Lady whose bed fell down during their marital activities.

Edmund Muskie loved his wife so much that his reaction to unkind remarks about her led to the end of his candidacy. Has Orrin even forgotten Gary Hart, who failed because his little head kept winning over his big head in the fight for priority in his campaign?

Orrin's remark also looks silly in view of the old joke that Democrats will always outnumber Republicans because Democrats sleep in double beds, while Republicans use single ones.

Some say the Republican Party is the party of fear, because many of its members are wealthy materialists who, afraid of losing their piles of worldly goods to the "godless communists," find peace of mind only in an ever-increasing military arsenal. It appears that poor Orrin also suffers from another fear: homophobia.

Guns are psychological symbols of male sexuality; men who are obsessed with owning guns may be suspected of being insecure about their own masculinity. The Republican platform calls for yet more weapons. In this already dirty campaign, which is ignoring important issues such as the deficit, human rights, housing, etc., Hatch's remark begs for the retort that we should not put the Republicans into office because they themselves haven't got the tools.

Ill-founded resentment

Many disgruntled veterans have expressed anger and resentment towards the federal government's award of $20,000 to each of those Japanese Americans who were "interned" (a polite word for imprisoned) along the West Coast of the United States during World War II. They cite their own terms as prisoners of war in foreign countries and ask, "Where's our compensation?"

What these veterans and many others fail to acknowledge is the full American citizenship of those Japanese Americans who were unfairly persecuted by their own government — that of the U.S., not a foreign country — simply because of their state of origin or the origin of their ancestors. These Americans had shed whatever former national loyalties they may have had to Japan to become citizens of a country that promised equality for all, but which, in reality, ripped to shreds the dignity of thousands of its own citizens in the sacred name of national security.

Such punishment reeks of hypocrisy in a country that prides itself to be a melting pot of races and religions. Many are reluctant to admit that racial prejudice was a greater motivation behind the internment than fear of sympathy for one's original homeland, for if the latter were true, why, then, were German Americans not victims of the same fate?

For the loss of those freedoms that we hail as priceless and inalienable to all people, there can be no worthy compensation. The American people can, however, take responsibility for the tragic mistake of their government and not begrudge this small attempt at compensation to those who so justly deserve it.

Are activists obscuring issues?

Karla Miller

An article in The Daily Iowan (Sept. 2) spoke of local support for Mark Curtis, a man charged with attempted third-degree sexual abuse of a 15-year-old Des Moines girl, burglary and assault of police officers. Before everyone gets carried away on the Mark Curtis bandwagon, stop for a moment and consider the implications of what is happening.

All of the rallies, meetings, hoopla and talk of a grand conspiracy are obscuring the issues presented by the charges filed against Curtis. In my opinion, obscuring the issues is precisely what these activities are intended to do.

What is interesting, and frightening, is that we have a situation where principles and caring people are being manipulated. What appears to be developing is a left-wing version of hate-mongering. Fear of Big Brother is being used by alleging that the FBI and local police conspired to curb the activities of a political activist. This technique has been effective because we know, in many cases, that this does occur. For people who are political activists, this is a very real issue.

No one is accusing Curtis of being a lousy or lazy political activist. No one is questioning whether he has "been an outspoken fighter for better pay and working conditions" or whether he has worked hard on other issues dealing with oppression. No one is questioning whether Mark Curtis is an effective, charismatic speaker; whether he has a "good personality" or whether he is a likeable individual. Mark Curtis is not running for political office at this time.

The questions are, and should be: Did he, or did he not, sexually assault, or attempt to sexually assault, a 15-year-old girl? Is he guilty of burglary, attempted sexual assault and assaulting police officers?

We don't know the answers. We don't know the case. We don't know the facts. We do know we are being told Mark Curtis' version of the story — and in such a way as to make the victim's side of the story impossible to tell. We know that in such a forum, Mark can say whatever he wants. The victim in this case has no voice.

Please consider the 15-year-old victim. Please consider the implications for her. If a woman's assailant is someone who holds a respected position, is widely known, or in other words, is powerful, then the case will likely be judged on who he is rather than his alleged criminal actions.

Please remind yourselves that we don't have the facts in this case. Think of what must be going on for the victim and her family when she sees the man accused of assaulting her being made into an embattled hero. Think of the feelings that most assault victims experience — helplessness and vulnerability — and how they must be compounded by a situation like this.

If Curtis is innocent, he will be given every opportunity to maintain that evidence in court. The burden of proof is on the state. Curtis may present as many facts and character witnesses as he chooses. The case should not be tried in the press or a forum of support.

Mark Curtis should be treated as innocent until proven guilty in a court of law. Until then, we would do well to reject efforts to discourage the victim from telling her side of the story. We owe it to ourselves to suspend judgment until we have the opportunity to examine all the facts.

Additionally, we need to examine peoples' willingness to so quickly make an exception to how we would react to anyone else charged with attempted sexual assault. While we must not lose sight of the presumption of innocence, let us remember that sexual assault charges, in particular, are not made without probable cause.

Mark Curtis says he's innocent. What if he isn't?

Arrogantly awaiting judgment

Karen Nave

I know two people, husband and wife in their late twenties or early thirties, who are childless. Because they seem to be doing well financially, seem to be very much in love, industrious and attractive people, I occasionally wonder why they haven't started a family. In the course of conversation a couple of weeks ago, I elicited from one of them the answer.

They are convinced that the end of the world is imminent, and the Kingdom of God — the time when Jesus will return and rule over the faithful in eternal peace and beneficence — is just around the corner. In fact, they're convinced this will happen before the middle of the next decade. Being devout, they are confident they will be among the elect admitted to the Kingdom and that's the time and place to have children.

Many skeptics might find such ideas to be crazy. I find them to be more arrogant, and/or ignorant, than anything else. The end of the world has been prophesied as imminent by members of every generation of humanity. Since the beginning of the Christian era, such years as 156, 1000, 1648 and 1962 have been predicted (for various reasons) to be the last. Now, with the year 2000 fast approaching, apocalyptic predictions are proliferating the way they did at the close of the first millennium.

How arrogant to believe that contemporary predictions would be any more accurate than all of those that have hitherto proven to be wrong, even the more widely accepted ones. Every apocalyptic prediction that's been tested — no matter how meticulous in calculation, no matter how insightful in interpretation — has been wrong. Completely wrong. Sure, we know that certain allegedly necessary conditions for Judgment Day were unfulfilled during earlier predictions. Hindsight's 20/20. History suggests, however, that while today's conditions may appear to be the final steps before doomsday, our progeny will chuckle at our naivete. I wouldn't bet my, or anyone else's biological clock on, say, 1994.

The other arrogant thing about these predictions is that the "predictors" inevitably see themselves and their sectarians as the elect few who will be viewed favorably by God on Judgment Day. Considering how many different religions exist, how many sects exist within each of them, and how many faiths (like Greco-Roman polytheism) we now think to be obsolete and "cute," I think there'd be grounds for a little self-skepticism. Sure, we all worship the way each of us thinks is best, but to think we and our fellow sectarians in particular have a monopoly on truth smacks of megalomania. Such megalomania has been responsible for much of the bloodletting in human history.

What's past is prologue. These people, convinced their true faith will protect them from the tribulation, don't fear such perils as a nuclear holocaust. In fact, they eagerly await divine justice, a justice in which they are awarded for their faithfulness and the rest of us suffers retribution. They don't lose sleep over superpower standoffs, Middle Eastern travails or AIDS. They point to such problems with glee, proclaiming they're the harbingers of Judgment Day, fulfilling the prophecies of Revelation, Daniel and Ezekiel. If these people offer resources to combat such threats, it is less to alleviate the pain and suffering of others than it is to ensure themselves tickets to paradise. How sincere their gestures of goodwill.

My childless friends are not bad people. They merely suffer from an inflated sense of self-importance, believing that Judgment Day will occur on their watch and only their denomination will be ready. In what religion is arrogance a virtue? Instead we should all strive for humility and genuine concern for others.

Lord Jerry

To the Editor:
The Lord Jerry Falwell took man and woman and put them in the garden of cinema to see it and rent it. He said, "You may choose from any movie in the garden, but not from the tree of freedom and choice. For on that tree hangs "The Last Temptation of Christ."

Martin "the serpent" Scorsese was more crafty than any other creature in the garden. He tempted them by saying, "Here is a story about a man who knew good and evil, a man of commitment to what he believed to be right, a man of conscience, a man of power, but above all, a man.

The people saw that the fruit of this tree was good to see, it was pleasing to the eye and tempting to contemplate. They reached, but the Central States Theater Corp. came and took the fruit down.

The censor looked down and saw that all was well and said, "Now for the tree..."

Problems associated with Third World aid

Vishwas Gaitonde

I was in England at the height of the Ethiopian famine two years back. Every day sordid pictures from Ethiopia flashed on British television screens on the news. Bones of cattle, bleached by the sun in the arid wastelands, were shown. So were hordes of abject people in camps miraculously surviving on pitifully little. Skinny children with blank faces, flies greedily sucking the tissue juices from the festering sores on their bodies. And perhaps the sorriest sight — tons of grain rushed there by concerned people in the West rotting away in the port because there was no way to transport it into the interior where it was sorely needed.

It was a classic example of a common occurrence in the Third World — aid is requested and aid is given without any planning or assessment of the logistics. The Ethiopian situation may have been bungled because it was an emergency situation, but everyday life is strewn with such examples where cash and kind keep sliding down the drain.

A doctor from the World Health Organization found himself twiddling his thumbs when posted in an ante-natal clinic in northern India. The clinic was well equipped and had a good obstetric and gynecological back-up service. But there were no patients. The women had no concept of what an ante-natal clinic was and weren't interested in knowing. Intensive health education should have preceded and accompanied setting up the clinic.

Health education is an essential adjunct to any kind of medical aid in most parts of the Third World. An organization called Medical Relief Wing consisting of doctors and medical students operates from Madras Medical College, Madras (in southern India). They visit a village weekly, examining patients and dispensing drugs on the spot. On one visit, I saw two women engaged in fierce argument with a hapless medico — they both had the same kinds of aches, they said, yet one had been given white pills and the other a red syrup! This village was not isolated in the rural backwaters, it was very much on the beaten track. That says a lot for the amount of health education that is needed.

Many agencies in the West determine what kind of aid is needed in their region of interest without doing enough groundwork. An example: There is a food shortage in a region. The logical deduction is that the exploding population is the cause and the "cure" would be to curb the population increase. Accordingly, loads of condoms are dispatched. The villagers don't know what condoms are, or mistrust them, or have religious taboos. They give the condoms to the children who use them as balloons. The village elders remark that it was very nice of those kind people to send toys for the kids, but if they really wanted to help, surely they could have sent some food.

An organization called the Bureau for Overseas Medical Service (BOMS) was started in London in 1979 to make the best use of British doctors interested in serving in the Third World. Their program was three-pronged.

First, to change attitudes among British medical personnel to working in the Third World. Second, to keep a double register of doctors keen to go and vacancies where they were needed. Third, to orient the doctors and their families before sending them abroad through books and pamphlets, putting them in touch with someone recently returned and by developing contacts with doctors and agencies who could provide the necessary training.

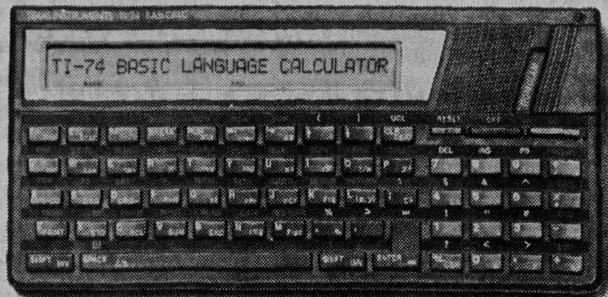

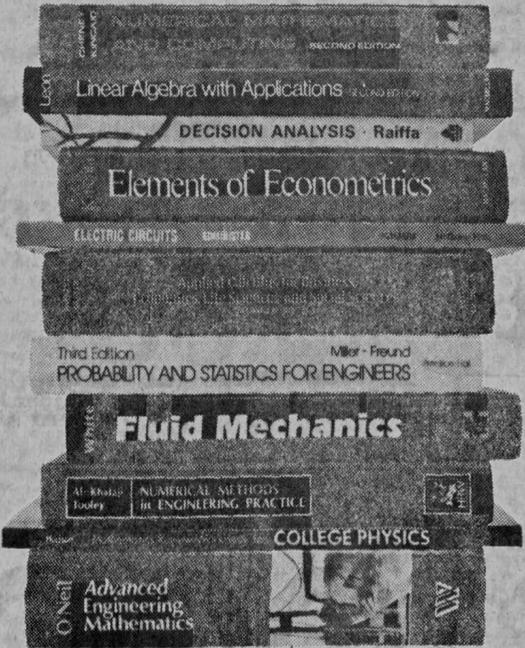

The program was so successful that by 1985 it had expanded to cover all types of health workers from pharmacists and nurses to physiotherapists and administrators. They went to all kinds of places from Thailand to Sudan and Zimbabwe to Tristan da Cunha. They reported that they did a lot of useful work and it was fun.

What I have written about medical aid applies to other forms of aid as well. Planning and assessment of the recipients' needs must precede the assistance. Aid may be wanted, but one should ensure that it is also needed.

Looking for an Olympic moment

This year's Olympics will be a relief for sports fans who enjoy watching great athletes who don't get much airplay. Already holding the makings for many record-breaking performances and long-awaited rivalries, true sports enthusiasts anticipate an Olympic gift that hasn't been delivered in years.

The 1984 Olympics left U.S. fans wondering if their team, which raked in the medals against the field of teams which didn't include the Soviets, was really that good.

Further expectations have been focused on this summer's Games because of Team U.S.A.'s poor showing in the 1988 Winter Olympics. American audiences just aren't accustomed to having the team battling the likes of Guam, Trinidad and Tobago in the medal count.

Moreover, the last time Soviet and Americans met in the summer Olympics Gerald Ford was on the president and Bruce Jenner had yet to appear on the front of cereal boxes.

From a competition standpoint the Games of 1988 will have the usual assortment of heroes. The Americans have their share of record challengers in Florence Griffith-Joyner, Jackie Joyner Kersee, Butch Reynolds and Carl Lewis.

During the Olympics, as an enthusiast of wrestling, water sports or track and field can attest, is one of the few times less known sports receive television coverage. Even our local ABC affiliate couldn't see its way clear to the scheduled track and field trials because of an all-important Cu game.

This points to the big reasons the Olympics have lost their grace and status in the 1970s and 1980s: The competition has nearly become secondary to commercialization, politicization and the drive to win even if it means bending a few rules.

The two most recent Olympics give notice to that overriding problem of lost concern for tradition. In a sense, tradition is the Olympics' oldest sporting event in the world.

Tradition is part of the reason sports like arena football and indoor soccer don't have a following. It's why boxing remains relatively intact despite furor over the inhumanity of the sport.

In recent years we've seen many notable changes and breaks with Olympic tradition. The boycotts of 1980 and 1984, the growing action of exhibition sports such as baseball, taekwondo and tennis, steroid use and the push to allow greater numbers of professional American athletes to participate.

The logical reply to cries of broken customs is that change is necessary and inevitable. Economic factors force many of the previously mentioned situations. Recent Olympic Games are not the only example of the competition becoming a political tool. Hitler certainly wasn't promoting international goodwill at the 1936 Games in Berlin.

The commercialized bombast that was the games of 1984 is an adequate reason for a re-dedication to tradition. The Hollywood production and flash of the closing ceremonies showed the rest of the world where American values lie.

Jim McKay attempting to describe a breakdancer, who was backing up to Lionel Richie performing an extended version of "All Night Long," is not exactly a great Olympic moment.

In less than two weeks the games of 1988 will likely rewrite record books and be the subject of daily articles on this very page.

With any luck it will also re-ignite the games toward an emphasis on international competition and deliver the sporting gem we've been waiting for.

Neil Lewis is Daily Iowan sports editor.

The 1984 Olympics left U.S. fans wondering if their team, which raked in the medals against the field of teams which didn't include the Soviets, was really that good.

Further expectations have been focused on this summer's Games because of Team U.S.A.'s poor showing in the 1988 Winter Olympics. American audiences just aren't accustomed to having their team battling the likes of Guam or Trinidad and Tobago in the medal count.

Moreover, the last time Soviets and Americans met in the summer Olympics Gerald Ford was our president and Bruce Jenner had yet to appear on the front of cereal boxes.

From a competition standpoint, the Games of 1988 will have the usual assortment of heroes. The Americans have their share of record challengers in Florence Griffith-Joyner, Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Butch Reynolds and Carl Lewis.

During the Olympics, as any enthusiast of wrestling, water sports or track and field can attest, is one of the few times lesser known sports receive television coverage. Even our local ABC affiliate couldn't see its way clear to air the scheduled track and field trials because of an all-important Cubs' game.

This points to the big reasons the Olympics have lost their grace and status in the 1970s and 1980s: The competition has nearly become secondary to commercialization, politicization and the drive to win, even if it means bending a few rules.

The two most recent Olympiads give notice to that overriding problem of lost concern for tradition. In a sense, tradition is the Olympics, the oldest sporting event in the world.

Tradition is part of the reason sports like arena football and indoor soccer don't have a large following. It's why boxing remains relatively intact despite furor over the inhumanity of the sport.

In recent years we've seen many notable changes and breaks with Olympic tradition. The boycotts of 1980 and 1984, the growing addition of exhibition sports such as baseball, taekwon-do and tennis, steroid use and the push to allow greater numbers of professional American athletes to participate.

The logical reply to cries of broken customs is that change is necessary and inevitable. Economic factors force many of the previously mentioned situations. Recent Olympic Games are not the only examples of the competition becoming a political tool. Hitler certainly wasn't promoting international goodwill at the 1936 Games in Berlin.

The commercialized bombast that was the games of 1984 is an adequate reason for a re-dedication to tradition. The Hollywood production and flash of the closing ceremonies showed the rest of the world where American values lie.

Jim McKay attempting to describe a breakdancer, who was backspinning to Lionel Richie performing an extended version of "All Night Long," is not exactly a great Olympic moment.

In less than two weeks the games of 1988 will likely rewrite the record books and be the subject of daily articles on this very page.

With any luck it will also reroute the games toward an emphasis on international competition and deliver the sporting gem we've been waiting for.

Iowa's inexperience hurts in opening loss, Fry says

By Brent Woods
The Daily Iowan

Many people thought Saturday's game against Hawaii would be an automatic non-conference win for the Iowa Hawkeyes.

An easy assumption to make, but obviously wrong.

Kansas State, which struggled through a winless season last year, is next on Iowa's slate, but don't expect Coach Hayden Fry to overlook any team after the shocker in Honolulu.

"We have a good football team, but obviously not as good as the so-called experts had us ranked," Fry said at his weekly press conference Tuesday.

"I go to great extremes to try to be honest. I'm not in this business to apologize because some of you people had us winning the national championship." Fry said his team, with 14 new faces, wasn't seasoned enough to execute under game conditions against the Rainbows.

"We've got 14 new starters," Fry said. "It takes a while to get the guys experienced enough to defeat a good ballclub. My players are hurt and disappointed, but we weren't really that bad. It was more of Hawaii being good."

According to Fry, five critical defensive mistakes contributed to the loss. And Hawaii made the most of all of them.

"We knew, with new people, we were going to make some mistakes," he said. "Hopefully, they wouldn't be quite that critical. We had some old-timers make mistakes that they usually don't make. We also made several mistakes offensively that cost us."

Iowa was slapped with four holding calls, all on important plays, including the game-winning touchdown which was called back. Hawaii was called for holding once.

"I can't comment on that. You're welcome to look at the film," Fry said of the officiating. "I'll put it this way: we were warned before we went over there that we better have a lot better football team than the other team."

"We have to be good enough to overcome anything that happens in a ballgame."

Kansas State was beaten by Tulsa last week 35-9 in their opener. Fry said he expects to see a wishbone offensive attack and aggressive

Hawks top Weber in five games

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team won its fourth straight victory of the season Tuesday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, but it didn't come easy.

The Hawkeyes defeated Weber State 13-15, 10-15, 15-11, 15-12, 15-9, and Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said the stiff competition was almost too much to handle.

"Oh, it was fun but two long matches really makes my heart pressure go up," Stewart said. "I thought it was an excellent match. But there were times when we lacked intensity."

Weber State Coach Cindy Frederick agreed that the match was exciting. Frederick, a former assistant coach for Stewart, is a native Iowan and was happy to return.

"It was an exciting match," Frederick said. "Iowa has a nice defense. We were a little down because we didn't get the performance I had expected from our outside hitter. Iowa came together very well in the end of the match. It is always fun to return to my home state."

Stewart said Kim Benesh from Weber State and the Hawkeyes' Janet Moylan and Barb Willis were important players in the match.

"Kim is the best hitter we have seen by far this season," Stewart said. "Their freshman setter also did an excellent job. Janet Moylan did a good job but was off in the fourth or fifth game."

"Barb Willis was also good but then she also was off. But then when someone is off, someone else comes back on."

According to Stewart, the turning point in the match was after the second game. She said motivation was the key factor in the turnaround.

"I said that we were not playing through the heart," Stewart said. "We were there but we weren't really there. We just proved that we can play well when we want to. We need to play with emotion."

Iowa co-captain Kari Hamel led the Hawkeyes with 26 kills.

Iowa sophomore Barb Willis comes up short in her attempt to block a shot by Weber State junior Mollie Wilkins during the opening game Tuesday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Hamel, who was recruited by Weber State, said she noticed an improvement in the program.

"They are much better than when I last saw them," Hamel said. "Their hitting is bigger and better. They are also hitting harder. I wish we had done it in three games."

Following Hamel in kills was co-captain Toni Zehr with 13, and Barb Willis with 12. The Wildcats' Benesh had 27 kills and outside hitter Kathy Nickel had 14. The Hawkeyes led the match with 40 blocks, with Hamel contributing 14 and Willis 10.

Stewart said that some of Iowa's weak points have improved since the Hawkeyes' last match against Iowa State.

"We are serving and passing better than we have been," Stewart said. "In the match against Iowa State, those were some of our sore spots."

NCAA won't penalize UI for magazine advertisements

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — The NCAA will not penalize the UI for running an advertisement in a football magazine that had information on high school players, the university announced Tuesday.

Earlier this summer, the NCAA told Iowa officials that the ad promoting three Hawkeye players in Street & Smith's college football magazine violated the organization's rules.

Because the magazine contained information about high school players, the NCAA said the ad could be construed as giving Iowa a recruiting advantage.

Iowa officials said they had neglected to check with the NCAA before running the ad, which featured Coach Hayden Fry, quarterback Chuck Hartlieb, tight end Marv Cook and nose guard Dave Haight.

According to a statement released by the university, the NCAA reviewed the matter and decided not to impose any penalties on the football program because school officials withdrew the ads from two other publications after learning of the problem.

"We were hopeful that was the decision they would make," Iowa Athletic Director Bump Elliott said. "We were pleased to hear it from them."

"We're not under a cloud anymore because the matter is closed. The NCAA felt the action we took was appropriate and correct and they decided on that basis."

According to Street & Smith's Advertising Director Angelo Kaloigiannis, the case broke new ground because no school had ever directly placed such advertisements.

"We were a little concerned when we saw the ad," he said, "but we assumed it had been cleared by the NCAA."

Elliott had said earlier that he didn't expect any repercussions because the UI attempted to pull the ads before they were published and tried to assist the NCAA investigation.

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry explains a point to the media during his weekly press conference Tuesday.

defense from the Wildcats.

"They have just gone completely fanatical on defense," Fry said. "They have not only incorporated the Chicago Bear 46, but they've added another linebacker, a 53 defense.

"Most of it is man coverage, all-out blitz."

Tulsa handled the defense well, Fry said, but Iowa will have to concentrate on protecting the quarterback in practice this week.

Favorites advance to quarters at Open

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl struggled while Jimmy Connors and Andre Agassi sizzled as the three advanced to the U.S. Open quarterfinals Tuesday.

Lendl, stretching his winning streak here to 25 matches, beat Jakob Hlasek of Switzerland 6-4, 5-7, 6-2, 6-4 to keep alive his bid for a record fourth straight Open title.

Connors, a five-time Open champion, advanced to the quarterfinals for the 15th time in the last 16 years with a 6-1, 6-2, 6-0 victory over Jorge Lozano of Mexico.

Agassi, the No. 4 seed, won his 22nd consecutive match, beating Michael Chang 7-5, 6-3, 6-2 in a battle of American teen-agers.

"It all boiled down to one thing — who wanted to hit more tennis balls," said Agassi, 18, who tossed an extra pair of his trademark denim shorts into the stands after the match.

Chang, who is two years younger than Agassi, said he was weary after playing two straight five-set matches.

"I think my last two matches drained me, especially yesterday," he said. "I didn't come out with that same 'go out and kill' attitude."

Connors, the No. 6 seed, had the killer instinct against Lozano.

TENNIS

"I hit the ball as clean as I could today," he said. "I was also moving well out there. I was really sharp."

Lendl wasn't. But the top seed still was able to slice up Hlasek, the world's 25th-ranked player.

"I've blown a couple of sets in this tournament. I shouldn't have," Lendl said. "But it's better to have it happen now while I'm winning than later when I might really need that set."

Derrick Rostagno moved into the quarterfinals with a 6-2, 3-6, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Ronald Agener of Haiti.

With Rostagno, Connors, Agassi and Aaron Krickstein making the final eight, the United States has its largest quarterfinal contingent at the Open since 1983.

"We're doing very well," said Rostagno, who had lost in the first round the past three years. "I don't

Conner refuses to take Cup race for granted

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Dennis Conner, almost as sure to win the America's Cup as death and taxes, issued a warning on Tuesday that is bound to be heard in any sport:

"Until the race is over, it's never over."

He told a news conference the day before the Cup races were to begin that he was in a no-win situation against New Zealand's far-out yacht.

"If we win, it's because my boat was faster because you all (the media) have told me that," Conner said. "If we lose, ol' Dennis lost the America's Cup again."

Conner, in his fifth Cup series, is the only defending skipper to lose the 137-year-old trophy and the only challenger to win it back.

Iowa records nation's best attendance

(AP) — Iowa and the Big Ten Conference recorded the nation's highest average women's basketball attendance increase last year, according to the National Collegiate Athletic Association. The NCAA said the Hawkeyes showed an average attendance increase of 2,880 while the Big Ten recorded the highest per game increase for a conference at 472. Iowa ranked second in total attendance for the year and third in per game figures. The Hawkeyes drew 83,868 fans over the year, topped only by Texas with 122,613. Iowa's average per-game attendance of 5,991 was topped by Texas' 7,663 and Tennessee's 6,517.

1989 Amana VIP scheduled for June 25

AMANA, Iowa (AP) — The Amana VIP pro-am golf tournament, which has become a fixture on the summer sports schedule in Iowa, will be continued in 1989, officials at Amana Refrigeration Inc. announced. Henry J. Meyer, Amana's president and chief executive officer, said the decision was based on the response from Amana's customers, fans and employees who work at the tournament. Amana officials have said they review the tournament each year before deciding if they'll continue it the following summer. The 23rd VIP will be played June 26 at the University of Iowa's Finkbine course in Iowa City. It falls just after the Canadian Open on the PGA Tour and right before the Western Open. Amana also announced it will continue its cap program, which began in 1968 when Julius Boros wore an Amana cap during a nationally televised tournament.

Baseball salaries hit all-time high

NEW YORK (AP) — The average salary of major league baseball players in 1988 will reach an all-time high of $433,000, Player Relations Committee Executive Director Barry Rona announced Tuesday. The 1988 figure represents an increase of $31,000 over the 1987 average of $402,000. The official average is computed from the Aug. 31 roster, which showed a $419,629 average salary. Rona estimated it will rise $433,000 when all incentive and award bonuses are included at the end of the season.

Quarterbacks battle at Kansas State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Kansas State Coach Stan Parrish said following Tuesday's practice that the battle for the starting quarterback job has heated up again. Parrish said Gary Swim, who started eight games last year, was making a run at starting quarterback Carl Straw. In the 35-9 loss Saturday at Tulsa, Straw, a redshirt sophomore, completed 10 of 23 passes for 121 yards. "I probably won't make a decision until Thursday," Parrish said.

"We're going to have to work extremely hard to keep Chuck Hartlieb from getting killed. I don't know if we'll have a whole lot of a running game."

Iowa Notes

- Senior tight end/punter Marv Cook injured his ankle late in Saturday's game and will be questionable against Kansas State.
- Noseguard Dave Haight will be held out of practice this week because of a knee injury but will probably play against the Wildcats.
- Defensive back Greg Brown, who suffered a neck injury in the game and had to be taken off the field in an ambulance, said he's feeling fine and may play against Kansas State.

"I hit the guy, and I just fell," Brown said. "I tried to get up but I went all numb and tingly for a minute and I was really scared. But I feel OK now."

Redshirt freshman placekicker Jeff Skilleit, who connected on his first college attempt but missed the game-tying effort in the game's waning seconds after a rough snap and hold, said the team was down but will rebound.

"We were all really disappointed," Skilleit said. "But we'll be ready to go now. We've realized the losing feeling and we don't like it. Hopefully we won't have to feel it again for a long, long time."

know if you can say it's a comeback, but perhaps that's true, since we haven't done so well in the past.

"But we're all young, except for Connors. I'm 22 and one of the older ones."

Connors, at 36 the oldest player in the tournament, had eight service breaks Tuesday while Lozano had only one.

Lozano, a former Southern California star ranked 68th in the world, twisted his ankle in the second set and had to call an injury timeout during the changeover to get it taped and iced.

But his pride was probably hurting more than his ankle.

"I got off to a good start and got on top of him right away," said Connors, who has lost only one set in the tournament. "I think he got discouraged and missed a few shots."

Lozano, who beat 12th-seeded Guillermo Perez-Roldan in the third round, is a doubles specialist whose regular partner is Todd Witsken, who upset Connors here in the third round in 1986.

The 25-year-old Mexican could have used Witsken's help Tuesday.

Cup

He is a prohibitive favorite to keep the Cup for the San Diego Yacht Club in the best-of-three series. His opponent, New Zealand skipper David Barnes, told the conference "something very unusual would have to happen" with the weather to give New Zealand's 133-foot monohull yacht a chance against Conner's catamaran, Stars & Stripes.

Although both yachts are at the cutting edge of technology, a monohull has as much chance against a catamaran as a grandstand against a race horse.

Somewhat testily Conner told the media "there's never a sure thing in a sailboat race."

Sails have ripped, equipment can break down. "You can go in the wrong direction. The other guy can outsmart you," he said.

"My attitude is I have to do everything in my power to sail the boat and take nothing for granted. The idea is to win. I never said I wanted to keep it close. There's no extra credit for that.

"There's a fine balance between winning a race and pressing your boat to ultimate speed at the risk of your equipment. David is a very good match racer, and I'm sure he has some tricks up his sleeve. I'll try to stay clear of him at the start."

Barnes didn't roll up his sleeve, saying only: "We have a pretty good idea of the strengths of our boat."

Among others those would possibly be a better ability to handle very light airs and a lumpy sea which could slow Conner's Stars & Stripes. The forecast was for onshore winds of 12-18 knots and northwesterlies at 10-15 knots farther out to sea on the 40-mile windward-leeward course.

Tyson's injuries force fight delay

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson suffered a concussion and amnesia when his car struck a tree on Sunday, doctors said Tuesday, and Tyson's manager said the injuries will keep the champion from fighting Frank Bruno in London on Oct. 22.

Neurologist Carolyn Britton of Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center said, "He may have been unconscious as long as 20 minutes. He was still groggy when he came to in the ambulance and was quite alert in the hospital. His neurological examinations were normal."

Cardiologist Dennis Reison said at a news conference at the hospital that there is no evidence of electrical or mechanical problems with Tyson's heart.

Tyson's manager, Bill Cayton, said, "The fight (against Bruno) is off. I don't know when he will be able to fight again. It will have to be against Bruno because of the contract."

Britton said it would be 30 to 60 days before the champion could resume training.

"We strongly recommended against the fight," Britton said. "He had a concussion. The other thing is that he's had amnesia."

Britton said that when Tyson first got to the hospital on Sunday night, some nine hours after the accident occurred near Catskill, N.Y., the champion couldn't remember getting into the car. Later, he recalled getting into the car and starting it, but not the accident, which occurred around 10:20 a.m. near his training camp, a two-hour drive north of New York.

"When Tyson was told the fight was off, he took it pretty well," Britton said. "He is in good spirits. He did sustain a concussion, but he will be able to go home in the next day or two. He is doing quite well."

"He will be examined again in about a week. I expect him to be normal."

A broken bone in Tyson's right hand, suffered in a street fight two weeks ago, already had delayed the bout from Oct. 8 to Oct. 22. Cold weather, since the fight was scheduled outdoors at Wembley Stadium, precluded any further delay.

The broken bone in his hand came in a scuffle with boxer Mitch Green on a Harlem sidewalk. Sunday's accident occurred when the BMW he was driving skidded into a tree in a friend's yard upstate.

John Morris, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, said the board is waiting for a report from the WBC.

In London, a member of Tyson's managerial team said before the cancellation announcement that the bout was not in danger.

"He's been through worse things than this as a kid," Steve Lott said. "The fight is on, Mike will be fine. There's a reason they call him 'Iron Mike.'"

But the chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission said he believed Tyson should not fight for at least three months. A fighter knocked out in the ring in New York is automatically suspended for 90 days.

"A knockout is a knockout, whether it's with a glove or a steering wheel," chairman Randy Gordon said. "Sleep is sleep. But I don't know that he was unconscious."

Gordon said that he can't revoke Tyson's license in New York because the commission only has jurisdiction over what a fighter does in the ring, not outside it.

The chairman said he is working to change the law in New York so that the commission will have jurisdiction over any situation in which a fighter is injured.

"We're going to go for jurisdiction over everything, if they get hurt playing tough football, everything. I would like every commission in the country to follow suit."

Opening losses stun conference coaches

CHICAGO (AP) — While some coaches expressed shock and amazement at the Big Ten's winless start last Saturday, Bo Schembechler of Michigan wasn't one of them.

Iowa suffered a stunning 27-24 loss at Hawaii while Wisconsin, Illinois and Northwestern also went down to defeat in college football opens last Saturday.

Wisconsin was stung by Western Michigan 24-14, Illinois was jolted by Washington State 44-7 and Northwestern lost to Duke 31-21.

Schembechler, whose ninth-ranked Wolverines open the season at No. 13 Notre Dame on Saturday night, said: "I can see Iowa losing at Hawaii. It's a tough place to play. I can see a few calls going against Iowa and I didn't even see the game."

As for the four Big Ten losses, Schembechler said: "You don't like to see that. All of us in the Big Ten are disappointed. All that indicates is what college football is like today. The difference between the top teams and the bottom teams is very slim."

John Cooper, who makes his Ohio State coaching debut against Syracuse this week, said he was surprised and expected a close game between Washington State and Illinois.

"Nobody expected Hawaii to slip up a great Iowa team. But there's a lot of football to be played and the Big Ten will regain respectability before the end of the season," Cooper said.

Big Ten Football

Minnesota Coach John Gutekunst said that when he heard the score of the Washington State-Illinois game, "We decided we'd better get right back to work." Washington State plays at Minnesota on Saturday night.

"I root for the guys in the Big Ten," said Gutekunst, "but we have to handle our own team. There is no added incentive or pressure, we have to play our own game."

Purdue Coach Fred Akers said he wasn't surprised by the results — "I was shocked."

"But it will all balance out," Akers added. "You're going to lose some games you are expected to win and win some you are not supposed to."

John Mackovic, in his first game as coach of Illinois, said the rout "was not an auspicious debut."

Bill Mallory, Indiana's coach, said: "It was disappointing for everyone involved. It was not expected but you never know on any given Saturday. I hope we can make up for it this Saturday. We have a fine conference and we'll win our share."

Red Sox cruise, lead in AL East

BALTIMORE (AP)—Mike Greenwell had three hits, including a home run, and drove in three runs and Wes Gardner pitched a five-hitter as the Boston Red Sox increased their American League East lead by defeating the Baltimore Orioles 6-1 Tuesday night.

With their third consecutive road victory, the Red Sox moved two games in front of the Detroit Tigers.

Greenwell hit his 20th homer, a two-run shot that put the Red Sox ahead 5-1 in the fifth inning. His three RBIs give him 107 this season, second only to Oakland's Jose Canseco.

Gardner, 7-4, walked two and struck out two as he won his second straight start with the first complete game of his career. His previous longest outing was 7 1/2 innings against Chicago on July 22.

Blue Jays 7, Tigers 3

DETROIT — George Bell doubled to trigger a four-run Toronto second inning as the streaking Blue Jays won their sixth straight game in beating the skidding Detroit Tigers 7-3.

The Tigers, 23-30 since the All-Star break, have lost six straight games and 13 of their last 15. The Tigers had not endured a six-game losing streak since 1985 and hadn't dropped six consecutive games at home since 1984.

Jimmy Key, 10-4, struck out five and walked one in seven innings plus. Two of the Detroit runs came on Chet Lemon's 10th and 11th home runs, in the fourth and seventh innings. Duane Ward, the third Toronto pitcher, got out of a bases-loaded jam in the Tiger eighth with a double-play ball and finished for his 13th save.

Detroit's Doyle Alexander, 11-11, was tagged for five runs on six hits in two-plus innings. Alexander, 8-4 at the All-Star break, is winless in his last six starts, going 0-5 since his last win Aug. 6.

Indians 1, Yankees 0

NEW YORK — Greg Swindell pitched a three-hitter and Ron Kittle hit his 18th home run to lead the Cleveland Indians to a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees.

New York has lost three of its last four games and nine of its last 12.

Al Leiter, 4-4, making his first appearance since June 21, gave up three hits in five innings, throwing 80 pitches. He struck out five and walked two, allowing a leadoff homer to Kittle in the fourth inning that hooked inside the left-field foul pole. Kittle has hit his 18 home runs in 212 at-bats, an average of one per 11.8 at-bats.

Swindell, 15-13, struck out eight and walked three in pitching his fourth shutout and 12th complete game of the season.

Mariner 8, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Harold Reynolds drove in three runs as the Seattle Mariners defeated the Minnesota Twins 8-3.

Mike Campbell, 6-8, allowed five hits and two runs in 6 1/2 innings for the victory. Mike Schooler pitched the final 1 1/2 for his 11th save, allowing no hits and striking out three.

The Mariners scored three runs in the second inning off Bert Blyleven, 9-14. With one out, Scott Bradley and Mickey Brantley singled and Jim Presley drove in a run with a single. Rey Quinones led off to load the bases and Reynolds singled to make it 3-0.

Royals 3, Angels 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Frank White grounded a single up the middle to score two runs and give the Kansas City Royals a 3-2 victory over the California Angels.

Boston Red Sox second baseman Marty Barrett is safe at second in the first inning as Baltimore Orioles second baseman Bill Ripken is unable to make the tag in time. Boston beat Baltimore 6-1.

After the Angels had scored twice in the top of the ninth to go ahead, the Royals loaded the bases on a single by George Brett, a double by Willie Wilson and an intentional walk to Bill Buckner. The loser was Greg Minton, 3-4, who relieved Terry Clark, who gave up only five hits, to start the ninth.

The winner with one-third of an inning of relief was Steve Farr, 5-2.

Rookie Brian Dorsett hit a two-run single to climax a two-out ninth-inning rally that put California ahead 2-1.

Rangers 3, Athletics 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Charlie Hough, struggling with a 3-8 record since July 4, scattered seven hits over 8 1/2 innings to lead Texas to a 3-1 victory over the Oakland Athletics, breaking a six-game losing streak for the Rangers.

Hough, 12-15, had command of his knuckleball, which has been erratic over the last two months. Since July 4, Hough had a 4.59 earned run average and had allowed 16 runs in his previous 17 1/2 innings.

Hough, 15-5 lifetime against Oakland and unbeaten in his last eight decisions against the Athletics, struck out four and walked six. He gave way to Cecilio Guante, who got the final out for his 12th save.

Pete O'Brien led the Texas attack with two RBI as the Rangers took a 3-1 lead with single runs in each of the first three innings off Todd Burns, 6-2.

Braves 2, Dodgers 1

ATLANTA — Jeff Blauser hit his first major league home run with two outs in the eighth inning to give the Atlanta Braves a 2-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers Tuesday.

With the score tied 1-1, Blauser hit a pitch from reliever Jesse Orosco, 2-2, over the left-field fence.

Paul Assenmacher, 7-6, got the victory in relief of starter Pete Smith. Bruce Sutter got the last three outs for his 13th save and 299th lifetime.

Smith, who entered the game with two shutouts in his previous three starts, allowed three hits and one run in 7 1/2 innings.

With one out in the Dodgers' eighth, Mike Davis hit a pinch double and moved to third on a flyout. Smith walked pinch-hitter Chris Gwynn and Assenmacher relieved. Kirk Gibson then tied the score 1-1 with an infield single to first.

New York's Nelson slowed in comeback

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The reviews are in on Karl Nelson's first regular season game back in the NFL after a battle with cancer, and New York Giants coach Bill Parcells isn't too happy.

Although the Giants overcame a 13-0 deficit to defeat the Super Bowl champion Redskins 27-20 on Monday night, Nelson really struggled against Washington defensive end Charles Mann.

Parcells even went so far as to say that the reason the Giants gained only 56 yards rushing on 21 carries was because there was one breakdown on the offensive line.

And yes, you guessed it. It was Nelson.

"Well look, it's only the first week," Parcells said Tuesday after looking at game films. "You have to keep that in mind. I don't want to put up the hurricane flag. Let's just leave the sympathy flag flying for a while."

On the exterior, the stadium appears harsh. However, Parcells has played head games with the right tackle since Nelson began earlier this year. At one point, coach accused him of "shoulder he had surgery on" and said the media was just giving too much sympathy.

Nelson obviously did have problems against Mann and the Redskins. On the first play of the game, Mann beat him cleanly, tackled running back Joe Mullen almost in the backfield. He constantly put pressure on quarterback Phil Simms, getting one sack and four Redskins sacks.

Schroeder he's not

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP)—Los Angeles Raiders' fall from glory has been greatly precipitated by one fatal flaw — the lack of a quarterback.

Jay Schroeder cautions that shouldn't be considered a "fatal flaw" for the Raiders.

"I'd like to think of myself as somebody that can play the game," the quarterback said. "My shoulder seems to fit with the style we and we'll go with that. But it's one guy out there. It's 11 guys on offense, 11 guys on defense and the special teams."

Schroeder, who had asked to be traded from Washington after trading his starting job to Doug Williams last season, cost the Raiders offensive lineman Jim Lachey several conditional draft choices. But they had to do something.

The Raiders slipped to 5-10 in year, their worst record in 10 years, after finishing 8-8 the previous season. Coach Tom Flores, retired after the 1987 campaign and Mike Shanahan was hired to replace him.

The Raiders cleaned house in the quarterback, letting Marc Wilson, Jim Plunkett and Rusty Hilgenbrunn. But that left them with Steve Beuerlein, a second-year pro who had never taken a snap in regular season, as their starter.

We've had only minimal response this week, which means the sports illiterate who picked Kansas State over Iowa has a decent shot at the keg. You heard right. Fitzpatrick's, at 525 S. Gilbert, shelled out the brew for this week.

Just a reminder that OTL ballots, which run daily in the scoreboard section on page 2B, must be turned in to the DI business office, 111 Communications Center, by noon Thursday.

All you have to do is circle the teams you think will win, including the score on the tiebreaker, and drop it off.

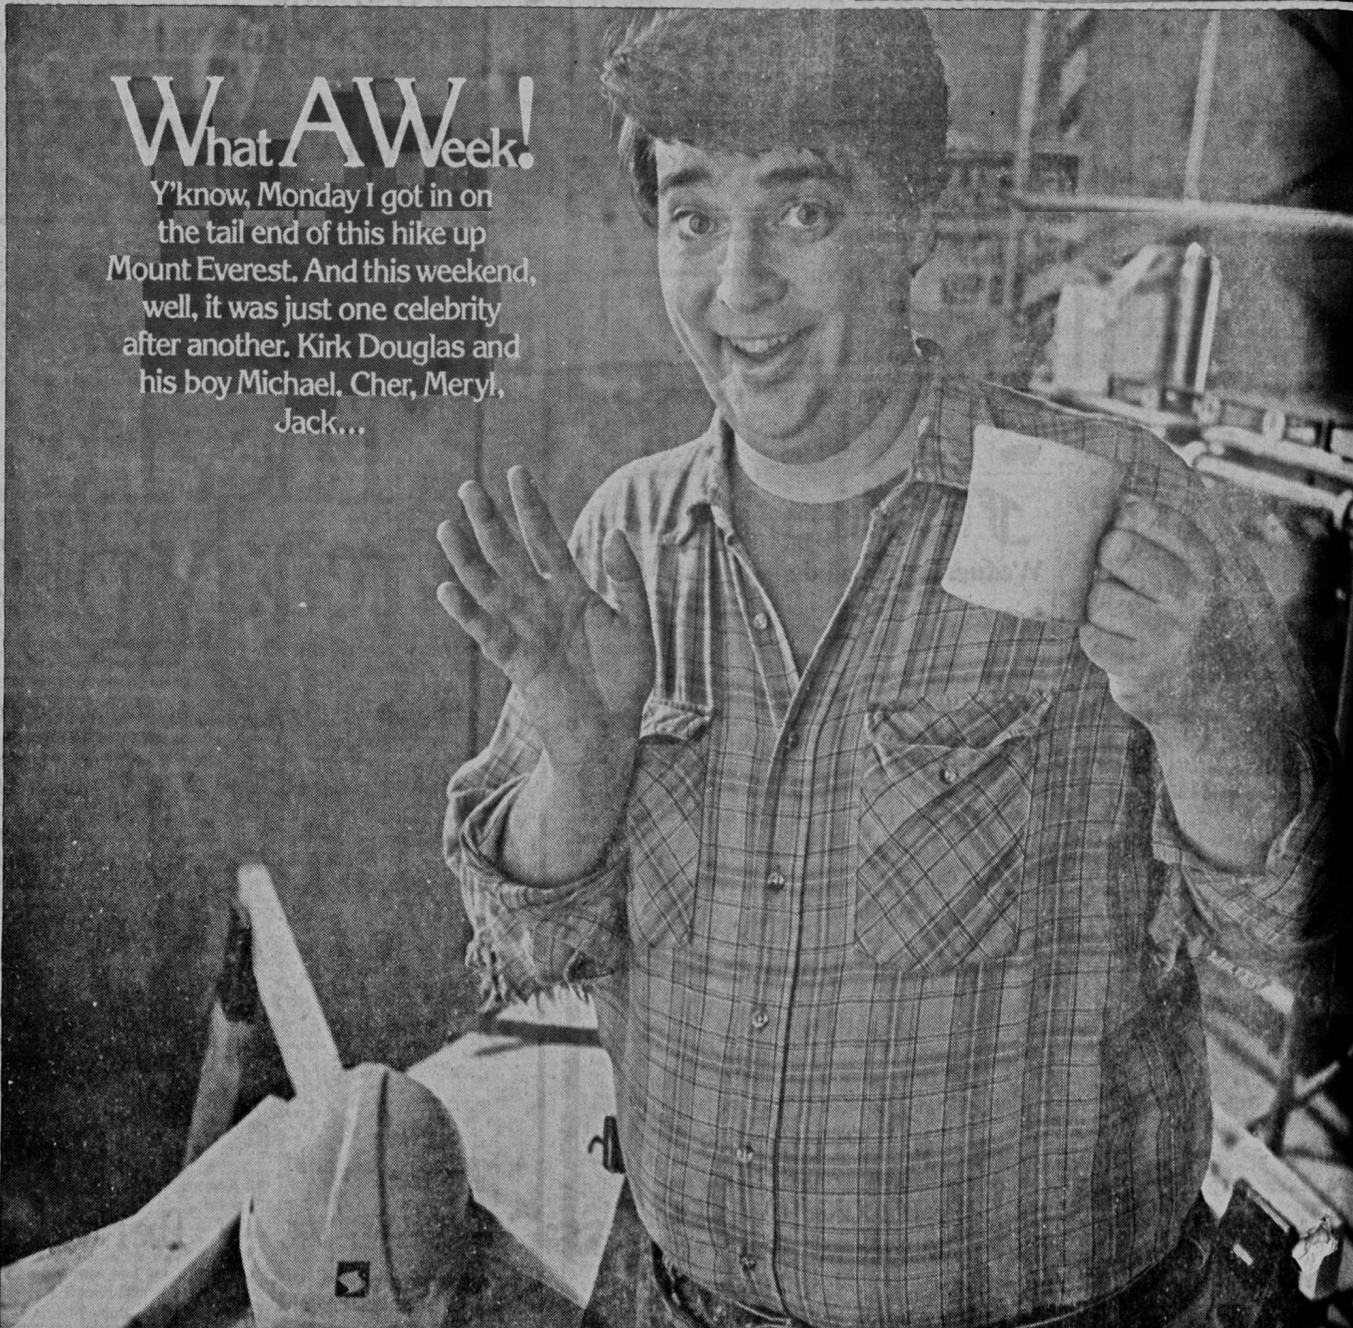

Remember, the ballot is now in the scoreboard section, so just flip back a few pages, cut that baby out and commence prognosticating.

And special thanks to Mike Monroe, who promptly had his ballot in Tuesday. We hope you do better than 3-7 this week, Mike.

Schroeder warns he's not a 'savior'

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP)—The Los Angeles Raiders' fall from glory has been greatly precipitated by one fatal flaw — the lack of a quarterback.

Jay Schroeder cautions that he shouldn't be considered a "savior" for the Raiders.

"I'd like to think of myself as somebody that can play the game," the quarterback said. "My style seems to fit with the style here, and we'll go with that. But it's not one guy out there. It's 11 guys on offense, 11 guys on defense and all the special teams."

Schroeder, who had asked to be traded from Washington after losing his starting job to Doug Williams last season, cost the Raiders offensive lineman Jim Lachey and several conditional draft choices. But they had to do something.

The Raiders slipped to 5-10 last year, their worst record in 25 years, after finishing 8-8 the previous season. Coach Tom Flores retired after the 1987 campaign, and Mike Shanahan was hired to replace him.

The Raiders cleaned house at quarterback, letting Marc Wilson, Jim Plunkett and Rusty Hilger go. But that left them with Steve Beuerlein, a second-year pro who had never taken a snap in the regular season, as their starter.

Beuerlein and the Raiders opened 1988 with a 24-13 decision over San Diego on Sunday, but only hours later it was announced that the trade with the Super Bowl champion Redskins was made.

Shanahan said that Schroeder is going to get a rapid education in the Raiders' offense.

"We'll start tonight, with the numbering system, and work 18 hours a day to see how fast he can pick things up," Shanahan said.

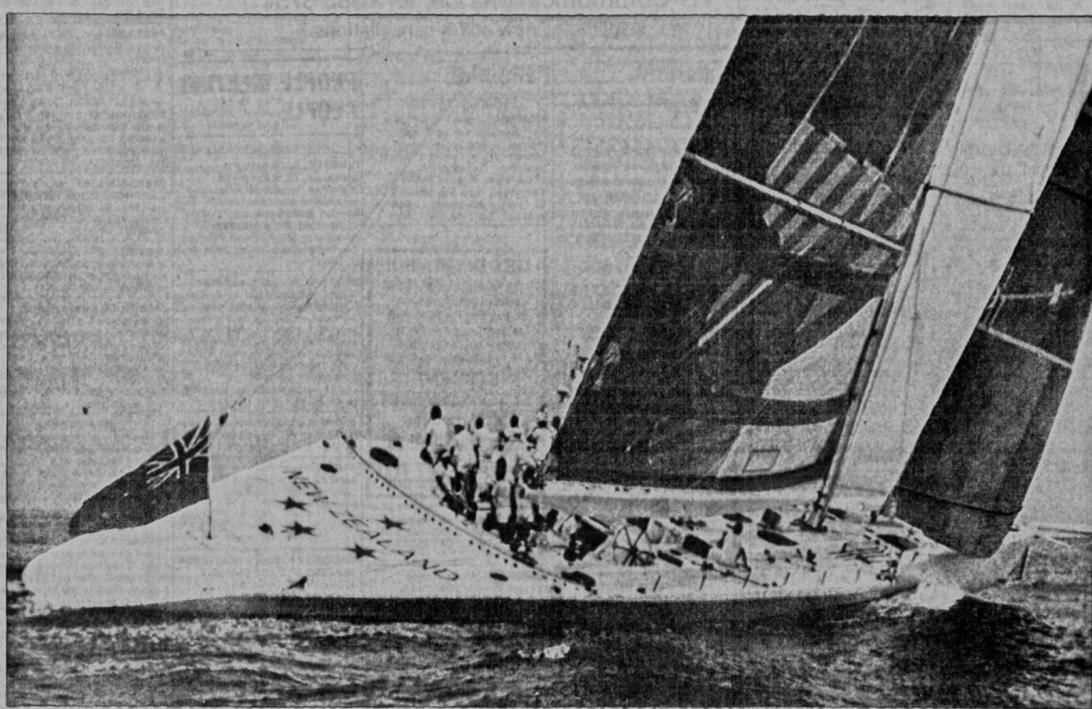

He said Schroeder would not start in Sunday's game at Houston, but that he might play, depending on how quickly he grasps the offensive system.

"He's big, strong, physical and can throw the ball down the field," Shanahan said. "He has the qualities you want, he's competitive. . . . He's played in some big games . . . and we think he can get the job done."

Schroeder, 27, was a Pro Bowl quarterback in 1986, then had an up-and-down season last year before losing his job to Williams, who was named MVP in the Super Bowl.

The Redskins lost to the New York Giants 27-20 Monday night as Williams completed 24 of 50 passes for 288 yards.

Schroeder said he's been requesting a trade since February.

Olympic security will be tight

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of commandos and police are being deployed around Olympic stadiums, hotels and other facilities as part of a massive security operation for the Summer Games.

Commandos in green uniforms or camouflage battle fatigues armed with submachine guns patrol the Athletes Village and Seoul's Kimpo International Airport. Anyone entering the airport is checked with a metal scanner.

People visiting Seoul's top hotels have to walk through metal detectors and answer questions from police about why they are there. Commandos with mine detectors and sniffer dogs check the main press center and its grounds for bombs.

"The security and bureaucracy are incredible. It takes hours to get things done," fumed a Canadian journalist waiting to be cleared through a security check.

The Olympics are shaping up as the most heavily guarded sports event in history with some 120,000 police and military guarding the Games. The South Korean military is on alert along with the 42,000 U.S. troops based in the country and other American forces in the surrounding region.

South Korean authorities are trying to minimize the security and smooth it as much as possible by instructing guards to be polite and smile. Security has been toned down to try and stop it from being a major headache, officials said.

"The police are not used to smiling. We try to make them keep smiling," said Hwang Kyu Woong, head of security for the Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee.

Some residents agree authorities are making an unusual attempt to make security less obtrusive. Police and military, who are used to being obeyed and not having to explain their actions, have been told to be polite.

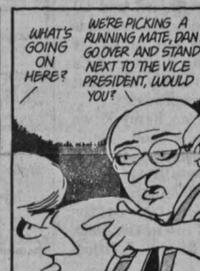

South Korean officials insist extraordinary security is vital in case terrorists attempt to disrupt the Olympics.

Michael Kachingwe, a UI actor originally from Zimbabwe, stars in "Woza Albert", a play that reveals life in South Africa's black townships, at 8 p.m. Sept. 8, 9 and 10 in Theatre "A" of the UI Theatre Building.

"Woza Albert!" to premiere Thursday

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

"Woza Albert!" — the most successful play to come out of black South Africa — will be presented at 8 p.m. Sept. 8, 9 and 10 in Theatre "A" of the UI Theatre Building.

The production, mounted this summer at the Unadilla Theater in Vermont, stars Geoffrey Owens, better known as son-in-law Alvin on the hit TV series "The Cosby Show," and UI student actor Michael Kachingwe, who is originally from Zimbabwe. The show is directed by Tisch Jones, former director of UI Black Action Theater and currently assistant to the director of Yale Repertory Theater.

In "Woza Albert," playwrights Percy Mtwa and Mbongeni Ngema consider how South Africans would react to the return of Jesus Christ, and, conversely, how Jesus Christ reacts to South Africa. Based on people the playwrights encountered in South Africa, the play enacts a vivid portrait of life in the black townships and the personal and political reality of apartheid.

The play is an often humorous look at a very serious situation. "Ultimately the play is about the triumph of human spirit," commented Owens. "These are people overcoming a lot of humiliation and oppression and still finding some joy in living. It's amazing given their perspectives are so squashed."

The play was originally written in and for the black townships, but following its unprecedented success in its homeland, Mtwa and Ngema embarked on a five-year international tour, including an Obie-Award winning stint off-Broadway in New York and performances at Scotland's Edinburgh Festival, where it won the Edinburgh Fringe First Award.

"The play gets to me every time," explains Jones. "The things that the people ask for by way of miracle are so stunted, so trivial. Conditions are so horrid, and have been for so long, that they can only think things can get a little better. One person asks for bread for her baby. Another asks for a permit to work."

Interjects Owens, "The people don't know what to ask for. One guy asks for a lollipop, one asks for a Chevrolet Impala. A brickyard worker wishes for a million bricks instead of maybe getting the hell out of there!"

The play takes place on a bare stage and utilizes a minimum of hand props. Even costuming is minimal with the two actors going barechested. "It's a cross between the Bible, Jerzy Grotowski's 'Towards a Poor Theatre' and Peter Brook's 'The Empty Space,'" laughed Jones.

Tickets are available in advance from the Hancher Auditorium box office. Any remaining tickets will be available at the Theatre Building box office an hour before curtain time.

Elton John holds auction of effects

LONDON (AP) — Eyeglasses with blue and yellow lenses sold for $5,400 Tuesday as a four-day auction began of rock star Elton John's belongings — from diamond-encrusted platform boots to Rembrandt etchings.

Sotheby's auction house predicted the 1,922 lots would bring in more than 3 million pounds ($5 million). The sale catalogue alone costs 40 pounds ($67) and already is a collector's item.

John, 41, singer, pianist and composer, is selling everything in the collection he put together over 20 years and kept at Woodside, his mansion near Windsor, west of London.

"I would rather people bought them and got pleasure from them than leave them sitting in cases... I am not too old to rock 'n' roll, but I am too old to wear this lot again."

The sale is Sotheby's most ambitious international production since it sold the late Andy Warhol's collection in New York in April for $25 million.

Music in the Museum series begins with Eastern European Klezmer music

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

Among the works of Pollock, DeSivero and Motherwell, pieces of music with names such as "Misurlu" and "Frailach" were rendering museum-goers ecstatic Sunday.

It was the first performance of the "Music in the Museum" series. This month featured Klezmer music played by Bob Paredes on clarinet and Catherine Schieve on the accordion. Oh boy, a clarinet and an accordion, you say? These musicians were nothing to shake a treble clef at! It was all listeners could do to stay in their seats, lest they place valuable artworks in jeopardy with their dancing.

Klezmer music is traditional Eastern European Jewish music. Its roots go back to roughly A.D. 1600. What we hear today is a recent derivation of the traditional music on modern instruments. Klezmer music came to this country between 1880 and 1922 with the influx of Jewish immigrants. Klezmer music could be found chiefly through the Yiddish Theatre, which was a precursor to "Fiddler on the Roof." The music underwent evolution with the combination of Klezmer and jazz through artists such as Terrace, Goodman and Gershwin (recall the famous clarinet whoop of "Rhapsody in Blue").

Paredes, with his charm-like playing, displayed exquisite technical ability, showing his mastery of the difficult whoops and lightning speed characteristic of Klezmer music. His playing touched every listener in a way only an exceptional musician could. Unfortunately, Schieve, playing a sort of basso continuo of Klezmer music on the accordion, never was given an opportunity to show her stuff. As an accompanist, though, she was quite adequate and was an excellent complement to Paredes. The location of the concert in the museum could have been better. The resonance in the sculpture court is so profound it muddles the quality of the music.

Paredes and Schieve began playing Klezmer music in 1981 with "The Big Jewish Band of San Diego." Since then they have played at many locations throughout the world, including a tour of Australia. Paredes is currently working on his master's degree at the UI School of Music. Schieve is teaching at the UI Theatre Department as Sound Designer (which amounts to composer).

The Music in the Museum program features a concert on the first Sunday of the month at 2 p.m. in the museum's sculpture court. The next concert will be Oct. 2 and will feature Collegium Musicum.

'Roger Rabbit,' 'Willow' top summer hit movie rankings

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "The Last Temptation of Christ" got the headlines, but it was a pair of comedies featuring a cartoon bunny and a prince in search of a bride that led the way as this year's summer movies shattered box-office records.

While critics debated the alleged evils of "Last Temptation" and "Rambo III," moviegoers plunked down approximately $1.7 billion for tickets and sat down in front of the big screen with their popcorn and sodas more frequently than ever before.

That beats the previous summer record of $1.59 billion, set in 1987.

"The Last Temptation of Christ," which probably would have been a box-office hit under any circumstances, collected more than $2 million after being blasted by conservative Christians for its depiction of Jesus with human weaknesses.

Summer flops included "The Blue," "Big Top Pee-wee," "Me & Me" and "The Rescue."

Rawlings stresses strengths

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts Gerhard Loewenberg introduced UI President Hunter Rawlings at an all-faculty meeting Wednesday afternoon as "not only a student of history, but an individual who wants to make history with the University."

And according to Rawlings, that's what he is aiming to do.

Rawlings focused his speech on the faculty, saying the past situation of inadequate funding to the UI, which placed a strain on the quality of education, is dissolving, and educators have a new environment in which to teach.

"There is a new and better funding environment growing," Rawlings said. "In spite of the drought, the economy is on the upswing."

Statistics cited by Rawlings show that in 1978, 12,367 undergraduates in the UI College of Liberal Arts were educated by 631 faculty members. Since then, liberal arts enrollment has grown in size by 30 percent and the faculty has grown by only two members.

Realizing the strain this stagnation of faculty numbers has placed on the existing faculty, Rawlings stressed the need to devote time and energy to the process of selecting new faculty.

"In the future, we must not look for sameness where we need diversity," Rawlings said. "And we must hire people who are better than we are. 'A' people choose 'A' people. Top faculty members should only want to work with the best."

Rawlings also emphasized the importance of the faculty as role models for students and pushed educators to emphasize the wholeness of a liberal arts education.

"When looking at college from the prospective of a student, it is likely to be fragmented and chaotic," Rawlings said. "Many students view their courses as obstacles they must overcome before they enter a professional track."

Rawlings wants to change that view and believes that both new and old faculty members alike have a role to play.

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — M plundered government offices at warehouses Wednesday, and st radio said security forces shot looters. Diplomats said chaos v near and prepared to evacuate their families.

Opposition leaders called for nationwide general strike against 26 years of repressive one-party rule on Thursday. Leaders hope for the largest of the many protests that have driven two governments from office in less than two months.

Looters ranged through the capital, and one Western diplomat said: "The streets are deserted. People are pretty much in fear of their property. Things have pretty much closed down. There is widespread perception that things have deteriorated."

State-run Rangoon Radio reported looting in 38 areas of the capital Tuesday and Wednesday. It said security forces shot and killed people, wounded six and arrested 88 looters.

The radio urged people to report looters to police and said more than $43 million in state property had been plundered since the beginning of August.

An earlier broadcast said security forces would "open fire to maintain control" if looting continued.

Breezy today and partly sunny highs in the low-to-mid 80s. There might be showers, but then there might not be. What does "partly sunny" mean anyway? Is that being partly pregnant?
