

Leff, Malloy take seats on board

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City voters elected incumbent Frances Malloy and newcomer Alan Leff to the school board Tuesday night.

The third candidate, incumbent Lynne Cannon, lost in her bid to return to the board after serving three consecutive three-year terms. About 5,250 voters turned out for the Iowa City School Board elections.

Leff, 52, has been a general practice lawyer for Leff, Leff, Leff, Haupt and Traw, 222 S. Linn St., in Iowa City for 25 years. He received both an undergraduate degree in electrical engineering and a graduate degree in law at the UI.

Leff said all three of his children graduated from West High School in Iowa City. His wife has been a teacher for seven years, and for the last five she has been teaching language arts at West High.

Although he said he hasn't previously served on any similar organizations or boards, Leff — who received 2,077 votes — said he does have goals for the school board.

"In general terms," he said, "I feel that the board has to develop a stronger leadership position in the management of the district."

Incumbent Fran Malloy, who filled a vacant seat on the board one year ago, did not foresee any changes as a result of her re-election.

"I don't think we'll see any drastic changes," she said. "I think the board will continue to listen to teachers and parents and serve the community in the very best way we can."

Malloy has been an Iowa City resident for four years. The Milwaukee, Wis., native received her master's degree in adult education. Malloy works at the Neuman Center, 104 E. Jefferson St., in Iowa City. She received 1,882 votes. Cannon received 1,292 votes.

Board members assume their duties at the next meeting, Sept. 27.

Board faces lead-tainted water issue

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City School Board members discussed possible means of combating lead in school drinking water at a board meeting Tuesday.

Board President Lynne Cannon suggested that the board recommend local schools run drinking water 15 to 30 minutes before student access to it because of a concern in other areas of the state about lead in schools' drinking water.

"The toxicity of lead is known to be fairly detrimental to children's behavioral development," Cannon said.

Lead found in drinking water is caused by use of lead pipes or lead solder on pipes. Some board members said lead in drinking water may be a problem in older schools, but doubted they would use lead pipes when building newer facilities.

Board member Jay Christensen-Szalanski said concern about lead was a theoretical concern rather than a practical one and requested more information.

Members discussed employing some technique that would show how much lead is present in the

Rawlings earns A's from staff, students

By Hilery Livengood

New UI President Hunter Rawlings is receiving a resounding thumbs up from his administrative peers.

After serving 45 days as president of the UI, Rawlings is receiving positive marks from other UI administrators on his performance here.

Since arriving in Iowa, Rawlings "has traveled to every corner of the state to try to listen to Iowans about what they expect from this university," said Mary Lynn Grant, UI assistant to the president. "He just wanted to better understand the surrounding state and get his feet on the ground."

Rawlings has also arranged a tight schedule of meetings with administrators, faculty and staff, Grant said.

The four UI vice presidents have interacted with Rawlings on an almost daily basis, she said.

"I've been pretty much working with him on a daily basis so I can safely say he's a quick study," said UI Acting Vice President for Academic Affairs David Vernon. "He's a knowledgeable educator and he's starting to understand more and more about the university."

Vernon said the office of academic affairs has worked extensively with Rawlings, supplying him with background on both ongoing and planned programs at the UI, and recommending action on decisions addressed to the president's office.

Vernon summed up the relationship between the two offices by saying, "we work as a team."

According to UI Vice President for Student Services Philip Hubbard, "the (state Board of) Regents made a good choice" during the presidential search. "President Rawlings has been amazingly effective," Hubbard said.

"He has been accepted with enthusiasm from people both inside and outside of the university," he said. "His statewide visits have generated a great deal of enthusiasm for the university."

Communication between Rawlings and the UI community has also been very successful, Hubbard said.

"President Rawlings has made sure the faculty and staff understand that he values their advice and will listen to them carefully," he said. "Student leaders also seem to be very pleased with the way he goes about consulting them."

Vice President of Finance and University Services Susan Phillips said she can clearly see the difference between the administrations of the past two UI presidents.

"It's just a different, different emphasis now," Phillips said.

Gilbert rains lash Cayman Islands

The Associated Press

Hurricane Gilbert, one of the strongest storms in history, roared toward Mexico's Yucatan Peninsula on Tuesday with 160 mph winds and torrential rains after lashing tiny, low-lying Cayman Islands.

The hurricane, traveling westward across the Caribbean Sea, was upgraded Tuesday to Category 5, the strongest and most deadly type of hurricane. Such storms have winds greater than 155 mph and cause catastrophic damage.

Gilbert, which already devastated Jamaica and the Dominican Republic with flash floods and mudslides, has killed at least five people.

Bob Sheets, director of the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla., described Gilbert as "a great hurricane" that is "in the top 10 percent (historically) as far as intensity, size and destructive potential."

He compared its intensity to that of Hurricane Allen, which killed 2,000 people in the Dominican Republic in 1979.

Two Category 5 hurricanes have hit the United States — a 1935 storm that killed 600 people in Florida and Hurricane Camille, which devastated the Mississippi coast in 1969 and killed 256 people.

"The people who need to be concerned now are those people over on the Yucatan Peninsula — Cancun, Cozumel, that whole area," Sheets said.

"There is very serious flooding" in the Cayman Islands, Erina Nichols, a tourism official in Miami, said Tuesday after speaking with residents of the islands. "The Run Point (community) is taking a real beating," she said.

The storm later knocked out all telephone service to the Cayman Islands, a British dependency of 23,000 people that was expecting 12-foot tides.

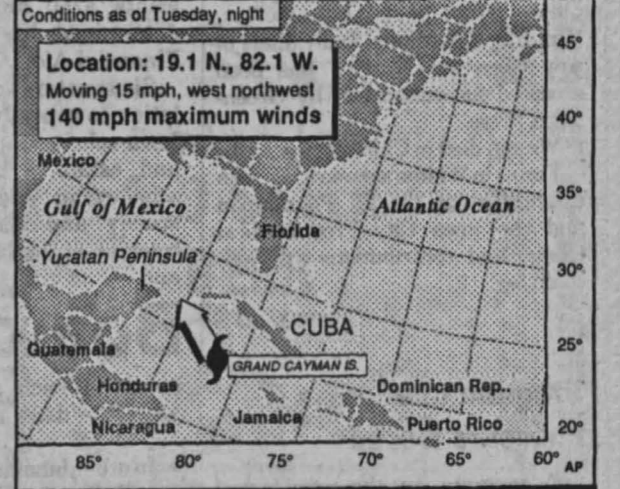

At 3 p.m. EDT, the U.S. National Weather Service said Gilbert was centered near latitude 19.3 north, longitude 82.8 west, just southwest of Grand Cayman and 280 miles from the Mexican resort island of Cozumel. It was moving west to northwest at about 15 mph with maximum sustained winds of 160 mph.

The Cuban news agency Prensa Latina said 40,000 people, many of them foreign vacationers and students, were evacuated Tuesday from the Isle of Youth off the southwestern coast as the hurricane passed 200 miles to the south.

There were no immediate reports of damage there. The death toll from Hurricane Gilbert was expected to rise.

There were unconfirmed reports that at least 30 people died Monday when Gilbert struck Jamaica.

Hurricane Gilbert Update

Civil defense officials said the storm killed five people Sunday in the Dominican Republic.

In New York City, a ham radio operator who was monitoring amateur radio communications in Jamaica said Tuesday, "Kingston is devastated, Montego Bay is hit hard and Ocho Rios is flooded."

The operator, Norm Chwat, an officer with the American Red Cross Radio Club, said there was an unconfirmed report that a tourist hotel on Jamaica's popular north coast had been wrecked by the hurricane.

Herb Schoenbaum, a radio ham operator in the Virgin Islands, said he spoke Tuesday with Dave Porter, an American staying in the Wyndham Hotel on Jamaica's Montego Bay. "Porter reported that the hotel 'peeled apart like a banana' when the force of Hurricane Gilbert hit last night," Schoenbaum said. "This morning he says there is just nothing left. Boats that were on the beach, the little rental Sailfishes or Sunfishes, were driven into cars like spears — power lines down, almost every tree in the area is on the ground."

Schoenbaum said Porter told him people who were trying to enter the hotel on their hands and knees at the height of the storm were swept into the ocean.

Glenn Baxter of Belgrade Lakes, Maine, said he spoke with a ham operator in Jamaica who told him the roof of a hospital in Mandeville ripped off "and the hospital has caved in. And that is the worst horror show that I've heard about because that would imply that a lot of people could have been hurt."

Seventh Bush adviser resigns from campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another adviser to George Bush resigned Tuesday amid charges of alleged anti-Semitic activities, bringing the total number of ethnic advisers that have left the Bush campaign to seven.

Radi Slavoff, national co-chairman of Bulgarians for Bush quit after a story appeared in the Philadelphia Inquirer that identified him as former chief of a Bulgarian group formed after World War II that consisted of members of the Nazi-aligned Bulgarian Legion.

A top Bush adviser said the campaign was "totally blindsided" by the allegations of anti-Semitic activities, which surfaced last Wednesday as the vice president prepared to address a national B'nai B'rith convention in Baltimore.

Circulated at that convention were copies of an article in Washington Jewish Week that raised questions about members of the campaign's ethnic coalition. Bush Campaign Manager James Baker met with Bush that evening and discussed the smoldering controversy, aides said.

Five of the ethnic officials resigned Monday.

Tension built over the weekend with a report in The Washington Post that Frederic Malek, a senior Bush operative on the Republican National Committee, had collected information on Jewish officials in the Bureau of Labor Statistics for President Richard Nixon in 1971.

Malek resigned the same day, saying he was quitting for the sake of the Bush campaign. He acknowledged collecting the data but denied he had anything to do with the Jewish officials' later demonstrations.

Campaign sources said six members of Bush's Coalition for American Nationalities who resigned had been approached by campaign officials and told of Baker's resolve to take "firm and decisive action."

The situation was spelled out to those involved, said one top official, and they were asked "what do you folks want to do?"

"These individuals came to this conclusion (to resign) on their own anyway," the official said.

The other five resigned after published reports linked them to anti-Jewish or fascist activities.

Bush campaign sources said they had no plans to replace Malek as deputy Republican national chairman.

The resignation of Malek and the six ethnic advisers occurred with a lightning speed that would have been impossible before Baker, the former treasury secretary and White House chief of staff, took command of the Bush campaign, aides said.

"Jim Baker is a guy who likes to get things resolved," said a senior campaign official.

Hunter Rawlings

"President Rawlings has come in with a lot of energy and a lot of ideas for the future here.

"He has a great deal of experience from another university and that helps," she said. "We're all finding that there's a lot going on."

With the UI entering a time of excitement and change, retiring is somewhat bittersweet for UI Vice President for Educational Development Duane Priestersbach.

After serving 23 years in his current position, Priestersbach says he's ready to retire, but wishes he would be involved in the upcoming Rawlings years.

"The future here is very exciting," Priestersbach said. "I will be sorry to leave in that sense because I think President Rawlings brings a new perspective and lots of energy."

Report says UI budget woes caused neglect

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Areas of UI operation largely neglected during recent budget shortages were cited by a re-accreditation report, leading some UI officials to hope for forthcoming improvement.

Instructor's workloads, affirmative action, rape prevention and access to UI buildings for persons with disabilities were among 13 concerns listed by a committee for the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools. Reducing staff in the UI's library system was also cited as a potential problem.

The report lauds the library system for its continuing automation and improving data processing capabilities, but notes that "Iowa's library ranks 27th among research libraries in collections and 50th in staffing. Consequently, it can be understood why the overriding concern at the library is the paucity of staff."

Wayne Rawley, assistant UI librarian for reader services, said the report accurately identified one of the library's main concerns.

"The major problem identified is staffing concern and that is a major concern of ours," Rawley said. "We've effected a couple of reorganizations of staffing, but there's only so much you can do in terms of reorganizing.

"What I consider our biggest difficulty is a lack of additional funding to keep up with the inflationary costs of library material," he said. "But I think this is a decent starting point."

The 28-page report also stated that the UI had been "very responsive, and in some cases highly imaginative, in providing conditions for living and studying that will enhance student life on campus," but added that improvements in building accessibility and rape prevention were needed.

"The university has been somewhat laggard in providing for access of persons with disabilities to all of its buildings," the report states. "Although its recent buildings have been constructed to meet the federal requirements for access by the handicapped, it is the opinion of some handicapped persons that more and different types of access to buildings should be provided, such as mechanically operated doors."

Donna Chandler, UI coordinator of Services for Persons with Disabilities, said she agreed with the committee's assessment but was not sure what effect the report would have.

"It would depend on whether or not it catches the eye as to whether it will have an effect," Chandler said.

Karla Miller, UI coordinator of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program, said the only way rape prevention education could be increased was to add to the program's meager staff. During the past fiscal year, RVAP gave 122 educational speeches to more than 5,000 people, Cooper said.

"We did that with the staff equivalent of one-and-three-fourths employees," Miller said. "We have a rape prevention program because we don't just want to be a band-aid organization."

Two UI physicians cited as 'best' doctors

Two UI Hospitals physicians have been included on a list of "The 107 Best Doctors for Women," published in the October issue of Good Housekeeping magazine.

Jennifer Niebyl and Rudolf Galask, both of the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, are listed in the article, which was based on recommendations by 250 department chairpersons and section chiefs at major medical centers nationwide. Niebyl and Galask were among those chosen from more than 1,000 recommended physicians.

Niebyl is a specialist in maternal-fetal medicine and came to the UI from Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in March to head the UIHC Ob-Gyn Department.

Galask, who has a joint appointment in microbiology, has been on the UIHC staff since 1970.

UI Student Senate divided on minority scholarship plan

By Deborah Giuba
The Daily Iowan

The topic of minority recruitment drew heated discussion at the Student Senate meeting Tuesday night.

Debate centered on the UI Opportunity at Iowa Scholarship, approved last week, and whether or not the scholarship was in accord with affirmative action goals.

The scholarship awards the 10 most needy Black, Asian American, Native American and Latino applicants $250 annually, with need determined by the UI Office of Financial Aid.

Six senators sponsored new legislation to repeal the Opportunity at Iowa scholarship passed last week and establish a new need-based scholarship, one which would not specify any specific race, creed, color or national origin for applicants.

water at each school. The board agreed to defer action until a later meeting.

In other business, Superintendent David Cronin presented preliminary enrollment figures for the 1988-89 school year at the meeting.

Cronin said according to unofficial figures, the Iowa City schools will have about 200 new students this year. The expected increase in enrollment may cause a need for part-time teacher aides at the kindergarten level at Horn and Penn Elementary schools and at the seventh-grade level at Northwest Junior High.

During the meeting, the board also selected an architectural firm to perform services for the school

Senator Wille Watson said he opposed the legislation because it would change the purpose, which is to provide cultural awareness and support for students who are proportional minorities in the United States.

UI Vice President of Student Services Philip Hubbard, asked to inform the senate about the UI Opportunity at Iowa program, told them the intent was to recruit minority students and faculty to the UI while encouraging groups who would have not traditionally sought higher education.

However, Senate President Melinda Hess, sponsor of the original bill, said the bill and the scholarship were intended to support the administration's UI Opportunity at Iowa recruitment program which targeted specific minorities.

After about one and one-half hours of discussion, a recess was called, and a 12-10 affirmative vote taken following a motion by the senator who introduced the bill.

Senator Damon Terrill said he would strike all of the bill, with exception of the last line which repealed the scholarship.

Hess ruled that the new legislation was void and that the UI Opportunity at Iowa scholarship would remain intact.

Senators Prasanta Reddy and Terrill said the ruling was not in accord with parliamentary procedures which require two votes when dealing with amendments; the first to approve amending the legislation and the second to allow the amendment to pass or fail.

Hess said the amendment was introduced as "friendly," therefore did not require two votes, a statement supported by Kevin Taylor, UI director of campus programming and the senate's adviser.

district. Hansen Lind Meyer, Plaza Centre One, will be doing some work on City High and Lucas Elementary schools. Specific work to be done has not yet been outlined by the board. So far, only a dollar amount has been decided on, according to Cannon.

In other business, Cannon apologized on behalf of the board for any inconvenience to parents because of the board's decision to release classes early on Sept. 8. Classes were released early so interested students could attend the Ag Expo in Amana, Iowa.

Superintendent David Cronin and board member Orville Townsend said they received complaints from parents who found themselves without child care when their children did not attend the Ag Expo.

Cannon acknowledged that the early release may have caused some complications for children with two working parents who did not attend, however, "we had the best of intentions," she said.

The board also unanimously elected board member Betsy Hawtrey to represent them at the Director District 1 election for the Grant Wood Area Education Agency Board today in Stanwood. Director District 1 includes precincts 2 and 3 in Iowa City. Hawtrey's vote will carry 37.32 percent of the weighted vote.

Courts

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

A Johnson County resident filed suit Monday against 11 defendants, including Iowa City, Johnson County and Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company, in an incident involving real estate owned by the plaintiff, according to Johnson County District Court records.

The plaintiff, A. Kent Braverman, is suing for damages to the real estate he contends were sustained because of alleged action taken by the city to acquire an access road to a waste water treatment plant in an area adjacent to his land, according to court records.

Iowa City allegedly served the plaintiff and others with a notice of condemnation stating that condemnation of the land was sought to acquire fee title to the property to build the road. The road is to be used for access to Iowa City's South Wastewater Treatment Plant, according to court records.

Braverman claims that he has sustained such damages as the taking of an unspecified amount of land in fee, interference with the use of his land as a whole and reduction in the value of land near the waste water plant, according to court records.

The suit states that all the defendants except the city are "nominal," having only an easement or security interest in the plaintiff's land, according to court records.

The defendants not named above are as follows: Michael Donovan, Mary Jean Donovan, Leo Finke, Roger Finke, Hydrocarbon Transportation, Inc., Toby E. Braverman, Barbara Ann Miltner Hill and Betty Jo Miltner Hensley, according to court records.

The plaintiff is suing for $200,000 plus court costs, according to court records.

Braverman filed a similar suit Monday against some of the same defendants. The defendants are as follows: Iowa City, Leo Finke, Roger Finke, Iowa-Illinois Gas and Electric Company, Johnson County and Toby E. Braverman, according to court records.

The plaintiff is suing for damages in the amount of $110,000 in the second suit, according to court records.

Statewide van trip fueled by fight for fair housing laws

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Jan Alderton is a woman with a mission. If you were on the Walking Pedestrian Mall Tuesday, you might have heard a voice speaking continuously about Iowa fair housing laws over a public address system. Alderton was the voice on the tape behind the p.a. She embarked this July on a year-long solitary trek across Iowa and will visit all 99 counties during the next year in her 28-foot van, equipped with audio-visual equipment and materials for educating Iowans about Iowa's fair housing laws.

Housing discrimination — a national problem — is also evident in the state of Iowa, according to Alderton. Numerous complaints and incidents documented by state human rights commissions provided the impetus for The Iowa Fair Housing Awareness Project — which is being funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Iowa Civil Rights Commission and the human rights agencies of Des Moines, Iowa City and Dubuque.

Alderton said Iowa's image — that of a heartland state free of big-city problems like racism — may be misleading. In reality, the state experiences a great deal of deeply rooted bigotry and discrimination, which is hard for some Iowans to believe. "Wherever I go, one of several things happens," she said. "In the cities, everyone says, 'Oh, we don't have any discrimination here, it's all in the small towns,' and in the small towns, people say, 'Oh, we don't have that here, it's all in the big cities.' The only people who are honest with me are the social service people who say, 'We have a huge housing discrimination problem here, what can you do to help?'"

Housing discrimination can take several forms, according to Alderton, and is prompted by issues such as the race, religion, gender or national origin of the tenant.

A landlord might lie to a potential tenant and say the unit has already been rented, when in fact it hasn't been; the terms of the lease could be altered; or the landlord might neglect routine duties like maintenance or upkeep, she said.

In accordance with the Iowa Fair Housing Law of 1965, a landlord must have clearly established procedures and application guidelines that treat all potential and current residents equally.

Alderton said her state travels have convinced her that Iowa is a very racist, sexist and discriminatory state and that the laws passed by the Iowa Legislature and the U.S. Congress in the mid-60s are not very well known.

But she did say Iowa Citians are more educated and aware of the rights of both tenants and landlords.

"Iowa City does a good job of educating people about their rights as tenants," she said. "The Association of Landlords and Tenants here is very effective, and it also helps that Iowa City is so unique from the rest of Iowa. People here are very aware of their rights."

County board mulls asylum restoration

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

The old insane asylum on the County Home property, Route 1, Iowa City, is ripe for restoration, Supervisor Robert Burns told the Johnson County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

"I thoroughly believe that in restoring historical buildings we should restore more than the mansions owned by the wealthy," Burns said. "This building is rather horrifying, but it was built to be an improvement on the previous asylum."

The asylum was built in 1861 and abandoned in 1886. It is on the National Register, according to Burns. The Johnson County Board of Supervisors owns the property the building stands on.

In the 1977 National Register of Historical Places Inventory nomination form, the asylum is described as a four-room log cabin with two long wings, "one for the paupers and one for the insane."

According to the form, the structure had deteriorated. The flooring was broken and the structure had been used as a hog house.

The form said the asylum demonstrates the history of public health care throughout the nation.

The attitude toward mental health has changed over the century, but the asylum was shabby during the years of occupation. Such monuments are usually erased, according to the form.

Burns said he wanted to reconstruct the asylum to its original condition.

"I want to show what was there," he said. "This building was dilapidated and neglected, but it can put the whole picture together."

Burns said he believed restored historical buildings don't represent true pictures unless the outhouses, the slave quarters and the insane asylums are preserved along with the wealthier structures.

He took the first step in restoring the asylum by hiring Richard Kruse, of the Rust and Kruse Architectural Firm, to do preliminary surveying work.

Kruse outlined to the board his plan for guiding the reconstruction.

"The board must first decide how much they want to do in any given year," Kruse said. "It must formulate a plan of action."

Kruse said the plan should include determining what the building will be used for after reconstruction as well as what the renovation will entail.

Burns said he is not sure when the reconstruction will be completed.

"It probably won't be in my time," he said. "It should be restored at as reasonable a (monetary) rate as possible. The main things to preserve are the cells, the bars and the writing on the walls."

Anti-psychotic drugs under scrutiny at UI

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Pharmacy plans to examine the effects of two anti-psychotic drugs used to treat schizophrenia patients as a part of a study with the UI College of Medicine's Mental Health Research Center.

"We are trying to find the ideal concentration of the drug to control the patients' symptoms in an attempt to avoid chronic institutionalization of schizophrenic patients," UI pharmacy professor Paul Perry said.

Determining the correct treatment and dosage is key to improving the health of those suffering from the debilitating disorder. The college will study the effects of haloperidol and clozapine, drugs known to relieve the delusions and hallucinations experienced by many who suffer from schizophrenia, Perry said.

"It appears there may be a plateau effect for the therapeutic effect of the drug. Above that level the patient does not experience any further increase in the therapeutic effect," Perry said.

Blood samples drawn from patients receiving doses of haloperidol will be analyzed by researchers to determine the needed concentration for the patients' systems.

Many patients don't respond to haloperidol, according to results from a multi-clinical study completed last year. But one in three of these patients did react positively to clozapine, Perry said, adding "That may not seem like an impressive figure, but when a schizophrenic patient won't respond to all other anti-psychotic drugs, having a one-in-three chance to improve is enormously encouraging to them," Perry said.

Drugs such as haloperidol and clozapine are both used with various degrees of success to treat those suffering from schizophrenia, according to Mid-Eastern Iowa Mental Health Center Director Sheila Dark.

"Some people on medication have most of their psychotic symptoms go completely away," Dark said.

Schizophrenic delusions often include delusions of persecution, and these patients isolate themselves because they believe they are in danger. "These delusions are all encompassing," Dark said.

According to social worker Stephen Trefz, schizophrenia is like any disease because certain people respond differently to different medications.

The center sponsors structured classes to explain how various medications work to people taking medication. "It's not a semester course, but it is an instructional, didactic (class)," Trefz said.

Individual and family support groups at the center also help those suffering mental disorders to continue living at home and working.

"It can be contained where folks can work and carry on just as anybody else would," Dark said.

California fire rings complex

LAKE WILDWOOD, Calif. (AP)— Nearly 3,000 firefighters battled a third day Tuesday to control a raging timber fire that ringed a high-tech industrial complex after destroying almost 100 homes and forcing thousands to evacuate.

At least 97 homes and 57 other buildings were destroyed, and 4,000 to 5,000 other structures were threatened by the fast-moving, wind-fanned blaze northeast of Sacramento in the foothills of the Sierra Nevada.

In less than 72 hours it blackened more than 40-square miles of brush and timber north and west of Grass Valley and Nevada City in a half-moon arc 12 miles long and two to five miles wide.

"This is the classic forest-urban interface. This is the fire of the 1990s," said Ed Waggoner of the California Department of Forestry, the operations director of the 2,788-member firefighting force.

However, fire officials said firefighting conditions were improved Tuesday, with an easing of the 20-30 mph wind that blew Sunday and Monday and slightly higher humidity.

"We're not out of the woods, but

The Associated Press

Debris and ashes are all that remain of this house after a wildfire swept through a mountain area near Wildwood, Calif., Tuesday. The fire destroyed 13 homes and blackened 15,000 acres of timberland.

"We're relieved. We have a more normal weather situation today," said Department of Forestry spokesman Frank Bates.

An estimated 8,000 people were evacuated from their homes in several communities.

Fire officials stressed that many homes were still in danger, especially in Rough and Ready, a community of 500 residents in the heavily wooded bottom of a steep canyon on the edge of the fire about seven miles west of Grass Valley.

Fire planning chief Steve Iverson said saving Rough and Ready was one of Tuesday's top priorities, but he cautioned that it was a particularly dangerous area for firefighters because of limited access via a narrow road.

"If the fire gets into the town, then we have to reassess whether we should be in there," Iverson said. "If we have shifty winds, we're not going to sit around in there. The safety of crews comes first."

There were reports people were allowed to return to the town but "we've had a flare-up and they're still evacuated there," said fire information officer Carolyn Phillips. She said the fire had grown to 29,700 acres Tuesday afternoon.

"We probably have as extreme a condition as anywhere in California or anywhere in the U.S. today," Waggoner said of the fire Tuesday.

Federal fire officials have called this the worst forest fire season in the West in 30 years, especially considering the fires in and around Yellowstone National Park. The fires have charred 939,270 acres of the 2.2 million-acre park since June.

Firefighters there on Tuesday took advantage of a cold spell to make some headway against the blazes before potentially menacing war-

Recess called in Iran-Iraq peace talks

GENEVA—The U.N.-sponsored peace talks between Iran and Iraq, stalled since they started almost three weeks ago, went into recess Tuesday and will move temporarily to New York.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar hopes to unblock the negotiations at U.N. headquarters there.

U.N. mediator Jan Eliasson of Sweden said both sides accepted an invitation by Perez de Cuellar to continue direct talks "soon" at U.N. headquarters. He said they agreed to return to Geneva for subsequent meetings.

Eliasson said Perez de Cuellar invited foreign ministers Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and Tariq Aziz of Iraq to meet in New York on Sept. 22. But the Iraqi delegation said in a statement issued Tuesday night that Aziz could not be in New York before the first week of October.

The statement indicated that acceptance of "one meeting" in New York was conditional on agreeing on a binding date for reconvening the talks in Geneva.

Hijacker Hamadi 'happy' after slaying sailor

FRANKFURT, West Germany — Confessed TWA hijacker Mohammed Ali Hamadi proudly pointed out the blood of a slain U.S. hostage and indicated he was happy the Navy diver was dead, an American witness testified Tuesday.

Flight engineer Benjamin Zimmermann described how he and Hamadi walked around the front of the TWA aircraft in Algeria in June 1985, and Hamadi showed him the blood left by the shooting death of U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem.

"Mr. Hamadi joyfully pointed to the blood running down the door. And with the pistol he pointed, he indicated, he was very proud of this gun and of him having caused this," Zimmermann told the court.

Stethem, of Waldorf, Md., was shot to death during the June 1985 hijacking of TWA Flight 847. His body was thrown onto the runway in Beirut before the plane went to Algiers. In previous testimony, Flight 847 pilot John Testrake identified Hamadi as Stethem's killer.

Air Force F-16 crashes into Carolina home

SUMTER, S.C. — An Air Force jet crashed into a house and burned near Shaw Air Force Base Tuesday afternoon, authorities said.

The pilot of the F-16 apparently ejected from the plane and was not seriously injured. There were unconfirmed reports of injuries at the scene.

Base spokesman Dave McMahon said the plane crashed about 3:50 p.m., about one mile south of the military facility. McMahon said the identity and condition of the pilot were not immediately known.

The crash was the third involving an Air Force jet at Sumter in the past several weeks.

A state Highway Patrol dispatcher said the patrol did not know whether anyone had been injured.

Radio station WFIC-AM reported that witnesses said the jet hit a two-story house and then crashed nearby. The station said there were unconfirmed reports that at least two people had been injured at the site.

A spokesman for the Sumter Fire Department said the jet crashed near U.S. 76 West across from the base. The spokesman said the plane struck at least one house and several other structures.

The spokesman said he did not know if there were injuries.

Biblical prophet revises prediction

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — The man who predicted all the faithful would be called to heaven by Tuesday morning, leaving a warring world of non-believers, has revised his prediction.

Edgar Whisenant now believes a process called the Rapture will begin at 9:55 a.m. CDT Wednesday, said Dianne McArthur, general manager of Christian radio station KAAV at Little Rock.

Whisenant will not consent to interviews with the secular press, McArthur said. Calls to Whisenant's Rapture 88 Ministries in Little Rock were greeted by an answering machine, and Whisenant did not return a call to The Associated Press.

Survey: One teen in three considers suicide

LAKE FOREST, Ill. — Nearly half the nation's high-achieving teen-agers knew someone who committed suicide or tried to, and 30 percent said they've considered killing themselves, according to a survey released Tuesday.

A separate survey of adults found that one-third of them knew a teen-ager who committed suicide or tried to.

"You don't have to be a psychologist to realize all of the things that are crashing in on these kids today," said Paul Krouse, publisher of the directory, "Who's Who Among American High School Students," which conducted the survey of teen-agers.

The survey polled 2,024 teen-agers listed in the directory and found that 45 percent said they knew a teen-ager who had attempted suicide or succeeded. Four percent said they had tried it.

Salvadoran demonstrators arrested, hurt in clashes

EL PARAISO, El Salvador (AP) — More than 100 Salvadorans were killed or wounded in fighting between rebels and troops, and in clashes between students and riot police Monday and Tuesday, officials, witnesses and news reports said.

About 150 leftist rebels attacked the garrison at El Paraiso, headquarters of the 4th Army Brigade, shortly after 1 a.m. Tuesday with mortars and small arms fire.

A two-hour battle left nine soldiers and seven guerrillas dead, according to Col. Ciro Lopez Roque, garrison commander. He said 12 soldiers and an undetermined number of rebels were wounded.

Col. Galileo Torres, head of the armed forces press office, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that government forces inflicted 50 casualties on guerrillas in northern Morazan province between late Monday and shortly before dawn Tuesday.

In the capital, about 300 riot troops clashed with approximately 3,000 university students marching to the Finance Ministry to demand increased government spending on education.

Reporters saw more than 200 demonstrators arrested and shoved into buses. Several were bleeding from beatings.

The riot troops shoved and insulted journalists, fired bursts low over their heads and forced them to lie face-down on the pavement.

"Don't move!" one shouted at the prostrate reporters. "This is what you get for only telling lies!"

3 anti-apartheid activists escape hospital, seek help at U.S. Embassy

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Three prominent anti-apartheid activists, detained for more than a year without charge, escaped from a hospital Tuesday and took refuge at the U.S. Consulate in a high-rise office building.

The U.S. Embassy said it had "high regard" for the men and would not force them to leave against their will.

Two of the three are senior officials of the now-banned United Democratic Front — acting publicity secretary Murphy Morobe, a black, and acting general secretary Mohammed Valli Moosa, an Indian. The other is Vusi Khanyile, a black who was chairman of the banned National Education Crisis Committee.

The U.S. Embassy statement confirmed that the three had taken refuge at the consulate, on the 11th floor of an office building in downtown Johannesburg. The building is two miles from the hospital where they were being treated.

The main U.S. embassy is in Pretoria.

The men have asked to meet with their relatives and with leaders of the anti-apartheid movement, but they have not disclosed any other requests.

Trade deficit drops sharply from April to June

WASHINGTON (AP) — The deficit in the broadest measure of U.S. trade narrowed sharply from April through June as overseas sales of American merchandise surged to a record high, the government reported Tuesday.

However, the good news was tempered by the fact that America suffered its first deficit in three decades in the trade category, which includes investment earnings.

The Commerce Department said the deficit in the current account shrank to $33.8 billion in the second quarter, a 9.8 percent improvement from a first quarter imbalance of $36.9 billion. It was the biggest quarterly improvement since a 20.1 percent drop in the final three months of last year.

The current account is the most important of all the government's trade statistics because it covers not only trade in merchandise but also trade in services, which primarily reflect the flow of investment earnings between countries.

A stunning weapon

Police forces all around the country occasionally have to deal with individuals who are something less than cooperative; sometimes outright dangerous. Because of this, most police officers are well-versed in methods of self-defense and are quite adept at incapacitating the most recalcitrant of suspects. For this reason, they're also equipped with revolvers, handcuffs and nightsticks.

But there's another little gadget that police in the last decade have found to be very effective in quieting even the most abusive and stubborn of suspects; the stun gun. This little beauty is capable of delivering a 50,000-volt shock to a person's nervous system with the mere squeeze of a trigger. Sometimes, as was the case in Los Angeles this week, the gun works so efficiently that the last thing police have to worry about after stunning a suspect is his recidivism rate.

You see, a dead person will commit very few crimes. This week alone, two people died in Los Angeles after they were "stunned" by police officers who, seeking to avoid the negative consequence of a scrap with a suspect, a consequence fairly common in their line of work, used the hands-off method of restraint presented by the stun gun.

The ugly, and sometimes deadly, predicaments in which law officers find themselves during the course of serving and protecting the people many times warrant physical restraint, violent measures and even the use of lethal force.

The stun gun, on the other hand, has proved only to be an effective restraining tool with quite a side effect: It kills. It does not present a viable, humane option for restraining violent people and therefore should not be used by police. Until it can be shown that this weapon can effectively restrain individuals without mortally wounding them, the stun gun should be hung on the rack for good.

As part of what has become one of the most negative presidential campaigns in recent memory on both sides, one charge seems to be repeated constantly by George Bush against Michael Dukakis — that Dukakis is a "card-carrying member of the American Civil Liberties Union."

Bush seems to regard being a member of the ACLU as the equivalent of belonging to the Communist Party. By telling his audience about Dukakis' membership in the ACLU, Bush is trying to push the message that the Massachusetts governor is an unredeemable liberal.

It may interest Bush, and other people who view the ACLU as some sort of left-wing organization plotting to undermine America, that the group's purpose is simply to defend Americans whose rights have been violated in some way. In that context, the ACLU has come to the aid of both liberal and conservative organizations, ranging from Communists to Nazis.

Ironically, one of the most recent ACLU actions was a brief filed on behalf of former White House aides Oliver North and John Poindexter for their upcoming trial, charging that because North and Poindexter were given limited immunity by Congress, they cannot be further prosecuted without violating that immunity.

Bush contrasts Dukakis' membership in the ACLU unfavorably with his own membership in the National Rifle Association — the people who lobby to ensure handguns are available to anyone who wants one. This may be one of the reasons why the United States has the highest murder rate of any Western nation.

In fact, the ACLU and the NRA both cite as their main purpose defending Americans against infringements on their rights. The only difference is, the ACLU doesn't just defend gun owners.

New noise ordinance

Several years ago, Iowa City adopted a noise ordinance. You'd never know it: Today the town is as noisy as ever. Iowa City needs a new noise ordinance, one aimed at the true source of most local racket: street noise.

Much street noise is simply the product of inconsideration. While any college town will always have a disproportionate percentage of motorcycles, they don't have to be noisy. Some motorcyclists pull the baffles out of their mufflers to give their bikes extra horsepower and that "macho" sound. Likewise, some cars have been altered to make them louder. Also, many drivers habitually travel with their windows down and their stereos blasting. They, of course, are having a great time — at everyone else's expense. People don't have a God-given right to make as much noise as they please; as our society becomes more and more urban, we're going to have to realize this.

It's not hard, however, to design a fair and effective noise pollution law. Boulder, Colo., for instance, has a city vehicle equipped with a decibel meter; vehicles over a certain noise level are ticketed. Exceptions are probably made for buses and other commercial vehicles.

The obvious objection to such a statute would be its effect on those with low incomes. After all, not all vehicle noise is deliberate; some cars simply need a new muffler. But the same argument could be made against emission control laws — they cost the consumer, too. Are we then to abandon the air? The ordinance could be designed to allow repairs bringing a vehicle under the noise limit to cancel out any ticket, minimizing the adverse effect on the poor. The program would pay for itself, and Iowa City would be the better for it.

We're held accountable for Ronald Reagan

Several weeks ago we were listening to National Public Radio. The correspondent was reporting from Tehran, Iran, about the Iranian reaction to the American downing of Iran Air Flight 655 in the Persian Gulf. The specifics of her comments have been forgotten, but one point is retained and worth discussing.

When asked about her personal treatment in Tehran, she said she had been treated extremely well. In fact, she mentioned that several people had explained to her that, despite the recorded chants of "Death to America," very few people actually held bad feelings toward Americans. The NPR correspondent was surprised by this and suggested that if the reverse situation were true (i.e. if an Iranian warship mistakenly shot down a Pan Am jetliner in the Gulf of Mexico, or anywhere else for that matter), Iranians living in, or arriving in, America would almost certainly be harassed by American individuals and groups. There are Iranians who lived here during the "hostage crisis" that can attest to this.

The NPR correspondent's experience is actually not that surprising after some consideration. During the revolution, there were many factors working against the Shah. Indeed, the Shah was a very powerful man, and only a unified resistance could have held any hope of defeating him. The Islamic fundamentalists were only one of those factions, but they were fortunate in that it was their leader who became the pivotal figurehead for the revolution. After the revolution, Ayatollah Khomeini used several political ploys and no small degree of savagery to solidify his position. He rules his country by fear, and not by popular support. The point of all of this is that Khomeini does not represent his country, he merely rules it. Most Iranian people naively believe that the same is military should not mine Nicaraguan harbors, it is we that are violating that decision. American servicemen in West Germany and other countries are infamous, largely because of their behavior in public. American tourists throughout the world are often easily identified because of their irreverent and disrespectful behavior in public. Outside of our government, it is this face that we show to the international community. Reagan represents the nation, but loving father of all of this, who not only tolerates but encourages our excesses.

It is clear that we need to change, both politically and, more importantly, socially. It is for this reason that we supported Jesse Jackson, because only he promised the necessary changes. George Bush bases his campaign on the fact that he does not represent any change, and that is dangerous. Michael Dukakis probably doesn't represent much of a change either, but he is unquestionably very bright and therefore must be less dangerous. The important change, however, is not political, but social. Let's hope that we are able to make that major social change before it is too late.

true in America, and that Americans should not be held responsible for the action of their military force and their government. We need only to remember back to the most recent presidential elections to suggest that their forgiveness of us is unjustified.

In a speech to the American Medical Student Association Convention in Washington, D.C., this past March, Dr. Helen Caldicott, speaking about President Ronald Reagan's general remarks on the subject of nuclear and space-based weapons proliferation, stated that Reagan is our representative to the international community. The audience objected, but she persisted by arguing simply that Reagan is the president of this country and we are all unwilling to give up our citizenship. Whether we like it or not, Reagan's actions and statements represent us.

When Reagan chooses to ignore a World Court decision that the U.S.

Reagan clearly represents the citizens of the United States, probably better than any president since Jackson, and we should all feel embarrassed by that.

Internationally, Americans are neither respected nor liked. We do not hold a position of esteem because increasingly people in other countries are holding us responsible for the actions of our government. We have yet to learn the lessons of a book written nearly 30 years ago, titled, "The Ugly American." Perhaps we should make it required reading in high school, or in college. Many American servicemen and businessmen in foreign posts can tell stories of

Simplistic drug answers: Bad stuff

One of the dumber ideas to come out of the current presidential race is the idea of giving drug dealers the death penalty.

Regardless of how you feel about the death penalty, or about the use and dealing of drugs, this idea is preposterous. Oh, it sounds good. Drugs are killing people in this country and others. Those dealing drugs are making massive amounts of money off this destruction and carnage, so they should pay the ultimate price of losing their lives.

Let's get real, folks. First off, drug dealers already have a "death penalty." Dealing drugs is a high-risk business. Anyone in this business knows that they could lose their life anytime. The killer could be anyone — a disgruntled co-dealer, a customer, an enemy looking to steal the dealer's business or law enforcement officials in the heat of the battle.

We should be asking ourselves questions such as these: Why does a large percentage of the population feel the need to use dangerous, illegal drugs? Why do kids living in the ghettos admire drug dealers as people who have made it and not people making their living in an honest fashion that doesn't destroy lives?

To think, after dealing with this, that some drug dealer is going to think, "If I get caught, I'm getting the electric chair," is ludicrous. In fact, such a dealer would probably rather deal with the legal system because of its formal procedure and the delays it brings about.

The death penalty is another simplistic solution to a tough problem. For some odd reason, the drug issue has attracted a multitude of simplistic solutions.

First we administered random drug tests to people who gave no probable cause of having a drug problem. Then we came up with the bright idea of involving the military in the drug fight, even though they've made it clear they don't want this fight. Then we came up with Nancy Reagan's "Just Say No" campaign, which, for a simplistic solution, could be worse.

Nobody seems willing to look at the demand side of the problem, though.

We should be asking ourselves questions such as these: Why does a large percentage of the population feel the need to use dangerous, illegal drugs? Why do kids living in the ghettos admire drug dealers rather than people making their living in an honest fashion that doesn't destroy lives? What can we do to lower, and eventually eliminate, the demand for illegal drugs?

In short, we should be looking at the reasons drugs are so important to such a large percentage of our population, and work to eliminate those reasons.

An example of what I'm talking about is cigarette smoking. Cigarette smoking in this country is legal, although dangerous. For the past 25 years or so, the percentage of cigarette smokers in this country has gone down. More people are realizing that cigarette smoking is dangerous to themselves and their loved ones. Smoking is not as glamorous as it used to be. The military is not involved in burning tobacco fields in this country or any other. It is also not involved in fights to stop shipments of tobacco to the United States.

Instead, due to long-term education that stresses the harmful effects of cigarette smoking, plus a society that makes outcasts of smokers, smoking is going down.

It's going down in a dull, undramatic, long-term manner that is succeeding. If we're going to solve this country's drug problems, we'll have to do it the same way — over the long haul.

We aren't eliminating cigarette smoking by electrocuting the merchants who sell cigarettes, running random tobacco tests on possible users and having the military burn tobacco fields.

What makes the politicians, and the rest of us who vote for these turkeys, think this is the way we'll eliminate dangerous drugs?

He's right. At an two fights a year retire before age 30. 50-0 record, break ciano's mark of 40 without a loss. He'd pile away at that rate as well. After being rescued by New York police, Tyson was produced to the world boxing by Cus D'Amico as the best since November looked back. Even with the deaths of his mother and close friend at Jacobs, Tyson has record in title belt those via the knockout. Most boxing experts Tyson hasn't faced any of competition able to past champion Dempsey and Joe Mike has sound challengers with knockout rate, senior heavyweight Foreman, who 10 percent of his opponent. Speaking of 40-year-old is 13-hit come back of years ago and a great desire to fight. Current cruiser Evander Holyfield move up to heavyweight intention of a Tyson. Tyson's fame has a price

After Muhammad Ali retired for the last time and other popular fighters were winding down brilliant careers, the boxing world needed a hero. Mike Tyson was there. The young champion's notoriety has not come without a price. Tyson, 22, is 35-0 with 31 knockouts but has twice postponed fight No. 36 with Frank Bruno. Still fresh from whipping Michael Spinks in late June, Tyson found himself in a lawsuit with manager Bill Cayton, whom Tyson accused of hiding financial information. They were able to reach an out-of-court settlement. Then came a minor fisticuff on a Harlem sidewalk with boxer Mitch Green, one of only three fighters to go the distance with Tyson. This eventually led to Tyson offering Green a rematch in the ring. During the summer, it had been alleged that Tyson had beat his wife, actress Robin Givens, and their marriage was on the rocks.

"Nobody has more, better reasons to live than I do." — Mike Tyson

However, both have firmly denied those charges. More recently, Tyson was involved in an auto accident that was reported as a suicide attempt by the New York Daily News. Tyson said that accusation was "ridiculous." "Nobody has more, better reasons to live than I do," he said during an interview with New York television station WNYW. "I have way too much butt to kick in the ring to try and kill myself out of the ring." He's right. At an average of just two fights a year, Tyson could retire before age 30 with a perfect 50-0 record, breaking Rocky Marciano's mark of consecutive wins without a loss. He'd pile away a sizeable nestegg at that rate as well. After being rescued from the ghettos of New York City and introduced to the world of professional boxing by Cus D'Amato, Tyson has reigned as the heavyweight champ since November 1986 and hasn't looked back. Even with the pain from the deaths of his manager D'Amato and close friend and trainer Jimmy Jacobs, Tyson has posted a 8-0 record in title bouts with six of those via the knockout. Most boxing experts agree that Tyson hasn't faced the same quality of competition that was available to past champions Ali, Jack Dempsey and Joe Louis. Yet "Iron Mike" has soundly defeated all challengers with an 88.6 percent knockout rate, second only to former heavyweight champ George Foreman, who knocked out 90 percent of his opponents. Speaking of Foreman, the 40-year-old is 13-0 (all KOs) since hitting a comeback trail a couple of years ago and he has expressed a great desire to fight Tyson. Current cruiserweight champion Evander Holyfield is making the move up to heavyweight with the intention of a showdown with Tyson. A rematch with Michael Spinks isn't out of the realm of believability either. All of the talk that there isn't a fighter who is worthy of stepping into the ring with Tyson is drivel. Nevertheless, Mike Tyson isn't going to let his personal life get in the way of his job — beating opponents senseless and remaining champ for a long, long time.

Colorado defense will test Hawks

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

When the dust settled in Manhattan, Kan., this past Saturday, a curious statistical irony arose. Kansas State outgained Iowa by more than 50 yards, but the Hawkeyes won 45-10. Statistics don't tell the whole story, and according to Iowa Coach Hayden Fry this could be the case when Colorado brings its powerful rushing offense to Kinnick Stadium this Saturday. According to Fry, the Buffaloes, who are second in the nation with a whopping 446 yards-per-game rushing average, have caught his attention with rigid defensive play. "Even though they (Colorado last week against Fresno State) made over 500 yards on offense, the most impressive thing was their defensive," he said. "Colorado defensively looks like Michigan... very well coached, fundamentally very sound." That could be because Coach Bill McCartney, in his seventh season at Colorado, spent time as an assistant at Michigan before taking the Buffaloes' top spot. Defensively, Colorado held Fresno State at bay in a 45-3 win last weekend. Fresno State rolled up 68 points while beating New Mexico the week before. If Colorado's defense concerns Fry, then it must be unsettling that Iowa's offensive lineup is uncertain because of injuries the last few weeks. Most notable is the status of tight end Marv Cook, who has a high-ankle sprain. "We don't anticipate (Cook playing) since he presently has his leg in a cast," Fry said. "I will say that he will not punt this week if he shows up." Senior Tom Ward and junior John Palmer, who each caught their first receptions as Hawkeyes against Kansas State, will fill in if Cook does not play. The offensive line is similarly under reconstruction. "It's really too complex to get into," Fry said. "All of our linemen now, other than the position of center, will be interchangeable between guard and tackle. We may have changes on top of changes." Besides looking forward to Colorado, Fry was happy with his team's progress over the last week. "We definitely showed improvement in many, many categories in the second game (at Kansas State) over the first game (at Hawaii)," he said. "Particularly creating all of the turnovers." Iowa profited from six Wildcat turnovers in the second half, five of those interceptions. Included in that were two touchdown jaunts, Brad Quast rambling 94 yards in the Hawkeyes' productive third quarter and Brian Wise returning an errant pass 81 yards for a fourth-quarter score. Colorado is the second of three Big Eight foes in a row for Iowa. The Hawkeyes' non-conference slate ends with Iowa State one week from Saturday.

Iowa's Richards leads team

Junior lends experience, motivation

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

New Jersey — home to Atlantic City, the Boardwalk and Bruce Springsteen. And if you throw in the town of Pennsauken, you can include Iowa field hockey ace Erica Richards. Coming into her junior campaign on a team that is now 3-1, Richards found the allure of a top-notch program and the friendly reaction of those she came in contact with on a recruiting trip enough to convince her to come to Iowa City. "When (Hawkeye assistant coach) Michele Madison called to recruit me and said that they would like to fly me out, I knew it was a quality program," she said. "A lot of schools wouldn't show that much attention. "Everyone was so good to me when I took my trip here. Once I got on the campus I decided I wanted to go to Iowa." The university made a sound investment. Richards is the leading returning scorer from a club that made it to the NCAA Final Four. She tallied 19 goals along the way to add to the five she contributed as a freshman. Her stickwork didn't go unnoticed. Richards received a number of honors including co-offensive player of the year with now-graduated teammate Liz Tchou. But the talented hitter said her greatest moment came as a freshman. "Winning the national championship was just incredible, especially for a freshman," she said. "It was such a great game because it took us two overtimes to win. It was quite an experience." When you have such a productive high-school career (she captained her softball and field-hockey team that won state titles her senior year) and are a part of a national championship team by age 19, one might think it hard to move up — but not her. "I would love to be on an Olympic team," she said. "The next time it comes around I hope that I'm here. And it's not hard to find people who think her goal is not out of reach.

Iowa field hockey player Erica Richards moves the ball downfield in a practice last season. Richards, a junior, will be a key factor in Iowa's success this year.

"She keeps getting better and better," Iowa co-captain Aileen Trendler said. "Her desire to improve and do well makes the whole team work harder. She is a very talented player." Interim Coach Janet Ryan thinks Richards is headed in the right direction. "Erica is doing very well and continues to improve," she said. "With a little more experience she could certainly be in the thick of things." Her mother, Peg Richards, echoes those sentiments. "She works very hard," she said. "With the determination that she has, she can do just about anything. I know that the Olympics are high on her list." The Hawkeyes' record received its first blemish last Saturday at Delaware, as they lost 3-0, but the team bounced back on the unfamiliar grass surface to cap off the weekend with a 5-2 win at West Chester. Richards, a communication major interested in sports broadcasting, was pleased with the team's recovering capabilities. "It was like night and day," she

U.S. won't boycott opening ceremonies

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Olympic officials Tuesday quickly averted a threatened U.S. boycott of opening ceremonies, then took on the drug issue in sports by unveiling a state-of-the-art testing center and a new, get-tough rule. U.S. athletes were so upset about a plan by organizers to limit the size of teams marching in Saturday's opening ceremonies — effectively leaving out about half of the 611-member American team — they threatened to stay away en masse. Within hours, though, the International Olympic Committee and Seoul Olympic Organizing Committee retreated and said any athlete who wanted to take part could take part. "It is their right," the IOC and SLOOC said in a statement. Volleyball player Robert Partie said the ceremony is a big part of the Games. "We've been looking forward to doing it and it would be a shame if it didn't work out," he said. Ernie G. Dennis, chief of the U.S. mission, said the restrictions, designed to reduce participation from 13,000 athletes to 8,000 and speed up the show, were not acceptable and were resented by the Americans. "Every American who has a right to compete here feels that the chance to march in the opening ceremonies is the culmination of the Olympic dream itself," said Mike Moran, spokesman for the U.S. Olympic Committee. "Any athlete who represents his or her country and could not march would have a disappointment probably exceeding any failures they suffered on the playing field," he said. Disappointment looms for drug users and dealers under the Olympics' high-tech testing system and anti-drug program. "Drug dealers could be banned from the Games for life under the resolution adopted by the IOC. "We believe in two things in the Iowa to face Flames in dual meet tonight

By Anne Upson
 The Daily Iowan

After a weekend split at the Saluki Invitational, the Iowa volleyball team will host the Illinois-Chicago Flames tonight in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes (6-2) defeated Bowling Green and Southern Illinois at last weekend's tournament but lost to Arizona and Notre Dame. Coach Sandy Stewart said she wasn't overly concerned about the tournament's result. "I have mixed emotions about the weekend," Stewart said. "We played well at times and not so well at others. Other teams did the same as we did. It's still early in the year." Stewart said she was uncertain about Wednesday's match. "I don't know much about (the Flames)," Stewart said. "We played them a few years ago. There will be several girls from Chicago and they will be scrappy players." Illinois-Chicago Coach Don August anticipates a victory for the Flames (3-3). "I expect to win," August said. "It should be a close match from what I can judge from my team and what I know about Iowa. I don't know how Iowa is doing this year but they are a very good team." Although the Flames return four starters, August said his team was inexperienced. "We are a young team," August said. "I have one senior in the starting lineup and many underclassmen. We lost three starters to graduation and our setter to academics. It will definitely hurt us to lose the experience of a college setter." Stewart has not yet decided who will start for the Hawkeyes on Wednesday. She said that several players have a shot at the left side hitting position.

Netters will open fall season in Texas tourney

By Julie Deardorff
 The Daily Iowan

An upgraded schedule for the Iowa men's tennis team will put the Hawkeyes among some of the country's best teams this weekend as they travel to Texas for the Texarkana Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament. According to eighth-year Coach Steve Houghton, this year's squad should be stronger than the 1987 team that finished 19-6. "It's the first year I think we have a high enough quality team to get in to play with Top 20 teams," said Houghton. "Our goal is to win the Big Ten this year and I think it's a legitimate one." The main difference from last year's team is that Iowa has an experienced player in almost every one of the six singles positions. The lineup returns virtually intact as Scott Shafer, the No. 6 singles player, was the only loss. "We have outstanding depth this year and if someone is injured another guy will be able to step right in if needed," Houghton said. All-Big Ten selection Claes Ramel, who finished the 1987 season 13-11 overall and 3-6 in the conference, is one of the team's best returning players. He will battle senior Mike Kiewiet, a transfer from Western Michigan, for the top singles position. Ramel, a senior from Malmo, Sweden, was Iowa's first all-Big Ten player since 1984. Martin Aguirre of Ecuador, Lars Nordmark of Sweden and Dave Novak of Michigan make up the middle of lineup. "Singles will be very competitive because we have 10 to 11 good players and only six spots," Houghton said. "We're fairly stable in the middle of the lineup as Aguirre, Nordmark and Novak all had winning dual meet records last year." Also returning for the Hawkeyes will be Greg Hebard, Bryan Stokstad, Jay Maltby and Paul Buckingham. Buckingham is a transfer from Indiana who sat out last season. The doubles teams aren't set, but Ramel and Aguirre, who were nationally ranked and one of the top teams in the Big Ten, will likely stay together. Another advantage the Hawkeyes have is that most of the starting lineup played extensively this summer. Ramel and Kiewiet played circuits in Holland, Bulgaria and Germany and Nordmark also played in Europe. Hebard played in New York and Connecticut, Novak and Tim Reynolds played regional tournaments in Iowa and Buckingham and Maltby played in the Chicago area. Rounding out the lineup but not making the trip to Texas will be Reynolds, John Albright and freshman Alexei Abras. Assistant coach Mike Henrich was optimistic about the upcoming tournament. "Our guys can play with them," he said. "Someone will break through — I'm just not sure who it will be." Ten teams are in the four-day individual tournament, including two of the best Big Eight teams, Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, Northeast Louisiana, Arkansas-Little Rock and NCAA runner-up Louisiana. Match play will begin Thursday and end Sunday. The Hawkeyes will play in four meets during the fall season. After the Texarkana tournament, Iowa will head to the Ball State Invitational in Muncie, Ind., Oct. 7-8.

Former UNI coach may sue school

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Darrell Mudra, who says he offered to come back as Northern Iowa's football coach after retiring this year, says he may sue the school because of a disagreement over his retirement date.

Mudra, who is now living in Tallahassee, Fla., told The Cedar Rapids Gazette that at one point he wanted to rescind his resignation because UNI officials would not let him retire on the day he wanted.

"If I would have to remain coaching through another season, I was prepared to do that," Mudra said.

UNI officials felt Mudra's actions were ill-timed and refused to let him return to the school, according to documents released by the Iowa Board of Regents.

UNI officials did all they could "to make the best of what was an unfortunate situation," a regents staff memo said. "Dr. Mudra's decision to retire in May 1988 was acted upon by the university in good faith."

"Dr. Mudra had left the university in an undesirable situation by retiring so late in the year."

Two more NFL players draw suspensions

NEW YORK (AP) — Safety Antonio Gibson of the New Orleans Saints and tackle Leonard Mitchell of the Atlanta Falcons were suspended Tuesday by the NFL for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

"They've been placed on their clubs' non-football illness list for 30 days," said league spokesman Joe Browne. "They have been instructed to remain out until Oct. 13."

The suspensions of Gibson and Mitchell bring to 19 the number of NFL players cited for violating the league's drug policy. Seven players have completed 30-day suspensions and are back with their respective teams.

Richard Dent of the Chicago Bears was suspended last week for refusing to take a urine test on Aug. 23, a violation of the league's two-year-old drug policy.

Dent challenged the policy in Cook County court in Illinois. But before Dent's case was heard by a judge, the league agreed to drop the suspension. In return, Dent's attorneys withdrew the suit and agreed to abide by a ruling by Commissioner Pete Rozelle.

Ex-Kansas City coach is hospitalized

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Broadcast analyst Hank Stram, who coached the Kansas City Chiefs to three American Football League championships and a Super Bowl victory, was listed in stable condition Tuesday after undergoing open-heart surgery.

Doctors at Methodist Hospital replaced Stram's aortic valve with an artificial one during surgery performed by Dr. Harold Halbrook, a hospital spokesperson said.

Stram, 65, underwent the four-hour operation Tuesday morning and was expected to be hospitalized from 8 to 10 days, hospital spokesman Jon White said.

Halbrook, a cardiovascular surgeon, said Stram was suffering from calcific aortic stenosis, a narrowing of the aortic valve. The aorta is the main artery of the body and carries blood from the left chamber of the heart to all parts of the body.

"Doctors report that the surgery went well and described it as routine," White said.

Stram was hospitalized Saturday after complaining of dizziness.

IOWA NOTES

● Offensive lineman Jim Poynton, the Hawkeyes' strongest player, is still out with a knee injury.
The prognosis for his return is in four to six weeks.
● Junior Travis Watkins, who led Iowa's receiving corps with five receptions for 124 yards last week, considers Saturday's game important.
"Colorado is a really big team," he said. "I consider it just like a Big Ten game. It's always nice to be at home."

● Linebacking stalwart Brad Quast thinks the Hawkeyes must play better this weekend.
"There's no question — if we play like we did against Hawaii and Kansas State, that won't be enough," he said. "Our defense has to get more physical."

fight against doping — sanctions and education," said Prince Alexander de Merode of Belgium, chairman of the IOC's medical commission. "Education is the first step, but we need strong sanctions as well."
The IOC's executive board will have the power to impose penalties that "may extend to life exclusion from all forms of competition in whatever manner in the Olympic Games or in any other competitions organized under the auspices of the IOC or with its patronage."
The IOC agreed unanimously at its 94th session that people who make, distribute or finance the purchase of any of the more than 90 items on its list of banned substances should be barred from all Olympic involvement.
The only exception, the IOC said, would be doctors, pharmacists and other members of the medical profession treating patients.
Officials also showed off a $3 million drug-testing center filled with computers, chromatographs and mass spectrometers set to begin the analysis of urine samples of all medalists and a random sampling of other athletes.
"Athletes who use drugs now are imprudent, ill-advised, or just plain stupid," said Dr. Robert Dugal, a member of the IOC's medical commission.
Angel Myers, a U.S. swimming star, has already been disqualified for the use of steroids, as have four members of the Canadian weightlifting team. All were caught by tests in their home countries.
The lab here will receive up to about 200 samples a day.
"It's mostly the athletes who use the steroids who get caught," said lab director Dr. Jong Sei Park, a University of Maryland professor who has spent the last three years preparing for the Games.

In addition to amphetamines, beta blockers, diuretics and other drugs, the drug-testers also will look for the first time for marijuana. Pot is not banned by the IOC, but some member nations are curious about the number of athletes who use it.
Park said his lab won't identify users by name.
A day after Canadian weightlifter Kevin Roy was sent home following a positive test for steroids, the leader of the team tried to explain why Canadians are more likely to be caught using banned drugs.
Yvon Chouinard said the four athletes dropped after testing positive for anabolic steroids — three were left in Canada last week — probably took the banned drugs because they were having difficulty meeting the Canadian Olympic Association's standard to make the team.
"I have to presume that they were trying, all the way out, in order to make the Canadian Olympic standard and they felt this was the only avenue that was left to them," Chouinard said.
The Canadian standards are higher than those set by the IOC, he said, and should be changed.
"The morale is very low. I would say I've never seen it lower than what it is now," Chouinard said. "People have been demoralized by what took place."
The disqualifications left only three Canadian weightlifters to compete in Seoul.

"Our starting lineup is still up in the air," Stewart said. "The left side is also open. They haven't shown me the consistency in the left side for a regular player. It's up between Trista Schoenbeck, I want to give her court time, Jennifer Thompson, Jenny Reese, Ruth Spethman, and Ginger Lorentson. It's a toss up."

Stewart also cited sophomore middle hitter Barb Willis.
"Barb is up and down, but she is really a determined player," Stewart said. "She is intent on having a good season. She has a good mental intensity. She has also improved at keeping a positive attitude, being able to bounce back from a bad game."

League coaches downplay losing preseason record

CHICAGO (AP)—Big Ten coaches don't seem to be especially alarmed over the league's 3-9 start against intersectional foes, but the coaches hope to better that record this week.

It may be an uphill battle, as their teams face such ranked powers as No. 1 Miami of Florida and No. 8 Notre Dame.

For the record, the Big Ten was 8-14 in preconference games in 1982 but still sent five teams to postseason bowl games. And in 1984 the record was 11-10 and six teams went to bowls.

Although most teams have played only one game, the Big Ten has only two undefeated teams, Ohio State and Indiana.

Despite Iowa's loss to Hawaii and Wisconsin's defeat at the hands of Western Michigan in early openers, the most shocking loss came last week when Michigan State, the defending Big Ten and Rose Bowl champion, was upset by Rutgers 17-13 at East Lansing.

And Michigan, one of the favorites for the championship, dropped a 19-17 decision at Notre Dame.

"Anytime you lose, it's disappointing," said Michigan State Coach George Perles. "But they all count as one. If you win all three nonconference games and lose your conference opener, that's not good. You try to win for national prestige and confidence, but we have to learn something before we start the conference."

Big Ten Football

Ohio State opened the season with a solid 26-9 victory over Syracuse, and Indiana defeated Rice 41-14.

"I don't put much stock in nonconference games," said Ohio State Coach John Cooper. "This is my first year and I don't know the league, I don't have any feelings. But Hawaii is a tough place to play and Iowa had a touchdown called back. I watched the Michigan-Notre Dame game and if Michigan makes that field goal, they'd have won."

Indiana Coach Bill Mallory said, "We haven't done as well as we thought we could or hoped we would. Still, I think we have a good league whatever the records are. We have good teams. Maybe not that great team, but we have to wait and see how things go."

Bo Schembechler of Michigan has this explanation: "The difference between the top teams and the bottom teams in the nation has become very slim."

Things could go better this week when all ten teams are in action with eight of them at home, highlighted by top-ranked Miami at Michigan and Notre Dame at Michigan State.

The rest of the schedule finds Utah at Illinois, Kentucky at Indiana, Colorado at Iowa, Miami of Ohio at Minnesota, Northwestern at Air Force, Ohio State at Pittsburgh, Ohio University at Purdue and Northern Illinois at Wisconsin.

"We are lucky to play a team that is ranked," said Perles, who harked back to the days of former Spartan coaching legends. "Notre Dame is always a big game for Michigan State, since the days of Biggie (Munn) and Duffy (Daugherty)."

Balancing act

Julio Franco of the Cleveland Indians tries to maintain his balance after forcing New York's Rickey Henderson and completing the throw for the double play. The Indians won 8-6 in Cleveland.

NBC wants coverage during ads

NEW YORK (AP)—NBC officials have asked Olympic advertisers to allow silent live coverage of certain events to continue in a corner of the television screen during commercials, according to a report published today.

NBC Sports executive producer Michael Weisman confirmed that the plan had been presented to certain advertisers and said some have indicated interest, the Daily News reported today.

Under the plan, unprecedented in Olympic television coverage, NBC would superimpose a silent picture in the lower right hand corner of the television screen during commercials in sports such as basketball, volleyball, cycling and long-distance track events.

NBC is hoping to avoid the harsh viewer criticism ABC received during this year's Winter Olympics when goals were scored during commercial breaks of hockey telecasts. NBC has experimented with the technique during telecasts of major-league baseball games.

"Some of these athletes have worked a lifetime to get to the Olympics," said Weisman, speaking from Seoul, where the Olympics are to begin in four days. "It would be a shame if a great performance wasn't seen by the home folks because we were in a commercial break."

BASKETBALL TRYOUTS

All eligible student-athletes intending on trying out for the gray team are required to sign up in the basketball office on the 2nd floor of Carver Hawkeye Arena (Room 240) by Tuesday, September 20.

The gray, or walk-on team, has been a tradition that originated during Coach Davis' days at Lafayette and has been continued at Boston College, Stanford and now Iowa. It is probably the only situation of its kind in major college basketball today and will provide a unique opportunity for those who participate.

Brewers shut out White Sox behind Nieves' three-hitter

CHICAGO (AP) — Juan Nieves pitched a three-hitter Tuesday night and the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the Chicago White Sox 4-0 to remain 5½ games behind in the American League East.

Paul Molitor led off the game with a home run and Robin Yount hit an inside-the-park homer in the first inning as the Brewers won for the 10th time in 13 games. Milwaukee is in fourth place in the AL East behind division-leading Boston and one game behind Detroit and New York.

Making his first start since July 14, Nieves, 6-5, struck out four and walked two in his first complete game of the season.

Molitor homered to left off Ken Patterson, 0-2, on the third pitch of the game. It was Molitor's 23rd lifetime homer as a leadoff man, including five this season.

Two batters later, Robin Yount hit the Brewers' first inside-the-park homer since he did it in June 1982 at Detroit. Right fielder Kenny Williams caught the ball on a fly but dropped it when he tripped over diving center fielder Dave Gallagher. Williams left the game with a twisted ankle.

Yount doubled in the sixth and scored on Jeffrey Leonard's single. The Brewers scored in the eighth on a double-play grounder by Leonard.

CLEVELAND — Pinch hitter Luis Aguayo's two-run homer in the eighth inning rallied New York over the Cleveland Indians 5-4. The Yankees have won five of their last six.

Dave Winfield started the New York eighth with a single, his third hit of the game, off reliever Don Gordon. One out later, Aguayo met Scott Bailes, 8-13, with his third home run of the season for the Yankees and second in two nights.

Neil Allen, 5-2, pitched 3½ scoreless innings for the victory, allowing three hits. Dave Righetti went one inning for his 21st save in 30 opportunities.

Blue Jays 9, Tigers 1
TORONTO — Jesse Barfield hit a grand slam and Ernie Whitt hit a two-run homer as the Toronto Blue Jays routed the slumping Detroit Tigers 9-1.

Cincinnati built a 2-0 lead as Eric Davis singled home a first-inning run and Jeff Reed hit a solo homer in the second off Mike Scott, 13-7, who hasn't won since Aug. 13.

A throwing error by reliever Larry Andersen set up run-scoring singles in the seventh by Collins, Barry Larkin and Kal Daniels.

The Chicago White Sox' Daryl Boston steals second base Monday during the seventh inning as the ball bounces out of the glove of the Milwaukee Brewers' Jim Gantner. The White Sox beat the Brewers 2-1.

From the cast of Riverside Theatre's "Steel Magnolias": (seated) Jody Hovland, (standing) Anne Marie Luthro, Jeanne Osborn and Laura Gordon.

'Steel Magnolias' premieres

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Riverside Theatre opens its eighth season Thursday night with the comedy-drama "Steel Magnolias." Currently running on Broadway, after a successful off-Broadway stint, Robert Harling's play portrays the charm and idiosyncrasies of Southern womanhood. The play takes place in Chinquapin, La., at Truvy's Beauty Parlor where "anyone whose anybody gets their hair done." Each Saturday morning these six female friends gather for "good hair" and good gossip about fashion and food, men and marriage, and each other.

Though filled with humor and witty repartee, the play also deals with life's weightier challenges, hence the "steel" in the title. "There is some gossiping and teeth-sharpening on each other," explains director Ron Clark, "but in moments of trouble, the bonding is intense. Where you might expect to find a bunch of airheads snorting hairspray, you witness a group of clever, exciting, lovely women."

Make no mistake about it, however: The ladies at Truvy's don't miss the chance to toss a well-aimed barb. M'Lynn is concerned that her daughter's all-pink wedding motif will make "the Sanctuary look like it was hosed down with Pepto-Bismol." After attending a complicated play with her friend, one character remarks that "Sis' Orelle is so dumb she thinks Sherlock Holmes is a subdivision."

Guest artist for "Steel Magnolias" is Chicago artist Laura Gordon who plays Truvy, the tender-hearted owner of the beauty shop. Gordon received her M.F.A. in acting from the UI and has worked with the Wisconsin Shakespeare Festival, the National Jewish Theatre and Victory Gardens in Chicago.

As the beautician who continually tends to her customers, Gordon's character posed a challenge. "I have to keep everything going while running my lines and keeping up my Louisiana accent," laughed Gordon. "I asked Ron if he wanted me to tap dance and get out my baton as well."

Gordon's residency is supported by a grant from the Iowa Arts Council and the National Education Association. Director Clark couldn't be more pleased with his cast. "I can't think of a rehearsal period that's been more problem-free," he commented. "I don't know which came first, the ensemble within the play, or the ensemble of actresses."

"It's a surprising play," reflected Clarke. "We got more than we bargained for. Although it's tremendously funny, the characters change dramatically by the end of the play. Although only two change their hair styles, they're smarter and wiser by the end."

There will be a reception to celebrate the opening of the new season and to meet the company on Sept. 15 following the performance. And Wednesday, Sept. 21, has been designated as Hair Stylists Night. All stylists will receive a $2 discount on tickets purchased at the door when they present their professional membership card.

Riverside Theatre

"Steel Magnolias" runs September 15 - 17 and 21 - 24 at 8 p.m. There is also a matinee performance on Saturday, September 17 at 2 p.m. All performances are at Old Brick, corner of Market and Clinton streets in Iowa City. Tickets can be purchased in advance at Prairie Lights Books, or can be reserved by calling Riverside Theatre at (319) 338-7672. Tickets will be sold at the door as available. Profile of vision: Kujawski

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Listening: "... constantly thinking about exhibition and program possibilities, getting to know the collection, the staff, the university resources ... last week, for example, I traveled to Burlington, yesterday Des Moines and this afternoon I go to Muscatine ... sharing our permanent collection not only nationally, but ... museums in Taiwan have expressed interest, and we also have links with museums in Africa and Japan ..."

Mary Kujawski, newly-appointed director of the UI Museum of Art, has a ferocious agenda. Her calm was belied by the three appointment calendars spread out in front of her on her desk, in each of which she wrote several times during the course of an interview. A portable dictaphone is a constant companion.

Kujawski comes to the UI from the University of Michigan Museum of Art, where since 1981 she served as assistant director and director of the graduate program in museum training. She earned bachelor's and master's degrees in art history, a master's degree in education and a certificate in museum training, all from the University of Illinois at Mary Kujawski.

Champaign-Urbana. Her areas of interest and specialization include museology (museum studies) and non-Western art, especially Asian and African.

A lecturer at the Art Institute of Chicago from 1977-81, Kujawski prepared gallery talks and slide lectures on all aspects of the permanent collection and temporary exhibitions, produced six lecture series and was responsible for the institute's high school lecture service. From 1969-79, Kujawski held teaching and museum positions at the University of Illinois.

"Mary Kujawski combines experience and success within a university and non-university environment and clearly understands the needs of a diverse constituency. I look forward to working with her," said Wallace Tomasini, professor and director of the UI's School of Art and Art History.

One of the reasons Kujawski took the position was her appreciation of Iowa City. "I love the friendliness and community feeling here," she commented. "When I first arrived on campus, the support for arts and culture was palpable. Everywhere I looked, I could see original works of art, whether it was walking down the hallways in the Union or the room I was staying in at the Iowa House."

As a specialist in outreach activities, Kujawski plans to do all she can to make the museum more appealing, particularly to students. "We're going to do everything we can to unlock the stereotype of a museum as inaccessible. Students need to learn that it's not a tomb. You can have fun, but not necessarily fun that's noisy with crowds. It's a side of fun that's contemplative and enlightening. We have advisory committees comprised of faculty and community leaders; I'd like to have a committee that includes students. I'd be happy to hear from students who have ideas."

In addition to the museum's four primary responsibilities of collection, exhibition, research and education, Kujawski plans to pursue dynamic involvement with any and all university groups.

"I would love to do work with (Hancher director) Wally Chappell and Hancher Auditorium so that some of our exhibits can complement what they're presenting. I'd love to work with departments planning symposia or semester-long themes. The Women's Studies program has an important program occurring in the spring and I'll talk with (anthropology professor) Marjorie Wolf to see what we can do here to complement what's going on there. I'd love to do something with the Museum of Natural History. By sharing our resources and expertise around campus, we only make the university stronger."

Characteristic of people deeply committed to their craft, Kujawski displays a single-minded conviction that her field can serve as an instrument of change. "I think that art objects have the power to inspire and to serve as catalysts to curiosity and new ideas as nothing else can. The fact that everything made in this museum was made by human beings forms a wonderful connection to the past and present and can inspire us to the future. All of this may sound quasi-religious, but what attracts me to the museum is the object, so this is where everything starts."

'Moon Over Parador' tops 'Nightmare' in movie lists

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Moon Over Parador" rose to box office heights in its first weekend of release, taking in $3.27 million and dropping the latest "Nightmare on Elm Street" sequel from the top spot.

The comedy starring Richard Dreyfuss, Raul Julia and Sonia Braga is about an actor drafted to impersonate a dead South American dictator.

The film, produced and directed by Paul Mazursky, edged "Nightmare on Elm Street 4: The Dream Master" from its three-week reign in the No. 1 spot.

"Nightmare" earned $3.2 million, according to a tally of studio reports by industry analyst Exhibitor Relations.

Third in the weekend box-office sweepstakes was the British-American comedy, "A Fish Called Wanda," which took in $2.8 million in its ninth week in release.

The Bruce Willis action-thriller "Die Hard" didn't, hitting fourth place in its ninth week with $2.6 million in earnings.

Next was the white supremacy-themed "Betrayed" with $2.5 million, followed by the Tom Cruise vehicle "Cocktail" with $2.22 million after seven weeks.

The new-wave western "Young Guns" was seventh with $2.17 million.

The irrepressible "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" continued as the smash of the summer, placing eighth with $1.9 million in weekend ticket sales for a 12-week total of $133 million.

"Married to the Mob" placed ninth with $1.6 million, and Tom Hanks' "Big" was 10th with $1.33 million.
