Football-weekend revelers break arrest records

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

Resist, party animals. If Saturday's arrest records are any indication, Iowa's distinction among Playboy's Top 40 Party Schools is secure.

With a little help from Cyclone faithful, Hawkeye fans filled Johnson County Jail to capacity Saturday night and compiled a long list of arrest statistics: Between 3 p.m. Saturday and 7 a.m. Sunday, the Iowa City Police Department handled 127 complaints, responded to 31 loud parties, totaled 16 public intoxication arrests and stopped five drivers for OWI. In addition, police ticketed 22 for open containers of alcohol and charged 10 with possession of a controlled substance, while nabbing 26 for possession of alcohol under the legal age.

The Iowa City Police Department tallied 79 arrests between Saturday evening and early Sunday morning and called the number "excessive," compared to normal weekend totals of 12-14 arrests.

"That's the busiest night I've ever had, and I've been here for 12 years," said Nancy Sereduck, Iowa City Police Department chief dispatcher. "It's the most volume of traffic I've ever seen but not the most critical."

Johnson County Jail officials said they housed 57 scofflaws over the course of the weekend, straining its 52-person capacity to the limits.

"We had them coming in and coming out all night," said a Johnson County Jail deputy.

Most of the arrested were students who saw the contest between the Hawkeyes and the cross-state rival Cyclones as an opportunity to celebrate.

"(The arrests were) mostly football-game related. Most of it was possession under the legal age. The Iowa City officers go in (to bars) and check IDs and bring them down here," a jail official said, adding, "Most of it was student population that got arrested."

"Just people using the game as an excuse to party," Iowa City police officer Bob Stika said.

Police officials said they didn't know what to expect from post-game revelers.

"We went into it blind because we didn't know how many people there would be or how many arrests there would be," said Stika.

The swarm of fans that converged on the downtown area Saturday evening following the Hawkeyes' 10-3 victory over Iowa State University found the police department waiting for them.

"I was just standing there, and (an officer) came up and he asked me if he could see some ID," said UI freshman Mike McGlynn, who was drinking at The Fieldhouse, 111 E. College St., after the game. "I told him I didn't have any, but he saw my wallet in my back pocket and reached around and slapped my butt," McGlynn said.

McGlynn was ticketed for underage possession of alcohol after he presented false identification to the officer.

"I got lucky. He asked me the year I was born, but he didn't ask me the date. I said '69, so he thought I was 19, and I got off (with a ticket)," he said.

One Iowa City bartender said the hand-stamp system some bars use to identify underage patrons is ineffective.

"The problems I think are happening at the big bars where they're letting in the younger students who are rubbing off their stamps and then drinking anyway," said Joe Melichar, a bartender at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St.

Joel Vanhal, a UI sophomore who was ticketed for underage possession of alcohol at The Fieldhouse this weekend, said he wasn't bitter and understood the police were doing their job.

"I was underage and I was drinking and they caught me," he said.

Nowhere to go

Iowa quarterback Chuck Hartlieb is thrown for a 2-yard loss late in the fourth quarter of the Iowa-Iowa State game Saturday at Kinnick Stadium. Iowa State took possession, drove deep into Iowa territory but fell short as Iowa held on to win, 10-3. See details on page 1B.

Shuttle ready for launch on Thursday

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)— NASA postponed the start of the countdown for the launch of space shuttle Discovery by eight hours Sunday because preparations had fallen behind, but said plans for a Thursday morning liftoff remained unchanged.

The space agency had added more than one day's "hold time" to the countdown and Lisa Malone, spokeswoman for the Kennedy Space Center, said eight hours of that would be used "at the front end of the countdown."

The countdown was rescheduled to begin at 8 a.m. today.

The delay was in "closing out" the aft end of the spaceplane — replacing panels and work platform and identifying a problem that had the potential of delaying the launch for two days, Malone said.

NASA had planned to start the countdown at 12:01 a.m. EDT Monday but engineers worried about low voltage readings in an electrical circuit that triggers the explosive charges used to separate the shuttle from its fuel tank when the tank is empty.

Eventually they determined that the fault was in a ground circuit, which does not affect the flight. If it had been in an onboard Master Events Controller, replacement of the unit could have meant a 48-hour delay.

The mood was optimistic at the Kennedy Space Center for an on-time launch Thursday at 9:59 a.m.

"I'd say we have a good chance," NASA test conductor Frank Merlino said. "The odds are good."

The problem threw work about five hours behind schedule when it was discovered on Saturday as engineers were checking the many pyrotechnic devices on the shuttle.

The winged spaceplane rides aloft attached at three points to the 154-foot-long external tank. At 8½ minutes into flight, just before the shuttle reaches orbit, the explosive devices release the tank and it breaks up in the atmosphere as it falls toward the Indian Ocean.

Discovery's launch date has been changed five times in the past as new problems cropped up in getting ready for STS-26, the 26th mission of the Space Transportation System.

The Cape Canaveral area was bracing for an influx of visitors comparable to the first flight of the space shuttle in 1981 when more

Today, mostly sunny with a high in the mid 70s. Good weather for football. Do you realize how violent football is? No, not the Hawkeyes. I'm talking Coed Rec! These people are out for blood (or at least kneecaps!)

Temper flares over parking space

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

Few Iowa City residents would dispute the fact that finding a parking place on campus is difficult.

But until Sept. 21, Steven Munzenmaier didn't realize how dangerous vying for a parking space could be.

Munzenmaier, a Johnson County resident, said he pulled into parking space number 26 on the south side of the Union around noon last Wednesday. When he opened his car door, a man who had been waiting for the same space was standing "face to face" with him.

According to Munzenmaier, the man said, "Do you think this is your personal parking space? Get back in the car and move this piece of shit."

Munzenmaier said he didn't consider the man a threat, initially. But then, Munzenmaier said, the man "grabbed me around the neck and started strangling me."

Munzenmaier said he pushed his assailant back, breaking his grip. From where he stood, Munzenmaier said, he could see the man's license plate number and repeated it until the man left.

"When he realized I knew his license number, he fled," Munzenmaier said.

Munzenmaier then contacted UI Security and gave them the license number. They later told him the car belonged to a local doctor.

"I was concerned that the man had done this before," Munzenmaier said. "I talked to (campus security), and they assured me he was having a bad day, he had no past record of that kind of action and it wouldn't happen again," Munzenmaier said.

Munzenmaier said he did not plan to file charges at first but later changed his mind.

"The more I thought about it, the more I realized the focus of (campus security's) action, or rather, inaction, was built around the issue that this guy was a doctor. That didn't excuse it. In fact, that

Candidates square off in debate

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)— George Bush and Michael Dukakis clashed over deficits, drugs and the Pledge of Allegiance in a crackling campaign debate Sunday night.

Bush said, "I hope people don't think I'm questioning his patriotism," but Dukakis retorted that he was and added, "I resent it."

Bush sought repeatedly in the 90-minute debate to depict Dukakis as a liberal Democrat who is "out there out of the mainstream." Dukakis challenged the vice president's judgment and ticked off a string of what he called Reagan administration failures, with emphasis on the Iran-Contra affair.

He said it was a "tragedy" for the president to sell arms to Iran in exchange for hostages and said Bush endorsed the deal.

The vice president replied, "Yes, we shouldn't trade arms for hostages, but we have made vast improvements in our anti-terrorism." Some hostages were freed during the arms dealing with Iran, but others were seized and nine Americans remain in captivity.

A question about Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle brought another lively exchange. Bush defended his youthful running mate and said, "he has my confidence." Dukakis guessed that "for most people the notion of President Quayle is a very, very troubling notion."

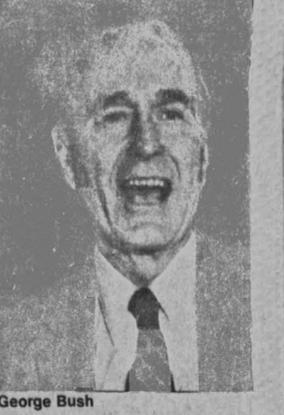

The combatants argued their case a little more than six weeks before Election Day from behind wooden lecterns on a stage at Wait Chapel on Wake Forest University's campus. The live audience numbered a few thousand — but the television audience was in the millions. And with many voters still undecided, the campaigns treated the debate as a pivotal event.

"I enjoyed it. I thought it was a good night," said Dukakis. Asked if he won, he replied, "People seemed to be pretty enthusiastic."

Bush campaign chairman James A. Baker III said, "The vice president did an extraordinarily good job in our opinion." He said he thought Bush "reinforced the differences we've been talking about" and joked that "we also think we won the battle of one-liners."

Michael Dukakis

Neither man committed an obvious gaffe during the 90 minutes. An Associated Press panel of six veteran debate judges gave Dukakis a

Iowa campaign leaders conjecture on winner

DES MOINES (AP)— The sharp tone of Sunday's presidential debate took some Iowa activists by surprise, but they split along predictable partisan lines over who would bring momentum with the clash.

"It was much harder-hitting from both sides than I expected," said Des Moines lawyer Jerry Crawford, a leader of Democrat Michael Dukakis' Iowa campaign.

"I think the vice president scored a very big win in the Midwest," said Republican Gov. Terry Branstad.

"I thought the vice president did a good job of keeping his cool," Branstad said. "He made a few slip-ups, but he handled it well."

"They both got very good shots, they both held their own," said David Oman, co-chairman of the Iowa Republican Party. "Neither one made the kind of fatal error that worries their staff people."

Proponents of the two candidates gathered at "debate parties" around the state, and the political parties hustled out big-name officialists after the debate to put the best face on their performance.

"I was very pleased," said Iowa Democratic Chairwoman Bonnie Campbell. "As a challenger against someone who has been vice president for eight years, it appeared to me very clear that Governor Dukakis has a better command of the facts."

"He was more confident and really seemed more knowledgeable about the whole range of issues," Campbell said.

She blamed Bush for the tough tenor of the debate, saying he's been running a negative campaign all along.

"It did surprise me," Campbell said. "I think he (Bush) is so locked into that mindset that he just can't get out of it."

"When it was time to talk substance he couldn't," Campbell said.

"Governor Dukakis was more specific on key issues of great concern, while Bush kind of gave it lip service," she said.

U.N. Association brings the world to Iowa City

Storytelling and refreshments from four points on the globe will highlight a public meeting of the United Nations Association on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Arts Center, 129 E. Washington St.

Three professional writers from India, Colombia and Czechoslovakia will present adult stories and readings. The event is being co-sponsored by UI's International Writing Program.

A brief program featuring culture and refreshments of Japan will be hosted by the UI's International Women's Club.

International storytellers at the event will be Anil Awachat of India, a writer, journalist and social worker; Celso Roman of Colombia, curriculum director at the Fine Arts School of National University and professor of sculpture; and Jaroslav Veis of Czechoslovakia, an editor of fiction and a weekly youth magazine, freelance writer and translator.

The public will also have an opportunity to learn about local and national activities of the Iowa City chapter of UNA and the UI's U.N. Organization.

The program is open to the public at no charge. Elevator access to the basement of the Jefferson Building (where the Arts Center is located) is available.

Genealogical Society to meet Tuesday

The Iowa City Genealogical Society will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the State Historical Society Library at 402 Iowa Ave.

A program titled "The Family Archivist" will be presented by Eileen Hammond.

The meeting is open to the public and the doors will open at 6 p.m.

UI students to debate legalization of drugs

A public debate on the legalization of "recreational drugs" will be held Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. in Shambaugh Auditorium of the Main Library. UI junior Shawn Shearer and UI senior Stephen Wells will affirm the resolution that "the production, sale, use and possession of recreational drugs in the U.S. should be legalized." UI graduate student Satoru Anouma and UI junior Cary Stamp will negate.

Shearer and Stamp, both of Des Moines, and Wells, of Ottumwa, are members of the intercollegiate debate team at the UI. Anouma of Yokohama, Japan, is a graduate student in the department of communications studies and has represented Japan in international competition. Shearer and Stamp represented UI at the National Debate Tournament in Ogden, Utah, last spring where they finished ninth in the preliminary round out of more than 70 teams, losing the first elimination round. The students are coached by UI director David B. Hingstman.

This debate, sponsored by the Iowa Forensic Union, is the first of four to be held this fall on Wednesday evenings at Shambaugh Auditorium. The other three are scheduled for Oct. 19, Nov. 9, and Nov. 30. All are scheduled for 7 p.m., and the public is invited to attend free of charge. A question-and-answer session will follow each debate.

For additional information, contact Paul Slappey, program coordinator, at 350 International Center, or call 335-0621.

Old Brick showcases new organ at concert

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The purchase of a mechanical-action organ by Lutheran Campus Ministry will not only enhance its new home at Old Brick, but, according to campus pastor Ted Fritschel, will enrich the entire community.

This was Fritschel's message Sunday night as he dedicated the George Kilgen & Son organ to "the glory of God and the good of the people in the community" during a concert to celebrate its installation. Delores Bruch, UI professor of Organ and Church Music, was the featured organist and played with the accompaniment of a string quartet and a clarinetist to a crowd of nearly 200 people.

Constructed in approximately 1918, the six-rank tracker organ was housed in Kansas until the 1940s and then moved to Immaculate Conception Church in Gratitinger, Iowa, where it remained until the Lutheran Campus Ministry purchased it on Dec. 24, 1987. According to Fritschel, the ministry favored this organ because it is "historically more in harmony with the building's past."

The size of the organ worried some, according to Val Lembke, who was on the organ committee of the Lutheran Campus Council, because it's smaller than the 1934 Austin organ it replaced.

But Sunday's concert extinguished this fear. "I was amazed at the way the sound bounced around the room," Fritschel said. "She's small but rather amazing."

Old Brick, the former North Presbyterian Church, was built in 1856 and is Iowa City's second-oldest public building. It was placed on the National Registry of Historic Places in 1973 and purchased by Old Brick Associations in 1977 to save it from demolition. The Episcopal Chaplaincy and Lutheran Campus Ministry bought the building jointly in June 1987, and continue to restore and remodel it.

Bruch said the sound quality of the music put forth by the organ endows the instrument with a distinctive personality.

"The special quality of this organ is that each separate sound is a certain lively personality in itself, which isn't true of all instruments," said Bruch. "It's a chirpy little thing."

According to Bruch, the new organ "works very well with the things Old Brick is used for today," and will serve as accompaniment for campus ministry worship as well as being available to local organists and UI organ students. Fritschel added the organ's placement in the balcony frees up more space in the auditorium for other community activities, like dances, weddings, political events, rock concerts, art shows and lectures.

Pioneer Seed goes to court over control of confiscated Indian grain

DES MOINES (AP) — Pioneer Hi-Bred International Inc. has gone to court at home and abroad in an attempt to regain control of 47 tons of seed confiscated in India.

The battle for about 1,700 bags of seed centers around the Iowa company's firing earlier this year of its president for overseas operations and the activities of an affiliate in India.

The seed, produced prior to March at Pioneer Seed Co. Ltd., is being held under court custody after being seized by police in Hyderabad, India. It was produced for a business that raised seed for corn, sorghum, sudangrass, pearl millet and sunflowers, according to court records.

"It's impossible to put a value on this kind of seed," said Suri Sehgal, Pioneer Hi-Bred's former head of overseas operations and a majority owner of the Indian business. "It is absolutely critical that any company doing business in India must have access to the seed — whichever company."

Sehgal said Pioneer Seed was India's third-largest seed company until the dispute began.

Pioneer Hi-Bred fired Sehgal early this year and filed a lawsuit against him in March, asking a judge in Polk County District Court to bar the Harvard-trained geneticist from selling, using or disclosing information about the company's seed products.

Jerry Chicoine, a lawyer for the Des Moines-based seed giant, said a new round of lawsuits in Iowa and India is related to the suit against Sehgal, but declined other comment. The latest suits seek to return the seed from the Indian breeding and sales program to Pioneer Hi-Bred.

Sehgal and his sister own nearly 60 percent of the capital in the Indian business and Pioneer Hi-Bred owns about 40 percent. Both Pioneer Hi-Bred and Pioneer Seed are claiming a right to the seed that was produced in India.

Sehgal said that he and his sister invested $25,000 in the Indian business when it was formed in 1977 and that he borrowed $15,000 from Pioneer Hi-Bred for an additional investment, a loan he repaid in the next five years. Pioneer Hi-Bred also invested $25,000, he said.

Pioneer Hi-Bred said in court that Indian law barred it from holding a controlling interest in an Indian business. It said it has invested millions of dollars in research and development by the Indian business and that Sehgal and his sister, S. Kapoor, "were merely the guardians of (Pioneer's) business in India."

Fired police chief sues for tapes

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Gary Hinzman, Cedar Rapids' fired police chief, is suing the Public Safety Commissioner for access to tape recordings Hinzman says are needed to help win back his job.

Public Safety Commissioner Robert Jaeger fired Hinzman on Monday, citing a poor working relationship with the chief and poor morale in the department.

Hinzman filed suit against Jaeger on Friday, saying the commissioner has refused to turn over documents and tape recordings important to his appeal of the dismissal. Hinzman is seeking tapes and documents made by Jaeger concerning the former chief and others concerning police Detective Donald Rosdail.

A hearing is set for Monday morning in Linn County District Court.

Hinzman wants to use the material Tuesday in an appeal of his firing to the Cedar Rapids City Council.

Jaeger suspended Rosdail for five days earlier this year after Rosdail was found guilty of filing a false accident report. Reports have said Hinzman may have wanted to fire Rosdail, who had been suspended for 60 days in another matter two years earlier.

Jaeger faced criticism that he was giving a break to a friend whose wife had contributed to his election campaign.

Iowans say despite diet

DES MOINES (AP) — Four out of 10 Iowans admit they're overweight, according to an Iowa City published Sunday that raised questions about personal health practices in the state.

The Wright poll commissioned by the Des Moines Register also said 41 percent of those questioned reported a history of heart disease in their families and 7 percent said they have heart disease.

This summer, the U.S. Surgeon General reported that diseases of dietary excess and imbalance are among the leading causes of death in this country, releasing a report saying that of the 2.1 million Americans who died last year, nearly 1.5 million succumbed to diseases associated with diet.

Three out of four Iowans questioned in the poll said they have tried to cut back on cholesterol in their diets, about the same percentage as said they have tried to limit their intake of sugar and salt.

But 57 percent of those questioned said they eat red meat just as often today as they did five years ago, and 8 percent said they eat more despite suggestions to limit consumption and eat smaller, leaner portions. Thirty-five percent of those responding said they have cut back on red meat.

Among Iowans over the age of 50, 43 percent said they have cut back on consumption of red meat, while half the Iowans over 44 said they are overweight.

report on

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa companies are releasing more than 25,000 tons of hazardous chemicals into the environment each year, according to reports coming under a new federal law.

Actual emissions could be much higher. Regional officials of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimate that just 50 percent to 60 percent of the companies required to file the reports have complied this year.

The figures included in the report on file with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources indicate nearly 70 percent of the chemicals are released into the air, nearly 10 percent are pumped into Iowa waterways and less than 1 percent is disposed of in the land, according to an analysis published by the Des Moines Sunday Register.

The chemicals range from sodium sulfate, a salt that is not believed to pose a major risk, to benzene, a cancer-causing agent.

The law setting the reporting requirements that began this year was adopted following the death of more than 2,800 people in a leak of a chemical from a Union Carbide Corp. plant at Bhopal, India.

About 250 Iowa plants submitted figures, and Ronald Ritter, official of the regional office of EPA at Kansas City, Kan., said his office has found that a significant number of officials at other companies were unaware that the law affects them. While the law requires all companies with printing operations to comply, no Iowa newspaper companies had submitted reports, the Register reported.

The company reporting the highest volume of chemical emissions in Iowa was the Clinton plant of Quantum Chemical's USI Division, which estimated it released a total of nearly 7.3 million pounds of chemicals into the Mississippi River or the atmosphere last year.

USI reported releasing about 1 million pounds of sodium sulfide into the Mississippi River and a small amount of a suspected cancer-causing chemical, tetrachloroethylene.

Iowans say they're fat despite dieting efforts

DES MOINES (AP) — Four out of 10 Iowans admit they're overweight, according to an Iowa Poll published Sunday that raised questions about personal health practices in the state.

The bright poll commissioned by the Des Moines Register also said 41 percent of those questioned reported a history of heart disease in their families and 7 percent said they have heart disease.

This summer, the U.S. Surgeon General reported that diseases of dietary excess and imbalance are among the leading causes of death in this country, releasing a report saying that of the 2.1 million Americans who died last year, nearly 1.5 million succumbed to diseases associated with diet.

Three out of four Iowans questioned in the poll said they have tried to cut back on cholesterol in their diets, about the same percentage as said they have tried to limit their intake of sugar and salt.

But 57 percent of those questioned said they eat red meat just as often today as they did five years ago, and 8 percent said they eat more, despite suggestions to limit consumption and eat smaller, leaner portions. Thirty-five percent of those responding said they have cut back on red meat.

Among Iowans over the age of 55, 43 percent said they have cut back on consumption of red meat, while half the Iowans over 44 said they are overweight.

The results are based on telephone interviews with 812 adults during the period of Aug. 23-31 and have a margin of error of 3.4 percentage points.

Fifty percent of the people questioned said they believe they have a normal weight for their height, but 40 percent said they were overweight, 9 percent said they were underweight and 1 percent were uncertain.

Kathleen Janz, an instructor at the UT's Department of Physical Education and Sports Studies, said she was not surprised that the percentage of Iowans admitting to be overweight is well above the national average.

"If you go to the State Fair, I'm sure you've noticed the same thing I have," she says of the shape of Iowans.

Elizabeth Schafer, a nutritionist at Iowa State University, said the state has led the nation for 20 years in the percentage of cardiovascular disease, which includes heart attack and strokes.

She told the Register that Iowans eat too much and don't exercise enough.

But of those questioned, 39 percent said they exercise almost daily, 20 percent said they exercise several times a week, 19 percent said they exercise once or twice a week, 15 percent said they exercise occasionally and just 7 percent said they never exercise.

I.C. police, firefighters argue domain

By Noelle Nystrom

Iowa City officials must decide before Oct. 17 whether accidents involving hazardous materials fall under the jurisdiction of local police or firefighters.

In Iowa City, the responsibility currently falls to the fire chief. But an Iowa City police officer challenged that decision Wednesday at a Johnson County Local Emergency Planning Committee meeting.

Iowa City Police Captain Patrick Harney brought up the issue at the LEPC committee meeting, saying Iowa City police should be in charge rather than firefighters.

In the rest of Johnson County, police are in charge at the emergency sites, but Iowa City request and had received no complaints from citizens or city officials, until the committee met last Wednesday.

The Local Emergency Planning Committee was established last year according to federal law. In Iowa, each county is required to have a contingency plan designating an incident commander in charge of hazardous material accidents.

First Assistant Johnson County Attorney Linda McGuire said Sunday she will send City Manager Stephen Atkins a letter requesting a decision about the situation.

"It's a management decision," McGuire said. "They already made the decision once. The letter is asking them to rethink it."

officials requested in February that it be allowed to appoint its fire chief incident commander instead.

Harney would not comment on the situation yesterday.

The incident commander serves as manager and decision maker at the scene of the accident, Sealey said.

"The reason for this is that they felt the fire department was more experienced in matters such as these," LEPC Chairman Dave Sealey said. "The police felt they were inadequate. The fire department consequently began training for accidents involving hazardous materials."

Industries in Iowa report on pollution

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa companies are releasing more than 25,000 tons of hazardous chemicals into the environment each year, according to reports compiled under a new federal law.

Actual emissions could be much higher. Regional officials of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency estimate that just 50 percent to 60 percent of the companies required to file the reports have complied this year.

The figures included in the reports on file with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources indicate nearly 70 percent of the chemicals are released into the air, nearly 30 percent are pumped into Iowa waterways and less than 1 percent is disposed of in the land, according to an analysis published by the Des Moines Sunday Register.

The chemicals range from sodium sulfate, a salt that is not believed to pose a major risk, to benzene, a cancer-causing agent.

The law setting the reporting requirements that began this year was adopted following the deaths of more than 2,800 people in the leak of a chemical from a Union Carbide Corp. plant at Bhopal, India.

About 250 Iowa plants submitted figures, and Ronald Ritter, an official of the regional office of the EPA at Kansas City, Kan., said his office has found that a significant number of officials at other companies were unaware that the law affects them. While the law requires all companies with printing operations to comply, no Iowa newspaper companies had submitted reports, the Register reported.

The company reporting the highest volume of chemical emissions in Iowa was the Clinton plant of Quantum Chemical's USI Division, which estimated it released a total of nearly 7.3 million pounds of chemicals into the Mississippi River or the atmosphere last year.

USI reported releasing about 5.1 million pounds of sodium sulfate into the Mississippi River and a small amount of a suspected cancer-causing chemical, tetrachlorethylene.

The state has tested emissions from the plant and found no cause for alarm, said Peter Hamlin of Iowa's environmental protection division of the Department of Natural Resources.

An official at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has said his agency and the EPA found evidence of chemical contamination of fish near USI's dumping pipe into the Mississippi, but Hamlin says state officials believe that contamination originated at a dump site near the plant. A cleanup has been ordered of that area.

"I think we do an admirable job. We've been meeting 1987 standards since 1981," said Robert Schuler, an environmental engineer for USI. "We and the state have monitored our outfall, and we've always looked good."

One of the chemicals most commonly released into the air is Freon, a chemical some scientists believe is damaging the atmosphere's protective ozone layer. It is used in the electronics industry as a cleaning agent.

The highest volume of Freon emissions reported in Iowa was 260,000 pounds last year from the Unisys Corp. plant at Clear Lake.

Thomas Lindquist, a Unisys spokesman, said the company has taken steps to reduce emissions and is searching for environmentally safe alternatives.

William Witt, chairman of the Iowa chapter of the Sierra Club, an environmental group, said he is worried about the long-term impact of industrial emissions on the environment.

"What we're doing now is creating a whole new set of exposures, and we're creating them in large quantities — in the soil, the water, the air," Witt said.

"We may see problems in a generation or two, but they're difficult to pinpoint now," he said. "It's the same story over and over again. We're finding, as we go, that even permitted chemical emissions are having unexpected adverse effects."

Iowa schools receive prayer warning

DES MOINES (AP) — The state attorney general's office has told school districts across Iowa that prayer at graduation ceremonies is unconstitutional and warned of legal risks if the advice is ignored.

The question is being debated across the state because some Iowa school districts continue to include prayers at commencement despite a 1985 ruling by a federal judge in Des Moines that having an invocation and benediction at graduation ceremonies violates the U.S. Constitution.

"When a federal court rules that certain official behavior violates the Constitution, we believe that public officials should not simply question whether the case is binding on them but should instead ask whether respect for our constitutional system calls for compliance with the decision," said a recent letter to school officials from Merle Fleming, an assistant attorney general.

The letter also notes that school board members are not immune from liability for damages if they knew or reasonably should have known that their actions would violate the constitutional rights of students.

Advice on the issue had been sought by William Lepley, director of the Iowa Department of Education.

U.S. District Judge Harold Vietor ruled prayer at graduation unconstitutional in 1985 in a case involving the Decatur School District in Leon.

The ruling was binding in the state's southern half. Yet some southern and northern Iowa schools continued to include prayers at commencement.

Fleming noted that the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, the appellate court that oversees a circuit including Iowa, recently ruled that prayers at school events are improper because "an invocation and benediction serve a religious and not a secular purpose and prayer is inherently religious."

The letter said the attorney general's office believes Vietor's ruling would be followed by federal judges in northern Iowa unless a decision to the contrary is issued by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The advice will not be popular in some communities, Iowa superintendents noted.

"This is a highly religious community. I suspect that there would be a lot of criticism from parents, clergy and possibly students," said Rod Wilbeck, superintendent of the Maurice-Orange City School District.

Bill Brandt, superintendent of the Sutherland District, said: "We do need to abide by the law. But how far do you infringe on the majority's rights to protect individual rights?"

Exemption from new law bolsters 'sacred cow'

By Mike Glover

The Associated Press

DES MOINES (AP) — Critics who argue it's time to take a look at some fundamental changes in higher education have been handed one more piece of evidence about the power of the sacred cow they're tackling.

It wasn't big news, but it was instructive.

Small businesses had succeeded in winning approval of a new law this year that says, in pretty generic terms, that government ought not to compete with private businesses.

That didn't draw a lot of attention, and even fewer critics. Lobbyists representing small businesses pushed for it, and lawmakers are always happy to do them a favor, especially when it doesn't cost anything.

The Legislature packed up and went home, Gov. Terry Branstad headed back to the campaign trail and all was forgotten. Then along came the state Board of Regents.

They wrote themselves a new regulation giving them a blanket exemption. Lobbyists screamed, lawmakers wrung their hands — and the regents rolled on.

No one pretends that incident has any lasting import, but it's a nice example of what happens to those who get in the way of that relentless cap-and-gown juggernaut.

There are major higher education questions facing the state's political leaders, and if that incident is an example, they won't be easily answered.

Squeezed through much of this decade by a stubbornly sour economy, they've relentlessly pressured most of state government looking for dollars for a favored few programs like economic development.

The major state colleges, by and large, have escaped the knife.

While hundreds of social work jobs go unfilled, no one is asking whether a state the size of Iowa really needs three major public universities and an empire-building network of community colleges.

Even lesser questions like whether they ought to compete with each other in the programs they offer are brushed aside.

Charitable organizations in Des Moines launch televised appeals for food for the hungry, while state officials assemble to cut ribbons for a new $30-million building at Iowa State University.

Analysis

Politicians, of course, are in the business of making tough choices between competing interest groups, but in the case of higher education, they find there really isn't a choice. Maybe the colleges can justify everything they offer and maybe the state really should be running a commercial television station, but few expect them to be forced to make that choice.

The fact is, the regents are probably the most powerful lobbying force at the Statehouse, a political institution tackled only by the very brave or the very foolish.

It goes far beyond the football and basketball tickets doled out to eager lawmakers, though that's not a bad lobbying technique.

Pope beatifies founder of Calif. missions

VATICAN CITY — Pope John Paul II on Sunday beatified a Spanish priest revered as the founder of California's missions but reviled by some who say he whipped and enslaved the Indians he worked to convert.

The Rev. Junipero Serra moved a step toward sainthood when he was made a "blessed" of the Roman Catholic Church along with five other people, including a Mexican priest executed by a firing squad.

John Paul beatified the six in an open-air Mass in St. Peter's Square before a golden altar flanked by flowers and Swiss guards in gold, blue and red uniforms.

Speaking in English, the pope called Serra, an 18th-century Franciscan monk, "a shining example of Christian virtue and the missionary spirit."

"His great goal was to bring the Gospel to the native peoples of America, so that they too might be 'consecrated in the truth,'" John Paul told a crowd of 20,000 people.

Serra founded the first nine missions in what is now California, and his order eventually established 21. During his U.S. visit a year ago, John Paul stood before Serra's grave at the Carmel Mission Basilica and praised the monk for his missionary work among the Indians.

Critics say Serra stole the Indians' lands, refused to allow them to leave the missions, forced them to work in the fields or on construction projects and exposed them to European diseases to which they had no resistance.

Typhoon leaves many Chinese homeless

BEIJING — Heavy rains from a typhoon that battered China's southern coast in recent days left six people dead and 51,000 homeless, the official Xinhua News Agency said Sunday.

The report said continuous rain Wednesday through Saturday in Fuzhou province also flooded farmland, damaged roads and irrigation canals and knocked down river embankments.

Typhoon Kit lost much of its force Thursday after reaching Guangdong province, to the south of Fujian, Xinhua said. It did not give damage figures for Guangdong.

In another report, Xinhua said 12 people died Thursday when a wooden boat capsized in turbulent waters of the Yellow River in Baode County, in northeast China's Shanxi province.

It said the boat overturned after striking a reef, sending 47 passengers and four boatmen, plus a cargo of 13,200 pounds of salt into the water. Thirty-nine people were rescued by local residents, it said.

It was not known whether the accident was related to typhoon-related weather.

Hirohito remains in serious condition

TOKYO — Emperor Hirohito lay in serious condition Sunday but was alert enough to watch the finals of the autumn sumo tournament on television, and a daughter who paid a bedside visit expressed optimism about his health.

The 87-year-old monarch remained under intensive, round-the-clock care by a team of court doctors after vomiting blood from an intestinal hemorrhage on Monday. The emperor has sat on Japan's Chrysanthemum Throne for nearly 62 years.

The officials would not confirm published reports the emperor has cancer of the upper intestine. Cancer is rarely acknowledged publicly in Japan.

Under the Constitution, the emperor has no political power but signs documents already approved by the government and serves as a symbol of Japan's unity.

FDA approves new anti-baldness drug

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Thousands of balding American men will begin rubbing their scalps in the coming weeks with the latest remedy for hair loss — Upjohn Co.'s Rogaine.

While its success rate may be as incalculable as the number of hairs you'll wash down the drain during your next shower, Rogaine is the first prescription drug proven to grow new hair.

The drug, approved by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, will start showing up in pharmacies by the end of September.

A one-month supply is being sold to pharmacies for $42.50 and will cost consumers about $60. Because it is used primarily for cosmetic reasons, few insurance companies are expected to cover the expense.

Upjohn officials say it could take up to eight months before users see any results. And many will see no change at all.

However, Upjohn officials say, some will see varying amounts of new hair growth, while others will see a decrease in their hair-loss rate or stop losing their hair altogether.

In testing 2,300 men at 27 medical centers, the Kalamazoo-based pharmaceutical firm found 8 percent experienced dense new hair growth, while 31 percent experienced moderate new hair growth. The remaining 61 percent showed little or none.

Hurricane Helene pushes north over Atlantic

MIAMI — Hurricane Helene strayed farther from land as it continued pushing north Sunday over the central Atlantic Ocean, heading toward chillier water that eventually will sap its strength, forecasters said.

Helene turned from north-northwest to north and was moving at 8 mph, said Hal Gerrish of the National Hurricane Center.

At 6 p.m. EDT, the storm's center was near latitude 21.5 north and longitude 49.0 west, or about 1,585 miles southwest of the westernmost Azores. Its top sustained winds were 105 mph, down from 115 mph at noon.

"Some gradual weakening is possible during the next day or two," Gerrish said.

If Helene stays on its northerly course, it eventually will die out at sea, unlike Gilbert, which turned its deadly winds west and grew into a category 5 hurricane — the strongest possible.

Haitian military shows dramatic improvements

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The rebellion in the rank and file of the 7,000-man army has dramatically reformed the high command, replacing corrupt and repressive remnants of the Duvalier dictatorship with competent professionals.

"There is a democratic revolution going on in the army. No decision is made without the enlisted men," said Serge Gilles, co-leader of the Patriotic Unity Bloc, a coalition of three democratic political parties.

The army purge began Sept. 17, when enlisted men and their sergeants ousted Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, the head of government. They replaced him with Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril, who as a brigadier general had been the army's top administrative officer.

The soldiers sacked dozens of commanders at units across the country. Avril endorsed their action and said 29 superior officers were retired.

The sergeants who engineered the coup share daily decision making with Avril, but they have promised to respect the chain of command under their newly appointed leaders, mostly younger junior officers.

"We are thankful to these nation builders," Louis Roy, co-writer of the 1987 Constitution, said of the soldiers. "(Avril) must not forget that they are watching him and will punish any deviation."

Soldiers speaking on radio stations identify themselves with Haiti's oppressed poor and speak of human rights, democracy, free elections and re-establishing the constitution abolished by Namphy.

"The army is the people and the people are the army," was the rebellion's slogan.

An important motive of the mutiny was the desire to improve living and working conditions. Most soldiers earn less than $200 a month and live with their families in the city's wretched slums. Now they are demanding higher pay, subsidized housing, and medical and pension benefits.

Corrupt officers such as Col. Gregoire Figaro, police chief of the capital, Port-au-Prince, have been replaced by young professional officers such as the new police commander, Lt. Col. Georges Valcin, who was trained in a French police academy.

A survivor of the upheaval is Col. Jean-Claude Paul, commander of the feared 700-man Dessalines Barracks, the only major unit in which soldiers did not mutiny.

A Western diplomat said privately that Paul, who was indicted in Miami on charges of drug-running, is popular because he is not arrogant, treats his troops well and "spreads money around to his Prosper Avril men."

The soldiers said they chose Avril as president because he is honest and treats them with respect.

During the 29-year family dynasty founded by Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier and inherited by his son, Jean-Claude, the army was shunted aside, stripped of its traditional power and humiliated by the arrogant Tonton Macoutes, the Duvalier private militia.

When Jean-Claude Duvalier was ousted and fled to France on Feb. 7, 1986, the Macoutes were officially disbanded. The repressive army high command of Duvalier appointees remained largely intact, taking over the Macoutes' lucrative contraband and drug-smuggling activities and siphoning off public funds.

Gusty winds fan forest fires at Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. (AP) — A return of gusty winds brought renewed activity on some fires in Yellowstone National Park, but officials remained confident Sunday they could keep them in check.

Helicopters continued to dump water from 700-gallon buckets on areas where fire crews could not reach hot spots as temperatures reached into the 60s and winds gusting to 25 mph.

Officials estimate the fires thus far have burned as much as 60 percent of an area covering 1.6 million acres of Yellowstone and the surrounding national forests.

Forecasts both for Yellowstone and the Shoshone National Forest north of Yellowstone where the Clover-Mist fire is burning, called for continued gusty winds and higher temperatures on Monday.

Yellowstone spokeswoman Marlene Karle said the weather could possibly pose problems for firefighters but added she didn't believe firefighters were as concerned as they were over the summer.

Officials still plan to release this week the approximately 4,100 Army soldiers and Marines brought in to bolster civilian firefighters, she said.

Worldwide forest fires escalate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The forests upon forests of them, being advanced as one of nature's best friends for future efforts to combat global overheating, the "greenhouse effect."

Right now, however, trees are sent one of the Earth's worst enemies.

Like alone, trees are store "sink" that consume large quantities of carbon dioxide, the worst of the greenhouse gases that scientists say are collecting in atmosphere and trapping heat once escaped into space.

But a tree felled by a logger consumed by fire is doubly disastrous: not only will it no longer consume carbon dioxide, it also releases stored carbon dioxide into the atmosphere, accumulating that scientists say will promote major global climate changes in the 21st century.

The scientists' warnings are ringing at a time when forests, particularly in developing nations, are being destroyed at record rates, Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee was told last week.

Focusing on the role of forests in the greenhouse equation, the committee heard that the head of the U.S. Forest Service, James G. Watson, said some 4 million acres of the American West this summer were being lost to small fires.

"It is generally agreed that deforestation, particularly in the tropics, accounts for approximately 20 percent of the annual injection of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere," said Daniel Dudek, spokesman for the Environmental Defense Fund.

Worldwide forest destruction escalates 'greenhouse effect'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trees, forests upon forests of them, are being advanced as one of mankind's best friends for future efforts to combat global overheating from the "greenhouse effect."

Right now, however, trees represent one of the Earth's worst enemies.

Like alone, trees are storage "sinks" that consume large quantities of carbon dioxide, the worst of the greenhouse gases that scientists say are collecting in the atmosphere and trapping heat that once escaped into space.

But a tree felled by a logger or consumed by fire is doubly dangerous: not only will it no longer consume carbon dioxide, its death releases stored carbon dioxide to join the atmospheric accumulation that scientists say will produce major global climate changes in the 21st century.

The scientists' warnings are coming at a time when forests, particularly in developing nations, are being destroyed at record rates, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee was told last week.

Focusing on the role of forests in the greenhouse equation, the committee heard that the headline-grabbing forest fires that ravaged some 4 million acres of the American West this summer were relatively small potatoes.

"It is generally agreed that global deforestation, particularly in the tropics, accounts for approximately 20 percent of the annual injection of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere," said Daniel Dudek, senior economist for the Environmental Defense Fund.

"If only half of the Amazon basin were covered with forests, it would absorb 20 percent of the carbon which is presently released into the atmosphere" globally — Robert McNeal, of NASA's earth sciences and applications division.

"Annually, forest destruction producing these emissions equals an area slightly larger than the state of Indiana, or more than 24.5 million acres," he said. "This global total dwarfs our own domestic losses this summer."

Cutting down tropical forests to bring land into agriculture is especially critical in the Amazon basin, according to Robert McNeal, of NASA's earth sciences and applications division.

"If only half of the Amazon basin were covered with forests, it would absorb 20 percent of the carbon which is presently released into the atmosphere" globally, he said.

He also said the basin is the source of about 12 percent of the methane, another greenhouse gas, that reaches the atmosphere from wetlands. Replacing forests with wetlands or rice agriculture would likely mean more methane production in the tropics, he said.

Committee witnesses said that, unlike the United States and Europe, which actively plant new trees to replace harvested forests, many Third World trees are not replaced.

"Only a very small percentage of the world's tropical forests are being managed," said Richard Bissell, assistant administrator of the U.S. Agency for International Development, which is now stressing resource management to countries receiving its assistance.

Dale Robertson, chief of the U.S. Forest Service, said that trees offer a partial solution to global warming, but he sounded an ominous note about the droughts that scientists say will be part of the greenhouse process.

Robertson said the dry years have had "a serious effect on our forest resources," sparking killer fires, weakening seedlings and leaving drought-stressed trees more susceptible to insect attack.

Planting new forests to absorb carbon dioxide sounds like a simple solution — until its magnitude is considered.

Gregg Marland of the environmental sciences division of Oak Ridge National Laboratory estimated that under current U.S. forest management practices, this nation would need about four billion acres of trees to offset its emissions of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere.

The witnesses said a minimum anti-greenhouse strategy requires that new sources of carbon to the atmosphere should be offset by carbon traps, such as new trees.

Billy Carter dies at age 51 from cancer

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter, the former "first brother" and beer-drinking good ol' boy whose candor and business ventures amused and sometimes embarrassed the Carter administration, died Sunday of cancer. He was 51.

The brother of former President Jimmy Carter suffered for a year with pancreatic cancer — the disease that killed his father and a sister — and lived longer than his doctors expected. He died three days after leaving the hospital for his home in this southwest Georgia hamlet.

Carter "died quietly and peacefully in his sleep... with his family at his bedside," according to a statement issued by the Carter Presidential Center on behalf of the former president and his family.

Billy Carter, who once defined himself as a beer-drinking good ol' boy, was forced into the spotlight when his older brother rocketed from their tiny hometown into the White House.

But underneath the mask of the court jester was a perceptive man, an avid reader, a fighter who refused to go down quietly.

Shuttle

than a million crowded the roads outside the launch center.

The renewed interest, too, was evident at the press site where 4,500 representatives of the news media applied for credentials. By contrast, there were 500 journalists here when the Challenger exploded on Jan. 28, 1986, 73 seconds after liftoff.

The Discovery's flight, with five veteran astronauts aboard, will be the first since the Challenger. It will be a far different vehicle, with 210 changes to the shuttle alone and 145 to the solid fuel rockets that power it to orbit.

The booster rockets, which supply more than 70 percent of the power to get the shuttle off the ground, were of the greatest concern since it was the right-hand rocket that leaked flaming gas and doomed the Challenger with its seven astronauts.

The joints of the segmented boosters, which permitted the leak, have been completely redesigned and have been tested in five full-scale firings. But their only real test will come when the Discovery lifts off its seaside pad — the same one used for the first time for Challenger.

The accident grounded the manned space program for the intervening 32 months and caused a complete rethinking in official attitudes toward the shuttle. The Air Force, which was to have been NASA's biggest customer — taking one-third of shuttle space for satellite deliveries — has been building its own fleet of expendable rockets.

Mission Schedule Thursday, Sept. 29 to Monday, Oct. 3

Day 1
 Launch from Cape Canaveral, Fla. Thursday morning. Six hours into flight, astronauts will deploy a Tracking and Data Relay Satellite (TDRS) which will be used for future shuttle/ground communications.

 Eleven science and technology experiments.

Day 3
 Continue experiments; try on space suits.

Day 4

Lawlessness rages in Burma as looters, civilians are shot

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Security forces shot and killed 12 people Sunday, government radio said. Lawlessness persisted a week after Gen. Saw Maung seized power and moved to crush dissent.

Radio Rangoon said five people were wounded and 16 arrested in five looting incidents in Rangoon and that two mobs violated the 8 p.m.-4 a.m. curfew imposed by the new military regime. The looters were after rice, gasoline and corrugated iron sheets, it said.

The bloodiest incident occurred when security forces shot seven people to death while halting a crowd of 100 looters Sunday night at the state-owned Five Star Shipping Line near the Rangoon River, the radio said.

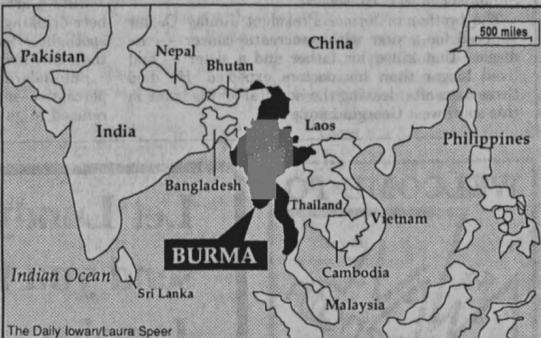

It said two others were killed when security forces dispersed a mob of 1,000 people looting a government rice warehouse, and three died while looting another government warehouse.

The government says security forces have killed more than 250 civilians, mostly people described as looters, since the Sept. 18 coup. Western diplomats believe more have died, including many unarmed demonstrators who marched to demand democracy after 26 years of authoritarian rule.

Security officials in Thailand said Sunday that Burmese student leaders have been fleeing across the border almost daily after the military crackdown drove them underground.

Pinit Sunantha, a Border Patrol Police official in northern Tak province of Thailand, said student leaders have been crossing into Thailand almost daily but did not provide an exact figure.

A group of 62 students, teachers and villagers crossed the narrow Moei River into Tak on Friday,

The Daily Iowan/Laura Speer

Sept. 23, some swimming and others riding in longboats, Pinit said.

On Saturday, Sept. 24, a spokesperson for Burma's strongest ethnic rebel group said about 90 student protesters fled to his group's border base camps, where they may get military training. The spokesperson for the Karen National Union said about 200 more students were on their way to the bases.

A woman who identified herself as from the All Burma Students Union telephoned The Associated Press bureau Sunday in Rangoon to warn students not to proceed to the border area because of the danger.

"Their security condition is extremely grave. Please try to stop them immediately," she said before hanging up.

Diplomats believe the military apparently established effective control of the country after the coup, ending street marches and breaking up protest centers in dozens of towns nationwide.

Rangoon residents have ventured out of their homes only to shop, and a state-owned newspaper announced strict rules from the Road Transport Board requiring pedestrians to walk facing traffic and in single file along the side of roads.

"No one must stop, walk, sit or play on the roads without sufficient reason," said the rules published Thursday in the Working People's Daily.

It had no explanation why the rules were issued, and there were no reports of government enforcement efforts.

Saw Maung has repeatedly pledged to hold multiparty elections once peace is restored to the impoverished nation, but he has set no exact timetable.

Three key opposition leaders — Aung Gyi, Tin Oo and Aung San Suu Kyi — on Saturday announced the formation of "The National United Front for Democracy" to bring together the millions of students, Buddhist monks and government workers struggling for democracy.

But their statement spelled out no specific strategy and did not directly respond to the government offer of elections.

Philippines fireworks show support for rebels

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Fireworks lit up the sky and gunfire and explosions were heard across the capital Sunday in what was called a display of support for rebels who tried to topple President Corazon Aquino last year.

Police said one man was killed and another captured after three gunmen in a jeep fired on a police car in suburban Quezon City during the fireworks display.

Meanwhile, Communist guerrillas killed a woman and her two sons, and government soldiers gunned down three rebels in separate incidents over the weekend, the news agency and the military said.

Sgt. Manny Sicoan said the attack in Quezon apparently was linked to the fireworks display. He said the third assailant escaped and police recovered a rifle, flares and bundles of fireworks from the gunmen's vehicle.

Police and residents said the fireworks began about 8:30 p.m. at military camps in the Manila area and lasted up to 15 minutes.

A member of the Presidential Security Group told The Associated Press the fireworks explosions could also be heard near the presidential palace.

Columnist Letty Jimenez-Magsanoc wrote in the pro-government Philippine Daily Inquirer Sunday that a group called the Revolutionary Association for the People's Freedom would explode fireworks across the nation to signal "the birthing of a Filipino movement to free the nation now mired in greed and looting."

There were no reports of displays elsewhere in the country, but Magsanoc said pamphlets published by the previously unknown group called for "dismantling of the transitional exploitative government," a reference to the Aquino administration. Police said they accept the journalist's explanation but refused further comment.

She said the fireworks would honor the leaders of a bloody Aug. 28, 1987, coup attempt, in which renegade soldiers led by former Lt. Col. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan tried to topple the Aquino government. At least 53 people were killed and more than 300 were wounded in the coup attempt.

Honasan was captured in December but escaped in April from a prison ship in Manila Bay and remains at large.

He played a key role in the February 1986 military revolt that toppled President Ferdinand Marcos and propelled Aquino to power.

But Honasan became disillusioned with Aquino for her alleged failure to crush the 19-year-old communist insurgency and restore an honest, democratic administration.

In Capiz on Panay Island about 200 miles south of Manila, guerrillas Saturday strafed the house of Boday Hulido, 30, killing her and her two sons, the Philippines News

Gregorio Honasan

Agency said. It said the rebels may have been looking for Hulido's husband, who had just been recruited into a new militia force.

In Bukidnon province, about 550 miles southeast of Manila, soldiers killed three rebels in a clash outside Magsaysay village early Sunday, the military said.

Lt. Col. Antonio Zaldua said the soldiers were sent to the village after receiving reports that rebels were allegedly asking residents for money.

The soldiers recovered firearms, medicines, foodstuffs and a radio transmitter from the scene of the fire fight, the official said. No government casualties were reported.

In another incident, a grenade found by a 12-year-old boy exploded after he brought it home, killing him, his two brothers and a friend, the news agency reported.

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — The emergence of rival Christian and Moslem governments threatens to plunge Lebanon once again into civil war fueled by outside power that long have used the country as a proxy battlefield.

The UN could formalize the de facto partition of Lebanon into sectarian cantons carved out during the 13-year civil war, which killed about 150,000 people.

Syria, the major power broker in Lebanon, backs the Moslem government and the Shiite Moslem Amal militia. Israel and Iraq support the right-wing Christians. Libya funds the Druse militia, which sent volunteers to fight alongside Col. Moammar Gadhafi's army in Chad.

Iran arms and bankrolls the Shiite fundamentalists. Saudi Arabia helps the Sunni Moslems, but fundamentalist Sunnis also look to Iran for support.

The Christians and Moslems each are split by internal rivalries.

The Maronite Catholics, the dominant Christian sect, are patronized by the United States and France. The Greek Orthodox, traditionally more leftist, are pro-Syrian.

The failure of Lebanon's parliament to elect a successor to President Amin Gemayel, a Maronite Catholic, when his six-year term expired Thursday, spawned competing Christian and Moslem governments.

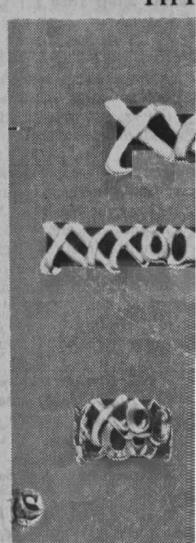

Gemayel appointed army commander Gen. Michel Aoun as prime minister. Syria backs Sunni Moslem Prime Minister Salim

Analysis

Hoss, who took office in June 1987.

At best, Gemayel was little more than a figurehead. He had no control of Moslem-held areas, and even in the shrunken Christian enclave the real power was the Lebanese forces, the Christians' main militia.

The 42,000-man army is fractured, with some units backing Gemayel or allied with the Lebanese forces. Shiite and Druse Moslem brigades have either sat on the sidelines or actively backed Moslem militias.

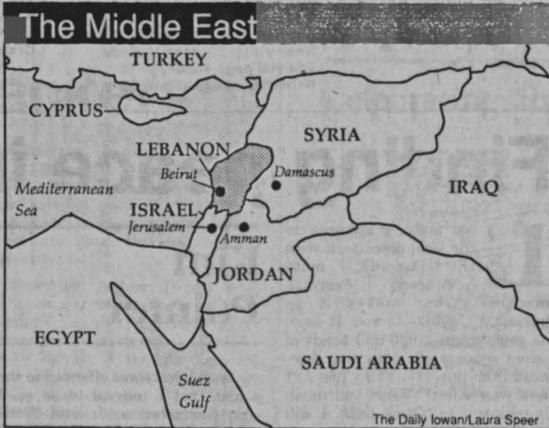

The cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and the 9-month-old Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip also have significantly affected the region.

Particularly important is the intensification of the long feud between Iraq and Syria, which backed Iran in the eight-year Persian Gulf war. Syria and Iraq are ruled by rival wings of the Baath Arab Socialist Party.

Syria has been weakened by Iran's apparent military collapse, and Iraq has stepped up its propaganda campaign against Damascus.

Syria also fears it could be eclipsed as a key player in the Arab-Israeli dispute by the support the Palestine Liberation Organization has gained from the uprising.

Syrian President Hafez Assad looked to Lebanon to provide him with a success by restoring stability to the divided country through the election of one of its allies as president.

The Daily Iowan/Laura Speer

The Syrians, with 40,000 troops in north and east Lebanon and Beirut's Moslem sector, consider their tiny western neighbor vital to their security.

The cease-fire freed the Iraqis to take revenge on Damascus for siding with Iran by confronting the Syrians' ambitions in Lebanon and stirring trouble for them in their own back yard.

Iraq, influential in Lebanon until the Syrians moved in in 1976 seeking to quell the civil war, has provided weapons and ammunition to the right-wing Lebanese Christian forces opposed to Syria.

Arab diplomats said Baghdad, which long has had links with the Lebanese forces, recently shipped 50 armored personnel carriers to the Christian militia.

It was the Lebanese forces' fierce opposition to Syrian-backed candidates in the presidential election that foiled Damascus' efforts to secure political reforms that would give Lebanon's Moslem majority an equal share of constitutional power with the long-dominant Christians.

Iraq's claim that it defeated Iran, justified to some extent by its military victories, pushed Syria to seek to impose greater control over Lebanon and prevent any Iraqi intervention.

The Iraqis also support Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, which is feuding with Assad.

The Syrians also have to contend with Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem fundamentalists, who seek to create the world's second Islamic Republic in Lebanon.

Syria's Shiite ally, the Amal militia, sought to crush the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, this year. When Hezbollah, aided by Iranian Revolutionary Guards, came out on top, the Syrians intervened to corral Hezbollah in its stronghold in south Beirut's slums.

The fundamentalists, quiet for the moment, remain a threat to Syria's efforts to control Lebanon.

Israeli army evicts militant settlers

JERUSALEM (AP) — Militant Jewish families tried to settle a patch of land in the West Bank on Sunday, the start of a holy week marking the biblical sojourns of the Israelites, but soldiers forced them to leave, officials said.

Elsewhere in the occupied territories, at least 25 Palestinians were reported injured during clashes between Arab protesters and Israeli troops.

After the Jewish families were evicted, about 24 members of the group marched to the Jerusalem home of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, where they set up a palm-roofed booth in protest.

The confrontation came as Jews in Israel began the weeklong celebration of Sukkot, the Feast of Tabernacles, which marks the Israelites' wanderings in the desert after their Biblical exodus from Egypt. It is celebrated with the building of huts to symbolize life in the wilderness.

Moshe Neuman, a spokesman for the settlers' group, said 12 families and 20 single people pitched tents northwest of the Arab town of Jericho, about 15 miles northwest of Jerusalem.

"They went to the site in the morning and set up there with tents, equipment and everything needed," Neuman said. He said the families had been promised more than a year ago that a settlement would be approved.

The families "were evacuated peacefully," Neuman said.

An army official confirmed troops ordered the families to leave but said no details were available.

Earlier, Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin warned that threats by settlers to set up new colonies during Sukkot would be resisted by the government.

"We will maintain law and order, and settlements or pseudo-settlements will not be established," Rabin told Israeli radio.

About 120 Jewish settlements have been set up in the West Bank and Gaza Strip since Israel occupied the territory in the 1967 Middle East war. The independent Jerusalem Center for Public Affairs said 72,000 people live in the settlements.

Meanwhile, at least 25 Palestinians were wounded by gunfire in clashes with Israeli troops in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, Arab reporters and hospital officials said. Army officials confirmed three shootings.

At least 271 Palestinians have been killed since Dec. 8, when Palestinians launched an uprising against Israeli occupation.

National disgrace

A shocking report released last week by the National Academy of Sciences concluded that there are 100,000 homeless children in the United States on any given night. This appalling figure does not even include children who are runaways or have been abandoned by their families. Quite appropriately, the committee issuing the study called the situation "nothing short of a national disgrace that must be treated with the urgency that such a situation demands."

A major issue in this fall's presidential campaign has been the need for a strong defense. An equally important topic should be homeless children. It is indeed disgraceful that the world's most powerful nation should turn its back on the plight of the weakest and smallest in its midst - how we respond to this shameful situation would be a good judgment on our moral fiber.

There are many who would blame homeless adults partially or totally for their own plight. Such an argument cannot be applied to homeless children. Children, being dependent, cannot be held responsible if they have no place to live. Even if the adults caring for these children are not meeting their responsibilities, blaming them will not help these young victims. If adults are unwilling or unable to take proper care of the children they are responsible for, then it is left for us, as a society, to ensure that these helpless youngsters do not suffer.

The committee recommended that homeless children could be helped by increasing federal support for child care and Head Start programs and expanding efforts to make homeless parents aware of the help that is available. They will not be implemented, however, unless the American electorate cares enough to vote compassionately. Some of the rhetoric in the presidential campaign should be directed away from defense and toward the issue of the defenseless, namely homeless children.

Educational claims

With friends like President Ronald Reagan, George Bush needs few enemies.

After spending months honing his image as the "education president," George's claim was rendered tenuous by his good friend and mentor Ronald Reagan.

Reagan has "seen many children today who don't know what they're supposed to do when the national anthem is played or when the flag goes by."

It seems teachers have been lax in their duties. According to Reagan, teachers should be forced to lead their classes in the Pledge of Allegiance, along with, presumably, various other loyalty oaths because "that's what they're there for. Their job is to teach something."

But evidently, this does not include history, English, math, science, and the humanities. Practical patriotism is an important part of the socialization process; but it should not be the primary purpose of teachers, especially given the sorry state of the American educational system and the collective ignorance of Americans.

In a campaign where McCarthyesque patriotism and loyalty oaths appear the only issue, any claim about education should be backed up with more than the ravings of an idiot.

Senate obligation

The House of Representatives last week passed anti-drug legislation that seems to have been created more to help the election efforts of members of Congress than to fight the nation's drug problem.

The bill contains several controversial provisions, among them a fine of $10,000 for those people found possessing any kind of drug. In addition, those convicted of possession would be ineligible for student loans and other federal benefits and would face the loss of their driver's license.

In addition, those who kill during a drug-related crime could face the death penalty according to this bill.

Civil libertarians have already cried foul over the measure, pointing out that parts of it may be unconstitutional and that in any case the penalty for mere possession of drugs is far too harsh considering the nature of the crime.

Conceding the bill is flawed, Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., admitted he hopes the Senate will remove some of the more questionable aspects of the legislation when it reviews the legislation next month.

Such a hope may not be realized, however, if the Senate caves in to the same election year pressure as did the House and decides to pass the toughest anti-drug law possible, without regard to civil rights or even logic.

Critics of the bill have a point. Increasing the penalties on drug users and dealers at the expense of the rights of Americans is of very questionable deterrence value, even if it sounds good on paper.

The real answer to the drug problem in America is increased efforts for education on the problems of drugs, as well as treatment and rehabilitation for drug users. The bill passed by the House does provide for that, but not in the amount it should.

There is no question that the drug problem in America is a serious one. But the legislation passed by the House is not the answer. The Senate, two-thirds of whose members are not up for re-election this year, ought to take a good long look at this bill before letting it pass into law.

Finding peace in computer age

Last night, a segment on the local news dealt with the world's most advanced exercise machine. What makes it so advanced? It talks to you. It says, as your biceps bulge and beads of sweat squeeze out onto your forehead from impossibly tiny holes, "I love your effort!" When you finish it tells you to "Come back. I will miss you."

Americans seem unable to do without this serenade of nasal, robotic whining. Machines made to dispense soft drinks have acquired the power to speak. "Thank you for drinking Coca-Cola." I had a nightmarish encounter with a talking Coke machine in Coralville. I fed it 50 cents; it required 55 cents. I pushed the button and waited. As is my habit, I placed both hands over the "mouth" of the machine until safe from its "Thank you for drinking Coca-Cola." Oblivious to my oversight, I grew impatient. Matronly types were entering the store and leaving with cases of cold soda while I waited. It was 98 degrees outside; I wanted my soda. The voice declared, "You need to put in more money," with the cold, clipped cadence of a robber. "You need to put in more money." My sense of dignity was offended to the extent that I refused to do so. I simply watched as it said "YOU NEED TO PUT IN MORE MONEY. YOU NEED TO PUT IN MORE MONEY." Its voice grew louder with each declaration; it seemed angry with me. Matrons and construction workers stared. It was an ugly day in the space age.

We seem to be rapidly approaching the point where everything talks to us except fellow humans, who have taken to waxing outraged if we intimate they should speak to us at all. "Did you call my answering machine and leave a message?" "My talking espresso machine makes all my social arrangements; I don't know what I'm doing Tuesday night."

We pay thousands for automobiles which tell us in factual tones that, against all empirical evidence, "a door is ajar." I know, I know — the damned thing's ajar. Still, it's galling. I want the tree which rips the door off the car to tell me it's ajar. I want to be responsible for my existence as a human. I was not born to be led through this marvel of a life by a contraction.

Gadgets beep and talk and play music to get some people out of bed in the morning. Watches interrupt the delicate tones in our concert halls at 9:00 p.m., telling their owners (who are too lazy to turn their wrists) that another hour in another incredibly mindless day has drifted by. Soon our timepieces will talk, too: "It is now 2100 hours. Ya got anything to say about it, bub?"

You may think I'm over-reacting. What do we lose with these technological gains? "They're good for the economy, they save us some work, some hassle. They're great, and if you had a brain larger than a microchip, lady, you'd think so, too."

I disagree. At their least harmful, most of these mechanized trinkets are pointless. Electronic chat has even dribbled into the computer industry. A friend of mine who works with computers was showing me some Pagemaker magazine layout tricks on a Mac SE. "You've gotta hear this. You're gonna die." The name of the program which would so impress me? MacPaint. And that's just what it is. As diskettes are ejected, a wretched sound erupts from the machine, along with them. "MacPaint," I said. "MacBarf." Many forms of machine talk do nothing to improve our quality of life.

Talking exercise machines? Fine, but they should have such phrases as "Your blood pressure's high, John. Please release your grip on me, go sit in your easy chair, and read for one hour" in their repertoire. John would go to his easy chair, which would hug him and say, "Hello, John. I have missed you. Please relax. Your blood pressure is 210/140. Your nail beds are dusky. I will monitor your progress closely. CPR will be provided if needed. Enjoy your book, and have a snifter of brandy." John would pick up his book, which would say, "Hello, John. I have missed you. You last closed me after finishing page 241. Enjoy the next chapter. It's a doozy."

(AP) — Partisans on each side declared their man the winner Sunday night's debate, with a Democratic senator saying Michael Dukakis won on the basis of "moments of spontaneity" by the Republican senator saying he successfully "fended him off."

narrow edge over Bush. The judges thought Dukakis won three picked Bush, but the Democrat got the most points over Dukakis got top marks for preparation and organization, while Bush bested his opponent in oration and reasoning.

An ABC News poll of 500 debate watchers taken immediately after the debate found that 45 percent rated Dukakis the winner, 36 percent gave the edge to Bush and percent said it was a tie. Each man used his closing statement to deliver a two-minute version of his standard campaign speech.

Republican Bush said the vote would change but contended, "I am the change, I am the change." He said the nation doesn't want to return to the "malaise" of Carter administration.

Democrat Dukakis, the son of immigrants, said he wants to run the American dream come true for all citizens. "The best America is not behind us. The best America yet to come," he said.

The two men shook hands after the debate stage before the debate again after. "Good job," Dukakis said to his Republican rival following their give-no-quarter evening stage. Both men then headed to post-debate rallies with supporters while their political supporters descended on reporters to participate in analysis of the confrontation.

Reaction

But Republicans insisted Dukakis was unable to make a serious dent in Bush's record, given the Republican's minor lead in the polls, that spells a victory.

"I don't think Mike Dukakis any blood, I don't think Dukakis scored any real points, which I think means advantage Bush," said Iowa Republican Chair Michael Mahaffey. "I don't think either of them made any errors."

Author of 'Libra' takes shot at U.S.

Don DeLillo's ninth novel, "Libra," asserts that what happened here in Dealey Plaza a quarter century ago became "the seven seconds that broke the back of the American century." If this hyperventilating book were merely what that sentence is — overwrought and unhistorical — it would not matter that "Libra" is a best-seller. But the book, one of about 20 pouring forth on the Kennedy assassination, is an act of literary vandalism and bad citizenship.

DeLillo's attempt to "follow the bullets' trajectories" back into the minds of Lee Harvey Oswald and others becomes yet another exercise in blaming America for Oswald's act of derangement. It is valuable only as a reminder of the toll that ideological virulence takes on literary talent.

The story is that of a cadre of CIA operatives who, furious about the halfheartedness of the Bay of Pigs invasion, plan an "electrifying event" to galvanize the country against Fidel Castro. They decide on a "surgical miss" of President Kennedy by a gunman who would leave a paper trail to Cuba. But one thing leads to another, and to the man in the sixth floor window of the Texas Book Depository.

DeLillo says he is just filling in "some of the blank spaces in the known record." But there is no blank space large enough to accommodate, and not a particle of evidence for, DeLillo's lunatic conspiracy theory. In the book's weaselly afterword, he says he has made "no attempt to furnish factual answers." But in a New York Times interview he says, "I purposely chose the most obvious theory because I wanted to do justice to historical likelihood."

They decide on a "surgical miss" of President Kennedy by a gunman who would leave a paper trail to Cuba.

DeLillo traduces an ethic of literature. Novelists using the raw materials of history — real people, important events — should be constrained by concern for truthfulness, by respect for the record and a judicious weighing of the probabilities.

History, says a DeLillo character, is "the sum total of all the things they aren't telling us." Of course. "They." That antecedentless pronoun haunts the fevered imaginations of paranoids. For conspiracy addicts like DeLillo, the utter absence of evidence, after 25 years of searching, proves not that there was no conspiracy but that the conspiracy was diabolically clever.

He says that because of the seven seconds in Dallas, "we have been educated in skepticism." Skepticism? DeLillo is a study in credulity regarding the crudities of the American left. He says the assassination was "the turning point in consciousness" for Americans, that "we have been suspicious ever since" concerning the "secret manipulation of history." In Dallas we entered the "world of randomness," being reminded by Oswald that "nothing is assured."

George Will

Spare us such sandbox existentialism. DeLillo rejects randomness. His intimation is that America is a sick society that breeds extremism and conspiracies; and that Oswald was a national type, a product of the culture. From the unremarkable fact that recent assassins or would-be assassins (Sirhan, Ray, Bremer, Hinckley) have been marginal men, not social successes, ideologists of the left weave indictments of America.

DeLillo's indictment is interestingly uninteresting. It is the familiar, banal thought that Oswald was a lonely neurotic who tried to shed ordinariness by lunging into the theater of the Kennedys. And guess what? DeLillo has said: "Consumerism is a form of mass anesthesia... It makes people lonely."

DeLillo's lurid imaginings will soothe immature people who want to believe that behind large events there must be large ideas or impersonal forces or conspiracies. It takes a steady adult nerve to stare unblinkingly at the fact that history can be jarred sideways by an act that signifies nothing but an added individual's inner turmoil.

The mind of an assassin can be a deep and demanding subject. But the more DeLillo explains his work, the shallower it and he seem. In a burst of sophomoric self-dramatization he says: "The writer is the person who stands outside society, independent of affiliations..." The writer is the man or woman who automatically takes a stance against his or her government." DeLillo's celebration of the writer as an unaffiliated "outsider" is hackneyed and unhistorical. (Henry James, Jane Austen, George Eliot and others were hardly outsiders.) DeLillo's celebration stops just a short step from declaring the writer as kin to Oswald who, as a defector, was the ultimate outsider.

It is well to be reminded of books like this and of the virulence and the loathing some intellectuals feel for American society, and of the frivolous thinking that fuels it. DeLillo is a talented writer whose talent is subordinated to, and obviated by, puerile political stances. What was unfairly said of a far greater writer (T.S. Eliot, born in St. Louis 100 years ago today) must be said of DeLillo: He is a good writer and a bad influence.

Bush-Dukakis debate

Bush, Dukakis each chosen as winner by party backers

(AP) — Partisans on each side declared their man the winner in Sunday night's debate, with one Democratic senator saying Michael Dukakis won on the basis of "moments of spontaneity" but a Republican senator saying Bush successfully "fended him off."

"I think George Bush won. Dukakis had the edge, and I think this will clearly be the opportunity Michael Dukakis lost," Sen. Alfonse D'Amato said in New York. "The vice president has fended him off."

Sen. Bill Bradley of New Jersey, interviewed at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C., where the debate was held, said: "The moments of spontaneity were what distinguished Michael Dukakis tonight. . . . The real winner was the American people, but Michael Dukakis outperformed George Bush tonight."

Former presidential-primary rivals of the two nominees also picked winners along party lines.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said, "Dukakis won decisively in terms of picking up political support. He came across as assured, confident and clear on the facts. . . .

Bush seemed befuddled and confused."

But Sen. Bob Dole, the top-ranking Republican in the Senate as well as a former presidential candidate, said, "George Bush had a mission, and he can say mission accomplished. He documented again and again that Mike Dukakis is a Ted Kennedy Massachusetts liberal — and that means someone who's out of step with mainstream America."

Pat Robertson, the former television evangelist defeated by Bush last spring, said, "On the important issues of taxation, strong defense and law and order, George Bush was a clear winner."

Minnesota State Auditor Arne Carlson, the highest-ranking Republican in that state, said neither candidate lost, ground since "nobody made a mistake, nobody offended anyone."

But other elected officials were not shy about declaring their party's standard-bearer the victor.

Democratic New York Gov. Mario Cuomo said in a statement released by his office, "Governor Dukakis clearly advanced his campaign dramatically. He appeared knowledgeable, decisive, cool, referred to as a "drug-running dictator. We've been dealing with him, he's been dealing drugs to our kids."

Bush swiftly replied that the Reagan administration moved quickly to indict Noriega on drug charges as soon as it had evidence.

The moderator for the debate was Jim Lehrer, co-anchor of public broadcasting's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

Three journalists — John Mashek of the Atlanta Journal and Constitution, ABC anchorman Peter Jennings and Orlando (Fla.) Sentinel reporter Anne Groer — were the questioners. The Republican and Democratic parties sponsored the event.

With a television audience counted in the tens of millions, nothing was left to chance. Bush chose a dark blue suit for the right appearance, and Dukakis was wearing light make-up, mostly to minimize shadows under his eyes.

The vice president held a narrow lead in most polls as he and Democratic rival Dukakis walked onto the red-carpeted stage at Wake Forest's Wait Chapel.

Their confrontation was set up as the first of three debates during the campaign. Running mates Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen meet in Omaha, Neb., on Oct. 5, and Dukakis and Bush hold their second and final debate either Oct. 13 or 14 in Los Angeles.

narrow edge over Bush. Three judges thought Dukakis won and three picked Bush, but the Democrat got the most points overall. Dukakis got top marks for presentation and organization, while Bush bested his opponent in refutation and reasoning.

An ABC News poll of 500 debate-watchers taken immediately after the debate found that 45 percent rated Dukakis the winner, 36 percent gave the edge to Bush and 19 percent said it was a tie.

Each man used his closing statement to deliver a two-minute version of his standard campaign speech.

Republican Bush said the voters want change but contended, "We are the change, I am the change." He said the nation doesn't want to return to the "malaise" of the Carter administration.

Democrat Dukakis, the son of immigrants, said he wants to make the American dream come true for all citizens. "The best America is yet to come," he said.

The two men shook hands at center stage before the debate and again after. "Good job," Dukakis said to his Republican rival following their give-no-quarter evening stage. Both men then headed for post-debate rallies with supporters while their political supporters descended on reporters to offer partisan analysis of the confrontation.

The most riveting moment of the evening occurred when Bush was asked about his frequent campaign criticism of Dukakis being a "card-carrying member" of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Bush said the sharp attacks he delivers almost daily on the campaign trail were meant to question Dukakis' judgment on matters like his membership in the liberal ACLU and his veto of legislation requiring teachers in Massachusetts to lead their students in reciting the pledge.

Bush said, "I hope people don't think I'm questioning his patriotism."

But Democrat Dukakis, saying he hoped he wouldn't have to repeat himself, replied: "Of course the vice president is questioning my patriotism. I don't think there's any question about that. And I resent it."

The debate rules were designed to prohibit direct candidate-to-candidate comment, but there was no shortage of hostilities.

The first question of the debate was about drugs, and Dukakis took the offensive by questioning Bush's leadership on the problem.

Bush said the reason drug use was exploding was because of a "deterioration of values."

Dukakis agreed, but said values must begin with the nation's leaders. He accused the Reagan administration of dealing with Panamanian Gen. Noriega, whom he referred to as a "drug-running dictator. We've been dealing with him, he's been dealing drugs to our kids."

Bush swiftly replied that the Reagan administration moved quickly to indict Noriega on drug charges as soon as it had evidence.

The moderator for the debate was Jim Lehrer, co-anchor of public broadcasting's "MacNeil-Lehrer NewsHour."

But Republicans insisted that Dukakis was unable to make a serious dent in Bush's record, and given the Republican's minor lead in the polls, that spells a GOP victory.

"I don't think Mike Dukakis drew any blood, I don't think Dukakis scored any real points, which I think means advantage Bush," said Iowa Republican Chairman Michael Mahaffey. "I don't think either of them made any major errors."

"I don't think either of them did poorly," Mahaffey said. "I thought it was a pretty good debate."

"I thought Dukakis came out well ahead on domestic issues," said U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin. "Bush was trying to use all these old phrases, old one-liners."

"There were a couple of times Bush rambled," Harkin said.

Democrats said the debate showed their candidate not only was an accomplished debater, but clearly relished the confrontation and the chance to put Bush on the defensive.

"Dukakis loves debating, he likes nothing better than to look his opponent in the eye," Crawford said. "I don't think Bush particularly enjoys this kind of an exercise."

"Dukakis looked and sounded good," said Paulee Lipsman, a Democratic consultant and fundraiser who now works for the Secretary of State. "Bush tends to ramble under pressure."

Home team dominate OTL contest

Another On The weekend has passed and The Daily Iowan prognosticators have made a rebound of sorts.

Sports Editor Brent Woods considered his narrow lead with a losing outing. Mike "Magic" Triklis, 8-2, and Woods and Triklis are tied at the top with 28-12 records through four weeks.

We thought Triklis, who was recently shamed into giving up the "Magic," wouldn't reclaim his nickname until he took the loss. But he's not as proud as he thought.

The lower division of the DI made a minor surge as well. Assistant sports editors, Matt Nik and Neil Lewis, were going into this week and wanted to improve to 26-14.

Our guest picker, ESPN sportswriter Chris Berman, checked 8-2 and is eagerly awaiting complimentary subscription to DL.

If you're wondering about tiebreakers between Indiana and Missouri, just counted that game as a win for Indiana. Aren't we generous?

A free hint for future OTL pickers: pick all the home teams. Every home team on this week's ballot won with the exception of Missouri, which tied.

The winner of a frosty keg of beer from the Fieldhouse is Scott Shinnars. Scott had a near-perfect ballot, missing only one of the Indiana-Missouri tie.

His perfection carried over to a tiebreaker game between Furman and Newberry. Shinnars predicted that Furman would win 42-0, darned if that wasn't the score.

"That tiebreaker score, that's just a guess," Shinnars said. "That's incredible. I've heard Furman, so I just went with them."

Shinnars is living proof that persistence may be the key to catching on in a keg of brew in the contest.

"I played a lot two years ago and didn't play that much last year," he said. "I've been playing this year."

And thanks to the folks at the Fieldhouse, Shinnars will receive a nice reward for his predictive prowess.

Though readers are now starting to catch on to how the contest works, here are the rules on time.

The ballot, pictured below, is available Monday through Thursday, in the Scoreboard section of the 2B. Clip it, circle your picks, the tiebreaker winner and the score, scribble your name, phone number, and stuff it in a box at the DI Business Office Communications Center.

Each contestant may submit a maximum of three ballots. Contest winners must be able to claim the prize.

This week's keg is provided by Randall's Foods. Randall's has plenty of keg business, so thought this week we would straighten up the experts. Good luck!

Hawks edge Cyclones in tight game

Passing game sputters in win

By Brent Woods
 The Daily Iowan

If there is such a thing as a moral victory, Iowa State claimed one Saturday at Kinnick Stadium.

And if there is such a thing as a deflating win, the Iowa Hawkeyes got one of those.

Iowa sluggishly defeated the pesky Iowa State Cyclones 10-3 in front of a sellout crowd and nearly saw its seven-point cushion disappear in the final seconds.

But the Hawkeyes were rescued by sophomore running back Tony Stewart, who piled up 194 yards on 32 carries, and junior defensive back Turk Hook, who snagged a leaping interception at the Iowa 5-yard line with 20 seconds remaining to secure a very shaky win.

Football

"Now that's the way the Iowa-Iowa State games ought to be played," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. "It's great for the fans, but hard on the old coaches."

Iowa State Coach Jim Walden, who had said all week that his team had no legitimate chance to beat Iowa, recanted his statements after the contest.

"Am I happy? No. I expected to win today, which may shock the hell out of all of you," Walden said. "Our players are unhappy. I didn't come to Iowa State to play teams close."

"I really thought my football team could beat (Iowa)."

And the Cyclones almost proved Walden right.

Leading 10-3, Iowa had the ball at the Cyclones' 14-yard line late in the game.

But after the Hawkeyes failed to convert a third-and-2 play, Fry opted to go for the first down instead of bring Jeff Skilleit in to kick the chip-shot field goal and risk having the kick blocked and returned for a touchdown.

Fry called a bootleg, and Iowa quarterback Chuck Hartlieb was run out of bounds for a loss of 2.

The Cyclones took possession with

Stewart romps for 194 yards

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

With the normally powerful Iowa passing game sputtering, the Hawkeyes asked running back Tony Stewart to provide the offense.

Stewart rambled for a career-high 194 yards on 32 carries in the Hawkeyes' 10-3 victory over Iowa State at Kinnick Stadium. The number of carries was also a personal high for the sophomore from Vauxhall, N.J.

"I've never had to carry the ball that many times," he said. "I think I carried the ball 24 times at Wisconsin last year, but I never carried the ball more than 15 times in high school."

Stewart had encouraging words for his blockers.

"I have to give all the credit to the offensive line," he said. "They opened up the holes and I just ran through them. They did a great job."

Iowa Coach Hayden Fry gave more credit to Stewart, considering the patchwork line he had to run behind.

"(Stewart's performance) was remarkable with the health of the offensive line," Fry said.

In the opening drive Saturday, Stewart ran the ball eight times for 66 yards in moving the Hawkeyes to the Cyclone seven-yard line before coming out of the game. The series stalled without Stewart and his efforts proved fruitless when Jeff Skilleit missed the field-goal attempt.

Stewart left the game because he was worn out.

"I took myself out," he said. "I wasn't tired because I ran so much, it was because I was so pumped up. When I got excited like that, I get tired real easy, so I came out."

But he came back... and back... and back.

By the end of the first quarter, Stewart had amassed 84 yards on 12 carries. He finished the first half with 129 yards.

"We went in with the idea of going with what works," Stewart said. "We needed to establish the running game. The passing game has always been there so we wanted to

Biondi claims fifth gold, seven total medals

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)— Carl Lewis grappled with a grueling schedule Sunday as he got back in the hunt for victory at the Seoul Olympics, where U.S. boxers rolled and Matt Biondi rolled in gold.

While the time-honored heroes of age and experience looked old and tired, some new stars emerged at the Games. The exception was 28-year-old diving veteran Greg Louganis, who launched his assault on a gold-medal sweep of two Olympics in qualifying for the platform event Sunday.

Danny Manning scored all 18 of his points in the first half as the U.S. men's basketball team advanced to the Olympic semifinals with a 94-57 victory over Puerto Rico.

In Tuesday's semifinals the

SUMMER OLYMPICS '88

United States will face the winner of Monday night's Soviet Union-Brazil quarterfinal game.

The U.S. team took control early against Puerto Rico and, as in the previous Olympic games, pressure defense broke it open.

Biondi won a gold medal in the final day of swimming Sunday, giving him five gold and seven total medals, and Kristin Otto of East Germany became the Games' most successful woman athlete ever with six gold.

Biondi equaled the most medals ever won by a swimmer in a single Olympics when the U.S. men's 400-meter medley relay team won in world-record time. He finished the Games and his racing career with five straight gold and four world records after winning a bronze and silver.

"It's been a tremendously long week, and I don't think it's really hit me what I've done this past week," he said. "When it does, I don't think I'll be able to sleep for a couple of days."

Otto, meanwhile, set an Olympic record with her sixth gold medal in an upset victory in the 50-meter freestyle.

Lewis, unable to unseat Ben Johnson as the world's fastest human in the 100 meters, renewed his assault in the 200-meter heats and long jump final Sunday. Lewis ran in the final 200 heat of the first round and was scheduled in the first heat of the second round before the long jump later in the afternoon.

"I don't think they could have made it any tougher for me, but I'll get through it," said Lewis, whose time was only seventh fastest overall in the first round. "More than that, I think it was a planned challenge."

Lewis ran an easy 20.72 for second place in his heat behind Italian Stefano Tilli's 20.68. The top three in each heat qualify.

Although Lewis will be unable to repeat his four-gold performance of 1984, he still has a chance to become the first Olympian ever to repeat in the 200 or long jump. Lewis also is a member of the U.S. 400-meter relay team.

In the 10th day of the Games, the medal standings looked like this: Soviet Union 69 total, 30 gold; East Germany 62 total, 25 gold, and United States 38 total, 12 gold.

The U.S. boxing team stretched its winning streak to 10 bouts before finally losing a bout Saturday night. So far, the team still has nine of 12 boxers in the medals chase.

On Sunday, Kennedy McKinney of Killen, Texas, advanced on a walkover in the bantamweight

Kruckeberg leads Hawkeyes to win

By Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Led by Jeanne Kruckeberg's first-place finish, the Iowa women's cross country team swept the Illinois State Invitational Saturday, taking the top five places and scoring a perfect 15 points.

Kruckeberg's time of 17:36 was followed by teammates Renee Doyle, 17:44; Tricia Kiraly, 17:52; Jennifer Brower, 17:58; and Tammy Hoskins, 18:01.

"They looked really good coming in at the finish," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said.

Following the Iowa pack was Anna Dutton of Illinois State, who turned in a time of 18:12 for sixth place.

Kruckeberg said she didn't expect to win Saturday's race. She finished third in Iowa's season opener against Drake and Mankato State.

Women's Cross Country

"It was a flat course, and I do much better on that than on hills," she said.

Brower, a freshman this year, was running in her first meet of the season. An elbow injury from a bike accident prevented her from participating in the first meet.

Hassard said he was pleased with the results, especially from Kruckeberg, Kiraly and Hoskins, and with the improved performances of freshmen Patty Jones and Beth Wilson. This weekend's meet was only their second meet at the college level.

Iowa was followed by Purdue with 59 points; Illinois State, 62; Southern Illinois-Edwardsville, 113; and Eastern Illinois, 120. Bradley also participated but did not have a full team.

Chicago's defense stumps Green Bay

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago extended its recent mastery in the NFL's longest rivalry with a 24-6 win, keeping Green Bay winless this year.

Neal Anderson ran for two touchdowns and the Bears struck for 17 points in the final five minutes of the first half. Chicago also sacked Randy Wright five times and intercepted him twice, including once in the end zone by Shaun Gayle to stop a fourth-quarter drive.

Anderson scored on runs of 45 and three yards and gained 105 yards rushing.

Rookie Sterling Sharpe starred for Green Bay with seven receptions for 137 yards.

 BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Bills stayed unbeaten as Robb Riddick scored two quick touchdowns in the third quarter, one on a blocked punt, and Scott Norwood kicked five field goals.

Turnovers killed the Steelers, who were intercepted three times, fumbled twice and had two punts blocked.

"All the turnovers are driving me crazy," said Steelers quarterback Bobby Brister, who was picked off three times.

The Bills are off to their best start since going 5-0 in 1980. One of the main reasons is Norwood, who has made a club-record 12 straight kicks.

Glasson hangs on for B.C. Open win

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) — Bill Glasson could muster only a 2-under-par 69 Sunday during the final round of the $500,000 B.C. Open, but it was good enough to give him his first PGA Tour victory in three years.

Glasson finished at 16-under-par 268 for the 72-hole tournament, two strokes ahead of Bruce Lietzke and Wayne Levi, who both made late charges at the leader.

Lietzke shot a 64 on the par-71 course after starting the day 7 strokes behind Glasson, who took over the lead Saturday with a 65. Lietzke's 64 was the best round of the tournament.

Levi, who started four strokes back, sank birdie putts on the 14th and 16th holes, but missed a 10-foot birdie putt on No. 18 that would have pulled him within one stroke of Glasson.

Sullivan takes Bosch Indy-car title

NAZARETH, Pa. (AP) — Danny Sullivan drove to victory in Sunday's Bosch Spark Plug Indy-car race as if he owned the track — which, in fact, he does.

Sullivan, who shares ownership of the Pennsylvania International Raceway with his team owner, Roger Penske, and driver Mario Andretti, had his Penske Chevrolet 12.206 seconds ahead at the end of 200 laps. Michael Andretti, a resident of Nazareth, was second, about a half-lap behind, in defense of the title he won in last year's inaugural race.

Sullivan, of Louisville, Ky., averaged 148.526 mph for 200 tours of the 1-mile, three-turn oval in winning $52,460 from the $450,000 purse.

"I can definitely say that today was a team effort," Sullivan said. "I couldn't have done this without Rick Mears," his Penske Racing teammate who started alongside on the front row and led for 112 laps.

Sullivan said he and Mears worked together from the start of the race until Mears' car began to experience tire trouble while running second with less than 20 laps left.

Because Michael Andretti was also having tire problems, Sullivan was able to hold off all challengers in the last few laps.

55 left. After a 15-yard pass completion and two incomplete attempts, first-year quarterback Bret Oberg launched a bomb to Michael Brown, who made an over-the-shoulder grab between three Iowa defenders for a gain of 58 yards to the Iowa 11.

The Hawkeyes chased Oberg out of bounds on the next play and Hook intercepted on the next.

Fry defended his decision to try for the first down and not risk the field goal.

"I put a lot of faith in the defense with 55 seconds to go," Fry said. "When they completed that pass, I had to say a little prayer. Thank goodness for Tork Hook."

"I didn't want to have the field goal blocked. I could visualize them picking it up and scoring and going for two and we'd lose the football game. I did what I thought was right."

Hook said he was at the "right place at the right time" for the key interception.

"I'm from Iowa, so this game means a lot to me," Hook, a Corydon native, said. "I was glad to get my chance against the Cyclones. We were lucky to pull it out."

After he pulled a 25-yard field goal attempt after the Hawkeyes' first drive, Skillett opened the scoring with a 32-yarder at 13:04 of the second quarter.

Iowa State's Jeff Shudak, who missed three field goals on the day, evened the score with :46 left in the first half from 40 yards out.

The game's only other score came on a 13-play, 68-yard drive by the Hawkeyes midway through the third quarter. Stewart, who accounted for 229 yards of offense, caught a 26-yard strike over the middle for the touchdown.

Hartlieb appeared off the mark in completing 11 of 22 passes for 129 yards, while Oberg connected on 12 of 29 for 238 yards and two interceptions.

Senior running back Joe Henderson led the Cyclones on the ground with 66 yards on 21 carries.

Fry said that the Hawkeyes did what they had to do to win, but his team still has plenty of problems as it heads into the Big Ten opener.

"I'm very concerned about our football team," Fry said. "But some of it is out of my hands because I'm not a magician. I can't put my hands on them and say 'heal' and get them well."

Iowa linebacker Brad Quast was pleased with the Hawkeyes' improved defensive effort, but he was hoping for more of a momentum-building win.

"We really needed a good offensive and defensive game to go up to East Lansing," Quast said. "We would have been a roll. A win's a win, but I really would have liked to look better doing it."

work on the run.

The passing game wasn't there, so that meant Stewart got a lot of carries.

Stewart also scored the lone touchdown of the game, ironically on a 26-yard pass from quarterback Chuck Hartlieb in the third quarter.

"Chuck's pass was perfect," Stewart said. "He hit me right on stride, then it was just a footrace to the endzone."

Stewart's rushing day tied for sixth with Bob Jeter on Iowa's all-time rushing list. Jeter gained 194 yards on nine carries in the 1959 Rose Bowl against California. Ed Podolak leads the list with 286 yards on 17 attempts in a 1968 game with Northwestern.

The Hawkeyes open the Big Ten season against Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich., this Saturday. With the numbers that Stewart garnered this past Saturday, the ground load will probably fall into his hands when Iowa meets the Spartans.

"I'll do whatever they ask me to do," Stewart said. "If they want me to carry the ball five times or a hundred times, I will and I'll do it with 110 percent."

division when his Indian opponent couldn't compete because of an arm injury.

Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., followed that with his third victory of the Games, a 5-0 decision over Francis Masoe of American Samoa in the welterweight division, and Ray Mercer of the U.S. Army stopped Rudolf Gavenciak of Czechoslovakia in the third round of their heavyweight fight.

Some older athletes didn't perform as well as expected.

Mary Slaney, in what may have been her last, best chance to solve the Olympic jinx, faded off the lead to a badly beaten 10th in the women's 3,000 meters. She didn't fall this time, as she did at the 1984 Games after tangling with Zola Budd. She fell apart.

"I just couldn't hold it," the 30-year-old Slaney said.

Edwin Moses, at 33 a veteran of three Olympics, lost for only the third time in 11 years in the 400-meter hurdles. He said he felt fortunate to finish third.

"After 12 years of Olympic pressure... I consider myself lucky to be on the victory stand," Moses said.

Chris Evert, 33-year-old winner of 18 Grand Slam tournaments but a first-time Olympian, lost in 1 hour, 54 minutes to unheralded Raffaella Reggi of Italy, 2-6, 6-4, 6-1, in her third-round match. She committed 62 unforced errors, about one every two minutes.

The first swimmer to win seven medals at the Olympics was Mark Spitz, at the 1972 Munich Games.

seconds between first and fifth places, a time gap that, according to Hassard, is probably the closest top-five finish the team has ever seen.

"Things are progressing well," Hassard said. "The hard, strong training is starting to pay off."

This meet, the second of the season for Iowa, marked the end of the first phase of training, which was mainly strength-based. The team will now begin three weeks of intermediate-intensity training.

"We have some adjustments to make between individuals," Hassard said, "but this meet was a good early-season confidence builder."

Iowa will travel to the Stanford Invitational in Stanford, Calif., Saturday.

Bengals 24, Browns 17
CINCINNATI — The Bengals have the right rhythm as they've gotten out of the gate faster than any Cincinnati team since 1975, Paul Brown's last season as coach, when they were 6-0.

Boomer Esiason, the NFL's top-rated passer, was held without a touchdown pass for the first time this season by a defense that hasn't given one up in four games.

"A couple of times last year I threw for 300 yards and we lost, and I was here and thought I'd give it a back for a win," Esiason said. "Obviously, you like to get the personal statistics, but the team comes first."

Packers 31, Giants 14
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Packers were the most against the Giants since San Diego scored 44 in 1980.

Jim Everett hit tight end Pete Holohan on a 14-yard scoring pass, found fullback Robert Delpino for a 5-yarder and Aaron Cox on a 68-yard scoring play down the left sidelines, all in the first half.

Greg Bell rushed for 112 yards on 31 carries and became the third running back to gain 100 yards against the Giants this year. He also scored on a 2-yard run.

Seahawks 38, Seahawks 7
SEATTLE — How dominant was San Francisco? The 49ers, 3-1, had the ball for 42 minutes, 50 seconds, rushed for 239 yards while allowing Seattle 29, and had 27 first downs to eight for the host Seahawks, who played without injured starting quarterback Dave Krieg.

Joe Montana threw four touchdown passes, three to Jerry Rice — for 1, 69 and 60 yards. He also hit John Frank for a 13-yard score while completing 20 of 29 passes for 302 yards.

Seahawk Steve Largent caught a 9-yard pass from rookie quarterback Kelly Stouffer with 3:45 left to extend his NFL record of catching at least one pass in a regular-season game to 156 straight games.

Chargers 24, Chiefs 23
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Babe Laufenberg threw a 9-yard touchdown pass to Lionel James with 52 seconds left to win it.

Steve DeBerg threw three touchdown passes and Paul Palmer scored twice while piling up 198 yards in total offense for the Chiefs.

Cardinals 30, Redskins 21
PHOENIX, Ariz. — Rookie Tony Jordan scored twice on 1-yard runs and Cedric Mack returned a fumble 45 yards for a touchdown with 41 seconds remaining as the Cardinals won the first time in their new city.

Phoenix, 2-2, took the lead for good at 16:14 on Jordan's 1-yard score with 4:34 left in the third quarter.

After Washington's Chip Lohmiller had his 44-yard field-goal attempt bounce off the left upright with 33 seconds left in the quarter, the Cardinals went up 23-14 on Neil Lomax's 27-yard touchdown pass to Roy Green.

Washington, 2-2, got three touchdown passes from Mark Rypien in his first NFL action. Rypien, who spent the past two seasons on injured reserve, was starting because Doug Williams underwent an emergency appendectomy Wednesday.

Jets 17, Lions 10

DETROIT — The Jets won their third straight game as Ken O'Brien completed 27 of 38 passes for 253 yards and two touchdowns. O'Brien, who connected with Al Toon 10 times for 75 yards, found Wesley Walker alone in the corner of the end zone with 9:39 remaining for a game-winning 26-yard pass.

Cowboys 26, Falcons 20
DALLAS — Disaster had been Steve Pelluer's companion late in games this year. In both of Dallas' losses, Pelluer threw deflating interceptions.

This time, the fifth-year quarterback turned it around, hitting Ray Alexander for a 29-yard score with 1:48 to play.

Vikings 23, Eagles 21

MINNEAPOLIS — Chuck Nelson atoned for a missed 45-yard field goal with a successful 32-yarder with 15 seconds remaining, handing the visiting Eagles their third consecutive loss.

Saints 13, Buccaneers 9

NEW ORLEANS — The Saints had just enough offense to move to 3-1.

Hawks go 1-2 on road trip

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Interim coach Janet Ryan went into her final weekend at the helm of the No. 7 Iowa Hawkeyes and came out 1-2 against ranked teams.

On Sunday, No. 2 Old Dominion got a goal with 4 minutes, 45 seconds remaining in the opening stanza to outlast Iowa 1-0 in Chapel Hill, N.C. Maaikke Hilbrand scored on a direct corner for the Monarchs.

"I'd been rushing the ball all day and decided to stay back for that shot," Iowa goalie Andrea Wieland said. "Naturally, I wish that I hadn't stayed back, but it's not good to second-guess yourself."

The Hawkeyes had 22 shots on goal, compared to 20 for Old Dominion.

Ryan was pleased, despite the loss. "Old Dominion whipped North Carolina 4-0 this weekend," she said. "Since Carolina was number one, then Old Dominion should be the top team. I can't be unhappy losing to the best team in the country by only one goal."

Iowa fell to the Tar Heels 2-0 on Thursday.

The Iowa win came Saturday in their contest with No. 8 Maryland. The Hawkeyes scored three times in the first half to go on to a 4-2 win.

Senior Tina Parrott, who had two of Iowa's four markers against the Terrapins, thought the Hawkeyes were strong throughout the weekend.

"Maryland may have rushed our shots a little slower, but they were as tough as Carolina and Old Dominion," she said. "We played well in all three games. The shots just didn't fall in the other two."

Those were also the sentiments of Iowa senior Diane Loosbrock.

"Anyone could have beaten anyone this weekend," she said. "I think everybody on our team learned from this trip too."

Beth Beglin will return to retake the head coaching slot after captaining the U.S. Olympic field hockey squad in Seoul. Although the Hawkeyes came out of this weekend with a losing record, Ryan seemed pleased with what the team did her last weekend as head coach.

"We could've come out of the weekend with two or three wins," she said. "The stats were overwhelming in our favor against North Carolina. Except for a few lapses we could've won that game. Our plan against Old Dominion was to rush Andrea and bother their corners and we did that."

"I was very pleased with the way we played and I think we worked hard and together."

Buckeyes rally to top LSU in final minutes for upset

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Before the second-largest crowd in Ohio Stadium history, 90,584, Ohio State rallied for 16 points in the final 1:56 to beat No. 7 Louisiana State 36-33 Saturday.

LSU, 2-1, went ahead 33-20 when a pass from Tommy Hodson to Tony Moss was tipped into the hands of teammate Alvin Lee, who scored to complete a 55-yard touchdown play.

But Carlos Snow had a 5-yard touchdown run for Ohio State with 1:56 left. Then the Buckeyes held LSU, and the Tigers elected to take a safety rather than punt with 1:34 remaining. The safety cut LSU's lead to 33-29.

Greg Frey then passed 20 yards to Bobby Olive for the winning touchdown with 38 seconds remaining. Frey, who completed 24 of 37 passes for 281 yards, hit Olive over the middle and he dove into the end zone, putting an end to LSU's string of 14 road victories.

Michigan 19, Wake Forest 9

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Tony Boles rushed for 213 yards and two touchdowns Saturday, leading No. 19 Michigan to a 19-9 victory over Wake Forest.

It was the first victory for Michigan after losses to Notre Dame and top-ranked Miami. Wake Forest is 2-2.

Boles scored on runs of 14 and 29 yards in a 3:23 span of the second quarter as the Wolverines took a 14-3 halftime lead.

Michigan added a third-quarter safety when Wake Forest tailback Mike Young fumbled a pitch out of the end zone. Mike Gillette kicked a 19-yard field goal early in the fourth quarter to make it 19-3.

Army 23, Northwestern 7

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Calvin Cass rushed for 142 yards and two touchdowns in leading Army to a 23-7 victory over Northwestern Saturday.

Army, 2-1, took advantage of two mistakes by the Wildcats, 0-3, early in the third quarter to overcome a 7-3 halftime deficit.

Greg Bradshaw's first pass attempt of the second half was intercepted by Army's Mike Thorson at the Northwestern 35-yard line. John Barth ran 48 yards up the middle on the next play and

Big Ten Roundup

Cass scored six plays later.

Indiana 28, Missouri 28

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Jeff Jacke's 22-yard field goal attempt with four seconds remaining hit the left upright Saturday, thwarting a furious Missouri comeback and forcing the Tigers to settle for a 28-28 tie with Indiana.

John Stollenwerck, on fourth-and-4, combined with Michael Jones on a 33-yard touchdown pass play to tie the score with 4:37 left. The Tigers, 1-1-1, then forced an Indiana punt and rumbled downfield with Craig Lammers and Chris Hall ripping off long gains to set up Jacke's attempt.

The snap was clean but the ball slammed into the upright and bounced back into the faces of the crestfallen Missouri players.

David Schnell and Anthony Thompson scored two touchdowns each as the Hoosiers, 2-0-1, overcame a 21-7 deficit to take a 28-21 lead with 8:35 to play.

Minnesota 31, Northern Illinois 20

MINNEAPOLIS — Chris Gaiters' second touchdown, on an acrobatic, diving catch in the back of the end zone with 5:44 to play Saturday night, rallied Minnesota to a 31-20 victory over Northern Illinois.

NIU, 3-1, coming off an upset of another Big Ten team, Wisconsin, in what Huskies coach Jerry Pettibone called "the biggest win we have had," dominated the game offensively and defensively until allowing Minnesota's game-winning 80-yard drive behind red-shirt freshman quarterback Scott Schaffner.

The Gophers, 2-1, were outrushed 255-15 yards in the first three quarters. In the game, NIU freshman fullback Adam Dach rushed 34 times for 167 yards, outgaining heralded Minnesota tailback Darrell Thompson by 65 yards.

In the second quarter, Gaiters returned a punt 79 yards for a touchdown, the longest in Min-sota history and the school's first scoring punt return in 20 years.

Notre Dame 52, Purdue 7

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Tony Rice passed for two touchdowns and ran for another and Ricky Watters returned a punt 66 yards for another score Saturday, leading eighth-ranked Notre Dame to a 52-7 victory over Purdue.

It was one of the worst defeats suffered by Purdue in this series, which dates back to 1886. The worst loss was 48-0 in 1970.

The Irish, 3-0, exploded for 28 points in the second period before Coach Lou Holtz cleared his bench. Holtz used three quarterbacks in the second quarter and four during the game.

But Rice had created havoc in little more than one quarter. He ran 38 yards for one touchdown and threw touchdown passes of eight yards to Derek Brown and 54 yards to Raghib Ismail as the Irish rang up a 42-0 halftime lead.

Purdue, 1-2, averted a shutout when Calvin Williams returned a punt 40 yards to the Irish 15-yard line and then grabbed a 10-yard pass from Brian Fox for the touchdown with 3:20 left in the game.

Miami, Fla. 23, Wisconsin 3

MIAMI — The Miami Hurricanes overcame six turnovers to beat the Wisconsin Badgers 23-3 Saturday. Carlos Huerta kicked three field goals for Miami and linebacker Bernard Clark returned a fumble 55 yards for a touchdown.

Steve Walsh threw for 225 yards and one score for the Hurricanes, 3-0. Wisconsin, 0-3, had five turnovers and has 15 in three games. Miami tackled Wisconsin runners for losses 11 times.

Florida St. 30, Michigan St. 7

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — LeRoy Butler, the hero of Florida State's "punt-rookie" play a week earlier, broke open a close game in the fourth quarter Saturday by returning an interception 26 yards for a touchdown as the Seminoles defeated Michigan State 30-7.

Butler, who ran a fake punt 78 yards last Saturday to set up ninth-ranked Florida State's winning field goal in a 24-21 victory over Clemson, scored on the third play of the fourth quarter.

1988-89 STUDENT BASKETBALL TICKET POLICY

- A student may order one of the following: one full season ticket for the price of $80.00; one 14 game ticket which excludes the holiday games* for $70.00; or a 7 game split season ticket for $35.00. If the number of orders exceeds the student allotment, split season tickets will be given to those with the lowest priority at the discretion of the ticket office.
- Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for basketball tickets at The University of Iowa with no loss in priority for off-campus student exchange programs or a bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
- A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than eight. If not all group members are present when the order is placed, the members not present must provide to the student placing the order, either their personal checks with current address and ID numbers thereon or cash and their ID numbers. One student may not write a personal check in payment for another student's ticket.
- The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
- Student season basketball tickets will be on sale commencing September 26 through September 29 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.; September 30 from 9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m.; October 1 from 8:00 a.m.-12:00 noon; and October 3 through October 5 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. These tickets will then become available for pick up beginning November 7, 1988.
- Each student must pick up their own ticket. The student must present their own student ID, current registration sticker and picture ID at the time of pick up. Registered students must be in "good standing" with the University business office regarding delinquent bills.
- A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by a University of Iowa ID card with current registration sticker and picture ID. To use the basketball ticket during the 1988 games a student must be registered for the second semester. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or by any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student policy. If a non-student is found using a student's ticket, that student forfeits all future student ticket privileges. The penalty for a violation of the University policy involving ID and ticket will be the loss of the use of the ticket for two games.
- Amana Hawkeye Classic tickets will be available to students at $22.00 per seat for the tournament. This is a special event and is, therefore, not on the season ticket.
- Everyone, regardless of age, is required to have a valid ticket for admittance to all University of Iowa basketball games. This includes infants in arms.
- DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN STUDENT TICKETS.

Going for two

Iowa shortstop Lynda Schlueter concentrates on completing the first half of a double play in the Hawkeyes' first-round game against Northern Iowa during the Iowa Round Robin Tournament at the Hawkeye Softball Complex Sunday afternoon. Schlueter's throw to first was not in time.

Iowa splits in Big Ten play

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team, 10-3, opened the Big Ten season by landing a split this weekend on the road.

Iowa lost 15-3, 15-11, 15-5 to Illinois, the 1987 Big Ten champions, and defeated last year's conference runner-up Purdue 15-9, 18-16, 5-15, 16-14.

According to Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart, the Hawkeyes' victory over the Boilermakers was well-deserved.

"It was a great match. It was a phenomenal win," Stewart said. "We have only beaten them three times in the last 20 meetings. It was great to win after losing to Illinois."

Stewart said Iowa's mental approach helped secure the win.

Volleyball

"In the second game we were behind several points, but at game point 15-14 we hung in there. It was amazing — the mental toughness was incredible.

"We took control. Their big guns didn't perform and ours did."

Sophomore middle hitter Barb Willis led the Hawkeye attack with 21 kills and 12 digs. Willis is ranked 19th nationally with a 1.53 block average. Stewart said Willis had a good outing against the Boilermakers.

"Barb played really well," Stewart said. "They tried to take her out of the game but she held in there."

Other Hawkeyes who contributed were outside hitters Jenny Rees and co-captain Kari Hamel. Hamel with a 1.67 block average, ranked 11th in the nation. She had 20 kills and 15 digs while Rees had 13 kills and led the team with 11 digs.

"(Hamel) had 20 kills. She had to save that was phenomenal," Stewart said. "She returned a ball that no one thought she could get."

Iowa lost to a talented Illinois team Friday.

"They came out and got on us," Stewart said. "In two, we were composed and had an 8-4 lead but it slipped away from us. We weren't into it mentally."

"We like to learn from a loss. We want to maintain composure after a loss."

Iowa will return to Carver-Hawkeye Arena this weekend to face Wisconsin and Northwestern.

Hawks take fifth in tournament

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

Practice time was minimal for the Iowa women's golf team last week.

The rainy, inclement weather disrupted Coach Diane Thomason's practice schedule while preparing for the 21-team Purdue University tournament.

However, the Hawkeyes didn't play like they practiced, finishing fifth in the strong tournament field which included all the Big Ten teams.

Women's Golf

"We placed very well in this tournament," Thomason said. "I'm really optimistic about this team. We have played well, but I'm excited because we have the talent to play so much better."

Thomason's team was led by Sarah Ward, who was playing in her first tournament of the year. Ward carded an opening-round 76 which paired with Shirley Trier's 75 catapulted the Hawkeyes into contention for the tournament title.

Ward's impressive play did not come as a surprise to Thomason. "Sarah was kind of the star for us this trip," Thomason said.

Runners drop home opener

Three of the Iowa men's cross country team's top distancers did not compete in Saturday's home meet, and the Hawkeyes suffered in team competition, placing no runners in the top 15.

Northern Iowa and Illinois State tied for the team title, with Northern Iowa's Dan Hoshgelder taking individual honors. He was never seriously challenged after the half-way point and finished the 8,000-meter Finkbine course in 25:08.

The absence of Hawkeyes Rod Chambers, David Brown and Sean Corrigan certainly didn't help Iowa's cause. Corrigan has yet to run this season because of a hamstring injury, and team leaders Chambers and Brown were also kept out for injuries.

"We had David dropped from the Minnesota meet because of a hamstring injury," Coach Larry Wiczorek said, "and Rod has had a chronic bad back. He's had to miss Monday and Tuesday practices because of it."

Workshop

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

It is easy at the UI, with many prominent programs to take things for granted. This is particularly true with the Writers' Workshop, the International Writing Program. Conceived as a unique program years ago, the Workshop serves as a model for most writing workshops in the United States and abroad. The IWP is the one of its kind in the world. It is a writer allowed to express creativity and conscience, a mind encouraged, is not a given many parts of the world. Interim Director Fredrick Wood recalls the time when a writer arrived three weeks late because he "just couldn't get out of jail." In the past few weeks, Wood has received letters from writers from Egypt, South Africa, Cameroon and Singapore who participated in the IWP and to return.

Founded in 1967 by Paul Hualing Nieh Engle, the residency program selects 30 to 35 published writers from other countries to participate in the literary intellectual life of the UI, classes, participate in seminars and translate their work into English. The writers will also have broad exposure to the current American literature by attending talks and readings by well-known visiting writers.

This year we have writers from first time from Algeria, Mali, Leone and Pakistan, communication Program Coordinator Rowena Revillas. "We are very pleased because we have a presence in Eastern European countries we haven't had for a while. Poland, Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia, as well as our Soviet writer, will be representing India, China, Sudan, Pakistan, Indonesia, Israel, Thailand, Guatemala are just a sample of the other countries being represented.

Woodard, a product of the Workshop, has been entrusted with the leadership of the IWP. He is the wake of the Engles' retirement share with the Engles a concern for the future of the IWP. He is abiding devotion to what he has achieved and what it is c-

It is easy at the UI, with its many prominent programs, to take things for granted. This is particularly the case with the Writers' Workshop and the International Writing Program. Conceived as a unique program years ago, the Workshop serves as a model for most writers' workshops in the United States and abroad. The IWP is the only one of its kind in the world. Being a writer allowed to express one's creativity and conscience, never mind encouraged, is not a given in many parts of the world. IWP interim Director Fredrick Woodard recalls the time when a writer arrived three weeks late because he "just couldn't get out of jail."

of doing.

"The bottom line is that I appreciate the work of the Engles' 20 years of leadership, and I know the UI is pleased. I also know from my own travels in the Orient, Europe and Africa that there is a deep appreciation for what the Engles have done. When I accompanied the Engles to Fudan University in Shanghai recently, a major university, 3,000 people jammed into a Woodard feels that Iowa City is an ideal location for the program. "The atmosphere in Iowa City lends itself to the preoccupations of writers, not only because of the IWP, but also the Writers' Workshop and its history. I can imagine many of the writers visiting here going home with the idea that Iowa City is one of the most thoughtful places. Everyone thinks everyone has a story and is quite willing to share it. That for them is most unusual. You see this reflected in their writings. Recently an IWP

There is, for me, now, in my life, something that I call "l'esprit d'Iowa City," a spirit of freedom, creativity and love. Dear Paul and Hualing, this spirit is your work. — Eric Clemens, Belgium, 1985

600-seat auditorium to see Hualing and ask her questions about her work. It happened wherever we went in China," Woodard said.

In addition to writing, the writers will also receive a sampling of American culture. Local field trips, in addition to country-wide excursions, will be available. Some of the writers got their first impressions of America by attending the World Ag Expo in Amana. On Sept. 23, a group visited the John Deere Factory in Moline, Ill., a major contributor to the IWP. The trip culminated with a steamboat ride down the Mississippi River. "They've all read Mark Twain," smiled Torre- villas. Performances at Hancher Auditorium and Hawkeye football games round out the available activities.

Those writers subsidized by the U.S. Information Agency travel throughout the United States for two weeks. The group will start in San Francisco and visit several writing centers on the West Coast. After this leg of the journey, they'll split up. Half of the group will go to Faulkner's birthplace and the Center for Writing in the South, both located in Oxford, Miss. The other half will travel to Santa Fe, N.M., to study the Native American literature and visit various publishing houses.

participant, a Palestinian Arab who writes in Hebrew, had his novel translated into English, for which he won a major award. In it he has a chapter about Iowa City and living at the Mayflower Residence Hall."

According to Torre- villas, many of the writers this year are interested in finding out how the Writers' Workshop works. "The European writers feel that writing can't be taught, and we joke about this. They believe in something similar to the Platonic idea of divine inspiration, so they're very curious to see how these Americans do it. We've been doing it for 50 years, but it seems like a new idea with some of them. The workshop is largely an American phenomenon."

Torre- villas was the representative from the Philippines in 1984. She has been here as coordinator ever since. Her parents were also writers who studied with Paul Engle. After they completed the Workshop they returned to the Philippines to establish a workshop modeled after the one at UI. It is still operating after 27 years. "Programs like this are sprouting up all over the world. It struck me as unusual that the Europeans wondered that writing could in fact be taught."

In the true spirit of the writer, Torre- villas, who hasn't been home

(For Hualing and Paul)

A window and a river. Butterflies Lazily flapping through August's heavy air. Incessant shrill of crickets: the great oak Looming over your balcony: the moon Impossibly bright above the Iowa River. Akhudiat dancing, sinuous as the river. "Flesh, heaven, angels, poetry and bestsellers!" How humdrum life seems elsewhere; for a time An ideal world is almost realized Through writers meeting, talking, arguing, Translating, drinking, even writing, while The crickets lapse to silence and the oak Starts dropping acorns and the moon chills And the snow begins to fall on Iowa.

since she arrived in Iowa City, grapples with life's strange plot twists by doing what she knows best — writing.

"I missed out on the revolution, so I try to make up for it by writing poems about it," Torre- villas remarked with a laugh. The smile quickly evaporated, as she added wistfully, "I'd like to go home for a visit one of these days."

Panel focuses on life as a writer

By Cigale Ahlquist
The Daily Iowan

Niyi Osundare of Nigeria vividly remembers the day when a man, "aged by poverty," entered his office at the University of Ibadan in Nigeria with a clipping of a poem Osundare had written for the local newspaper.

In part, the poem, "Songs of the Season," reads:

"My wife is wan, my kids are cold
The times are hard, but so my heart
I will never die on the rubbish heap
I've sowed my sweat, I deserve to reap."

"This saved my life," Osundare recalls the man saying. Osundare went on to relate how the man, contemplating suicide, had borrowed money to make the six-hour journey through the jungle to tell him this.

Osundare was one of four members of the International Writing Program participating in a panel discussion titled "My Life as a Writer" at the UI Sept. 20.

Osundare, a poet, opened his talk by explaining how a slogan in his office, "Writing for me is serious business," summarizes his life as a writer.

He spoke of how conditions in the Third World have shaped his writing and how he feels that he is a part of the community he writes for.

"Where necessities are taken for granted in other parts of the world, (in Nigeria) they are sources of battle," Osundare said. "We want to create a society where there are no exploiters or exploited."

"All of the fingers of the hand can be equal — this philosophy is part of my work," he said.

Osundare went on to explain why writing is both a personal and social therapy for him:

"I write in order to live," he said. "To keep quiet is to bottle up and collapse."

"It is also therapy for other people in my country. With reading, they can live above the poverty," he said.

Osundare traces the origins of his writing to before he was born. He grew up on a farm, where he saw rhythms in nature and in the rhythmic dancing and drumming of the tribal ceremonies.

"I was born in a tradition of vibrant culture... into an idiom of drums and rhythm," he said.

Osundare sees himself as part of a new generation of Nigerian writers. As he did in "Songs of the Season," he uses his poetry as a commentary on current issues.

The public forum was the first in a series of three panel discussions highlighting the lives of the writers in their respective countries.

Also on the panel were Shlomo Nitzan of Israel, Angelica Gorodischer of Argentina and Rama Kannapiran of Singapore. Fredrick Woodard, interim director of the UI International Writing Program, was moderator.

The second session will be held Tuesday, Sept. 27, and will feature speakers from India, Poland, Colombia and Guatemala. The final discussion, featuring speakers from Brazil, Indonesia, Thailand and Hungary, will be held Tuesday, Oct. 4. Both begin at 3 p.m. in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 304.

International writers will meet to share experiences, ideas

Writers from all over the world will have a chance to exchange ideas and information at a series of panel discussions this semester through the UI International Writing Program.

"My Life as a Writer," a discussion dealing with the writers' lives in their respective countries, is the first of five panel discussion series sponsored by the UI International Writing Program. The final two sessions of the series will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 27, and Oct. 4 in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 304.

The second series, "The Imagination of the State and That of the Writer," deals with censorship and freedom of expression and is set for Oct. 7 and Oct. 11. Speakers on the first panel will represent Yugoslavia, Hungary, Poland and the Sudan. Writers from Czechoslovakia, Pakistan, the Philippines and the Soviet Union will be featured on the second panel.

"A lot of the Eastern Europeans are interested in this one (on censorship) because of the issues of limits of freedom and constraints put upon the writers, both privately and externally," said Rowena Torrevillas, an International Writing Program participant from the Philippines in 1985 and now coordinator of the program.

The topic "Post-Modernism and Beyond," focusing on trends in fiction writing in different parts of the world as compared to the West, will be discussed by writers from Algeria, Hungary, Korea and Sweden on Oct. 14.

Discussions on "Fantasy and Reality" will be held Oct. 18 and Oct. 21. "This tends to be popular with the Latin American writers," explained Torrevillas, "although not too much this year, because they already are pulling away from fantasy and coming closer to reality in their preoccupation with fiction."

The final series, titled "Images of America," will give the visiting writers a chance to express their views of the United States.

"We hope everybody (in the program) will take part in this," Torrevillas said. "We schedule this after they've had a two-week visit of the rest of America. It's interesting to hear their preconceived notions and what they've discovered here."

All sessions begin at 3 p.m. in the English-Philosophy Building, Room 304, and conclude with a question-and-answer period.

Plains Indians featured in museum collection

By Ace Moore
The Daily Iowan

There is an interesting display of American Indian Ledger Drawings at the UI Museum of Art which runs through Dec. 11, featuring artwork from the Solomons Collection. The Solomons, Gerald and Hope, are an Iowa City couple with a great interest in the Plains Indians. The drawings are made on ledgers that the Indians either bartered or captured from the numerous Army posts and trading stores that infested the Plains during the 1860s and early 1870s.

The tribes represented in the collection include the Crow, Cheyenne, Kiowa, Arapaho, Shoshone, Pawnee, Sioux and Ute. Most of the drawings involve scenes of courtship or ceremonial rituals. Battle scenes and one-on-one confrontations between braves are also depicted.

The Plains Indians had a system of motifs in their drawings. Small drawings of people or animals, such as a wolf or a moose, are the signatures of the artists. The drawings are sequenced and action is described by the use of footprints on the drawing to show what has already occurred. Specific ceremonies are represented by the color the artists used for feathers and decorations on people and horses.

A drawing of the "Sun Dance" by the elite Kiowa warrior society, the Koitsenko or "Real Dogs," has the warriors drawn with darker skin and black outfits. The use of motifs even corrects errors made by the white men who put names on the drawings. One title, "Pawnee and Cheyenne fighting" is incorrect, for instance; the color and kind of dress the two tribes wear, as well as history, dictate that the antagonists are Navaho and Kiowas.

If you have an interest in seeing artwork by the native peoples of our country, this collection is a wonderful opportunity to take a look at history and to better appreciate the civilizations and culture of the Plains Indians.

10 would 1 killed school

GREENWOOD, S.C. (AP) — A gunman walked into an elementary school and opened fire, killing an 8-year-old girl and injuring 10 other people, authorities said.

The man was taken into custody without incident after surrendering to the principal, the school superintendent said.

The gunman apparently entered Oakland Elementary School through a rear door and went to a third-grade classroom with 20 students and began shooting randomly, District Superintendent Bob Watson said at a news conference.

The man then left the classroom and went into the cafeteria, on the approximately 100 children eating their lunch, Watson said.

Watson said the man shot teachers and three children in the cafeteria. He then went back to the third-grade classroom. Six children were shot in the classroom but Watson said he was not sure whether that was before or after the man went into the cafeteria.

Watson said Kat Finkbeiner, physical education teacher, jumped on the assailant during the incident and was shot in the face as they struggled. She was hospitalized in fair condition.

"As far as I know, the assailant had no connection with the school," Watson said.

UI law student Dan Magel said there is one sure-fire method to stop the fighting between Israel and Palestine.

"There must be a mutual guarantee of respect between the government and the PLO (Palestinian Liberation Organization), Magel said. "Although they have their share of unwarranted violence, the PLO must recognize that Israel will exist, and Israel must recognize that the Palestinian homeland will exist. I see no other way."

"I thought before I went to Israel, Magel said. "America must play a more constructive and active role in Israeli policies. Now Israeli policy is a rights disaster that can't be fixed."

Magel feels he can speak for President Ronald Reagan.
