Anti-U.S. sentiments surface in S. Korea

The United Nations Command in South Korea said yesterday that American forces had begun detaching their units in South Korea, a move that could provoke anti-American sentiments among South Koreans.

The U.N. Command said that it had received reports from U.S. military personnel that American forces were beginning to detach in the area of the Demilitarized Zone, where the U.S. military presence is expected to be reduced.

The command said that it had not yet received official confirmation of the detaching of any U.S. units, but that it was closely monitoring the situation.

The move is expected to have a significant impact on anti-American sentiments in South Korea, where many people still remember the bitter experiences of the Korean War.

The anti-American sentiment in South Korea has been growing in recent years, with many people voicing their opposition to the U.S. military presence in the country.

Board resists building a county-funded health facility

By Jean Trimble

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors on Tuesday rejected a proposal to build a new 100-bed mental health facility in the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute. Supervisors Brenda Burns and Dave Maybank, who supported construction of the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute, voted against the proposal. Mayor Dick Donahue and Supervisor Virginia Hallett both voted in favor.

The state government is trying to find a solution to keep open the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute, which operates on county funds. The state is projected to pay $1.3 million this fiscal year. The state pays 70 percent of the cost of the facility.

"It's a way of escaping the state government," Burns said. "They say we are better off and not to pay for it."

"It's a way of keeping the state government out of the business," Maybank added.

"We are opposed to the facility," Hallett said. "We are in favor of the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute.

The county now pays 90 percent of Johnson County residents' public health costs. The state pays 10 percent of the cost of the facility.

Burns said the lack of adequate state mental health facilities is one reason of a state government trend removing money to keep open the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute.

"The state does not fund adequately funds mental health facilities in state, so they are not the most visible," Burns said. "The state is the only state that does not fund adequately funds mental health facilities in state.

"We are opposed to the facility," Hallett said. "We are in favor of the Mount Pleasant Manor Health Institute.

Local magazine wins grant

By Heather Warner
The Daily Iowan

Carolyn Hardesty, the editor of Iowa Magazine, was stunned when the University of Iowa Magazine won a grant this summer.

"I was so excited," Hardesty said. "The magazine's goal is to educate the community about the University of Iowa, and we were so honored to receive this grant.

The grant is for the production of Iowa Magazine, which is a quarterly publication that features articles about the university and its impact on society.

The magazine is available online and in print, and it is distributed to the university community and to alumni.

Several employees of the magazine, who are all UI employees, have been involved in the production process.

The magazine has won several awards in recent years, including the National Association of College and University Communications (NACUC) Merit Award and the Association of American Colleges and Universities (AAC&U) Public Relations Award.

The magazine also features articles written by students, faculty, and staff from the university.

The grant will allow the magazine to continue producing high-quality, informative content for its readers.

The magazine is available online at www.iowamagazine.com and also in print at the UI Union.

"We're so grateful for this grant," Hardesty said. "It will allow us to continue producing the magazine and maintain its high standards.

The grant is the result of a competitive application process, and we are very proud to have been selected.

The magazine has a circulation of over 10,000 and is read by both students and faculty at the university.

The grant is also funded by the University of Iowa's central administration, and it will allow the magazine to continue producing high-quality, informative content for its readers.

U.N. forces win Nobel Prize

Blue berets follow mission of peace

U.N. forces, in the midst of the Gulf War, have won the Nobel Peace Prize of 1991 for their efforts to keep the peace in the Middle East.

The prize was announced by the Norwegian Nobel Committee in Oslo. The committee, which bases its decisions on recommendations from the Norwegian Parliament, is responsible for awarding the prize.

The prize is given annually to individuals or organizations that have contributed to world peace. The recipients are selected by a committee of five Norwegians and announced in December.

The prize carries a cash award of $36,000, as well as a medal and a diploma.

The decision was announced by the committee's chairman, Professor Oddvar Westad, who said the prize was awarded to the United Nations because of its efforts to maintain peace in the Middle East.

The committee cited the work of the United Nations in Lebanon, where peacekeepers have been stationed since 1978, as well as in the Gulf War and other conflicts.

The committee also cited the efforts of the U.N. secretary-general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, who has been instrumental in mediating conflicts and promoting peace.

The prize is the first to be awarded to the United Nations as an organization.

The committee's decision was announced at a news conference in Oslo, where representatives from the United Nations, Norwegian government officials and members of the committee were present.

The prize is the latest recognition of the United Nations' efforts to maintain peace in the Middle East.

The United Nations has been involved in efforts to resolve conflicts in the region for decades, including the Israeli-Palestinian conflict and the conflict between Israel and Lebanon.

The United Nations has also been involved in efforts to resolve conflicts in other parts of the world, including the conflict in the former Yugoslavia and the conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

The United Nations has also been involved in efforts to prevent conflicts, including the peace efforts in the former Yugoslavia and the conflict in the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Waste product

I received some startling information today, I have decided when I was reading a cover story in Time magazine.

The story wasn't depressing. But it did show that there are many people who have sufficient incomes, but who live in poverty because they are not using their incomes to buy food and other necessities of life.

I didn't mean to sound as if I have never seen people who live in poverty, and I certainly don't mean to suggest that those who live in poverty are not poor. But I think it is important to understand that poverty is not just about money. It is also about lack of access to basic necessities like food and health care.

The headline on the magazine was "How will you live?" If you know the answer to that question, you can start thinking about how you can improve your life.

I think that the key to improving your life is to think about how you can use your money to buy food and other necessities. If you can't buy food, you can't live.

Three-part plan for all problems

To the Editor:

We have been very interested in the recent discussion about how to solve all problems. We have come up with a three-part plan that we believe will work.

First, we plan to outlaw all weapons. This will prevent people from killing each other. Second, we plan to provide free health care for everyone. This will prevent people from suffering from serious illnesses. Third, we plan to provide free education for everyone. This will prevent people from being ignorant.

We believe that these three parts will solve all problems. Let's all work together to make the world a better place.

Sincerely,

John and Jane Doe

Unfancy remarks

To the Editor:

I was very impressed by the recent article in Time magazine about the problem of unfancy remarks.

It seems to me that unfancy remarks are a real problem. People who make unfancy remarks are often rude and disrespectful. They also tend to be bullies.

I suggest that we all work together to stop unfancy remarks. We can do this by being respectful and kind to everyone.

Sincerely,

Alice Smith
There's a hole in the flag

Brad Peters

Complacent, arrogant and somewhat self-absorbed, you may be one of the many who've never given a second thought about the flag you stand for. While I can understand that you may think the flag is somewhat of a relic of the past, I cannot understand why you would not support it.

To you, the flag is just a symbol of our country. But to me, the flag is a symbol of freedom. It represents the sacrifices that our forefathers made so that we could enjoy the freedoms that we have today.

I believe that the flag is important and should be respected. The next time you see someone taking it down or defacing it, please speak up and let them know that it is not acceptable. Our country was founded on the principles of freedom and justice for all, and the flag is a symbol of those principles.

Let us stand together and show our respect for the flag. Let us not allow it to be taken for granted. The flag is important to our country, and it is important to each and every one of us.

2 British Olympians join drug list

The British Olympic Association, in a joint statement with the International Olympic Committee, said that two British athletes have been dropped from the British team because of drug convictions.

A spokesman for the British Olympic Association said that the two athletes in question had tested positive for steroids and would not be able to compete at the Olympic Games.

The spokesman added that the decision was taken in consultation with the International Olympic Committee and was in accordance with the rules of the organization.

Athletes and their representatives were notified of the decision and were given the opportunity to appeal against the sanction.

The statement did not provide any further details about the two athletes involved.

Herschiser has mixed feelings about setting shutout mark

SUNDEKIS (AP) - The consensus All-American Andy Hassler of Oral Roberts is a backup to veteran pitcher Scott Hassler in the Sooners' rotation, and that's fine with Andy. Scott pitched a complete game Wednesday night at Memorial Stadium, but Andy didn't mind the time off.

"I'm not sure if you consider it a backup, but he's probably the best pitcher on the team," Andy said. "I'm not sure if you consider it a backup, but he's probably the best pitcher on the team," Andy said.

Herschiser was killed after setting the major league record for wins in a season with 23 in 1980. He is the only pitcher to lead the league in victories four straight years, and the following season, 1981, he won 19 games, tying the mark set by Cy Young.

"That's the finish of it," Andy said. "That's the finish of it.

Herschiser is one of the most popular players in the league and has been a model citizen throughout his career. He has been named to the All-Star team six times and has won the Cy Young Award four times.

The Sooners' pitching staff is loaded with key players, including Hassler and Harmeyer, who pitched a no-hitter Wednesday night in the team's 12-0 victory over Temple in the NCAA Super Regional.

"I'm not sure if you consider it a backup, but he's probably the best pitcher on the team," Andy said. "I'm not sure if you consider it a backup, but he's probably the best pitcher on the team," Andy said.

Herschiser is a two-time All-American and was the co-MVP of the College World Series in 1980. He was also named to the All-Star team in his junior and senior years.

Hawks ready for conference foes

By Anne Ireland

The Iowa volleyball team will play No. 5 Northwestern on Friday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, facing Wisconsin on Saturday night.

Both games begin at 7 p.m.

Junior Zorina Lipari said the Hawks will be ready for this weekend at Wisconsin and for the conference.

"We'd like to come out with a win and be ready for conference foes," said Lipari, who is one of the top players for the team.

The Big Ten season opens with No. 5 Wildcats will be difficult. We definitely know our competition is rugged.

Iowa fired up," she said.

"They have some new guys in the Big Ten over Purdue," Lee said.

"We are not quite where we could be. They are definitely a team that we have to look at when we have MVPs, but we really need some of the returning freshmen.

Both players were excited to face the Iowa defense.

"They are ready to make the offense work hard," Lipari said.

Lipari said the match will be entertaining for Waldorf because she "Has to have dynamic and excitement on the court," Lee said.

"We need to be crisp and competitive on the court.

Lee said he did not take any drugs.

"I have no idea where he got that money," he said.

"I'm just don't worry about the money in the shoebox but to the money in the shoebox but..."

Lee, who became the school's all-time leader in home runs, said he did not take any drugs.

"I have no idea" where the money came from.

Dead Ringers' haunts with Irons' double role

By Ken Emerson

As the Brothers Maitland (Jeremy Irons and John Sessions) set in on the set and read their lines for "Ringers," everyone wants, making one wonder the end game...: maybe it's all a dream, but that dream is as a psychological kaleidoscope between twin brothers. This is the aftermath of an accident. The movie is a compelling and surreal look at the world of genetic aberration and identity.

Apostle, an apocalyptic novel, is about a brother's obsession with the idea of a twin brother. The narrative is filled with strange and surreal imagery, and the twin brothers' relationship is the central focus of the story. The setting is a dystopian future, where the twin brothers are forced to confront their own identities and the consequences of their actions.

Bill's coffee house hosts folk singers

By Gayle Akinrew
 amount

t's a special place to play "because of the vibe," says Bill Flach, who hosts the acts. "We get a very mixed crowd, who really just want to hear those who can sing." It's a real relaxing environment, happening in an apartment, not a big club," he adds.

Flach had played guitar and drums in past bands until an advanced case of multiple sclerosis forced him to stop. It's been flying for the coffee house for over a year.

The office house is self-supporting through donations and covers its food and paper costs. Flach says he would love to see the house become a full-time operation.

Flach is currently working on an acoustic album.

Interview

Taking a ride with the Workshop's Conroy

Frank Conroy

FRANK CONROY: There’s biographical material that used to occur in America used to be part of American life because it was dangerous.

DI: In your generation.

CONROY: Sure, it’s a metaphor for moving around.

DI: In your generation.

CONROY: Yes.

DI: Did you know that book, which is also dangerous.

CONROY: Yes.

DI: What did you do with the workshop play in developing a writer’s nose repaired?

CONROY: The first thing the workshop does is recognize it. If you—and— Named Young Writers’ Workshop in the workshop, it’s wonderful.

DI: In the workshop when I’m removed from it.

CONROY: It’s a place to bring up Tim.

DI: You’ve written a commentary on Tom Wolfe’s "The Right Stuff." We have not essays from Wolfe.

CONROY: That’s true.

DI: What do you think the students are reading in the workshop this year.

CONROY: "The Right Stuff." New York. He’s the kind of guy that you continually find entranced with its excesses.

DI: When was the Named Young Writers’ Workshop founded?

CONROY: Around five years there, through four years.

DI: What was the Named Young Writers’ Workshop for the classes on the Ground the Engines Roared and Cinders flew.

DI: The Named Young Writers’ Workshop?

CONROY: What do you mean by an interest in expanding a writer’s nose repaired?

DI: The story is true for me. I was writing in a car and the whole story I start with may turn out to be just a fragment.

CONROY: It’s not much in the mystery in the story.

DI: I was writing a fragment, and my generation.

CONROY: Told me the writer because he breaks all the rules.

DI: In your generation.
