Homecoming rekindles old UI traditions

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

From the old "Hawkeye gold" on the homecoming T-shirts to the Big Band dance after Saturday's football game, many traditions will be revived during homecoming week at the UI this year.

The emphasis on tradition is a crucial part of this year's homecoming week, according to Andy Lund, director of the Homecoming Council. It also revolves around the week's theme, "Looking Back, Moving Forward," he said.

"Homecoming events are for everyone who is or was involved with the University of Iowa," Lund said. "We want everyone to get involved this year — alumni, students and Iowa City and Coralville residents."

This year's homecoming also salutes Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry's 10 outstanding years at Iowa, according to Jane Burrows, co-director of media relations. Fry is pictured on the 1988 homecoming button.

More than 10,000 buttons have already been sold, and the council hopes to sell an additional 12,000, Burrows said.

"The sale of these buttons is what makes homecoming happen. Sales provide funds for the parade, the fireworks and the king and queen coronation," she said.

Annual homecoming events commence today when the 1988 homecoming king and queen coronation begins at 4:30 p.m. in the Union.

The annual faculty and staff award will also be presented at that time.

Applications for king and queen rose this year, according to Richard Paragas, co-director of special events for homecoming. Twenty-five UI female students returned queen applications and 16 male students applied for king.

The five king finalists are Daniel Budiman, Peter Kaboli, Steven Michalek, Mark Steffensen and James Walther. Queen finalists include Christy Anton, Caroline Knebel, Vicki Ramseyer, Emily Stover and Karen Vermaire.

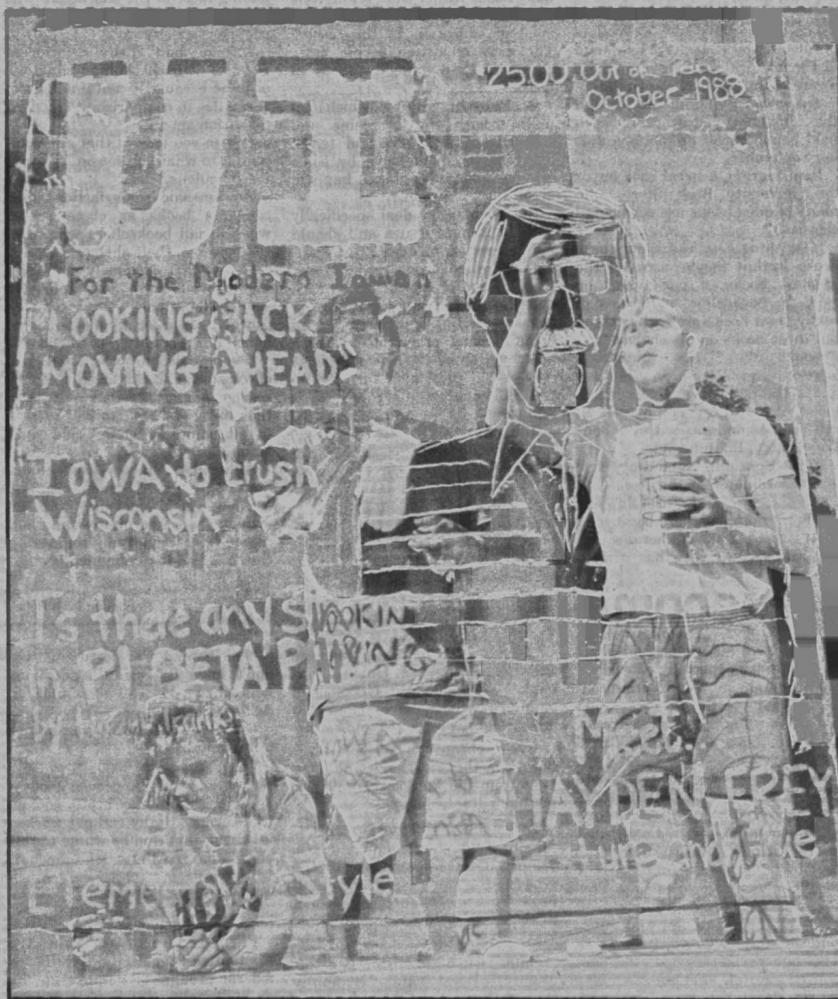

"This year the applicants weren't all Greeks," Paragas said. "They really are a diverse representation of the student body."

Tuesday's Black and Gold Spirit Night in the Downtown Pedestrian Mall will include participation by the UI pompon squad, cheerleaders, king and queen, pep band and hopefully members of the football team, according to Jill Boge, homecoming council secretary.

"We want to get everyone in a good frame of mind and bring homecoming into the public eye," Boge said. "This is a night for everyone to show their spirit by wearing black and gold and their homecoming button." Boge said she expects approximately 200 to attend the event.

Representatives from almost every UI sports squad will greet the public Thursday at the second annual sports night in the Old Capitol Center.

Discovery explorers laud lost comrades

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery's astronauts delivered a poignant salute Sunday to their fallen Challenger comrades, eulogizing them as fellow sojourners and friends, and saying "At this moment, our place in the heavens makes us feel closer to them than ever before."

Said astronaut John Lounge: "It's good to be back to where they wanted to go so badly."

As they beamed down spectacular views of the mottled blue and white Earth miles below, the Discovery astronauts spoke about the Challenger — America's last manned space venture — which exploded on liftoff 32 months ago tragically killing school teacher Christa McAuliffe and six others.

"Those on the Challenger who had flown before and seen these sights, they would know the meaning of our thoughts," said astronaut George Nelson. "Those who had gone to view them for the first time, they would know why we set forth."

Discovery is to return home from its four-day, one-hour, 65-orbit flight today, landing at Edwards Air Force Base in California at 12:37 p.m. EDT.

The shuttle will be greeted there by an expected 100,000 or more people, including Vice President George Bush who will be waiting at the foot of the ramp when the astronauts climb down. The weather looked fine for landing and tens of thousands were camped there already on Sunday.

The astronauts may be a bit warm on their 10,000-mile glide home; a cooling system problem that has plagued most of the flight may still not be working.

Gathered in the Discovery's mid deck in front of a photograph of the Challenger crew, the crew took turns reading portions of the statement they had written.

"Today, up here where the blue sky turns to black," said commander Frederick Hauck, "we can say at long last to Dick, Mike, Judy, to Ron and El, and to Christa and Greg:

"Dear friends, we have resumed the journey that we promised to continue for you. Dear friends, your loss has meant that we could confidently begin anew. Dear friends, your spirit and your dreams are still alive in our heart."

The seven who died aboard Challenger were Richard Scobee, Michael Smith, Judith Resnik, Ronald McNair, Ellison Sizuka, Christa McAuliffe and Gregory Jarvis.

In a 20-minute news conference with reporters gathered in a Mission Control auditorium, Hauck praised Discovery's performance, saying "I'm not sure that we've had a mission that has been this trouble-free with an orbiter before."

Lounge was asked what he would say to the two presidential candidates to convince them to support the space program. He answered it this way:

"This is a very important flight simply because it's the first step. I would hope that all of the enthusiasm that we've seen throughout the country for this flight is sustained for the dozens and dozens of flights we have ahead of us if we're going to make this program grow to the point that it needs to grow to get us on the path to the future."

Lethal fungus infects some Iowa corn

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

Federal agencies and eastern Iowa grain elevators have recently discovered that some of the newly harvested corn crop is poisoned with a carcinogenic fungus.

Some Johnson County grain elevators are rejecting freshly harvested corn because of the presence of aflatoxin, a cancer-causing mold called aspergillus flavus that thrives in warm temperatures.

Jim Stockman, the owner of Hills Grain and Feed Inc., Hills, Iowa, said his facility has rejected 80 percent of the newly harvested crop because the fungus was detected by ultra-violet light tests.

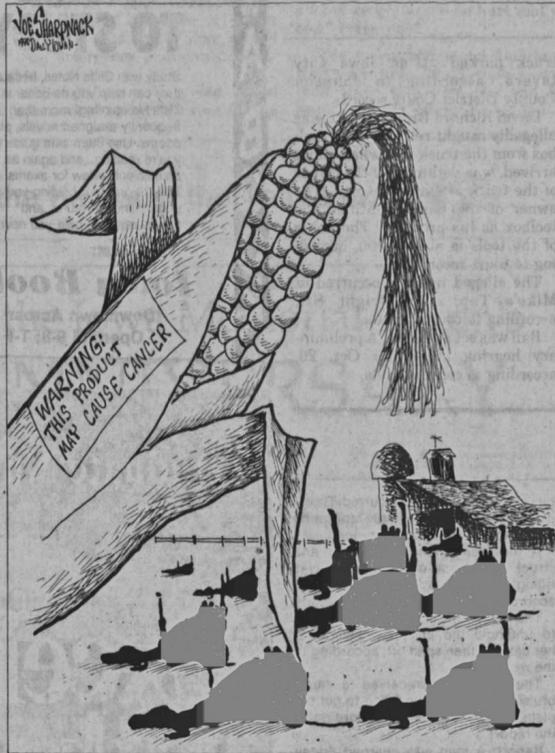

Continental Grain Co. in Muscatine has refused 30 percent of the corn marketed by farmers. A spokesman cited aflatoxin as the reason. Gringer Feed and Grain, Highway 218 South, Iowa City, also tested positive for the fungus, but would not estimate how much of the grain it had turned away.

Bob Davis, a grain grader for Continental Grain, said most Iowa grain elevators have been forced to reject at least some poisoned corn.

Federal guidelines state that food infected with levels above 20 parts per billion are unhealthy for human or dairy cow consumption. Aflatoxin levels exceeding 100 parts per billion are not recommended safe for livestock.

The extent of the outbreak won't be known until more of the fall crop is harvested. State and federal agencies are delaying action until additional data is available.

"I don't know what percentage of crops might be infected at this time," said David Werning, administrative director of the Iowa Department of Agriculture. "We're trying to clarify our position on this and our authority. "The conditions are present for quite an aflatoxin outbreak due to the drought conditions," he said. Werning said the IDA is maintaining a supervisory role in the absence of Food and Drug Administration regulations to enforce guidelines.

"Our ability to act is stymied... Right now we're monitoring the situation. We are in contact with the FDA, and we're hearing daily from grain elevators and from farmers," he said. "What we're getting is desperate calls."

"We're trying to see how serious it is, if it's serious at all," said Julia Hewgley, consumer affairs officer for the Food and Drug Administration.

"Our whole role is to eliminate hazards from the marketplace," she said. "We have to see if there's a problem."

The FDA has tested samples of the new crop, and of the six specimens, Hewgley said two registered positive for the contaminant.

"From preliminary samples, it doesn't look too bad," she said. "But if it looks like a health hazard, we're going to hop on it like a June bug."

Aflatoxin was first identified by scientists in 1960 when 100,000 turkeys died in Britain after feeding on contaminated Brazilian peanut meal.

Experts blame the summer drought and warm fall temperatures for the appearance of aflatoxin in the fall corn.

"It's a warm-temperature fungus and I think that's why we're seeing it this fall," said UI botany professor Robert Embree.

He described aflatoxin as a deadly fungus more commonly found in peanuts in the southeastern United States. The fungus is capable of causing liver cancer in humans.

"It will stimulate cancer, it will stimulate mutation," Embree said. "It's a pretty lethal fungus."

"It's a matter of how the corn plant grows," said Palmer Holden, Iowa State University extension swine specialist.

He said farms in the eastern one-third of Iowa where the drought hit hardest will see the highest occurrence of the fungus.

"The corn cob didn't mature normally — the husks didn't grow out completely on the end and left a small opening that allowed the fungus to get it," he said.

"One of the assumptions is bugs take the fungus into the ear," UI's Embree said.

With this year's crop production already cut to 70 percent of last year's yields because of the drought, farmers are now faced with the prospect of finding uses for contaminated grain.

ISU's Holden said farmers can make alcohol from contaminated grain or mix it with healthy grain to lessen the concentration of the poison and arrive at acceptable levels.

"They're sitting on their grain because the grain elevators don't want to touch it, the grain elevator can't (sell) it," said IDA's Werning. "What it's going to end up being is a financial impact on the farmer."

Some farmers are hoping the random nature of the fungus will spare their crops from contamination.

Bush fostered U.S. ties with Noriega, Turner says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former CIA chief Stansfield Turner said Sunday George Bush fostered close ties with Gen. Manuel Noriega, but he did not know whether the vice president played a role in reinstating the Panamanian ruler to the CIA payroll in the 1980s.

"It's not a coincidence that every time Bush was in the government, we were very friendly with the Noriegas and the Marcoses (former Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos) and that ilk," said Turner, who headed the agency in the Carter administration and now supports presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

Turner, in a telephone interview from New Orleans, said Noriega was taken off the CIA payroll after Turner became director in March 1977. But payments to Noriega resumed during the Reagan administration, Turner said.

Turner denied published reports that he had accused Bush of instigating a resumption of CIA payments to Noriega.

But he said that during his term at the CIA, payments to a powerful figure such as Noriega would have been brought to the attention of the president.

Noriega had been a "very small player" in Panama, Turner said, but during President Ronald Reagan's term Noriega was the de facto head of state. "You don't put a head of state on the payroll without considerable attention to it, which normally would be to the top," he said. Steve Hart, Bush spokesman, denied on Friday that the Republican presidential candidate had anything to do with putting Noriega back on the CIA payroll. Bush, as vice president, would have no formal role in approving such payments, he said.

The Reagan administration has indicted Noriega on drug trafficking charges and tried to remove him as Panama's leader.

Turner said the U.S. relationship with Noriega was "warmer and stronger" when Bush was in government than at other times. For instance, Bush met with Noriega both as CIA director and vice president. Noriega also received money from the United States during those points in Bush's career.

Turner said he never met Noriega, although he served at the CIA longer than Bush did. Bush was CIA director for a year.

He also said Bush, in the first presidential debate last week, tried to make it appear that everyone was friendly with Noriega. "That is patently untrue," he said.

Turner also claimed Bush misused the CIA in his campaign, referring to remarks in the debate about CIA briefings both presidential candidates received. Bush said both he and Dukakis were told that seven administrations were involved with Noriega.

Turner said the fact that the briefing went into great detail about Noriega's involvement with previous administrations was designed to give Bush a debating point and weaken Dukakis' criticism of Reagan administration ties to Noriega.

Turner called it a "setup" and said: "This is a real serious problem. You cannot use the CIA for domestic political purposes without running the credibility of the organization into the ground."

Turner said he supports Dukakis for president so Americans can "return to some sort of ethical center," but said he does not work for the Dukakis campaign.

Since leaving the CIA, Turner has written a book and given lectures. He sits on the boards of several corporations.

Harvard professor to lecture at UI this week

As part of the UI Department of Mathematics Distinguished Visitor Lecture Series, professor George W. Mackey of Harvard University will deliver a series of lectures today through Oct. 7, on the general topic of Harmonic Analysis.

The first talk, entitled "Number Theory and Particle Physics from the Point of View of the Theory of Unitary Group Representations," will be held today from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. in Phillips Hall, Room 100.

Districtwide parents' organization to meet

The Districtwide Parents' Organization will hold its monthly meeting on Wednesday, Oct. 5 at 11:45 a.m. at Shimek Elementary School, 1400 Grissel Place.

Superintendent of Schools David Cronin will speak on "Where the Money Comes From and Where It Goes."

For further information, contact the DPO vice president at 337-3927.

Pediatric first-aid course scheduled

A pediatric first-aid course for childcare providers is being offered by the Johnson County Chapter of the American Red Cross. The class is co-sponsored by the Family Practice Center and the UI Hospitals and Clinics Department of Pediatrics.

The course, called "Child Health and Emergency Care," prepares childcare providers — such as workers in day care and pre-school — for recognizing safety hazards, assessing injuries, administering emergency first aid and CPR, administering medication and recognizing and taking appropriate action for illnesses, communicable diseases and child abuse.

Those successfully completing the course will be certified in Red Cross CPR and first aid and will be eligible for 1.5 units of continuing education credit.

The 15 contact-hour course meets five times on Mondays and Wednesdays: Oct. 10, Oct. 12, Oct. 17, Oct. 19 and Oct. 24, from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Classes will meet in Conference Room B of the Family Practice Center in the Steindler Building on Newton Road.

The fee for the course is $25. For a brochure and registration form, contact the Johnson County Red Cross at 120 N. Dubuque St., or call 337-2119.

UI students awarded national arts fellowships

Two UI students have been awarded 1988-89 Jacob K. Javits Fellowships to pursue graduate degrees in the arts. The UI recipients are Theodore Anderson of San Diego, Calif., and Peter Ullian of Lexington, Mass.

The fellowships, funded by the U.S. Department of Education, support doctoral studies in selected fields of the arts, humanities and social sciences. The program was introduced into law by Javits, a U.S. senator, who was recognized for his dedication to education and the arts during his 24 years in the Senate.

The one-year fellowships were awarded to 150 students throughout the country on the basis of their demonstrated academic ability and their potential for making significant contributions to their field of study.

Anderson, a student in the poetry section of the Writers' Workshop, received a bachelor's degree in English and creative writing from Oberlin College in Oberlin, Ohio.

Ullian has been accepted to the Iowa Playwrights Workshop in the UI Department of Theatre Arts for the spring 1989 semester. He also received a bachelor's degree from Oberlin College in theater arts.

Banned book displays alert readers to censorship perils

By Sara Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Local librarians and booksellers are hoping book displays exhibited last month will make readers more aware of the perils of censorship.

The Iowa City Public Library and the University Book Store each held banned book promotions during September.

Paul Ingram, general book buyer for University Book Store, said many banned books are considered classics.

"One thing I noticed about these books is that they're some of the greatest books of our time," he said. "A bookseller could have a really great bookstore with nothing but these books on his shelves."

Books like "Lady Chatterley's Lover," "The Catcher in the Rye" and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" have been banned in different communities throughout the country, Ingram said.

Carol Spaziani, community services coordinator at the Iowa City Public Library, said censorship has not been a problem here because of Iowa City's history of liberalism.

"I think Iowa City has always been very supportive of having more books rather than fewer," she said. "Iowa City has the highest level of education in the nation. The more education people have, the more they value the ideas in books."

Books by Judy Blume, which deal mainly with the problems and concerns of pre-teens and teens, are considered offensive by some groups and have been banned, according to Ingram.

But such books deal specifically with legitimate issues and should not be banned, he said.

"They're about concerns kids have. Kids are concerned about sex. Kids are concerned about divorce," Ingram said. "They're concerned about getting pregnant, so these are things they should read about — and making it hard for them to get information about them is stupid."

Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" has generated controversy because of its language, which some have called racist, Ingram said.

"In Huck Finn, the word 'nigger' is used throughout the book, not necessarily because Twain was a racist, but because he was talking about a racist society," he said, adding most of the characters who use the word in the book are not protagonists anyway.

Ingram said "Lady Chatterley's Lover," which some consider obscene because it contains a lot of sex, pales in comparison to modern television shows.

"When you look at that and compare it to what you see on TV even, it's ridiculous."

Ingram said some factions that condemn books as obscene also want to jail booksellers who have the books on their shelves.

"I find that extremely menacing and horrifying," he said. "It sounds like a police state to me — especially in a society like this one, which has a tradition of freedom." "People object to books for all sorts of reasons... But even if those reasons are good, you are removing the ability of people to have access to all points of view," said Spaziani.

Although the library display could house only a small cross section of banned books, Spaziani said the display generated interest and had many library patrons requesting the complete list of banned books.

Homecoming

"This is an autograph and photo session that is specially geared for the children in the community," Lund said. "Although we didn't have a very high turnout last year, this year hopefully about 200 will show up."

"We've increased the teams and representatives that will be there and hope that this will help draw more people this year," Lund said.

Traditionally one of the highlights of homecoming week is the parade through downtown Iowa City. This year's parade begins Friday at 6:15 p.m. on a new-and-improved route, Lund said.

"Number-wise this year's (parade) will be shorter. Our objective was to cut down the time," he said. "The entries will be spaced closer together this year, and they'll follow a new route that allows us to almost double the standing area so spectators won't be so crowded."

The parade route follows Washington, Clinton, Jefferson, Dubuque and Iowa streets.

Directly following the parade are fireworks along the Union riverbank. "We'll have a lot of loud boomers with more than 20 minutes of fireworks," Lund said.

"We're encouraging people to go down to the riverbank, but the view from the Pentacrest will also be really great," he said.

The highpoint of the week is the return of the homecoming dance. The Big Band dance featuring the Woody Herman Orchestra will begin Saturday night at 8:30 p.m. in the Main Lounge at the Union. Tickets are $15, $8 for UI students.

"This is a big drawing card for alumni," Lund said. "Hopefully they took part in such a dance when they were students and want to participate in another one now that they're alums."

"A dance like this hasn't been here for years, and it's time we started it again," he said. "It won't just be a night of dancing, it will be an Iowa extravaganza."

Courts

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

An Elkhart, Iowa, man and a Des Moines woman were charged with possession of a controlled substance Friday for allegedly having cocaine in a vehicle stopped for a traffic violation on Highway 6 in Coralville, according to Johnson County District Court records.

William Acton West, 29, and Nadine Ann Martinez, 27, were charged with allegedly possessing cocaine when a plastic bag containing what tests indicated as cocaine was found in the van, according to court records.

West, the driver of the van, was also charged with allegedly driving while under suspension. At the Johnson County jail, a small glass bottle containing cocaine was also allegedly found in West's front pocket during a pre-book search, according to court records.

West and Martinez were released from custody on their own recognizance. A preliminary hearing for each of the defendants is set for Oct. 20, according to court records.

A Des Moines man was charged with third-degree theft Friday for allegedly taking a toolbox from a truck parked at an Iowa City tavern, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David Richard Browman, 29, was allegedly caught removing the toolbox from the truck and when police arrived, was detained by the owner of the truck and another man. The owner of the truck identified the toolbox as his property. The value of the tools is about $200, according to court records.

The alleged incident occurred at Mike's Tap, 122 Wright St., according to court records.

Bail was set at $1,000. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 20, according to court records.

Police

By Lisa Swegle

An armed robbery occurred Wednesday at 11:22 p.m. at Touch of Mink, 930 Orchard St., according to a release issued by Iowa City police.

Three men armed with handguns robbed the establishment of an undetermined amount of money, according to the release.

The suspects are white males, between 5 feet, 7 inches and 5 feet, 11 inches and thin, according to the release. One suspect has red hair and a beard, and another suspect has blond hair.

The incident is currently under investigation by Iowa City police, according to the release.

Accident: Five people were transported by Johnson County Ambulance to UI Hospitals and Clinics and Mercy Hospital following a two-car collision Saturday, according to police reports.

The accident occurred at Melrose Avenue and Westgate Street, according to the report. An Iowa City juvenile was charged with failure to yield while making a left turn.

Accident: A two-car accident occurred in the 200 block of East Burlington Street Saturday, according to police reports.

Approximately $3,000 damage was incurred, according to the report.

A driver attempted to pass another driver on a one-lane street, as the second car was turning right, according to the report.

Accident: An accident involving a bicyclist and motorist occurred Thursday at First Avenue and Muscatine Road, according to police reports.

A motorist attempted to turn and struck an 8-year-old girl who was riding her bike across a crosswalk, according to the report.

The motorist stopped long enough to untangle the juvenile's bike from her car and then sped off, according to the report.

The 8-year-old received a large bruise on her leg. She failed to get the plate number of the car, according to the report.

Report: A man was charged Friday after an Iowa City man reported a break-in in progress at 837 Maggard St., according to police reports.

Ronald F. Jacobs, 34, was charged with criminal trespass, according to the report.

Condom vending machines may be installed soon

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Condoms may soon be sharing equal vending space with Snickers bars and Coca-Cola in UI residence halls.

Last spring, members of the AIDS awareness committee of the Associated Residence Halls submitted a two-part proposal to the UI Committee on Infectious Diseases in favor of installing condom machines in UI residence halls.

ARH President Shawn Shaw said the driving force behind such a proposal was the need to promote sexual responsibility on campus.

"This is a time when students need to be more aware of AIDS," he said. "Some people don't realize how dangerous it really is."

Because condoms have been proven to be both an effective birth control method and barrier to the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus, many colleges have already installed vending machines which distribute the prophylactics in hopes of preventing sexual diseases.

"Initially, the committee was asked to install the machines in residence hall public bathrooms for a testing period," Shaw continued. "We want to see how high the degree of vandalism would be."

But George Droll, director of Residence Services, said vandalism is more likely to occur in public bathrooms than in a vending area.

Shaw said the ideal plan for installation, which is stated in the second part of the proposal, would be to place a condom machine in every residence hall bathroom.

"There's probably no way that could happen though because of the high cost involved," he said. "Mr. Droll thinks the most efficient thing to do is to place them in public vending areas."

Many students feel placement of the machines in a public area would inhibit embarrassed individuals from buying condoms and therefore not contribute to the AIDS awareness program.

"If it was my decision, I wouldn't put condom machines next to candy bars and pop," said UI senior Ann McCarty. "They aren't located next to cigarette machines in the bars."

UI sophomore Joe Sustersic agreed with McCarty's view.

"People would destroy the machines and abuse the condoms if they were out in the open," he said. "And there are a lot of students who wouldn't buy them because they're too shy or embarrassed."

But Shaw believes if people are too embarrassed to buy condoms they shouldn't be having sex in the first place.

"If students are going to have sex responsibly, they should plan it ahead of time," he said. "But let's face it, sometimes they just don't think. Spontaneity does occur, and the machines would be right there. Running to the drugstore isn't always an attractive option."

UI sophomore Andi Meyers said that if machines were located in the residence halls, "students wouldn't be able to make excuses for not using them."

Campus opinion concerning the installation of condom machines is varied, though, and while many students support the proposal, there are students who are opposed.

"I think the idea is a waste of money," said UI sophomore Amy Mick. "Why can't people be mature and just buy them at the drugstore? It would be more discrete than buying them in a vending machine."

UI Junior Heather Jirik is in favor of having the machines installed in the dormitories but said they should only be placed in those residence halls whose occupants are primarily upperclassmen.

"I think the immature students would abuse them," she said. "Last year I lived in Burge and some freshman guys tacked condoms all over my door. Things like that happened a lot."

All of these student opinions have been heard and will be weighed carefully within the next two weeks when the UI Infectious Diseases Committee reviews the proposal for the final time.

"We couldn't review it this summer because students weren't here," said Phillip Jones, UI dean of Student Services. "Soon, however, we'll decide what we're going to do, if anything."

If the committee approves the proposal, it will be passed to UI President Hunter Rawlings, who will cast the deciding vote.

"Ultimately, President Rawlings will have to vote in favor of the proposal before it will go into effect," said Shaw. "He's the one who is going to have to deal with both the positive and negative repercussions."

Scouts aid hospital in mock disaster drill

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

Theatrical smoke filled the locker rooms at the pool grounds in Iowa City Park during a disaster drill staged Saturday.

"I've been fumigated!" shouted a Boy Scout from the depths of the smoke-obscured locker room. "Aaaaah — I feel like I've got dust in my head now." Members of several Boy Scout troops pretended to be victims of the mock catastrophe's chemical explosion and fire.

Hospitals are required to practice handling enormous loads of severely traumatized and injured patients to prepare staff, nurses and doctors for a real disaster.

The scouts on stretchers were wheeled from the ambulance to the emergency room where nurses and doctors developed mock diagnoses and sent the patients to burn units or to other areas of hospital.

"This is real low key. The main thing is the logistics," Thomas Rydz, a surgeon at the UI Hospitals and Clinics said. Usually hospital workers stick to assigned jobs and areas within the hospital, but during a disaster the routine is disrupted.

A nurse transporting a patient from the emergency room to the burn unit didn't know exactly where to go or which elevator to take. She had been working at the hospital for eight months.

Emergency room head nurse Sharon Johnson said the drill went more smoothly this year than in the past. The only problem she

"I've been fumigated! Aaaaah — I feel like I've got dust in my head now." — one of many boy scouts who took part in a mock chemical explosion and fire at the pool grounds in Iowa City Park Saturday noticed was the slow process of transporting the patients to the hospital, which made the situation in the hospital easier and less realistic.

"Our transporters were not available as readily as they had been in the past and we'll have to look into that," Johnson said.

More ambulances and the Army Reserves would be sent to a real disaster, according to Tom Wright of the Johnson County Ambulance Service. "This disaster drill has been mostly for the hospitals," Wright said.

Rescue workers didn't rush immediately to the scene, but instead took time to analyze the situation just as they would during disaster when the cause is unknown. Paramedics and rescue workers found out which chemicals other than chlorine could have been in the fumes before approaching the victims.

If you run in before you know what you got you could be a victim yourself," said Peg Fahey of the local emergency planning committee.

The drill was supposed to be approached as a real event by the rescue and hospital workers, according to David Sealey, who organized the scenario.

Fifty Boy Scouts pretended to be severely burned, disoriented and in severe pain in order to add some realism to the drill. Each scout wore a tag describing the severity of their injuries so the paramedics would know who to load in the ambulances first.

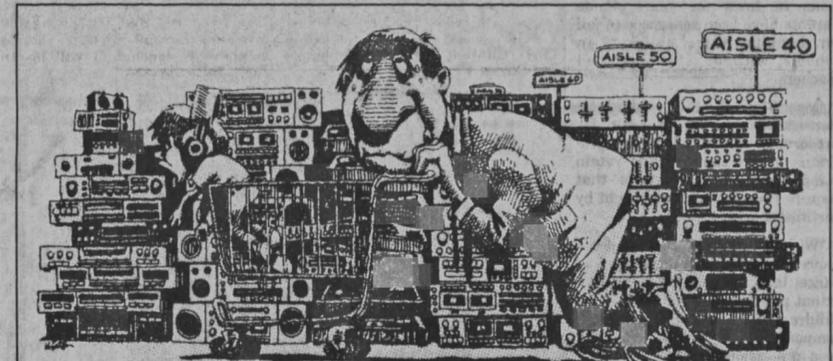

"I'm about ready to throw up," 12-year-old Michael Potter of Coralville said while pretending to cough during his ambulance ride to the UI Hospitals and Clinics. Potter's tag said he was suffering chest pains and a bloody nose.

The scouts talked about how they would feel during a real disaster while riding to the hospital in an ambulance. They related the drill to their feelings about the effects of nuclear war. "If there was something that really did blow up, then a lot of people would be hurt really bad," Potter said.

"The nuclear bombs and stuff they use in war kill a lot of people — we read about that first one and it sounded pretty scary," Potter said.

Johnson County paramedic Tom Redling practices triage on West Branch Boy Scout Chad Campbell Saturday morning in upper City Park during a disaster drill staged by the local emergency planning committee for the area hospitals and hazardous chemical explosion rescue workers.

Local paramedics confront demanding job

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

The last rider hopped in the ambulance and slammed the door when the driver revved up the motor and raced down Dubuque Street. Reflections of circling red and white lights bounced across the windows of the ambulance. The cabin jerked sideways as sirens blared a warning to nearby cars. The call turned out to be a false alarm because no victim was at the scene of the accident. It was nearly 1 a.m., and two paramedics talked about getting some sleep. "I'm not going to fight it. I'm going to sleep. I've got that disaster drill tomorrow," Mike Flynn, shift supervisor at the Johnson County Ambulance Service, said.

After eating a snack, Flynn and the other paramedics retired to sleep between calls in the bunks in their miniature bedrooms.

This was the second call of the evening. The first one involved a motorcycle accident. The patient needed to be treated for a scraped up leg and a possible broken collarbone.

The paramedics put him on a board and dressed his injuries. They made small talk to keep the atmosphere as pleasant as possible for the victim, who seemed very calm. They joked about motorcycles, and one paramedic pointed out the scratches on the cyclist's helmet, indicating it was lucky the cyclist was wearing it.

"You try to assure them that you're taking care of them and you're not trying to harm them," paramedic Scott Long said. He said trauma patients sometimes become combative and disoriented after an accident.

The ambulance paramedic's job has changed drastically during the past 20 years, according to Flynn, who has worked for the Johnson County Ambulance Service for 15 years.

"Well shoot, 15 years ago you could go out and pronounce people dead and nobody would say boo about it," Flynn said. Now doctors and police officers must determine when someone is dead, Flynn said, adding that being a paramedic is harder now because there are more responsibilities involved with their job.

Instead of simply rushing patients off to the hospital, paramedics treat many of the injuries while communicating with a doctor through an ambulance radio. Now paramedics' actions are scrutinized more closely, Flynn said.

Long said he hasn't made any serious mistakes when treating a patient. "If I err I just keep in mind that I'm doing the best I can do," he said.

Paramedics shouldn't feel like they have to save the world, he said. Long said he would not go to the scene of an emergency if there was a great possibility of being harmed by a gunshot or an abusive husband.

"Dead paramedics don't save lives," he said. "Our job is not to be a police officer. Our job is to take care of medical ailments and injury."

Seeing accident victims is never easy. "There's always that fear that you'll get into something dirty, cult," Long said.

He said answering calls on children, rape victims and suicides tend to be the most difficult.

His most vivid memory was of a 60-year-old man who shot himself in the head. Long tries not to allow his emotions to take over, however. "There's a lot of work," he said.

All of the paramedics agreed that drinking is involved with many accidents they see in Iowa City. According to Flynn, the ambulance service could be cut in half if there were no bars or parties with alcohol in Iowa City.

Lecture challenges students to bring end to racism

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Changing public perceptions was the theme of a lecture addressing institutional racism in education presented by Rev. Tyrone Crider at the Union Ballroom.

More than 50 attended the Thursday lecture given by Crider, an educator and colleague of the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Crider said racism is still an issue in the United States and added that a rainbow mentality — respect for people regardless of their race — needs to be developed.

"Racism hasn't died, it just changed residence. It's still here," he said.

He challenged the audience to identify areas where racism exists, to demonstrate and dismantle racism on the UI campus.

Earlier Thursday, the Iowa Coalition Against Racism was formed at a racism workshop held in the Minnesota Room of the Union, he said.

Crider said the anti-racism movement should be run by a generation who will be ready to face the challenge of dismantling racism.

"I want you to remember and be ready, so that when the doors swing open, be prepared, for this is a war. We need a group of people to be a great generation," he said.

Crider said research, education, negotiation, demonstration and reconciliation were the steps students should take to combat racism.

Crider challenged each person in the audience to leave a mark on the UI, to be remembered as someone who made a difference.

"We're going to keep running until Americans judge people by the content of their character rather than the color of their skin," he said.

"The constitution in America never included minorities or women, and we've been fighting for years to try to make amendments and additions," he said.

Several people in the audience commented on the speech's relevance to racism following Crider's 45-minute talk.

"He didn't say anything about institutional racism in America," Mindy Anderson, a UI junior, said.

Anderson said Crider was entertaining and talked about how to take action, but added he did not address the topic completely.

Another person in attendance said the speaker addressed racism well.

"I thought he was a very articulate speaker and you could tell he was a preacher," William Brinkman, UI junior, said.

Don Williams, a UI graduate student, said Crider explained institutional racism in a positive way.

"I don't know if he addressed it specifically, but it is a wide subject," Williams said.

Crider serves as a national board member of Push for Excellence Inc., president of the Ohio Council for the Advancement of Black Students in Education and associate dean of students at Central State University.

The lecture was co-sponsored by the UI Student Senate, UI Lecture Committee, Liberal Arts Student Association, Afro-American Cultural Center, New Wave, Chicano-Indian American Student Union and Palestine Solidarity Committee.

Educators clash over certification

DES MOINES (AP)—A teachers' union official urged Iowa legislators to continue requiring state certification of teachers, but a Kentucky educator questioned whether such certification guarantees a quality education.

The clash came Friday as a legislative study committee prepared for the 1989 session and braced for an issue that has been stirring emotions in Iowa for years. Some parents have been sentenced to jail for keeping their children in schools without state-certified teachers.

Roger Stephon, a National Education Association coordinator for preserving public education programs, urged the panel to retain compulsory education laws that require Iowa students be taught by certified teachers.

"Without a doubt, the maintenance of current compulsory attendance laws will, to the greatest extent possible, guarantee all Iowa children with the most critical component of a quality education — a professionally prepared, fully qualified teacher who has the training and background necessary to take full advantage of every learning opportunity and to employ every learning technique," Stephon said.

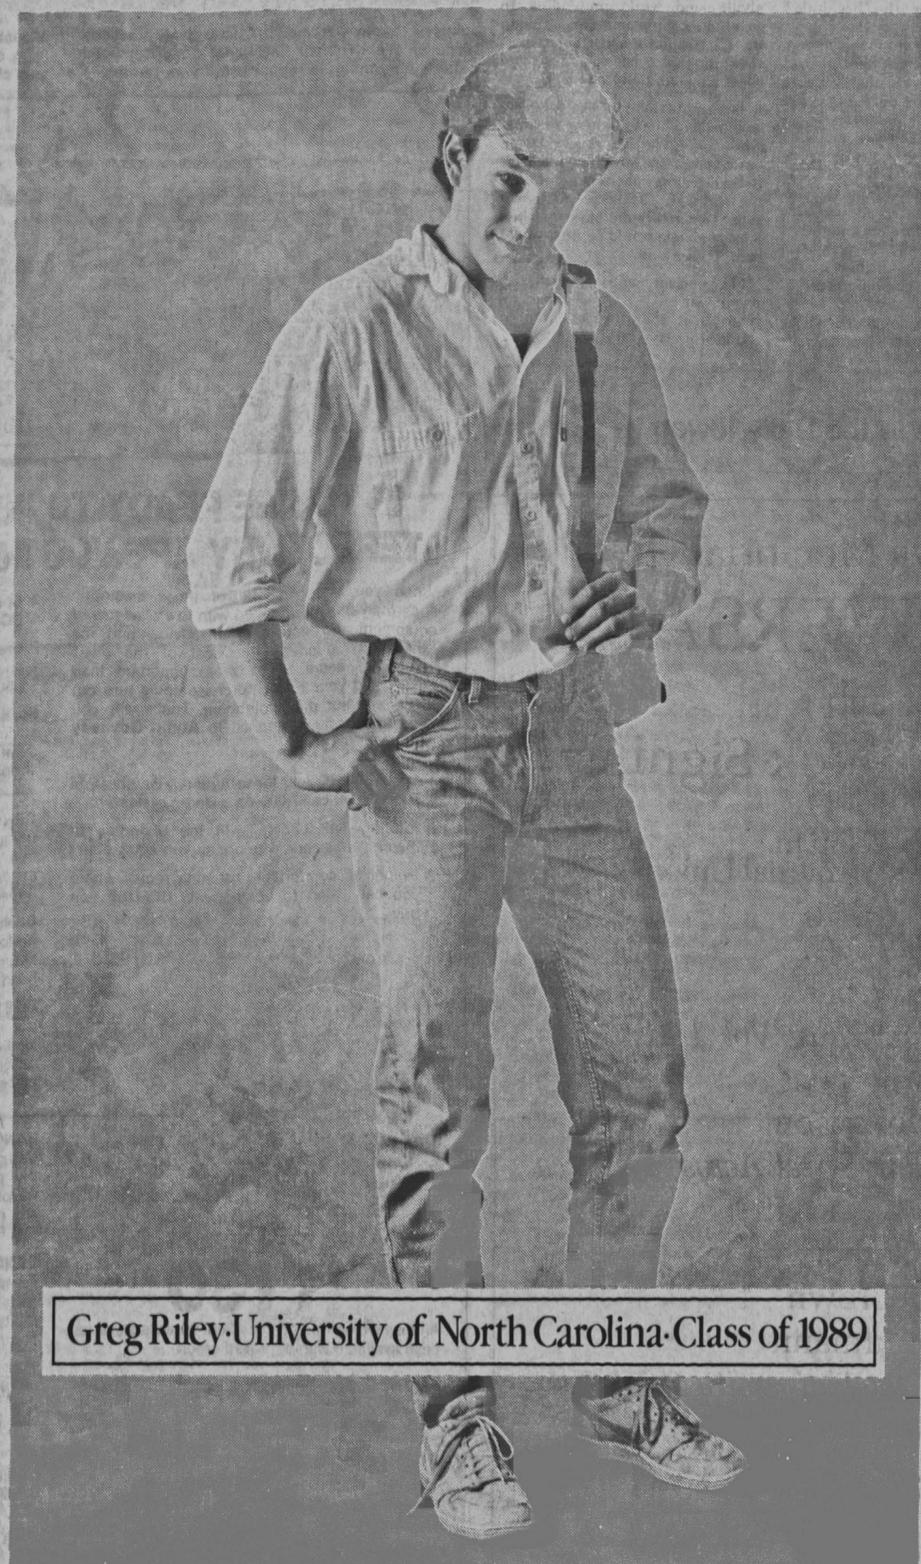

Samuel Peavy, a professor emeritus at the University of Kentucky, said the fight by parents to educate their children themselves was an effort to buck the trend toward "wholesale institutionalizing of our children's upbringing."

Peavy, a former professor who helped prepare teachers in college education programs, said certification is no guarantee of a quality education.

"I wish I could tell you those thousands of certificates contributed to children's achievement. I cannot," he said.

Peavy questioned whether states have a right to intrude on families who teach their own children. He said legislators should be more concerned with how well children learn than with who teaches them.

It wasn't Olympic-caliber soccer, and Derek Knudsen, 5, of Johnston, Iowa, finds himself waiting for action during a match between 5-year-olds Saturday.

Iowa legislators face close races this year

DES MOINES (AP) — A relative handful of voters this year has the rare opportunity to reshape Iowa's political landscape.

The election calendar conspired to put a sharp focus on ordinarily obscure House and Senate elections and to refine that focus to a tiny minority of the 125 legislative battles raging across the state.

It's a safe bet those elections will be settled on intensely personal questions, and the stakes are very big.

"There are about 15 or 20 races in this state that are the battleground," said Iowa Republican Chairman Michael Mahaffey.

"It's nip and tuck out there," said House Speaker Don Avenson, D-Oelwein.

The reasoning is simple. Most Republican and Democratic legislators running for re-election face little trouble.

Serious campaigns are being fought in only about 20 of the 100 House seats, but those elections will decide whether the Republicans gain control or the Democrats extend their majority for two more years.

Each election, those swing seats are close: Webster City Democrat Janet Adams won by fewer than 400 votes in 1986; Steamboat Rock Democrat Robert Fuller won by just over 100 votes; Democrat Dennis May of Kensett had less than a 300-vote margin; and Clinton Democrat Art Ollie scraped by with a margin of fewer than 400 votes out of nearly 9,000 cast.

Ollie is chairman of the House Education Committee and a power in the Legislature, but his political base at home is far from secure.

"We win or lose this place by 2,000 or 3,000 or 4,000 votes," said Avenson.

The Democrats' control of the House by a 58-42 margin is rooted in winning a handful of swing seats. In the past three campaigns, the Democrats got the breaks in those elections, matching GOP dollars with a strong organization.

Democrats are nervous this year because there is no statewide campaign to help turn out voters.

In 1986, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Lowell Junkins had a full-fledged get-out-the-vote operation in Clinton.

Did that operation help bring out the 400 votes Ollie needed? Or was it offset by Republican Gov. Terry Branstad's machine? No one knows for sure.

"We know that legislative races are still local races, and they can be pretty personal," Mahaffey said. "At that level you don't have the consultants."

Both sides are focusing intensely on the legislative races.

"That is one of the reasons we place so much emphasis on our voter programs," said Iowa Democratic Chairwoman Bonnie Campbell. "We really understand how competitive these races can be. This election is going to be close enough that our organizational efforts may make the difference in those races."

The stakes are very big.

For Democrats, controlling the Legislature is their major access into power in state government, and their major platform for bringing their issues to the front of public debate.

As minority leader, Avenson would command far less attention, and for a politician with gubernatorial ambitions that would be fatal.

Branstad would like nothing better than to stop sharing the limelight and negotiating publicly with Democratic legislative leaders.

The Legislature also serves as a training ground for activists with higher ambitions. It's a far more attractive training ground when the party is in control and can actually put its agenda on the table.

Minority Republicans have had trouble recruiting good candidates and keeping strong young lawmakers, in part because their major role in the Legislature is to give speeches that everyone ignores and vote against whatever the Democrats want to do.

Taking a longer view, the state is heading into a census and the resulting redrafting of legislative and congressional districts.

Iowa is certain to lose one congressional seat, and if Democrats control the Legislature, you can bet that western Iowa's 5th and 6th districts will become one giant district, converting two Republican districts into one.

It's not difficult to measure the political impact of reapportionment.

A Republican-controlled Legislature approved, under pressure, a balanced redistricting plan after the 1980 census, giving Democrats a break that most GOP leaders now regret.

In the 1982 election, Democrats seized control of the Legislature and have held it since.

Those "2,000 or 3,000 or 4,000" voters of which Avenson speaks carry a heavy burden this year.

Effects of farm chemicals concern users, study shows

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — While the deaths of 48 Minnesotans in farm accidents last year serve as a grim reminder of the dangers of farming, farmers say they're equally concerned about the effects of chemicals they spread on their fields.

They fear that over time, the chemicals common to modern farming will prove more deadly than all of the tractor rollovers and other accidents combined.

The widespread use of farm chemicals involves pressing work-safety issues for Minnesota's 94,000 farm families and tens of thousands of other state residents, according to Paul Gunderson, director of the Center for Health Statistics in the state Health Department.

"In a state like ours there is a sizable portion of the population that is either transporting farm chemicals, mixing them, grading and weighing and loading them, who are not directly involved in farm operations," Gunderson said.

The farmers' concerns are shared by doctors, environmentalists and public officials. The concern extends to the public health and the environment as the nation begins to measure the effects — on and off farms — of more than three decades of dousing fields with chemicals.

A UI study of farm safety released last week said farmers are most concerned about the effects of exposure to chemicals used in pesticides and herbicides. They also ranked stress, accidents, respiratory illness and cancer high on their list of health worries.

Also last week, a federal agency released studies showing that the poisonous pesticides farmers spray on their fields are creeping into drinking water in Minnesota and 34 other states.

The data released by the Environmental Protection Agency drew on previous studies that showed 37 percent of Minnesota's wells contain pesticides and there are low levels of contamination of the Twin Cities' water supply.

Legislation before Congress calls for safety reviews of hundreds of agricultural pesticides over the next eight years.

The Minnesota Legislature is expected to debate the issue in 1989. Environmental groups want the state to impose strict controls on farmers and other polluters. Some agribusiness groups favor a more lenient scheme under which limits would be set on levels of chemicals allowed in the water.

The debate is a dilemma for farm families who have grown to depend on chemicals to boost yields and ultimately incomes. The Iowa survey is one of the first scientific measures to show that farmers harbor a strong fear of the chemicals. Yet, many of them are economically hooked on the very substances they fear.

State Rep. Steve Dille, R-Dassel, who represents a district that consists largely of farmers, thinks the fear is widespread enough to dilute opposition among farmers to stiff legislation.

Dille also is a farmer who uses pesticides. "Consumers are worried about being exposed to some pesticides in the foods they eat or the water they drink," he said. "I would guess the farmer is exposed to more pesticides after one tank of spray than the consumer is exposed to in a lifetime."

Air pirates may be deported

NEW YORK (AP)—Three Haitian soldiers could face deportation or long prison terms for forcing their way aboard a New York-bound jetliner in Haiti in a quest for political asylum, authorities said Sunday.

The three, arrested Saturday night when American Airlines Flight 658 arrived at Kennedy International Airport, will appear Monday in U.S. District Court on air piracy charges.

The soldiers had surrendered their rifles and pistols before the airplane left the capital city of Port-au-Prince. There were no shots fired, and no one was injured during the incident.

The soldiers, identified as Edouine Noel, 24, Nicolas Mormal, 23, and Jean Charlston Beinamie, 23, were being held at the Metropolitan Correctional Center.

The key to their fate will turn on the question of whether they were victims or victimizers in Haiti, said

Arthur Helton, director of the Political Asylum Committee of the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights in New York.

"The question is: Are they worthy of refugee protection? ... Are they merely fugitives from justice or are they refugees from persecution?" Helton said Sunday.

The FBI, the U.S. Customs Service and the U.S. attorney's office were unable to provide any details Sunday about the men's motives or background.

A Port Authority detective said Saturday night that the men were concerned about a "Communist takeover" of Haiti. Although there has been turmoil in Haiti in recent weeks, it generally has not been attributed to Communists.

Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril was installed as president of Haiti on Sept. 17 following a coup by lower-ranking soldiers that led to the ouster of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy.

The coup triggered a military uprising that led to the ouster of military commanders loyal to Namphy and the Duvalier family dictatorship that preceded him.

Airport employees at the Port-au-Prince International Airport said the soldiers slipped under a wire fence that surrounds the airport.

Eric Boucicault, director of American Airlines in Haiti, said: "Three soldiers on duty entered at the end of the line of passengers with a determined air. We could not refuse their entrance. As a result of negotiation, they deposited all their arms, pistols and rifles in the pilot's cabin."

The soldiers were arrested without incident when the Airbus A300, with 224 passengers and nine crew members, arrived in New York.

"They intended no harm to anyone, there was no threat of violence," James Fox, director of the FBI's New York office, said after the plane landed. "They just said they wanted to leave Haiti for New York City."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Johnny Frank said the men could face maximum sentences of 20 years to life in prison if convicted of air piracy.

The men can expect to be tried before their application for political asylum is considered, said Helton. He said the request for asylum could be granted even if the men are convicted, assuming they can prove that they acted out of desperation.

However, if they are shown to have been perpetrators of violence in Haiti, they could be deported following their conviction, Helton said.

Another possibility is that the Haitian government would seek to extradite the men. Such a request would be considered before a trial was held in the United States.

Jews may be picked for PLO regime

KUWAIT (AP) — A newspaper Sunday quoted PLO chairman Yasir Arafat as saying he would accept the idea of including some Jews in a possible Palestinian government.

Al-Watan said Arafat made the statement to a delegation of Arab artists traveling to Baghdad, Iraq, to present the play "Oh Jerusalem." It did not say when he made the comments.

The paper said Arafat was asked by the group whether he was prepared to include pro-PLO Jewish personalities in a Palestinian provisional government and replied, "Why not?"

"The Jews are part of our people," Arafat was quoted as saying. "Europe was the one which oppressed the Jews and committed massacres of the Jews. The Palestinians did not kill the Jews, who lived among us and became ministers, physicians and intellectuals."

Yasir Arafat

The planned government is expected to be one of the top items on the agenda of the Palestine National Council, a 451-member parliament-in-exile expected to meet in mid-October in Algiers.

Bread bomb injures 3 in heart of Jerusalem

JERUSALEM (AP) — A bomb tucked inside a loaf of bread exploded Sunday in a crowded grocery store frequented by Orthodox Jews, wounding three young girls and a seminary student on a Jewish holiday, authorities said.

The bomb exploded shortly after 10 a.m. inside the store in the heart of Jerusalem's ultra-Orthodox Mea Shearim district near the walled Old City, police said.

Dozens of Orthodox Jews, wearing traditional long black coats and wide-brimmed hats, were inside the store when the explosion sent glass flying.

"Three young girls, members of one family, were wounded in the legs by shrapnel," said Jerusalem police commander Yosef Yehudai said on Israel radio. "It looked like light injuries."

A second bomb inside a loaf of bread exploded outside another grocery store in the Jewish Quarter of the Old City, Yehudai said.

He said the shopkeeper had taken the bread outside because it looked damaged. Once outside, it blew up, but no one was injured, he said.

A religious seminary student was also slightly wounded in the blast, the radio said.

"Suddenly I heard a 'boom' and it hit me, and this sister of mine and that one," one of the wounded girls told Israel radio from her Bikur Holim Hospital bed.

An unidentified witness said the booby-trapped loaf was planted by an Arab.

"We saw an Arab leaving a brown car," the man said in a radio interview. "He asked if there was milk and left two brown-colored boxes there. We all shouted 'bomb' and ran away."

Both grocery stores were packed Sunday by last-minute shoppers stocking up for the Simhat Torah festival which began at sundown.

Also in Jerusalem, Palestinians threw rocks and smashed the windows of the Israeli-owned Hapoalim Bank in the main commercial street of Arab east Jerusalem.

The nearly 10-month uprising in the occupied lands has cost 280 Palestinian lives. Six Israelis also have died in the violence. Israel captured the West Bank from Jordan and the Gaza Strip from Egypt in the 1967 Middle East War.

Police thwart guerrilla attack against U.S. Embassy in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — Guerrillas planned to attack the U.S. Embassy but were thwarted by police, who arrested two armed men while the others fled, a government official was quoted as saying Sunday.

Deputy Interior Minister Agustin Mantilla was quoted by the Lima daily El Comercio as saying that two guerrillas, armed with guns and explosives, were detained outside the heavily guarded downtown embassy about noon Saturday.

There were no reported injuries. Mantilla, head of Peru's anti-subversion effort, was quoted as saying the guerrillas planned to attack the walled, half-block complex with several accomplices who escaped, according to El Comercio, Peru's leading newspaper.

Mantilla would not identify the guerrilla group involved. The report did not provide further details and Peruvian and U.S. spokesmen were not at their offices Sunday and unavailable for comment.

U.S. Embassy spokesman Charles Loveridge told The Associated Press that embassy security staff was unaware of the incident. He said the embassy was investigating the report.

Loveridge also said U.S. government installations are considered at high risk and are heavily guarded with U.S. Marines, a privately-hired security staff and Peruvian police guards.

The embassy and its installations have been the targets of more than a dozen attacks this decade by leftist guerrillas, who accuse the United States of conducting imperialistic policies toward Peru.

Most of the violence has been bombings, which caused minor damage and no serious injuries.

In the last attack, rebels of the pro-Cuba Tupac Amaru Revolutionary Movement in June fired mortar rounds at U.S. Ambassador Alexander Watson's residence compound, damaging the roof but not injuring the envoy or his family, who were inside.

Dominican Republic says Namphy may stay for now

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic (AP) — President Joaquin Balaguer said Sunday that Haiti's exiled leader, Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, is not welcome here but can stay until another nation takes him because, "I can't throw him into the sea."

Namphy left the luxurious Dominican Concorde Hotel early Sunday where he had been since being ousted in last month's military coup. Namphy, his wife Gracielle, and daughter Melissa, had not left their rooms since arriving Sept. 17.

Dominican police officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said Namphy was transferred to the home of a Haitian businessman who moved to this capital after Haitian dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled to France in 1986.

Owners of the Dominican Concorde had urged authorities to move Namphy out of the hotel because they said heavy security measures and dozens of journalists jamming the lobby had hurt business.

U.S. warships leave Gulf, enter Suez Canal

SUEZ, Egypt — Five U.S. warships entered the Suez Canal on Sunday after ending their duty in the Persian Gulf, a canal official said.

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the five vessels as the frigates Halyburton, Robert G. Bradley, Fahrian and Nicholas and the destroyer John Hancock.

The five ships entered the canal's southern end at Suez early Sunday and were expected to leave the canal and enter the Mediterranean by Sunday night. The movement of the ships, which have been replaced by other American vessels in the Persian Gulf, was part of a planned rotation, according to sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Hungary authorizes sale of sex video

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Communist Hungary has authorized the sale of 4,000 copies of its first government-approved video sex cassette, the newspaper Vasarnapi Hiera said Sunday.

The newspaper said the "teaching sex" video cassette will be available this week at a cost of 1,950 forints, or $40.

Mihaly Szegoe, head of the "Sex ABC" company that produced the video, was quoted by the newspaper as saying the cassette shows "everything."

"Two couples will be performing, one which knew each other before and another which only met when protagonists were picked up for the shooting," Vasarnapi Hiera quoted Szegoe as saying.

"There is also a sequence in which a doctor and a psychologist speak about the art of lovemaking, providing information on how to avoid pregnancy, venereal diseases and AIDS," Szegoe said.

Permission to issue the video was granted by the ministry of culture following consultations with two national health agencies, Szegoe said.

Veterinarians destroy stranded killer whales

AUGUSTA, Australia — Sixteen killer whales stranded on a remote beach on the south coast of west Australia were destroyed Sunday after veterinarians decided they would not survive a rescue attempt.

The whales were spotted off the coast Sunday morning, the day after volunteers saved 32 whales that had been beached nearby.

The whales were shot after veterinarians, flown in by helicopter, examined them.

The other 32 whales became stranded Thursday. After a two-day operation involving hundreds of volunteers, the whales were returned to the water Saturday evening.

A helicopter sent early Sunday to check that they had not stranded themselves again spotted the second group beached high on a stretch of coast inaccessible to vehicles.

Wildlife officers believe both groups may have been part of a much larger pod forced by heavy storms last week to shallow water, where their navigational systems may have become confused.

Dr. Syd Shea, executive director of the West Australian Department of Conservation and Land Management, said it was decided for humanitarian reasons to have the whales killed.

"They were in pitiful condition," said Dave Mell, a department wildlife officer. "A lot were half buried in the sand, wind-blasted and with blistered skins."

Philadelphia private shelters evict homeless

PHILADELPHIA — About 20 private shelters evicted at least 1,000 homeless people when contract negotiations with the city ended without an agreement, officials said Sunday.

Jane Malone, director of homeless programs for the city's Department of Human Services, said all those evicted Saturday had been relocated by Sunday afternoon. She said the city would sever ties with the shelter operators who evicted the men, women and children.

"People had a place to sleep and dinner last night," Malone said. "Whatever happens here (in the negotiations), no one will go without a place to sleep or something to eat."

The city contracts with private shelter operators to provide services for the homeless. Negotiations ended late Friday without a new contract.

Operators of about 20 shelters had told their residents Friday that they would have to leave the next morning.

Broken coupling gives coaster riders a jolt

BLOOMSBURG, Pa. — A broken coupling on a roller coaster made the ride screech to a halt in the middle of a loop and trapped 20 people upside down for more than an hour, less than a week after it passed an inspection, an official said Sunday.

"They were up there upside-down, waving their arms, just hanging there," said a witness, Vince Vangroski of Hazleton. "They started to panic a little bit. Being upside-down for that period of time is scary."

Officials originally said 45 people were trapped but revised the figure to 20.

The Super Loops ride had been passed by state inspectors Tuesday, after a worn-out wheel discovered by the ride owner's own inspectors was replaced, said Neil Cashman, director of the state's Bureau of Amusement Rides.

Reagan to aid Contras under new legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration expects to take advantage of a minor change in the new humanitarian aid package for the Contra rebels to institute a series of non-military training programs designed to make the insurgents more self-sufficient.

The aid program which expired last Friday said the administration could use the $17.7 million package "only" for food, clothing, medical services and shelter.

The new $27 million six-month package signed into law by President Ronald Reagan Saturday calls for assistance in the same four areas but the word "only" has been deleted, permitting the administration greater flexibility in how the money is spent.

In signing the $14.3 billion foreign aid bill, Reagan criticized what he said was a minimal amount of humanitarian aid for the Contras.

U.S. officials, insisting on anonymity, said they envision U.S.-sponsored "skills training" in areas ranging from radio maintenance to record keeping, human rights and health care.

The officials said such programs should boost the morale of the thousands of rebels who are camped along the Honduran-Nicaraguan border with little to keep them occupied.

Many of the rebels flocked to these camps from inside Nicaragua over the past six months to take advantage of the assistance programs being carried out in the border area by the Agency for International Development.

No deliveries were made inside Nicaragua because agreement could not be reached with the Sandinista government on an acceptable delivery system.

The officials said they expect opposition to the proposed training programs from members of Congress hostile to the Contras who don't want them to survive as a viable organization.

The prospects for a renewal of military aid for the rebels are not good. The aid package, initially approved by the Senate in August, authorized the release of $16.5 million in stockpiled military equipment under certain conditions.

But the funds would require congressional approval before adjournment of the current session, and there is only about a week left before members go home until the next session starts in January.

There has been no attempt by the administration to trigger a vote on release of the funds. Both the Republican and Democratic campaigns for president seem willing to ignore the Contra aid issue, sensing there is little political profit in raising it.

Intro. to The Short Story

When Carla told me that my date was a little short, I thought she was talking dollars and cents, not feet and inches. So there I was at the door, in my spiked heels, staring at the top of my date's head.

All I could think was, how do I get myself out of this? I could imagine how my legs would ache if I had to walk around with my knees bent all evening. So to stall for time, while figuring out how to fake malaria, I made us some Double Dutch Chocolate.

When I brought it into the living room, I discovered that Gary was a chocolate lover too. Ahh, a man after my own heart. Okay, I decided I'd give him a chance. So we sat down and saw each other face-to-face for the first time. He had a nice smile.

After some small talk—I mean conversation—I discovered that we both love Updike, hate the winter weather, and both have miniature schnauzers. So, we made a date to introduce Shadow and Schatzi next week.

Quayle prepares for debate, intends to 'just be myself'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican Dan Quayle says he views this week's vice-presidential debate with Lloyd Bentsen as "a golden opportunity for me to just be myself" and to focus on his real opponent, Democratic nominee Michael Dukakis.

Dan Quayle

Lloyd Bentsen

The Indiana senator said in a weekend interview with The Associated Press that he's not worried about making any of his celebrated gaffes during the nationally televised debate at Omaha, Neb., on Wednesday, although "there's always that possibility."

Sounding confident about the confrontation with his Democratic counterpart, Quayle said: "I will be prepared. I'll be ready."

The GOP vice-presidential nominee said he will target his attacks on Dukakis rather than Bentsen, the Texas senator whose views Quayle said are more in tune with Republicans than Democrats.

The opponent for me is Michael Dukakis," Quayle said. "He's the one that's running for president. He's the one that if he would get in, I think it'd be a very difficult time for this country. . . . My target and my discussion and my focus that evening will be on the governor from Massachusetts."

Quayle and Bentsen are spending the next two days making final preparations for their debate.

On Wednesday night, Quayle will field the first question from the panel of journalists. He admitted he is somewhat nervous but said "the butterflies will be gone when I get out there."

Quayle is most comfortable speaking extemporaneously with the help of a few note cards. "Public speaking is very easy," he said.

Quayle's campaign as Bush's running mate has been dogged by intense media scrutiny into his military service, academic record and personal life, and he occasionally has responded with highly publicized misstatements.

"When you make as many speeches and you talk as much as I do and you get away from the text, it's always a possibility to get a few words tangled here and there, but it's a very small number of mis-cues," he said.

Campaign strategists have said that because Quayle has been portrayed as a lightweight candidate, anything short of a major blunder during the debate will allow him to surpass the low expectations for his performance.

His aides say they have advised Quayle, 41, to tone down his boyish exuberance so he will appear dignified and mature beside the 67-year-old Bentsen. Quayle has been coached to speak more slowly and curb his hand gestures during the debate.

VP debate won't sway voters, experts say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats who hope Sen. Lloyd Bentsen will help the ticket win his home state of Texas and perhaps the presidential election could do well to regard the fate of Henry Gassaway Davis.

In case anyone doesn't remember, Davis was Democrat Alton Parker's running mate when Parker ran for president against Republican Teddy Roosevelt in 1904.

The voters chose between Roosevelt and Parker, and their choice was Roosevelt by a 3-2 margin.

Experts concede that the vice-presidential debate in Omaha, Neb., on Wednesday between Bentsen and Republican Dan Quayle may make a difference, but they say the voters' final decision will come down to a choice between the top of the tickets, Democrat Michael Dukakis and Vice President George Bush.

"Unless Quayle is absolutely destroyed in the debate with Bentsen, I don't think it will hurt Bush," said Leo Ribuffo, a specialist in political history at George Washington University in Washington.

"People will be looking for Quayle to blow it," said Samuel Kernell, professor of political science at the University of California at San Diego. "If he can get through the debate in a competent fashion where he looks unexceptional, it will be a real success for him."

Eddie Mahe Jr., a Republican political consultant, said, "I think it is reasonable to suggest that George Bush would have won Indiana (Quayle's home state) without Mr. Quayle, and with Mr. Bentsen, Mike Dukakis is still not going to carry Texas. So you wash that out."

"I think the odds are that Quayle will have little or no effect on the ultimate choice," said Thomas Mann, program director for governmental studies at the Brookings Institution here.

Elsbeth Rostow, a political scholar at the Lyndon Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas in Austin, said Bush's choice of Quayle "doesn't seem to have too much effect on the voters, at least so far."

Economists postpone predicted recession until 1990s

There will not be a recession in 1989 and probably not in 1990, according to economists for top U.S. corporations. These economists found themselves to be more optimistic about the coming year than they were three months ago. This does not mean everything is rosy. Even though these economists are not predicting a recession in the next year, they are looking for slow growth and a possible recession after 1990. Both short- and long-term interest rates are expected to move higher and won't start to decline until mid-1989. As a result, bonds are continuing in their bear market. Nervousness abounds in the equity markets. Stocks are finding any number of reasons to move one way or another. Events contributing to this volatility have ranged from concern over the president's health to revised GNP numbers, unemployment figures and technical market analyses. We have improving foreign trade numbers, oil and gold prices are down. Inflation fears have subsided somewhat. The dollar and bonds have made some gains and psychological sentiment among investment advisers is even favored to the bullish side. Any commitment to a rally, however, seems to be lacking. The included graph will show that the market has been moving primarily sideways since the October 1987 crash, although there was a nice move upside last week. This came primarily from technical indicators. Twenty-one hundred seems to be a resistance level for the Dow, but we surpassed that level on Thursday, Sept. 29. So what should you do? If interest rates are expected to increase, bond prices will lose value. If you are looking for exposure to stocks there is one simple rule: Buy quality. This means look for proven earnings growth, attractive price-earnings ratio, financially stable companies and companies without heavy debt burdens. Now is not the time to speculate. Dean Jarnow is president of DJIA Financial Services, located at 513 Kirkwood Ave., Iowa City.

UAW, John Deere negotiations avert strike in Waterloo

WATERLOO (AP) — Union leaders say they need to look back only two years to discover why Deere & Co. and the United Auto Workers reached tentative agreement on a new labor contract this weekend to avert a companywide walkout. "Definitely there was a concerted effort on both sides to settle, instead of confrontation, have cooperation," said Jim Stewart, president of UAW Local 838 in Waterloo and a member of the union negotiating team. "Quite honestly, no one wanted to go through the 163-day strike, and the economy's better right now." He was referring to the 5½ month labor dispute in 1986-87, the longest in Deere history. A full house was on hand for an all-night vigil at UAW headquarters in Waterloo on Friday night and early Saturday, waiting past the midnight strike deadline until tentative agreement was announced at about 5 a.m. Saturday. With 5,377 workers at Deere plants in Waterloo, the northeast Iowa community is the largest union stronghold in the 13,400-employee company. "I think everybody's glad to hear we reached a tentative agreement," said Jerry Niedert, executive vice president for Local 838. If the union is able to reach a decent agreement without taking its membership on strike, "then we've accomplished a hell of a lot," Niedert said.

Deere spokesmen Bob Combs and Chuck Hess, co-chairmen of the UAW's national negotiating team, were both hesitant to bring up the 1986-87 strike and lockout at Deere. They, instead, emphasized the cooperation and positive attitude that led to a tentative agreement this weekend. The contract will be submitted to the union membership for a ratification vote as soon as possible, Hess said. So far, details have not been disclosed. Major issues for the union included job security, pensions and health and safety, union officials said. Combs declined to name a specific issue or issues, saying the company was interested in "a comprehensive proposal" that "did meet the needs of both parties." "Our business is very cyclical and, very simply, I think we strive with the UAW to reach a balance that meets the needs of both parties," Combs said. Asked to compare the tenor of negotiations now compared with two years ago, Combs said, "The results speak for themselves. I don't think that anybody was really looking back. We were focusing on the job at hand." Hess said, "I don't think it was concession bargaining. I think it was a different year, and I think everybody won. We'll go ahead, and the company will go ahead, and we're probably both better off."

Jones loses more than gold medal

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Pain burns, hate consumes and Roy Jones Jr. is carrying around a belly full of fire.

He is 19 and a year out of high school — old enough to know life isn't fair, still rash enough to want to strike back.

Three boxing judges shamelessly stole the biggest piece of Roy Jones' ambition, and so he talks now about throwing the rest away.

"It was my father's dream. But it didn't happen. . . I think that's the end of the line for boxing."

That would be the greater shame. Jones, arguably the best member of a U.S. boxing contingent that finished with three golds, three silvers and the same number of bronzes. And he made the case stronger Saturday.

Jones battered Park repeatedly with left hooks and right leads through all nine minutes. Park took a standing 8-count with 48 seconds left in the second round and clearly was hurt several times by combinations in the third.

Koreans had talked of retribution since they walked away from Los Angeles four years ago, smarting after being on the wrong end of many of the same bad decisions that have been doled out in the Chamshil Students Gymnasium these past two weeks.

That feeling manifested itself in one near-riot and a bizarre Olympic-record 67-minute sit-in by losing bantamweight Byun Jong-II, in a wave of anti-American sentiment throughout the bouts, and most devastatingly — and unjustly — on the cards of the judges.

Immediately after the decision was announced, Jones was lifted off the canvas by Park amid jeers and boos.

"It's not the guy's fault," said Jones. "He said he's sorry and he lost the fight, but the judges gave it to him."

Kim Seung-youn, president of the Korean Amateur Boxing Federation and commissioner of the boxing venue, said he was resigning.

Kim said the attack by Korean boxing officials on New Zealand referee Keith Walker in the aftermath of the Byun decision "left a blot on the efforts of seven years of the people of Korea."

In his next breath, however, Kim called the decision against Jones "very, very fair. There is no scandal today. It cannot happen. I do not understand," he added, "why foreigners have such prejudice against Korea."

U.S. boxing Coach Ken Adams thinks he does. He claims to have seen a Korean handing out what appeared to be pieces of gold to two officials, at least one of whom judged the Jones-Park affair.

While there is some precedent for such things, a spokesman for the Korean federation dismissed Adams' claim by saying what Adams saw were keychains being given to all Olympic boxing officials.

Korean viewers called television station SBS Saturday to express "embarrassment" over the decision.

And Anwar Chowdhry of Pakistan, president of the International Amateur Boxing Association, said he believed the Jones decision was unfair.

Chowdhry then announced — this seems almost too incredible — that Jones was selected by the association to receive the Val Barker Award, given to the outstanding boxer at the Olympics.

If none of that makes sense, imagine how bewildered Roy Jones must feel.

"That's nice," he said after learning of the award. "But if I'm the best boxer, how come I lost?" James Litke is an Associated Press sportswriter.

Hawks, Spartans struggle to 10-10 tie

Defense dominates on rainy day

By Brent Woods
 The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — The Iowa Hawkeyes and the Michigan State Spartans began Saturday's Big Ten opener with the all-time series deadlocked at 12-12-1.

After 60 minutes of football played mostly in pouring rain, tied was how they stayed.

With the game knotted at 10-10 and seven seconds remaining, Iowa placekicker Jeff Skillet had a chance to lift the Hawkeyes to a dramatic victory. But his 51-yard attempt floated slightly wide in the cold drizzle at Spartan Stadium.

"Personally, I did (think the kick was good)," Skillet said. "Hopefully, if it would have been in Iowa City, it would have been good."

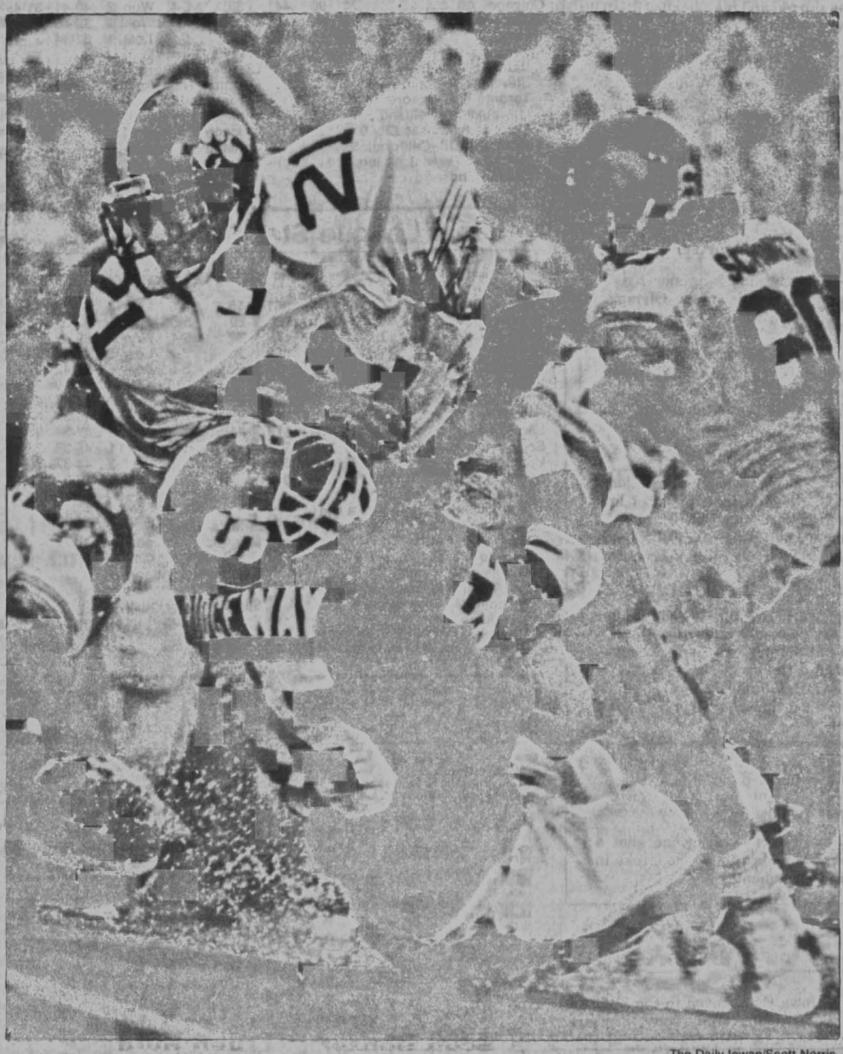

The tie left the Spartans winless on the season at 0-3-1, while Iowa moved to 2-2-1.

Skillet was not the only kicker with a chance to put the game away. Nine seconds before Skillet missed his, Michigan State sophomore John Langeloh pushed his 45-yard kick wide right. Both kicks could have probably been called either way.

"Everybody on our football team thought it (Skillet's kick) went through," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. "It certainly looked like it. But we didn't get it, so I don't guess it did."

On the day, Skillet and Langeloh both suffered through one-of-four outings in a contest plagued by nearly constant rain.

Iowa got its last chance after quarterback Chuck Hartlieb

Iowa running back Tony Stewart and Michigan State defensive tackle Jason Ridgeway collide during a downpour Saturday in East Lansing, Mich. The game ended in a 10-10 tie.

Skillet, Langeloh miss chances

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

EAST LANSING, Mich. — John Langeloh stepped up with 22 seconds remaining in the 26th meeting between Iowa and Michigan State at Spartan Stadium Saturday to kick the football.

On his shoulders was the opportunity to give George Perles' club its first taste of victory in four outings.

The pouring rain subsided, and 76,348 fans watched as the kick that could have broken a 10-10 tie fluttered precariously over the right upright, just shy of the mark.

Iowa took over.

Chuck Hartlieb dropped back on the Iowa 28 and uncorked a 38-yard pass to Travis Watkins that put the Hawkeyes on the Spartan 34.

With seven seconds on the clock, Jeff Skillet had his chance.

The tee was 51 yards from the crossbar as the redshirt freshman booted the football. The result was the same as the Michigan State effort only moments before.

Wide right — nothing decided.

"I couldn't have asked for a better hit on the ball," Skillet said. "I wish it would have hit the goalpost so there wouldn't be any doubt in anyone's mind (if it was good or not)."

The placekicking woes spelled out the game for both sides. Skillet and Langeloh had identical days, one-for-four, including the potential gamewinners.

Perles thought both kicks were too close to call.

"The field goal we tried was a good, solid kick, but it missed by a few inches," he said. "I have great compassion for John Langeloh. It's a game of mistakes. Theirs' (Skillet's kick) didn't miss by much either."

Seoul Olympics close; U.S. takes 3rd in medal count

SEOUL, South Korea — A 1,000-year-old bell rang out, symbolizing in Korean legend the sorrow of parting, and it was on that note that America departed the Seoul Olympics.

The ring, for American boxer Roy Jones, meant frustration, sadness and maybe the end of his boxing career, robbed by almost all accounts of a gold medal when he lost a close decision to a Korean.

On the last day of the Games Sunday, light heavyweight Andrew Maynard won America's final Olympic gold medal with a unanimous decision over a Soviet boxer, and the U.S. fighters had three golds, three silvers and two bronzes.

All were tarnished because of what happened to Jones.

"To see all that taken away from him because of a hometown favorite, I can't feel happy now," Maynard said. "My blessings go out to that young man there."

The U.S. volleyball team beat the Soviet Union 13-15, 15-10, 15-4, 15-8 to defend its Olympic championship, and that was some consolation for America's loss to the Soviets in their first Olympic basketball game in 16 years.

The Seoul Olympics, the most grandiose of all time, opened to a theme of opposing forces coming together in peace and harmony. Not since 1976 in Montreal had the United States and Soviet Union met in an Olympics, and the theme seemed appropriate at the time.

Even more appropriate, however, was the closing ceremony theme.

On the one hand, the ancient Emille bell, a 72-ton national trea-

Chicago hands Bills first loss of season

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim McMahon and Dennis Gentry provided the offense Sunday while Chicago's defense shut down Buffalo, handing the Bills their first loss of the NFL season, 24-3.

McMahon completed 20 of 27 passes for 260 yards and two touchdowns, and Gentry raced 58 yards — the longest run of his career — on a reverse for another score.

Buffalo quarterback Jim Kelly completed 20 of 37 for 274 yards but was sacked six times for losses of 56 yards. The Bills, who lost 24 yards on an attempted sweep, were held to a net of zero yards rushing. They attempted only two running plays in the second half.

McMahon set up the Bears' first touchdown when he ran 16 yards on a broken play, then threw a four-yard scoring pass to Emery Moorehead.

National Football League

Giants 24, Redskins 23

WASHINGTON — Odessa Turner caught eight passes for 103 yards and a touchdown and New York held off a late rally by Washington. Washington, 2-3, missed a chance to take the lead when rookie kicker Chip Lohmiller missed a 36-yard field goal attempt with 2:54 left.

Iowa junior forward Cherie Freddie, far right, drives at Kinnick Stadium. The Wildcats scored on a past two Northwestern Wildcat defenders Saturday rebound from a missed penalty shot to win 1-0.

Wildcats win top 10 matchup

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

The sixth-ranked Iowa field hockey squad hosted rival Northwestern Saturday in its Big Ten opener with aspirations of an 8-3 season mark.

The Hawkeyes are now 7-4. The fifth-ranked Wildcats came to town and did exactly what a No. 5 team is supposed to do against a No. 6 — win a close game 1-0.

The ratings were indicative of the competitiveness between the two clubs. The first 35-minute half ended scoreless with the ball being blasted from one end of the field to the other with defense dictating the action.

The second half mirrored the first, lacking much offense from either club. Northwestern fired a penalty shot with 13 minutes left in the game that ricocheted off goaltender Andrea Wieland and was put in by Northwestern's Sue Novack for the only score of the contest.

"We were just waiting for the ball," Iowa junior forward Erica

Field Hockey

Richards said. "We weren't going to it. We didn't play aggressive at all."

"Too many people were playing one-on-one. They (Northwestern) just put their sticks in there and got the ball from us."

Co-captain Eileen Trendler agreed.

"It wasn't a team effort," she said. "There was just too much individual play."

The Hawkeyes continued to pile up better statistics than the teams that have beaten them.

Iowa had 22 shots on goal, to nine for the Wildcats. The Hawkeyes had four corner opportunities, while Northwestern converted one of its two corners for the lone goal.

Delaware, Iowa recorded better numbers than the competition but came up short offensively.

Interim Coach Janet Ryan will hand over her responsibilities to Coach Beth Beglin, who returns this Wednesday from the Olympics. Also returning with the U.S. field hockey captain is Iowa assistant Michele Madison, who was a manager with the Seoul squad.

The Hawkeyes will travel to East Lansing, Mich., where they will face the Spartans on grass in Beglin's first game since she coached the season opener against Ohio University at Kinnick Stadium on Sept. 2.

Iowa, which is accustomed to the artificial turf surface of Kinnick Stadium, has played on grass twice this season, in a loss to Delaware and a win over West Chester.

"We have to hit the ball on the space," Richards said. "The forwards will have to be really aggressive and run onto the ball."

"We have to work real hard and come back strong. I think we can do that."

Green arrested after car accident

NEW YORK (AP) — Boxer Mitch Green was arrested early Sunday and charged with driving while impaired, his third arrest in 11 days, after Housing Authority police said they found him in a car that had crashed into a parked vehicle in Queens.

The boxer was charged with driving while impaired and driving without a license, according to Housing Police Sgt. Thomas Grippo. His license has been suspended 54 times.

At 11:40 p.m., two Housing Authority police officers came upon Green in a Lincoln Continental that had crashed into an unoccupied, parked car at Guy R. Brewer Boulevard and 111th Avenue, said Capt. Moe Leon of the housing police.

Officers said Green's speech was slurred and they smelled alcohol on his breath, Leon said. He was taken to the 112th Precinct, where he refused to answer any questions, he said.

Green, 31, was arrested Sept. 24 and charged with third-degree assault after 32-year-old Gadson Ballaries — who has a child by Green — claimed he struck her in her Harlem apartment.

Green also had been arrested three days earlier on charges of disorderly conduct after police said they found him "ranting and raving" and "acting irrationally" on the corner of 125th Street and Park Avenue in Manhattan.

In the past, Green also has been charged with driving with a suspended license and criminal possession of a controlled substance.

East German named Olympic MVP

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — East German swimmer Kristin Otto, first woman ever to win six gold medals in one Olympics, received a gold crown Monday as most valuable player of the Seoul Games.

The Paek Sang crown, made of 20-karat gold and designed after the headgear of ancient Korean warriors, cost $11,000, its donors said.

The award, presented by the Korean newspapers Hankook Ilbo, Korea Times and Daily Sports, takes its name from the pen name of the late Chang Key-young, a member of the Korean Olympic Committee and founder of the three newspapers.

Although this was not an official award of the International Olympic Committee, the winner was chosen by a panel of four IOC members — Kim Un-yong of Korea, Anita DeFrantz of the United States, Pal Schmitt of Hungary and Jan Staubo of Norway — and Chun Byung-kyu, chairman of the Paek Sang Foundation.

Frost wins playoff for Southern Open

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — South African David Frost, a nine-time runner-up in four years on the PGA Tour, earned his first victory Sunday by knocking in a five-foot birdie putt on the first playoff hole to capture the $400,000 Southern Open.

Frost caught Bob Tway with a six-foot birdie putt on the final hole of regulation play, then won the tournament when he birdied and Tway two-putted from 10 feet.

The victory was the first in three career playoffs for Frost. Both players shot final-round 67s to pass third-round leader Dave Barr and ended regulation play at 10-under-par 280.

Guadagnino takes San Jose title

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Kathy Baker Guadagnino shot a 5-under-par 67 on Sunday to beat Cathy Marino by one stroke in the $300,000 San Jose Classic golf tournament.

Illini beat Buckeyes with 21 fourth-quarter points

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Howard Griffith rushed for two touchdowns and Patrick Donnelly recovered a fumbled punt snap in the end zone and Illinois, riding a 21-point fourth quarter, beat Ohio State 31-12 in Big Ten football on Saturday.

Illinois, 2-2 overall and 1-0 in the league, went ahead 17-6 on the first play of the fourth quarter on a 5-yard run by Griffith, capping a 47-yard drive after an Ohio State fumble.

Ohio State stalled at its 40 and Jeff Bohannon came in to punt. The snap went through his hands and, as Bohannon chased the ball, he tried to kick it through the end zone. But Donnelly recovered the ball in the end zone for a 24-6

Big Ten Football

Illinois lead with 12:21 left.

After Ohio State scored on a 13-yard pass from Greg Frey to Jeff Graham, Illinois scored again on an 11-yard run by Griffith.

The victory was the first for Illinois at Ohio Stadium since a 17-13 triumph in 1967, which also was the last year that Ohio State had dropped its Big Ten opener. The Buckeyes are 2-2 overall.

Illinois took a 10-3 halftime lead on a 24-yard pass from Jeff George to Steve Williams and a 41-yard field goal by Doug Higgins.

Jeff O'Morrow, who kicked a 45-yard field goal in the first half, added a 30-yarder in the third quarter to pull the Buckeyes within 10-6.

Ohio State, playing without leading rusher Carlos Snow, who is out with a knee injury, managed only 38 yards rushing.

Michigan 62, Wisconsin 14

MADISON, Wis. — Tony Boles rushed for three touchdowns and Michael Taylor passed for one and ran for another Saturday to lead No. 19 Michigan to a 62-14 rout of winless Wisconsin in the Big Ten opener for both teams.

The Wolverines quickly took command and rolled to a 48-0 lead before Wisconsin scored late in the third quarter.

The victory improved Michigan's record to 2-2 and dropped Wisconsin to 0-4, its worst start since 1968, when the Badgers finished 0-10.

Boles, a 190-pound tailback, raced 55 yards virtually untouched for a touchdown on the first play of the game. He later scored on runs of two and 81 yards.

Boles finished with 179 yards on 10 carries, but sat out the second half after Michigan built a 42-0 lead at halftime.

Taylor's 2-yard run gave the visitors a 21-0 lead. Three minutes later, Taylor hit Greg McMurtry on 14-yard touchdown pass for a 28-0 advantage.

Boles followed with his 81-yard run as Michigan increased its lead to 35-0 with 11:29 left in the half.

Purdue 14, Minnesota 10

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Seventeen-year-old freshman Brian Fox threw two touchdown passes and safety Marc Foster had two interceptions to lead Purdue to a 14-10 victory over Minnesota Saturday in the Big Ten opener for both teams.

Fox completed 10 of 15 passes for 170 yards and touchdowns of 30 yards to Calvin Williams and 39 yards to Scott Nelson as the Boilermakers evened their record as 2-2 before a Homecoming crowd. Minnesota also is 2-2.

Foster's two interceptions gave him six on the season and 11 as a Boilermaker so far, tying him for Purdue's career mark with three other players. His second theft stopped Minnesota at midfield with 1:54 remaining. Ronnie Beeks also had a first-half interception that stopped a Minnesota drive at the Purdue 3, giving him four thefts on the season.

Indiana 48, Northwestern 17

EVANSTON, Ill. — Anthony Thompson rushed for 153 yards and three touchdowns Saturday, leading Indiana's undefeated Hoosiers to a 48-17 victory over Northwestern in a Big Ten football opener.

Thompson scored Indiana's first three touchdowns on an 11-yard run and a pair of 1-yard blasts as the Hoosiers went to 3-0 overall while Northwestern fell to 0-4.

Buccaneers 27, Packers 24

TAMPA, Fla. — Donald Igwebuike's 44-yard field goal with 12 seconds left gave Tampa Bay a victory over Green Bay for the second time this season.

The Buccaneers, 2-3, also edged Green Bay 13-10 three weeks ago when Igwebuike kicked a 28-yard field goal with three seconds left.

Eagles 32, Oilers 23

PHILADELPHIA — Randall Cunningham passed for two touchdowns and ran 33 yards for another touchdown to rally Philadelphia from a 16-point first-quarter deficit to victory. Cunningham completed 24 of 38 passes for 289 yards, while the Eagles' defense held Houston's usually explosive offense to 206 yards — 55 running and 156 passing.

Browns 23, Steelers 9

PITTSBURGH — Cleveland turned two of Pittsburgh's five second-half turnovers into field goals and rookie Brian Washington's 75-yard interception return for a touchdown as the Browns rode a big-play defense to victory.

Patriots 21, Colts 17

FOXBORO, Mass. — Doug Flutie came off the bench to spark a 14-point fourth quarter, including a 13-yard run with 23 seconds to play to lead New England over Indianapolis.

Seahawks 31, Falcons 20

ATLANTA — Rookie Kelly Stouffer engineered four touchdown drives in his first NFL start and John L. Williams scored three touchdowns on short runs as Seattle downed Atlanta.

Stouffer completed a 53-yard pass to Brian Blades to set up Curt Warner's 12-yard scoring run that gave Seattle a 7-3 first-quarter lead it never relinquished.

49ers 20, Lions 13

SAN FRANCISCO — Jerry Rice scored the 48th touchdown of his 49-game NFL career with an 11-yard run on a reverse and John Taylor got San Francisco's only other TD on a 77-yard punt return as the 49ers downed the Detroit Lions 20-13 Sunday.

Broncos 12, Chargers 0

SAN DIEGO — Rich Karlis kicked four field goals and Denver defenders blanked San Diego as the Broncos beat the Chargers 12-0 Sunday.

The game turned on the play of Broncos' special teams, which snuffed a first-half field goal try, blocked a Ralf Mojsiejenko punt late in the third quarter and forced a fumble by San Diego punt returner Lionel James with 10:23 remaining.

Bengals 45, Raiders 21

LOS ANGELES — Boomer Esiason picked apart a revamped Los Angeles secondary Sunday, passing for 332 yards and three touchdowns as the Cincinnati Bengals, the NFL's only unbeaten team, rolled to a 45-21 victory over the Raiders.

Dolphins 24, Vikings 7

MIAMI — Dan Marino passed for two first-half touchdowns and Miami's defense intercepted Minnesota's Tommy Kramer four times on Sunday as the Dolphins beat the Vikings 24-7.

Chiefs 17, Jets 17

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Steve DeBerg capped a sizzling fourth-quarter rally with an 8-yard touchdown pass to Emile Harry with 51 seconds left in regulation, and the Kansas City Chiefs tied the New York Jets 17-17 Sunday.

Cardinals 41, Rams 27

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Neil Lomax threw for 342 yards and two touchdowns Sunday as the Phoenix Cardinals ended the NFC's last undefeated run by beating the Los Angeles Rams 41-27.

The victory was the first for the Cardinals over the Rams since 1976.

Olympics

sure from Korea's dim past, symbolically tolled the sadness of endings.

On the other, the Olympic flag was passed to representatives from Barcelona, site of the 1992 Games, to signal the expectations of new beginnings.

After 16 days, the Soviets wound up with 132 medals, including 55 gold, the most ever in a Summer Olympics with full participation. East Germany had 102 medals and 37 gold, and America 94 medals and 36 gold. The decision against Jones cost the United States a gold-medal tie for second.

Jones' was only one among other sad stories of these Games, which yielded their share of highs and lows in a surprising array of ways.

"This has been a bizarre Olympics," Carl Lewis said even before the Games had ended. "There have been a lot of ups and a lot of downs and a lot of in-betweens."

Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson was sent home in disgrace, caught cheating with steroids, one of 10 Olympians suspended for failing drug tests. A week later, he was still protesting his innocence.

Five Korean boxing officials were expelled in the Games' first week when they attacked a referee over another close decision, this one against them. Kim assumed responsibility and resigned on Sunday.

There was the American men's basketball loss, and the U.S. women's gymnastics team lost a bronze medal on a rarely-called technicality pointed out by an East German.

Another U.S. boxer, Anthony Hembrick, lost his chance for a medal before it even began. He lost by walkover in the first round when his coach misread the schedule and he missed the bus to the arena.

Two U.S. swimmers and runner Johnny Gray got into trouble in Seoul's busy downtown section of Itaewon. The swimmers were arrested for carrying a stone lion's head out of a hotel bar, but charges were dropped. Gray kicked a taxi-cab in an argument with its driver. He was arrested and released.

These two incidents added fuel to the fire of anti-American statements in Korean newspapers and TV that started over NBC's coverage of the Korean boxing brawl.

And Lewis. He lost the world's fastest 100-meter dash to Johnson, then got the gold when Johnson was stripped. He won the long jump, then lost the 200 meters to teammate Joe DeLoach. With a shot for a third gold in the 400-meter relay, the team was disqualified in heats for an illegal baton pass, and Lewis wasn't there. He'd been told to rest and wait for the final, over his objections.

Almost forgotten by the time the Games ended were the seven medals of swimmer Matt Biondi. He had five gold among them, and Janet Evans earned another three gold in the pool for America.

1988-89 STUDENT BASKETBALL TICKET POLICY

- A student may order one of the following: one full season ticket for the price of $80.00; one 14 game ticket which excludes the holiday games* for $70.00; or a 7 game split season ticket for $35.00. If the number of orders exceeds the student allotment, split season tickets will be given to those with the lowest priority at the discretion of the ticket office.
- Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for basketball tickets at The University of Iowa with no loss in priority for off-campus student exchange programs or a bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
- A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than eight. If not all group members are present when the order is placed, the members not present must provide to the student placing the order, either their personal checks with current address and ID numbers thereon or cash and their ID numbers. One student may not write a personal check in payment for another student's ticket.
- The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
- Student season basketball tickets will be on sale commencing September 26 through September 29 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.; September 30 from 9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m.; October 1 from 8:00 a.m.-12:00 noon; and October 3 through October 5 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. These tickets will then become available for pick up beginning November 7, 1988.
- Each student must pick up their own ticket. The student must present their own student ID, current registration sticker and picture ID at the time of pick up. Registered students must be in "good standing" with the University business office regarding delinquent bills.
- A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by a University of Iowa ID card with current registration sticker and picture ID. To use the basketball ticket during the 1988 games a student must be registered for the second semester. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or by any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student policy. If a non-student is found using a student's ticket, that student forfeits all future student ticket privileges. The penalty for a violation of the University policy involving ID and ticket will be the loss of the use of the ticket for two games.
- Amana Hawkeye Classic tickets will be available to students at $22.00 per seat for the tournament. This is a special event and is, therefore, not on the season ticket.
- Everyone, regardless of age, is required to have a valid ticket for admittance to all University of Iowa basketball games. This includes infants in arms.
- DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN STUDENT TICKETS.

Iowa sophomore Jenny Rees, of Chicago, attempts to block a shot by Wisconsin's Lisa Boyd Friday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes swept the Badgers 15-8, 15-8, 15-3.

Hawkeyes notch two wins in weekend Big Ten play

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team improved to 12-3 with Big Ten victories over Wisconsin and Northwestern this past weekend in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

In a tight match against Northwestern, Iowa grabbed the win 15-13, 8-15, 15-10, 14-16, 16-14 and also set three school records. Co-captain outside hitter Kari Hamel had 30 kills, breaking the record of 27 set by Ellen Mullarkey against Ohio State last year.

The team also had 101 kills in the match to surpass the record of 93 set against Wisconsin last year. The Hawkeyes had 303 attack attempts, besting the record of 258 against Western Illinois last year.

Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said Hamel inspired the team.

"Kari's look nonverbally communicated to the others as 'let's go!'" Stewart said. "She was saying that they were not going to give up the last game. She spirited the comeback. Kari was on a mission."

"It was amazing. Both teams played great. We kept swinging, Kari made some great saves, Jenny Rees also made some crucial saves in the last games. Whoever had the momentum going by the end of the match was going to win it." The record-setting match was exciting. In the first game the Hawkeyes rallied to win 15-13. The second game, Northwestern started out strong and cruised to a 15-8 triumph. Iowa came back to win the third game 15-10.

The Hawkeyes jumped to an 11-1 lead in the fourth game, but the Wildcats came back and won 16-14. Stewart said Iowa let the fourth game "slip away." Outside hitter Jenny Rees agreed.

"We started out good, but we let up," Rees said. "We never should have lost it. It was a lack of communication on the floor."

The deciding game went the same as the previous one, except this time the Wildcats took the early lead and the Hawkeyes clawed back to take the game 16-14 and the match three games to two.

Stewart was excited about the victory.

"It was fun to win," Stewart said. "Jenny Rees came through when we needed it. Northwestern swept us both times last year. I'm glad we beat them at home. They're going to be hard to beat at Evanston."

Northwestern Coach Jerry Angle said his team did not play up to his expectations.

"Iowa played well and we didn't," Angle said. "I felt our seniors and juniors didn't do a very good job. We should have won. We were in a position to win and we didn't."

Last Friday, Iowa swept Wisconsin 15-8, 15-8, 15-13.

Although the match was not as close as Saturday's, Stewart was happy with her team's play in the quick three-game win.

"I thought we played well when we had to," Stewart said. "There were some great long rallies. I think we won all of them. We need to work on our serve. We didn't pass as well as we had planned."

Stewart said she thought the inexperience of the Badgers' seven freshmen was a major factor in their play.

"They were a very competitive team," Stewart said. "They are very young. They are going to be much improved as the year goes on. They (the freshmen) all come from excellent junior programs."

The Hawkeyes will face Indiana and Ohio State on the road next weekend.

Hawks settle for 12th place in New Mexico tournament

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

For the second year in a row, the Iowa women's golf team finished 12th in the 18-team New Mexico tournament in Albuquerque, N.M. this past weekend.

Coach Diane Thomason was nonetheless pleased with the finish.

"I'm happy at how well we did," Thomason said.

"This was a great team effort. If one person did not card well, someone else stepped in and played great. I'm really proud of them. It is a great feeling to play as a team."

Shirley Trier played another good tournament, leading the Hawkeyes with rounds of 82, 73 and 79 for a three-round total of 234. Stacy Arnold added 82, 82, 77-241, Amy Butzer carded a 79, 85, 78-242, Sarah Ward shot a 81, 80, 82-243 and Kelly Brooke rounded out the scoring with a 84, 81, 80-245.

Thomason was excited about Trier's improved play.

"Shirley played a great tournament for us," Thomason said. "She shot par (73) in the second round, which is fantastic, and overall she finished 23rd out of 88 players."

Women's Golf

Trier was pleased with the team's play during the tournament, but next spring's Big Ten tournament was also on her mind.

"We had a good tournament and a very good last day," Trier said. "We need to find ourselves a niche, some consistency. We are starting to play pretty well. I think if we continue to work this winter, we'll have a good shot at the Big Ten tournament next spring."

The strong field the Hawkeyes faced made their 12th-place finish more impressive.

"Practically all the teams that finished ahead of us are nationally ranked in the top 15," Thomason said. "This is a very competitive tournament with very good teams. On Saturday, we beat USC and New Mexico — two teams which are very highly ranked. We have the ability to beat top teams, we just need consistency."

The tournament made Thomason optimistic about the future.

"The kids are saying they could have done better," she said. "You can never play a perfect round. They are not satisfied; neither am I. We are going to get even better."

Arizona won the tournament with a three-round total of 914. Florida finished a close second with 916, followed by Texas with 918, San Jose St. 921, TCU 925, SMU 934, USC and New Mexico 936, New Mexico St. 937, Auburn 947, San Diego St. 948, Iowa 954, LSU 974, Cal State-Long Beach 977, Nebraska 989, Lamar 990, Iowa St. 1012 and Texas Tech closed out the scoring, carding a 1013.

The Hawkeyes travel to Kentucky Oct. 13 for their final tournament of the fall.

Iowa takes 2nd at Illinois invite

By Erica Welland
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross country team overcame wet and windy weather to finish a close second to Indiana at the Illinois Invitational this past weekend.

Indiana, ranked 10th nationally before this meet, was first with 41 points. Iowa had 47, followed by 14th-ranked Nebraska, 68; Illinois, 113; Ohio State, 131; Purdue, 145; Illinois State, 154; Valparaiso, 256; and Eastern Illinois, 272. Western Illinois also ran but did not have a team score.

Michelle Dekkers of Indiana won

Women's Cross Country

the meet with a time of 16 minutes, 28 seconds. Dekkers, a South African transfer from Houston, ran the entire course barefoot.

Jeanne Kruckeberg, who won the Illinois State Invitational last weekend with a time of 17:36, led Iowa by finishing third in 17:30.

"We definitely made progress this week," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "We had Indiana and Nebraska beat by probably about 20 points halfway through the meet. The fact that (the Hawkeyes) were able to hold them for that long showed that they are good and can win meets."

"The ranking didn't bother us," Kruckeberg said. "We know what we're capable of."

According to Hassard, Indiana and Iowa traded off very closely place-for-place as the athletes finished.

The Hawkeyes are now preparing for their next meet, which is at home Friday.

On The Line

In Friday's On The Line column, we wrote that the beginning of the Big Ten season would be good for Big Ten teams, since half of them would win on any given weekend.

We were wrong. As most of you probably know, having raised your heads from the books long enough to catch college football scores on the television or radio, the Hawkeyes tied with Michigan State Saturday.

Since we at The Daily Iowan are benevolent types, we counted the tie as a win for everyone, even those who picked Michigan State. But that didn't help most of you, or us.

Illinois managed to stomp Ohio State, in Columbus, if you can believe that one. And the pesky Purdue Boilermakers beat the visiting Minnesota Gophers. Those two scores were enough to trip up most prognosticators. A lot of you were also doomed by Boston College's comeback over Pittsburgh.

The DI staff botched those games also, but we weren't going for the big prize. That's right, it said "prize." Faithful OTL readers know what that prize is — a big, foxy keg of beer from a fine area business. This week the generous folks are from Randall's on the Coralville Strip.

This week's winner of the 16-gallon cask of lager is Ann McLernon, who picked nine of the 10 games correctly. She didn't pick a winner for the Illinois-Ohio State matchup, but since she got the rest of the winners' correct she takes home the prize.

"I think it's lovely," she said when told of her win.

A bunch of other people were also 9-1, but only Ann got the tiebreaker right. She picked Maine Maritime to beat Framingham State 21-20, and that was the exact score.

So thanks to Randall's, Ann and 20 or so of her closest friends will have a party.

Sports Editor Brent Woods went 7-3 to raise his record to 35-15. Sportswriter Mike "Magic" Triik went 6-4 and trails Woods by one game at 34-16. Assistant Sports Editors Matt Zlatnik and Neil Lewis were also 6-4 and fell further behind, both with records of 32-18.

Our guest picker, former Iowa tight end Mike Flagg, was 7-3. The readers as a group were 6-4, for a season record of 35-15.

That brings us to this week. We have the usual slate of 10 games and a tiebreaker, and the ballot will appear in the Scoreboard section Tuesday through Thursday.

Circle the teams you think will win, including the tiebreaker, and write a score for the tiebreaker. If you don't circle one of the tiebreaker teams your ballot will be disqualified.

It sounds harsh, and it is.

Remember, only three ballots per person. And that doesn't mean sign someone else's name to your extra ballots. The crack handwriting analysis staff at the DI will catch you, and you won't win. They will embarrass you publicly as a cheat.

Hustle that ballot down to the Business Office, 111 Communications Center, and put it in the specially-designed On The Line ballot box. Deadline is noon Tuesday.

This week's keg will be generously donated by Vito's, 118 E. College. And everyone knows cold beer from Vito's is too darn good to pass up, so don't forget to enter.

No Shame

Friday night theater show takes on anything, everything

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Last year, when No Shame Theatre artistic director Todd Ristau claimed, "We've got the perfect vehicle for your theater," he meant it literally. No Shame's stage was the back of Ristau's "slant" three-in-the-tree, Dodge pickup truck. Since it was performed under the stars, instead of by them, a motorcycle headlight provided the spotlight.

"When it started, if the audience didn't like what you were doing, they were perfectly free to throw a pop bottle at you," commented Ristau.

Ristau started No Shame two years ago, after the demise of Midnight Madness. "Personally, I believe the MFA playwrights at the time all grew beards, got married and got boring," he said. "The biggest reason is that those bearded, boring, married playwrights didn't want to stay up so late."

No longer street theater, or more appropriately parking lot theater (the performances took place in the University Theatres parking lot), No Shame has taken its act into UT's Theatre B.

Ristau, a first-year student in the Playwright's Workshop, described No Shame as "an alternative vehicle for young writers and performers to experiment with their craft in a non-threatening, non-judgemental environment. It's also a way to get dates."

Assistant English professor John Harper, a regular attendee at the after-hours performances, laughingly described it as "a night of pure vulgarity and tastelessness with perhaps a touch of imagination." Harper requested anonymity because "one of the laws of No Shame is that no one uses their real name." It was denied. He said it.

No Shame loosely traces its origins back to Midnight Madness, which served as a forum for the work of members of the Playwright's Workshop. Madness lived a nomadic existence, enduring limited runs in MacLean Hall, the Old Armory, the old prop shop in the UT basement, the Union Wheelroom and finally, Mabie Theatre.

No Shame also bears a resemblance to Big Time Wrestling in the sense that "anything can happen and usually does!"

"I like the idea that you can get a comedy skit, a serious monologue, someone singing a song, a short musical, a staged reading, even a short play," explained Ristau. "The possibilities are open. All I want is for writers to constantly explore the opportunities offered by writing for the theater."

A recent evening at No Shame began with the introduction of a young couple, "who were married today at the courthouse." They proceeded to enact the garter belt routine. Was this a put-on? As a credit to No Shames fostering of anything good, it could have been the real thing. The overflowing crowd of 200 roared their approval.

The evening included Branko Dimitrijevic's "Six Pack Show," Dimitrijevic, a Playwrights' Workshop member from Yugoslavia, accompanied himself on cymbal and presented a rambling discourse reminiscent of "Waiting for Godot." Periodically interjecting "I'm trying to remember my six-pack show," Dimitrijevic expressed the thematic sentiment: "It's like someone's editing the movie of my life, but they're doing a bad job." He concluded with a humorous proposal of a new organization,

"Drunks Against Mothers Driving."

Also included in the dozen pieces were Edgar Allan Poe's poem "Annabelle Lee," sung to his own piano accompaniment by theater major John Price, and a musical skit involving a confrontation between two men for a woman's affections. The men frolicked about, embodying images, such as butterflies and frogs, as the woman sang. The piece ended with them all joining forces in song, only the words were nonsensical and unintelligible.

Perhaps reflecting the rise in stand-up comedy across the country, several of the pieces were humorous monologues, including theater major Brad Schnurr's portrayal of a little boy trying to figure out how his brother got lipstick on his underwear.

Ristau wants No Shame to serve as an opportunity for a performer to experiment, to learn how to work an audience. "I want people to think, 'God, what might I not be able to get away with' and then try it. That's what it's all about, it's a place where you can dare to fail. That's why it's called No Shame."

Excerpt

The following dialogue is excerpted from a No Shame Theater performance piece.

Green Man: Here's some money, I don't know how much. Can we have sex now or must we go through the motions of clandestine courtship rituals created to tie us with guilt we don't feel to commitments we haven't made?

Lady: Shave, I'll change the sheets. (She exits, he takes groceries from bag and lays them on the table. After the bread and carrots come small human body parts: hands, feet, breasts, etc.)

Green Man: I work at the hospital, I told her that. I run the incinerator. It is my job to sit by the fire, keep it hot, and I turn the things that have been cut away, the damaged and diseased parts of people I've never met into carbon. Carbon is the purest form on Earth. I burn them. There are no special tools; I use my hands, I don't use plastic wrap either... I believe that even a severed limb remains somehow human and worthy of love, care, affection. I couldn't rest if flesh wasn't the last thing to touch flesh before the flames. One touch before the fire... I think of Hell while I work, imagine a lake of fire that burns and burns and yet does not consume... I feel sadness, not for the damned, the damned have waited so long for it — I feel sadness for a fire that cannot burn disease into purity, and flesh that can't surrender to the heat. But I'm a romantic. That means... that means I don't sleep very well. This foot used to dance, the dancer cried and cried and cried, but I was the only one who heard her foot, it told me that if I waited to burn it into carbon, it would teach me to dance.

'Project!' message lacks bite

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

For every 100 people that pledge undying devotion to "West Side Story," there are a few that shrug it off, primarily because they find it difficult to take a story seriously when two gangs, bent upon violent destruction, suddenly pull up in choreographed unison and start singing and dancing down the street.

"Project!"—performed by the Free Street Theatre Friday night in Hancher Auditorium—is open to this criticism. "Project!" is a musical documentary created and performed by residents of Cabrini Green, Chicago's first and most infamous housing project. Perhaps the familiarity of most people with the desperate condition of the nation's economically underprivileged undermines the shock value of this reality. Like all other desperate situations, the violence and despair of the inner city has escalated. Murder and assault are no longer random, erratic occurrences. Gang dominance has become a sophisticated, systematic undertaking involving big money — 10-year-olds can make $100 a day running crack errands; automatic weapons such as Uzi sub-machine guns are commonplace.

Sadly, the reality of "Project!" does not shock. At this point, like the threat of nuclear destruction, the devastation of the environment and wildlife and the holes in the garden hose, it merely nags. For those lucky enough not to live there, anyway.

The singing and dancing generate enthusiasm and entertainment but weaken the drama. This is not a disturbing performance.

To its merit, "Project!" deals with the complexity of individual and community response to poverty and violence. After all, ghetto life is more than shoot-outs and covering non-combatants. Clearly developing this reality of survival and coping, Cabrini dwellers speak from high-rises of 70 TV monitors. Obviously caring, thoughtful people with a deep sense of commitment to their community make an attempt to salvage some semblance of hope.

These are the chilling moments in the show. When one man speaks of watching from his apartment with his mother, "a sensitive woman," as a young man is shot in the street below, and they hear him gasp softly, "Oh my God, I'm shot," the reality begins to sink in. He marveled that it felt like watching TV but with the TV off. "And this is an everyday thing," he concludes, desperation in his voice.

Many relationships were played out by this group of 26, who ranged in age from 7 to 74. One of the highlights of the show was the vignette "Women's Blues." Five women, seated on stage bantered good-naturedly about hard times ("Times are so bad even my dog's depressed"), eating and men. As one woman sings out, "You can have my no-good husband, but leave my man alone."

Which leads to the pivotal, perhaps causal, relationship: that between woman and man, wife and husband, mother and father. Although the target of much of the discourse, there were only two adult male characters, one an older, clown-like musician, the other appearing briefly as a drug merchant who is quickly dispatched with a bullet. The show, which repeatedly poses the question "Where are the men, the fathers?" begs the question of its cast, "Where are the men?" The show sends mixed messages on this score and raises the very serious question of women and children deserted by the adult male, yet only deals lightly with this all-important topic.

The spirit and courage of the Free Street Theatre prevail, a testament to the cause for hope. We all benefit from this display of survival and creativity. Sadly, it is a beacon for help, as sung in the show's finale, "When's it comin', if it's comin'?"

Hancher Auditorium is to be commended for its continued willingness to take a risk and also for its presentation of a show dealing with minority concerns. Diversity makes the world go 'round. When not only the show but also the audience is a sampling of ethnic or racial diversity, a night out at Hancher proves increasingly festive. This was true Friday night, with many blacks in attendance. In order for Hancher or other university departments to serve the needs of minority groups, students must be willing to show their support and show up—as they did Friday night.

Collegium Musicum plays instructive period pieces

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

A congregation of listeners was treated to sounds emanating from several tubes of different sizes in the sculpture court of the Museum of Art yesterday. The tubes were the recorders of the Collegium Musicum, and the sound had a "wonderful sort of cathedral effect," said one audience member about the acoustics.

The Collegium Musicum proper began around 1950 at the UI. They play ancient music written for "extinct" instruments. Currently the membership ranges from a high-school senior to a microbiologist (with several musicologists somewhere in between, of course). The performance yesterday was directed by Bob Block.

One of the most interesting pieces of the afternoon was a Smetana piece arranged by Kate Stuart, Collegium Musicum musician. It was the "Harvesters' Tune" from the opera "Libuse."

Originally written in 1872 for two clarinets to accompany a chorus of happy peasants, the unusual harmonies and rhythms worked well transcribed for the recorders and provided a refreshing quencher to the strict rules of the ancients.

By far the music of highest quality of the afternoon were pieces from the "Grandfather's Duets" by J.M. Friese. Unlike the extremely early works played, Friedrichsen's recorder music lives with feeling, challenges the ear to dissonance and the mind to interpretation. Block and Stuart executed these sometimes technically difficult pieces with precision and agility.

At best, it is a curiosity and reference to listen to the ancient works. Without the Collegium Musicum we at the UI might forget what had to pass before the likes of Mozart, Beethoven, Mahler and Shostakovich.

The next performance of the Collegium Musicum will be at 8 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 2, in Hancher Hall.

'Phantom' and 'Circus' rejuvenated

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Hancher Auditorium provided a glimpse of the glory days of cinema this weekend with the showing of the silent film classics "The Phantom of the Opera" on Saturday night and Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus" on Sunday afternoon.

The live music provided by the Ann Arbor Chamber Orchestra under the direction of Carl Daehler and theater organist Dennis James presented the opportunity to experience the movies the way they used to be, the way God originally figured it should be. God does not watch movies in a shoe box mall theater. Teen-agers watch movies in mall cinemas.

and one of the finest — of the horror movies. Exquisite melodrama, with no cliché (after all, this was before they became clichés) too schmaltzy to brandish: clutching of the heart when grieved, leaning on the wall, head bowed, when disheartened, widening of the eyes when surprised, heaving breasts and the list goes on and on. And all to a live, bellowing organ! Whoa, it was melodrama in all its full glory.

And the formal dialogue! Lines such as "No longer like a toad in these foul cellars will I secrete the venom of hatred," and "Feast your eyes, glut your soul, on my accursed ugliness," are not casual toss offs. Of course, Erik, "self-taught musician and master of the black art" — a.k.a. the Phantom — is not your average medieval torture chamber/sewer dweller.

The old-fashioned acting style was exquisite. After Erik kidnaps his love, Christine, and spirits her down into the bowels of the Paris Opera House, with screaming, panicked mobs in pursuit, after repeated faintings accompanied by maniacal, hysterical rotten-toothed laughter, Christine narrows her eyes, looks up at the grotesque Phantom and in a moment of inspired deduction exclaims, "You're the Phantom!"

Bravo! Scenes shot in the catacombs of the Opera House and atop the Opera House were worth the price of admission. The image of Erik high atop the statuery on the Opera House, cape billowing in the wind, still lingers, still haunts.

"The Circus" (1928) is vintage slapstick at its finest. Chaplin mastered comedy to the degree that he made it an art. He gets laughs for the setup, because the audience is so primed that they anticipate what is about to occur. He elicits laughs by asking straightforward questions. He also gets laughs by walking into doors and falling down. A classic scene in "The Circus" occurs with Chaplin on the high wire. He has just lost his support and is wobbling and swooning, when a dozen monkeys come scrambling out over the wire and clamber all over him, yanking his clothes off and biting his nose.

Of course, Chaplin, the "Little Tramp," embodies pathos as well as humor. There is no moment in movies more touching than this ending. Chaplin, sitting alone in a bare dirt field as the circus wagons depart, the wagons that contain the women he loves, slowly gets up and walks away. After several patented penguin steps, he jumps and kicks his heels together.

A fitting finale for the sunset of silent film.
