NASA: Shuttle puts America back in space

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The shuttle Discovery returned to a star-spangled welcome from more than 400,000 people Monday after a post-Challenger shakedown mission that NASA called "an absolutely stunning success."

"Discovery, welcome back," Mission Control told commander Frederick Hauck as he guided the ship to a picture-perfect landing after a four-day, 1.6-million mile mission. "A great ending to the new beginning" of the manned space program.

The national anthem was playing as the white ship, with its stubby Delta-shaped wings, leveled out and rolled to a smooth stop on the center line painted on the hard-packed sand of the desert air base. It was precisely on time, at 9:37 a.m. PDT.

They were met by their wives there and were flying home with them later in the day to their training base in Houston, where another reception awaited.

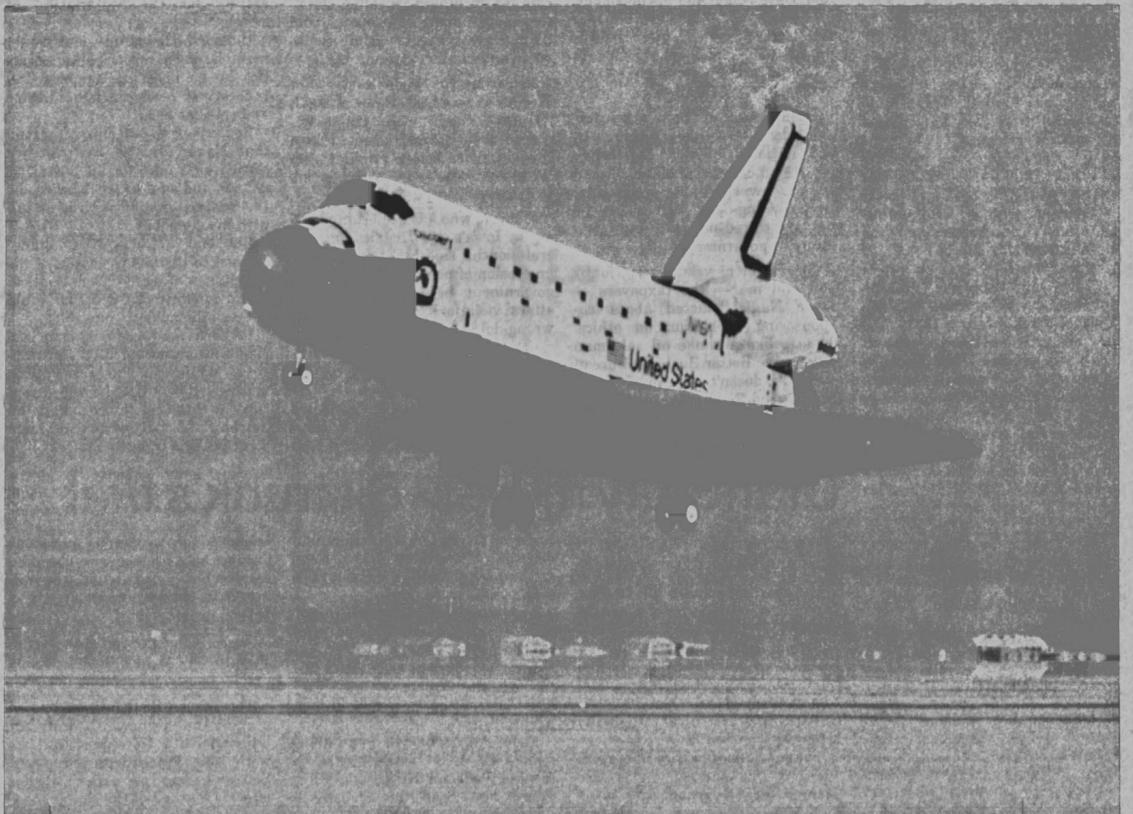

The crowd at Edwards cheered and waved small American flags for the successful completion of a mission that ended a 32-month period in which no manned ship bearing the American flag went into space.

Vice President George Bush, on hand for the touchdown, thanked the astronauts at a ceremony later in the day "for putting America back in space." He said they had shown that "the shuttle is a strong bird, and it could and should fly again."

And, referring to the seven who died when the Challenger exploded, Bush told the Discovery crew: "I can't help but think that just as you had millions cheering for you from below, you had seven departed friends who will never be forgotten, cheering for you from above."

Mission Specialist David Hilmers sounded a common theme for his fellow Discovery crewmen when he said:

"I want you to remember what this flight meant to America. I want you to remember what America can do when it pulls together and has a goal. I want you to remember that no matter how hard a setback we've had, we can see Shuttle, Page 6A

Islamic Jihad releases Indian-American captive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department, confirming the release Monday of an Indian hostage by kidnapers in Lebanon, said, "We are anxious to talk to him and learn if he has any information to share with us" about the nine Americans held in Lebanon.

Spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Mithileshwar Singh, who is a permanent resident of the United States, was in Syrian hands in Beirut and would be taken to Damascus early Tuesday morning.

"We join with Mr. Singh's relatives in rejoicing in his release and call for the urgent, unconditional release of all hostages in Lebanon," Oakley said.

The spokeswoman said she did not know how he was freed or his condition.

Oakley said Syria notified the U.S. Embassy in Beirut and Secretary of State George Shultz, who is at the United Nations in New York, of Singh's release.

"He'll be transported tomorrow to Damascus, and at that point we will consult with him whether he wants to take advantage of the facilities at Wiesbaden," she said.

The United States maintains a hospital at the military base in West Germany.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said there would be no comment from the White House until Singh had been turned over to American authorities by Syria on Tuesday.

The release had been expected at 2 p.m. EDT, and then at 3 p.m. After two more hours of anxious waiting, Oakley made the announcement in the State Department newsroom at 5 p.m.

Singh was released at 10:05 p.m. local time, 3:05 p.m. EDT, across the street from the Beirut headquarters of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency, which aids Palestinian refugees, said a police spokesman in Beirut, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"We can confirm," Oakley said, "that the Syrian government has

Branstad supports aid, tuition increases

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Terry Branstad on Monday backed moderate tuition increases for students at the UI, Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa and would not criticize proposed increases of about 7 percent.

"I have said before we should avoid double-digit increases," Branstad said. "They are not double-digit increases."

Branstad used his regular meeting with reporters to focus on higher education costs, urging parents to sign up for a $10 million savings bond program to be offered later this month because of expected heavy interest.

He was questioned about proposed tuition increases being considered by the state Board of Regents, ranging from 7 percent to 9 percent.

"I think that increase should be moderate," Branstad said. "I'm very concerned about seeing an adequate amount of financial aid is available."

Branstad said the regents should "balance" protests made by students who are facing their ninth consecutive tuition hike with the need to increase funding for the colleges, particularly to pay for higher teacher salaries.

"I'm very sensitive to the concerns of students relative to the costs of higher education," Branstad said. "I also understand the regents' concern for providing competitive faculty salaries. It does cost money to provide those competitive salaries."

Any tuition increase approved by the panel should include a substantial amount of money for student assistance, Branstad said. In past years, state officials have set aside nearly 20 percent of the money generated by higher tuition for student aid.

While insisting he was sensitive to the concerns of college students, the governor said the state kicked in an additional $27 million last year alone to help boost faculty salaries.

"We have the third straight year of double-digit faculty salary increases," he said.

Gov. Terry Branstad

The bond program Branstad boosted was approved by the Legislature this year, and details were announced last week by legislative leaders.

Under that program, the regents are selling a total of $19 million in small denomination bonds, which are exempt from both state and federal taxes.

The first offering of $10 million will be made this month, and

UI women's subcommittee reports on minority progress

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to "go behind numbers and formal processes," the UI Council on the Status of Women has conducted a study on the operation of affirmative action policy at the UI and has summarized their findings in a report released last week.

The report, "Affirmative Action: The Distance Between Policy and Practice," states that its purpose was to assess the extent to which the UI's commitment to diversity has translated into practice within a decentralized institution.

Diversity is the term used to describe the goal of opening the UI to minority persons and groups that have traditionally been limited to marginal opportunity at major educational institutions, said Martha Chamallas, UI professor of law and chairwoman of the council's subcommittee that conducted the study.

The existence of barriers within the various colleges continues to prevent the goal of diversity from being achieved through the already existing policies, Chamallas said.

Based on interviews with students, faculty, staff and administrators from the two prototype colleges used in the study — the UI Colleges of Education and Pharmacy — the subcommittee classified these barriers into three general groups: attitudinal, structural and environmental.

"What we've found is that the problems faced by women and minorities in the workplace — although unique to the individual — are not so different that we can not form some way of presenting them in general terms to show that they are universal," said Jean Jew, a member of the affirmative action subcommittee.

Attitudinal barriers, according to the report, are those beliefs about women, racial minorities and other "outsider" groups that stereotype the group into confining roles. These beliefs tend to "hide reality and depress the aspirations of stereotyped persons who do not fit the mold."

The report describes structural barriers as those practices, policies and arrangements that actually limit access and benefits received by minorities but are not seen as specifically relating to diversity.

For example, the dean's advisory committee of one college is composed of the heads of the various divisions within the college. But since there has never been a female division head, no woman has ever advised the dean in this capacity.

The final type of barrier, the environmental barrier, is considered the by-product of the other two. This is the idea that if minorities are not involved in shaping the environment, it is unlikely that the environment will be receptive to minority needs.

"We want this document to serve as a stimulus for self-diagnosis for everyone affected by affirmative

Union celebrates its 65 years at Homecoming coronation

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

Five years before construction of the Union began in 1924, UI President Walter Jessup offered a rationale for building a student union on the UI campus.

"As the Old Capitol is the Center of our official life, this will be the focus of our social life," Jessup said in 1919. "As a monument to the student soldiers of Old Gold, to those of the past as well as those of the present, my mind's eye perceives a magnificent Memorial Hall, a Students' Union," he said.

Now 65 years and many additions and remodelings later, the Union continues to provide students with a place to eat, meet friends or relax between classes.

The building's 65th anniversary celebration began Monday afternoon when Union director Jean Kendall offered a history lesson to the 100 people gathered for the coronation of the Homecoming king and queen.

The Union represents "a mission to provide facilities and services which support and enhance the university's educational environment," Kendall said in an interview Monday.

"We provide an informal, out-of-the-classroom facility for students to get together and socialize," she said. "It's a large enterprise that has a lot of different living support services for students, faculty and staff."

Included in these services are housing for guests, campus information, entertainment facilities, a barbershop, a bookstore and many restaurants, Kendall said.

"The Union has always done all of these things and will continue to improve the facilities we can offer to students," Kendall said.

One such improvement is the recently completed remodeling of much of the Union.

"The remodeling makes the Union a more likeable and enjoyable environment," Kendall said. "We expect people to begin to use our facilities more often now that they can better enjoy what we have to offer."

"We didn't get a lot more space with the remodeling, but we did improve the atmosphere here and gave the whole building a facelift," she said.

Kendall added that the remodeling project is still incomplete. Due to budgetary constraints, furniture and furnishings planned for previous installation are still not in place, she said.

The Union was originally planned to be a $1 million structure, but because funds were not available the design was modified so that a building of units could be constructed as funding allowed.

Construction on the first unit, which houses the Main Lounge, was begun in 1924. A second unit was completed three years later before the Depression and World War II halted Union expansion.

A third unit, housing recreation areas, a TV lounge and additional office space was completed in 1955. Units four, five and six were completed in 1960.

Nobel laureate to discuss REM sleep

Nobel laureate Francis H. Crick, best known for his discovery of the double helix structure of DNA, will be the first visiting lecturer to the UI sponsored by the Ralph H. and Freda E. Ojemann Visiting Professorship.

Crick is scheduled to speak at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the UI College of Medicine Medical Alumni Auditorium on "REM Sleep Dreams and Synaptic Modification."

By establishing the molecular structure of DNA in 1953, Crick paved the way for the development of molecular biology and opened science to the understanding of the mechanisms of life itself.

Crick and his colleagues James Watson and Maurice Wilkins received the Nobel Prize in Medicine for the discovery in 1962.

"It is a privilege for the College of Medicine and the UI to have Dr. Crick visit," said Antonio Damasio, professor and head of the neurology department, which is hosting the professorship. "Francis Crick was a pioneer when he made molecular biology possible and he is again a pioneer, now that he has turned his interests to a new frontier, neuroscience."

Redfern ignites ethics issue

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The battle for the 3rd District congressional seat between U.S. Rep. Dave Nagle and his opponent, Republican Don Redfern, heated up Monday when Redfern held a press conference in the Union to denounce Nagle's stand on government ethics.

Redfern accused Nagle of "encouraging lax standards of conduct in the nation's highest legislative body" and charged that his opposition to investigations of congressional wrongdoing contradicts his publicly stated policy of improving ethics in government.

"In a recent newsletter, paid for by you and me — the taxpayers — Dave Nagle boasted about co-sponsoring legislation on ethics. This is like a snake oil salesman joining the Better Business Bureau — it just doesn't have much credibility," said Redfern.

The Republican congressional candidate also criticized Nagle for his association with Speaker of the House Jim Wright.

Wright is currently being investigated by the House Ways and Means Committee on several charges, including revealing classified government documents and using government resources to write and publish a recent book.

Referring to Nagle as a "Jim Wright Democrat," Redfern said, "If Dave Nagle were truly concerned about ethics, he would have thought twice before bringing Jim Wright into the 3rd District for his partisan political gain."

Redfern, who has been campaigning in Iowa's 3rd District for several months, said he has witnessed an erosion of people's confidence in government because of repeated ethics violations and incidents of wrongdoing by elected officials.

"The lack of confidence in government institutions, and especially in Congress, must be reversed," he said. "I have found a cynicism about politicians as I have campaigned here. People think we all take bribes and look after our own interests."

Redfern also challenged Nagle to prove his support for curbing ethics violations by joining Redfern in calling for the resignation of Wright.

During the 15-minute press conference, Redfern criticized the practice by members of congress and senators of receiving honorariums and speaker fees.

Redfern expressed disappointment that Nagle and he had not yet settled on a date for an Iowa City debate, and said he would welcome the chance to confront the issues with his opponent.

But the Republican candidate refused to discuss the issue of his acceptance of money from political action committees, saying he would address the subject "later."

Redfern has repeatedly criticized Nagle for accepting PAC contributions while at the same time stating publicly that he will accept "up to but no more than 50 percent" of his total campaign contributions from PACs.

Grand jury moves Sistrunk's trial

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

The trial of former UI football player Dwight Sistrunk, who was indicted on drug charges this summer, has been reset for Nov. 7 because of a scheduling conflict with Sistrunk's attorney, court documents said.

Sistrunk's trial was originally scheduled for Oct. 3.

The one-time Hawkeye safety was indicted this summer by a Des Moines federal grand jury on a count of possession with intent to distribute 5 ounces of cocaine. Authorities estimated the cocaine's street value at $9,000.

The indictment followed Sistrunk's July 14 arrest when Iowa City police and federal drug enforcement agents chased Sistrunk through the streets of Iowa City after attempting to arrest him at his apartment.

Federal agents acted on an informant's tip that Sistrunk was "a cocaine dealer and that (the informant) had been at (Sistrunk's) residence on numerous occasions during the past year and observed cocaine being distributed," according to a sworn statement by a federal drug agent.

Sistrunk pleaded not guilty to the charges in August and remains free without bond pending his trial.

The 6-foot-1 Sistrunk was passed over in the spring NFL draft but later signed a free-agent contract with the Pittsburgh Steelers. Sistrunk was cut after Steelers officials learned of the charges.

Council debates reorganization of legal department

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Council has rejected a proposal by City Attorney Terrence Timmins to reorganize the city's legal department.

At Monday's informal meeting, councilors heard Timmins propose that the city hire an additional attorney, which would bring the number of attorneys on city staff to four.

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald said he was not ready to add a fourth attorney to the staff, although the legal department has been unusually busy this past year because of the acquisition of property for the city's sewer system.

McDonald asked Timmins to continue to hire outside firms to complete some of Iowa City's less important legal work.

Timmins said the process of hiring work out was effective as long as the work was not complex and the city could be assured that the work would be completed in the allotted time.

"It's not something we can do right away. Routine cases are okay, but we literally have to be done acquiring all this property in one year," said Timmins.

The council also decided against promoting Richard Boyle, an attorney for the city, into an "executive" pay bracket, which would allow his salary to be determined by the council, rather than by pre-set city pay grades.

Timmins told the council earlier this month that the nature and scope of the work Boyle was handling for the city, coupled with the fact that Boyle has reached the top of his pay scale, warranted his transfer into the executive salary class.

Councilors acknowledged Boyle's value as a city attorney but said there were other options available to increase Boyle's pay other than Timmins' proposal.

City Manager Stephen Atkins said, "As a government agency, we attempt to have a rational pay plan for our employees. You have the ability to compensate with bonuses and cost-of-living increases. There are a variety of options available."

Councilor Randy Larson favored keeping the legal department at its present staff level as well as Boyle in his present pay class, saying, "At the current time, this doesn't seem to be the only way to go, and I sense the council is more willing to keep contracting things out."

Iowa crop report estimates harvest ahead of schedule

DES MOINES (AP) — Half of Iowa's corn acreage and nearly half its soybean crop has been harvested despite rains that slowed field work last week, and farmers are ahead of schedule in preparing the soil for 1989 plantings, agriculture officials reported Monday.

The weekly crop report also said nearly two-thirds of the state's topsoil had adequate moisture at the end of last week, a sharp improvement from two weeks ago when 80 percent of Iowa's topsoil was rated too dry.

Robert Wisner, an extension economist at Iowa State University, said the harvest progress report indicated the crop is maturing two to three weeks earlier, something that should make it easier to assess losses from the Drought of 1988.

New government estimates on corn and soybean yields are scheduled to be released on Oct. 12. Wisner said that mid-October report is usually a good indicator of crop production and that with the early maturing of the crop this year it "will be an even more reliable than usual indicator."

The Agricultural Statistics Service said 50 percent of Iowa's corn acreage was harvested by the end of last week and that the harvest in northwest Iowa was 64 percent complete. Last year at this time, just 24 percent of the state's corn acreage had been harvested, and the five-year average is 17 percent.

Wisner noted that while the harvest is running ahead of schedule in this part of the Corn Belt, it is behind schedule in Indiana and Ohio.

The report said lodging, or broken stalks, was reported heavy on just 2 percent of the corn, with 30 percent reported moderate, 64 percent light and no lodging on the remaining 4 percent. Ear droppage was reported heavy on just 1 percent of the crop, with 29 percent moderate, 68 percent light and no droppage on 2 percent.

Forty-eight percent of Iowa's soybean crop was harvested by the end of last week, down slightly from last year's 51 percent but above the average of 27 percent for this time of year. Sixty-eight percent of the crop was harvested in northwest Iowa.

Wisner said that once the crop is harvested, farmer marketings should drop off significantly, opening the possibility for a modest recovery in soybean prices.

The weekly report said lodging of soybeans is minimal, with 11 percent of the reporters saying there was no lodging, 77 percent saying it was light and 12 percent moderate. Shattering was reported heavy by 6 percent of the reporters, with 29 percent saying it was moderate and 65 percent reporting little or no shattering.

Fall tillage for 1989 row crops was 8 percent complete, ahead of the last year and the normal of 5 percent. Six percent of the 1989 row crop acres were fertilized, up from 3 percent a year ago at this time and a normal of 2 percent.

The report said 55 percent of the winter wheat acreage in Iowa had been sown, against 44 percent at this time last year and a five-year average of 43 percent.

Topsoil moisture was rated adequate for 63 percent of the state, compared with 46 percent a week ago and 20 percent two weeks ago.

Hostage

told us they have custody of a hostage, an Indian citizen and legal permanent resident of the United States."

She then identified the "freed hostage as Singh, a visiting professor at Beirut University College. "We understood the Syrians intend to transport Mr. Singh to Damascus on Tuesday morning," Oakley said.

Asked if there were indications other hostages would be released, the spokeswoman said: "No. This is all we have."

Singh's wife, Lalmony, is in Beirut, and Singh, 60, will be turned over the U.S. ambassador to Syria, Edward Djerejian, Oakley said.

Although Singh is an Indian citizen, he is a permanent resident of the United States and "was associated" with the Americans who taught at the college, she said.

The release came after kidnapers holding Singh "and three American teachers said they would free one of their captives at the west Beirut headquarters of the U.N. Relief and Works Agency for Palestinian refugees.

The announcement that a hostage would be freed from Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine came in a 36-word handwritten statement in Arabic delivered to a western news agency in Beirut.

President Ronald Reagan created a stir in New York a week ago when he suggested that something was in the works regarding the Americans held hostage by various pro-Iranian elements in Lebanon.

He said at the time that he could not say anything further because "you don't talk while a no-hitter is being pitched."

Fitzwater said later that the president had no special information and was merely saying he didn't want to cast bad luck on the situation.

Earlier Monday, Fitzwater disclosed that a third-party government had told the United States that there might be a hostage released.

Neither Reagan nor Fitzwater would speculate on possible motives behind such a hostage release, although both steadfastly denied that the U.S. government had been negotiating to win the liberation of the Americans.

During a picture-taking session in the Oval Office with visiting Jamaican Prime Minister Edward Seaga, Reagan said no release would take place "on the basis of negotiations of any kind. We have done nothing of that kind."

The three educators believed still held by Islamic Jihad, all captured Jan. 24, 1987, are:

Alann Steen, a journalism professor at Beirut University College; Jesse Turner, a visiting professor at the school; and Robert Pohill, an assistant business professor.

Nearly four months after they were taken captive, Turner said in a videotape released by Islamic Jihad that Steen was suffering from high blood pressure, was in "pitiful" health and was expected to die at any moment despite being under a doctor's care.

Cheers and jeers

Last week, the U.S. Senate seriously weakened a bill sponsored by Senator Christopher Dodd (Dem., Conn.) that was intended to provide job protection to workers who were seriously ill, or who had seriously ill children, newborn children or newly adopted children. As originally intended by Dodd, the Family and Medical Leave Act would have required companies employing 20 or more people to provide 13 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave. The watered-down version of the bill would apply only to companies employing 50 or more workers and would provide only 10 weeks of leave.

Senator Dodd protested the Senate's action, saying that a mere 5 percent of U.S. companies would be bound by the law under the new provisions, and that reducing the leave time from 13 weeks to 10 would save only $2.67 per employee per year. In contrast, Republican Senator Steve Symms of Idaho said, "This will continue to make America less competitive." Sen. Thad Cochran (Rep., Miss.) called the measure "not really necessary in trying to deal with the needs of a diverse and changing workforce."

The attitudes of Senators Symms and Cochran are not in tune with reality. Families in which both husband and wife work are becoming much more the norm than the exception. Crippling legislation that would have protected the jobs of people trying to juggle both career and family is not a positive step. In addition, there is no compassion evident in having more concern for the American business community than for the American family.

As more and more women of child-rearing age enter the workforce, employers should wake up, smell the coffee, and realize that the 1950s are over. If employers will not voluntarily cooperate with workers who have serious family problems, government should step in to ensure that the employees and their families are protected.

Cheers for Dodd, jeers for Symms and Cochran.

Discussing specifics

After a week of post-debate analysis, most of which was as boring as the event itself, no clear winner has been discerned primarily due to the rehearsed nature of the interviewing and subsequent responses that Sunday. The whole campaign has been characterized by rote recitations of the candidates' already-known stances on the basics. In the last few weeks of the campaign, the candidate wishing to make the most of the limited time remaining needs to tackle new, even controversial issues in full public view. Obviously, Dukakis would have the most to gain and Bush the most to lose.

A starting point for Dukakis could be to challenge Bush to voice his opinions and intended remedies, if any, concerning the massive increase in human rights violations throughout Salvador. According to the Washington-based Americas Watch organization, political killings, tortures and general misconduct by government forces is rising substantially. At the crux of the problem lies the United States' government's refusal to act on legitimate reports and blatant evidence presented as proof of the degenerating political and social situation.

As the founder and supporter of the current government in Salvador, the United States has a moral and political responsibility to investigate the killings which are routinely committed in the name of Democracy — especially when such a gross increase is reported. Michael Dukakis, needing to land late-round punches as it is, should make his stance known on the continuing and oppressive violations which are occurring as pervasively now as in the early 1980s.

The tackling of this issue would not only illuminate the candidates' stances on the early successes and failings of the Central American peace plan, but it would also clarify in the public's eyes the extent to which the U.S. government will ignore such obvious human rights violations simply because a country's leader can announce, if mame, the benefits of "democracy."

It's a crazy political process here

Vishwas Gaitonde

American people are obsessed with electing their president. People in other countries can hardly be blamed for holding that view because presidential elections in the United States are biennial events. A president is elected every four years but it takes the best part of two years, from the pre-primary stage, for that to happen.

Elections in other democracies are short and tight, lasting a few weeks or months from start to finish. Their elections concluded, their leaders elected, they can sit back and watch as America agonizes.

But ours is a much better system, the Americans say. The very length of the procedure ensures that we get the best, that no candidate escapes scrutiny. And so the rest of the world watches the drama with interest as this superpower washes its dirty linen before the international gaze.

Oooh Gary Hart, Gary Hart! Do you know what Gary Hart did? There was this woman Donna Rice and . . . Inference: America, we know, is a permissive society but he who wishes to be its president must be very traditional. But wait a minute — wasn't Jefferson supposed to have slept with his slaves and John Kennedy been less than a faithful husband? They are hailed even now as great presidents. New inference: A presidential hopeful must look traditional before the election; it matters little what is revealed afterwards. If that seems strange, just remember that these people are Americans, they are crazy.

And Biden! He thought he could get away with that little bit of copying years back at law school, but they found him out. Trust the American press to do that. Well, what do you know, he was at it again — lifting chunks from Neil Kinnock's speech. But at least he gave poor old Kinnock something to cheer about after being properly trampled upon by Margaret Thatcher. But that was the end of Biden.

This is democracy in action. This is the way America picks her best, the best of this election's crop being Dukakis, Bush, Bentsen and Quayle. In so far as we know the positions of these men, Dukakis opposes aid to the Contras, MX missile production, Star Wars, the death penalty and restrictions on busing. Bentsen supports them and so does Bush. Dukakis supports gun control and federal funds for abortion. Bentsen opposes them and so does Bush. So Bush is running with Bentsen, right? Wrong, Dukakis is running with Bentsen. (Do you need further proof that the Americans are crazy?)

Now we know America is no exception to the rule that politics makes strange bedfellows but what happens if a president and his vice-president are opposed in many ways? Does the vice-president just be a good vice-president and wait for world leaders to die so that he can represent America at their funeral? Or is there civil war in the White House? Or does . . . but the rest of the world does not need to bother sorting out this dilemma. They're not crazy.

Dukakis needs a white, conservative Southerner to balance the ticket, a host of newly turned political pundits assured me. Moreover, Bentsen is a Texan and Texas has 29 electoral votes.

A popular misconception in many countries — and why blame them when many Americans seem equally fuzzy on this point — is that the American people elect their president on Election Day in November. Wrong again. The president is elected — wait for it — on the first Monday following the second Wednesday in December when the Electoral College meets. There is no provision in the Constitution or the federal law to prevent an elector from voting for somebody other than his party's candidate. Custom alone dictates. The votes are counted and the results known on Jan. 6 at a joint session of Congress.

The Electoral College is the brontosaurus of American politics that has survived extinction and lumbered on into the 20th century. This relic even makes it possible for a candidate to lose the popular vote and yet be president — like Rutherford Hayes (1876) and Benjamin Harrison (1888). Kennedy's narrow popular vote over Nixon transformed into a thumping electoral vote lead because of most states' "winner-take-all" format.

But why can't the American people directly elect their leader? Why permit these possibilities? Why not give presidential candidates more room to select their running mate?

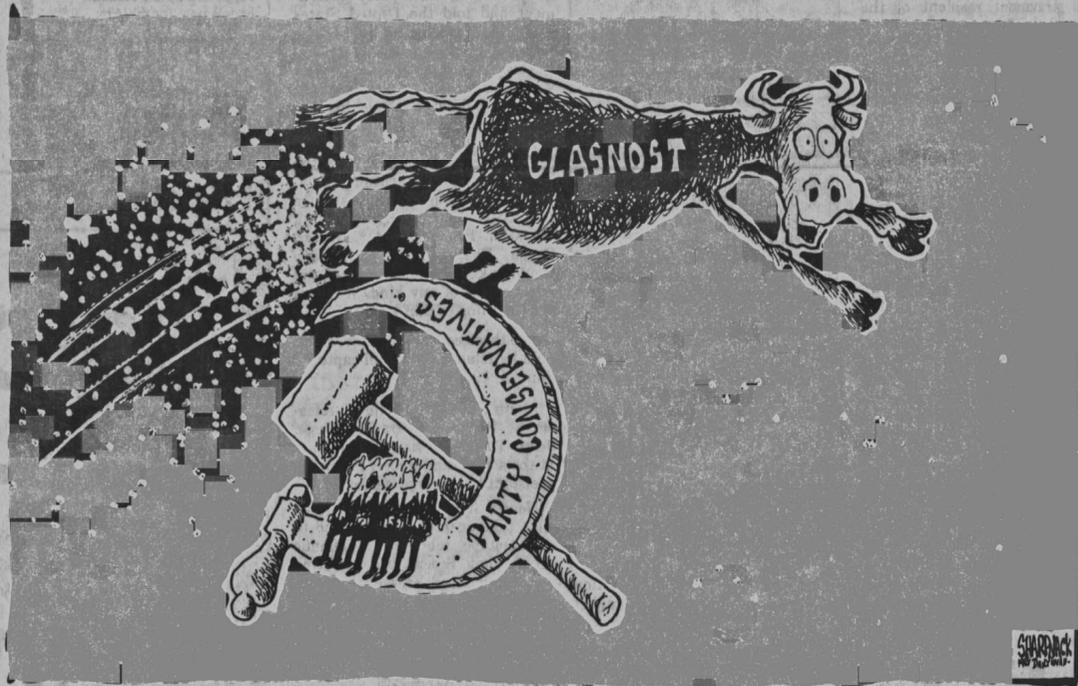

I can understand why the framers of the Constitution formed the electoral college. Those were the days before a two-party system.

There were no national party organizations, travel was difficult and several regional candidates could hopelessly divide the vote. The Electoral College ensured national consensus. America has changed a lot since; what I can't understand is why it clings to this repulsive body. We generally think of the British as the antiquarians and the Americans as more progressive — so much for stereotypes.

And now for Mr. Quayle. There have been disturbing stories — that he failed a comprehensive exam in his field (political science) at DePauw University, was given another exam (what was it?) which he passed and graduated; graduated, despite not taking a required political theory course. With his low grades, he entered the University of Indiana Law School — under an "equal opportunity" program aimed at helping the poor and minority students! There was a row over Quayle's National Guard affair but these grey areas remain grey. And yet how they castigated Biden for his act of plagiarism!

With millions of dollars and the best part of two years expended on the campaign, are the American people then really getting better leaders than other countries with their shorter and less expensive electoral procedures? The Americans I spoke to vigorously nodded assent. But then, they're Americans, they're crazy.

Who's really in the mainstream?

Clarence Page

Vice President George Bush says Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis is "out there . . . out of the mainstream . . . far left" and that he is that old "L" word, "liberal." Is he?

Let's see: Dukakis opposes the death penalty while favoring programs that open opportunities to women and minorities. He also favors affordable housing, welfare reform and long-term health care programs. Uh, huh? Liberal? Sure. Out of the mainstream? Hardly. If the shoe fits, wear it. If it's way oversized, reject it.

During their Sunday debate, in which Bush used the above words to describe Dukakis' political positions, the two candidates differed most sharply and dramatically on the question of abortion.

Dukakis stood by the right of women to choose it. Bush acknowledged that he would like to take that choice away, except in cases of rape, incest or when the life of the mother is in danger.

When questioner Anne Groer of The Orlando Sentinel pressed him on whether he thought women who chose abortions for other reasons should be thrown in jail, Bush allowed that, "I haven't sorted out the question of penalties yet."

Once the practice has been outlawed," he said, "then we can come to grips with the penalty side." Eh? Aren't the jails already full enough, George?

Bush's efficient damage-control team lunged into action the next day to say that the vice president only believes the doctors, not the clients, should be punished. "The woman," he said, "is another victim."

Neat. But if abortion is murder, as Bush suggests, why let the accomplices off the hook?

Anyway, since Dukakis advocates continuation of the status quo on the touchiest of touchy issues and Bush is calling for dramatic (dare I say radical?) change, I award the mainstream position to Dukakis.

OK, how about the American Civil Liberties Union? Bush and his running mate, Dan Quayle, constantly harp that Dukakis' ACLU membership puts him outside the mainstream, too. After all, Bush noted in his debate, the ACLU has come to the aid of pornographers and other pond scum.

Of course, that doesn't mean Dukakis or the ACLU actually likes the pornographers and other despisables. And how about Dukakis' reminders that the ACLU has come to the defense of Lt. Col. Oliver North, among other right-wing clients? ACLU tokenism, Bush's side argues. Ah well, there's just no pleasing some people.

Meanwhile, Bush failed to mention the Reagan administration's intimidation of shopkeepers to the point where the 7-Eleven chain removed Playboy, Penthouse and Hustler from their shelves until customer demand brought them, dribbling back. Maybe Playboy floats a little too close to the mainstream?

"I believe there are more instances of the abridgment of the freedom of the people by gradual and silent encroachments of those in power than by violent and sudden usurpations," said James Madison, one of the framers of the Constitution. I guess he must have been one of those liberals, too.

How about gun control? Yes, Dukakis favors it. But the nation's number one card-carrying National Rifle Association member, Ronald Reagan, supported it, too, during recent debate over a bill to provide a nationwide, seven-day waiting period for gun purchasers, so police would have a chance to check out whether the buyer might have a questionable record. Alas, Congress failed to pass it. I guess it was just too liberal. Out of the mainstream.

Enough. Dukakis might as well fess up. He's a liberal. He might as well take pride in it, use it to tap into the nation's conscience and fight back. Otherwise, he's going to be up the mainstream without a paddle. After all, liberalism has a long and distinguished record of helping the poor and powerless at times when conservatives preferred to adopt a posture akin to Ebenezer Scrooge.

Liberalism brought such reforms as Social Security and Medicare, big-spending programs that conservatives are barely more eager to slash these days than liberals are.

Liberalism offers valuable ammunition that Dukakis has yet to use. A clever and aggressive posture on his part would reveal Bush and Quayle to be the ones wading around out there in the shallow areas of the river.

The old political term "red herring" was invented for mud-slinging like that in which the Bush campaign has engaged. It comes from the practice of dragging a smelly fish across a trail to throw the tracking dogs off the scent.

Bush and company are dragging the far-left across the campaign trail to throw voters off the issues that should be central to the campaign year. Bush wonders what Dukakis is running from. Quite frankly, so do I.

Drought aid program gets off to slow start

DES MOINES (AP) — There was no big rush apparent in Iowa as the government began accepting applications for federal drought assistance on Monday, and some officials said they were relieved to be prepared because they were not fully prepared for the program.

"I'm in traffic in appreciation. We're trying to decipher the rules," said Steve Carson, director of the Johnson County office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service. "I wish you could see all the forms."

Carson said information on the program had only reached his office in Iowa City on Friday and that he was not sure he had all the necessary documents for farmers.

Congress approved $3.9 billion in drought assistance this summer, and between those payments and crop insurance state officials have estimated Iowa farmers will come out about even after sustaining drought losses estimated at $960 million.

"It's not the same as getting a good crop, but it will help some," Gov. Terry Branstad said of the disaster assistance program during his weekly news conference. "I think that's most appropriate."

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has estimated that the drought will reduce Iowa's corn crop to its smallest level since 1964, a plunge of 38 percent from last year's big crop. The soybean harvest is expected to be the smallest since 1974, with production down almost 34 percent from a year ago.

The relief program is being administered by the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, and a spot check of county offices revealed few, if any, farmers had shown up.

Many farmers are in the fields harvesting those crops, and officials said farmers will have to document yields before seeking relief.

Among other things, the drought-relief measure provides disaster payments to producers with gross annual revenues less than $2 million on crops for losses greater than 35 percent of normal production. Commercially grown crops are eligible.

Donella Watkinson, ASCS director for Linn County, said she estimated 75 percent of the farmers in her area would be eligible for assistance. But the two applicants who showed up early Monday were turned away because the office in Cedar Rapids had yet to receive all the necessary forms or computer programs for the program, she said.

Robert Furlough, executive director for the state office of the ASCS, said county officials in eastern Iowa were trained Friday and that those missing basic material should have it soon. Other data, on crops like melons and potatoes that are not a mainstay of Iowa agriculture but still are eligible for assistance, need to be assembled, he said.

"It's one of those deals, an overnight shot," Furlough said. "It's the first time we've got into this on this big a scale."

He said implementation of the disaster program comes at a busy time for the ASCS, which also is in the midst of making payments on other government farm production and conservation programs and arranging commodity loans.

No applications had been received early Monday at the Polk County ASCS office in Ankeny, but director Dab Gamble said he wasn't surprised.

"Today's a nice sunny day. I guess most of the guys are out in their fields harvesting," he said.

Gamble said he was ready to write checks for corn losses but still had not received all the information necessary to process applications for soybeans or for less common commercial crops of fruits and vegetables.

TDD links hearing-impaired with emergency assistance

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

Hearing-impaired callers to the Johnson County sheriff's department will be able to communicate directly with the sheriff's department with the help of a recently installed telephone device.

The telecommunication device for the deaf allows hearing-impaired callers to type messages over the telephone line, according to Charles Anderson, director of the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Clinic.

Hearing-impaired callers who formerly wanted to contact the sheriff's department had to first contact a local TDD-equipped facility. The message was then relayed to the sheriff's department, Jim Thayer, sheriff's department communications director, said.

Local TDD-equipped facilities include the Iowa City Police Department, the Iowa City Public Library and the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Clinic.

"The TDD means the deaf and hearing-impaired population have the same phone accessibility other populations do," Anderson said. "Our society is dependent on the telephone and formerly deaf people were left out of that."

A person using the TDD to contact the sheriff's department calls the emergency number. When the phone is answered the person using the TDD taps the space bar. The dispatcher is alerted that the call is a TDD call and connects the phone to the TDD.

The Iowa City Police Department uses a TDD to talk with hearing-impaired people in the community. Chief dispatcher Nancy Sereuduck called the telephone device "wonderful."

Approximately 80 local families use a TDD, according to Sereuduck. She said the families use the TDDs at the Iowa City Crisis Center and the Iowa City Public Library to relay messages or to receive information.

"They will call the library and ask them to call a taxi for them," Sereuduck said. "Everyone uses a phone for something or other, and it's hard to do without one. This really helps."

She said most TDD users call the police department to ask routine questions.

"They ask the same things other callers do like what the weather is like outside or when the homecoming parade starts," Sereuduck said.

Royalty selected for UI court

The Daily Iowan

Steven Michalek and Vicki Ramseyer were announced 1988 UI Homecoming King and Queen by Iowa City Mayor John McDonald at coronation ceremonies in the Main Lounge of the Union Monday.

Michalek and Ramseyer, chosen on the basis of their scholastic achievements, leadership abilities and community services, expressed the honor they felt being chosen.

"It feels great," Michalek said. "It's an honor to represent the university for all it's done for me."

Mayor McDonald gave each a key to Iowa City during the coronation ceremony. Ramseyer was also given a bouquet of red roses and a gold sash.

"It's really exciting," Ramseyer said. "It's an honor just to be on the court."

Ramseyer, captain of the UI Intercollegiate Diving team, said "It's nice to have a small sport like diving get recognition like this. Because it's a smaller sport it doesn't get as much recognition."

Ramseyer, the first walk-on diver to be elected captain of the swimming and diving team, is a senior majoring in math and secondary education. She is also enrolled in the accelerated professional track MBA program.

"Homecoming represents a celebration of the past and present as well as anticipation of the future," Ramseyer wrote in her application.

"This overall purpose is expressed extremely well by this year's theme, 'Looking back, Moving ahead,'" she wrote. "We must keep our traditions while striving to move ahead into the 1990's."

Michalek is an economics major and president of the UI chapter of the Mortar Board National Honor Society and the Mid-America Inter-Fraternity Council Association.

He has worked with community service organizations like the Muscular Dystrophy Association and the Johnson County Crisis Center during his three years in Iowa City.

"Homecoming to me is not just an event — it is a feeling," Michalek wrote in his application. "Homecoming is an emotion that is embodied in a person that has given something their best. Homecoming is pride and the ambition to show it. For this reason, I feel the theme 'Looking back, Moving ahead,' is perfect.

"At this time, we can indeed be proud to look back — and be excited to move ahead," he wrote. Seniors Daniel Budiman, Peter Kaboli, Mark Steffensen and James Walther join Michalek on the King's court.

Seniors Christy Anton, Caroline Knebel, Emily Stover and Karen Vermaire join Ramseyer on the Queen's court.

action issues, from the minorities themselves to those in charge of hiring within a department," Chamallas said. "And what I think is really exciting about this is that maybe it will allow a woman or person of color to see their problem as a question of affirmative action, rather than as a problem isolated to only himself or herself."

Although Chamallas said there has been little feedback on the report so far, David Vernon, UI vice president of academic affairs said he encourages "all departments and colleges to take (the report) seriously. I'm quite sympathetic to the notion that we aren't doing all that we can in the area of affirmative action."

Vernon said he will meet with the subcommittee Friday to "talk about ways to improve the situation and, eventually, implement the suggestions that we think are wise and can afford."

bounce back from adversity, and I want you to remember that we can continue to dream for the future, and space should be part of those dreams."

Earlier NASA administrator James Fletcher called the safe return of Discovery "a banner day for all of us," while shuttle chief Richard Truly called the flight "an absolutely stunning success."

But Truly balked at a question that implied that with the new success, the trauma of the Challenger explosion had been overcome.

"Even when we've flown a few flights, we are not going to forget the Challenger accident," he said. "For the people who work in the program, that's going to be on their minds for a long time."

Truly, a former astronaut, said from cursory inspection the ship appeared to have suffered little damage from the rigors of launching and returning through the atmosphere: a few tiles suffered thumb-sized nicks, he said.

"We saw no problems I'm aware of in any system," said Arnold Aldrich, who is director of the shuttle program.

For 55 minutes after landing, the crew was occupied with flipping switches and turning off systems while ground crews moved up giant vehicles to "safe" the vehicle and to remove any residual toxic gases.

The flight was National Aeronautics and Space Administration's first since the Challenger mission ended tragically 73 seconds after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986. It was the 26th flight in the shuttle series.

When the crew emerged, Hauck was waving an oversized American flag and the step railing was festooned with six small flags. Bush waited at the foot of the stairs and welcomed the astronauts one-by-one, pilot Richard Covey and mission specialists Hillmers, John Lounge and George Nelson.

The astronauts then led the Republican-presidential candidate around the nose of their ship as they performed the traditional pilot's walk-around.

officials estimate the interest rate will range between 6.5 percent and 7.5 percent.

Branstad said 287,000 letters have been sent to parents of elementary school-age children urging them to consider the bond program.

"Judging from the calls we've been getting, there's considerable interest," the governor said.

Similar bond issues in Michigan, Illinois and other states have been met with heavy demand.

"They are setting up a rationing system," said Doug Gross, Branstad's top aide.

Khomeini: Iran to rebuild without foreign aid

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said Monday that Iran's war reconstruction must be done without "criminal Soviets and world-devouring America," apparently rebuffing rumors of a more open foreign policy.

Khomeini said the country's postwar reconstruction policy should follow the principle of his revolutionary Islamic government: "Neither East nor West."

The Islamic Republic News Agency quoted Khomeini as telling President Ali Khamenei, Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, Chief Justice Musavi Ardebili and Prime Minister Hussein Musavi:

"The valiant people of Iran will keep their revolutionary and sacred faith and hate in their heart and employ their flames against criminal Soviets and world-devouring America and their agents and will hoist the banner of the genuine Islam of (Prophet) Muhammad throughout the world."

Salvadoran casualties result from combat

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Combat between government forces and leftist guerrillas resulted in hundreds of casualties last month, according to military and rebel reports issued Monday.

The armed forces press office listed 88 rebels killed and 117 wounded in September, and said 65 soldiers died and 141 were wounded.

Guerrillas of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front claimed to have inflicted 1,062 casualties on forces of the U.S.-backed government last month, which saw the beginning of a rebel drive called "Death to Reagan's (Salvador) Policy, Yankee out of El Salvador."

Furloughed inmate held for attacking woman

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — A state prison inmate accused of attacking a woman while free on furlough from a halfway house was ordered held in lieu of $500,000 bail Monday after pleading innocent to assault charges.

"We have some serious problems with the prison furlough program," Hampden County District Attorney Matthew J. Ryan Jr. said after the arraignment. "The police are even more upset than we are, and the victims can't understand what is going on."

A furlough program for first-degree murder convicts in Massachusetts was canceled by Gov. Michael Dukakis earlier this year following the kidnaping and assault of a Maryland couple by an inmate who was on furlough.

Isaac Aycox, 37, of Springfield, pleaded innocent before District Judge Peter Rutherford to charges of assault and battery, armed breaking and entering, malicious damage and threatening to murder his former girlfriend.

Home owners' cat discovers body parts

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — The previous owners of the McClures' new house used to take their work home with them. Unfortunately, they were coroners.

When the McClures' cat, Puffy, started growling in the back yard Sunday night — their first night in the new home — the couple went to investigate and found 25 boxes, bags and buckets full of human body parts.

The labeled body parts were left behind by the former home owners, a pair of Riverside deputy coroners, who apparently were doing some work for an independent laboratory, authorities said.

McClure said he picked up a plastic bag, noted the squishy feel and carried it into the light for a better look. The label on the bag said: "Heart."

"It was all purple. When I found out it was a heart I dropped it," said McClure, a 24-year-old auto technician.

Gunman wounds Florida student

MASCOTTE, Fla. (AP) — A gunman in a camouflage outfit opened fire Monday at a third-grade gym class on a playground, seriously wounding a girl before fleeing, authorities said.

A helicopter and a plane joined dog teams and up to 50 officers from four police agencies combing four square miles of woods, lakes and orange groves around this rural central Florida community. Heavy rain later stopped the air search, but the ground search was to continue through the night if necessary.

The gunman fired three shots, apparently from a rifle, Lake County Sheriff's Department spokesman Randy Swails said. It was at least the third unprovoked attack by a gunman at a U.S. school in 12 days.

"Somebody outside the fence of the school shot into the school grounds," said Betty June Cofield, secretary to the Lake County schools superintendent. "It was a man in a camouflage outfit."

The gunman shot the girl about 11 a.m. as she was taking a class on the Mascotte Elementary School physical education field, said Cofield. No one else was injured, and classes went on. But children whose parents did not pick them up were bused home guarded by sheriff's deputies, Swails said.

"The other kids seem to be holding up really well," said Swails.

School Principal Carmen Arnold said special security precautions, including police guards and locked doors, would be in force when classes resumed today.

The wounded girl was Leah Wilbanks, 9, of Mascotte, said Jean Lowe of Orlando Regional Medical Center.

"She suffered two gunshot wounds to upper arm and chest. The bullets entered and exited," said Lowe. The hospital reported the girl's condition as stable.

Witnesses said the gunman had a full beard and a haircut long on the top and short on the sides.

The man gave no reason for the shooting before fleeing, and police did not know his identity or the type and caliber of the rifle, Swails said.

"There was nothing said," Swails said. "He shot three times, he ducked down and ran away."

It was not known if he had singled out Leah, Swails said.

The girl's grandfather, Thomas Chapman, said the child celebrated her birthday Saturday. He said she slipped in and out of consciousness two times after the shooting, and still had a bullet lodged near her neck.

He said she did not yet understand what happened to her.

"I feel she was standing in the wrong place at the right time," Chapman said. "She was standing with a bunch of kids playing. I don't think it was meant for her."

The one-story white brick school of 417 students is located on a residential street a few blocks from Mascotte City Hall, which houses the police station.

On Sept. 26, a gunman at an elementary school in Greenwood, S.C., wounded nine pupils, two fatally, and two teachers. James William Wilson, 19, is charged with murder and is undergoing psychiatric tests.

Boston-based Scruffy plays

By Michael Janson
The Daily Iowan

In the city of Boston, not one, single, beautiful teenage girl with blond hair and green eyes walks around Kenmore Square wearing an oversized jean jacket decorated on the back with an elaborate, hand-painted logo for, say, local heroes like The Lyres.

You will never glance upon the bones of The Zulus, or at the whatevers of the decapitated Del Fuegos; not upon The Neats, certainly not Volcano Suns, not even the gothic transplants Throwing Muses or The Pixies.

You will, however, find a young girl — or perhaps by now an entire army of them — donning the bandaged, out-of-the-washing-machine-and-into-the-microwave remains of the Scruffy the Cat cat. It's true: I've seen her. Perhaps there is no better example of the reverence Scruffy the Cat has seemed to attain. She sure was pretty . . .

Music

She was the drummer's sister, blockhead.

How do you know? And even if she was, so what? "Tiny Days" was number one on the college charts, wasn't it? That means something, doesn't it?

Bryan Ferry's "Eurodoug" was number two. That means something, too.

So what? That doesn't mean anything. Just because . . .

Scruffy the Cat modeled silly clothing in the back pages of "Rolling Stone" along with The Washington Squares.

So what? So did The Fleshtones!

You wouldn't say they're just local boys from . . . wherever they're from.

I still say she was the drummer's sister. And how could you go for her, anyway? A hand-painted logo? I thought you had more class than that.

There's always room for maturity and growth, isn't there? You mean you never wore dumb clothes? I distinctly remember a black and pink thing from Trash and Vaudeville . . .

Mom threw it out. By mistake.

Hey, if she was the drummer's sister, d'ya think maybe she's on tour with them? Driving the van or something? Gosh, maybe she'll be there . . .

In any case, tonight Scruffy the Cat is appearing at Gabe's Oasis, 330 E. Washington St., and for $5 you can make up your own mind about them. I like them.

And she might be there.

1988-89 STUDENT BASKETBALL TICKET POLICY

1. A student may order one of the following: one full season ticket for the price of $80.00; one 14 game ticket which excludes the holiday games* for $70.00; or a 7 game split season ticket for $35.00. If the number of orders exceeds the student allotment, split season tickets will be given to those with the lowest priority at the discretion of the ticket office.
2. Students will receive a priority based on the number of consecutive years they have purchased or applied for basketball tickets at The University of Iowa with no loss in priority for off-campus student exchange programs or a bona fide illness. An individual who misses two or more consecutive seasons for reasons other than the above will lose all priority.
3. A University student may order season tickets for a group no larger than eight. If not all group members are present when the order is placed, the members not present must provide to the student placing the order, either their personal checks with current address and ID numbers thereon or cash and their ID numbers. One student may not write a personal check in payment for another student's ticket.
4. The lowest priority within a group will determine the location of the entire block of tickets for that group. That is, all students within a group will carry the lowest priority of any member of that group.
5. Student season basketball tickets will be on sale commencing September 26 through September 29 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m.; September 30 from 9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m.; October 1 from 8:00 a.m.-12:00 noon; and October 3 through October 5 from 9:00 a.m.-4:00 p.m. These tickets will then become available for pick up beginning November 7, 1988.
6. Each student must pick up their own ticket. The student must present their own student ID, current registration sticker and picture ID at the time of pick up. Registered students must be in "good standing" with the University business office regarding delinquent bills.
7. A student ticket, to be valid, must be accompanied by a University of Iowa ID card with current registration sticker and picture ID. To use the basketball ticket during the 1988 games a student must be registered for the second semester. A student ticket may be used by the original purchaser or by any other University of Iowa student, but the original purchaser will be held liable for any violations of the student policy. If a non-student is found using a student's ticket, that student forfeits all future student ticket privileges. The penalty for a violation of the University policy involving ID and ticket will be the loss of the use of the ticket for two games.
8. Amana Hawkeye Classic tickets will be available to students at $22.00 per seat for the tournament. This is a special event and is, therefore, not on the season ticket.
9. Everyone, regardless of age, is required to have a valid ticket for admittance to all University of Iowa basketball games. This includes infants in arms.
10. DUPLICATE TICKETS CANNOT BE ISSUED FOR LOST OR STOLEN STUDENT TICKETS.

Market Business in Brief

U.S. factory orders up 3 percent in August

WASHINGTON (AP) — Orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods surged 3.1 percent in August, the government said Monday in a report cited as more evidence the economy continues to grow at a robust pace.

The Commerce Department said orders rose $6.8 billion to a seasonally adjusted $226.6 billion, rebounding from a 3.6-percent decline in July, the worst in 18 months. Orders were up 5.4 percent in June, the biggest jump in 17 years.

The overall orders number has been influenced in recent months by wide swings in orders for transportation equipment, particularly aircraft.

But analysts said the underlying trend is strong and indicates that a jump in the unemployment rate from 5.4 percent in July to 5.6 percent in August may be an aberration.

Total orders for the first eight months of the year have averaged $217.7 billion a month, 7.8 percent higher than a year ago.

Manufacturing has been one of the most vigorous areas of the economy this year because export sales have boomed with the lower value of the dollar, which makes U.S. goods more affordable on overseas markets.

To meet demand for exports, manufacturers have stepped up capital spending to modernize factories.

Turner tells of Rande's rise

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Behind every great presidential candidate is the person who holds everything together. Bush has Baker, Dukakis has Sasso and Rande of the Redwoods has Jim Turner.

If you are one of the unwashed heathen who don't have cable or, worse yet, one of the cultural barbarians who doesn't watch MTV regularly, then you might not be familiar with Rande. He's the well-worn '60s toss back who's trademark one-lens sunglasses, headband and duct-taped guitar have been common sights on the music video channel ever since Rande launched his campaign this summer with the rallying cry "Just say Whoa!"

As for Jim Turner, he's just a guy from Des Moines who once upon a time joined an Iowa City comedy troupe called Ducks Breath Mystery Theatre, moved to San Francisco with them in the mid-'70s and stumbled upon a half-there hippie named Rande. And the rest, as they say, is history. Or will be history some day.

How long have you been doing Rande?

Twelve years. I just came up with the character at a Ducks Breath show, and he sort of caught on and expanded. When I did him 12 years ago, the character was very different from what he is now — back then, it was more of a real burnout thing, but it's got mellow over the years.

How did the whole MTV relationship come about?

They came to see a Duck's Breath show and then when the 1967 "summer of love" 20th anniversary came around one of the MTV producers said, "Hey that guy Rande would make a great symbol for our 'summer of love' stuff." I think they intended to drop it after that, but Rande turned out to be very popular with kids. There's this romanticism now about '60s stuff — I don't quite understand it. Kids today really relate to that.

What's in the future for Rande?

The Daily Iowan/Scott Norris

Rande of the Redwoods, MTV's candidate for president of the United States, answers questions during a press conference on the steps of the Old Capitol Monday afternoon.

There's gonna be a Rande movie (with MTV co-producing) next year sometime — we'll start writing the film when I finish this tour. We had one idea that was tied into Woodstock, but there are all these Woodstock movies coming out, and I don't think I want to get tied into that.

How do you feel about Rande being so well-known, while Jim Turner remains fairly anonymous?

I'm lucky because I have a costume and a totally different look as Rande — except for the hair, which won't go away. So it's not much of a problem. It's not like Pee-Wee Herman, where nobody's ever seen Paul Reuben because he doesn't want to break character — that's dangerous. I would just as soon break character as much as I can to show that I'm only an actor doing this thing.

I did the MTV Music Awards last month, and Penn Jillette of "Penn and Teller" had this great idea that I should go on MTV just dressed as me, Jim Turner, and say, "You know, look, I've been doing this thing — Rande running for president — and in the course of doing all these jokes, I really started following the campaign, and I think there are some issues not being addressed. And I'd be very serious and as articulate as possible. And have real issues and say it completely straight. Really Andy Kaufmanish.

At the press conference (see right), you occasionally had somewhat un-Rande-ish — serious, that is — responses to some of the questions about issues.

That's because we have this part in our show where we have a debate that breaks down into a wrestling match, and finally the guy who's moderating says "All right, does anyone in the audience have any questions?" and one woman asked what I thought about abortion? Well, what? Are you gonna say something funny? So I just said "It's up to women to decide and it's not anyone else's business — I'm very pro-choice." And there was this silence. Well, it's not funny, but some things aren't.

Rande of the Redwoods' Campaign Caravan will appear in E.C. Mabie Theatre tonight at 8.

Candidate goes for broke

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Rande of the Redwoods, MTV's slightly burnt-out presidential candidate, held a national press conference on the steps of the Old Capitol Building yesterday afternoon and fielded questions from the media.

Press: Do you know the Pledge of Allegiance?

Randy: Oh yeah, I start every day with the pledge. It's the first thing that happens. I get up and boom — I'm saying the pledge before I'm even awake.

Press: Are you a card-carrying member of the ACLU?

Randy: I have a Rolodex full of cards. I don't think any of them are going to help me anywhere.

Press: When's Pearl Harbor Day?

Randy: Today, tomorrow — you know today is the first day of the rest of the Pearl Harbor Days of the rest of your life. Think about that.

Press: Will you accept a challenge to debate any of the major candidates?

Randy: The major candidates have pursued me like little ticks. It's all I can do to get 'em off me. In my campaign caravan you will see me debate Woody Ahern, who is the class C midget sprint car champion from Pampa, Texas. And the guy knows a lot more about everything than Bush and Dukakis — he went to the school of life.

Press: Were your parents immigrants?

Randy: Yes, my mom came to America via Greece, India, Pakistan and eventually parts of Nebraska, and my dad's in insurance.

Press: Were you ever in the National Guard?

Randy: I joined the Marines to avoid the National Guard. The National Guard is a pain — you drive around in crummy little buses all the time.

Press: What are your views on the drinking age?

Randy: I don't think people should be allowed to drink from like, age 30 to 36, 'cause that's when it's dangerous — that's when you sit around with a little thing of Jim Beam going "Oh, I'm Ernest Hemingway."

Maybe nothing's wrong with Hawkeyes

Across the state, the same question is being asked by thousands of Iowa fans. What's wrong with the Hawkeyes?

After preseason polls projected Hayden Fry's team as a Rose Bowl favorite and national championship contender, the Hawkeyes have been to say the least disappointing, to say the most embarrassing.

So what's the problem? Some say injuries. Others claim poor officiating. But there's another theory that has been ignored. Consider the possibility that nothing is wrong.

While a 2-2-1 start against a cupcake schedule is unimpressive, it is not unacceptable. Keep in mind that Fry's Hawks were only 3-2 at this point last season and finished 10-3. In 1984 Iowa ended at 8-4-1 after a 1-2 start.

The Hawkeyes may indeed turn in a solid record and gain an eighth straight bowl berth by season's end.

But even if the team continues to stumble, perhaps even finishing with a losing record, that doesn't necessarily mean anything is wrong. It may even be exactly what Hawkeye fans need to cut them down to size.

Iowa fans, once followers of a gridiron joke, are now arrogant and ungrateful. Lute Olson still bristles at the thought of Iowa's "loyal fans," who grew tired of mere first division Big Ten finishes and found repeated NCAA Tournament appearances unsatisfying.

One can see the same sentiments developing in Fry. The boos in Kinnick Stadium during Iowa's two home games were unmistakable, as was Fry's irritation.

Equally noticeable is a feeling among the fans that few will voice, and many would label nothing less than heretical. It is the belief that it is time for Fry to leave.

Some fans believe that and in recent weeks have begun to talk about it. They say Fry is no longer imaginative in his play calling, that his ability to recruit and develop players has diminished and that the steam has gone out of his program.

Fry deserves some of that criticism. Despite the availability of excuses for the poor start, ultimately the record of this year's team is his responsibility.

When Iowa loses, the fans and the media have every right to be critical. Fry may not like it, but that's the nature of his profession.

Arkansas makes Top 20; first 13 remain the same

(AP) — The first 13 teams in the Associated Press college football poll remained the same Monday while Arkansas made the top 20 for the first time this season and Louisiana State fell out.

Miami, a 55-0 winner over Missouri, received 53 of 58 first-place votes and 1,153 of a possible 1,160 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

UCLA, which scored two touchdowns in the final period to defeat No. 16 Washington 24-17, received three first-place votes and 1,088 points.

The other two first-place votes went to No. 3 Southern California, which beat Arizona 38-15 and received 1,037 points.

Auburn beat North Carolina 47-21 and remained fourth with 959 points, followed by Notre Dame, which totaled 910 points by trouncing Stanford 42-14.

Florida State was again sixth. The Seminoles received 778 points after defeating Tulane 48-28. Seventh-ranked West Virginia received 758 points by turning back Virginia Tech 22-10.

Eighth-ranked South Carolina received 732 points following a 35-9 triumph over Appalachian State. Nebraska, the No. 9 team, whipped Nevada-Las Vegas 48-6 and received 692 points. Oklahoma again rounded out the top 10. The Sooners beat Iowa State 35-7 and received 606 points.

The second 10 consists of Clemson,

Late field goal lifts Saints over Dallas

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Morten Andersen's 49-yard field goal as time ran out Monday night gave the New Orleans Saints a 20-17 victory over the Dallas Cowboys.

Andersen's winning kick came after Roger Ruzek — who earlier had missed a 39-yard field goal that hit the upright — connected from 39 with 24 seconds to go to tie it 17-17. The Cowboys went 43 yards on eight plays to set up the kick.

But Mel Gray returned the ensuing kickoff 39 yards to his 42. Bobby Hebert hit Brett Perriman with a 20-yard completion to the 32, setting up Andersen's kick.

Hebert threw two early touchdown passes and Andersen kicked a 37-yard third-quarter field goal for the Saints, only to see Steve Pelrier and Herschel Walker lead Dallas back.

The win, the fourth straight after an opening game loss for New Orleans, was only its second ever in 13 meetings with Dallas and its first since Oct. 17, 1971. It moved the Saints into a three-way tie for first in the NFC West with San Francisco and the Los Angeles

Tyson's violence flares again

BERNARDSVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Police on Monday said they handled a domestic incident involving world heavyweight champion Mike Tyson and his wife, actress Robin Givens, like any other such case and, as far as they are concerned, the matter is closed.

"This is a domestic violence incident not unlike many others, except for the fact that it involves a public figure," police Chief Thomas J. Sciarretta said at a news conference.

The New York Post and the New York Daily News reported in Monday's editions that Tyson's rage was sparked by interviews Givens, a star of television's "Head of the Class," and her mother, Ruth Roper, had with Barbara Walters.

In the interviews, broadcast Friday on ABC's "20-20," the women portrayed Tyson, 22, as a scary and frightening person to live with.

The Post reported that on Sunday morning, Tyson hurled a sugar bowl and chairs through the win-

Iowa ranked 7th in poll

The Iowa volleyball team is ranked seventh in the NCAA Midwest region top 10 poll released Monday.

The last time the Hawkeyes, 12-3, were ranked was 1986, when they were third.

Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart was pleased with the ranking.

"We felt like we were due to be in," Stewart said. "We had beaten some of the teams in the poll last week."

In the last two weeks the Hawkeyes defeated Purdue, ranked 10th in this week's poll, and Northwestern, eighth in the poll.

Illinois heads the poll with an 8-3 record. Nebraska is second, followed by Oklahoma, Minnesota, Penn State, Notre Dame and Iowa.

Dodgers will need strong pitching

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For the Los Angeles Dodgers to beat the New York Mets in the National League playoffs, it will take some strong-armed tactics.

In head-to-head competition this season, the Mets beat the Dodgers 10 of 11 games and outscored them 49-18.

"They have an outstanding team and are strong in every area," Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda said. "But we have outstanding pitching, too."

Lasorda will go with his best arm, right-hander Orel Hershiser, in Game 1 of the playoffs Tuesday night at Dodger Stadium against Dwight Gooden, 18-9.

Hershiser, 23-8, finished the season with 59 consecutive scoreless innings to break Don Drysdale's 20-year-old record.

"I started to think about the Mets as far back as the night right after I got the record," Hershiser said. "The Mets have always been more important to me, even more than the streak, because that was a team-related thing."

"There's 24 guys when I walk out onto the mound. People talk about how pitching is 70 or 80 or 90 percent of the game, but I'm walking out there with 80 or 90 percent of the feelings of 24 guys and a coaching staff. And for me to be thinking about a streak would be wrong. So I'm thinking about the Mets."

Hershiser's last defeat was a 2-1 setback by the Mets on Aug. 24 at Dodger Stadium. He pitched a complete game and allowed seven hits.

After that, Hershiser was unbeatable.

"It's probably the sharpest I've been mentally my whole career," he said. "With the pennant race, the close games, the lack of run support, just going out there throwing up a whole bunch of zeroes, not just worrying about giving up a run but losing. I was out there pitching for wins in a pennant race, not a streak."

Hershiser didn't get much support during the streak, as the Dodgers scored 13 runs while it was going on.

The Mets and Dodgers had an afternoon workout at Dodger Stadium Monday. The Mets left for the coast Sunday evening after beating St. Louis 7-5 in the regular-season finale for their 100th victory.

Dukakis halts 'tired ideas'

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Michael Dukakis sought Monday to shed the liberal label pasted on his candidacy by Republicans, declaring that George Bush "offers complacency, I offer change . . . he gives us slogans, we're offering solutions."

Invoking the triumphs of the Olympic Games and the Discovery space shuttle, the Democratic nominee proposed making the United States the champion in world trade and accused Bush of offering "tired and used-up ideas" that favor the wealthy and short-change average Americans.

Dukakis began a two-day campaign swing in the Connecticut capital, meeting with students at an elementary school before addressing a crowded luncheon rally outside the old statehouse.

He then headed to the Detroit area to watching the burning of confiscated drugs and to a Chicago meeting with black supporters on the city's South Side.

"If you think America should settle for the bronze medal, then you vote for Bush and (Dan) Quayle," a shirt-sleeved Dukakis told the Hartford rally.

"But if you believe, as I do, that America and Americans should go for the gold — in the classrooms, in the work place and in the world economy — then your ticket on Nov. 8 is Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen."

Alluding to the Discovery's successful space mission, Dukakis said that just as President John F. Kennedy made the decision to send Americans to the moon, the next president would have to restore vice president's contention that "everything's fine, not to worry."

"Ask yourself this: Could your children today buy the house they grew up in?" he asked. "Can they pay for a college education without a mountain of debt when they graduate? Is your family really getting ahead — or is it just running in place or even falling behind?"

The Massachusetts governor cited his support for universal health insurance, a college aid program relying on payroll deductions, job training, business investment incentives and vigorous enforcement of the trade law.

"Mr. Bush offers complacency; I offer change," Dukakis said. "He gives us slogans; we're offering solutions to the problems that American families face every day and every week and every month."

He took a swipe at Bush's repeated allegations that Dukakis is a big-spending liberal in hiding.

"The solutions we're proposing are not big-money solutions or big-government solutions," Dukakis said. "And unlike Mr. Bush's tired old ideas, they won't leave America running in place. They'll make America the most powerful and productive country on earth."

At the Alfred Durr Elementary School, Dukakis occasionally spoke in Spanish as he urged pupils to careers in teaching or science. He also took a few questions, which he rarely does with reporters on the campaign trail.

One student asked why he was a Democrat and not a Republican.

"I'm a Democrat because I think Democrats and the Democratic Party are committed to helping people to live better lives and are more willing than Republicans to work together to make that happen," Dukakis replied. "We're not satisfied with the status quo."

Dukakis asked the youngsters to name some drugs.

"Bush is a drug," replied one. Said

"But if you believe, as I do, that America and Americans should go for the gold — in the classrooms, in the workplace and in the world economy — then your ticket on Nov. 8 is Mike Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen." — Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis

U.S. leadership in the world marketplace.

"John Kennedy raised the Stars and Stripes until they literally reached the moon," he said. "I want to stamp the Stars and Stripes on American products all over the globe."

Raising his voice to be heard over chanting Bush supporters, Dukakis scoffed at what he called the strong feelings for their candidates.

"But the strong feelings ultimately balanced out," he said.

The UI market figures shows the race between Dukakis and Bush to be extremely close, with Dukakis holding 48.4 percent of the popular vote and Bush with 49.6 percent. The figures are much less drastic than the recent Gallup poll, which shows Bush ahead with a 7-percent lead.

The UI market is a much more accurate system of measuring public opinion, Neumann said. Since June, the public opinion polls have shown shifts as large as 24 percent, while the Presidential Stock Market has never wavered more than 10 percent.

"Our program has a financial incentive," Neumann said. "A person who takes an opinion poll has no reason to tell the truth."

Aside from the market results, Neumann felt that Dukakis had a slight edge in the debates. He looked harsher but better prepared, Neumann said.

Neumann expects the upcoming debates between vice presidential nominees Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen this Wednesday to be critical to both share exchanges and the election itself.

"This could be a news event," Neumann said. "If Quayle is good, it will be a major win for the Republican Party. If he messes up, it could destroy the Bush campaign."

The stock market is accessible to any UI student. There is a minimum portfolio cost of $5.00 and subsequent investment amounts are unlimited. The market will be open for exchange until 9 a.m. on Nov. 9, the day after the election.

Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis gives a thumbs-up sign and receives an approving look from actress Daryl Hannah, who spoke on his behalf, during a rally in Hartford, Conn., Monday.

Dukakis: "Puts you to sleep, right?"

Dukakis interrupted his rally speech to announce the Discovery had landed safely at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., where the vice president was on hand to greet the returning astronauts. Asked if he wished he were in California too, Dukakis replied, "I've had a great day in Hartford."

Dukakis took the occasion to lobby for a $15 million program using federal, state and local funds to hire retired scientists, engineers and graduate students to fill science teaching vacancies in the nation's schools.

The Democratic nominee said he was "committed to the debate with Bush in Los Angeles later this month even though the League of Women Voters withdrew Monday as sponsors. "I'm sure we can forward, if necessary, with other sponsors," Dukakis said.

Bush greets shuttle crew amid publicity

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — George Bush gave a thumbs-up welcome to the returning crew of the space shuttle Discovery on Monday in an example of how Bush can use the vice presidency to advance his campaign for the White House.

"Just great," Bush said after watching the shuttle landing from a flag-draped observation stand. "A great day for our country," the campaigning vice president added, standing front and center as the space program concluded its first mission since the Challenger disaster more than two years ago.

A few moments later, Bush's limousine drove across the dry lake bed landing area and deposited him a few feet from the shuttle. He walked over to a ramp and — while television cameras recorded the scene — shook hands with the five astronauts as they walked down the steps.

At one point, vice-presidential chief of staff Craig Fuller gently pulled NASA administrator James Fletcher into the background so Bush would be alone in the pictures of the greeting.

Earlier, the vice president paused long enough to field a few questions from reporters.

He said he had heard rumors that an American hostage was being released in Lebanon but quickly added, "There's no way of knowing the facts."

He also said he had received a briefing on the shakeup in the Soviet Union. "We keep on keeping on," he said. "We do what's best for the United States, and if these changes work for the benefit of the free world, so be it."

In the meantime, press secretary Sheila Tate said the campaign continues to "anticipate a second debate" with Democratic rival Michael Dukakis despite the League of Women Voters' decision to withdraw as sponsor.

"We hope it will be the 13th or 14th (of October) as originally scheduled," she said, adding she expected a replacement sponsor could be found.

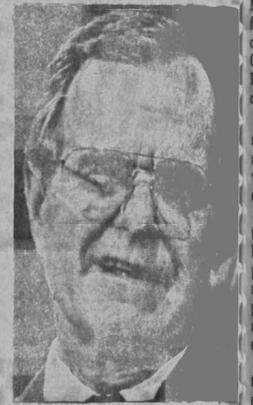

The vice president witnessed the shuttle landing as he set out on a three-day campaign swing through the West and South. Bush enjoys a lead in the public opinion polls as well as a seeming advantage in the Electoral College as the campaign enters its final five weeks.

California, the largest state with 47 electoral votes, is rated as even, and Bush arranged an early-evening campaign appearance in Redding after leaving the NASA complex.

Bush's journey to the California desert wasn't the first time he has used his office to further his campaign for the White House, and Massachusetts Gov. Dukakis has staged any number of ceremonies in his home state to draw attention to his record there.

But the day's events had a higher profile than Bush's trip to the United Nations last July or his swearing in of Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos last month.

This time, his schedule placed him at an event that was guaranteed massive news coverage and served to associate the vice president with the happy news that America's long drought in its manned space program is over.

The entire scene was choreographed meticulously by Bush's aides for maximum television advantage.

He shook hands with each of the five, posed for "thumbs up" photos

"We do what's best for the United States and if these changes work for the benefit of the free world, so be it." — Vice President George Bush graphs with the heat-blackened shuttle as a backdrop and then joined the crew for a walk around the orbiter to see how well it withstood four days in space.

He got the red carpet treatment all day.

The vice president's Air Force jet was met by Fletcher and Christa Yeagar, a well-known former test pilot, as well as California Gov. George Deukmejian.

Bush watched the shuttle landing from an observation tower, accompanied by his wife, Barbara, and other NASA officials, then took a 10-minute tour of NASA's Mission Control Center before driving to the shuttle and greeting the five-member crew.

The Bushes then were driven to a private lunch with the NASA brass and families of the shuttle crew members.

A few hours later, Bush said his remarks prepared for a campaign rally in Redding, Calif., that he was committed to development of an operational space station by 1996. But he declined to embrace a manned voyage to Mars, saying it wasn't completely certain that planet should be the next destination for Americans in space.

Bush said he was committed to continued manned space exploration subject to "budgetary considerations."

Bush made the campaign appearance in Redding after leaving the NASA complex.

UI stock market figures on Bush

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

Since last week's debate between presidential candidates Michael Dukakis and George Bush, the UI Presidential Stock Market figures show an advantage of just less than 1 percent for the vice president.

The market, a joint program of the UI Economics and Political Science departments, was designed as a way for UI students to buy and sell shares in the presidential candidates, with share prices reflecting beliefs about the election outcome. Right now, there are more than 200 students participating in the market, representing almost $5,000 in shares.

The meeting between Bush and Dukakis last Sunday caused a record-increase in the number of shares exchanged — 200 — even though the popular vote figures remained about even.

The shares traded represented about 5 percent of the total shares in the market, said Robert Forsythe, co-director of the Presidential Stock Market. "The New York Stock Exchange never turns over more than 14 percent of its shares in a year," Forsythe said.

George Neumann, UI director of the Presidential Stock Market, said the large volumes of shares exchanged shows that people had strong feelings for their candidates.

"But the strong feelings ultimately balanced out," he said.

The UI market figures shows the race between Dukakis and Bush to be extremely close, with Dukakis holding 48.4 percent of the popular vote and Bush with 49.6 percent. The figures are much less drastic than the recent Gallup poll, which shows Bush ahead with a 7-percent lead.

League of Women Voters drops sponsorship of second debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The League of Women Voters dropped its sponsorship of the second presidential debate Monday in a protest over its lack of control, and the two campaigns quickly agreed to replace it with a bipartisan commission.

League of Women Voters President Nancy Neuman announced the pullout at a Washington news conference where she used strong language to denounce an agreement worked about between the two presidential campaigns for debate format, staging and other details.

She charged it would restrict questioning of the candidates and result in a "charade," devoid of spontaneity and a true exchange on the issues.

"We have no intention of becoming an accessory to the hoodwinking of the American public," Neuman said.

Spokesmen for both Democrat Michael Dukakis and Republican George Bush said the debate would go on, probably on Oct. 13 or 14 as scheduled, with the substitute sponsor.

The bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, which sponsored the first debate 10 days ago in Winston-Salem, N.C., said it accepted the campaigns' invitation and was taking steps to hold the debate in Los Angeles, as planned.

"The commission is delighted to respond positively to the invitation and regards it as a vote of confidence in the commission's approach to the debate," said Janet Brown, executive director of the commission. "We hope to be able to make an announcement in the next day or so about funding partners."

Brown said the group, which was formed by the two national parties, was seeking "local partners" to help finance the debate.

The group was invited to become the new sponsor after Dukakis candidate — stood to lose the most if the League's decision denied him the chance to meet Bush a second time before a national television audience.

"I want to go forward in Los Angeles," Dukakis said. "The agreement (with the Bush campaign) provides that if for some reason the sponsor decides to pull out, we still go ahead. I want to go ahead."

"We have no intention of becoming an accessory to the hoodwinking of the American public." — League of Women Voters President Nancy Neuman campaign chairman Paul Broutas and Bush chairman James Baker talked by telephone and agreed to ask the commission.

The debate had been scheduled for Oct. 13 or 14, depending on the baseball play-off schedule.

The League's move does not affect the debate between vice-presidential nominees scheduled Wednesday evening in Omaha, Neb.

Both the Bush and Dukakis campaigns said the League's decision would not jeopardize the second debate and disputed the League's charge. They pointed to the success of the first debate at Wake Forest University, held under the same terms.

But it was clear that Dukakis — the lesser-known and underdog

Bush spokesman Mark Goodin said the commission agreed to sponsor the debate under the terms rejected by the League.

"They have both agreed that there will be no debate after Oct. 14 and that they will continue to look at Los Angeles, but if that is not doable we will certainly look at other places," Goodin said.

"There is going to be a second presidential debate," Goodin said.

Neuman, the League president, contended the campaigns have so controlled the format that questioning by a panel of journalists will be subject to "very clear restrictions in terms of what they can ask."

She said the agreement that was presented to the League last Wednesday was "a closed-door masterpiece" presented as "a done deal." In a printed statement she did not read at her news conference, she said the agreement "would perpetrate a fraud on the American voter" and "add debates to their list of campaign-trail charades devoid of substance, spontaneity and honest answers to tough questions."

The League's involvement in 1988 debates has been long an issue. Spurred in part by discontent with the League's sponsorship of debates in previous presidential elections, the Republican and Democratic parties joined with the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates to sponsor them this year.

But sponsorship itself became one of the items at issue in hardball debate negotiations between the Dukakis and Bush campaigns. The campaigns ultimately agreed to two debates, one sponsored by the commission and one by the League, plus a vice-presidential debate under commission sponsorship.
