Bentsen, Quayle exchange jabs

Candidates adapt to flair of TV

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Organizers scorned criticism of the staging of Wednesday night's debate between Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen as "a lot of nonsense" which ignores the reality that the event is essentially a television show.

Ed Fouhy, executive producer of the 90-minute confrontation between the two vice-presidential candidates, says it's his business to fret about such seemingly trivial details as camera angles and the height of lecterns on the stage of the Omaha Civic Auditorium.

"This is a television program, and we've got some of the best production people in the world doing it," Fouhy said.

Sharing Fouhy's concerns are the Democratic and Republican contenders' campaign managers, who were eager to exploit the TV format to the best advantage.

The two warmed up with mild-by-comparison jabs over campaign finances, but in general the two candidates stuck to carefully scripted performances from the moment they strode onto the red, white and blue decorated stage.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, left, faces Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., during their vice-presidential debate in Omaha Wednesday night. The moderator and panel are seated in front of the candidates, who answered questions for 90 minutes.

Nominees trade quips and barbs

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle said Wednesday night he has as much experience as John F. Kennedy did when he won the White House and that he is "prepared to lead this country" if necessary. "Senator, you're no Jack Kennedy," Democratic rival Lloyd Bentsen shot back in the most riveting moment of a prime-time campaign debate.

"That was really uncalled for," the 41-year-old Quayle retorted angrily to his 67-year-old rival. Replied Bentsen: "You're the one that was making the comparison, Senator... and I did not think the comparison was well-taken."

The clash over Quayle's readiness for high office was the emotional climax of a high-stakes debate in which the vice-presidential candidates also collided over the environment, Social Security and campaign reform. The two men aimed many of their best lines past each other and in the direction of presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis.

300 sign ad to protest Campus Review attacks

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

Nearly 300 members of the Iowa City community have accused the Campus Review, a conservative local newspaper, with printing advertisements, articles and cartoons that discriminate against minorities.

According to the half-page advertisement in the Oct. 4 Daily Iowan, the 292 names — including Iowa City residents, UI professors and graduate and undergraduate students — "condemn the recent attempts by the Campus Review to incite hatred and violence against various minorities, especially lesbians, gays, feminists, and persons with AIDS."

The advertisement continued, "While we recognize the views expressed in the Campus Review are those of a tiny fanatical minority, we believe it is important to renew the commitment of this community to fight against hatred and intolerance and reaffirm our commitment to human rights..."

Some supporters said they had no expectations of causing a change in the Review's news coverage when they placed the ad. Rather, they hoped to increase the community's awareness that the opinions expressed in the newspaper are not widely accepted.

"If people don't make statements opposing these attitudes, there's an assumption that everyone is in agreement with them," said Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

"This is not a direct challenge for them (the Campus Review) to respond; rather, it's a community combining in an outcry that says this hatred and oppression must stop," Miller said.

It is the hatred of minorities advocated by the Review that encourages acts of violence, Miller said, not outright statements by the newspaper calling for action against minorities.

"In my office we deal with the extreme end of violence — actual sexual abuse — but that violence comes from many different levels, levels which start with hate and discriminatory attitudes," she said. "We see victims who are targeted because of unjust, cruel stereotypes that are perpetuated by the misinformation spread by groups like the Campus Review."

The contents of the Campus Review extend beyond the right of freedom of speech insured by the First Amendment, according to Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women.

"The whole publication is misleading," Sand said. "The newspaper — and I use that term loosely — spreads misinformation, much of which has blatantly racist overtones."

"I will continue to sign petitions against the Campus Review," Sand said. "I think it really is outside the boundaries of free speech."

It is the source of funding for the advertisement, not the allegations the coalition made, that angers Campus Review Editor Jeff Renander.

Renander believes mandatory student fees, collected from tuition payments by UI students, were a source of funding for the advertisement.

Disputes arise over Chile's vote tallies

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—Military President Augusto Pinochet held a slim lead in early government-counted returns, but a much larger opposition tally had him trailing badly in Wednesday's plebiscite on whether his 15-year rule should be extended to 1997.

The turnout was massive and peaceful.

Two hours elapsed between the Interior Ministry's first announcement of partial results and an update. Meanwhile, Pinochet hinted to reporters of possible street violence, and police and army units began to patrol the streets in large numbers.

The ministry said returns from 676 of the 22,248 voting tables nationwide showed 95,668 "yes" votes for continuing Pinochet's presidency and 86,746 "no" votes, with 2,024 blank votes and 2,066 voided for being wrongly marked.

Interior Ministry undersecretary Alberto Cardemil said the figures were from voting tables throughout Chile.

A 16-party opposition coalition conducting a parallel count said its partial totals, given two hours after the ministry's update at 10 p.m., showed the "no" vote leading 318,381 to 189,813, with 13,600 blank votes and 9,172 nullified ballots, an opposition spokesman announced.

Patricio Aylwin, president of the Christian Democratic Party and spokesman for the coalition, Command for The No, said the results showed an opposition victory. "It's clear that the majority of Chileans have voted no," he said.

The opposition charged the government's returns were selective. Narciso Irueta, a vice president of the Christian Democrats, accused the ministry of withholding returns from some tables where the "no" vote won a majority in "an intent at fraud that could develop during the night."

Coalition secretary-general Genaro Arriagada accused the ministry of trying to mislead voters.

Council may adopt keg party permit ordinance

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

Ever-tightening alcohol consumption codes will be further reinforced if a proposed Iowa City Council ordinance is adopted later this month.

The ordinance, currently under consideration by the council, would require keg party hosts to obtain a police permit and agree to provide adequate restroom facilities, security and meet an insurance requirement.

Councilors shelved a similar proposal three years ago, but the issue was recently resurrected when Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins and Mayor John McDonald met last week with representatives from the State Association of Beverage Retail Establishments.

SABRE president Tony Mortale said the ordinance will hold private party hosts to the same liability strictures bar owners abide by.

"The state expects us to serve our product in a responsible manner, and we say, 'Fine, we're doing that. But how can you let these parties get so out of hand when there's no dram shop insurance involved?'" he said.

Mortale said keg party hosts serve a function similar to bar owners, but enjoy immunity from liability suits sometimes incurred by bar owners.

"They go into a bar and they've had a couple drinks and aren't noticeably intoxicated. Say they get into an accident. They can't sue the kegger because there's no dram shop insurance, so they sue the bar owner," Mortale said.

Mayor John McDonald said the intent of the ordinance is not to eliminate keg parties, but to cut down on police manpower expended to manage the parties.

"The basic reasons are some of these very large parties take an inordinate amount of time as far as police officers are concerned," said McDonald. "I heard a short time ago there was a party with 95 kegs. When you get a situation like that, it takes practically all the cops on that shift. We're not trying to discourage parties. We know that parties are going to happen. We're just trying to regulate them," he said.

"Under these circumstances police can show up and say, 'I need to see this particular individual.' They have the name of somebody to go to," said McDonald.

McDonald said the ordinance, if adopted, is not aimed at any specific organization, but designed to provide guidelines for a virtually unregulated activity.

"Probably (fraternities and sororities) would be more involved in it because of the size of the house and the size of the grounds," he said. "We're not really trying to target anyone. But once you decide to throw one of these large parties you've got to take some responsibility for it and provide some of the things that go along with it," McDonald said.

An Iowa City ordinance would be modeled after an existing keg permit code in Cedar Falls, which requires hosts who tap two or more kegs to apply for a permit prior to the event. The Cedar Falls statute also requires the signature of the property landlord.

Cedar Falls police chief Loras Jaeger credited the ordinance for limiting impromptu bashes that violate the privacy of neighbors.

"What this has helped prevent is those, 'Hey, we're gonna get a beer truck (parties),' when all of a sudden there's 500 people on a small lot drinking and urinating on the bushes. This ordinance has controlled those kind of parties," he said.

Jaeger said permit applications are generally approved, but that a few have been rejected because of past ordinance violations.

"You don't want to ban parties," he said. "You want to control them so that everybody can live within tolerable ranges, especially in a college community. It's a win-win situation."

A member of the UI greek community said the ordinance would heap another guideline on the already overregulated drinking environment.

"You are dealing with a lot of pains," said Dar Sampson, president of Kappa Sigma Fraternity, 724 N. Dubuque St. "You'd be taking a lot away from the social aspect of it. Some houses would rather not even deal with it."

Sampson also said bar owners worried about liability should tighten their standards at the door rather than pile further restrictions on the party community.

Misunderstanding with UI over KRUI relocation proves costly

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Miscommunication over the forced relocation of the UI's student radio station may cost KRUI more than $4,000 and a chance at purchasing a new transmitter.

KRUI general manager Jim Haverkamp said the UI originally agreed to pay all costs involved in relocating the radio station from the basement to the second floor of South Quadrangle.

"When the UI initiated the project, they said 'This is a move — you are being displaced, so we will pay for the cost of providing you with the same facilities elsewhere,'" Haverkamp said. "The cost of rewiring just because of the move is about $4,500, and now the (UI is) saying we have to pay all of that."

The move is necessary because of the upcoming demolition of the UI Armory to make way for the addition of a psychiatric pavilion to the UI Hospitals and Clinics. As a result of the Armory demolition, UI ROTC facilities will be relocated in the basement and part of the first floor of South Quadrangle.

Remodeling to the second floor will be finished Nov. 4, Haverkamp said, adding that the radio station has until Nov. 15 to complete its move. The total cost of relocating ROTC and KRUI is $290,000, he said.

"We think an extra $4,500 is not that big a deal, although for us it would be," he said. "One way or another they want the students to pay for it."

But UI Dean of Student Services Phillip Jones said the UI never agreed to pay for the rewiring.

"That was a misunderstanding," Jones said. "(The UI Department of Facilities Planning and Utilization has done what they agreed to do. They submitted a budget to the state Board of Regents, and they don't have money for anything but what they asked for, so it's not really an issue.

The misunderstanding arose when KRUI was told that the rewiring would have to be taken care of "independently," Jones said.

"What facilities and planning was saying to KRUI was 'You contract for it, you pay for it,'" he said.

Haverkamp said that if the station is forced to pay for the rewiring, it stands to miss out on an opportunity to replace its 5-year-old transmitter.

"We had a contingency fund set up by UI Vice President (for Student Services) Philip Hubbard with the idea that the student government could dole it out to us as they saw fit," he said. "Well, now the money's almost gone, and we've gotten a bit of a deal on a new transmitter. Jones is saying this rewiring is a cost that we have to bear, which means the transmitter is out the window."

"We want to use the old transmitter as a back-up, which we don't have now," Haverkamp said. "As of now, if this transmitter goes out on us, we're off the air."

South Korea accused of firing on DMZ post

TOKYO — North Korea accused South Korean troops Wednesday of firing at one of the North's guard posts in the demilitarized zone separating the countries.

The North also accused the South of deliberately increasing tensions after the Olympic Games.

The North's official Korean Central News Agency said the "grave military provocation" occurred in the eastern portion of the DMZ at about 1:20 p.m.

"Today they fired several pinpoint shots at our side's post from an artillery piece which they had carried into the DMZ by stealth," said the English-language report monitored in Tokyo.

It said the alleged shooting threatened North Korean military personnel and damaged facilities at the post.

The news agency charged that the alleged attack "vividly proves" that proposals by the South Korean government for dialogue and detente between the countries were "hypocrisy and deception."

Stalemate may be broken in Iran-Iraq talks

UNITED NATIONS — Iran has agreed to stop searching ships in international waters of the Persian Gulf that it suspects of carrying war cargo to Iraq, sources in the United Nations said Wednesday.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, also said Iraq agreed to postpone discussing ownership of the disputed Shatt-al-Arab waterway, Iraq's only outlet to the gulf. Iraq has a long gulf coastline with numerous ports.

Breakthroughs on these two issues could help end the stalemate in the Iran-Iraq peace talks that began Aug. 25 in Geneva. The two neighbors in the oil-rich gulf, at war for eight years, agreed on Aug. 20 to a U.N.-sponsored truce.

The sources said U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar proposed the compromises during talks that began last week with the foreign ministers of Iran and Iraq. Those talks ended Wednesday.

Under the proposals, Iran will no longer stop vessels flying a neutral flag in international gulf waters and the Strait of Hormuz, and Iraq consented to discuss its claims to Shatt-al-Arab later in the negotiations, the sources said.

Fraternity man convicted of sexual battery

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A member of a fraternity that was kicked off campus after members were accused of raping two women has been convicted of sexual battery against a Florida State University student.

Sean Charles Russell, 23, insisted the 18-year-old woman agreed to have sex with him at his apartment after a party Jan. 7 at the Pi Kappa Alpha house. The jury deliberated about two hours Tuesday before returning the verdict.

Russell, who is being held in jail, faces 4½ to 7 years in prison, said prosecutor Marty Moore. No sentencing date was set.

The woman told police she left the party about 2 a.m. and volunteered to give Russell a ride home. She said she went inside his apartment, drank beer and kissed Russell, but she did not consent to sex.

Three other members of the fraternity are awaiting trial on charges they raped a 18-year-old freshman during a March fraternity party and then carried her to a neighboring frat house so it would appear she was assaulted there.

No trial date has been set. The Pi Kappa Alpha chapter at Florida State was kicked off campus as a result of the charges.

Money survey says two-thirds of Americans want rich to pay more taxes

NEW YORK (AP) — More than two-thirds of Americans surveyed want the rich to pay more taxes, and an increasing number of people are disenchanted with the new federal tax law, according to a poll released Wednesday.

The sixth annual Money magazine survey on Americans and their money also found many respondents expect the economy to sour in the coming months. But those surveyed don't expect to see their own financial situations worsen.

The findings of the survey, conducted last spring by Lieberman Research Inc., were based on questionnaires completed by 2,370 adults nationwide. The survey has a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

The survey was taken after taxpayers had their initial encounter with filing returns under the new income tax law.

Thirty-five percent of the respondents said the new law was less fair than the old, while 17 percent said it was more fair, 15 percent said it was as fair and 33 percent said they did not know.

In contrast, in a poll taken in October 1986, 22 percent of the respondents said the new law was less fair, while 30 percent said it was more fair, 11 percent said it was as fair and 37 percent did not know.

Asked whether they thought they would pay more or less taxes under the new law, 37 percent said they thought they would pay more, 14 expected to pay less and 26 percent said they thought their taxes would remain the same. Twenty-three percent said they did not know.

S&L industry bailout requires $25 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Wednesday that his agency can no longer cover the cost of rescuing ailing savings institutions without placing "an exceedingly heavy burden" on the industry.

M. Danny Wall, whose agency regulates the nation's 3,000 S&Ls, told the Senate Budget Committee it will cost $45 billion to $50 billion to clean up the industry, boosting an earlier projection by more than one-third.

In July, Wall said it would cost $31 billion, an increase in turn from a previous estimate of $22 billion.

Noting that the bank board has resolved 122 cases so far this year at a cost of $20 billion, Wall said it would cost an additional $25 billion to $30 billion for the work that remains to be done.

As much as $10 billion of the cost remaining could be spent between now and the end of the year to rescue dozens of additional institutions, he said.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., chairman of the committee, complained that Wall's shifting estimates "offer little reassurance to the taxpayer" and said, "We could be hearing about a $100 billion problem just in time for Christmas."

Chiles also said the bank board, by issuing promissory notes that are counted toward the federal budget deficit, was spending billions of dollars without congressional authorization.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department on Wednesday missed as "pure fantasy" a claim by an Iranian official that the Reagan administration secretly negotiated with Iran for the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

"There have been no negotiations," said a spokesman for the United States and Iranian officials, said spokeswoman Oakley. "There may be individuals who misrepresent themselves as speaking on behalf of the U.S. government. That is not."

Former Iranian President Hassan Bani-Sadr said Tuesday that Richard Lawless, former U.S. official, had negotiated with Iran on behalf of Vice President Bush with a representative of the Iranian Parliament, said Hashemi Rafsanjani.

In reply, Oakley said: "I flatly denied anyone is speaking on behalf of the U.S. government." The New York Times and Washington Times, quoting her, did not identify her. In addition, The New York Times quoted an unidentified former government official as saying Lawless had worked in the operations directorate until years ago.

The State Department's graphic Register said in addition that Lawless had worked as an "area analyst" for the State Department.

Oakley said the United States urged other governments to release the nine American hostages in Lebanon by pro-Iranian officials.

U.S. official disclaims contact with Iranians

WASHINGTON (AP)—The State Department on Wednesday dismissed as "pure fantasy" an assertion by an Iranian opposition leader that the Reagan administration secretly negotiated with Tehran for the release of American hostages in Lebanon.

"There have been no negotiations, no direct contacts between the United States and Iranian officials," said spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley. "There may be private individuals who misrepresented themselves as speaking on behalf of the U.S. government. They are not."

Former Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr said Tuesday in Paris that Richard Lawless, a former U.S. official, had negotiated on behalf of Vice President George Bush with a representative of Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani.

In reply, Oakley said: "We have flatly denied anyone is speaking on behalf of the U.S. government."

The New York Times and the Washington Times, quoting sources they did not identify, reported Wednesday that Lawless worked for the Central Intelligence Agency at the U.S. Embassy in Seoul in the 1970s, during the same period Bush's national security adviser, Donald Gregg, served with the CIA in Korea.

In addition, The New York Times quoted an unidentified former government official as saying that Lawless had worked in the CIA's operations directorate until several years ago.

The State Department's "Biographic Register" said in its 1974 edition that Lawless had worked as an "area analyst" for the Pentagon and the State Department.

Oakley said the United States had urged other governments to use their influence to secure the release of the nine Americans held in Lebanon by pro-Iranian bands.

But she said none of the messages exchanged between the United States and Iranian governments through other countries dealt specifically with releasing the hos-

State Department employee denies role in hostage deal

WASHINGTON (AP)—A former State Department employee denied emphatically Wednesday an Iranian opposition leader's assertion that he was involved in negotiating a release of American hostages in Lebanon.

In a statement released by the co-owner of his trade and investment consulting firm here, Richard Lawless said: "I categorically deny and state for the record that I am involved either directly or indirectly in any discussions or negotiations" on the nine hostages.

Former Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr said Tuesday in Paris that Lawless had negotiated in behalf of Vice President George Bush with a representative of Iranian Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, in an attempt to get American hostages liberated.

Lawless was in his office Wednesday, but Therese Shaheen, a co-owner of the business, spoke on his behalf in an interview.

She said they felt Lawless' reputation "had been harmed" by Bani-Sadr's allegations made after hostage Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian-born U.S. resident, was released from 20 months of captivity by pro-Iranian forces.

Lawless said in the statement that "I have never in my entire life had any direct or indirect contact with any Iranian government officials or any Iranian nationals claiming to represent the Iranian government or any Iranian-related interests."

Bani-Sadr had said Lawless was attempting to negotiate the release of the hostages on Bush's behalf. Last week, an Israeli newspaper, The Nation, said U.S. government officials were engaged in secret talks with Iranians in Geneva aimed at setting the hostages free and improving relations between the United States and Iran.

Bani-Sadr also said a shipment of arms furnished by the United States was destined for Iran.

Lawless, president of the consulting firm U.S.-Asia, also said, "I deny that I have any active relationship with anyone on the staff of Vice President Bush or the Bush campaign organization which relates in any way to this or any similar issue."

"I have maintained this position in numerous discussions," he said.

Lawless worked for the CIA at the U.S. Embassy in Seoul, South Korea, between 1973 and 1975.

But that doesn't exclude the possibility that there may be somebody out there, as we speak, who says 'I'm speaking for the U.S. government.' I'm just trying to be very prudent and cautious. But I don't know of any names of anyone who is doing this."

She added: "Only U.S. government officials are authorized to speak on this matter and none have."

Her immediate comment on Bani-Sadr's assertions were two blunt words: "Pure fantasy."

With the arrival of Mithileshwar Singh, a freed Indian hostage, at the U.S. military hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, and a lack of indications the nine Americans would be released, a State Department task force set up Monday to deal with the situation was disbanded Tuesday evening.

President Ronald Reagan, talking to reporters, said he has heard nothing to indicate other hostages might soon be set free. "We desperately are hoping, continuing to try," he said.

But he also said, "I've never been able to explain... the Iranians, what their strategies are and what they do. But obviously we could not do any negotiating with them unless and until the hostages are released."

Oakley said Singh, a legal U.S. resident, would travel to the United States after a thorough medical examination in Wiesbaden, but his plans had not jelled.

She said a preliminary checkup in Damascus, where he had been taken by Syrian forces after his release Monday in Beirut, confirmed he had "previously known problems" of diabetes, hypertension and possible coronary artery disease and had lost a considerable amount of weight and muscle mass during his 20-month captivity.

"He was treated with appropriate medicines, is in good spirits and has traveled well," Oakley said of the 60-year-old chairman of the business administration department at the Beirut University College.

Singh had been held by the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine. Nine Americans, three Britons, an Irishman, an Italian and a Belgian remain in captivity in Lebanon, according to the State Department's Office for Counter-Terrorism. Three of the Americans are believed held by the group that freed Singh.

Christian hypocrisy

A young man by the name of Jeff Proctor unfortunately was born a hemophiliac 18 years ago and even more tragic, he contracted the AIDS virus through a blood transfusion necessitated by his disease. Jeff found out in 1986 that he had contracted the AIDS virus; the Christian high school he attended learned of the situation shortly thereafter. The school, East Moline Christian, asked Jeff not to enroll in the fall for his junior year.

It seems that the school officials were afraid to allow Jeff's return because of voiced fears by the other children's parents in the school district. Evidently, the school wasn't content just to block Jeff's return. Jeff's mother Sharon, a kindergarten teacher in the Christian school district, was also asked not to return. The school again cited fears that other parents might withdraw their children if she was allowed to return to her teaching duties.

The irony of a Christian school openly denying one of its students — one of its "flock" — the right to attend because of a life-shortening disease might be humorous if the situation weren't so tragic. Proctor's disease has altered his life like only those faced with a terminal disease would know. But the prospect of dying young isn't the only thing he has to deal with, not now. The school — the Church, if you will — also cowardly presented Jeff with the realities of rejection, ostracism, stigmatism and a cruel lack of compassion.

The Proctors have since left the area and Jeff has enrolled in a different (public) high school where he was admitted according to the same criteria as any other student, as should be the case. Although Jeff Proctor has been wrongly denied the opportunity to finish his schooling with his former classmates, ironically he has been privileged to a revealing glimpse into people's true nature. Considering the compassionless treatment he and his family received from school officials and the community in general, Jeff, if nothing else, has learned an invaluable lesson concerning fear and ignorance and the hypocrisy of the Christian religion in general.

Dumping death

Four thousand tons of industrial and nuclear waste were recently dumped in the small African country of Nigeria, thanks to the corrupt re-working of the truth by Italian expatriate Gianfranco Raffaelli.

Raffaelli duped the Pharmacist Board of Nigeria into thinking that the four thousand tons of toxic materials were "non-explosive, non-radioactive and non-self combusting" industrial waste.

In fact, the "payload" consisted of many toxic chemicals including methyl melamine, dimethyl formaldehyde, ethylacetate formaldehyde, polyurethanes, and about 150 tons of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs).

There can be no doubt that Raffaelli's motive was money, for highly industrialized countries will pay big bucks to dump waste in small countries, like Nigeria, due to the even bigger bucks they would pay if dumping the same waste at home. The monetary difference between dumping waste in Africa and the country where the waste is produced is nearly one hundred fold.

Raffaelli's actions represent a reckless disregard for the people of Nigeria. The presence of those toxic wastes creates a life-threatening situation.

A similar situation exists on the Guinean Island of Kassa, where 15,000 tons of incinerator ash were dumped in May.

Ignorance of the toxicity of the waste material by the small countries is largely to blame in these instances, but any country who takes advantage of that ignorance is behaving unethically and threatening innocent people. Highly industrialized countries should take responsibility for the waste that they produce, instead of shoving it off on smaller, less-developed nations. Taking responsibility includes finding a solution to the problem that they created, and finding one that doesn't endanger the lives of its inhabitants.

Iowa has plenty of tall tales

I don't feel as razor blade sharp today as I usually do so I thought I would lob a softball onto the journalistic field of play and tell some Iowa stories.

Iowa is a unique place in that many people don't think of it as having any vivid stories to tell like some other places in the Deep South or the Wild West or the old Northeast. Not true. When I first came to Iowa I hunted high and low for good stories. Assuming that Iowans were made up of the same human material as the rest of the country, I was sure that they had tales to tell of interesting and enduring character. I was looking for stories like that of the old widow woman who kept her brother's body in the basement, or the escaped circus elephant that walked into city hall one day and refused to leave the mayor's office.

Something of that ilk. Just your basic interesting story. But every one I met seemed so relentlessly healthy and well behaved I immediately concluded that nothing of interest ever happened here. Or if it did, no one talked about it.

The truth of the matter is, all kinds of perverse and weird crap happens in Iowa. The problem really is that Iowans don't think it polite to point it out.

The story that Iowans will only tell when they are into their third bottle of scotch is the one about the hogs gone wild. Any one version is about like another, and it goes like this: Uncle Herman left the house carrying the slop bucket to go down and feed the hogs. Uncle Herman is old and not so steady on his legs. He was also carrying bacon bits in the bucket. Betty Jean, the wife in this version, waited for him to come back for lunch and he didn't show. After a while she became alarmed and went down to the hog pen to check on Herman. What did she find? Herman's bones scattered all over the lot and picked clean, surrounded by several grinning hogs. Apparently, he'd had a stroke and fell down and, as every farm-boy knows, once you're looking up at a hog instead of looking down on it, you've met your maker. Hogs are omnivorous, you see.

Or then there was the story about the over-sized male Doberman farm dog and how it was so mean it could bite a steel rod in half. I don't think there are four people in the entire state of Iowa who have lived on a farm and can't mention at least one such dog. I witnessed one such creature myself. On a farm about ten miles from here, near Oxford, I went with a friend to visit a fellow. I was told on the way out there that this individual was in the marijuana trade — production mostly — and kept a large guard dog for protection.

Sure enough, the dog was wide awake when we pulled in the drive. Such an energetic and immediate greeting I'd never seen before. Even while the car was rolling to a stop, there was a five-foot tall dog looking at me in the eye through the rolled-up window, barking like I was the devil himself come to visit.

Concluding it was best, we decided to sit in the car and honk the horn until help arrived. After a considerable amount of dog drool had run down my window, a guy wearing blue jeans and no shirt came out of the house. He was smiling and glad to see us and yelled, "Bruno!" just once and the dog dropped into a semi-relaxed but ready position.

After we'd had our little chat in the house and were walking back to the car, I noticed a couple of circular objects laying about 30 yards out in the grass. To me, they looked like lumpy basketballs, but with patches on them. I asked the guy what they were. He told me, "Cow heads. Bruno drags them in here from somewhere."

Then about three weeks later I heard another story about Bruno. And I heard this story from the person it happened to. Seems that Bruno's owner had a party out there with many kegs of beer and other refreshment. Probably three dozen adults around and several little kids. Bruno was tied to a stake with about 40 feet of chain he could run out. There was a softball game going on and my friend was playing left field. Everyone was having a good time and acting goofy and joking around during the game when a ball was fouled way out in left field.

Bruno was tied up way out in left field.

My friend innocently jogged out after the ball having forgotten all about the 40 feet of chain. Just when he bent down for the ball, Bruno seemed to launch himself from a sitting position many yards away and within half a second had my friend's neck in his mouth.

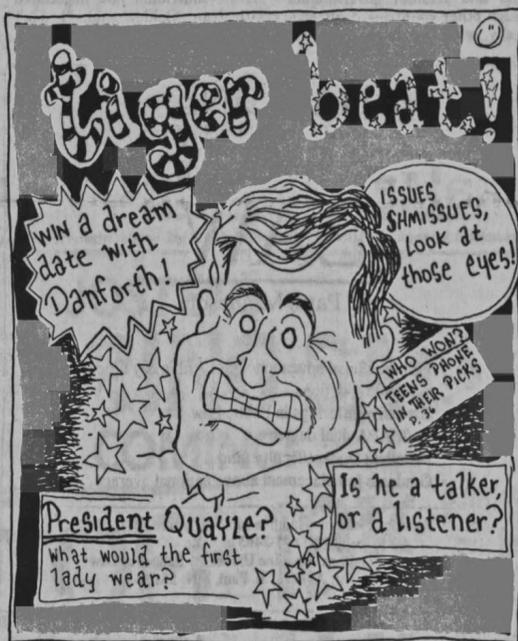

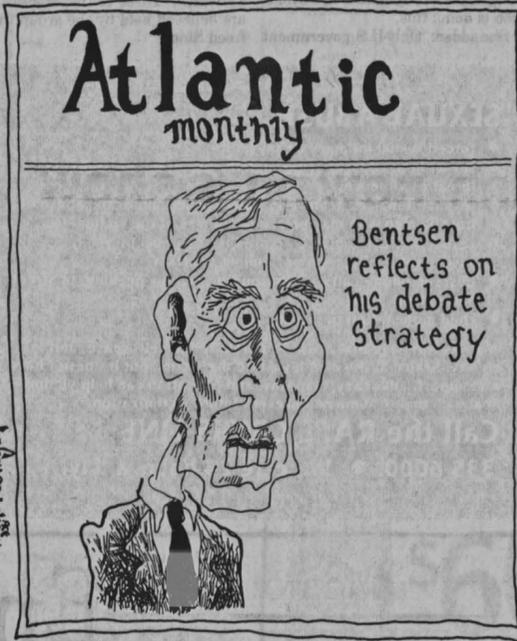

Immediate sobriety swam over him. Precious memories of the past raced through his mind. He froze and felt Bruno's warm breath on his chin. Time stopped and hours seemed to pass while the others took time to realize what was happening. Finally, that old familiar yell was heard, "Bruno!"

My friend said he dropped like a wet rag to the ground and that it took him many, many cups of beer after that to regain his former good humor.

Being a naturally suspicious person and wanting verification for such an interesting tale, I asked him, "Are you sure you're not making this up?" My friend pulled down his shirt collar and showed me the side of his neck. Two pencil size holes were plain as day. Then he turned around and showed me the other side of his neck. Two more holes.

I report these stories as a public service. Iowa can hold its head high when it comes to standing on a par with the rest of the country for good stories. So if you're new in town and wondering where the excitement is, blame it on your dull friends. You just don't know the right people yet.

Ferretting out pinko subversives

In a praiseworthy outburst of patriotism, Sen. J. Danforth Quayle III has challenged Michael Dukakis to renounce his membership in the American Civil Liberties Union.

So far, Dukakis has arrogantly ignored Quayle's challenge. Thus he remains a card-carrying member of this notorious organization.

Which is just further evidence that what this country needs is a rebirth of something that used to be called the House Un-American Activities Committee. HUAC for short.

This was a congressional committee made up of good, patriotic rustics from places like Bigbelch, Ark., and Kickstump, Okla.

They pursued liberals, pinkos and others they suspected of being card-carrying commies or wearing pointy shoes, having a foreign-sounding name, looking Jewish or taking the abolition of slavery too seriously.

Unfortunately, the committee faded away in the 1960s, after a Chicago lawyer named Albert Jenner, represented a prominent heart surgeon who was known to wear pink ties, rudely told them they were boobs and to bug off.

So now that the issue has been raised that Dukakis is a card-carrying member of the ACLU, it might be time to resurrect the old House Un-American Activities Committee to hold hearings and find out just how many others are carriers of this card.

Mike Royko

Suspects could be called before the committee and asked:

"Do you now, or have you ever believed in civil liberties?"

"Yes, When I was younger and more foolish."

"Did you belong to any organization that advocated civil liberties?"

"Yes, God help me. I was once duped into joining such an organization."

"And what was the name of this organization?"

"It was called (sob, blubber) the American Civil Liberties Union."

"And you admit that you were a card-carrying member of this organization?"

"Yes, as I sit here weeping with shame and tearing out my hair in remorse. I confess, I confess."

"While a member, did you advocate free speech?"

"Damn my soul, I did, yes I did."

"Did you engage in a conspiracy with other card-carrying members of this organization to oppose censorship, to defend the Constitution and the Bill of Rights?"

"To my everlasting shame, I did."

"Did you funnel money to this organization for the purpose of furthering its subversive goals?"

"Yes, every year, I sent a check when I would renew my membership."

"Your card-carrying membership?"

"Yes I carried it. I carried the card."

"Where did you carry it?"

"I carried it behind my driver's license. In my wallet. Right hip pocket."

"Did you carry it at all times?"

"Yes, except when I took a shower or went to bed."

"Now, tell us this. Did you ever recruit others to be card-carrying members of this organization?"

"Yes, as I hang my head in shame, I admit that I did. I recruited."

"Will you give us the names of the people you recruited to be card-carrying members?"

"Must I?"

"If you don't, we can hold you in contempt."

"Then I'll tell you, I recruited my wife."

"Your own wife was a card-carrying member?"

"Yes, she carried it in her purse."

"And who else?"

"My brother-in-law, my upstairs neighbor, my secretary, my proctologist, and . . . and . . . I can't go on."

"You must. You will feel better, cleansed."

"I recruited my son."

"Your own son? Mr. Chairman, may I say that this man is a cur?"

"You may, although I think he is a swine myself. Continue the questioning."

"Yes. Now, did you and those you recruited discuss civil liberties, free speech and how you might conspire to spread these concepts?"

"We did."

"And where did you meet?"

"I would often meet with my son and wife at home. I met with my upstairs neighbors on the stairs. My secretary in the office."

"In other words, you shifted your meeting places with these card-carrying members around, on the move, making detection difficult? You were always sneaking around, weren't you?"

"In the summer I even wore dark glasses."

"My final question. You have renounced your membership, have you not? You no longer card-carrying member, right?"

"Yes. I am proud to say I did. I tore the card into itty-bitty pieces and flushed it away like doo-doo."

"And you did that because you realized that you were a dupe of the civil libertarians, free speechers and other subversives?"

"Absolutely."

"Any other reason?"

"Yes, I'm running for public office, and I wanted to get out before my opponent did so I could accuse him."

"You're a fine American and will make a great public servant."

"I will if this gimmick works."

Both men used the debate to well-rehearsed campaign themes. Bentsen accused the Republican of trying to cut Social Security the past and said they are likely to try again if they win the White House this year. Quayle shot that the Democrats were trying to scare the older people of country.

Bentsen said the Reagan administration had appointed high environmental officials who the equivalent of Bonnie Clyde. But Quayle brought Boston Harbor, accusing Dukakis of allowing a major environmental problem to fester a few blocks from his Statehouse office.

Republicans looked to the debate to erase doubts about the man on the ticket, while Democrats hoped to reinforce them.

"This guy under tremendous pressure came through with flying colors," Bush told reporters in a hotel suite in Fort Worth.

"I see what I've seen," he said.

Countered Democratic Sen. Simon of Illinois, "Neither score a knockout. But Lloyd Bentsen looked and sounded more presidential."

The Indiana senator said he has more experience in critical areas than Democrat Dukakis added, "If qualifications alone are going to be the issue in this campaign, George Bush has the qualifications that Michael Dukakis and Lloyd Bentsen combine."

Quayle fielded a barrage of challenging questions about his background and qualifications answered them without incident. Bentsen committed no major errors either.

Dukakis: I'm gaining momentum

Michael Dukakis

BOSTON (AP)—Michael Dukakis Wednesday accused George Bush of politically exploiting one of his own strengths—his Massachusetts furlough program, said Dukakis. Although program, said Dukakis, campaign momentum has shifted to him and promised "five long, tough, aggressive weeks" up to the election.

The Democratic presidential nominee also wished his running mate, Lloyd Bentsen, well in the Wednesday night debate between the vice-presidential candidates. He used the event to joke about the beginning of the American League playoff series between the Boston Red Sox and the Oakland Athletics.

"Our campaign is picking up steam," Dukakis told a news conference at the Massachusetts Statehouse, where he spent a day off the campaign trail catching up on gubernatorial duties. "You can sense it. You can feel it. And I think it's because the American people want to move forward."

Republican nominee Bush has made his criticism of a Massachusetts furlough program a staple of his campaign and on Wednesday night aired a new television ad accusing Dukakis of running a "revolving door" prison system. At the center of Bush's attacks is a case in which an inmate on furlough raped a Maryland woman and assaulted her fiancé.

Dukakis, who earlier this year signed legislation tightening eligibility requirements for the program, said Bush was exploiting that case despite a comparable federal program.

Bush plans aid package for children

George Bush

DENVER — George Bush on Wednesday proposed a $3.9 billion "invest in our children" plan focusing on school programs and environmental and quality-of-life issues Bush said will foster stronger children through "a family that functions and an environment that motivates."

The package, including some proposals Bush has made before, would be aimed at helping poor people through tax code revisions and Medicaid efforts, and would also include anti-crime and anti-gang sections as well as efforts to remove toxic substances from school environments.

A 32-page summary released by the Republican's presidential campaign also includes proposals to require Medicaid coverage for poor children and to give the states $10 million for developing programs against hazardous radon gas.

Bush called for a national survey of schools in 1990 to detect and get rid of radon, and also for "strict standards" covering manufacturers who use lead in development of consumer products.

Although Bush said in a remark at a Arapahoe High School that "I don't see this problem in terms of money," campaign adviser Deborah Steelman said the entire package would cost about $3.9 billion in federal money for the first year of a five-year plan.

Included in that figure is a previously announced $2.2 billion tax credit program for child care. Steelman said the new Medicaid proposals would amount to some $300 million.

"Why are some children still in trouble after 50 years of liberal programs aimed at helping them?" Bush asked. "Because liberalism didn't help — it often made the problem worse."

At the high school in the Denver suburb of Littleton, Bush said,

"Our future will be as strong tomorrow as our children are today. And our children will be as strong as their education allows. Their education will be as strong as their schools. But something more is required: a family that functions and an environment that motivates."

Included in the plan is a call to phase in affordable Medicaid coverage for pregnant women and infants with incomes up to 185 percent of the poverty level. Bush also would expand on current Medicaid coverage for children of families with incomes below the poverty by providing healthcare education for those families.

The proposals were an elaboration on Bush's remarks in his first debate with Democratic rival Michael Dukakis that he wanted to allow the poor to "buy into" Medicaid, said Steelman.

Bush said he would also expand the Maternal and Child Health Block Grant program to provide health and Medicaid information for pregnant women and provide case management "as an essential component for high risk in teen-age pregnancies that are likely to result in low birth weight."

The radon and lead programs would cost $30 million, and a program to help turn over subsidized housing to tenants would cost $80 million, she said.

That answer came in response to a question about suggestions by Texas Democrats that Dukakis was trailing in that key state despite having a Texan running mate because he had not responded forcefully enough to Bush's attacks on crime, gun control and other issues.

Dukakis promised he would return the salvos soon, and aides said they would come as soon as Thursday, when Dukakis planned to visit Texas with Bentsen.

"We have five, long, tough, aggressive weeks to go and believe me we'll be tough and aggressive in Texas and across this country, and I think we're going to beat them in Texas," Dukakis said.

Dukakis also defended his new ads portraying Bush as an issueless candidate controlled by advisers.

"I wanted to express the very strong feeling that I have and that I think many have that the Bush campaign is essentially a packaged candidacy, and it's important for people to understand that," said Dukakis.

Dukakis closes in on Bush, new polls show

NEW YORK (AP) — A second national poll has found Democrat Michael Dukakis closing in on George Bush in the presidential race, although a newer survey released Wednesday gave the Republican a slightly better lead.

Both surveys found many voters expressing concern about Bush's running mate, Sen. Dan Quayle of Indiana.

The newer poll, an ABC News-Washington Post survey conducted from Sept. 28 through Tuesday, put the race at 51-44 percent with the Republicans in the numerical lead. The poll of 1,196 likely voters had an error margin of about 4 points.

In the other survey, a Harris poll conducted last week, the Republicans won support from 49 percent of 1,235 likely voters, to 46 percent for the Democrats. It also was a dead heat, given the three-point margin of error.

A Harris poll early last month put the race a bit wider, at 50-44 with Bush and Quayle ahead. Similarly, a CBS News-New York Times poll released Tuesday put the race at 48-46, tightened from 49-44 later last month.

The ABC-Post and Harris polls were released on the night of Quayle's debate with Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, the Democratic vice-presidential nominee. Like other polls, both found doubts about Quayle's qualifications for office.

In the ABC-Post poll, 40 percent said Quayle was qualified to be vice president, but 33 percent said not; the rest didn't know. By contrast, 67 percent said Bentsen was qualified and just 7 percent said not.

In the Harris poll, conducted Sept. 24-29, only one-third believed Quayle was qualified to be president if that became necessary. When respondents were asked their preference for vice president only, Bentsen beat Quayle solidly, 59-37. And voters by 56-25 percent said Dukakis had done better than Bush at picking a running mate.

Jerusalem combed; bombs injure police

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops shot and wounded 13 Palestinians in several clashes Wednesday, Arab hospital officials said. The army said two soldiers were injured when a fire bomb smashed into their jeep in the occupied West Bank.

Jerusalem police mounted a house-to-house search in two Arab neighborhoods for the second day in a row, looking for suspected rioters, police spokesman Alex Lapidot said.

The sweep, involving 150 police officers, was one of the largest in Jerusalem since the Palestinian uprising began last Dec. 8.

Nitham Abu Hawalah, 23, of the West Bank's Balata refugee camp, died Wednesday after being hit by nine bullets in a clash with troops more than a week ago, officials at Jerusalem's Mukassad Hospital said.

The fatality brought to 281 the number of Palestinians killed in the uprising in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which Israel seized from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967

Middle East War. Six Israelis also have died in the violence.

An army spokesman said the two soldiers were hit by a fire bomb as they drove through Tulkarem. Israel television reported that one trooper suffered moderate to serious burns while the other was lightly injured.

The army clamped a curfew on Tulkarem and started to comb the area.

At least 14 people were arrested in Abu Tor and Silwan on the southern outskirts of Jerusalem, and a police crackdown which started late Tuesday was to continue until Thursday, police and Israel television said.

The detainees "are suspected of participating in stone-throwing incidents and other disturbances," Lapidot said.

Silwan and the Arab sector of Abu Tor have been major trouble spots since the Palestinian uprising began. Both neighborhoods are part of Arab east Jerusalem which Israel annexed after the 1967 Middle East War.

Israeli police conduct a pre-dawn house-to-house search in a Palestinian neighborhood looking for riot suspects in Israeli-annexed east Jerusalem Wednesday.

Lapidot said police were also searching for tax evaders in the two neighborhoods. Underground leaders of the Palestinian uprising have called on their followers to stop paying taxes to the Israeli authorities.

About a dozen Arabs were hustled out of their homes in pajamas and handed court summonses for tax evasion, reporters at the scene said.

Troops shot and wounded nine Arabs, including an 11-year-old boy and three teen-agers, in clashes in the West Bank city of Nablus, Arab hospital officials said. One of the wounded, 16-year-old Jihad Dib, was shot in the head and listed in critical condition at Mukassad Hospital.

The military command confirmed five casualties and said it was investigating the other reports.

In Balata, news of Hawalah's death sparked a stone-throwing riot and the army clamped a curfew on the camp's 12,000 residents.

Bullet policy prompts call for tighter controls in Israel

GAZA CITY, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — The Israeli army's use of plastic bullets to break up Palestinian demonstrations is filling hospital wards with casualties and prompting calls for tighter controls.

Victims of the new ammunition, including two teen-agers treated for plastic bullet wounds at Ahli Arab Hospital in Gaza City, complain that stones thrown by protesters do not warrant the penalty.

"It's unreasonable punishment," said Mazul Abu Lail, 19, a tailor who was shot in the ankle.

In a nearby bed, 16-year-old Rifaaat Massoud, a construction worker, nodded in agreement.

"It isn't right and it isn't fair for the soldiers to shoot innocent people," Massoud said, shifting uncomfortably with a bullet wound in his left side.

The plastic bullet was introduced in August to supplement rubber bullets, water cannons, tear gas and clubs in dealing with the uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin said the other weapons "proved to be insufficient to cope with stone throwing" and that the army needed something less lethal than lead bullets.

The aim, Rabin said, is to reduce anti-Israeli violence in the territories with a minimum of fatalities. Since the uprising began Dec. 8, at least 280 Palestinians have been killed and hundreds injured. Six Israelis have died.

But Rabin has acknowledged that the introduction of the plastic bullets may lead to more deaths.

In the past three weeks, more than 325 Palestinians have been wounded in clashes with Israeli troops, many by plastic bullets, hospital officials and Arab sources say.

The army says plastic bullets can penetrate the body, but they are not supposed to be lethal if fired from at least 70 yards. However, at least four deaths from plastic bullets have been reported at Shifa Hospital in Gaza City.

The bullets, developed after Israeli officials studied use of plastic ammunition in France, are produced in Israel.

Ad

ment. The advertisement cost $323, according to DI Advertising Manager Jim Leonard. The ad was paid for with a $251 university voucher and numerous personal checks, he said.

"They're using mandatory student fees to run ads that are attacking student groups," Renander said. "They only had $251, which was paid by an approved student group. Why did this other money get a student discount rate?"

But lawyer Duane Rohovit, who is also enrolled in classes at the UI, said all the funds were solicited from people named in the advertisement.

"I know for a fact that not one cent came from anywhere but the donations made by the people listed in the ad, and we can prove it," Rohovit said. "The voucher system from the university will show that we first deposited the cash and then removed it."

"If people don't make statements opposing these attitudes, there's an assumption that everyone is in agreement with them." — Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

"I do believe in the right of the Review to publish, as do most of the people who signed the ad, but this is also about our First Amendment rights," Rohovit said.

Leonard acknowledged the DI's error in calculating the cost of the ad. "Technically, the remaining one-fourth of the ad should have been made at the open rate," Leonard said.

The open rate for advertisements at The Daily Iowan is $9.72 per column inch. The rates charged to student groups is $5.14 per column inch.

Renander also disclaimed the allegations made in the advertisement.

"Here's the question I have for them: Can they point to one example when we have incited violence? The answer is no," he said. "We're doing nothing different than the National Lampoon or any other humor magazine."

"Give me one example of a case in which the Campus Review has incited violence. There aren't any," Renander said. "The whole thing is a sham. These people are fundamentally intolerant of people and ideas that they don't agree with."

U.N. proposes force for Honduras

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Nicaragua expressed strong interest Wednesday in a Honduran proposal for creation of an international peace force to oversee the removal of Nicaraguan rebels from Honduran territory.

Nicaragua's foreign minister, Miguel D'Escoto, told The Associated Press in an interview that he requested an urgent meeting with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Honduran Foreign Minister Carlos Lopez Contreras to discuss the proposal.

Lopez Contreras recommended in a speech to the General Assembly Tuesday night that military forces from Canada, Spain and West Germany be sent to Honduras to carry out the proposed mission.

Lopez Contreras said the peace force would be asked to evict Salvadoran rebels from Honduras, as well as the U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels known as Contras.

"We would like to give him the benefit of the doubt," D'Escoto said, adding that Honduras has made such proposals before but never followed up on them.

At least 10,000 Nicaraguan insurgents have settled along the Honduran side of the country's border with Nicaragua since the U.S. Congress suspended military aid to the rebels last February. They depend on U.S. assistance for their survival.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said the administration will give the Honduran proposal "serious consideration."

The Contras' use of Honduran territory as a springboard for attacks inside Nicaragua has produced numerous cross-border clashes between the two countries over the years.

D'Escoto said he canceled plans to leave New York Thursday morning so he can pursue the Honduran initiative. He said he is willing to remain until a "viable and acceptable request" is made to the United Nations by the secretary-general.

He said Lopez Contreras made a similar proposal to the Organization of American States last November, but that Honduras did not press the matter.

The Reagan administration has said for years that military pressure by the Contras is necessary to ensure democracy in Nicaragua. The dismantling of the Contras would almost certainly lead to the consolidation of the leftist Sandinista government, and to an escalation of its efforts to undermine its neighbors, the administration has maintained.

D'Escoto said Nicaragua has long favored establishment of a verification commission to ensure that each Central American country does not interfere with its neighbors.

Chile

"For their exemplary behavior the people deserve more respect," he said.

Military patrols in armored personnel carriers and trucks with mounted machine guns were seen circulating in working-class neighborhoods and slums — where anti-Pinochet sentiment traditionally runs high — that ring the capital. But no incidents were reported, as the opposition urged people to stay at home.

Pinochet said in an interview broadcast by Radio Cooperativa of Santiago, "So far everything is calm, but I've got some information that leaves me thinking. There are some people who have seen individuals wearing ski masks." He gave no details.

Leftist urban guerrillas commonly employ ski masks, but both of Chile's guerrilla groups have publicly announced a truce until after the voting day.

A French polling agency, Sofres, in conjunction with a Chilean research group, Diagnos, said its exit poll indicated the "yes" vote would exceed 62 percent, while the "no" vote drew 39 percent, with remaining votes blank or null. Another local group, Gallup Chile, said its exit poll showed the "yes" vote prevailing, 46 percent to 39 percent.

A huge turnout among the 7.4 million registered voters slowed balloting at many polling places and could delay definitive tallies, authorities said. Voting tables started closing at 5 p.m., and the counting began.

Foreign observers said the plebiscite appeared to be open and honestly conducted.

"People came by bus. They walked. They waited in line for four hours. They voted," said observer Manuel Medina, a Spanish delegate to the European Parliament.

Former President Oswaldo Hurtado of Ecuador, another observer, said: "What I have seen is Chileans being able to cast their votes freely and in private."

The first station to report returns was a military base in Antarctica, Teniente March, where "yes" votes for extending Pinochet's rule outnumbered "no" votes 51 to 2, according to the Interior Ministry.

Voting is mandatory, and those who don't vote can be fined up to 22,000 pesos, or about $80. Voters cast "yes" or "no" ballots on a proposal by Pinochet and the other military commanders that the president remain in power until 1997.

Turnbull, in our opinion, unknowingly took misrepresentative excerpts from Millea's for his story published in De Register.

Millea's column, if read properly, was not an assassination of Fry's coaching ability or the act of the team.

Rather, the main criticism aimed at the segment of Millea's column is that he is ungratefully expecting too much.

Turnbull reprinted the following: "there is a feeling among that few will voice, and would label nothing less heretical. It is the belief that time for Fry to leave... So believe that and in recent have begun to talk about say Fry is no longer imagining his play calling, that his recruit and develop play diminished and the steam out of his program."

The above excerpt implies this was strictly Millea's however, he was merely reporting the grumbling he heard in the stands, which was Iowa's 10-3 win over Iowa.

Upon further inspection, it is obvious that Millea completely agreed with that grumbling went on to call the mentioned Iowa fans "arrogant and ungrateful," stated that Hawkeyes may indeed have a solid record and gain a straight bowl bid, and said doesn't happen, "that necessarily mean that anything wrong. It may even be exact Hawkeye fans need to cut down to size."

The headline on the story "Maybe nothing's wrong with Hawkeyes," and the first paragraphs stated: "Fry's criticism, and he's capable of handling it. But that should be leveled with the mind of the critic. If the Hawkeyes' performances and records are remembered where they are, and where it taken it. Then ask, is it reason unacceptable?"

How this could be construed to be an anti-Iowa Hayden Fry column is difficult to understand. How Turnbull misrepresents the piece to degree in his story is surprising.

If this is the reaction The Iowan receives when attacked to be generally supportive of a disappointing season, we wonder going to happen if, at some point, we really do publish a controversial column.

Oakland grabs first game of AL series

Canseco's home run boosts A's

BOSTON (AP) — Pitching and power, Oakland's strengths in the regular season, carried the A's to victory in the playoff opener against Boston on Wednesday.
 "We can hit the long ball and we can shut you down," said Dave Henderson, who drove in the game-winning run with an eighth-inning single in the 2-1 victory. "We can win any way we have to win."
 Jose Canseco hit the only long ball for the A's with a fourth-inning home run, his fourth off Boston's Bruce Hurst in 27 career at-bats.

Oakland A's shortstop Walt Weiss throws to second base in an attempt to make a force out in the second inning of game one of the AL playoffs Wednesday in Fenway Park. The A's beat the Red Sox 2-1 behind Jose Canseco's home run.

American League playoffs

Canseco, who endured taunts from the Fenway Park fans for most of the chilly afternoon, said he didn't hit the fastball on the inner part of the plate very well. Still, it went over the left-field wall.
 "Sometimes I just try to hit fly balls here because the wall is so close," Canseco said.

The A's slugger said he wasn't bothered by the fans' chants of "steroids," which began immediately after his homer and were heard again several times. At one point, he turned to the fans in right field, shrugged and smiled.
 "It wasn't a big deal. I was just trying to have fun," he said.
 "I've heard so many rumors, it doesn't bother me. I just don't want to have any distractions."

A week ago, following the steroids scandal that disqualified Olympic runner Ben Johnson, Washington Post writer Thomas Boswell alleged that Canseco has used steroids to develop his physique. Canseco vehemently denies ever using the drug.
 Canseco warned that the Red Sox need to win Thursday night or the series is over.

"They're going to have to think now about going out to Oakland," he said. "It's a big ballpark and we play well there. If they drop two here, they're in big trouble."

Dennis Eckersley pitched two shutout innings and picked up his sixth save in as many opportunities against the Red Sox this year, allowing no runs on five hits in 8 2/3 innings.

Eckersley gave up a ninth-inning double to Jody Reed and said he was nervous about facing AL batting champion Wade Boggs with two men on and the crowd roaring.
 "I wanted to keep the crowd out of it, but the double took care of that," Eckersley said. "You don't expect to strike a guy like Boggs out. He was kind of surprised."

Eckersley, who needed only seven pitches, all strikes, to retire the side in order in the eighth, said he set Boggs up with a sinker that the AL batting champion fouled off on 0-2. The next pitch was "a fastball that jumped." Boggs swung and missed.

"I had a good fastball today and I threw strikes," he said. "You either get lit up or you strike them out when you throw strikes — it's as simple as that."

Dave Stewart, who held the Red Sox to five hits and one run in 6 1/2 innings, said he was lucky to strike out Boggs with the bases loaded in the second inning.
 "You can't set guys like Wade

Boggs up," he said, differing with Eckersley. "He's a .366 hitter. You just have to throw him strikes and hope he hits it at somebody."

Henderson had slipped on a single by Rich Gedman that set up the tying run in the seventh, but said he never had a chance to catch it.

"I was playing him over to left-center," Henderson said. "I went over and tried to come in on it, and that's why I slipped. But I froze the runner (Kevin Romine) at second and that was my main objective."

Henderson shrugged off any extra incentive in driving home the winning run the next inning, when his single scored Lansford from second.
 "Hurstie did a good job. Sometimes they get you and sometimes they don't," Henderson said.

Rookie shortstop Walt Weiss saved a run in the Boston second when he made a diving stop of Gedman's infield hit with Jim Rice on second and Reed on first. Weiss also knocked a double off the Green Monster in left.

"When it was hit, I knew it was going to be hard to make a play on," Weiss said of Gedman's grounder in the hole. "It was an in-between hop. I couldn't get him out, but the important thing is they didn't score."

Weiss echoed Canseco's thoughts on a fast start for the A's in the best-of-seven series.
 "We came in here hoping to get a split," he said, "but why not go up 2-0?"

Ramel, Aguirre earn invite to Volvo tourney

By Julie Deardorff
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa tennis players Claes Ramel and Martin Aguirre earned a spot in the record books after becoming the first doubles team in school history to be invited to the Volvo all-American Championships.

The elite tournament, held in Athens, Ga., takes the top 16 doubles teams in the nation. Aguirre and Ramel are the sole representatives from Region IV, which includes the Big Ten Conference, Mid-American Conference and independent schools in the area.

"I thought maybe we had a chance, but then it looked like the team from Miami (Ohio) might be chosen," Aguirre said. "We've been building up for this throughout the fall."

Last year, the two compiled a 17-6 record at No. 1 doubles, were 7-3 in Big Ten play, and became the first Iowa doubles team to earn a national ranking. They were rated as high as 25th and ended the season 37th. The pair won ten straight matches midway through the season, including five in the conference.

Recently they reached the finals at the Texarkana Intercollegiate Tournament in Texas, losing to the fifth-ranked team in the nation from Mississippi State 7-5, 6-4.

"This is a great achievement for Ramel and Aguirre," Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said. "It establishes them among the best doubles teams in the nation. I think it reflects the strides we've made in

NFL teams ordered to set aside pensions

WASHINGTON (AP)—A judge in Baltimore has ordered the NFL Management Council and the league's 28 teams to immediately put what the union estimates is almost $22.6 million into escrow to protect the players' pension fund.

The order was handed down at the request of the NFL Players Association by U.S. District Court Judge Herbert F. Murray, who ruled in July that the owners must pay $19.3 million to the fund in a dispute dating to 1984.

The Management Council previously had said it would appeal the decision.

And Management Council spokesman John Jones said he saw no change from Murray's decision, noting that the money had already been in escrow and would simply go into the court's escrow rather than in an account controlled by the clubs.

However, Dick Berthelsen, the union's chief attorney, said Murray also granted the union's request for double interest payments, which account for the higher amount due.

Murray's decision was praised by the union as a step that will lead to a major court victory in another

UK Board discusses NCAA investigation

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky Board of Trustees has called a special meeting for Sunday to discuss the ongoing investigation of the school's basketball program by the NCAA, and possibly the eligibility of a current player, according to reports.

Board member Cap Hershey told WLEX-TV in Lexington that Kentucky President David Roselle had kept the board in the dark about developments in the investigation. Hershey said the board wants to examine Roselle's actions up to this point in the year-long investigation.

Board chairman Robert McCowan said he called the 1 p.m. meeting after consulting with Roselle.

Roselle, who was in Washington on Tuesday, said through university spokesman Bernie Vonderheide that he asked McCowan to call the meeting so he could update the board on the investigation.

WKYT-TV in Lexington reported Tuesday night that the eligibility of one of Kentucky's players would be discussed at the meeting.

The television station, quoting unnamed sources, did not identify the current player.

McCowan told the Louisville Courier-Journal there had been numerous rumors recently, including ones concerning actions UK may take on the eligibility of standout guard Eric Manuel, after allegations that he allegedly cheated on his college entrance exam in June 1987.

The NCAA began investigating the program in April after a Los Angeles newspaper revealed that an Emery Worldwide Air Freight package from assistant basketball coach Dwane Casey to a recruit's father came open in transit, revealing $1,000.

That is the only infraction the NCAA has charged the school with thus far, but officials were told in July that about 10 other allegations were forthcoming.

Published reports have since focused on the ACT exam Manuel took on June 13, 1987, at Lafayette High School. He easily passed it, after having failed twice previously to pass another college entrance exam, the SAT, in his home state of Georgia.

Claustrophobia grounds Massie

DENVER (AP) — Denver wide receiver Rick Massie, who took a limousine to the Broncos' game in San Diego last week after claustrophobia forced him off the team plane, said there's a bright side to his malady: "Maybe this will get me named to the all-Madden team."

Former Raiders coach John Madden had such a fear of flying that he took the train to away games whenever possible. As a television commentator, he now uses a specially equipped bus.

Massie and Madden's fears are not the same. "My doctors say it's definitely not a fear of flying," he said. "It's claustrophobia. I've had it since I was young."

But Massie's mode of transportation to a road game was similar. He and two drivers from a Denver limousine service made a 20-hour, 1,200-mile drive to San Diego last weekend, arriving about four hours before Sunday's game, won by Denver 12-0. They returned to Denver in the same manner.

En route to San Diego, Massie managed to get some sleep in the rear seat of the chauffeured limo, and there was even some comic relief along the way.

"We stopped at a Wendy's somewhere and had a hamburger," he said. "I'm not even sure where it was. I had been asleep. When I got out of the limousine, everybody thought I was a rock star. What do you expect when a young guy in a sweatshirt gets out of a limo?"

There is nothing comical, however, about Massie's affliction. Claustrophobia, defined as an abnormal fear of being in an enclosed or confined place, is one of a variety of phobias that plague millions of Americans.

"Unless you know what it's like, you have no idea how scary it can be," he said.

The limo, at a cost to the Broncos of about $2,700, became necessary when Massie suffered a claustrophobic seizure as the Broncos' chartered jet was about to leave Denver Saturday.

Massie became anxious before boarding the plane and notified Coach Dan Reeves. After a discussion, Massie said he wanted to get on the plane.

"He got on and we closed the doors, and he didn't relax," Reeves said. "We talked some more, and he said he still wanted to try it."

The plane began to taxi, but after a few minutes it became clear that Massie couldn't make the trip. The plane returned to the gate, and Massie got off. The Broncos then hired a pair of drivers, who got the player to San Diego in time for warmups.

Massie, a backup, did not have a reception in the game, but he did register a tackle on an interception return. John Elway threw to him once, but a hard tackle jarred the ball loose.

Since returning to Denver this week, Massie has undergone counseling and therapy in an effort to manage his phobia. He prefers not to use medication, which yields only short-term results.

Massie, 28, a former University of Kentucky star, became aware of his condition as a youngster, when he ended up on the bottom of a pile during some wrestling matches.

"There are certain situations you try to avoid," he said. "I try to avoid elevator rides and take the stairs instead. I try to stay out of the back seat of a two-door car. You just try to avoid closed-in situations."

our program." Ramel, a 1988 all-Big Ten selection, is a senior from Malmo, Sweden. He transferred to Iowa last year from Northeast Louisiana and took over the No. 1 singles position. He plays the ad side of the court while Aguirre plays the deuce side.

"I think our strength, as in any doubles team, is that we work together very well," Ramel said. "It's almost like two magnets on the same pole."

Aguirre, a senior from Guayaquil, Ecuador, believes the two can make NCAAs in the spring.

"You really have to have trust in your partner and good communication," Aguirre said. "On a three-all game, if your partner says he wants to take the point, you have to let him. We're serving better and playing better at the net than we have been. Making NCAAs is our goal."

Also making the trip and hoping to qualify for the main draw in singles will be senior Mike Kiewit from Three Rivers, Mich. Both Kiewit and Ramel will participate in the singles qualifications, which begin Oct. 15. The doubles tournament begins Oct. 20.

case — the antitrust suit which stemmed from the 24-day strike last year that ended without a settlement. There is no current contract between the two sides and the dispute is presently before a court in Minneapolis.

"This is the first in a series of judgments which will prove that the statements we've made are not just words, but fact," NFLPA president Gene Upshaw said. "We've been saying for the last year that the clubs will have to pay more than $100 million in damages as a result of their unlawful actions in 1987 and beyond."

The union, which administers the pension fund with the Management Council, had sought to force the owners to make the payments of $12.5 million annually under the five-year collective bargaining agreement that expired last year. The lawsuit focused on the interpretation of a clause in the 1982 contract that said pension contributions will be paid by the owners if the contributions are tax deductible. The union said contributions should be made if they were tax deductible the year the money was due or in subsequent years.

The owners, however, said they were not required to make the payments unless the contributions were fully tax deductible in the year the money was due.

The league maintained the pension plan was overfunded. Double interest payments continue to accumulate in the case at the rate of about $223,000 monthly, according to the union.

Revamped Kings await opener

(AP) — After leading Edmonton to four Stanley Cup championships in five years, Wayne Gretzky has moved his high-scoring act to Los Angeles, where he leads the Kings against the Detroit Red Wings Thursday night.

Eight other games are on tap Thursday as the NHL begins its third season.

Gretzky, the NHL's most famous player, will be joined by other new faces as the revamped Kings hope to improve both on the ice and at the box office.

Besides Gretzky, the Kings acquired right wing Marty McSorley, left wing Mike Krushelnyski and defenseman John Miner in the blockbuster deal with the Edmonton Oilers.

Other off-season acquisitions by the Kings include forward John Tonelli, a free agent from the Calgary Flames, and defenseman Steve Richmond, a free agent with the New Jersey Devils. On Monday, the Kings acquired two more defensemen in the NHL waiver draft — Jim Hofford from the Buffalo Sabres and Dale Degray from the Toronto Maple Leafs.

"Obviously, we can't help but improve with the acquisition of players such as Gretzky, McSorley, Krushelnyski and Tonelli," Kings general manager Rogie Vachon said. "Not only does their experience mean something on the ice, but off the ice, too."

"Four of our newly-acquired players have won Stanley Cup championships and have the knowledge of what it takes to be a winner."

Gretzky, McSorley and Krushelnyski all have been on Cup winners in Edmonton, while Tonelli was on four Cup winners with the New York Islanders.

In other openers Thursday night, it's Toronto at Boston, Quebec at Hartford, Montreal at Buffalo, New Jersey at Philadelphia, the New York Rangers at Chicago, St. Louis at Minnesota, the New York Islanders at Calgary, and Winnipeg at Vancouver.

The Oilers, going after their third straight Stanley Cup and fifth in six years, begin the regular season on Friday night when they play host to the Islanders. Pittsburgh and Washington will open their seasons in a Friday night game at Landover, Md.

The Kings will not only have a raft of new players on their team, but a new uniform as well. Bruce McNall, who acquired the majority ownership of the team from Jerry Buse, has switched from purple and gold uniforms to silver and black.

Vachon, however, recognizes that it will take more than new uniforms — and even more than Gretzky — to completely make over the Kings, a long-time NHL doormat.

"We still have areas where we need to improve," Vachon said. "We have to play better defensively and must have a team commitment to improving our goals-against average."

As for the Oilers, they'll have a new look, too. No Gretzky.

"We won't have the same charisma without Wayne in the lineup," said Oilers assistant coach Ted Green. "Wayne had the ability to break open any part of the game."

Without Gretzky, the Oilers may alter their style somewhat to play a more defensive game, much like they did when the star center was injured last season.

"Our goal production might be down slightly, but I think there'll be an improvement in goals against," Green said. "I happen to feel we'll have a better team concept than in the past."

Gretzky is one of 48 players who are wearing new uniforms this year as the result of 18 trades from June to September. In addition, 18 more players changed uniforms in the just-concluded NHL waiver draft.

The deal between Edmonton and Los Angeles involved five players, with center Jimmy Carson and left wing Martin Gelin, the Kings' 1988 first-round draft pick, going to the Oilers along with three future first-rounders.

While the biggest trade of the year in terms of name power, it was not the biggest in terms of numbers.

Bears trade Thomas to Broncos

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Fullback Calvin Thomas, coming off a 10-day suspension for violation of the National Football League's substance-abuse policy, was traded Wednesday by the Chicago Bears to the Denver Broncos for an undisclosed, conditional 1989 draft choice.

Thomas was in his seventh season with the Bears and was signed as a free agent out of Illinois in 1982.

Thomas, 28, was reinstated to the Bears' roster Tuesday by Commissioner Pete Rozelle following his 10-day suspension but the move did not excite Coach Mike Ditka, who said he did not expect Thomas to dress or play Sunday against the Detroit Lions.

Exactly what draft choice the Bears will receive will depend on how Thomas performs for the Broncos.

There was some doubt that Thomas would make the club this past summer after the Bears had selected fullback Brad Muster as their No. 1 pick in last spring's draft.

But Muster was slow in developing and Thomas, listed at 5-11 and 245 pounds, had trimmed his weight down when he reported to camp in Platteville, Wis. He had a good training camp and made the roster. Before being suspended, Thomas had three carries for 20 yards.

Last year Thomas carried 22 times for 88 yards. His best year was 1986 when he had 56 rushes for 224 yards. He has been used mostly as a blocking back.

Thomas was a four-year letterman at Illinois. During his college career he gained 1,194 yards on 325 carries and scored eighth touchdowns.

In another trade, offensive guard Ron Solt was sent to the Philadelphia Eagles by the Indianapolis Colts in return for draft choices.

However, if Solt doesn't report to the Eagles, the trade is off, Eagles president Harry Gamble said Wednesday.

The Pro Bowl veteran, in his fifth NFL season, said after Tuesday's trade that he would not join the Eagles unless they renegotiate the $2.6 million, five-year contract that his agent said Solt signed last week under duress to end a prolonged holdout.

"No, we don't intend to renegotiate," Gamble said at a news conference. "He had come to terms with Indianapolis. That's what we intend to pay."

The Eagles gave up their 1989 No. 1 draft choice and further considerations — undisclosed future draft choices — for Solt.

Patriots, Seahawks deals are approved

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — The sales of the New England Patriots and Seattle Seahawks were approved unanimously Wednesday at a special meeting of National Football League owners.

The transactions were approved pending the reception of documents by the league office within 10 days. NFL officials anticipated no problems with either sale.

Controlling interest in the Patriots was sold by the William H. Sullivan, Jr. family to businessman Victor Kiam for a reported $90 million after a 14-hour negotiating session at New York Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. Sullivan and Kiam then flew to Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, where the transaction was approved Wednesday afternoon.

The Seahawks sale had already been completed and league approval was only a formality. The 13-year-old franchise was sold by the Nordstrom family to a group headed by California land developer Ken Behring for a reported $80 million.

Behring will reportedly control 75 percent of the team with partner Ken Hofmann owning the remaining 25 percent.

Sullivan, owner of the Patriots since the team's inception as an American Football League franchise in 1960, had made several fruitless attempts to sell the team in recent years.

"It's more than a relief, it's a feeling of joy," Sullivan said. "With all the bickering and all the false starts, the fans were the victims. It's a tremendous feeling."

Kiam will control a majority interest, with minority owner Fran Murray buying additional stock as part of the transaction.

Sullivan will remain as team president for an undisclosed period and retains a small percentage of the team.

"I'm gratified," Kiam said. "It's been said that people are reasonable when reasonable people can agree."

"The legal people on both sides were a tremendous help during our long session in getting the transaction completed."

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said he was pleased that Sullivan would remain active with the Patriots.

"He's been an important part of the league," Rozelle said. "He's very happy with the terms and that makes us happy."

"He (Kiam) sounds like an exciting addition to the league," Dallas Cowboys president Tex Schramm said.

Rozelle said the owners left the meeting satisfied that both franchises are on sound financial footing.

"It's good to have both situations resolved," Rozelle said. "The uncertainty wasn't good for the league."

The sales could have been addressed at the regularly scheduled owners meeting in two weeks at Chicago but Rozelle said financial details of both agreements forced the league to act as soon as possible.

The sales were the only league business taken up at the meeting, Rozelle said.

Boston third baseman Wade Boggs throws off his helmet after striking out with the bases loaded in the second inning at Fenway Park in Boston. He also struck out with two on in the ninth.

Boggs takes the blame for opening-game loss

BOSTON (AP) — Wade Boggs recited the pitch sequence like a technician reviewing a textbook. "There were a couple of fastballs away, a couple of backup sliders," said Boggs, who led the major leagues in batting with a .366 average this season but took responsibility for Boston's 2-1 loss to Oakland in Wednesday's opening game of the American League playoffs.

Boggs, a .373 career hitter with the bases loaded, struck out with three on in the second inning and then fanned again for the final out of the game, leaving two more runners stranded.

In another bases-loaded situation, in the seventh, he managed a sacrifice fly that produced Boston's only run.

"I take this loss personally," he said. "I'll take the blame. I left five men on."

Boggs, who struck out 34 times in over 700 plate appearances this season, said he couldn't remember the last time he had struck out swinging twice in one game. "I'll go home and look it up and tell you tomorrow," he said.

In the second inning, the Red Sox loaded the bases with two out and Boggs came up against Dave Stewart. He had singled in the first off Stewart and was 7-for-21 lifetime against the Oakland right-hander.

But Stewart won this duel with a high fastball for the third strike.

In the seventh, with one out and the bases loaded, Boggs came up again. This time, Athletics Manager Tony LaRussa, not wanting to tempt fate twice, switched to left-hander Rick Honeycutt. Boggs delivered a sacrifice fly.

Then in the ninth, with two out and runners at first and second, Boggs had one final chance against Oakland's ace reliever, Dennis Eckersley. He struck out again.

"With two strikes, you can't take a close pitch," Boggs said. "You've got to open up the plate a bit. You don't want the umpire ringing you up."

"I go up there and try to hit the ball hard. It doesn't matter who's on base or how many are on base."

Boggs was asked to analyze the third-strike swings. "A bad swing," he said of the first. "A very bad swing," he said of the second.

Boggs said that Wednesday's humbling experience wasn't unusual for a major-league player.

"As long as you play this game, you're going to have disappointments, there's no two ways about it," he said. "You just don't want to have them in the playoffs. But it's not over yet. We've got tomorrow and then we go to Oakland."

"The goat one day can be the hero the next."

Southern California favored over Oregon in Pac-10 game

It's showdown time in the Pac-10 ... again.

And for the second week in a row it's not UCLA vs. Southern Cal.

Last week, it was UCLA and Washington scrapping for a share of the lead. This time, it's No. 18 Oregon at No. 3 Southern Cal in a battle of 4-0 teams (2-0 in the conference).

Oregon hasn't been to the Rose Bowl since a 10-7 loss to Ohio State following the 1957 regular season. USC has represented the Pac-10 some 13 times in that stretch, 12 in the last 22 years.

That includes last season, when a 34-27 loss to Oregon was the only blot on USC's Pac-10 championship record.

"I'm not sure our team will be playing for revenge, but we do want to make up for last year's disappointing, frustrating loss to Oregon," says Larry Smith, who has a 7-0 home record as USC's coach.

The Trojans are 15-point favorites over an Oregon team that probably will be without quarterback Bill Musgrave. The pick is ... Southern Cal 31-14.

Last week's prediction record was 37-13-1-.740; for the season, 178-65-2-.733. Against the point spread, last week's mark was 19-17-0-.528; on the year, 70-78-0-.473.

Oregon State at No. 2 UCLA (favored by 27); Oregon State has a winning record (3-2) this late in the season for the first time since 1970, which also was its last winning season. Since then, the Beavers have won more than three games only in 1971 (5-6) and 1978 (4-6-1). More improvement is necessary ... UCLA 42-14.

No. 4 Auburn at LSU (even); Auburn hits the road for the first time and finally plays a team that has won a game this season but also has lost two in a row ... LSU 24-21.

No. 5 Notre Dame (by 6) at Pitt; The Irish were undefeated when they came to Pittsburgh last year. They left with a loss. They're also looking ahead to Miami. Upset Special of the Week ... Pitt 27-24.

Georgia Southern at No. 6 Florida State (no line); The Seminoles had a rugged September but their

College Football

October slate includes Tulane, East Carolina and two Division I-AA teams ... Florida State 56-7.

No. 7 West Virginia (by 20½) at East Carolina; East Carolina's October schedule includes Florida State, Syracuse, Miami and ... West Virginia 37-14.

No. 8 South Carolina (by 21½) at Virginia Tech; It's almost time to look ahead to the Florida State game on Nov. 5 ... South Carolina 35-7.

No. 9 Nebraska (by 49½) at Kansas; Having lost to New Mexico State, the Jayhawks are looking ahead to Nov. 5 and Kansas State, the only game either team has a shot at winning ... Nebraska 63-0.

No. 10 Oklahoma (by 15) vs. Texas at Dallas; The only time all year Barry Switzer gets uptight, since he recruits so heavily in Texas ... Oklahoma 28-17.

No. 11 Clemson (by 12½) at Virginia; A favorite saying among football coaches is "Never say never." But Virginia has NEVER (0-27) beaten ... Clemson 34-17.

Mississippi at No. 12 Alabama (by 15); Starting later this month, the second half of the season gets tougher for ... Alabama 30-13.

No. 13 Oklahoma State (by 2½) at Colorado; The winner will be the chief threat to end the Oklahoma-Nebraska domination of the Big Eight ... Oklahoma State 35-31.

Memphis State at No. 14 Florida (by 22); The Gators' Sugar Bowl chances will be decided on Oct. 29-Nov. 5 against Auburn and Georgia ... Florida 35-10.

Vanderbilt at No. 15 Georgia (by 16); Georgia's Sugar Bowl chances will be decided on Nov. 5-12 against Florida and Auburn ... Georgia 42-21.

No. 16 Wyoming (by 14½) at San Diego State; A West Coast night game between two teams that like to throw the ball? The final score may be in by Tuesday ... Wyoming 38-31.

Michigan State at No. 17 Michigan (by 12½); "It would be a big mistake to look at Michigan State as an 0-3-1 team," says Bo Schembechler. Try 0-4-1 ... Michigan 35-14.

No. 19 Washington (by 2) at Arizona State; The Huskies gave it their best shot against UCLA last week and play Southern Cal next week. This is the valley in between ... Arizona State 21-20.

Texas Tech at No. 20 Arkansas (by 13½); The Southwest Conference finally has a team in the Top Twenty. Hoss ... Arkansas 38-20.

North Carolina at Wake Forest (by 6½); The toughest part of the schedule is behind the Tar Heels. Second Upset Special ... North Carolina 21-14.

Ohio State at Indiana (by 7); The Buckeyes are great one week, horrid the next. Guess which week this is? Third Upset Special ... Ohio State 28-24.

Other games: East — Penn State (by 25½) 38, Cincinnati 6; Syracuse (by 7½) 24, Rutgers 17; Army (30) 45, Yale 14.

Sixers' Hawkins battles injury, contract problems

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Hersey Hawkins has been told to go 10 days without playing basketball — an eternity even to a fresh-faced kid who expects to play professionally for at least 10 years.

"I hate it, being out like this," the Philadelphia 76ers' prized, but injured, rookie guard said Tuesday after a morning of riding an exercise bicycle and other work to rehabilitate the strained ligaments in his right knee.

"I've already been out 10 days, and now I'm looking at another 10 days. I hate sitting and watching others play ball."

If his agent, attorney Joe Napoli, can hammer out a contract with Sixers General Manager John Nash in time, Hawkins will join the team Thursday night in training camp at Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster.

Napoli and Nash have had two face-to-face negotiating sessions, the most recent on Monday. Afterward, Nash said, "We've made progress, but we have a way to go."

Hawkins, knowing he cannot join the team without a signed contract, just wants it done.

"If it gets to a point where I feel it's dragging, I would like to (help get it solved," he said.

The Sixers, having obtained veteran small forward Ron Anderson in a trade Monday with Indiana, are believed to have more than $600,000 available within their salary cap structure for this season, according to the Philadelphia Daily News.

Hawkins, a 6-foot-3 shooting guard, averaged 36.3 points per game as a senior at Bradley to lead the nation with the highest average in 11 seasons. The Sixers, desperately needing a perimeter shooter, grabbed him on draft day.

He played his way onto the U.S. Olympic roster as the team's best perimeter threat. Send him off a screen, get him open and he'll knock down the shots. Then, in a pre-medal-round game against China, something went wrong.

"One of the Chinese guys took a shot, another China player and (U.S. teammate) Jeff Grayer were fighting for rebounding position," Hawkins said. "Jeff got pushed and he fell on my knee."

"I remember thinking, 'Why now? Before I've signed a contract. During the Olympics. At the start of my career.'"

Hawkins said the knee "was placed in a brace, iced down, but that's all they could do."

No X-ray equipment was available which Hawkins didn't understand, and he did not undergo X-rays until Monday, when examined by the Sixers' orthopedic specialist, Dr. Ray Moyer.

Hawkins sat out the remainder of the Games.

"I couldn't believe it. I was there (semifinal) game against the Russians," he said. "I had to just sit there. I could feel the electricity in the building, to the point where my eyes got a little watery. I was hoping he (Coach John Thompson) would look down the bench, ask me if I could play ... I'd have done it. (But) it didn't happen ..."

"I thought I could've played, put on a sleeve (an elastic support) and contributed. But I didn't tell the coach that, because he had already told me I wouldn't play anymore. He said the Olympics were important, but not as important as a 10- or 15-year career."

The United States lost and had to settle for a bronze medal.

"What was hard," Hawkins said, "was that, after the semifinals game, every American I saw said, 'If you had played, we'd have won. I didn't know what to say.'"

Award-winning blues singer kicks off Wheelroom series

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The Chicago blues and gospel singer some critics have hailed as the successor to Aretha Franklin and Koko Taylor will perform Friday, Oct. 7, during Homecoming festivities at the Union.

Gloria Hardiman will appear in the Union Wheelroom from 9 to 11 p.m. Friday as part of the 65th anniversary celebration of the Union and as the first of the Union Board's "Live at the Wheelroom" musical series.

Hardiman and her touring band play and sing the blues, rhythm and blues and gospel. Hardiman forged her reputation in the rough Chicago blues scene but has performed to sellout audiences throughout the Midwest, along the East Coast and in Canada. The Toronto Globe-Mail said Hardiman has "the warmth of Aretha... the style of Bessie Smith... the depth of commitment of which legends are made."

Like many blues and pop singers, Hardiman learned her craft singing gospel music.

Gloria Hardiman Margret Sampson

"My father, who was a minister at the Mount Carmel Holiness Baptist Church, made me a box to stand on," commented Hardiman. "When I was 5 years old I sang with Mahalia Jackson at the Baptist Conventions. She always gave me encouragement to sing."

Hardiman sees a strong connection between her early gospel music and the blues.

"Both styles are telling a story, about what one feels inside, about satisfaction. They both lift your burdens. Of course, gospel sings about God, and blues is more concerned with people and situations, topics such as 'whatever done me wrong' or 'I'm glad to be with you.'"

She recorded her debut album, "Set Me Free," on Razor Records. She appeared on the late Roy Buchanan's LP, "When A Guitar Plays the Blues," as well as on Alligator Records' LP "The New Bluebloods," which featured promising new blues artists from around the United States. Hardiman also appeared on a Christmas album with Lonnie Brooks, Koko Taylor and Big Twist titled "I Want to Spend This Christmas With You."

She has won several awards recently. In 1987, she was named the Female Vocalist of the Year by the CBS Beach Music Awards, and she was named Showcase Performer by the National Association of Campus Activities. Hardiman will be thrust into the national spotlight in the spring of 1989 when a television special she is currently taping with soul singer James Brown is set to air on national television.

'Hearts' charms moviegoers

By Ryan Donovan
Special to The Daily Iowan

With an unlikely beginning — a funeral — "Lonely Hearts" (showing at the Bijou tonight at 7) seems more than just a light romance. This 1981 Australian film, which stars Wendy Hughes and Norman Kaye, concerns romance versus the breaking of parental bonds.

The story centers around Peter and Patricia, two never-marrieds who have spent their lives tied to their parents. They meet through a computer dating service and begin a shy, tenuous relationship. They enjoy similar tastes, but their most common trait is parental ties. He has spent his 50 years living with his mother. She has just moved into her own apartment. Toss in a domineering sister, her henpecked husband, a flamboyant play director and Patricia's cloying parents and the result is "Lonely Hearts."

Director Paul Cox focuses on character emotion rather than slick editing or flashy locations. Cox takes careful pains to establish the fragility of the characters. Neither Peter or Patricia has ever had a relationship, and their resulting naiveté is charming. But Cox avoids cliché by choosing leads Hughes and Kaye, who successfully underplay Patricia and Peter. Their coy glances and romantic sentiments aren't overemphasized. Their performances are a definitive ingredient to the film's effectiveness. Too often in Hollywood films, the romance is overplayed to the point of sappy, Hallmarkish proportions. In an affectionate gesture, Peter buttons up her coat against the cold as they walk through a park. They're neither too passionate nor do they gaze deeply into each other's eyes.

The delicate interplay between the two forms a different kind of relationship. This isn't "The Love Boat." They don't leap into each other's arms after one day and into a foolish marriage the next. Rather than with the typical dating montage of dinner one night and dancing the next, Cox puts his characters in a large bingo hall where, rather than making eyes at each other over their bingo cards, they sit, glasses fixed in place, intent on the game.

Individually, Hughes and Kaye give genuine performances as inexperienced partners in the world of relationships. Hughes bears a resemblance to a young Ingrid Bergman sans make-up. Her sensitive, understated portrayal brings a strong contrast to the surrounding characters, except for Peter. The talented Kaye, as Peter, plays on Patricia's innocence and in doing so, reflects his own. He not only struggles with parental ties but with the fear of growing old alone.

As a whole the film is well-cut, but definitely not Hollywood. But that's good news, because there are certainly enough Touchstone pictures on theater marquees as it is. "Lonely Hearts" is a bit off-beat in the same way that some foreign films are. The language is different and the humor, subtle. It's quite a charming film. The performances are strong, and the story, although a bit slow-moving, is intriguing and contagious. By the close of the film, the couple has captured the audience's affection. "Lonely Hearts" isn't the best Australian film ever, but it contains more than enough brilliance to make it one of the better ones.

Entertainment Today

At the Bijou

"Lonely Hearts" (1981) — A middle-aged piano tuner and a quiet secretary meet through a computer dating service. 7 p.m.

"In the Heat of the Night" (1967) — Sidney Poitier and Rod Taylor star in this study of racism in the Deep South. Winner of five Oscars. 8:45 p.m.

Television

"Wild America — Designs for Defense" — Presumably, this episode deals with animals that utilize peculiar defense mechanisms, like the clown fish, which secretes an oil making it unpoisonable by sea anemones, or the porcupine, which bristles with detachable quills or even the obsequious law student, who maintains a savoringly deferential attitude to avoid confrontations with more vocal individuals (7 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Art

"Roman Portraits" features Roman and Etruscan portraiture covering a broad cross section of time, style and purpose and runs through Oct. 30 in the UI Museum of Art. "Donatello at Close Range" documents the restoration processes conducted on some of the stucco works of Donatello. The exhibit runs through Oct. 30 in the UI Museum of Art.

Radio

This time, Yuri Temikarnov really does conduct the Cleveland Orchestra in an all-Britten program. Yesterday was just a test (8 p.m.; KSUI 91.7 FM).

Quayle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Quayle's answers to questions about what he suddenly elevated to identify "hardly dispell" about the fitness for the several political analysts Thursday.

They disagreed on whether Quayle's debate performance damaged the Republican ticket headed by George H.W. Bush. They said the Indiana governor clearly missed an opportunity to answer the fitness question.

Some of the experts — political consultants and science professors — said the 41-year-old Quayle over-coached by his handlers, and was programmed to cope with some and unexpected questions.

Main library opens to VIPs

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

The UI Main Library will be open to the public at 10:30 a.m. tomorrow. Those with invitations are allowed to enter.

This will be the first semester that the library has been open before 12 p.m. The Main Library opened at 8 a.m. on Saturday. Operating hours decrease percent this fall due to freeze.

This Saturday UI Hunter Rawlings and library members will host a brunch involving community members and friends of the library. Mary New, assistant director of University of Iowa, said the brunch will be held in the north lobby of the library.

New said an event that had never been held in the past, but this year's event will be held in the north lobby. UI administrators on programs prompted the event at the library.

Some UI students said that the library hosting state parties when the facility was open to students and faculty studying and research. Opening the library prior to the start of the semester. See Libr...

UI football weekends fill hotels

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Even if the Hawks win, Iowa City hotels are full. The town to cheer the team's victory against Wisconsin weekend may be at a loss to booking a hotel room. Steve Tarara, general manager of the Holiday Inn, 210 S. St., said all football-weekend reservations are made months in advance.

"We begin taking reservations for football weekends on the 1st," Tarara said. "By the 15th, we normally do not have any rooms left."

Some Iowa City hotels are waiting list for people who want to get a room.

"The same day we open reservations, we also start a waiting list," Tarara said. "When we start taking cancellations, usually in August, we start calling people on the list."
