UI students suspected of burglary

By Kaye Meacham

Two UI students were charged Monday with second-degree burglary. Police in connection with three break-ins at Gilbert and University streets.

But Alan Nashauer, 19, and Jean Kendall, 19, both of the 1300 block of South Gilbert Street, said he didn't have money with him at the time of the break-in.

Nashauer and Kendall were charged with second-degree burglary and an attempt to commit a burglary. A status hearing was set for the two Monday.

The burglaries occurred at family businesses.

As the sun set behind the Old Capitol, members of the UI Dance Troupe performed in the UI Student Union.

The poll, aimed at measuring voting intentions for the 1988 election, was conducted from Aug. 24 to Sept. 7. It was sponsored by the UI Department of Political Science and the Iowa City Press-Citizen.

The remainder said they plan to save for their college education.

The government was faced with foreign enemies in various parts of the world, including the Baltic states, the Middle East, and Afghanistan.

Affirmative action report guides university update

By Dana Wallace

Daily Iowaman

Iowa's county prosecutors have dropped charges against Curtis, a man accused of third-degree sexual abuse last year.

The move was announced in a press release from the Marion County attorney's office.

Curtis, 41, was charged with third-degree sexual abuse following an incident involving a minor.

The charges were later dropped after the Marion County attorney's office received pressure from the community.

Curtis's attorney, Bob Peters, said the decision was made after a thorough investigation of the evidence.

"We are pleased with the outcome," Peters said. "It was a difficult decision, but we felt it was the right one for the community."

MOSCOW — The formal Union of Soviet Socialist Republics may have concluded a farce, but the nation's political leaders are no more easily mocked, especially in the light of a series of recent events. The 25-year-old woman dead Sept. 4 at a province of the state for mental illness in the outskirts of the city of Stavropol, killed herself.

The report released by the region's police indicated that she was a former patient who had been discharged from the hospital. The report did not provide any details of the case.

Investing to fit the times

Special to The Daily Iowan

More than ever we live in a global economy. This means every economic decision we make not only affects us but other countries as well and then as such. This also means that investment decision fear becomes increasingly important.

Because we live in an environment of open trade with the world, our favorite blueprint investment may not perform as we once did. For example, we can no longer invest in a U.S. company and earn dividends, but these dividends may not be so lucrative any more. One must carefully anticipate the same positive gain as we saw in many American-made cars in America, but what is their market share of all cars sold in the United States? The answer is 40 percent. Is this fair? When you invest in a company, do you want a return of 40 percent? Of course not. You want a return of 100 percent. Does this mean people should quit investing? Does this mean we should invest piecemeal?

One thing we can invest in is a mutual fund. The mutual fund allows you to invest in a broad range of companies. It allows people even the desire to properly do their homework, but they can do this but do it piecemeal. In fact, more private and institutional dollars are invested in mutual funds than in all U.S. public companies. This has opened the development of packaged products. Diversification is probably the most important thing you can do in investing. One of the biggest mistakes investors often make is assembling a portfolio piecemeal.

Puryear wins Southwest in playoff

Angelo State's Puryear got the last shot of a tense winner-take-all playoff with a 25-yard field goal in overtime for a 10-7 win over New Mexico State in San Angelo.

"Puryear kicked the last one off the tee. I'm just so proud of the way the team stepped up," Angelo State Coach Ron Wyrick said. "We were down 7-0 at halftime. We shut them down in the second half and kicked the field goal to win. He's definitely my most valuable player."

Radio interview reveals spirit, inevitability of poet's work

By Jim Hohe
Special To The Daily Iowan

It's there, you can't keep it down. It's there, you can't keep it out.

These were the closing words of a four-hour interview with Ken McCullough, a native Iowa poet, and they are characteristic of the man and his new book, a major literary event in Iowa city this summer. McCullough and his book, "Climbing Light," published by Iowa's Sinclair Press, live in that four-hour segment that spent over a day and a half at the Iowa City home of São Paulo from June 18 to June 19.

Ironically, many kinds of poetry, grocery lists, and death notices made add in addition to the book's publicity, and the range of coverage over that time was astounding. But McCullough and his book are an underlying and underlying part of that scene of the Iowa City literary community, which has a work of its own.

The book and the man's work have received a great deal of attention, particularly in his birthplace and the birthplace of the poet.

McCullough, who is interested in the dimensions of sonic height, the dimensions of distance, the dimensions of time, and the dimensions of experience, the dimensions of the visual, the dimensions of the written and the dimensions of the spoken, has a work of his own. McCullough's imagination is keenly present in his work, but in this case it is a literary one. "I know of no musicians came out on Parade backwards) could have said the genre, or that they have said the genre, or that they have said the genre."
