Few young people have saved for college, poll finds

NEW YORK (AP) — Fewer than one out of 10 young people say they have saved for college, and nearly 50 percent said tuition costs prevent them from seeking a higher education, according to a poll released Sunday.

In addition, more than one out of three teen-agers and young adults questioned in a survey commissioned by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education believe the most expensive colleges offer the best education.

The poll, aimed at measuring student awareness of college issues, was based on telephone interviews of 1,001 people age 13 to 21 from Aug. 24 to Sept. 7. It was released as part of National Higher Education Week, which began Sunday. The poll, conducted by the Gallup Organization, had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Thirty-eight percent agreed that "the higher the tuition costs of a college, the better the quality of education a student will receive." Among pre-college-age students, the figures were higher: 53 percent of 13- to 15-year-olds agreed with the statement; 41 percent of 16- and 17-year-olds surveyed did. But only 27 percent of current college students and graduates felt that way.

Asked what they thought was the major reason more students do not go to college, 48 percent said they thought the reason was that college is too expensive, and they can't afford it.

Fifty-nine percent of high school juniors and seniors polled said they or someone in their families had saved for their college education. The rest said they hadn't saved or they didn't know.

Asked what they would do if they couldn't afford the college they wanted, 37 percent said they would try to get loans, 32 percent would look for part-time jobs, 14 percent said they would select another college, and 2 percent said they would not attend college at all. The rest were not sure.

Other findings:
—54 percent of America's high school juniors and seniors said they expect to graduate from college; 8 percent plan to graduate from high school but go no further. The remainder said they plan to attend vocational or trade school, or go to college but not long enough to graduate.

—67 percent said that in selecting a college, availability of particular courses and curriculum was

UI students suspected in burglaries

Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Three UI students were charged with second-degree burglary Friday in connection with three burglaries at Gilbert Street businesses, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Bret Alan Hackathorn, 18, Eric William Graham, 18, and Robert Christopher Justis, 18, all of 1226 Burge Residence Hall, made their initial appearances in court Friday on second-degree burglary charges. Aaron Steven Innis, 18, 1108 Yewell St., was charged with two counts of second-degree burglary, according to court records.

Graham was also charged with possession of burglary tools, a screwdriver and hammer, according to court records.

The burglaries occurred at Smith, Hilgenberg and Cilek Associate Realtors, 1519 S. Gilbert St.; Gilbert Street Interiors, 1531 S. Gilbert St.; and Meacham Travel Service, 1527 S. Gilbert St., according to court records.

Detective Tommy Widmer said Iowa City police had a search warrant and uncovered evidence of other burglaries in a vehicle Friday morning.

The alleged burglars implicated themselves in other burglaries, Widmer said. The Johnson County Attorney's Office may press further charges, according to Widmer. The investigation is being continued by Iowa City police.

Officer Rick Kibbe was on routine patrol at 2:18 a.m. when he noticed two people acting suspiciously in the 1500 block of South Gilbert Street, according to a release issued Friday by Iowa City police.

Sally Konnaph, manager of Meacham Travel Service, said, "I believe the police officer was driving by, and he saw some people outside the building, and he stopped to question them. And at that point, he found out something was wrong.

"They attempted to take some things, but the police caught them," Konnaph said.

The back door of Meacham Travel Service was broken, but nothing was stolen, Konnaph said.

Two hours into the investigation, at 4:16 a.m., officer Rick Wyss found Hackathorn sleeping on the ground behind dirt mounds adjacent to Smith, Hilgenberg, Cilek and Associate Realtors, according to court records.

Mary Witte, owner of Gilbert Street Interiors, said burglars must have picked the back door lock because it was not damaged.

Items stolen from Gilbert Street Interiors include $190 dollars, a telephone and a calculator, Witte said.

Jerry Hilgenberg, president of Smith, Hilgenberg, Cilek and Associate Realtors, said, "Nothing major was taken from our offices. We don't have money at our office, so there wasn't anything to take."

Approximately $5 in stamp money and $6 in soda and candy bar money was stolen, Hilgenberg said.

As the sun sets behind the Old Capitol, members of the El Kahir Shriners from Cedar Rapids participate in the UI Homecoming parade Friday night. Large crowds packed the eight-block route to watch the parade, which featured local marching bands, floats and political candidates.

UI radio expands programming

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

The countries of Latin America are thousands of miles away from Iowa City, but UI students are bringing them closer to home in a new radio show, "El Mundo Latino," which has just started airing on KRUI.

Run strictly by students, the program is an offshoot of the Iowa New Radio Project, a radio broadcast put together by advanced news production students last spring.

"El Mundo Latino" (translated in English to mean the Spanish World) is the polished continuation of one of the project's shows, "El Mundo Nuevo," which focused on Latin American issues.

"I decided to continue the program and refine it," said co-anchor Franc Contreras, who was previously involved in the earlier show.

"Hopefully it is making people aware of various aspects of the Latino culture found here as well as in Latin America."

Contreras is joined by co-anchor Suzanne Janssen, a UI anthropology and Latin American studies major, and other students in gathering news stories, features and in scheduling Latin American poetry and prose readings.

"The ideas for this show come from students; there's really no faculty involvement," Contreras said. "And now the people working together on the show are studying in different areas, so each can contribute to different parts of the program."

The hour-long broadcast begins with a brief news update, compiled by Janssen, who reads through

Leader warns demonstrators in Yugoslavia

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — President Raif Dizdarevic warned Sunday that a state of emergency would be imposed throughout the country if protests over financial hardship and ethnic issues did not stop immediately.

A grave-looking Dizdarevic called an emergency session of the federal government and ordered it to take new steps to bring down inflation, which is 217 percent.

Tens of thousands of demonstrators took to the streets earlier Sunday, and students in the southern republic of Montenegro began a hunger strike to protest police violence and demand the ousting of Communist leaders.

Residents reported a heavy police presence and roadblocks around Titograd, the capital of Montenegro, 280 miles southwest of Belgrade. Club-wielding riot police broke up an overnight rally there against local Communist leaders early Saturday.

Three people were reported hospitalized in Niksic, 15 miles northwest of Titograd, where police fired tear gas Saturday to break up a crowd.

The state news agency Tanjug quoted local authorities as saying the situation in Niksic was "extremely serious" and said thousands of workers at a local steel mill put down their tools Sunday and marched to protest police actions.

"It is the final hour to turn things around," President Dizdarevic said in a nationwide speech on radio and television Sunday night. He said a "state of emergency could be introduced in Yugoslavia if the trend of negative events in the country is not immediately stopped."

Yugoslavian president calls for end to ethnic and economic protests

The presidency of Bosnia, another of Yugoslavia's six republics, issued a statement saying violent protests are "most seriously jeopardizing the integrity, constitutional order and security of the country," Tanjug said.

At Cetinje, 42 miles north of Titograd, authorities also increased security at workplaces and in public places, Tanjug reported without further detail.

In Titograd, students went on hunger strikes to protest the police violence and demand that local

Algerian protesters massacred by army

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Soldiers fired into crowds of demonstrators who refused to disperse Sunday, and police and hospital sources said at least 200 people had died in rioting over rising prices and a government austerity program.

Clashes between the army and demonstrators grew more violent late Saturday and early Sunday. Soldiers were ordered to shoot at protesters who did not disperse and fired repeatedly.

The government confirmed deaths among security forces.

The worst violence was reported in the southern and eastern suburbs of Algiers and in the western port city of Oran. Fighting also was reported in a dozen provincial centers.

In the capital, Algiers, army helicopters armed with rockets flew low, apparently to discourage the formation of crowds.

The city was mostly calm. After midday prayers at the city's mosques, some people gathered and chanted, "Chadli Must Go!" a reference to President Chadli Bendjedid. They dispersed quickly when soldiers charged.

Hospital and police sources in various parts of the country providing fragmentary information said more than 200 people had been killed and several hundred injured in the past five days. The government has given no official death toll.

From the accounts of sources, as well as descriptions from citizens who witnessed clashes, it seemed likely the final death toll could be much higher than 200.

Abderrahmane Bonato, a 30-year-old teacher, said he was returning home before the 10 p.m. curfew Saturday when he saw several soldiers firing on "perfectly quiet and respectful" crowds.

"I saw two men who were wounded being dragged into a

Former ACLU official disclaims church service in Union

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Holding church services in a state building might be a time-honored practice, but it's still a bad mix, according to former civil liberties union official Glenn Mitchell.

Mitchell's complaint comes in response to the use of space in the Union for some First United Methodist Church services.

Mitchell, a UI graduate student in political science and former state board vice chairman of the Michigan chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said he's not trying to "make trouble for the university. I just want to see (the practice) stopped."

Mitchell said a sign in front of the church, located on the corner of Jefferson and Dubuque streets, announces that an early Sunday service and Sunday school service are held in the church, but that the 10:30 a.m. Sunday service is held in the Union. According to Union Director Jean Kendall, the sign is wrong — the later service is held in the Union, but the earlier services are held in the Lindquist Center.

"I just want to see it stopped. It violates the non-establishment clause of the Constitution," Mitchell said. "My main concern is that it ends up being a state subsidy of religion because it provides space in a state building for a non-student religious group.

"I don't believe the UI should rent its space to outside religious groups," he added. "What if Jerry Falwell came here and wanted to rent the IMU Ballroom for a revival? Would they allow it?"

First United Methodist Pastor Wilbur Wilcox said he does not think Mitchell has a valid complaint and added that the arrangement would last only until the church renovation is complete. Wilcox was not available for further comment Sunday.

Kendall said the Union has traditionally provided limited space to religious groups, especially those with facilities problems, adding that she does not view such an arrangement as a subsidy.

"I guess I'm not sure that's the case — I'm not sure anyone is subsidizing anything," Kendall said. "It seems a shame to blow this out of proportion. It's something we've done often in the past and with no discrimination as to what group it was."

"We've done all kinds of services here in the past, so I'm not sure what the problem is," she said.

Mitchell will argue his case at a meeting this morning with Kendall. He hopes to resolve the issue quickly, but if talking to UI officials doesn't work, Mitchell said he will seek a court injunction.

"That's not my first wish; that's a last resort," he said. "I'm not trying to embarrass anyone, but it'll stop, I can pretty well assure you that."

"My guess is that probably no one beyond the Union administration knows about the situation," he said. "Once Jessup Hall (where the UI president's office is located) becomes aware of the situation, something will be done about it

Elevator shaft fire damages UI building

A fire broke out over the weekend in the UI Chemistry-Botany Building, 251 N. Capitol St., firefighters said Sunday.

The blaze started after 6 p.m. Friday in an elevator shaft on the fifth floor of the building, according to Capt. Wayne Fjelstad of the Iowa City Fire Dept.

Firefighters saw black smoke billowing from the top of the elevator shaft when they arrived, Fjelstad said. The fire was confined to the area and did approximately $1,000-$1,500 damage.

No one was injured. Construction workers in the area had been using a cutting torch earlier, and roof debris was ignited, according to Fjelstad.

Art lecturer to talk on ceiling of Sistine Chapel

Two illustrated lectures on the restoration of the Sistine Chapel ceiling will be given Tuesday and Wednesday by Fabrizio Mancinelli. Both lectures will be held at 8 p.m. in the Art Building Auditorium.

Mancinelli, curator of the Vatican Museums and director of operations for the restoration of the Chapel, will speak Tuesday on "The Restoration" and Wednesday on "Michelangelo's Fresco Technique." His lectures are part of the Ida Beam visiting lecture series and are being sponsored by the UI School of Art and Art History, and co-sponsored by the Departments of Classics, Comparative Literature, French and Italian, and the School of Religion.

Local support groups to meet this week

Three local support groups are scheduled to meet this week.

The Johnson County Cardiac Support Group will meet at 7 p.m. tonight at Econofoods Store, 1987 Broadway St. Betty Loan, a Mercy Hospital Nurse, will present a program called "Let's Go Shopping for Heart Healthy Foods," which will include tips on reading food package labels and getting the most nutritional, economical groceries.

The public is invited to attend. For more information, call 337-0670.

Also scheduled for 7 tonight is the HOPE Cancer Support Group, which will meet in the Assembly Room of Mercy Hospital. HOPE is a group for persons living with cancer and their families and friends and is designed to help both newly diagnosed and chronic cancer patients live with the disease and its effects.

For additional information on this group, call Ginne McLeran at 337-0651.

The Iowa City Multiple Sclerosis Support Group meeting will be held Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Iowa City Recreation Center. The speaker will be chiropractor Craig Carr. Families and friends of multiple sclerosis victims are also invited to attend.

For more information, contact Tom Ziskovsky at 351-6954.

Local resident named to Rural Victory committee

Anita Sehr of Iowa City has been named to the Dukakis-Bentsen Rural Victory '88 statewide committee. The committee is made up of farmers, teachers, legislators and business people who share a common concern for the future of rural America.

Sehr was president of the Johnson County Farm Bureau for the 1987-88 term. She joins 18 other committee members including Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Dale Cochran.

Committee members will be traveling throughout Iowa during October to promote Dukakis-Bentsen agriculture and rural development policy proposals.

Investigation continues into death of Village Inn employee

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police will not rule out any possible cause of Thursday's death of an assistant night manager at Village Inn until toxicology reports return, Iowa City Detective Tommy Widmer said Sunday.

Davenport native Terry Ray Schneider, 19, was discovered in the restaurant bathroom Thursday morning by a fellow employee, Widmer said. He was pronounced dead at 5:56 a.m. at UI Hospitals and Clinics, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

"Nothing's been ruled out. There's no apparent foul play. There's no apparent suicide," Widmer said. "But I've been a police officer long enough to know that nothing's apparent."

"I've covered all my bases so that when the toxicology reports come back we can go from there," Widmer said.

Toxicology reports normally return in two weeks, Widmer said.

Widmer said the restaurant was sealed up and evidence was taken from everything that could have caused the death.

"But really there's nothing we can do. There's an element of the unknown here," Widmer said. "We don't know why he died. All we can do is wait for the toxicology report to come back."

T.T. Bozek, Johnson County medical examiner, refused to comment on the autopsy.

The fact that the restaurant was fumigated for bugs the day before Schneider's death has made the incident newsworthy, Widmer said, but Schneider may or may not have been overcome by methyl bromide, the pesticide used by W.B. McCloud exterminators, Schaumburg, Ill.

Pure methyl bromide is a poisonous gas, said Larry Donner, Iowa City fire chief.

"At this particular time we still don't know whether the fumigant was involved in the death," Donner said. "Fumigating is something that most restaurants do from time to time. It's fairly standard procedure."

Schneider was in charge of letting the exterminators fumigate the restaurant Wednesday, Widmer said. Schneider did not enter the building again until McCloud employees, wearing oxygen masks, measured the air level and determined that the level of toxicity was well below their safety standards, according to Widmer.

Widmer said there was an indication Schneider had been sick in the bathroom, but he said the vomit may not have been Schneider's.

Five employees were treated and released at UI Hospitals Thursday morning as a precautionary measure, Widmer said.

"They had spent some time in there, and I wanted to be sure for their well-being that they were OK," Widmer said.

Firefighters measured toxicity levels in the building at approximately 11:20 a.m., and the restaurant was aired out with fans as a further precaution, according to Widmer.

Donner said, "They called us in because they wanted to be sure there weren't any pockets of the mixture (methyl bromide) in the air at the building, but the building was already opened and aired out at that point."

Management voluntarily closed Village Inn over the weekend, but the restaurant opened again for business at 6 a.m., Area Manager Collin Braynard said.

Braynard said Schneider was "very outgoing, energetic and made a lot of friends here."

Schneider started working for a Davenport Village Inn when he was 14 years old as a busboy, according to Braynard.

Following graduation from high school in 1987, Schneider entered the Village Inn management program and was advancing rapidly in the chain, Braynard said. He worked at the Iowa City restaurant for eight months.

Schneider's funeral was held Saturday morning at Runge Mortuary in Davenport.

"The members of the community have been really supportive and have reached out to help the staff members in this time of loss," Braynard said.

Police refuse comment on charges

The Daily Iowan

West Liberty city officials were maintaining a "no comment" policy this weekend in the wake of sexual assault charges leveled against West Liberty Police Chief Marcus Montagna Jr.

Montagna was charged Friday with intent to commit sexual abuse following a Wednesday incident in Iowa City.

West Liberty police department issued no comment and would not say whether disciplinary action had been taken against the chief.

"We have no comment on it," said a West Liberty police dispatcher. "We don't know anything about it."

A spokesman for West Liberty Mayor Kenneth Baugh called the charges a "tragedy" but would not say what action, if any, would be taken against Montagna in the aftermath of the charges.

"This is a tragedy and nothing is going to be done for a while," said a spokesman reached at Baugh's residence Sunday.

Iowa City police, who are investigating the incident, also withheld comment Sunday.

Courts

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

A man was charged with assault causing injury Friday after allegedly injuring a man during an argument, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Robert Craig Jones, 42, address unavailable, allegedly choked the victim and hit the victim's head on the wall of an apartment on East Jefferson Street. Iowa City police officers observed a small cut above the victim's right eye, according to court records.

Bail was set at $1,000. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 14, according to court records.

A UI student was charged with third-degree theft Friday for allegedly taking more than $100 worth of milk crates from the rear of an Iowa City food store, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Scott Lee Davis, 18, of Slater Residence Hall, allegedly took 20 milk crates, totaling $160 in value, from the rear of Hy-Vee Food Store, 501 Hollywood Blvd., according to court records.

Iowa City police used information about the vehicle that was suspected to be used in the theft and found Davis. Davis allegedly admitted to police, after his rights were read to him, that he had taken the milk crates and had possession of them, according to court records.

Davis was released from custody on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 24, according to court records.

Police

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police discovered a male in a basement at 428 Kimball Road, with a self-inflicted gunshot wound Friday at 4:30 a.m., according to a release issued by the police department.

The man was transported to UI Hospitals and Clinics by a Johnson County Ambulance, according to the release. The man's medical condition is not known.

The incident is currently under investigation by Iowa City police, according to the release.

Report: An armed robbery was reported at Revco Drug Store, 1101 S. Riverside Drive, at approximately 6:15 p.m. Friday, according to a release issued by Iowa City police.

Two white males reportedly robbed the business armed with a handgun, according to the release. An undetermined amount of money was stolen.

The incident is under investigation, according to the release. One suspect is a white male in his late 20s or early 30s and 5-foot-9 or 10, according to the release. He wore gold wire-rimmed glasses, a blue jean jacket, a blue checkered shirt and blue jeans.

The other suspect was a white male approximately 19 to 23 years old, 6-foot and 170 pounds. The man wore a green and white checkered shirt with a white shirt underneath and black Levis, according to the release.

Accident: A man was charged with five offenses after a two-car accident occurred at Burlington and Gilbert streets Sunday at 2:30 a.m., according to police reports.

Roger M. Price, 21, 1307 E. College St., was charged with operating while intoxicated, leaving the scene of a personal injury accident, driving while under suspension, reckless driving and carrying weapons, according to the report.

Price allegedly failed to stop in time and struck a car in the rear that was waiting at a stoplight, according to the report.

Price's car received a total of $400 damage, and the other car sustained $1,000 damage, according to the report.

Accident: The Johnson County Ambulance Service checked a small child who was hit by a car at 900 Iowa Ave. Saturday, according to police reports.

The 11-year-old child was released to his mother, according to the report.

Report: Two homecoming floats were set on fire Saturday and Sunday, according to police reports.

The Iowa City Fire Department extinguished a float fire early Sunday at the Delta Zeta Sorority, 223 S. Dodge St., according to the report. Another float was set on fire at 1409 E. Court St.

Metro/Iowa Affirmative guides

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

A report recently released by the UI has generated reactions in the UI community and action in the administration.

Based on the report "Affirmative Action: The Distance Between Policy and Practice" has included several complimentary calls to "department heads" and a meeting between UI Vice President Academic Affairs David Veitch and the affirmative action committee that published the report according to committee's chairman Martha Chamallas.

Chamallas said the purpose of the report, released Sept. 25, was to "paint a picture" of how successful the UI's current affirmative action policies have been at achieving diversity, a term used to refer to the goal of opening up opportunities at the UI to women and minority groups.

Based on a study consisting of interviews with students, faculty and administrators, two prototype colleges — the College of Pharmacy and Education — as well as drawing from their own experiences, the comm

DES MOINES (AP) — Johnson County prosecutors have dropped an assault charge against police activist Mark Curtis, who earlier was convicted of sexually abusing a 15-year-old Des Moines girl.

Supporters of Curtis on Saturday hailed the move as a victory over their cause. They said the decision to drop charges that Curtis assaulted arresting officers March was an attempt to prevent Curtis from exposing a police frame-up.

The trial for the 29-year-old union activist and socialist was set to begin Monday.

Affirmative action report guides university update

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

A report recently released on the status of women and minorities at the UI has generated reaction from the UI community and action from the administration.

Referred to as the report "Affirmative Action: The Distance Between Policy and Practice" has included several complimentary calls from department heads and a meeting between UI Vice President of Academic Affairs David Vernon and the affirmative action committee that published the report, according to committee's chairwoman Martha Chamallas.

Chamallas said the purpose of the report, released Sept. 25, was to "paint a picture" of how successful the UI's current affirmative action policies have been at achieving diversity, a term used to refer to the goal of opening up opportunities at the UI to women and other minority groups.

Based on a study consisting of interviews with students, staff, faculty and administrators from two prototype colleges — the colleges of Pharmacy and Education — as well as drawing from their own experiences, the committee summarized in its report three general barriers — attitudinal, structural and environmental — that have prevented the goal of diversity from being achieved.

And two weeks after releasing the report, Chamallas said the feedback she has received so far has been positive.

"We've had some people call to, mostly, say they liked the report," she said. "I think the primary feeling is that it will be useful for self-examination."

The affirmative action subcommittee met with Vernon Friday to "talk about some of their concerns and get an idea of what general programs might be effective," Vernon said.

"I'm hoping to have some funds available next year. I have no idea what's going to happen yet or where the money is going to come from, but I think we'll be able to do something and answer as many of the concerns as possible," he said.

Chamallas said, "We had a very good meeting. We're discussing programs that will work in reality rather than just in form. She added that the meeting was left "open-ended... we didn't set up a time to meet with Vernon again because, at this point, we need to get some specific proposals down on paper first."

The committee plans to meet Thursday to further discuss what their proposals will be.

In the meantime, the affirmative action committee, which is part of the Council on the Status of Women, has planned two new projects for the year.

The first of these projects will involve a look at the implementation of affirmative action policy in the UI College of Engineering. The project is a continuation of the study presented as the basis for the affirmative action report.

The other project, according to Chamallas, will be a long-term investigation of the quality of working life of the UI's professional and scientific staff.

"We've got about 4,000 people at the UI without faculty appointment, who are made up of over 55-percent women," Chamallas said. "This is a fast-growing sector of the university, and we want to find out what they do and what influence they have in policymaking."

Publishers settle with UI printers

The Daily Iowan

A lawsuit over the printing of a lesbian culture magazine was settled out of court by the magazine's publishers and the UI. They agreed to the settlement Sept. 16.

Publishers of the Common Lives/Lesbian Lives filed suit against the UI last year after UI Printing Services in June 1986 refused to print an edition containing photographs of nude women. The group sued for monetary compensation because Printing Services held the publication for a month before notifying the group of the decision.

The magazine had to be distributed two months late because of the delay. The group had eventually found another printer for the magazine.

In April 1987, the UI Human Rights Committee concluded after an investigation requested by UI administrators, that the administration's refusal to print the material violated the UI Human Rights Policy against affectional preference discrimination.

Prosecutors drop assault charges against Curtis

DES MOINES (AP) — Polk County prosecutors have dropped an assault charge against political activist Mark Curtis, who earlier was convicted of sexually abusing a 15-year-old Des Moines girl.

Supporters of Curtis on Saturday hailed the move as a victory for their cause. They said the decision to drop charges that Curtis assaulted arresting officers last March was an attempt to prevent Curtis from exposing a police frame-up.

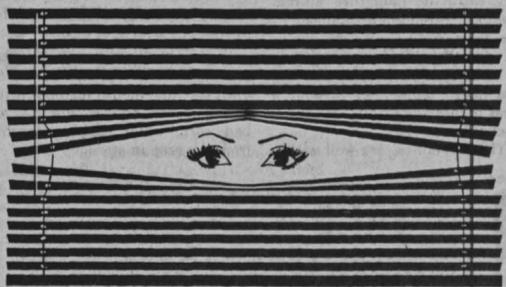

The trial for the 29-year-old union activist and socialist was set to begin Monday.

The Polk County attorney's office said in court documents that it sought dismissal of the charge because Curtis already faces a sentence of 25 to 35 years. Curtis was convicted last month on a charge of third-degree sexual abuse and first-degree burglary. He is scheduled to be sentenced Oct. 21 at the Marion County Jail in Knoxville.

A lawyer for Curtis said that conviction will be appealed.

Throughout the trial, Curtis maintained he was the victim of a police frame-up because of his political activities.

Democrats begin speaker series

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County Democrats and Students For Dukakis kicked off a weekly "Speaker's Corner" series on the Pentacrest Friday.

Five local Democrats, including State Representative Mary Neuhauser, Iowa City Board of Education President Connie Champion and Johnson County Democratic co-chairman Jim Larew, spoke about needed reforms in the educational system.

"The nation's schools need the resources to prepare students for the next century," Iowa City Board of Education member Betsy Hawtrey said. "The challenge for the next administration will not be whether to advocate education, but rather how to use the office of the president and the legislative bodies to give it the kind of support it is lacking."

Neuhauser told a lunchtime crowd of about 25 that Republican leaders in the Reagan administration have ignored the nation's poor, who have the least money to afford an education but who need it most.

Neuhauser said the United States needs Democrats in Washington, D.C., who will spend more money on educational reforms and restore funding to programs cut at the expense of less fortunate members of society.

Students for Dukakis Chairman Skip Jensen said people should vote for George Bush if they "want to support an administration who doesn't care about education, who will curtail Pell Grants and who will cut back Guaranteed Student Loans."

In the past five years, the Reagan-Bush administration has cut aid to education, Jensen told the crowd.

Mike Dukakis recently proposed a plan that would restore college funding and allow loan recipients to gradually pay back funds over a lifetime through paycheck deductions.

Jensen urged the crowd to consider the advantages of the plan. "We're not asking for a free ride — we want to pay the money back. What we're asking is for the opportunity to educate ourselves, an opportunity to prepare for our future," he said.

Larew said Bush, who is currently campaigning as "the education president," voted in 1980 to abolish the Department of Education.

Larew also lashed out against

Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle, recalling that the Indiana senator has voted against free immunization for school children, consideration of an amendment to provide breakfasts for mothers and children and improving nutrition standards for school lunches.

"If the Republicans are elected, the schoolchildren of America will be praying," said Larew. "They'll be praying they don't get sick from lack of immunization, they'll be praying they don't go hungry from lack of a nutritious lunch, and they'll be praying they'll have enough money to get to college."

Jensen said the Democrats will sponsor an issues forum each Friday at 12:20 p.m. on the Pentacrest until the elections.

FDA eases aflatoxin restriction

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

The Food and Drug Administration last week slackened its restrictions on corn contaminated with a lethal carcinogen, allowing higher levels of the toxin to appear in livestock feed and freeing up some previously black-listed grain for sale at market.

The new guidelines follow reports from federal agencies and grain elevators that some of the fall crop is poisoned by aflatoxin, a naturally occurring carcinogen capable of causing liver cancer in humans and livestock. Officials attributed the appearance of the fungus to the summer's drought.

The FDA last week released its response to the condition, easing its former codes and effectually re-opening the market for some corn previously rejected by grain elevators.

"It's a liberalization of the tolerance levels so (farmers) can use more of the corn," said Richard Turner, FDA supervisory investigator.

The FDA revised standards that formerly outlawed corn tainted with above 100 parts per billion in livestock feed to a new limit of 300 parts per billion, said Julia Hewley, FDA consumer affairs officer.

The relaxed standards also allow farmers to blend contaminated corn with healthy corn to diminish the concentration of aflatoxin and arrive at a passable level. The mixing must be performed in the presence of state or federal officials, according to the revised stipulations.

The guidelines also hiked permissible levels of contaminated corn to be fed to hogs weighing over 100 pounds from 20 parts per billion to 200 parts per billion. Corn containing up to 100 parts per billion can be fed to breeding cattle, swine and mature poultry. But FDA strictures banning levels above 20 parts per billion in corn for human, dairy cattle or immature animal consumption remain unchanged.

An Iowa State University extension specialist called the new limits safe and rejected theories that the more liberal guidelines present a threat to humans through contaminated milk.

"(The guidelines) are well within what would be safe feeding levels for livestock," said Dan Loy, ISU extension beef specialist. "There's very little risk as for that getting into the human food chain."

The FDA permits one-half part per billion of aflatoxin in milk.

The revised FDA statutes spurred the U.S. Department of Agriculture to decide whether this fall's corn placed in storage as collateral for federal price support loans would be vulnerable to testing for aflatoxin, potentially depriving the farmer of a source of income.

The USDA announced Friday that this fall's corn will not be tested until the nine-month loan matures, giving farmers time to find uses for bad corn while earning income from the crop in storage.

Iowans support Dukakis despite current prosperity

DES MOINES (AP) — Most Iowans surveyed in a recent poll say they are better off than when Democrats last occupied the White House, but those sentiments haven't been helping Republican presidential candidate George Bush in the Hawkeye state.

The Des Moines Register, which last week said its copyrighted Iowa Poll had 49 percent of likely Iowa voters backing Democrat Michael Dukakis to 38 percent for Bush, on Sunday released additional findings that indicate Iowans still were pleased with the general accomplishments of the Republican administration.

The poll said 57 percent of those questioned believe that in general, the United States is headed in the right direction, to 32 percent who disagreed and 11 percent who said they were unsure. Fifty-one percent said they are better off now than they were eight years ago, 37 percent said they were worse off and 12 percent were unsure.

Despite the general approval indicated for the eight years of Republican rule, the poll said four of 10 likely voters had negative feelings for Bush, who has been vice president for those two terms. In contrast, 29 percent took a negative view of Dukakis.

The poll also said 52 percent of those questioned thought too much attention was being given to patriotism in the campaign, while 18 percent said the issue was getting too little attention, and 15 percent said the right amount of attention was being paid on the subject.

Soviet authorities report first AIDS death

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union on Sunday reported its first AIDS death, that of a pregnant prostitute from Leningrad, and authorities may publish her photograph to alert her sexual partners.

The 29-year-old woman died Sept. 5 of pneumonia following a 26-pound weight loss, chronic tonsillitis and bronchitis and a serious decline in the count of her immune system's T-cells, the labor newspaper Trud reported.

All are common symptoms of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and the newspaper noted that epidemiologists were incensed that the woman's doctors failed to diagnose AIDS before she died.

They are now trying to locate the victim's sexual partners to inform who else might be infected with the disease, and authorities are considering publishing the woman's photograph to alert her partners, Trud said.

She was registered as a night school student and as a worker at a factory, but police said she earned her living as a prostitute for foreigners.

Arsonists kill seven blacks in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Seven blacks were killed and four homes were damaged by arsonists in a series of violent incidents outside the Indian Ocean city of Durban, police said Sunday.

The sketchy police unrest report lists incidents reported within the preceding 24 hours. The report did not give any more details of the latest violence.

Durban and other cities in Natal Province, such as Pietermaritzburg, have been the sites of some of the country's most sustained black-on-black faction fighting in recent years.

The two main rivals are Inkatha, a political organization headed by Zulu leader Mangosuthu Buthelezi, and the United Democratic Front, a nationwide anti-apartheid coalition that the government banned in February.

Three Palestinians killed in hunt for agitators

JERUSALEM — Three Palestinians were shot to death as army units hunted down agitators in 30 villages Sunday, while businesses shut across the occupied territories in a strike marking 10 months of rebellion against Israeli rule.

Israeli troops shot and wounded at least 22 Palestinians in clashes, Arab hospital officials said.

The deaths raised to at least 294 the number of Palestinians killed since the uprising was launched Dec. 8 against Israeli rule in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, seized from Jordan and Egypt in the 1967 Middle East war. Six Israelis have died during the same period.

Most of the casualties Sunday were reported in West Bank villages, where the raids were centered. Dozens of Palestinians were arrested, witnesses said. They said troops removed rock and barrel roadblocks and ordered anti-Israeli slogans washed from village walls.

A military official said the army sweep was "part of our effort to use different tactics" to try to restore order in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Israeli troops opened fire on a mob attacking them in the West Bank village of Yatta when they entered to search and make arrests, the official said. He said army helicopters evacuated the wounded but two Palestinians died while receiving medical treatment.

Atlanta anti-abortion demonstrations end

ATLANTA — The so-called "Siege of Atlanta" anti-abortion demonstrations are over, but the city is still dealing with scores of people clogging the jails and courts, many refusing to give their names.

One "John Doe" inmate jailed since July 19 escaped Saturday, but police know his real name and where he lives.

Last week's five days of protests outside four clinics ended Saturday with the arrest of 40 demonstrators, bringing the week's total to 461.

About 140 of those still jailed have applied for release on bond but have not been processed, said Tom Pocock, deputy director of the Atlanta Corrections Bureau.

Some applications were processed Sunday, and by late afternoon the number of protesters still jailed was down to 319, jail officials said.

The city has refused to separate the paperwork of Operation Rescue prisoners from that of the rest of the jail population, further delaying processing.

Quoted . . .

Nothing's been ruled out. There's no apparent foul play. There's no apparent suicide. But I've been a police officer long enough to know that nothing's apparent.

Bush campaigns for Illinois swing vote

CICERO, Ill. (AP) — Republican George Bush, campaigning in a state crucial to his and Democratic rival Michael Dukakis' election hopes, marched in a Slavic parade Sunday and declared that "none of us will ever forget there is not freedom in Eastern Europe."

Bush participated in the city's annual Houby Day parade, a Czechoslovakian celebration of bountiful mushroom crops. Houby is a Czech word for mushroom.

"This is the day we celebrate family, we celebrate faith, and we celebrate freedom," the GOP nominee said in brief remarks before the parade began. "And none of us will ever forget there is not freedom in Eastern Europe, and I have pledged, as president, to never forget that."

Bush's declaration was a reversal of former President Gerald Ford's celebrated misstatement during his October 1976 debate with Jimmy Carter, when Ford declared there was "no Soviet domination of Eastern Europe." That remark is widely believed to have contributed to the Republican president's election defeat that year.

Although those carrying pro-Bush signs were clearly in the majority Sunday, a group of demonstrators, some carrying Dukakis banners, marched alongside the vice president chanting the Democratic refrain, "Where Was George?"

Bush pointed to himself as if to say, "here I am," and called out, "Where is Mike?"

Craig Fuller, Bush's chief of staff, said the campaign views Cicero as "a community where there are a lot of swing voters."

Both candidates are focusing attention on Illinois and its 24 electoral votes. Recent polls show a near dead heat between Bush and Dukakis in the state.

Dukakis campaigned here last week. The vice president has been in Illinois five times since he was nominated by the GOP National Convention in mid-August.

"My guess is it's dead even at best (in Illinois)," Fuller told reporters.

The congressional district that includes Cicero is largely Democratic, but President Ronald Reagan carried it by 58 percent of the vote in 1984.

In Chicago, state union leaders challenged Bush to "stop the parade of Illinois jobs to foreign markets instead of throwing waves to parades."

Carl Alessi, legislative director of the Chicago Federation of Labor, issued a statement challenging Bush to explain to Illinois workers why they lost well-paying manufacturing jobs in the 1982 recession and "why they should be satisfied with a hole in a Swiss cheese economy instead of foreign markets to sell the products they have the skills to produce."

Bush was the only one of the national candidates who campaigned Sunday. Aides said he spent several hours at his Washington home Sunday morning preparing for the second nationally televised debate with Dukakis in Los Angeles on Thursday or Friday.

The debate will begin at 9 a.m. EDT in the Pauley Pavilion on the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles.

Dukakis spent much of Sunday closeted with a dozen aides at the Park Plaza Hotel in Boston discussing debate strategy. He flies to New York on Monday to meet with students at a Levittown high school on Long Island and to march in the Columbus Day parade in Manhattan with Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Bush's running mate, Dan Quayle, embarks Monday on a six-day, cross-country tour that will take him to Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, South Dakota, Montana, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico and Wisconsin.

Quayle has told reporters he doesn't believe he is a liability to the Bush campaign, despite his poor showing in public opinion polls after his debate last week with Democratic vice-presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen.

But Kevin Phillips, a conservative Republican political analyst, said in NBC's "Meet the Press" show that voters, including many Republicans, are "nervous" about Quayle.

Democratic pollster Peter Hart said on the same program that a comparison of public and private polls before and after the Quayle-Bentsen debate showed a shift of 2 or 3 percentage points in favor of the Democratic ticket.

Opposition requests early election date

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Opposition leaders said they will ask the government and the military this week to begin talks on moving up elections and hastening President Augusto Pinochet's departure from power.

A list of proposed constitutional changes will be submitted in the coming days, Patricio Aylwin, spokesman for the 16-party opposition coalition, said in an interview published Sunday.

"I have no doubts whatsoever that there will be a negotiation. That's what wisdom mandates," the La Epoca newspaper quoted Aylwin as saying.

"In other words, we will formally call on those holding power now, to talk to reach an agreement. We will take the initiative by making a proposal and a call to the armed forces," it quoted him as saying.

Chileans voted Wednesday to reject Pinochet's bid to extend his 15-year rule until 1997. The 1980 constitution set new elections for December 1989, and the new president would not take office until March 1990.

The four-man military junta, which serves as the legislature of this South American country, is empowered to revise the constitution, but the military government has said flatly it does not intend to do so.

Interior Minister Sergio Fernandez said in a speech broadcast nationwide Saturday night that Pinochet, despite losing the referendum 57 percent to 43 percent, "commands the strongest political force in the country and the largest popular support."

Brawley case branded a farce

WAPPINGERS FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — The case of Tawana Brawley, whose story of rape was branded a lie by a grand jury, has left an atmosphere of mistrust and suspicion between blacks and whites in the country's most populous area.

The black teen-ager's account of abduction and attack by six white men, which became a national symbol of racial tension and occupied New York state politicians and law enforcement authorities for much of 1988, was nothing more than a teen-ager's tall tale, possibly to avoid punishment for staying out late, the panel concluded.

Brawley, 16, still insists she's telling the truth.

But after her initial claim to be a victim, family advisers said she did not testify before the grand jury. Her mother refused to honor a subpoena and faces possible arrest.

"As far as I'm concerned, it was the biggest hoax that's ever been perpetrated on the American public," said Lt. William McCord, acting police chief in Wappingers Falls, N.Y., former home of the Brawleys.

The teen-ager was found last Nov. 28 lying in a garbage bag after being missing for four days. Her body was smeared with feces and epithets like "nigger" and "KKK" scrawled in charcoal on her torso.

She wrote "white cop" on a piece of paper when asked who was involved.

Brawley and her family insisted that a legal system dominated by whites couldn't give justice to blacks. Her advisers, the Rev. Al Sharpton and attorneys C. Vernon Mason and Alton Maddox, called for a special prosecutor to investigate the case. Gov. Mario Cuomo named Attorney General Robert Abrams as special prosecutor, and a grand jury was impaneled Feb. 29.

But while the grand jury tried to investigate in secrecy, the Brawley team's public statements became more heated and twisted. Sharpton equated Abrams to Adolf Hitler, and Maddox publicly suggested the attorney general masturbated in front of a picture of Brawley.

And they named names. The lawyers flatly accused two law enforcement authorities, Dutchess County assistant prosecutor Steven Pagnones and former Fishkill, N.Y., police officer Harry Crist, of being involved in the attack, a notion later discounted by the grand jury. Crist had committed suicide, apparently for unrelated reasons, shortly after Brawley was found.

"At the outset, I think I accepted that if not all the charges were true, at least there was something there," said Lucille Pattison, Dutchess County executive. "I could not believe that the story was all cut from the same cloth. But the longer the advisers kept Tawana from talking, the more suspicious I got."

The grand jury confirmed such suspicions. It said there was no evidence Brawley was sexually assaulted but that there was plenty of evidence — including clothing fibers and hair samples — that indicated she had concocted the story herself.

Abrams wrote a letter to the state Judicial Discipline Committee calling for an investigation of Brawley's lawyers for violations of legal ethics. He also said his office is investigating Sharpton's activities and said he believed federal prosecutors are conducting a similar investigation.

Brawley denounced the grand jury report, declaring: "I am not a liar." Many of her supporters stood by her.

"I have not allowed myself to agree with the minority that thinks this is a hoax," said the Rev. Saul Williams, a Newburgh, N.Y., minister whose church has held rallies for Brawley. "I believe it."

Disguised opportunism

A trade group representing tavern owners will ask the Iowa Legislature next year to approve legislation regulating events at which kegs of beer are available. The ordinance is designed to cut down on the "irresponsible" nature of keg parties, according to Tony Mortale, president of the State Association of Beverage Retail Establishments (SABRE).

The local chapter of the tavern owner's group SABRE, has also asked the Iowa City Council to consider an ordinance that would require the host of a party to apply for a keg permit before being allowed to have kegs at the event. People applying for the permit would have to state how many people and kegs would be at the party, provide security for the get-together and set up portable restrooms.

It's interesting that an ordinance so concerned with the safety, responsibility and negative results associated with a party atmosphere should come from a group of local tavern owners, and not, say, a local MADD chapter, I.C. police fed up with the parties, or local residents tired of the noise and litter that accompany keg bashes. No, actually the proposal comes straight from the group with the most to gain if the prospect of throwing a keg becomes more trouble than it's worth to the host — local bar owners.

According to Tony Mortale, "Our association has been very interested in getting a keg law passed." That's not hard to believe considering that this legislation would considerably help the tavern owners associated with SABRE. Passage of this state legislation, and especially the local keg ordinance, would be an indirect and presumptuous attack on civil liberties for the good of local tavern owners — nothing else.

Early celebrations

One of the most repressive dictatorships in the Western Hemisphere suffered a major blow last week.

By a 54 percent to 43 percent majority, voters in Chile rejected the military government of Augusto Pinochet and decided to hold free elections in the country next year.

But jubilant supporters of democracy in Chile should be forewarned — Pinochet seems to have no intention of giving up his power, acquired in a coup against the democratically elected government of Salvador Allende in 1973.

While Pinochet did agree to accept the results of the loss, he also made clear that he has no intention of giving up his power until his term runs out in 1990, as many opposition groups would like to see him do. He also has said he will not accept any reforms to the constitution adopted in 1980, a document that provides for the continued prominence of the military in the government even if Pinochet leaves office in 1990. Nor is the election that will be held in 1990 a clearly free one. Several opposition groups, all to the left of the current government, have been banned from participating in it.

The United States, through the C.I.A. and companies such as International Telephone and Telegraph, was partially responsible for Pinochet coming to power in the first place. Given that, America now has a responsibility to pressure Pinochet and make sure the elections held next year are free and fair. Otherwise, the shouts of jubilation in the streets of Santiago may be premature.

War without money

Representative Neal Smith (Dem., Ia.) last week expressed his frustration over the unwillingness of Congress to do anything meaningful or substantive in the nation's fight against drug abuse. Smith is the sponsor of a bill to appropriate $2.6 billion in the war on drugs, but the measure will almost certainly not get out of committee because Congress is working hard to complete a different anti-drug bill. The popular bill includes the death penalty for drug-related killings, but does not provide the means to increase funding. In regard to Congress' inaction, Smith said, "Sooner or later people are going to find out that we did nothing. We shouldn't fool people that way."

Rep. Smith sees the problem that Congress is creating for itself. Congress is trying to give the appearance of doing something to fight drugs but is unwilling to do anything that is necessary but politically unpopular, i.e., pay for it. Applying the death penalty to drug-related killings is merely election-year hype and posturing to avoid the appearance of being soft on crime. Criminals involved in the importation and sale of illegal drugs direct so much violence and killing against each other that capital punishment is unlikely to be much of a deterrent.

A real war on drugs requires a far greater effort to intercept illegal drug shipments and a vast improvement concerning law enforcement in our cities and towns. Additionally, drug prevention and drug rehabilitation programs would need to be greatly expanded to meet the needs of individuals by means of education and treatment.

Imagine the outpouring of support for increased anti-drug funding if it were discovered that a malicious foreign government was responsible for the drug crisis in our nation. A real and effective effort against drugs will require money — lots of it. The problem with spending money is that a way is needed to raise it: taxes. Increasing taxes to combat drugs may not be popular with the American people, but trying to fight a war without money is impossible.

Diversity helps define mainstream

The signature phrase from our first presidential debate was "the mainstream." Who is in it? Who is "way out of it"? The notion of a mainstream in America is a relatively new one; we began as a rowdy congregation of states and territories which wrangled over each and every new law with the vigor of teenagers. Before that we were pioneers and revolutionaries plotting to throw off the yoke of mother England. Always we have been held together, at times just barely, by the simple wish to survive as a free people.

The 1933 edition of The Oxford English Dictionary doesn't even have an entry for "mainstream." One must look to the 1976 Supplement to the Oxford English Dictionary, where Carlyle is cited as the first source, in 1831. By a stroke of good luck, it wasn't until 1974 that the term was applied to the polity.

Suddenly we are being pelted with rhetoric about our mainstream, which is faced with a conspiracy to devalue it. Such, at least, is the story the Republican candidates for president and vice president would have us believe. That slippery Greek eel swims to the left of the mainstream, trying to fool us all. Aside from the horrid implication that the entire population of America is struggling upstream to spawn, the symbol of the mainstream asserts a commonness which is neither looked for nor cared about by most Americans.

If America has a norm, there is one and only one place to find out what it may be. America's big brother, the Census Bureau, keeps track of the mainstream's characteristics, that set of attributes we stand in peril of demolishing by electing the wrong candidate.

My hunch is that those who steer

Kim Painter

George Bush's campaign long fervently for a mainstream stocked with two-parent families composed of a male-female couple and at least one child. Alas, according to the March 1989 Advance Report, a mere 27% of our 91 million households exhibit this paradigm. Twenty-seven percent doth not a mainstream make. It is not a block with the voting power or economic clout to single-handedly elect presidents or forge economic policy. It is one group among many swimming together side-by-side in our mainstream.

Other data reported include that unmarried households have increased by 63% from 1980 to 1988. Twenty-nine and nine-tenths percent of the married family group (which in total still comprises 56.9% of total households) is married with no children. Eleven and six-tenths percent of total households consist of female householders with at least one child. Twenty four percent of our households are single people living alone, the breakdown being 14.4% women and 9.7% men. We see from such statistics that defining a mainstream is not as easy in 1988 as tuning in the Motorola to Lucy and Ricky.

I find it interesting, in a chilling sort of way, that the Republican nominee for president has decreed himself the mainstream candidate. He is running on a platform which, among other things, repudiates the consistent mandate of American voters that a woman should have the sole responsibility of deciding when she will and will not bear children. Pollsters come and go, yet our response remains unchanging. On issue after issue this year we are, in fact, being told what we stand for by others, others who have much to gain by convincing us that they know better than we.

This tactic calls to mind an instructive fable from Soviet history. In the early 1900s, Lenin had a tough time with the mainstream of the communist party. They were not stepping into the conga line with other starry-eyed young revolutionaries. In a last-ditch effort to cement a solid position for what was a tiny, radical segment of the Russian population, he became the world's first spin doctor. He declared his tiny majority (26 of 44 on the board of Iskra, the paper which identified the mainstream and opposition in Russia) to be the bolshevik, or majoritarians. This left the more conservative party members, who often held the majority opinion on individual issues, labeled the menshevik, or minority. The real majority, the Russian populace, was out of the running for any label. And they all lived happily ever after.

The damage, as the image-making brahmins of American politics have learned, lies in calling the name. The tragedy, as historians know, lies in accepting the label hung around one's neck and the neck of one's opponent. The descendants of Lenin's lie are running the most repressive country in what is sometimes characterized as a civilized world. When I see how quickly the Republican nominee seized upon this tactic as a good idea, I become nervous. When I see Michael Dukakis refrain from tearing to shreds the notion that George Bush represents the mainstream of anything other than the radical right, I become angry.

Certainly the mainstream in America favors a woman's right to abortion, watching the defense budget like a hawk, doing those who are disenfranchised and homeless, and providing education beyond high school for those who meet standards of admission.

America's mainstream certainly opposes the tackling of pregnant women in the streets of Atlanta by those committed to denying their constitutional rights. America's mainstream opposes the notion that a minority should have more than the right to its say (namely, that they should be allowed to frighten the rest of us into quiet desperation).

The conclusion most obvious to most Americans is that the mainstream is a mighty river of individual freedom composed of many small streams. George Bush's campaign tries to steer us into an us-and-them mentality. Anyone not fitting his cookie-cutter mold is a threat to our great country. I don't buy into that. The one continual miracle of our country is that we are composed of so many diverse segments. It is nearly inconceivable that we all coexist, let alone that we have an equal share in America's privileges and duties. The secret is tolerance. Don't let radical right bluster make you think otherwise. Without strong minorities we become a country of weakness, we lack originality. In this, the 200th anniversary of our Constitution, we need mainstream values more than ever. We simply mustn't let others define them for us.

Columbus was quite a navigator

We know that on October 12, 1492, Christopher Columbus reportedly discovered America. But what do we really know about the man and his mission?

Well, for starters, Columbus was an expert navigator. This we know because in trying to find a more direct route from Spain to the East Indies he ended up farther from the East Indies than when he started. So we close post offices, banks and government offices in honor of a guy who probably couldn't have found black beauty in a field of white mice.

And what do we really know about the discovery of America? Well, America didn't have a name for many years. While this may account for why so many Americans today suffer from maladjustment, denial and withdrawal, it doesn't really provide us with any insight into the discovery of our country.

Nearly 500 years after Columbus landed in what is now Gary, Indiana, the question remains whether he actually discovered America or if he just had a good press agent.

But the real question is not, as some feel, whether it was indeed Columbus or the Vikings who really discovered America. No. The question we should be trying to answer is where did Columbus get his directions? And what happened once he landed? In finding answers to these questions, historians, generally, are as vocal — and as useful — as your average street mime.

That's why I turned to "Shakes" Macaby, a guy I bowl with. He says Columbus got his directions from a convenience store worker in Madrid, Spain, who thought the explorer wanted to know the way to Indiana. "Shakes" knows this, he says, because he was there. He swears it's true — and that Shirley MacLaine will vouch for him.

"Shakes" says he remembers Columbus' discovery of America like it was 496 years ago. Though it was autumn, it was unseasonably warm — "an Indian summer," he recalls.

As "Shakes" tells it, Columbus and his crew land and nervously advance inland. There is immediate suspicion and distrust when their eyes meet the Indians. That anxiety is heightened when many of the sea-weary sailors mistake some of the war-painted and scantily dressed Indians for Madrid show girls and chase them into the woods. It's up to Columbus to remedy an uncomfortable situation. He approaches cautiously and pauses, choosing his words carefully.

"Is there a bathroom nearby?" he asks. "I know I should've gone before we left port, but I really didn't think we'd be gone this long."

Columbus then turns to "Shakes" and says, "Talk to them Macaby." "What makes you think they speak English?" inquires "Shakes."

Speaking pidgin English, one of the Indians steps forward. Columbus and the others have difficulty understanding him, though the ship's mascot, a pigeon, nods in agreement.

"How did you get here?" Columbus asks the Indian. "Years ago we set out for the Indies and got directions from a guy at a convenience store in Madrid who must have thought we wanted to go to Indiana."

"You mean this isn't the East Indies?" "It's not even eastern Indiana," says the Indian.

"Then what is it?" asks Columbus. "We don't know," the Indian replies.

"What do you call it?" Columbus asks.

"Until now," says the Indian shrugging, "we just called it ours."

"Shakes" then pulls Columbus aside and whispers: "The way I understand it, Chris, the basic difference between discovered countries and undiscovered countries is that discovered countries usually have names and undiscovered countries don't."

"What's your point, Macaby?" asks Columbus.

"I think you've discovered a country, you old son-of-a-gun, you!"

"No kidding," Columbus says, "What do we do now?"

"I guess we could name it. You got any ideas?"

"We could name it after my friend," Columbus says.

"What's her name?"

"Blanche," Columbus answers.

"I don't know," "Shakes" says.

"How would it sound, the United States of Blanche?"

"I see what you mean. What about America?"

"It works for me," says "Shakes."

Columbus then becomes aroused with ceremonial righteousness and asks the Indian: "Do you have anything we could run a flag up?"

"How about a flagpole?" says the Indian.

"That'll do," Columbus answers.

"Where?"

"Over there," the Indian says, "by the Viking Hospitality Center."

passageway by their comrades," he said. "I don't know what happened to them."

A 26-year-old government official, Aliouane Fadela, said she saw gendarmes in riot gear "charging bystanders who were doing nothing and then kick them once they were on the ground." The gendarmes are police under military control.

Authorities on Thursday imposed a state of emergency with overnight curfews and arrested more than 900 people for looting.

The official APS Algerian news agency gave a list of reasons for the mounting unrest — crop failure, the collapse of oil prices, the global economic crisis and Algeria's energy population increase — from 10 million in 1954 to more than 23 million.

The unrest began about 10 days ago, when industrial workers staged strikes for higher wages. The government said it would not break with its austerity plan to raise wages, and youths began rampaging in Algiers and other cities.

The austerity plan is aimed at resolving an economic crisis made worse by the fall in the price of oil, the nation's main source of revenue. The plan, announced in January, aims to line up food prices with world markets and cut surplus workers in the state-owned industries that dominate the economy.

The unemployment rate is estimated at above 40 percent in the capital, and food prices have risen by as much as 40 percent since January.

Algerian radio reported Sunday that crowds of young people confronted tanks in violent outbreaks in the Kabyle mountain region east of Algiers — where about 2 million Berbers claim they are discriminated against for their non-Arabic language — as well as in towns in the southern desert. The radio did not report casualties.

The largest number of casualties were reported in the town of Kouba, on the southern fringes of Algiers, where the army fired into a crowd that ignored calls to disperse. Hospital sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said more than 60 people were killed. Witnesses who also demanded anonymity said soldiers fired with machine guns mounted on tanks and jeeps.

In Bachdjarah, in the eastern suburbs of Algiers, 30 people were reported killed, and in the western district of Bab-el-Oued, nine protesters reportedly died.

Hundreds of other demonstrators were injured in the Algiers area, hospital officials said. At the city's Mustapha Hospital, physicians said patients had to be moved out of some wards to make room for injured demonstrators.

Outside the Algiers area, the most serious incidents were reported in the western city of Oran, where about 20 people were reported killed, and in Annaba, an eastern industrial city where at least eight people died.

Witnesses said the army fired directly into a crowd in Ain Benyane, a seaside resort on the eastern fringes of Algiers, killing about 10 people and injuring at least as many.

both Latin American and U.S. papers in order to pick out articles of cultural, political and technological interest.

"This allows listeners to be aware of news that isn't easily accessible," Contreras said.

The remainder of the program is composed of various readings, announcements and music native to Latin America.

Janssen, who has traveled to every Latin American country between Mexico and Costa Rica, is enthusiastic about the show because she feels it plays a role on campus as a catalyst for interest in the area.

"We try to encourage involvement in upcoming cultural events on campus," she said. "And our show provides a cultural backdrop for all the news stories people see and hear about on TV."

"We are able to address a lot of issues on the air," Janssen continued. "The show is very participatory and representative of what's going on."

Contreras believes the show's target audience so far consists of UI students who are from Latin American countries originally and others who are simply eager to keep up on current issues.

"It's evident students want to learn more about this culture," he said.

"El Mundo Latino" will air this coming Sunday at 7 p.m. on KRUI. Future broadcasts will air on a bimonthly basis.

Communist leaders resign. In an unusually outspoken demand for democracy, the official Communist youth union also called for "direct and secret" elections to get leaders the people would support.

About 20,000 people attended a rally in Serbia's southern autonomous province of Kosovo, where the Serbian minority alleges harassment by the ethnic Albanian majority.

Police did not report any incidents at the rally in Titovo Mitrovica, 145 miles south of Belgrade.

At dozens of similar rallies in recent months, Serbs have railed against the ethnic Albanian Communist leaders in Kosovo.

But in an apparent effort to prevent ethnic violence in Kosovo, Albanian Halit Trnavec told the crowd that Serbs and Albanians had forged links through the centuries in Kosovo and should not allow these ties to be destroyed.

About 10,000 more people rallied in Subotica, a town on the border with Hungary in Serbia's other autonomous province, Vojvodina, Tanjug said.

The crowd denounced Montenegrin leaders for ordering police to use violence to break up Saturday's Titograd demonstration. They chanted "They are beating the boys to hide their deceit" and "Yugoslavia, wake up, don't let yourself be torn apart."

Serbs have been pushing for greater control over both autonomous provinces, backing the demand with street rallies drawing crowds of hundreds of thousands.

But the nationalist demands now increasingly are mixed with loud protests against economic hardship and calls for the ouster of leading Communists. Prices have risen with a government austerity program to combat inflation of 217 percent and a foreign debt of $21 billion.

Faced with mounting anti-government unrest, national Communist Party chief Stipe Suvar has promised a leadership shakeup at a key meeting of the party's Central Committee on Oct. 17.

On Saturday, premier Branko Mikulic announced $200 million worth of emergency imports and increased welfare payments in an apparent attempt to ease the hardships.

DAVID PATRICK STEARNS

PHILADELPHIA — Consider what The Wizard of Oz would be like if you replaced the tornado with a spaceship and the Munchkins with extraterrestrial beings performing painful experiments on a half-crazed Dorothy.

It's a resonant idea for the ultra-anxious 1980s, and one that has inspired a combustible collaboration among composer Philip Glass, playwright David Henry Hwang and designer Jerome Sirlin. The result is 1000 Airplanes on the Roof, here through Sunday at the American Music Theater Festival in the first leg of its 38-city tour.

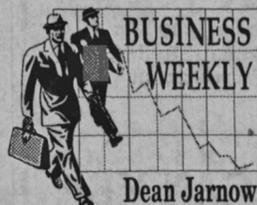

This provocative, infectious tour de force melds performance art with MTV in a 90-minute monologue-drama, performed by the sometimes-chatty and often-agonized Jodi Long (who alternates in the role with Patrick O'Connell). She recounts being kidnapped and tormented by space aliens, only to be returned to Earth, traumatized but with no memory of her experience.

This is performed amid Sirlin's slide projections, which create everything from a three-dimensional city skyline to more abstract shapes suggesting things beyond mortal comprehension. Glass' consistently inspired score (one of the best he's done in years) provides a similarly evocative aural atmosphere, eating away at the listener on a subliminal level.

Most remarkable is the script. Never content to just tell the story, Hwang (of M. Butterfly fame) takes on provocative ideas such as the line between enlightenment and madness, cosmic loneliness and spiritual communion.

Best of all, 1000 Airplanes never resorts to fashionably abstruse surrealism. Not only do all the theatrical elements fit like a jigsaw puzzle, but the ideas are expressed urgently, clearly and poetically.

Now more than ever we live in a global economy. This means every economic decision we make not only affects us but other economies as well and then us again. This also means that investment decisions have become increasingly more difficult.

Because we live in an environment of open trade with the world, our favorite blue-chip investment may not perform the same as it once did. For example, we can no longer invest in a blue-chip company such as General Motors and automatically anticipate the same positive gains. GM may sell more American-made cars in America, but what is their market share of all cars sold in the United States and abroad? And how will GM's share of the world market affect sales, profits and dividends?

Diversification is probably the most important rule in investing. One of the biggest mistakes investors often make is assembling a portfolio piecemeal.

Does this mean people should quit investing? Does this mean we should quit investing in U.S. stocks? No. It just means that investing takes more careful thought with more choices available. In fact, more private and institutional dollars are exposed to more markets than ever before. As a result, these markets move faster and more dramatically than before.

Many people don't have the time or even the desire to properly do their investment homework, but they still realize the importance of having their money somewhere other than the pillow. This has spurred the development of packaged products.

In the past, one might buy a few quality stocks, a bond issue here and there, and feel comfortable and properly diversified. Now investors can invest in funds that purchase stocks in a specific industry or in foreign markets. Bond trusts, real estate funds and limited partnerships of all types are available to the investor.

One can even invest in their favorite stock index, such as the Standard & Poors 500. This has been a positive development in the investment area. It allows people to have a better diversified, more manageable and potentially less risky portfolio.

Diversification is probably the most important rule in investing. One of the biggest mistakes investors often make is assembling a portfolio piecemeal. One may be a genius at spotting undervalued stocks or choosing top-performing funds, but a collection of great individual investments does not always provide the balance your portfolio needs. If you are loaded up on stocks, you may have to pass up a promising new issue of bonds or pass up a real estate investment opportunity.

In the upcoming weeks, this column will address further the issues of diversification and risk.

Hawks stomp struggling Badgers 31-6

By Brent Woods
 The Daily Iowan

After a futile first half, the Iowa Hawkeyes got their offense together and buried Wisconsin 31-6 Saturday in Kinnick Stadium.

Placekicker Jeff Skillett accounted for all of Iowa's scoring in the first half, hitting three field goals to put the Hawkeyes, 3-2-1, ahead 9-3 at the half.

Football

Iowa's defense put the clamps on the Badgers for the entire game, with the exception of Wisconsin's opening drive, which ended in a missed field goal.

"It looked like the guys grew up in the second half," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said. "They provided better blocking and better protection."

"We had a problem in the first half. We didn't move the ball with consistency. We made nearly every mistake we could make in the first half."

"Obviously, it was bad. I've never been that mad at Chuck (Hartlieb) before. But he got his head screwed on straight and just played a super second half."

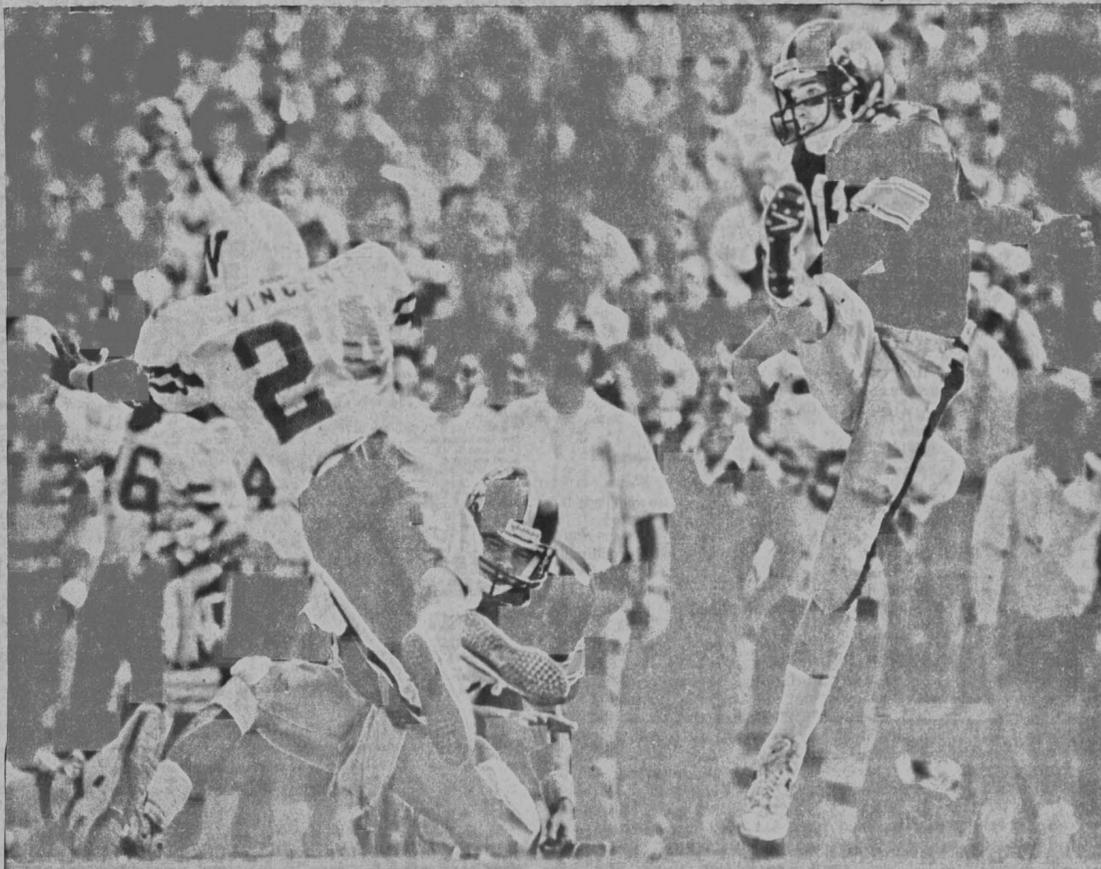

Wisconsin Coach Dan Morton, who saw his team drop to 0-5, said the Badgers hurt themselves.

"I feel we had our chances, but at times we were our own worst enemy," Morton said. "We're 0-5 right now, I've never been 0-5. But with six games left there is still a lot of good things that can happen."

The game marked the return of Marv Cook at tight end, who contributed seven catches for 99 yards in his comeback from an ankle sprain despite not having complete mobility.

"Marv Cook really played a heck of a game," Fry said. "I think mentally, it really helps Hartlieb, because he always looks for Cook in a critical situation. And thank goodness, because Marv has that ability to make the big play."

1st-time OTL player cashes in

A couple of weeks ago, after a long-time On The Line player finally cashed in on the brew, we said persistence was the most important factor involved in winning an OTL contest.

That bogus theory was blown completely out of the water this week, when first-time OTL player Todd Haeffner claimed the keg, which was generously donated by Vito's.

"It was the first time I've played," Haeffner said. "I've been meaning to play all year. I get a kick out of the column and read it every week."

No need to flatter us, Todd, you won the beer. We won't take it away.

You may be wondering how we decided the winner this week, because of the Northwestern-Minnesota tie. The last time there was a tie, we gave everyone the game. We got some flak for that, so this time we changed the policy, since it's our game and therefore our rules. (So, ha ha.)

The tie game was discounted as null, and the always-important tiebreaker became the 10th game. Then, the person with closest score on the tiebreaker was declared the winner.

There were 25 folks out there who had 10-0 ballots, but none were as close as Todd on the Carleton-Gustavus Adolphus thriller.

Gather yourselves for this next shocking note. At this point, we have no keg to offer this week. But we know you will still play because you love the competition.

If this possible lack of a keg discourages you from playing, we will be very disappointed. That's not how this nation was built, you know. The game is played for the thrill of the contest — the natural high of knowing that you have given your all to become a winner.

That's something you just can't buy, darn it.

The chance for victory certainly should not be tarnished by the lack of a tangible, or in this case drinkable, reward. So let's put the tacky materialism aside for this one week, and play for the purity of the game.

Besides, we may still get a keg anyway.

In the DI race, Sports Editor Brent Woods checked in at 10-0 to improve his record to 45-15 and give him a two-game lead over Mike "Magic" Triik, who went 9-1 this week.

Assistant Sports Editors Neil Lewis and Matt Zlatnik went 9-1 to move their records to 41-19.

AL playoffs settled; NL series undecided

Oakland uses pitching, power to complete sweep of Red Sox

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Athletics, showing off the pitching and power that made them baseball's winningest team, completed a four-game sweep in the American League playoffs by beating the Boston Red Sox 4-1 Sunday.

Jose Canseco, the major league leader in home runs, tied an AL playoff record with his third home run of the series and Dennis Eckersley, the leader in saves, set a major league playoff mark with his fourth save as he finished a four-hitter for Dave Stewart and Rick Honeycutt.

The Athletics returned to the World Series for the first time since 1974. Game 1 will be Saturday night in either New York or Los Angeles.

Oakland posted the first four-game sweep since 1976, when Cincinnati's Big Red Machine rolled over the New York Yankees in the World Series. The Athletics also got some long-due revenge against Boston, which swept Oakland out of the 1975 playoffs and ended its run of three consecutive championships.

The Red Sox, whose longest losing string during the regular season was four games, picked a bad time to duplicate that streak. The Athletics dominated Boston this year, going 13-3 and winning all eight in Oakland, giving them 15 victories over the Red Sox in the last 16 meetings in Oakland.

Canseco, the major league home run leader with 42, hit a solo shot in the first inning and tied George Brett's AL playoff record. Canseco has hit five home runs in 26 career at-bats against loser Bruce Hurst, including one in Game 1.

Stewart made the early lead stand up, allowing only Jim Rice's RBI grounder in the sixth. Stewart left after Ellis Burks' leadoff single in the eighth and Honeycutt immediately got Marty Barrett to ground into a double play. Eckersley pitched the ninth to get his fourth save in as many games.

Dwight Evans, the only player on either team who participated in Boston's 1975 playoff victory over Oakland, did not help the Red Sox. He struck out with the bases loaded to end the first inning — he was 6-for-12 with the bases loaded in the regular season — and fanned with the tying run on second base to end the sixth.

Oakland won an AL West-record 104 games, one season after Minnesota won the pennant with 85 victories. The Athletics' sweep marked for the first time since division play began in 1969 that two different AL West teams have gone to the World Series in successive years.

Los Angeles hangs on for 12th-inning victory

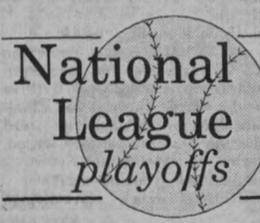

NEW YORK (AP) — Kirk Gibson homered with two outs in the 12th inning and Orel Hershiser, who twice failed to win games as a starter, got the final out as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the New York Mets 5-4 to even the National League playoffs at two games each.

Hershiser, called into a bases-loaded, two-out situation as the seventh Dodgers pitcher of the day, got Kevin McReynolds on a pop fly to center fielder John Shelby.

Alejandro Pena got the victory with three innings of hitless relief as the Dodgers played without reliever Jay Howell. Howell was suspended Sunday for using an illegal substance in his glove. Howell, who led the Dodgers with 21 saves, was ejected in the eighth inning of Game 3 on Saturday when pine tar was found on the heel of his glove.

Howell was suspended for three days by NL president Bart Giamatti and would be eligible for Game 7, if the series goes that far.

Game 5 of the best-of-seven series is scheduled Monday at 11:08 a.m.,

giving the teams less than 12 hours to recover.

Left-hander Sid Fernandez will pitch against rookie Tim Lincecum, winner of Game 2 at Los Angeles.

Mets starter Dwight Gooden carried a three-hit, 4-2 lead into the ninth inning. But Gooden, who had walked four, thrown two wild pitches and committed a balk, got into trouble again when he walked Shelby leading off the inning. Then Dodgers catcher Mike Sciosia homered into the right-field bullpen to tie it. It was the Dodgers' first home run in 47 innings, including the last 13 innings of the

Defense becomes Iowa strong point

By Michael Triik
 The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry has always had good defensive football teams. But none of them may have been more important than this season's unit.

Fry was skeptical about his defense before the season started, but after Iowa's 31-6 win over the Badgers in Kinnick Stadium Saturday, the defense is quickly being recognized as Fry's best weapon.

"Defensively, we didn't let them in the end zone and that's a great accomplishment," Fry said. "I'm really proud of our defense. We're keeping them out of the end zone."

Iowa has only allowed one touchdown in its last three games, and Saturday Iowa defenders made 12 stops in the Badger backfield and sent Wisconsin quarterback Tony Lowery to the hospital with a broken ankle.

"That's too bad," Iowa defensive end Joe Mott said. "You want to hit a guy hard, maybe ring his bell, but you don't want to hurt a guy. We're all in this together."

Mott dumped two Badgers for a loss Saturday pushing his total for the year to 13 tackles for a loss, just seven short of Iowa's single-season record of 20 set by Andre Tippett in 1980.

"I'd love to get it (the record). You can't lie about that," Mott said. "That'd be great. I'd love to have my name in the record books somewhere."

The reason for Fry's early skepticism was inexperience at both tackles and in the defensive backfield. But new faces are emerging in both areas for Iowa.

Esiason, Bengals move record to 6-0

CINCINNATI (AP) — Boomer Esiason's three first-half touchdown passes kept the Cincinnati Bengals as the NFL's only unbeaten team Sunday, while five more quarterbacks were sidelined with injuries.

The Bengals are 6-0, matching the best start in the team's history.

Esiason, the league's top-rated passer, burned the New York Jets, 3-2-1, with touchdown pass plays of 60 and eight yards to Eddie Brown and 38 yards to Tim McGee to help the Bengals overcome a safety and fumbles that led to an early 9-0 lead by the Jets.

"They just kept coming and kept coming and kept coming," Jets defensive end Marty Lyons said. "They caught us in some bad defenses and hit us where our pursuit wasn't. And Boomer's got the hot hand."

Purtzer wins Southwest in playoff

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — Tom Purtzer parred the first hole of a bizarre sudden-death playoff with Mark Brooks on Sunday to win the farwell $400,000 Gatlin Brothers Southwest Golf Classic.

Brooks, 27, who forced the playoff with a dramatic eagle on the 72nd hole, three-putted for a bogey on the playoff par-4 15th hole. Purtzer two-putted for his winning par.

Purtzer, 36, collecting his third PGA title since joining the tour in 1975, came from three shots back with an 8-under-par 64 on the last round to post a 72-hole total of 269.

That was a whopping 19 under par for four trips around the 7,166-yard, par-72 Fairway Oaks course and propelled him to what appeared to be certain victory.

But Brooks, 27, the leader all the way, stunned everyone by rolling in a 55-foot putt for an eagle to force the playoff. His first putt from 45 feet at the playoff hole scooted five feet past the cup and he missed it coming back.

Blackhawks remain winless

CHICAGO (AP) — Gary Leeman scored two goals and added three assists Sunday night to lift the Toronto Maple Leafs to an 8-4 NHL triumph over the winless Chicago Blackhawks.

Vincent Damphousse also had two goals for Toronto, including the team's third power-play score midway through the final period.

Leeman set up Toronto's second goal to start a five-goal barrage in the second period. Chicago defenseman Marc Bergevin was unable to clear the puck at the Blackhawks' blue line, and Leeman knocked it away to Mark Osborne who nailed a five-footer at 1:32.

Midway through the second period rookie Derek Laxdal put in a 25-footer and Tom Fergus made it 4-0 at 12:48 off a feed from Leeman before Steve Thomas got the first of his two goals during a Chicago power play.

downs in the final five minutes of the second quarter for a 17-3 halftime lead. Fullwood finished with a career-high 118 yards on 14 carries.

Bears 24, Lions 7

PONTIAC, Mich. — Jim McMahon completed eight of 11 passes for 78 yards, including an 11-yard touchdown to Dennis McKinnon, before leaving the game with a slight concussion as Chicago defeated Detroit in Pontiac, Mich.

The Bears, 5-1, remained in first place in the NFC Central Division, while the Lions, 1-5, lost quarterback Chuck Long with a sprained knee.

Bills 34, Colts 23

BUFFALO, N.Y. — Jim Kelly's three touchdown passes, including two to Andre Reed, helped the Bills, 5-1, rebound from a 17-point deficit to defeat Indianapolis, 1-5.

Oilers 7, Chiefs 6

HOUSTON — Backup quarterback Brent Pease threw three early pass interceptions, but ran four yards for a touchdown and Toni Zendejas kicked the extra point in the third quarter to give Houston, 4-2, the victory over Kansas City, 1-4-1.

Rams 33, Falcons 0

ATLANTA, Ga. — Jim Everett passed for 234 yards and three touchdowns and Greg Bell ran for 155 yards and scored once for Los Angeles.

The Rams, 5-1, scored on five of six first-half possessions, failing only when Everett had a pass intercepted at the goal line. Kevin Greene led a swarming defense that recorded nine sacks, three by Greene.

Seahawks 16, Browns 10

CLEVELAND — Curt Warner ran for 96 yards and one touchdown and Norm Johnson kicked three field goals for Seattle, 4-2. Cleveland lost Mike Pagel, its third starting quarterback this season, with a separated shoulder.

Redskins 35, Cowboys 17

IRVING, Texas — Mark Rypien

threw three touchdown passes and ran for another to rally Washington over Dallas. Kelvin Bryant caught two scoring passes, ran for a touchdown and rushed for 118 yards as the defending Super Bowl champions evened their record at 3-3. Dallas is 2-4.

Vikings 14, Buccaneers 13

MINNEAPOLIS — Anthony Carter caught seven passes for 82 yards, scored one touchdown and set up another as Minnesota, 4-2, rallied to edge underdog Tampa Bay, 2-4.

Carter's diving 11-yard reception preceded Allen Rice's 1-yard scoring run with 2:49 left in the third quarter, putting the Vikings ahead 14-10.

Saints 23, Chargers 17

SAN DIEGO — Two touchdown passes by Bobby Hebert and three field goals by Morten Andersen gave New Orleans, 5-1, its victory over San Diego, 2-4. The Saints haven't lost since dropping the season-opener against San Francisco.

Broncos 16, 49ers 13 OT

SAN FRANCISCO — A 22-yard field goal by Rich Karlis, set up by cornerback Steve Wilson's interception, gave Denver, 3-3, an overtime victory over San Francisco, 4-2.

Cardinals 31, Steelers 14

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Neil Lomax threw for 291 yards and three touchdowns as Phoenix, 4-2, defeated Pittsburgh for the first time in 19 years.

A 1-yard plunge by rookie Tony Jordan and Lomax's 3-yard touchdown pass to J.T. Smith put the Cardinals ahead 24-7 at halftime.

Dolphins 24, Raiders 14

LOS ANGELES — Liffort Hobley returned a fumble 19 yards for a touchdown, Miami's second score in an 11-second span of the second quarter, and the Dolphins, 3-3, went on to defeat error-prone Los Angeles.

The Raiders, 2-4, had five turnovers that led to 17 Miami points.

hamstring strain, led the Dodgers with 25 homers but hadn't homered since Sept. 11.

Tim Learsy, a 17-game winner for the Dodgers, attempted to close out the game in the bottom of the 12th. But Mackey Sasser and pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli leading off the inning. Gregg Jefferies, after failing to get down a sacrifice bunt,

Orosco walked Keith Hernandez on a 3-2 count to load the bases, then got Darryl Strawberry on a popout to second.

That brought on Hershler for only his second relief appearance this season. The 23-game winner earned a save May 10 at Chicago in a 14-inning, 6-5 victory. The loss broke a streak of three consecutive postseason extra inning victories for the Mets, who have played the four longest playoff games in NL history.

Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds hit consecutive home runs off John Tudor in the fourth inning to give New York a 3-2 lead.

regular season. The Mets rallied for victories in Games 1 and 3, but this time it was the Dodgers' turn.

the Iowa effort. "They're tough," Crawford said. "They pursue the ball very quickly; they make good open field tackles. Overall they are good. They don't compare with Michigan. I think Michigan is a little quicker but they both are good. They wouldn't be winning if they weren't good."

During the summer, Iowa was touted as a powerful offensive machine. But halfway through the 1988 campaign it looks as though the defense is going to be Iowa's strength in the Big Ten race.

"We have a job to do," Mott said. "They (the Iowa offense) are not putting as many points on the board but they are putting points on the board. The defense, right now, is gelling. We have to take the attitude that they're giving us points and we have to withstand the opposing offense. We can bend but we can't break."

"There is an old saying that offense wins games and defense wins championships. We are going to just keep playing our butts off and hopefully we can hold down the opposing offense."

297 yards. But the new faces on the offensive line may have been more important.

Redshirt freshmen Rob Baxley at right tackle and Dave Turner at right guard, who Fry said both started the year fourth team, drew their first starts because of injuries.

"They did a fine job," Fry said. Veteran center Bill Anderson returned to the lineup, which forced Greg Divis back to a guard spot.

The defensive lineup was also shuffled. Strong saftey Mark Stoops missed the game because of the sudden death of his father, so Brian Wise filled in. When he went out late in the game, Phil Bradley, a walk-on who wasn't even listed in the game program, filled in at strong safety.

Hartlieb said Cook's return was indeed a confidence builder. "I can't explain the feeling just to have him out there," Hartlieb said. "It's been tough to find that confidence and that groove. But somehow, I walked out in the second half and really felt good about myself."

Iowa defensive end Joe Mott continued his assault on the Iowa tackles-for-loss record held by former Iowa all-American Andre Tippett. Mott added two more to bring his total for the year to 13; Tippett's mark is 20.

Mott said Iowa's defensive showings have been a product of confidence.

"It's a matter of confidence in ourselves and confidence that the coaches have in us," Mott said. "They're letting the ends get a little bit more wild."

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Mike Gillette scored on a fake punt and kicked a 30-yard field goal Saturday to lift No. 17 Michigan to a 17-3 Big Ten football victory over Michigan State.

The Michigan defense registered five sacks and one interception in improving to 3-2 overall and 2-0 in the league. The Spartans, the defending conference and Rose Bowl champions, fell to 0-4-1 and Michigan State.

Michigan leading 10-3 in the third quarter in a fourth-and-4 situation, the Spartans' 40-yard line. Michigan's all-state quarterback, an all-state quarterback at the school and the catcher on Michigan's baseball team, took a snap and ran left, bowling over Tom Quinn.

Gillette raced down the sideline in front of his own bench and scored on a 27-yard run in the period. The Spartans were 27 seconds in the period. The Spartans were 27 seconds in the period.

touchdown and extra point made Gillette the school's career scoring leader with 247 points, eclipsing the mark of 244 by Anthony Carter.

Indiana 41, Ohio State 7
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Anthony Thompson scored four times in the first half, setting Indiana game, season and career scoring records in leading the Hoosiers to a 41-7 Big Ten Conference football victory over Ohio State Saturday.

Thompson rushed for 190 yards and also caught three passes for 25 yards. It was Indiana's first victory over the Buckeyes at Bloomington since 1904 and marked the first time the Hoosiers have beaten Ohio State in consecutive games since 1913. The margin was the biggest ever in the series for Indiana, which trails the Buckeyes 50-12-4.

Indiana went to 2-0 in the Big Ten and 4-0-1 for the season while Ohio State dropped to 0-2 and 2-3. The Buckeyes avoided a shutout on Jaymes Bryant's 8-yard touchdown run in the third quarter after the Hoosiers had built a 35-0 lead.

Illinois 20, Purdue 0
CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Illinois quarterback Jeff George threw a one-yard touchdown pass Saturday to Dan Donovan in the first quarter and the defense stymied Purdue as the Illini glided to a 20-0 victory in a Big Ten game.

Doug Higgins kicked a pair of second quarter field goals in a little over a minute — from 33 and 34 yards — and Keith Jones plunged for a one-yard touchdown in the third quarter to complete the Illini scoring.

Jones and Howard Griffith each topped the 100-yard rushing mark, as Illinois improved its season record to 3-2 and 2-0 in the conference.

Purdue's loss, before a Memorial Stadium crowd of 63,743, dropped the Boilermakers to 2-3 and 1-1 in the Big Ten.

Minnesota 28, Northwestern 28
MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota blocked a Northwestern field goal attempt with three seconds remaining in the game to salvage a 28-28 tie at the Metrodome.

The Gophers had chances to win in the final five minutes but penalties forced a turnover on downs and gave the Wildcats a final chance.

Lawkes secure weekend Big Ten wins

Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

When Beth Beglin left to captain the U.S. Olympic field hockey team in Sept. 3, the Iowa Hawkeyes were 1-0.

Upon returning over one month later, Iowa was 7-4 following losses to teams which were all ranked in the top five in the nation. The team then had to prepare to travel to Michigan State for matchups, on grass, with the Spartans and Ohio State, without the services of Iowa defensive ace Erin Walsh.

"Not much of a homecoming. However, the Hawkeyes improved their season mark to 9-4 with a 5-0 win over Michigan State on Friday and a 6-1 victory against Ohio State on Saturday in East Lansing, Mich.

"We had a fantastic defensive

effort this weekend," Beglin said. "The defense was able to stop the ball and distribute it. They did their job."

The defense didn't have to be terrific with Beglin's high-powered offense. The Hawkeyes' two-game, 11-goal effort wasn't unnoticed either.

"I think we're coming out of the scoring drought we've been in recently," Beglin said. "To come back and score that number of goals is very encouraging."

There were a number of highlights offensively for Iowa.

Erica Richards continued her scoring ways, as the junior from Pennsauken, N.J., scored three of the Hawkeyes' six goals in the Ohio State contest. She also added a goal during the Michigan State contest.

On the season, Richards is the Hawkeyes' as well as the Big Ten's leading scorer with 14 goals.

"That's the most relaxed I've seen Erica play," Beglin said. "I think that allows her to do more with the ball. Our right-side attack with her and Cheri Freddie has proved very effective."

Freddie had four assists on the weekend.

Freshman Lisa Sweeney got the most out of her playing time by producing two second-half goals in the Ohio State contest. The game was one of the first times she has seen action this year. Although Sweeney made a solid mark, she is realistic about her newfound success.

"I need to play more consistently," she said. "Earlier I felt that I was losing my ability to score, but once the first ball went into the cage I knew I could do it. It felt great."

The one question mark for the Hawkeyes is Walsh's situation. After being held out of this weekend's competition because of a strained muscle, Beglin is unsure if the junior will be back for the rematch with Northwestern this Friday in Evanston, Ill.

"Her situation is from day to day," she said. "We aren't going to have her try to play until midweek and see how it feels. I know she wants to play against Northwestern, but we'll just have to see how it goes."

If Tracey Donnelly had any doubts about playing college tennis, the freshman isn't showing them.

Donnelly won the first two dual meets of her college career earlier this season and then captured her first tournament championship Saturday at the Nebraska Invitational.

Donnelly beat Nebraska's Nancy Zegum in straight sets to capture the fourth-flight championship.

"I'm happy that I won, but I'm a little surprised," Donnelly said. "I was told that this was a very tough tournament and that it would be tough to win just one match. I'm pretty happy with the way I played. I wanted to be aggressive and I think that helped me."

Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said the win was good for Donnelly, but also said she doesn't want to move her up from the No. 4 position just yet.

"She looks pretty impressive out there," Schillig said. "She is gaining confidence and that is good for her right now. I don't want to do anything that would destroy that confidence."

Donnelly, who was known for her doubles play before coming to Iowa, said she has no problems playing at No. 4.

"I'm real happy with where I'm playing right now," Donnelly said. "My game is more suited for beating the type of people I'm playing right now."

Liz Canzoneri finished third for the Hawkeyes in the first-flight tournament. Canzoneri beat Giancrilla DiLaura of Wichita State in the third-place match. Tracey Peyton finished fourth in the second-flight competition while Madeleine Willard finished fourth in the third flight.

In doubles play Willard and Canzoneri teamed up for a second place finish in first-flight competition. Peyton and Donnelly placed seventh in the second flight and Evans and DeSimone finished eighth in the third flight.

NL suspends Howell for 3 days

NEW YORK (AP) — Jay Howell, the Los Angeles Dodgers' relief ace who pleaded guilty to using pine tar on his glove, was suspended for three days, National League president A. Bartlett Giamatti announced Sunday.

Howell was ejected in the eighth inning of Saturday's NL playoff game against the New York Mets for having the substance on his glove.

The suspension began Sunday and will continue through Tuesday. It means Howell would be available only for Wednesday's seventh and final game of the playoffs, if the series goes that long.

"While there must be no doubt as to my view of the seriousness of this infraction in the course of the League Championship Series, I have attempted to balance all the elements of the decision," Giamatti said in a press release.

"I do not want to see a championship ultimately decided for fans and teammates — if the LCS goes seven games — by the accident of one man's mistake. Therefore, Mr.

Howell would be eligible to pitch should there be a seventh game."

Howell was surprised by the suspension.

"One day's too much," he said. "Yesterday's one day and this is three more, so it's four days as far as I'm concerned. Three days in a playoff compared to 10 days in the season is much more serious. I wasn't found scuffing the ball or with sandpaper."

Howell said he was consulting with his agent on whether to appeal.

Ramel, Aguirre claim singles championships

By Julie Deardorff
The Daily Iowan

Two individual champions emerged from the Ball State Fall Tennis Invitational, but raised expectations have Iowa Coach Steve Houghton wanting more.

"It was no comparison to last year where we were basically outclassed," Houghton said. But now we've got everybody's respect, and we can do better. Five guys finished in third place or higher, but I think we could have had three or four individual champions."

Claes Ramel and Martin Aguirre claimed titles at No. 2 and No. 4 singles, respectively. Ramel beat Keith Butterfield of Purdue and Stefano Demarchi of Ball State before defeating Brian Kalbas of Notre Dame 4-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Aguirre beat Brian Wenger of Purdue, Wisconsin's Joey Deer and Jeff Vandenberg of Miami of Ohio in the championship 7-5, 7-5.

"Martin played impressively in his three-set matches," Houghton said. "He showed a lot of skill in handling the emotional ups and downs of the matches. He's also hitting the ball a lot harder."

At No. 1 singles, Mike Kiewiet advanced to the final round before losing to Hector Ortiz of Illinois, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3. Kiewiet injured his back, but beat Marc Schwartz of Wisconsin, last year's No. 3 singles champion to advance to the final match. "I played pretty poorly my second match so I tried to find other ways to win," Kiewiet said. "I had to play smarter to beat him (Schwartz)."

Dave Novak finished third at No. 5 singles by beating Scott Campbell of Ball State 6-4, 6-1 and Bryan Stokstad finished third at No. 6 singles with a 6-2, 6-1 win over Western Michigan's Jerry McKim. Lars Nordmark stumped Karl Krauter of Western Michigan 6-0, 6-1, for a fifth place finish at No. 4.

Iowa's usually strong doubles teams were Houghton's biggest disappointment of the tournament. The teams were rearranged because of back injuries to Paul Buckingham and Jay Maltby.

At No. 1 doubles, Ramel and Aguirre reached the finals before losing to Miami of Ohio's Vandenberg and Scott Mayo 6-3, 6-1.

The next team competition for the Hawkeyes is a four-team tournament at Madison, Wis. on Nov. 5. The doubles team of Ramel and Aguirre will be competing in the Volvo all-American tennis tournament on Oct. 20.

Hawks beat No. 12 Gophers

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

In its second home meet of the season, the Iowa women's cross country team narrowly defeated 12th-ranked Minnesota to win the Iowa Open this past Friday.

Iowa was led by a first-place finish by Jeanne Kruckeberg in 17 minutes, 39 seconds, followed closely by teammate Renee Doyle in 17:45.

"That was our plan," Kruckeberg said. "Renee and I were going to help each other and stick with (Minnesota's Eileen) Donaghy."

Donaghy, the Big Ten champion last year, finished third in 17:50.

"Doyle and Kruckeberg ran together to help one another," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "Working together was an effective strategy. The one-two finish is pleasing because when we have top runners who can lead the race, it inspires the rest of the team."

Women's Cross Country

Iowa finished first with 30 points, followed by Minnesota, 33; Ohio State, 72; and Northern Iowa, 100. Western Illinois and Iowa State also participated but did not have team scores.

Other top scorers for Iowa included Tricia Kiraly, 9th place, with a time of 18:16 and Jennifer Brower, 10th, in 18:17.

"Jeanne, again, came through well," Hassard said. "Kim Schneckloth (16th, 18:39) also ran well in her season debut. She didn't have an easy course to start her season."

Hassard was also pleased with improved contributions to the team from Doyle, Kiraly, Jennifer Moore and Beth Wilson. He said Kruckeberg and Wilson have contributed more to the team in every race this season.

In an attempt to give his runners a little extra support, Minnesota Coach Gary Wilson hung a sign that read "Minnesota Pride" and spraypainted "MP" on the course.

Ironically, Kruckeberg is from Claremont, Minn.

"He must have forgotten that Jeanne is from Minnesota," Hassard said. "It was pretty ironic."

The Hawkeyes will run at the Iowa State Invitational Oct. 16

Runner: Johnson knew he took drugs

TORONTO (AP)—Ben Johnson knowingly took banned steroids and those close to the runner were aware of it, says fellow Canadian Olympic sprinter Angella Issajenko.

Issajenko said Johnson — who was stripped of his Olympic gold medal in the 100 meters when he tested positive last month for a banned steroid — was also receiving steroids when he set a world sprint record in Rome last summer.

Issajenko claimed that Dr. George Mario Astaphan provided steroids and monitored the program with the knowledge of Charlie Francis, coach of the Optimist Track Club, which she and Johnson belong to.

"I just don't care any more," said Issajenko. "I'm fed up with all the bull... Ben takes steroids. I take steroids. Jamie (Astaphan) gives them to us and Charlie isn't a scientist, but he knows what's happening."

Her husband, Tony, later said that Issajenko denies saying that she and Johnson had both taken steroids.

Johnson, 26, has said he has never knowingly taken illegal drugs, and Astaphan has said he has never administered stanozolone — the banned steroid found in the runner's urine sample after his world record 100-meter run at Seoul.

Issajenko said she had first-hand knowledge that Johnson was receiving steroids from Astaphan from 1984 to 1986 but "Ben was going on his own to Jamie after that."

She also said Astaphan was administering steroids to Johnson when he set a 9.55-second world record in the 100-meter sprint at the world championships in Rome.

Hawkeyes place last at home

Even with several personal-best performances, the Iowa men's cross country team finished last in Friday's Iowa Invitational at Finkbine Golf Course, well behind Illinois, Iowa State and Northern Iowa.

Illinois won the team title with 39 points. Iowa State and Northern Iowa tied at 46 for second place, and Iowa finished with 101. Individual honors went to Dan Hostager of Northern Iowa with a time of 24 minutes, 43 seconds. Hostager also won Iowa's Oct. 7 home meet. Iowa's Rod Chambers, recording a personal best of 25:30, placed ninth for the Hawkeyes' highest finish. For most of the race Chambers ran with the pack of runners who finished near the top five, but after the three-mile mark of the five-mile course Chambers started to lose ground.

"I was satisfied with my time," he said, "but not my place."

Other finishers for Iowa were Tim Slingsby, 19th; Sean Corrigan, 22nd; L.J. Albrecht, 28th; and Jason Maxson, 29th.

Iowa splits Big Ten matches

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team stayed in second place in the Big Ten with a split this past weekend.

The Hawkeyes lost to Indiana 15-9, 11-15, 6-15, 12-15 Friday but returned Saturday to beat Ohio State 5-15, 15-10, 15-9, 15-5.

After the Hawkeyes won the first game against the Hoosiers in 40 minutes, they ran into trouble, said Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart.

"It went downhill after the first game," Stewart said. "We really couldn't get back into it. Mentally we came out of it and it's hard to get back into the match when you're out of it."

Volleyball

In the fourth game, the Hoosiers had a 14-12 lead when Stewart called an illegal substitution, which gave a point, the game and the match to Indiana.

"It was a crucial mistake on my part," Stewart said. "I had forgotten that I had substituted Jennifer Thompson already and just wasn't thinking. It is a horrible way to lose a match, but we all learn from our mistakes."

Saturday the Hawkeyes bounced back to beat Ohio State in four games.

In the first game Stewart said Iowa was "blown off the courts" by the Buckeyes' strong attack. Then the Hawkeyes adjusted and took the win.

Stewart was pleased with several of her players' performances, especially those of Ginger Lorentson and Joan Hosty.

"We played with more subs off the bench," Stewart said.

Miles Davis has got rhythm and techno-funk and blues

By Radoslav Lorkovic
Special to The Daily Iowan

Dressed to the teeth, Miles Davis casually wandered around the stage playing with his horn pointed to the sky or crouching in a fetal position playing to the floor. Occasionally muttering incoherent but thoroughly appropriate phrases into his horn mike between solos, one of century's greatest musical innovators demonstrated Friday evening to a diverse Hancher audience what he was up to.

When the band kicked in at maximum volume, some of the crowd — expecting an acoustic recital of his classic recordings of the '50s — seemed shocked when the thundering rhythm section eased into full throttle. Yet the savvy Miles Davis fans knew exactly what to expect from the performance — something they have never heard before. And with the exception of a few pop ballads and some material from his latest records "Tutu," and "Siesta," that is essentially what they got.

Miles' performance was superb — the master of the understatement was in top form. His new band, a highly synthesized funk-fusion band featuring two keyboard players, a guitarist and a bassist both playing bass guitar, gave appropriate meaning to the often misused word "fusion," a term defining a sound that Miles Davis invented. In fact, Miles fused his timeless trumpet tone with this decade's computerized techno-funk sounds and pulled it off brilliantly with this band, as he always has in the past.

Aside from holding up his end of the performance, Miles challenged the band to contribute their end. Challenge them he did indeed, giving them all the room in the world to play. The group for the most part rose to the challenge falling victim occasionally to excessive overplaying, focusing only on their virtuosity and forgetting the context within which they were playing in the first place.

Following Miles' entry onstage, blowing his lightest and coolest muted trumpet tone, the band immediately kicked into "Perfect Way," a cut from "Tutu." The band recreated the shimmering high-tech production of the record very well, setting a perfect counterpoint to Miles' style. Miles broke it down to a light groove, stopped, picked up a glass of water, took a drink, played a few smooth phrases and stood back to let his band play.

The lead bassist stepped out playing lead electric "bass" guitar — the sound of which was run through a myriad of effects resulting in fat, round tones with synthesized sounds built on top of it. McCreary pulled all these electronic signals together into a well-phrased, dynamic "guitar" solo.

The traditional electric bassist followed with a riveting bass solo. Rather than running up and down his bass, he remained within the mode of his instrument by staying in the pocket intensifying the groove rather than straying from it. This moment, however, challenged the limits of sensitivity to low frequencies of some of the more delicate ears in the audience.

Miles stepped in and lightened it up with a beautiful version of Michael Jackson's "Human Nature," opening doors to the possibilities of modern pop ballads with his muted horn. Saxophonist Kenny Garrett then took center stage demonstrating the most musical maturity in the group and the mastery of his instrument without excess, thereby drawing respect to himself as well as showing respect for former Miles Davis sidemen.

The band immediately followed with a James Brown groove which electrified Miles as well as the crowd. Miles hit stride, playing tough phrases, stopping occasionally to rap into his mike and then jumping right back in, timing it all perfectly. The title cut from "Tutu" followed showcasing its African-tinged rhythms and dramatically orchestrated synth arrangements providing the perfect backdrop for Miles' horn.

The strongest moment of the evening came in Miles' rendition of the Cyndi Lauper ballad "Time after Time." Anything you'd hope to hear from Miles' horn on ballads ranging back as far as "Kind of Blue" came out on this tune.

The band was performing beautifully up to this point until the two keyboard players stepped up front. A battle of the synthesizers ensued, resulting in pyrotechnic excess straying dangerously far from the powerful mood set by the previous number, making the performance seem more like a master class at this point. An extended drum solo didn't help matters much either. But when the percussionist took over, the sound was put right back into perspective, allowing Miles to close the show, appropriately, with a ballad featuring cool, muted horn that touched on Spanish themes that have appeared at different stages of Miles' recording career.

This performance, though not earth-shattering, clearly demonstrated that Miles is continuing down the road he has traveled for almost a half century now, keeping his finger on the pulse of the evolution of music and constantly discovering new talent. His protégés comprise a who's who of the cutting edge of the music of our era. Miles' style has actually changed very little over the years — the context he places it within has changed as radically as the years themselves.

Sugarcubes stomp and strut

By Ace Moore
Special to The Daily Iowan

What can you say about a quintet from Iceland?

The Sugarcubes are the newest (and only) sensation from that frozen island in the North Atlantic. The band consists of the beautiful Bjork doing vocals and keyboards; Bragi on bass; Einar Orn attempting vocals but doing great on trumpet; Siggi on drums; and Thor on guitar. The title of the band's debut album, "Life's Too Good" is representative of the band's newfound success and perhaps a realization that their success may be fleeting.

This isn't to say that the band doesn't have talent — they do. But it seems that the real reason behind them having the number one college album is that it's tres chic for the alternative crowd to like bands from obscure European countries that most of them can't find on a map.

There was no lyric sheet in the cassette, but, from what I could make out from listening to the tape, the lyrics are a cross between Jim Morrison and a poem from The New Yorker. The best songs on the album are the ones that Einar Orn allows Bjork to do the singing alone on. A perfect example of this is in the song "Blue Eyed Pop" where Bjork begins with a soft, echoing voice only to have this beautiful beginning ruined by Einar's whining, barely distinguishable mumbles. The best song on the album is the only one that cannot be mentioned here because of a certain F-word in the title — however the F-word is never mentioned, the lyrics are generally upbeat and the song has a honky-tonk feel to it.

"Birthday" and "Coldsweat" are the two other songs on the album that are good have had videos on MTV's "120 Minutes" and been getting airplay on KRUI. "Birthday" is a video as a concert clip, and "Coldsweat" is what is called a "concept video," which means a bunch of confusing and meaningless images are put on the screen while the song is playing.

In defense of Einar, it must be said that his trumpet playing, especially on "Birthday," is the most haunting and spectacular horn-playing I've ever heard on a non-jazz album. With the exception of Bjork's presence and Einar's trumpet, The Sugarcubes are an Icelandic Smitherens, which is pretty damn good.

If you don't own a copy of "Life's Too Good," listen to a friend's — if you like it, buy a copy. And with the jury still out as to whether The Sugarcubes are a new sensation or just a flash in the pan their next album will decide if life is too good.

Radio interview reveals spirit, inevitability of poet's work

By Jim Mulac
Special to The Daily Iowan

"If it's there, you can't deny it. It comes out."

These were the closing words of a recent radio interview with Iowa City poet Ken McCullough, and this inevitability is characteristic of his work. His new book, a major selection from nearly two decades, is "Travelling Light," published by Thunderer's Mouth Press in late 1987.

It contains many kinds of poetry, portraying many souls in addition to the poet's, and the range of issues and places — all of them from McCullough's real experience — is astonishing. There are poems about the Amish and about Vietnam veterans, about the nightlife in Taos and black angels on the Ganges.

Propelled by an adventurous spirit, yet always keen for that fable note, McCullough takes his reader into a Cheyenne sweat lodge, watches TV with him as Buckley interviews Borges or as David "Bubble Boy" winks goodbye or as he vaults a stone wall into a timeless sheep pen in the holy hills of St. Francis' Assisi.

To use his own words, McCullough is a writer who has "knocked around." His experiences and affinities range from semipro baseball to 1960s activism, union wage labor to producing and writing educational television. His body bears permanent damage from operating a jackhammer.

"Heh, heh. That's what you get." One would almost lose sight of the fact that McCullough is a superb craftsman, a major artist of lyric naturalism. A student of George Starbuck's Iowa Poetry Workshop in the 1960s, he earned an MFA in 1968 and then taught writing for five years at Montana State before spinning off into further adventures. A spiritual nephew of the Beats, McCullough never had a taste for the New York publishing scene or for literary academia. Being a skeptical Scotsman by nature, he's given his curiosity and heart almost openly to real folks outside the literary community, which has done his good work.

Though the subjects and moods of voice vary greatly, constant throughout this collection is a precision of detail and an urgency for candor and authenticity. McCullough has no use for the "fictioned" drama — those heightened, seemingly brilliant but artificial events and images — that often attracts readers but ultimately spoils much of the academic poetry of recent decades.

McCullough's imagination is keenly present in his work, but in most poems he makes discreet use of metaphor and simile. Rather than use images to stimulate "poetic" meanings, he prefers a clear, selective naturalist portrayal of experiences, places and people that in themselves stir the reader's imagination and continue to resonate meaning.

There is such variety in this book that any single sample is misleading of the whole. The second section from "Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Washington, D.C." Flutist James Galway may have thought Hancher Auditorium's stage was a bit chilly Sunday afternoon (the quipped at one point, "I don't believe they spend all this money on a concert hall, and you come all this way to freeze on a sunny day"), but his performance was as warm as it always is.

Galway began his program with Carl Reinecke's sonata, "Undine," which Galway described as "about this guy who falls in love with a fish." In response to the audience's laughter, he assured the crowded hall, "It's all clearly explained in the music." But this is of course not the case — the story, however improbable, is explained in the playing of the music, and it requires masterful talent to draw it from the notes.

This first piece set the tone for the remainder of the afternoon — Galway's playing was breathlessly delightful and Phillip Moll's piano accompaniment was unobtrusively superb. Before playing Martinu's "First Sonata," Galway griped kiddingly about the air conditioning ("Or whatever it is — it certainly isn't fresh air"), feeling sure that the temperature was the cause of the scattered coughing throughout the auditorium. He related a quote from Berlin Philharmonic conductor Herbert von Karajan — that the quieter the music, the louder the coughing (apparently Galway was unaware of the infamous emphysema conventions that gather at Hancher for so many of the quiet events).

The cold didn't affect the skill of his playing, however, since the second half of the program — especially a gorgeous rendition of Gabriel Fauré's "Fantaisie, Op. 79" and a finely felt version of Claude Debussy's "Le Petit Berger" — was as if anything more fluid and entertaining than the first. The final piece on the program, "Valse From Suite De Trois Morceaux" by Benjamin Godard, was a rousing display of technique and caused the audience to murmur in appreciation several times before its close.

A master showman, Galway played three guaranteed crowd-pleasers for his encores — a Man-

New Music concert has innovation, risk

By Bill Stuelke
The Daily Iowan

The lights dimmed, further and further, but no musicians came out on stage to perform.

Instead, two massive speakers dramatically lit from below casting ominous shadows on the sound shell gave the first performance. The audience at the Center for New Music's concert Saturday in Clapp Recital Hall was treated to many works utilizing live musicians, studio works on tape and/or both.

"(Speakers)" by UI graduate student Robert Paredes began the evening's fare. The piece was concerned with "processes and qualities of distance, transformation, dialogue, observation, interaction, expression and place," commented Paredes. The piece executed these concerns excellently. It combined the dimensions of sonic height, width and depth with the time frame that music lives in. It had many references, through different media, to what people would call conventional music. For example, daggers of sound mingled amongst throaty, distorted clarinet sounds, and together they traversed the textural scales. The music was often conversationlike as well — phrases commenting on phrases with ranges of emotion. "(Speakers)" was truly the most captivating piece of the evening — an exquisite work.

Another notable piece by a UI graduate student was Rico Berry's "Kafka on Parade." The piece was wonderfully surrealistic. It combined poetic imagery with sound imagery in a sensually and intellectually successful way. Phrases such as "I'm a giant oscillating cantaloupe" could be discerned among the array of sound. A particularly interesting and humorous section was one in which the phrase "edaraP no akfaK" (Kafka on Parade backwards) could be heard juxtaposed to the music of "Baby Face." In other sections, the use of repetition that unavoidably led to numbness was an insightful comment on society.

What seemed to be the favorite piece of the audience in general was Jacob Druckman's "Animus 1," written in 1966. Druckman is a composer who studied with Mennin at Juilliard, and Copland at Tanglewood. "Animus 1" is a theater piece written for trombone and tape. It is concerned with the relationship between tape and the live musician. Tape, man's own invention, out-competes the player in a musical "contest." The player leaves the stage in disgust while the tape takes over the performance. Soon, the tape cannot function well without the player, and he returns to finish the piece in a thin balance with the tape. The audience enjoyed the piece because of the theatrical entertainment quality. Unfortunately, the piece dwells too long on sounds and actions that ultimately have only one significant interpretation.

Overall, the Center for New Music's concert was one of high quality — both in composers and works. Hopefully more people will discover the satisfaction that can be gained from listening to this music. The next Center for New Music concert will be Sunday, December 11 at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall. A more immediate performance of new works can be heard at the New Compositions concert (not affiliated with the center) on Saturday, October 22 at 8 p.m. in Clapp Recital Hall.

When UI Libraries announced this fall's 10-percent decrease in operating hours, most complained to their friends about adjusting their studying habits. But some students decided to fight this policy change, arguing for what they believe is a student's right. Some wouldn't let the issue die, and they accepted the decision made by the administrators.

The Liberal Arts Student Association and the Graduate Student Society are two groups that

The addition of 278 students to the Iowa City school district has created a "small cushion" of $103,766 for the 1988-89 year, according to board member Connie Champion.

In total, the additional students created a $770,894 advancement for the budget that, $667,128 had already been spent. $334,504 was needed for the additional teachers needed by the pupil increase, which was tied up in carry-over commitments from last year, $43,000 used to pay utilities, $18,000 to materials and supplies, and about $145,000 for personnel and non-personnel adjustments due to previously unaccounted-for budget items.

The destination of the unaccounted portion of the budget was determined at the board's meeting tonight, Champion said.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Telecommunications regulators and free-speech advocates are preparing to challenge a new law that beginning next year will ban sexually explicit material from radio and television.

This blanket prohibition is part of a $14.9 billion telecommunications bill that funds the Communications Commission and other agencies, is destined to be passed, proponents say, to clean up the "baggage" from the airwaves.

Others in Congress say that a preoccupation with year politics snookered lawmakers into passing what they believe is clearly unconstitutional legislation.
