Groups petition for library hours

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

When the UI Libraries announced this fall a 10-percent decrease in operating hours, most students complained to their friends and adjusted their studying habits. But some students decided not to accept this policy change without fighting for what they believe to be a student's right. Some students wouldn't let the issue die, wouldn't accept the decision made by UI administrators.

The Liberal Arts Student Association and the Graduate History Society are two groups that represent these students.

Petitions are the plan of attack for the GHS. Already, over 500 signatures have been collected by the society, according to Kimberly James, president of the society.

"We've just made the petition available to our students," James said. "I don't feel that it's something that we've required students to do. Rather, we've just made it available around the department."

"We want to let the library administration know that the shortened hours of the library and reserve room are hampering our work and the work of our students," she said. "Hopefully, the petition will allow them to understand that we take the library seriously, and that it is important to our work as students and teachers."

The history teaching assistants began circulating the petition 1½ weeks ago, James said.

LASA members are presently debating which possibilities they will present to UI administrators that will offer immediate solutions to the manpower shortage.

One possibility favored by LASA President Dan Shanes is soliciting the help of student volunteers to make up for the working hours lost due to small library budgets.

"We want to get student volunteers to work for a minimal block of time on Saturday mornings and evenings," Shanes said. "If you take away the library's need for money to maintain the longer hours, namely by enlisting the services of volunteers, you take away the need for the library to close."

Shanes said he sees no reason why the administration would not agree to the proposal if student groups could enlist voluntary services.

"The administration has repeatedly stated that they wish the library could be opened. The cut in operating hours is a result they don't like but can see no other way around it," Shanes said. "But with volunteers manning the library to allow students to pursue educational excellence, they should have no problems with that at all."

The discontent with the new hours is widespread at the UI, Shanes said.

"Look at the response from the petition circulated in the history department," he said. "History is one of over 50 liberal arts departments, and over 500 history students signed the petition. Obviously, there is overwhelming support among liberal arts students for extending the hours."

Other student groups could also assist in organizing students to volunteer at the libraries, Shanes said.

"This is a very new LASA proposal that I hope will be followed by other students groups," Shanes said.

Shanes urged students upset by the shortened hours to focus their efforts effectively, rather than simply complaining to their peers.

"For all the students frustrated with this problem and others on campus, student government is their outlet for expressing their opinions and concerns," Shanes said.

I-80 accident

Johnson County rescue workers attempt to free Kao Sam from his overturned vehicle Monday afternoon on I-80 near the 1st Avenue exit. Sam's car collided with a semi truck that was attempting to merge when it pulled into the path of Sam's car. As a result of the collision Sam's car rolled and came to rest in the median. Sam and two passengers were taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Best Buy store probe continues despite apology

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

In spite of an apologetic advertising campaign launched by Best Buy Superstores, the company will remain under investigation by the Iowa Attorney General's Office for possible violations against the State Consumer Fraud Act.

Best Buy, an electronics retailer based in Bloomington, Minn., which has a store operating out of Iowa City, recently released an advertisement to the media containing printed modifications of its rain-check policy. A statement to customers apologizing for past inconveniences stemming from a lack of advertised merchandise was also included.

The rain-check policy has been revised, stating not only a promise for unavailable merchandise to arrive within 10 days but an offer to have a more expensive model of the product available at the same price if the merchandise is not delivered in time.

"It's a step in the right direction for Best Buy to try and rectify the situation, but they're really only dealing with availability of retail price and the rain check issue," said Bill Roach, spokesman for Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller. "We're also concerned with things the advertisement doesn't address, such as pricing policies and the bait-and-switch sales technique that is possibly being employed by the company."

Since the beginning of the investigation this past spring, the Attorney General's Office has been trying to determine if Best Buy ever sells anything at a regular price, providing a basis for promoting "sale" items.

"We're trying to determine if Best Buy's sales are really sales," said Roach. "If a store never sells its goods at a regular price, how can it have a sale?"

In addition to checking if Best Buy has been able to maintain adequate stocks of advertised merchandise, Roach said investigators have been following up on repeated consumer complaints in other areas. A primary complaint accuses Best Buy employees of using the bait-and-switch sales technique.

Roach described a bait-and-switch business approach as one in which customers are lured to a store by an advertised piece of merchandise only to discover the product is out of stock. A salesperson then directs prospective buyers to a similar item, which is usually a more expensive or less desired model of

Board will decide how to spend surplus funds

By Sara Langenberg
The Daily Iowan

The addition of 278 students to the Iowa City school district has given the Iowa City School Board a "very small cushion" of $103,766 to work with during the 1988-89 school year, according to board President Connie Champion.

In total, the additional students created a $770,894 budget advancement for the board. Of that, $667,128 had already been spent, $334,504 was needed to pay the additional teachers mandated by the pupil increase, $126,386 was tied up in carry-over commitments from last year, $43,315 was used to pay utilities, $18,000 went to materials and supplies for students and about $145,000 went for personnel and non-personnel adjustments due to previously unaccounted-for budget requirements.

The destination of the uncommitted portion of the budget will be determined at the board's meeting tonight, Champion said.

"We may put it to educational uses the district needs," Champion said. "We could increase materials and supplies for students or buy more snow-removal equipment. Or we may buy a van to transport materials from one school to another."

Earlier this year, the board approved a 4-percent reduction in per-pupil allocations for instructional materials and supplies as part of 1988-89 budget adjustments.

She added there are many possible uses for the uncommitted $103,776, including "leaving it alone" or setting it aside for emergencies.

The distribution of the additional students was primarily in the elementary schools and junior highs. Enrollment in elementary schools increased by 285 students in 1988 while senior high-school enrollment decreased by 104. In addition, 75 more students enrolled in junior high schools in 1988 than in 1987.

The additional teachers required by the new students have already been hired, Champion said. The district's average teacher-pupil ratio mandated the addition of about 14 new teachers in the district at an average cost of $24,065.

The $126,386 expense for carry-over commitments represents the difference between $696,103 of the district's total commitments in 1987-88 and the district's 1987-88 unspent balance of $569,717.

1987 Iowa crime rate remains stable as national figure rises

DES MOINES (AP) — State officials Monday said reported crime in Iowa declined by less than 1 percent last year.

Violent crime dipped about 2.5 percent last year and the state's overall violent crime rate remains at about 40 percent of the national average, officials said, in releasing preliminary figures on reported crimes.

The figures released by the Department of Public Safety showed roughly 117,000 reported crimes during 1987, compared to 118,336 in the previous year. That's just the opposite of a national trend which saw a small increase in crime last year.

Michael Coveyou, a spokesman for the agency, said the decline was too small to signal an overall trend.

"Quite frankly, we don't quite know exactly what's going on," Coveyou said. "There probably isn't any single factor. The mix is not very well understood."

The picture is muddled further because final figures won't be ready for another month or so, and those numbers are expected to be slightly higher than the preliminary statistics.

Nationally, reported crime rose 1.8 percent, reversing a five-year decline.

For violent crimes, there were about 6,500 reported during 1987, well under the 6,703 reported the previous year, Coveyou said.

"When we're compared to other states, we're in very good shape," he said. "Historically, we have been, and we continue to be."

Coveyou said there were 59 reported murders in the state in 1987, compared to 51 in 1986. Rapes, he said, took a significant decrease.

In 1986 there were 356 reported rapes, and the preliminary numbers for 1987 are about 320, he said.

"That is significant," he said. "We're talking about reported crimes. Crimes that are reported to law enforcement. Rape is very underreported."

Rape statistics are a difficult one for statisticians, because they can be altered not only by the incidence of the crime, but by changing attitudes which lead to more frequent reports being made.

Coveyou said Iowa has a strong record of developing rape crisis centers and other counseling programs that make it more likely that a rape will be reported.

He said statisticians prefer to look at the numbers in terms of how they fit in to long-range trends.

Crime rates increased in the late 1970s, dropped in the early 1980s and have been on a slow increase since, he said. The new numbers could show that rate is stabilizing, Coveyou said.

The peak came in 1980, when there were 137,763 reported crimes, he said.

"We've been going up somewhat in each of the last three years to a level about at the level we were at in 1982," he said. "In a sense, what we've done is we've kind of

Broadcasters oppose ban on sexually explicit material

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcasters and free-speech advocates are preparing to challenge in court a new law that beginning early next year will ban sexually explicit material from radio and television.

This blanket prohibition, passed as part of a $14.9 billion appropriations bill that funds the Federal Communications Commission and other agencies, is designed, as proponents say, to clean the "garbage" from the airwaves.

Others in Congress say, however, that a preoccupation with election-year politics snookered lawmakers into passing what they say is a clearly unconstitutional law.

"It was just a fear that someone might think they were for pornography or obscenity," said Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa. "It's an election-year fear, and most of them felt that way. If it had been a secret ballot, it wouldn't have gotten but 30 votes."

As it turned out, the House last month voted 214-210 to instruct House conferees, reconciling with senators differing versions of the appropriations measure, to accept the Senate-passed ban.

The measure was added to the appropriations bill, which was passed and signed by President Ronald Reagan earlier this month.

It directs the FCC to draft a new set of indecency rules by Jan. 31, 1989. Over-the-air broadcasts, but not cable programming, would be covered.

Representatives of broadcasting companies, First Amendment advocates and civil liberties defenders that earlier challenged the FCC's indecency rules met recently to discuss the ban, said Timothy B. Dyk, lead attorney in the previous case.

"It's safe to predict that some or all of the original group will challenge" the new law, he said.

In the earlier case, decided July 29 by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, the court "makes plain that banning indecent material during the entire 24-hour period is plainly unconstitutional," Dyk said.

"We're not talking about obscenity but material that has a lot of societal value — artistic, literary, even political merit — and because the definition is so broad it could be considered indecent," he said.

The Senate passed the ban in July after sponsor Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., alleged that the FCC was permitting broadcasters to air programs that included "disgusting bestiality, sodomy and child sex."

"Garbage is garbage no matter what the time of day or night may be," Helms said on the Senate floor. He offered no specifics.

The ban was aimed at the FCC's policy of allowing sexually explicit material to be aired between midnight and 6 a.m., when the agency said children were not likely to be in the audience.

The FCC had refrained from an around-the-clock ban because it said prior court rulings had held that the First Amendment protects indecent speech but allows it to be "channeled" to avoid children.

Discussion on feminism to be hosted by writer

Angelica Gorodischer, a writer from Argentina, will hold a discussion on feminism and women writers in Argentina during a brown bag lunch Wednesday. The discussion will take place at the Women's Resource and Action Center, 130 N. Madison St., from 12:10 p.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information on this and other brown bag lunches scheduled at the Women's Center, call 335-1486.

Lectures on El Salvador to be held this week

Mercedes Salgado, a representative of the people's movement in El Salvador, will speak at Van Allen, Lecture Room 1 at 7 p.m. Wednesday and will address a "U.S. Out of El Salvador" rally at 12:20 p.m. Thursday on the Pentacrest.

Salgado, 25, was a student in El Salvador in the late 1970s but fled her country because of persecution by the Salvadoran military. She will speak on death squad activity in El Salvador, the deterioration of the Christian Democratic Party and the present situation of El Salvadoran civilians.

Also scheduled to speak at the Pentacrest rally is Judy Kinch of the Committee in Solidarity with the Peoples of El Salvador, the group that is sponsoring Salgado's tour.

Absentee ballots available for election

Voters who will not be able to vote in person in the Nov. 8 General Election may obtain absentee ballots from the Johnson County Auditor's office, 913 S. Dubuque St.

People wishing to obtain an absentee ballot may do so in person in the auditor's office through the close of business on Nov. 7. Individuals can also request, in writing, that an absentee ballot be sent to them. Each request must include the name, address and signature of the requester and the name or date of the election for which a ballot is requested.

These ballots can be returned by mail but must be postmarked no later than Nov. 7 to be counted. Ballots may also be hand-delivered to the auditor's office no later than the close of the polls on election day.

Iowa law allows registered voters to vote absentee if they expect to be away from their precinct while the polls are open on election day or if they are prevented from going to the polls because of illness or physical disability.

For more information on absentee ballots, call the Johnson County Auditor's office at 356-6004.

Rotary Club taking scholarship applications

Applications are now being taken for the Iowa City Rotary Club's international scholarships, which will award $2,500 to two students who will study abroad during the 1989-90 academic year.

Eligibility for the award is limited to college or university students of junior standing or higher who graduated from a high school in Johnson County and whose parents reside in Johnson County. Recipients must be abroad for at least six months and are required to attend a college or university for at least three months. Arrangements for acceptance at the school abroad, tuition, transportation and housing are the responsibility of the recipient.

The scholarships are awarded on the basis of demonstrated academic competence and overall achievement. The awards will be made in December.

Applications may be obtained by writing or calling Robert Towner, 6 Fairview Knoll, Iowa City, Iowa 52240, 338-1636, or Gene Wandling, 2225 MacBride Drive, Iowa City, Iowa 52246, 351-1061. Completed applications are due by Nov. 7 and can be sent to one of the above addresses.

Police chief released on bond, awaits trial

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

West Liberty Police Chief Marcus Montagna Jr. is free on bond this week following sexual assault charges leveled against him Friday in Johnson County District Court.

The 31-year-old Montagna was charged with assault with intent to commit sexual abuse following a Wednesday morning incident in which he allegedly accosted a 19-year-old female on the 400 block of East Burlington Street, court documents said.

If convicted of the Class D felony, the West Liberty police chief faces up to five years in prison and a $7,500 fine.

The charge implicates Montagna in a 1:10 a.m. incident Wednesday in which he allegedly dragged a woman into the back of a U-Haul truck after threatening her life and molesting her.

A resident of Iowa-Illinois Manor, 505 E. Burlington St., was distracted from her studying by the victim's screams.

"I was sitting in front, and the glass door was open, and the TV was off, so it was real quiet," said

"She kept yelling, 'Please stop it, please leave me alone.' She was terrified. I mean absolutely terrified." — UI sophomore Rachel Scheid

UI sophomore Rachel Scheid. "Then I heard a girl screaming, 'Somebody help me. I'm being raped,'" Scheid said, adding she called police after hearing the screams.

"She kept yelling, 'Please stop it, please leave me alone,'" Scheid said. "She was terrified. I mean absolutely terrified."

The attack was foiled when a passer-by spooked the suspect, who then fled the scene, leaving the victim with leg and head wounds, according to court records.

Witnesses copied the license plate number of the attacker's vehicle as he drove off, leading police to identify Montagna as a suspect in the assault.

Police, armed with a warrant for Montagna's arrest, placed him in custody Friday. He appeared in court later that afternoon, where Sixth District Court Judge John Sladek restricted Montagna's travel to Iowa and ordered him not to contact the victim.

Sladek set a preliminary hearing in the case for Oct. 17, and Montagna remains free on $5,000 bail, according to court documents.

West Liberty officials will not comment on how the charges will affect Montagna's position with the force.

"We aren't commenting at all," said West Liberty police officer Chris Gerstbrein.

But news of the charges lodged against their police chief was pervasive among the small West Liberty community, which reports a population of 2,721.

"Naturally, it's a small community so everybody's going to talk about it," said a West Liberty resident who declined to be identified.

UI Hawkeye football player Travis David Watkins was charged with operating a vehicle while intoxicated Sunday, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Watkins, 20, of 141 Slater Residence Hall, was charged for allegedly operating a vehicle that Iowa City police observed to be weaving in its lane, according to court records.

Watkins allegedly submitted to and failed sobriety tests, according to court records.

Watkins, a junior wide receiver from Claremont, Calif., was released from custody on his own recognizance. He was instructed to contact the Mideast Council on Chemical Abuse within 10 days of his charge. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 27, according to court records.

Two Madison, Wis., men were charged with possession of a controlled substance Saturday, one for allegedly having marijuana and the other for allegedly having psilocybin mushrooms, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Gregory Lee Heinsch, 22, and Lawrence Henry Heinsch, 20, were charged after Iowa City police officers observed Gregory Heinsch walking towards them with what appeared to be a beer can inside his coat, and the two were given routine pat down searches, according to court records.

Gregory Heinsch was allegedly found to have a plastic sandwich bag in his pocket containing what tests indicated was marijuana. Lawrence Heinsch was allegedly found to have a tinfoil packet containing mushrooms that presumptive tests showed positive for psilocybin, according to court records.

Both defendants were released from custody after $500 bond plus a surcharge was posted for each man. A preliminary hearing for each case is set for Oct. 18, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was charged Sunday with operating a vehicle while intoxicated, carrying a weapon and leaving the scene of a personal injury accident after Iowa City police stopped his car in connection with a motor vehicle accident investigation, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Roger Mikel Price, 21, of 1307 E. College St., was the driver of a car that was identified as allegedly being involved in an accident after which Price allegedly left the scene, according to court records.

Court records state that when Price's vehicle was stopped, a police officer observed the handle of what appeared to be a hunting knife in the vehicle. The knife was removed and found to have a blade over five inches long, according to court records.

Price allegedly had the smell of alcohol on his breath when his vehicle was stopped. He allegedly failed to pass sobriety tests, according to court records.

Price was placed in the custody of the Sixth Judicial District Department of Corrections. He was instructed to contact the Mideast Council on Chemical Abuse within ten days of his charges. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 27, according to court records.

A UI student was acquitted of alleged burglary and alleged theft charges in a case involving a Gucci purse, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Wendy Sue Burke, of 818A Mayflower Residence Hall, was acquitted of allegedly stealing the purse, which was seized from her and admitted as an exhibit in the case trial. After an Oct. 5 hearing concerning the return of the seized property, it was ordered that the purse be returned to Burke, according to court records.

There were 4,514 motor thefts in 1986 and rough the preliminary figures for aggravated assault, 5,099 reported in 1986 over 5,100 in 1987.

A host of reasons are given for the state's crime rate, Covy said.

Rawlings cites obstacles to UI progress

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings stressed the need for members of the UI community to work together to remove obstacles that prevent the UI from reaching its true potential at the annual fall faculty convocation Monday night.

Rawlings, in his first annual address to the faculty, cited a lack of communication between faculty and administration, a lack of diversity on campus, increasing institutional isolation and isolation from the outside world as barriers to progress.

"I must tell you candidly that I don't see a wide-open horizon before us," Rawlings said.

"Instead, I see barricades at some important intersections, and they concern me very much. Before we charge ahead with our university-wide planning process, only to knock ourselves against a series of brick walls, I think we should look together at some of the most formidable obstacles we face."

One of the most threatening barriers to the UI's progress is a lack of involvement by UI faculty and staff outside of the university, he said. Universities must maintain some distance from society without allowing that distance to become an obstacle to exchange, Rawlings said.

"Here in Iowa, that means we must transcend the barrier that separates us from the people of the state," he said. "In the nine weeks that I have been at this university, I have been surprised to find how many of my colleagues have never visited other areas of Iowa outside of a small perimeter whose center is Old Capitol."

"I wonder how many faculty members think hard about their fellow Iowans who support the university and send their children here as students," he added.

Rawlings also stressed the need for improved relations between the faculty and the administration, pointing out that administrators are drawn from the ranks of the faculty.

"I don't see a wide-open horizon before us. Instead, I see barricades at some important intersections." — UI President Hunter Rawlings than reality. What matters to me is that this barrier exists and that it fosters a divisive mentality that damages us all."

UI Faculty Council President Peter Shane said Rawling's speech was an extension of attempts made to improve relations between faculty and administration.

"I think it's clear he is already making efforts in that regard — he's not just speaking toward it," Shane said. "When he took over as president, there was a pretty full in-box of things that had piled up during the year we didn't have a president. I think it's clear President Rawlings is addressing these issues as constructively as possible and is giving the faculty the feeling that their concerns will be addressed."

Shane added that by expanding the scope of his appeal for better relationships, Rawlings will recruit a broader base of support for the UI.

"President Rawlings is showing his concern for the faculty, staff, students and Iowans across the state in a way more energetic and more accessible than the university has been able to be in the past few years," he said. "If people believe that their input is valued, it will certainly affect their morale."

The ceremony, which was sponsored by the UI Faculty Senate, recognized about 20 UI faculty members who have received honors for their contributions to teaching, scholarship and service.

Student 'plastic' benefits scholarship

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

UI students and faculty members who want to add more plastic to their wallets should make a stop at the UI Student Senate Office.

The senate is distributing new plastic versions of the Student Discount Card that enable the bearer to receive discounts at any of 30 local businesses.

Merchants donated $300 each to become a sponsor of the Hawkeye Express Card, which is now available at the Student Government Office, Union Ground Floor.

UI students, faculty and staff can present the black and gray card to participating merchants to receive the offered discount at each site.

The discounts range from 10 percent to 15 percent off purchases and services to free soft drinks at local restaurants.

Student Senate Vice President Pepe Rojas-Cardona worked with the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce to double the number of participating merchants.

Senator Tom Kakert said the additional merchants and plastic format make the card more convenient.

"I think they're a lot better than the paper. They're a lot more durable, and they look more professional than in past years," he said.

The plastic cards cost about $4,000 to produce and raised about $6,000 for the UI Student Senate Scholarship Fund, according to UI Student Senate Treasurer Jennifer Fleck.

She said the scholarship fund is comprised of about $10,000 in non-state funds raised from the student discount card and sales of the Herd Book — the UI faculty, staff and student telephone directory.

Student Senate President Melinda Hess said the discount card helps finance the Student Senate Scholarship Fund, an aspect that is stressed when soliciting support for the program from local businesses.

"I think that it benefits all the people involved," she said. "It gives the businesses a chance to attract more students, and students benefit from the discounts. It also helps out the scholarship fund."

The UI Self-Help Scholarships distribute $250 a semester to 15 students who work 20 hours a week and maintain a minimum grade-point average.

Several businesses did not get involved in the discount program directly but supported the scholarships by donating to the Hawkeye Express Card.

The first discount card was introduced by the 1985-86 senate.

Oscar Mayer closes slaughterhouse

DES MOINES (AP) — There's virtually no hope of convincing Oscar Mayer Co. officials to keep open a Perry, Iowa, meat-packing plant and officials will meet today to focus on efforts to find another buyer, Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday.

"They intend to close it," said Branstad. "They intend to get out of that line of business."

Branstad said he will travel to Perry today to talk with local officials, and the main focus of the meeting will be to explore the potential of convincing another company to purchase the facility and to discuss displaced-worker programs.

The governor is scheduled to convene an "emergency team" meeting at 3 p.m.

Branstad said he spoke with the company's president and "he was pretty clear" that the factory will be closed, and there's no chance of reversing that decision.

The Perry factory was a livestock slaughtering operation, and the meat packers are moving more into processing meat cuts rather than slaughter, the governor said. Oscar Mayer has closed slaughterhouses in other states.

Branstad rejected suggestions that the Perry facility was hampered by competition from newer, more efficient plants that have been opened in the state, in some cases with state assistance through lottery dollars.

The culprit, Branstad said, is simply inevitable change in the meat-packing industry.

"Some of these changes in the industry are going to take place, and we need to make the adjustment and be as competitive as we can," Branstad said. "It's not an easy situation for a community. It's a tough situation that none of us like to face."

Plants that have been opened with state assistance are in far-flung corners of the state, Branstad said, and don't compete with the Perry facility.

Branstad noted the plant closing notice given by the company is four months, giving officials time to seek a buyer for the factory.

He said the facility is "reasonably modern" and could conceivably be used by another meat packer.

stabilized at a level that's comparable to the 1982 level."

Other crimes covered in the report included motor vehicle theft, which showed a 5-percent decline, and aggravated assault, which was up less than 1 percent.

There were 4,514 motor vehicle thefts in 1986 and roughly 4,300 in the preliminary figures for 1987. For aggravated assault, there were 5,099 reported in 1986 and just over 5,100 in 1987.

A host of reasons are given for the state's crime rate, Coveyou noted.

"We have not had consistent patterns," he said. "You can find evidence either way."

A favorite explanation is the state's economy, but another demographic change may also be responsible, he said.

"That's the aging of the population," he said. "We know that males between the ages of 15 and 24 are relatively more prone to commit crimes than are people in other age groups."

"That's becoming a smaller and smaller percentage of the overall population."

That theory, Coveyou said, holds that the state is increasingly composed of older Iowans who are less likely statistically to commit crimes. Still, he said, that's far from a certain answer.

"The evidence is somewhat mixed," he said. "You can find evidence either way."

The crime statistics included reported instances of murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and motor vehicle theft.

serious artistic, literary, political or scientific value — is banned from the airwaves all the time.

The appeals court decision — handed down two days after the Senate passed its ban — cited a 1978 Supreme Court ruling in reaffirming that indecent speech "is protected by the First Amendment." It also upheld the FCC's definition of indecency as material that "depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

The court, however, also directed the FCC to review its midnight-to-6 a.m. policy, saying the commission had failed to make a case for those specific hours. This window was more restrictive than its previous safe harbor, which began at 10 p.m.

"It's law, and we have to enforce it," said FCC Commissioner James H. Quello. "I'm for everything we can do to curb obscenity, but this might be going farther than the Constitution intended. But we have to enforce it."

The difference between projected and actual savings in personnel budget adjustments was steep, causing $87,423 of the advanced funding to be spent.

Additional budget requirements facing the district were a $29,900 unanticipated increase in Blue Cross/Blue Shield payments, $6,315 for premium adjustments in 1987 and $7,100 for gas and electricity expenses over the summer.

Champion said although the advanced funding creates a cushion for the board at this time, it is a "very small cushion." She did not think it would affect the board's decision to appeal to taxpayers for an enrichment tax levy.

"I would think that even with the advanced funding used to cover the deficit we might still find that we don't have enough money," said Champion.

Best Buy

the original. Roach said he expects the investigation to continue for at least a few more weeks.

The Missouri Attorney General's Office is currently studying the situation as well, and investigations are continuing to be conducted through the Better Business Bureaus of Minneapolis, St. Louis and Des Moines.

Ron Graham, president of the Minneapolis BBB, considers Best Buy's ad campaign to be a plus for the electronic retailer's image.

"Modifying store policies had been brought up in several discussions we have held with Best Buy representatives as the proper way to respond to the findings of the BBB here, and now the changes have been implemented," Graham said. "A pattern of out-of-stock problems had formed within the store, and the realization was made that customers could not be allowed to bear the brunt of this."

Graham attributes the continuation of Best Buy's business problems over the past several years to the sudden growth of the company.

Brad Anderson, vice president of sales and marketing at Best Buy's central headquarters in Bloomington, Minn., said efforts are being made to iron out distribution problems within the network of Best Buy stores by implementing a new system of inventory.

"Initially, each individual store would have their management team place orders to the central production center in Bloomington," Anderson said. The central office now determines orders separately and on the basis of sales rate, he said.

Even though Best Buy is attempting to remedy several of their problems, Stacy Arnold, a trade practice consultant with the St. Louis BBB, said the company has yet to address its situation completely.

"We are still receiving complaints about the way the store does business and are following up on them," she said.

Roach agreed with Arnold and stressed that the advertising campaign would not alter the Attorney General's approach in evaluating Best Buy.

"The advertisements are not a direct consequence of our investigation, so we can't take them into consideration," Roach said. "We have to deal with the logistics of things, take a hard look at what has happened in the past and observe what continues in the future before we draw our final conclusions."

Trick play

Last week Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry tore into the media for their negative reporting following the Hawkeyes' 10-10 tie against Michigan State. He said the press had no right to criticize his boys. He said it was un-American. Every fourth-grade child knows what a crock that is. The right to say what one thinks — good or bad — is as American as the First Amendment. Fry, who used to teach history, should know this.

What made Fry's tirade even more senseless was that it lacked a motive. Few people get a bigger wet kiss from the media and public than Fry. Mother Teresa gets worse press.

If he really believed what he said, maybe he needs to loosen his headset or take off his sunglasses. But this probably isn't the case. His outburst was a red herring to draw the fire away from a half-season of frustration.

It was a trick play, and it worked. Suddenly, the story was not what had happened to the 2-2-1 Hawkeyes, whom Sport magazine had picked in their pre-season poll to be national champions, it was that the media were unfair.

Fry was particularly upset, it was reported the next day by Buck Turnbull of The Des Moines Register, over a game story by Steve Carlson in Monday's Press-Citizen and a column by Dan Millea, which appeared Tuesday in The Daily Iowan.

Turnbull, in fact, shamelessly echoed the coach's charges without questioning if they were indeed valid. And they weren't.

Millea's piece was clearly approving of Fry. This was evident to anyone who read the column. Why then wasn't it clear to Turnbull? When asked about Millea's column, he said he hadn't really read it but had skimmed it. One wonders if Turnbull goes to the games he reports on or if he bases his stories on what he hears driving by the stadium with his car window open.

Marc Hansen, the Register's sports columnist, followed up with a column in which he wrote that Millea had said some fans wanted Fry to resign because the coach had become boring. That wasn't what Millea said. Where did Hansen get his information? While sitting under the hairdryer.

Maybe some members of the media have been irresponsible but not for their views about Fry and his team. By reacting as he did, Fry became the object of his own scorn. The media — and the fans — deserve better.

Fry goes before the media for his weekly conference today. Because Iowa won Saturday, Fry will tacitly forgive the media for the sins that he created out of his own frustration. In Hayden Fry's America, the media's freedom of expression ends where questioning begins. There's a difference between a free press and self-serving public relations. Either Fry doesn't know the difference and he should, or he does and prefers to ignore it.

Take the deal

Thanks to a rather fortuitous string of events in the Pacific, the United States now has the opportunity to kill about four birds with one stone.

Somewhat surprisingly, the opportunity arises out of a problem, specifically, the issue of compensation for the two sprawling military bases the United States maintains in the Philippines — Subic Bay Naval Base and Clark Air Field. Seeking to recoup some of the money it did not receive for the bases under 48 years of American colony rule, the Philippines is now demanding an annual rent of $1.2 billion. The United States is offering $500 million. Simply put, negotiations are deadlocked.

At the height of the impasse, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has offered a dramatic proposal: If the United States withdraws from its two Philippine installations, the Soviets will pull out of the air and naval base at Camranh Bay in Vietnam.

Putting aside the standard notion that any Soviet proposal must necessarily be to the detriment of the United States (and all other God-fearing, freedom-loving, pledge-reciting inhabitants of this planet), consider the possibilities such a joint withdrawal might hold.

First, closing the bases would settle the compensation issue: no bases, no rent payment. Second, for the United States it would mean a savings of more than $1 billion, plus further savings in operational and maintenance costs. Presumably, the U.S. forces would be relocated, perhaps to Guam, but the move could be the perfect opportunity to reduce the size of overseas troop commitments. Third, abandonment of Subic Bay and Clark — symbols of American colonial domination — would remove a longstanding irritation in U.S.-Philippine relations. Fourth, removal of both superpowers' navies and air forces would reduce tension in Pacific and promote regional autonomy.

As negotiators continue to discuss the fate of the U.S. installations, they should be reminded that often the best solutions are quite simple. In this case, the United States should simply accept the Soviet proposal and complete a joint withdrawal.

Be a better lover, wear a condom

Supreme Court Justice Blackmun and avid court watchers are predicting that within the next several years, the activist Reagan court will reverse Wade v. Roe, the 1973 case that upheld women's right to a safe, legal abortion. A reversal tosses that decision back to our state legislators.

Poll after poll has shown that the majority of Americans are pro-choice. However, we have seen the power of the hate-mongers to scare decision-makers into abandoning democracy. Remember "The Last Temptation of Christ" brouhaha? That was Sunday in the park compared to the blitzkrieg the self-appointed morality squad will unleash over abortion. To counter their jihad, men and women must be prepared to make their pro-choice sentiments known or face the return to the bad old days of illegal abortions.

Given the need for men and women to stand in solidarity to protect women against state-mandated pregnancy, a disturbing contradiction rears its ugly head. While men can be part of the solution, they are also part of the problem.

Asking "to abort or not to abort" directs the spotlight away from the underlying issue: birth control. No unwanted pregnancies, no abortions. The cultural stereotype seems to blame the woman for

Dianne Kaufman

"getting herself pregnant." It evokes a mythical land where virgin mothers and spontaneous pregnancies manifest on a daily basis. Rarely do we penetrate the veil of prejudice to ask where are the men?

My intention is not to put men on the defensive by shaking fingers laden with blame and shame. Rather, to pierce the fog that seems to obscure our view when the issue is our reproductive capacity and our responsibility to that function. Just to state the biologically obvious, a woman does not "get pregnant"; she is impregnated by a man. A joint effort is required. (This precludes crimes of rape and incest where consent between adults is not present.)

Our culture conspires to disassociate men from pregnancy in an incredibly complex and profound way that is harmful to them and to the women who carry the seeds of those unions. The effects on the women are obvious, but for the men they are more subtle. Lack of sexual accountability perpetuates a misguided never-never land where boys will be boys and responsibility is someone else's job. Sometimes I wonder what it is men and women are really doing when they copulate, given the bizarre headtrips that surround sexuality in 20th-century America. Pick the example of your choice.

It evokes a mythical land where virgin mothers and spontaneous pregnancies manifest on a daily basis. Rarely do we penetrate the veil of prejudice to ask where are the men?

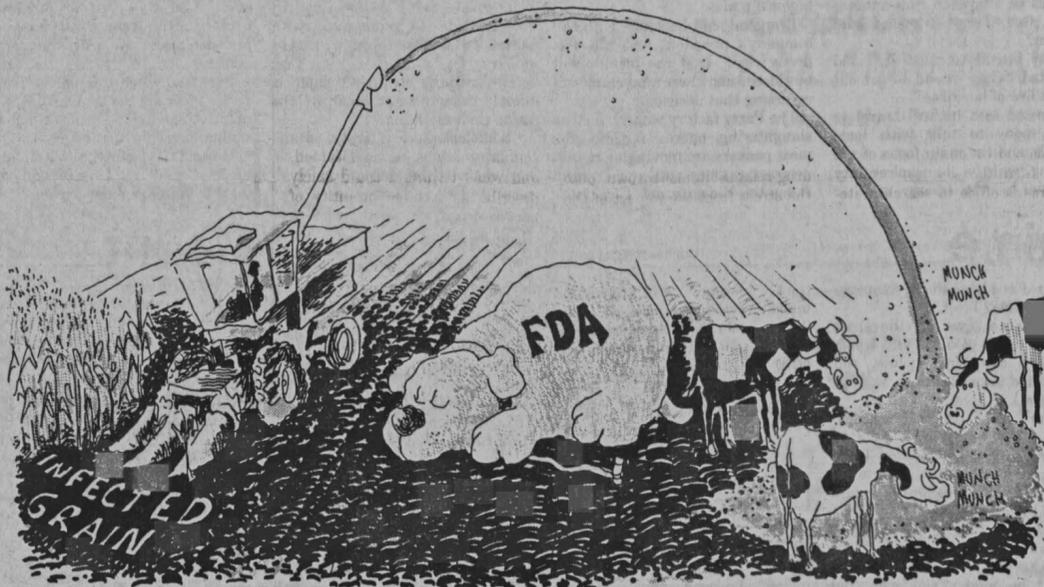

As a wise woman once said, "if men got pregnant we would have had safe, effective birth control methods years ago." As it is, contraceptives for women run the gamut of unreliable to dangerous. Condoms, however, are safe and nearly as reliable as any method especially when a spermicidal foam or jelly is used too. So why are men so reluctant to use them? Can we talk? The most common — so common it is suspect as a rote response — is the "it's like taking a shower with a raincoat on." I think we can all relate the specious thinking here that encourages a man to give his partner a higher priority than his health and well-being of his partner. Other possible condom-phobic inducing beliefs: women get pregnant, it's their problem (see above); fear of being vulnerable, (what will she think if I mention birth control? Personally I find men who think about birth control to be better lovers); fear of erection loss; fear of latex; loss of spontaneity...? I mean, really, what is your reason for not using a condom, and how does it stack up against an unwanted pregnancy?

It is time for men to claim the reality that they are co-creators of life. Patriarchy was founded on the significance of that biological fact. Maybe it would encourage consistent birth control use if each man asked himself before he ejaculated inside a woman whether he wants to be a father. When two people are thinking about contraception, the odds against an unwanted pregnancy are doubled. Be a better lover, use a condom.

JOE SHARPBACK
 THE DAILY IOWAN

The Daily Iowan/Joseph Sharpback

Black Sox touched a national nerve

The second pitch Ed Cicotte of the White Sox threw in the first game of the 1919 World Series hit Cincinnati's leadoff man. New York gamblers got the signal: The series was fixed. Today, in a political season that mocks the idea of progress, a season loud with lamentations about sleaze in Washington and sharp practices on Wall Street, it is well to revisit an era when America was really raw.

The era is accessible through the movie "Eight Men Out," based on Eliot Asinof's book of that title about the Black Sox scandal. There are two fine novels on that subject, Harry Stein's "Hoopla" and W.P. Kinsella's "Shoeless Joe," which is being made into a movie. But who, half a century from now, will write novels and make movies about Watergate? When scandal touched baseball in 1919, it touched a national nerve.

The Black Sox scandal involved two timeless themes of art: love and regret. In that instance, it was love of vocation and regret about losing it. The most poignant figure was "Shoeless Joe" Jackson, the illiterate natural who compiled the third-highest batting average in history and who was so reflexively great that even when throwing the series he could not stop himself from hitting .375 and setting a series record with 12 hits.

The scandal is a window in a dank basement of American history. In 1919, Americans were feeling morally admirable, if they did say so themselves, and they did. They had been on the winning side of the "war to end all wars." The fixed series occurred three months before the beginning of a misadventure in moralism, Prohibition.

But gambling was as American as the gold rush — the dream of quick riches — and when the government closed racetracks during the war, gamblers turned to baseball, which then was America's entertainment industry. Hotel lobbies where teams stayed teemed with gamblers. "Hippodroming" was the nineteenth-century word for throwing games, and in post-war America there was a new brazenness by gamblers.

On Sept. 10, 1920, various Wall Street brokerage houses received "flashes" on their news wires: Babe Ruth and some teammates had been injured in an accident en route to Cleveland. Quickly, the odds on that game changed, and the gamblers — the source of the lie — cleaned up.

The White Sox conspirators assumed they would get away with it because they assumed, almost certainly correct, that other major leaguers had gotten away with fixes. The team owners, frightened about the possible devaluation of their franchises, rushed out and bought some virtue in the person of a federal judge to serve as baseball's first commissioner.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, with his shock of white hair over craggy features and his mail-slot mouth, looked like Integrity Altered, just as Harding, elected in 1920, looked like a president. Landis was a tobacco-chewing bourbon drinker who would hand out stiff sentences to people who violated Prohibition. He had a knack for self-dramatizing publicity. He fined Standard Oil of Indiana $29,240,000 in a rebate case (the Supreme Court overturned him) and tried to extradite Kaiser Wilhelm on a murder charge because a Chicagoan died when a German submarine sunk the Lusitania.

Landis barred from baseball eight Sox players, including one who merely knew about the conspiracy but did not report it. It was rough justice. Nothing happened to the gamblers, and some of the players were guilty primarily of stupidity and succumbing to peer pressure. Most of them were cheated out of most of the promised money and only one player made much ($35,000). But roughness can make justice effective. Baseball's gambling problems were cured.

The 1920s, the dawn of broadcasting and hence of hoopla, would wash away memories of the scandal. Those years were the Golden Age of American sport — Babe Ruth, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Red Grange, Knute Rockney, Bobby Jones, Bill Tilden, Man o' War.

From Wall Street to Main Street, and including both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue, America back then — when a U.S. senator appeared in advertisements endorsing Lucky Strike cigarettes — was immeasurably less scrupulous about standards of behavior than it is today. Baseball put its house in order because of the Black Sox. Ten years later the crash ushered in a new age of regulation of financial institutions. And various scandals, before and after Watergate, have produced regulations (and some over-regulations) in rules about comportment in the corridors of power.

Civilization advances by starts, often stimulated by shocked sensibilities. As another baseball season comes to a climax, it is well to consider how far we have come in the 68 years since Chicago school children began their sandlot games with the cry "Play ball!"

Iowa City police officer Ed Schultz inventories a load of pseudo-drugs Monday that was impounded last week after they were discovered in the back of a stolen truck on Iowa Avenue.

Vehicle harbors drug cache

The Daily Iowan
Iowa City detectives found drugs and drug-related items in a truck Monday after obtaining a warrant from the Johnson County Attorney's office to search a stolen vehicle.
Nathan Everhart, 30, address unavailable, was arrested for vehicle theft last Tuesday after police arrived at the scene of an accident in which the top of the Ryder truck Everhart had been driving was peeled off at the low-clearance Iowa Avenue Railroad Bridge, according to Iowa City Detective Dan Moore.

At the scene of the accident, police found pill bottles and drug-related items thrown onto the street from the impact of the accident.
Moore said boxes and bags full of what appeared to be drugs were visible inside the truck.
The Johnson County Attorney's office directed detectives to seek a search warrant to go through the truck, Moore said. Detectives found pseudo-drugs, drug-related items and a stolen motorcycle inside the vehicle.

"It all looked very funky, so a search warrant was obtained, and what I think I could safely describe as a huge quantity of pseudo-drugs — along with a motorcycle that was determined to have been stolen — was found," Moore said.
Everhart is being held at the Johnson County Jail on $10,000 bond and a 25-percent surcharge, jail officials said Monday night.

Congressional candidates clash in televised debates

The Associated Press
Democratic candidate Eric Tabor says incumbent Republican 2nd District Rep. Tom Tauke was wrong to propose a freeze in federal spending six months after accepting a $12,000 pay increase in Congress.
"I think it's wrong to ask everyone else in society to sacrifice and then to take pay raises," Tabor said in a televised debate.
In a debate between candidates for Iowa's 6th District seat in Congress, Democratic challenger David O'Brien accused freshman Republican Rep. Fred Grandy of seeking to weaken environmental regulations because of contributions from chemical industry interests.
Grandy denied the charge in the Sunday night confrontation on Iowa Public Television's "Iowa Press" program and said he was trying to give farm advocates an equal say with environmentalists.
Tauke, during the 2nd District debate broadcast Sunday by KDUB-TV in Dubuque, said Tabor is using the salary issue to avoid talking about federal deficits.

"It's déjà vu all over again," Tauke said. "Instead of talking about the federal deficit, he wants to talk about pay raises."
He suggested that Tabor favors higher taxes. Tabor said his views were being misrepresented and that a tax hike would only be a "last resort."
Grandy has proposed a reorganization of the U.S. Department of Agriculture to give the agency a say along with the Environmental Protection Agency in dealing with chemical contamination of water.
"What we're seeing from Mr. Grandy is chemical company protection, not groundwater protection," O'Brien said. "It should come as no surprise considering he's accepted ... $25,000 from chemical company PACs and chemical company executives." PACs are political action committees.
O'Brien said it's time for federal regulation because the USDA and chemical companies have had years to deal with groundwater protection on a voluntary basis.

"Sixty-five percent of our municipal water systems are tainted with chemicals," said O'Brien. "It's time we did something about it, and it's going to take federal regulation."
Grandy responded sharply, saying, "If Mr. O'Brien understood as much about groundwater as he understands about PACs, he would understand we are trying to form a coalition to help farmers, not special interests."
"These guys live on the land, they drink (the water), their children drink it, their livestock drink it. Who has a better interest than them?" Grandy asked.
Grandy said he didn't want to get the EPA out of chemical regulation but that he wanted to give the USDA a voice.
"The USDA is still the advocacy agency for farmers. If they are not involved in their futures, you're going to have EPA regulators coming into counties like Humboldt County telling farmers to manage a problem" the EPA does not understand, Grandy said.

Panamanians to boycott Canal meeting

PANAMA CITY, Panama — An official said Monday the government will not send delegates to a Panama Canal Commission meeting because the United States invited an ambassador loyal to ousted President Eric Arturo Delvalle.

Oyden Ortega, one of four Panamanian delegates to the commission, said the United States also denied entry visas for two delegates to attend the Oct. 12-13 meeting in New Orleans.

Ortega told a news conference the United States had invited Juan Sosa, whom it recognizes as Panama's ambassador to Washington, to the meeting.

He said Sosa's presence "introduces an element of politics into the Canal Commission meetings, and an institutional meeting would have been preferable."

Ortega called the invitation "one more maneuver by the U.S. government to impede the adequate execution of the Panama Canal Treaties."

He said Panama would send a document to U.S. commission members stating that its decision to boycott the meeting did not affect Panama's compliance with canal treaty obligations.

The commission oversees administration of the canal until Dec. 31, 1999, when Panama is to assume full responsibility for the waterway that connects that Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

de Cuellar returns to mediate Gulf talks

UNITED NATIONS — Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Monday he will return to Geneva this month to mediate peace talks between Iran and Iraq but expressed misgivings about the pace of the negotiations.

"I am satisfied in the sense that the meetings are useful but not in the sense that we are moving too slowly. The parties are presenting their positions, and that takes time," the U.N. chief said.

He spoke to reporters after briefing the Security Council on his meetings in New York over the last 10 days with foreign ministers Ali Akbar Velayati of Iran and Tariq Aziz of Iraq.

Perez de Cuellar said the date for resuming the talks is still not settled but will be announced soon. He indicated it would be the last week of October.

The secretary-general's decision to return to Geneva was seen as a possible indication that he hopes for progress soon after the talks resume.

Carbon dioxide tank explodes, killing two

SANTA FE SPRINGS, Calif. — A carbon dioxide tank exploded at an industrial complex Monday, killing at least two people and injuring seven others, authorities said.

The explosion at Reinhold Industries, which is about 15 miles southeast of Los Angeles, occurred about 2:30 p.m., said Sheriff's Sgt. Thomas Heller.

The blast caused telephone and electrical outages, Heller said. The explosion of the colorless, odorless gas did not result in a fire or further chemical leaks, he said.

ABC, CBS to broadcast anti-couch potato ad

NEW YORK — ABC and CBS have agreed to broadcast a pediatrician group's public service announcement that warns children against watching too much television, network spokesmen say.

The 30-second cartoon, which includes a boy and girl turning into "couch potatoes" while they watch television, is being offered to the three major networks and 400 local stations by the American Academy of Pediatrics.

"It says be choosy in what you watch, and we think it's good for children to be choosy in what they watch," said Matthew Margo, vice president for program practices of the CBS Broadcast Group.

Newlyweds jailed after wedding-night fight

LORAIN, Ohio — Newlyweds were booked into the Lorain County Jail on their wedding night after being arrested in a drunken fight with each other, a bystander and police, authorities said Monday.

Roger McGee, 28, and Tamara Lynn McGee, 19, were married Saturday afternoon.

About 10 hours later, early Sunday, the Lorain Police Department says it received a report that Tamara Lynn McGee had been assaulted.

When police arrived at the couple's home, they discovered Roger McGee fighting with Miles Burch, 28, also of Lorain, said patrolman Raymond West. According to a police report, Burch said he was attempting to help Tamara Lynn McGee.

When police tried to break up the fight, both McGees fought with officers and had to be handcuffed, police said. Once in a police car, Roger McGee tried to kick out the rear window, the police report said.

Quayle details plans for presidential crisis

DETROIT (AP) — Republican vice-presidential candidate Dan Quayle, refining further his response to what he would do if the president was assassinated, said Monday he would first "call the head of the CIA."

"Certainly, I know what to do," Quayle said in his most detailed response to the question to date.

Quayle struggled when asked the question several times during last week's debate with Lloyd Bentsen, his Democratic counterpart. After the debate, he said in several speeches that he would continue George Bush's policies.

During a question-and-answer session Monday after an economics speech, Quayle called the debate question "totally inappropriate" because it was hypothetical and did not address various circumstances that might occur.

He said he would make a request to talk to the nation, and he would consult with allies. But, he said, his other responses would depend on the situation.

"Obviously, you do different things under an assassination. The first thing you do in an assassination — I would still say a prayer for myself and the nation — but the first thing you do is you get on the phone and call the head of the CIA and see what he thinks it is. You don't convene a Cabinet meeting right away," Quayle said.

"You get your secretary of defense, your national security adviser, your secretary of state and meet with them immediately," he said.

Quayle said he would have "contingency plans under different situations."

"And I'll tell you what: I'm not going to go out and hold a news conference about it. I'm going to put it in a safe and keep it there," he said heatedly.

Furlough issue grows as campaign weapon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush has turned prison inmate Willie Horton Jr. into a celebrity of sorts in his effort to exploit Americans' fear of crime as a campaign weapon against Democratic rival Michael Dukakis.

Horton, now behind bars in Maryland, is the convicted murderer who escaped while on a weekend furlough granted by the Massachusetts prison system, brutally slashed a man and twice raped his fiancée in 1987.

Republicans see the incident, along with the police endorsements that Bush has garnered, as an irresistible opportunity to portray the Massachusetts governor as a liberal who is soft on crime and outside the mainstream of traditional American values.

Bush recites Horton's story in grisly detail in his campaign speeches and blames Dukakis as the executive in charge of the Massachusetts prison system.

The Bush campaign has arranged for one of Horton's victims, Cliff Barnes, to speak publicly about the prison furlough issue. Deputy Bush press secretary Mark Goodin keeps a photo of Horton on the wall in his office.

Dukakis, though late in responding, is fighting back with facts in the hope that the emotionalism of Bush's message will turn against the GOP nominee by Election Day.

Dukakis recently called the prison furlough attacks "shameless" and said Bush was "exploiting a human tragedy for political ends."

The Democratic nominee noted that he had accepted responsibility for the Horton case and signed a state law in April revoking furloughs for first-degree murderers.

Dukakis also has put together a television spot that seeks to shove the issue back at Bush. The ad cites a 1981 rape and murder carried out by an inmate staying at a Houston halfway house that Bush helped start while he was a congressman.

Dukakis says two similar murders occurred under the California furlough system in the early 1970s, at a time when Ronald Reagan, then state governor, supported furloughs.

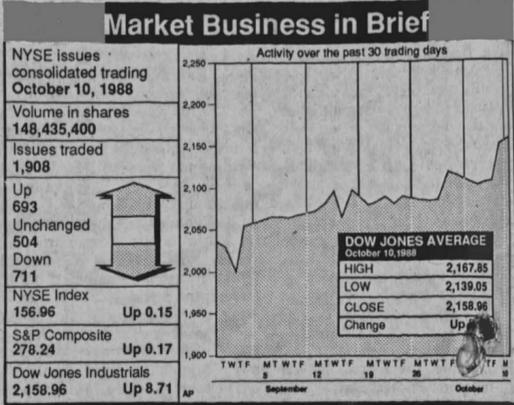

Dukakis also points to a 13-percent drop in violent crime in Massachusetts since 1982, the largest decline among major industrial states. He says that as the state's chief executive, he had to face real problems of running the Massachusetts prison system, while Bush has never been tested on the issue.

Far from being out of the mainstream, the Massachusetts law allowing prison furloughs is in line with the rest of the nation. A 1987 national survey found that all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the federal prison system have some provision for granting short-term furloughs for prisoners, and two-thirds of them permit furloughs for prisoners serving life terms.

Bush's use of the issue is "an oversimplification of a real complex thing," said Emily Herrick, an editor with Contact Inc., the non-profit criminal justice information organization that conducted the survey.

More than 200,000 furloughs were granted last year for 53,000 inmates, the survey found. No murders were reported. All but three states — Hawaii, Oregon and North Carolina — had success rates in excess of 90 percent, meaning the inmates returned at the appointed time and place without violating terms of the furlough.

Forbes: America's 100 richest get richer despite '88 market crash

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market crash wiped out some of their wealth, but according to Forbes magazine, the 400 richest Americans still had a total worth of about $220 billion, enough to cover the federal budget deficit for a year.

Last year's Oct. 19 financial market debacle reduced the fortunes of many of the ultra-affluent 400 and caused 22 former members to be dropped from the list because their fortunes slipped below Forbes' $225 million cutoff.

Still, the average fortune on this year's edition of the annual list comes to $551 million, up $1 million from last year.

The list appears in the Oct. 24 edition of Forbes and is based on holdings as of Aug. 30.

The federal deficit for the fiscal year that just ended was about $150 billion. The total national debt is about $2.5 trillion.

Sam Walton, 70, easily held the No. 1 spot for the fourth year in a row, even though his net worth shrank by a whopping $2 billion following the crash.

Walton, head of the Arkansas-based Wal-Mart discount store empire, scoofs at his $6.7 billion in riches. He calls it "just paper — all I own is a pickup truck and a little Wal-Mart stock."

By Forbes' estimates of worldwide wealth, Walton rates fifth behind Japan's Yoshiaki Tsutsumi, $18.9 billion; Taichiro Mori, $18 billion; and Haruhiko Yoshimoto, $7.8 billion; and Canada's Kenneth Cole Irving, $8 billion.

The number of American billionaires nearly doubled in 1987, but Forbes' '88 list has only two additional billionaires, bringing the total to 51. Japan has the second-highest number of identified billionaires with 34.

Runner-up to Walton on the billionaire list is John Werner Kluge, the head of Metromedia Co. with a net worth of $3.2 billion.

Enrile de

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile on Monday denied a published report that he and his sister were involved in an alleged plot to topple President Corason Aquino.

The Philippine Daily Globe quoted National Security Adviser Emmanuel Soriano as saying a senator and his sister — whom the newspaper identified as Enrile and Irina Ponce Enrile Potenciano — were linked to the plan.

The newspaper quoted Soriano as saying Enrile would fund the alleged plot to be staged Jan. 6.

Enrile denied the allegations in a radio interview on Monday.

"I am calling Soriano a liar," Enrile said. "I challenge Soriano to come out with that story . . . I am making an official denial."

Soriano also denied the Globe report in a separate radio interview, saying "I don't know who came out with that story . . . I am making an official denial."

According to the Globe, based on a report by Potenciano were to transport renegade soldiers led by Lt. Col. Gregorio Honasan, who organized an attempted coup against Aquino on Aug. 28, 1987, in which at least 53 people were killed and more than 300 other wounded.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos told reporters he was aware of the rumored plot but said his information was based on "raw intelligence" and that Honasan was unlikely to be capable of mounting another coup.

Tamil rebels 47 Sri Lanka

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil rebels hacked and shot death 47 sleeping villagers, the military said Monday, one year after Indian troops were sent to this island nation to end the violence by the insurgents.

Indian troops near the village of Ulukulama, 150 miles northeast of the capital, ambushed 40 rebels hiding in the jungle after the massacre of the villagers, killing 47 of the insurgents, according to the Indian High Commission in Colombo.

The massacre was the worst but of violence since the Indian soldiers landed in Sri Lanka on Oct. 1, 1987, to quell the 5-year-old Tamil rebellion for a separate homeland in the northeastern part of the island.

In another development in the southern city of Matara, 85 miles south of Colombo, soldiers opened fire on anti-government demonstrators who attacked a police station, according to police. Fifteen people were killed and four wounded.

Guerrilla a

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — About 1,000 guerrillas of the Karen ethnic minority attacked Burmese army posts along the Moei River frontier with Thailand, a government spokesman said Monday.

Kyaw Sann said the guerrillas raided perimeter outposts Sept. 27, then attacked the army at Mawlaw on the Moei's western bank.

More than 150 shells from mortar and recoilless rifles crashed in Methawaw on Sunday and so shells struck Thai territory, Kyaw Sann told a news conference. The area is about 130 miles north of Rangoon.

He gave no casualty figures for the battle, which he described as one of the largest since Sept. 30, when government forces drove about 2,000 Burma Communist Party guerrillas from Mong Yang in eastern Burma. The guerrillas attacked the government outposts Sept. 23.

The government said more than 200 guerrillas and 47 soldiers were killed.

Court order

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A judge Monday ordered CBS Records to turn over the master tape of the rock group Judas Priest's "Stained Class" album so it can be examined for subliminal messages that may have prompted two teenagers to enter into a suicide pact.

CBS "has not been cooperating with discovery in this case," Washoe District Court Judge Jerry Whitehead said in delaying trial of a lawsuit against the group and giving the company 30 days to hand over the master tape.

CBS has told plaintiffs in lawsuit it cannot find the 24-minute master tape for the 1978 album. The judge said the tape would be a key piece of evidence in separate suits among the music and record companies to determine whether any subliminal messages exist.

Enrile denies overthrow plot

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opposition Sen. Juan Ponce Enrile on Monday denied a published report that he and his sister were involved in an alleged plot to topple President Corazon Aquino.

The Philippine Daily Globe quoted National Security Adviser Emanuel Soriano as saying a senator and his sister — whom the newspaper identified as Enrile and Irma Ponce Enrile Potenciano — were linked to the plan.

The newspaper quoted Soriano as saying Enrile would fund the alleged plot to be staged Jan. 6.

Enrile denied the allegations in a radio interview on Monday. "I am calling Soriano a liar," Enrile said. "I challenge Soriano to come out with details of the (plan) so that we can discuss it in any proper forum."

Soriano also denied the Globe report in a separate radio interview, saying "I don't know who came out with that story... I am making an official denial."

According to the Globe, buses owned by Potenciano were to transport renegade soldiers led by Lt. Col. Gregorio Honasan, who organized an attempted coup against Aquino on Aug. 28, 1987, in which at least 53 people were killed and more than 300 others wounded.

Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos told reporters he was aware of the rumored plot but said his information was based on "raw intelligence" and that Honasan was unlikely to be capable of mounting another coup.

Honasan was arrested in December and escaped from prison in April. He was Enrile's security chief when the senator was defense minister under former President Ferdinand Marcos. Enrile was fired in November 1986 after a failed coup by his followers.

Also Monday, a Manila court dismissed a petition by Marcos to return home, where he was to testify in a trial on alleged bribes his administration received during 20 years in power.

Marcos and his family fled to Hawaii after the 1986 revolt that swept Aquino to the presidency.

The court dismissed Marcos' petition to return home, where he faces 39 civil cases on charges he embezzled up to $10 billion during his rule. He has not been charged with criminal violations, and Philippine law bans trials in absentia.

"Marcos can answer the charges by disposition, which is by issuing legal statements from his home in Honolulu," the court resolution said.

Marcos had asked the court to let him return and act as his own counsel during the deposition, but the court said Marcos' return was a political issue requiring a decision by the Aquino government.

Aquino has repeatedly refused to allow her predecessor to return on grounds of national security.

In another development, Philippine and U.S. officials have finished talks on U.S. bases, and an agreement on their status through 1991 will emerge within a week, according to a highly reliable source. The source said Philippine and U.S. officials have finished talks to determine compensation, security and other issues regarding four U.S. bases.

Juan Ponce Enrile

"It's over. An agreement is possible within a few days, maybe within a week's time," said the source, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "There was compromise on both sides," he added without elaborating.

The Philippine panel was reportedly asking $1.2 billion a year for the use of the bases, but U.S. officials are offering only half that amount.

Tamil rebels massacre 47 Sri Lankan villagers

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil rebels hacked and shot to death 47 sleeping villagers, the military said Monday, one year after Indian troops were sent to this island nation to end the violence by the insurgents.

Indian troops near the village of Ulukulama, 150 miles northeast of the capital, ambushed 40 rebels hiding in the jungle after the massacre of the villagers, killing 12 of the insurgents, according to the Indian High Commission in Colombo.

The massacre was the worst burst of violence since the Indian soldiers landed in Sri Lanka on Oct. 10, 1987, to quell the 5-year-old Tamil rebellion for a separate homeland in the northeastern part of the island.

In another development in the southern city of Matarra, 85 miles south of Colombo, soldiers opened fire on anti-government demonstrators who attacked a police station, according to police. Five people were killed and four wounded. Also on Monday, two bombs exploded in the suburbs of Colombo, injuring four people, including two soldiers, police said.

In Colombo and most other cities on the island, shops and businesses remained closed Monday in a protest by the majority Sinhalese population against the government's peace overtures to the Tamil insurgents.

The government imposed a 48-hour curfew Monday, beginning at 6 a.m., ordered schools closed in many districts and put security personnel on alert.

There were no private vehicles on the roads, and government-owned buses were escorted by heavily armed soldiers.

On Sunday night, about 75 Tamil rebels attacked the village of Ulukulama and killed 47 people, including 13 women and 18 children, said a military official in Colombo who demanded anonymity.

At least four people were seriously injured and 11 homes were set on fire in the attack, said the official. He said the victims, who were Sinhalese, were either fatally shot or hacked to death with knives and swords.

The village massacre occurred on Army Day, which honors Sri Lankan soldiers involved in a drive against the insurgents in April 1987 on the northern Jaffna peninsula.

The Sinhalese claim the government is granting too many concessions to the Tamils, including a peace accord signed in July 1987 to end the civil war that has claimed at least 8,500 lives.

Guerrilla attacks persist in Burma

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — About 1,000 guerrillas of the Karen ethnic minority attacked Burmese army posts along the Moei River frontier with Thailand, a government spokesman said Monday.

Kyaw Sann said the guerrillas had raided perimeter outposts Sept. 26, then attacked the army at Methawon on the Moei's western bank.

More than 150 shells from mortars and recoilless rifles crashed into Methawon on Sunday and some shells struck Thai territory, Kyaw Sann told a news conference. The area is about 130 miles northeast of Rangoon.

He gave no casualty figures for the battle, which he described as one of the largest since Sept. 30, when government forces drove about 2,000 Burma Communist Party guerrillas from Mong Yang in eastern Burma. The guerrillas had attacked the government outpost Sept. 23.

The government said more than 200 guerrillas and 47 soldiers, including five officers, were killed at Mong Yang.

Karens and the communists are the country's two most powerful insurgencies and have fought for decades. The Karens seek greater autonomy for their areas.

Burma has about 2 million Karens among its 38 million people. Most live along the Thai-Burmese border and in the Irrawaddy delta.

Western diplomats in Rangoon say the military government is trying to highlight alleged threats from the communists, insurgents among the dozen ethnic minorities and "outside powers" to justify ruthless actions of recent weeks.

"The army has no credibility left," a Western diplomat based in Rangoon said Monday. "The military is occupying its own country."

He said the army has killed thousands of anti-government demonstrators and lost its image as "the protector of the country's unity."

Gen. Saw Maung seized power Sept. 18 in an attempt to stop weeks of anti-government protest, and at least 440 people have been killed since by official count. Burma has been ruled by repressive military governments since a coup in 1962 by Gen. Ne Win.

Kyaw Sann said Monday the government will permit freedom of organization and speech when law and order is restored, but "the situation (now) does not permit such freedoms."

He acknowledged more than 3,000 students had joined the Karens and other rebel groups since the Saw Maung coup.

"Though they could be classified as rebels, we still consider them youths gone astray by mistake and will accept them back into the legal fold, but we will have to regard them as rebels after a certain period, which will have to be determined later," Kyaw Sann said.

Saw Maung has promised to relinquish power to whoever wins general election but has not set a date for the vote.

Court orders Judas Priest master tape

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A judge on Monday ordered CBS Records to turn over the master tape of the rock group Judas Priest's "Stained Class" album so it can be examined for subliminal messages that may have prompted two teenagers to enter into a suicide pact.

CBS "has not been completely cooperating with discovery in this case," Washoe District Court Judge Jerry Whitehead said before delaying trial of a lawsuit against the group and giving the company 30 days to hand over the master tape.

CBS has told plaintiffs in the lawsuit it cannot find the 24-track master tape for the 1978 album. The judge said the tape would be a key piece of evidence in separating songs among the music and lyrics to determine whether any subliminal messages exist.

Without evidence of subliminal messages, Whitehead said the case would not go to trial since music and lyrics are protected by the First Amendment right to free speech.

If subliminal messages are found within the "Stained Class" album, Whitehead said the trial would concentrate on whether such hidden communication deserves the same First Amendment protection.

"The court did not believe that it was automatic that the First Amendment protects the right to subliminal speech," Whitehead said.

The case is the first of its kind to advance this far in an American court.

Judas Priest members weren't present in the courtroom Monday.

In 1986, the families of Raymond Belknap and James Vance, both of nearby Sparks, filed suit claiming the music, words and subliminal messages in the album drove the two into a suicide pact.

After listening to "Stained Class" for six hours, drinking alcohol and smoking marijuana, Belknap, 18, killed himself with a shotgun two days before Christmas 1985. Vance, then 19, shot and seriously injured himself with the same shotgun.

Reno attorney Suellen Fulstone, who represents the band members, said neither her clients nor CBS has possession of the master tape and CBS used a two-track tape dub to record the album.

"We have not been able to locate it," Fulstone said outside the courtroom. "I don't know how we're going to comply with the court's order."

Professor awarded humanities grant

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

U I English professor Miriam Gilbert has been awarded a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH) to conduct a six-week seminar, "Shakespeare: Text and Theatre," in Stratford-upon-Avon, England, during the summer of 1989.

This is the second NEH grant Gilbert has received to teach in Stratford. Her first, during the summer of 1987, was NEH's most popular seminar for high-school teachers that year, with 175 teachers vying for the 15 slots.

Gilbert's seminar will focus on two plays performed by the Royal Shakespeare Company, considered to be one of the world's leading repertory companies. The seminar participants will attend the productions twice, once at the outset and once again after intensive study and discussion.

After a kickoff dinner at Gilbert's Stratford home, the teacher/students maintain a demanding routine. In addition to attending the plays, the participants have reading and writing assignments and watch video tapes and films of the playwright's works.

"The major focus is the text," commented Gilbert. "We use the production as a jumping-off point for interpretation. My basic premise is that there is no single 'right way' to interpret the text. One of the main reasons that Shakespeare is still so popular is that his work remains open to interpretation."

For anyone who has read or seen Shakespeare in performance, the complexity of plot, character-identity, vocabulary and symbolism can prove daunting. Gilbert uses a number of exercises to help the participants identify and resolve problems in the plays. "Text-crawling," or working through the text word-by-word, allows a slower, more methodical approach. "Text-crawling is a process of slowing down and taking your time, of seeing how the text offers suggestions for interpretation and performance."

On occasion, text-crawling overlaps with the British Isles Falstaffian pastime of "pub-crawling."

"In 1987, the group went to a Stratford pub and read Marlowe's 'The Jew of Malta' out loud. It was hilarious," laughed Gilbert.

The seminar program began in 1983, in response to NEH chairman William Bennett's desire to create study alternatives for teachers besides tired educational methodologies or the latest curriculum fads. "What teachers want to study is the real stuff, the right stuff," he said in a Time article.

This early "back-to-basics" approach provided funds for teachers to study classic works by such best-selling authors as Plato, Thucydides, Homer, Virgil,

Miriam Gilbert

Chaucer, de Toqueville, Joseph Conrad and Thomas Mann. And Shakespeare.

In addition to attending productions in Shakespeare's native land, the seminar is further enlivened by meetings with members of the Royal Shakespeare Company. The participants have the opportunity to ask actors, directors and designers why they did certain things and what they were thinking about when they were engaged in rehearsal.

Gilbert credits the NEH with encouraging teachers and giving them deserved recognition. "Teachers don't have a lot of time to study. This seminar allows them to rediscover the pleasures of study and, in turn, pass it on to their students. It's a recharging of their intellectual batteries."

Sistine Chapel director will highlight Michelangelo's work

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The UI School of Art and Art History will present two Ida Beam public lectures by Fabrizio Mancinelli, director of restoration of artwork in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel, at 8 p.m. today and tomorrow in the Art Building Auditorium.

The lectures will be "The Restoration of Michelangelo's Sistine Ceiling" and "Michelangelo's Fresco Technique in the Sistine Chapel." Both will be illustrated by numerous color slides showing the accomplishments of the restoration.

Mancinelli has directed the restoration process since its beginning in 1980. It is expected to be finished in 1991. Though there was great controversy when the work began, this controversy has largely vanished due to the project's success in revealing details and colors in the art that has been hidden for centuries by grime and soot.

"Where you saw brown, you now see yellow or red," commented Mancinelli. "Part of the controversy concerning the restoration arose because of the shock of how different the colors appeared; it was too different from what people were accustomed to."

The main problem with the frescoes is that they are covered by glue, which was applied in the 18th century. The glue is now contracting and detaching the color. The glue also became brown over the years, dulling the brightness of the colors. In addition, during services in the chapel, worshippers burned oil lamps and candles, adding layers of soot to the ceiling. Once the distinguishing features of the ceiling became dulled, restorers retouched contours and shadows in black, further dulling the surface.

"What one sees now is totally different from what one saw before," says John Beldon Scott, UI associate professor of art and art history. "Mancinelli will show, for instance, how the restoration of Michelangelo's ceiling frescoes changes our assessment of this great work of Western art and also changes our perception of Michelangelo as an artist."

Mancinelli has been associated with the Vatican since 1972. He is curator of the Department of Byzantine, Medieval and Modern Art of the Vatican Museums. He received his laureate and advanced degrees from the University of Milan and has taught in Milan, Bergamo, Pavia and Rome.

What impresses Mancinelli is not so much the brighter colors but the revealing of Michelangelo's artistry. "What's coming out could be forseen. His work fits perfectly with what was done before him and after him. It also fits visually with the lower part of the Sistine Chapel. What is coming out is the level of quality. The genius is different than whatever you can make comparisons with."

In order to work on the ceiling, which is 65 feet high, scaffolding had to be constructed. "When you work on the scaffold, you are in the position of the painter, you see what the artist saw," explained Mancinelli.

Up until 1934, scaffolds were constructed for inspection of the Last Judgement since the 16th century. Originally, the entire chapel was inspected.

Mancinelli's activities at the UI are supported by the Ida Beam Visiting Professor Program, which brings distinguished scholars to the UI campus for residencies ranging from a few days to an entire school year. The program began in 1977 with funds provided by the estate of Ida Beam of Vinton.

Mancinelli's lectures/slide shows are free and open to the public.

Nature celebrated in poetry

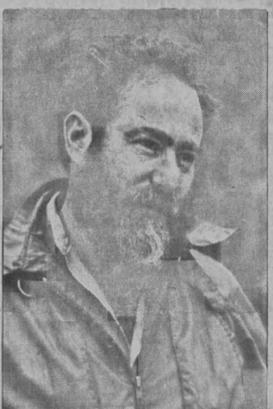

By Dan Vitale
Special to The Daily Iowan

Writers' Workshop faculty members Gerald Stern and Marvin Bell will read from their poetry tonight at 8 in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Gerald Stern was born in Pittsburgh, Pa., and educated at the University of Pittsburgh and Columbia University. He is the author of seven books, most recently "Lovesick," published in 1987. A verse play, "Father Guzman," won The Paris Review's 1982 Bernard F. Connors Prize for a long poem. He has taught in the workshop since 1982.

William Wordsworth's sedentary definition of poetry as "emotion recollected in tranquillity" does not apply to Stern's work, which refuses to sit still. His poems laugh, shout, weep, fulminate — and, occasionally, whisper. The words are set at such a high pitch that even when quietly rhapsodic, they are agitated by a current of true feelings.

Stern's poetic voice speaks to nature and takes lessons from it, animating everything from a pair of sticks or a dried leaf to the ghosts of Ovid and Bartok. In "Soap," from "Paradise Poems" (1984), Stern conjures the spirits of the Holocaust dead into the bars of soap their corpses were used to manufacture. The poem takes many stances at once: rage, humor, sadness and love. It's exemplary of the task Stern's poetry has set itself: to celebrate, lament and bless every soul in the universe.

Marvin Bell has taught in the workshop since 1965 and in 1986 was named to the UI's Flannery O'Connor Professorship in Letters. His first major collection, "A Probable Volume of Dreams" (1969), received the Lamont Award of the Academy of American Poets. His latest book, "New and Selected Poems," published in 1987, adds 18 uncollected pieces to a gathering from several earlier volumes.

Bell's poetry demonstrates a passion for precision. In his work, the world exists in an almost geometric relation to the poet, who observes and measures it in all its aspects, both physical and spiritual. The accuracy of his language — the rightness of each word — is as much a part of its beauty as the sound or imagery; the act of measurement itself becomes as beautiful as what it measured.

Throughout this enterprise, Bell's voice retains its unique personality, that of a man who is concerned with "the value of life, the nature of good, my own shortcomings, the illusions of time," and who can say sincerely and without irony, "Everyone I ever loved, I still love."

Tonight's reading is free and open to the public.

Long injures knee, out for 3-6 weeks

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP)—A knee injury will sideline Detroit Lions quarterback Chuck Long for three to six weeks, Coach Darryl Rogers said Monday.

Team physician Dr. David Collon said the former University of Iowa quarterback suffered a partially torn ligament in his left knee after being hit by Richard Dent in the second quarter of Detroit's 24-7 loss to the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

The Lions brought former Los Angeles Raider Marc Wilson and former Chicago Bear Steve Fuller to the Silverdome Monday for workouts. Rogers said he hoped to sign one of them Monday night or Tuesday morning. Whoever signs will serve as a backup to Rusty Hilger next Sunday against the New York Giants.

Long, who had his knee immobilized Monday, hoped to be back in the lineup sooner than four weeks.

"I don't know what Darryl wants to do yet," Long said. "I'm sure he'll take it to the doctors. We won't know much about the knee until tomorrow (Tuesday). I'm supposed to have more tests done tonight."

NL shortens Howell's suspension

NEW YORK (AP)—When the National League playoffs return to Los Angeles for Game 6 Tuesday night, Jay Howell will be back in the Dodgers' bullpen, restored to the team's roster a day early by NL president Bart Giamatti.

Howell and players association attorney Gene Orza met for 70 minutes with Giamatti Monday and the league president reduced by one day the pitcher's three-day suspension for using pine tar on his glove. Howell and Orza had asked for an immediate reinstatement.

The meeting with Orza and Howell was not a formal appeal. "Mr. Howell made a mistake and has expressed his regret," Giamatti said in a prepared statement. "He knows that putting any foreign substance on his glove violates rule 8.02 (b)."

Lyle wins World Matchplay title

WENTWORTH, England (AP)—Scotland's Sandy Lyle sank a 20-foot putt on the 35th hole to beat Nick Faldo of England 2 and 1 and win the World Matchplay golf championship Monday.

Lyle, beaten in four previous finals, became only the second British winner in the 25-year history of the event when he came up with a sensational finish of four straight birdies.

It was frustration again for Faldo, who finished runner-up for the eighth time this season.

NFL player dies; cocaine suspected

DECATUR, Ga. (AP)—David Croudip, captain of the Atlanta Falcons' special teams, died early Monday. A medical examiner said a preliminary examination indicates cocaine was in the system of the 29-year-old NFL cornerback.

Croudip was rushed to a hospital in the Atlanta suburb of Duluth after suffering seizures at his home. Police Detective Larry Walton of Gwinnett County said an ambulance crew summoned by Croudip's wife found the football player suffering seizures. His heart failed while he was being taken to Joan Glancy Hospital, where efforts to revive him failed, Walton said. Croudip was pronounced dead about 3:30 a.m., the detective said. At a news conference later Monday afternoon in Decatur at the office of Dr. Joseph L. Burton, the medical examiner for both DeKalb and Gwinnett counties, Burton said an autopsy indicated cocaine and possibly another drug was in Croudip's system. "It strongly suggests the man's (Croudip's) death is a drug-related death," he said. Burton said the investigation, which is not completed, said Croudip "may have done as much as a gram of cocaine," but said there was no indication yet that it was suicide.

Shortly after Croudip's death was reported, Gwinnett County coroner Randy Simpson said witnesses reported Croudip had ingested cocaine. "We have been told by witnesses that he had ingested a concoction or cocktail of some sort with cocaine and some liquid," Simpson said. "We are deeply saddened to learn of the death of David Croudip," said Falcons Coach Marion Campbell. "David was a friend to all his teammates, and his death is a shock to the entire organization." Croudip, a Falcons player since 1985, was a reserve cornerback and a leader on special teams. He played in Sunday's 33-0 loss to the Los Angeles Rams and had one tackle. "He was always the most energetic and upbeat guy on the team," said starting cornerback Scott Case. "We voted him special teams captain. That's a big honor. I can't really explain the feeling when I heard about it."

Water polo, lacrosse clubs record wins

By Matthew Zlatnik
The Daily Iowan
The Iowa Water Polo Club and the Iowa Lacrosse Club both recorded wins on the road this past weekend. The water polo club faced Iowa State in Ames Saturday and won 10-9 in double overtime. The Iowa club led 8-5 at halftime but the Ames team battled back to tie at the end of regulation. Matt Sagues put in a pass from Scott Schwarz on a fast break for the win in the second sudden-death period. Schwarz and Lionel Iorgulescu led the Iowa club in scoring, and Schwarz said Sagues also played well. The lacrosse club beat Illinois State 8-4 in Normal, Ill. this past Sunday. Billy Manot and Chris Gibbs each had two goals for the Iowa club, which improved to 1-1 for the season. Mark St. Germain cited Rob Collier, Jason Erickson and goalie Mike McCarthy for good play. "They played well on defense and Mike kept us in the game," said St. Germain. The club's next game is against Northern Illinois Oct. 16 at 1 p.m. on Lower Finkbine Field. The Hawkeye Soccer Club defeated the Cedar Rapids Comets 4-2 Sunday in Cedar Rapids. The Comets, the defending Illowa League champions, had been unbeaten this season. The Hawkeye club improved to 3-2 in league play, 3-4 overall.

"It was a good team effort," said club captain Andre Bourgeois. "We dominated once again, and capitalized on opportunities we let slip by in the past." The win puts the Hawkeye club back in playoff contention, Bourgeois said. The rival UI Soccer Club hosted the first annual Mick Bartelme Memorial Soccer Tournament in Iowa City this past Sunday. The club finished second by defeating Kirkwood Community College 4-1 and losing to Illinois 2-1. Pat Bourgeois scored three goals in the two games and was named the tournament's most outstanding offensive player. "I think that in both games we dominated," Bourgeois said. "We just couldn't put the ball in the net." The tournament attracted about 200 spectators.

The UI Sailing Club sailed in the Navy Fall Regatta in Annapolis, Md., this past weekend, finishing 16th of 16 teams. "From a gaining-experience standpoint, it was very good," said coach Bob Woodward. "We figured we'd be about 14th or 15th or so, depending on who was there. We had inexperienced people, so it was not unexpected." Erich Schloemer, Loren Marshall, Jeff Karlin and James Otis skippered the Iowa craft. Nine of the teams in the tournament are ranked in the top 20. "Both Erich and Loren got good experience," said Woodward. "When you sail against the best teams you pick up a lot." If you have club sports information you would like published, contact Matt Zlatnik at the Daily Iowan sports desk, 335-5848.

Hoosiers no longer are sneaking up on their opponents, Mallory said. "I know the teams we play aren't surprised any more," he said. "They're all cranking up for us on the field. As we go along, people will begin to realize this." Miami did not play over the weekend and held on to first place for the sixth week in a row. The Hurricanes received 52 of 56 first-place votes and 1,115 of a possible 1,120 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters. UCLA remained No. 2 for the fifth week in a row by beating Oregon State 38-21. The Bruins received one first-place vote and 1,051 points. Southern Cal, which had the remaining three first-place votes and 1,012 points, was third for the third straight week following a 42-14 victory over Oregon. The loss dropped the Ducks out of the Top 20 from the No. 18 spot. The only other dropout was Alabama, 12th last week but a 22-12 loser to Mississippi. Notre Dame, a 30-20 winner over Pittsburgh, took over the fourth spot with 932 points. Florida State defeated Georgia Southern 28-10, its fifth straight victory since being routed by Miami, and climbed from sixth place to fifth with 817 points. West Virginia rose from seventh to sixth with 811 points thanks to a 30-10 triumph over East Carolina. Nebraska's 63-10 rout of Kansas pushed the Cornhuskers from ninth place to seventh with 747 points. South Carolina, which edged Virginia Tech 26-24, remained No. 8 with 704 points.

Oklahoma went from 10th to ninth with 663 points by downing Texas 28-13 and Oklahoma State cracked the top 10 for the first time since 1985 by defeating Colorado 41-21. The Cowboys, 13th a week ago, rounded out the top 10 with 599 points. The second 10 consists of Clemson, Auburn, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Washington, Arkansas, Indiana, LSU and Florida. Last week, it was Clemson, Alabama, Oklahoma State, Florida, Georgia, Wyoming, Michigan, Oregon, Washington and Arkansas.

Playoffs

Mets play catch-up baseball," Dempsey said. "We've done it five games and we've been in it all five." Dempsey said Gibson's injury may be serious. "Kirk isn't feeling too good," Dempsey said. "I think he pulled it worse than before." Gibson struggled early in the series but found his stroke just in time. "I didn't feel like I let the team down," Gibson said. "We believe in ourselves and it's a team effort. I was giving the best I had." Gibson said hitting is sometimes like hunting and fishing, two of his favorite hobbies. "Sometimes it takes 36 hours to catch that one fish," Gibson said.

"And sometimes, it takes time to get that hit." The Mets were favored to win the series but now must sweep the Dodgers in Los Angeles. "I think we realize we are not the best team in baseball," Dempsey said. "We make mistakes and we talk about them. We just keep coming, keep pushing hard to get it done." Belcher, who won Game 2, set down nine straight before Len Dykstra led off with a walk in the fourth and Gregg Jefferies singled. Belcher, who won nine of his last 11 decisions, allowed seven hits and struck out six as he became the first rookie to win two games in the playoffs since the format was adopted in 1969.

In Game 2, Belcher allowed five hits in 8 1/2 innings as the Dodgers beat the Mets 6-3. Marshall led off the fourth with a single and, after a walk to John Shelby, Dempsey doubled down the left-field line on a high fastball. Dempsey was signed as a non-roster player last spring by the Dodgers after hitting .177 for Cleveland in 1987. He missed the last half of 1987 after suffering a broken thumb in a collision at home plate with Kansas City's Bo Jackson. As a catcher for Baltimore in 1983, Dempsey was the World Series MVP and is 20-for-61 in 21 post-season games. Griffin, a .167 batter hitting right-handed, followed Dempsey's hit with a double to left-center field. Steve Sax led off the fifth with a single and moved to third on Mickey Hatcher's hit-and-run single to right field. Gibson, who led the Dodgers with 25 home runs, then hit a drive into the right-field seats to chase Fernandez. Fernandez, who won his last six games to finish 12-10, allowed seven hits and six runs in five-plus innings. During the season, he was 8-4 at home with a 1.83 earned-run average. Fernandez was given a start in the playoffs because of an injury to Bob Ojeda, whose left middle finger was almost severed in a gardening accident 10 days before the end of the season.

Fans should notice real NFL heroes

During NBC's "NFL Live" Sunday, Len Berman asked Doug Flutie of the Patriots for his reaction to disparaging remarks made about Flutie by Chicago's Jim McMahon.

McMahon, Berman said, referred to Flutie as "Bambi", and said with the former Heisman Trophy winner starting for New England, America could renew its love affair with "the midget."

"Well," Flutie shrugged, "Jim's Jim."

That's true. Jim is Jim. But what is difficult to understand is why anyone has an ounce of affection or respect for him as a human being.

McMahon's remarks about Flutie were typical "Mad Mac" rhetoric. During his career he has cultivated an image as a rebellious, disrespectful and arrogant man.

That image has boosted McMahon into star status, and similar words and actions are doing the same for Seattle's Brian Bosworth.

McMahon and Bosworth are American heroes, yet neither is the best at his position. Bosworth, in fact, has accomplished relatively little thus far in his professional career, yet his popularity exceeds that of such dominating defensive players as Howie Long, Andre Tippett, Richard Dent and Harry Carson.

McMahon has been impressive as the Bears' leader, taking them to a Super Bowl win and establishing the franchise as one of this decade's finest.

But McMahon lacks the talent and statistics possessed by John Elway, Dan Marino, Joe Montana and Bernie Kosar, none of whom are as well known and as popular as McMahon.

What separates McMahon and Bosworth from the rest of the league are their renegade images.

They are the guys everyone hated in high school. They're the kind of cavemen you see in a bar, and you think, "What a couple of morons."

Both men, at least as they present themselves to the public, are insulting, unfeeling and infantile. And we love them.

It's easy to understand why fans idolize men like Julius Erving and Walter Payton. They represent American sports at its best. They did their jobs and respected their opponents and the game itself.

There are redeeming aspects to the behavior of McMahon and Bosworth. Often they're attacking people or groups in desperate need of being attacked. Bosworth spit on the hypocritical NCAA. McMahon, with his headbands, thumbed his nose at Pete Rozelle's arbitrary rules.

But looking at the complete package, McMahon and Bosworth are two men who are getting rich and famous by exhibiting behavior the public would otherwise consider repulsive.

Not everyone loves them. Former St. Louis Cardinal offensive lineman Conrad Dobler, when asked recently what he and his teammates would have done to a player like Bosworth, said, "We probably would have broken his back. Guys like that have to realize that they aren't bigger than the game."

McMahon and Bosworth are becoming bigger than the game in some sense, and that's sad. One of the greatest qualities of sport is the team aspect: everyone working equally hard, knowing that together they can accomplish a goal.

If McMahon and Bosworth are simply pretending, putting on a show for the benefit of their egos and bank accounts, they are unworthy of their star status.

If they're not acting, and we are seeing their real personalities, then we are guilty of glorifying behavior antithetical to the best qualities of sports.

Dodgers down Mets to take 3-2 lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Lasorda's "dream team" needs one more victory to win the National League pennant but may have to do it without one of the dream weavers.

Rookie Tim Lincecum won his second game of the playoffs and Kirk Gibson hit his second homer in a little more than 12 hours as Los Angeles beat the New York Mets 7-4 in Game 5 Monday, moving the Dodgers to within one game of their first NL championship since 1981.

But Gibson, who singled in the ninth inning, reinjured his left hamstring on a steal attempt, and his status for Game 6 was uncertain.

"It's my dream team, my team of destiny," Lasorda, the Dodgers manager, said.

"We'll know more about Gibson

National League playoffs

tomorrow, they're giving him a shot.

"I hope he can play, he's just starting to hit the ball like he can again."

Gibson, who signed with the Dodgers last winter as a free agent, said he knew something was wrong right away.

"I felt a severe pain and I knew I had to come out," Gibson said. "I wish I had a crystal ball but I guess I have to be optimistic.

"Right now, I don't think I could play, but the doctor said we wouldn't know until I get back to California. As much as I want to play, I might help the club more by sitting out."

The teams headed for Los Angeles, where the Dodgers can wrap up the best-of-seven series Tuesday when former Met Tim Lincecum opposes David Cone, the loser in Game 2.

"I think we're in great shape going back home with Leary and (Orel) Hershiser pitching," Belcher said.

During the regular season, the Mets won 10 of 11 games from the Dodgers and won 56 games at home, including their last 11 at Shea Stadium. But the Dodgers came into New York and won two of three to take a 3-2 series lead.

"I'm still very confident," Mets manager Davey Johnson said. "This team has come back all year long and now we have to again."

The Dodgers won Game 4 in 12 innings on Gibson's homer shortly before midnight Monday. Less than 12 hours later, the two teams were back on the field for the fifth game with the series tied at two games apiece.

"Kirk has provided this team with leadership all year and now he's showing what winning spirit is all about," Lasorda said.

The Mets and Dwight Gooden were three outs away from taking a 3-1 lead in the series when Mike Scioscia tied the score with a two-run homer in Game 4.

Johnson said the Mets were a little down coming to the park Monday, but not out.

"We have Cone tomorrow and Darling the next day," Johnson said. "I look for us to explode."

Gibson, who ended a 1-for-16 slump with his game-winning homer in Game 4, hit a three-run shot in the fifth inning of Game 5 to give the Dodgers a 6-0 lead.

"We were concerned about a let-down today," Gibson said. "Last night was a very emotional game because obviously it was very important for us to get back to Los Angeles. The game took a lot out of all of us and we wanted to make sure we didn't have a let-down. I don't know why we win."

In all five games the Dodgers have scored first, this time breaking through for three runs off loser Sid Fernandez in the fourth inning on 39-year-old Rick Dempsey's two-run double and an RBI double by Alfredo Griffin.

"It's very important to make the

Unbeaten Indiana moves into Top 20

(AP)—Indiana's Hoosiers, ranked in The Associated Press college football poll for the first time this season, welcome the national exposure but can't forget the years of struggle it took to get it, Coach Bill Mallory said Monday.

Indiana, improving each year since Mallory's winless rookie season in 1984, earned the No. 18 ranking Monday after a 41-7 victory over Ohio State.

Miami, UCLA and Southern California remained the top three teams, while Notre Dame moved from fifth to fourth. The Irish replaced Auburn, which fell eight spots to 12th after a 7-6 loss to Louisiana State.

Louisiana State, 3-2 and ranked 19th after a one-week absence from the poll, was the only other newcomer besides Indiana voted into this week's top 20.

"The way I look at it, it's good exposure. It's important, but the big thing is we have our minds on the job each week, and the poll will take care of itself," said Mallory, whose Hoosiers are 4-0-1.

Indiana is 2-0 in the Big Ten Conference and tied with No. 15 Michigan and unranked Illinois for first place.

The only blemish on Indiana's record is a 28-28 tie with Missouri.

"It's good, but it boils down to what we do on Saturday, and that's where our focus of attention is," Mallory said of the national ranking.

It's also important, he said, that his players remember it wasn't long ago that the football program was at rock bottom, when Mallory succeeded Sam Wyche and became the third Indiana coach in three seasons. Mallory inherited a five-game losing streak and lost all 11 games in 1984 before the turnaround began. The Hoosiers were 4-7 in 1985, 6-6 in 1986 and 8-4 last year.

"You never forget where you've come from and how you got where you are," Mallory said. "You have to remind the younger players, too, who haven't gone through the things these other players have, to be aware of what's gone into putting this program where it is today."

"Never allow that attitude of complacency to sit in. That'll cut your throat quicker than anything."

Since the start of the 1987 season, Indiana's 12-4-1 record is the best among all Big Ten teams, and the

No. 8 Hawks will face Western Illinois

By Anne Upson
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa volleyball team, 13-4, ranked eighth in the NCAA Midwest region, will travel to Macomb, Ill., to face Western Illinois tonight at 7:30 p.m.

The Hawkeyes share the No. 2 spot in the Big Ten standings with Indiana and Northwestern.

Iowa goes into the match against the Leathernecks with an 11-2 series record. Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said the Hawkeyes will still play at full force despite being big favorites.

"We will not take them lightly," Stewart said. "They have always been very competitive for us. They usually give us a tough match."

Western Illinois Coach Juli Kartel, an Iowa native, agreed with Stewart about the high quality of the competition between the two schools.

"I think they will be tough," Kartel said. "They have been playing well. They are definitely an improved team over last year."

Injuries, Kartel said, are slowing the team down. The Leathernecks' Michele Aulig, an outside hitter, has been out with an ankle injury. Aulig is ranked 19th by the American Volleyball Coaches Association (AVCA) in dig average.

"We are not completely healthy," Kartel said. "We have a couple of injuries so we are not at 100 percent. Michele Aulig and a freshman are injured, but both will be playing in the match."

The Leathernecks, 10-5, are ranked 13th in service-ace average by the AVCA and 14th in dig averages. Kartel said she was pleased with the team's progress this season.

"We are right where I think we should be," Kartel said. "With the Gateway Conference being so tight, a Big Ten victory would be good for us."

Stewart, however, disagrees with Kartel's assessment of the Gateway Conference. Stewart said she didn't think the conference was highly competitive.

"I don't think they are as strong as they could be," Stewart said. "I'm sure that Western Illinois is one of the stronger teams."

Kartel said she is anticipating a close, challenging match with the Hawkeyes.

"We are looking forward to a good four to five games," Kartel said. "I see that there is the potential that on any given night any team could falter."

Eagles defeat Giants 24-13

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Randall Cunningham threw for 369 yards and three touchdowns as the Philadelphia Eagles beat the New York Giants 24-13 in the NFL Monday night, and barged into the thick of the NFC East Division race.

Cunningham completed 31 of 41 passes as the Eagles, 3-3, moved into a tie with the Giants and the Washington Redskins, one game behind the surprising Phoenix Cardinals.

The Eagles snapped a six-game losing streak against the Giants in their first Monday night appearance in seven years.

The Eagles defense was led by end Reggie White's 2½ sacks and constant harrying of Giants quarterback Phil Simms by tackle Jerome Brown and end Clyde Simmons.

The Giants took a 3-0 lead 8:32 into the game on a 47-yard field goal by Raul Allegre. The drive to a first down at the Philadelphia 32 was triggered by a pair of 16-yard completions from Simms to tight end Mark Bavaro.

The Eagles went ahead 7-3 with 9:28 left in the second period on a 12-play, 80-yard drive, capped by Cunningham's 4-yard pass to Jimmie Giles. Cunningham completed eight passes in the drive, including 12 yards to Keith Byars and 19- and 17-yard throws to Cris Carter.

The Giants then drove to a first down at the Eagles' 18, but Simms was intercepted and Philadelphia took over at its 7. Cunningham directed an 11-play, 93-yard drive, capped by a 4-yard touchdown pass to Byars to make it 14-3 with 25 seconds left in the half.

The Eagles made it 17-3 on their first series of the second half as Luis Zendejas hit a 37-yard field goal. Cunningham completed passes of 34 and 12 yards, and Anthony Toney ran 17 to move the ball to the Giants' 10.

The Giants cut it to 17-6 on a 22-yard field goal by Allegre with 4:01 left in the third period. New York drove 93 yards on six plays, including pass completions of 14 and 38 yards to Lionel Manuel, to set up the field goal.

The Giants got within 17-6 on a 38-yard touchdown from Simms to Zeke Mowatt in the fourth period. New York kept a nine-play, 75-yard drive alive by inches on a gambling, fourth-and-1 run by Joe Morris at the Giants' 46. Morris appeared to be stopped short of the first down, but made it by inches.

New York's last chance to pull the game out came with 2:22 left, when Simms hit Bavaro on the numbers at the Eagles' 8-yard line on fourth-and-10. But the tight end dropped the ball.

Simms connected on 19 of 39 passes for 324 yards and one touchdown.

When the Eagles took possession Cunningham completed a pass to Carter at the Eagles' 35. Carter outran the Giants to score.

"I never thought it could happen to me" — I think I hear that phrase more often than any other," said Karla Miller, director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. "People say, 'I never hear about it doesn't happen around here.'"

But statistics show that this act of violence does happen here. From July 1987 through June 1988 there were 52 Iowa City-area rapes reported to the R.V.A.P. The number of actual rapes committed during that time is not reflected by the statistic, Miller said.

A national survey of college students found that only 10 percent of the victims reported their assault to the police, said Aileen Adams

In what organizers called a "low-key" event, about 20 people gathered Tuesday on the Peacock Crest for National Coming Out Day.

The event was sponsored by the UI Gay Peoples' Union and Lesbian Alliance to commemorate the 1987 march on Washington for lesbian and gay rights.

Many of the UI students at a rally participated in last year's Washington, D.C., march which 650,000 lesbians, gay, bisexuals and their supporters advocated gay and lesbian rights.

The National March on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights made seven demands, but none of them have been acted upon.

Demands made by the lesbian and gay rights supporters in the legal recognition of lesbian and gay relationships, the repeal of laws prohibiting sodomy between consenting adults, increases in funding for education, research and public care.

As a reminder that gay and lesbians exist within the community, participants were encouraged to discuss acceptance of homosexuality and verbalize their personal feelings to other UI Gay Peoples' Union members.

AIDS activists faster drug

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP)—Hundreds of demonstrators demanding easier access to experimental drugs for people with AIDS, blocked entrances to the Drug Administration's headquarters Tuesday, prompting police to close the building and arrest protesters.

Vito Russo, a New York City man who said he was diagnosed with AIDS in 1985, said the demonstrators did not want the Food and Drug Administration to stop testing drugs but to speed up the process and make AIDS drugs available as soon as it is determined they are safe — rather than waiting to judge their effectiveness as well.

"The side effect of AIDS is death," Russo said.

Montgomery County police officers of them wearing clear plastic surgical gloves, arrested and charged 175 demonstrators for blocking entrances to the building. A protester was arrested.
