Regents will vote on laser center plans

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

UI administrators will request final approval for the construction of the $25.1 million UI Center for Laser Science and Engineering from the state Board of Regents during its Dubuque meeting today and Thursday.

The building's construction will require more than $25,000 annual support from state appropriations, according to regents' documents. All centers and institutes requiring this amount of state support are required to receive the board's approval.

If the board approves the facility's construction, it will refer the issue to the Interinstitutional Committee on Educational Coordination for review and recommendation.

The ground-breaking ceremony for the laser facility is scheduled for Nov. 9. The facility will be located north of the Union, a present site of a parking lot.

The laser center will focus on laser and optoelectronic microtechnology, and, according to a UI report, will be unique "in its ability to use commercially available technology and new advanced in-house laser and optoelectronic capabilities to make rapid and important advances in both research and industrial technology."

The regents will also receive the official fall 1988 enrollment count for the three regents' institutions. At the UI, enrollment has increased 0.3 percent this fall, an increase of 97 students.

At the University of Northern Iowa, 41 additional students enrolled this semester, an increase of 0.4 percent. At Iowa State University, enrollment decreased by 1 percent, or 259 students, according to regents' documents.

Non-resident enrollment at the UI has dropped 0.7 percent this fall.

The total out-of-state enrollment at the three regents' institutions is 24.6 percent of total number of students enrolled. This represents a decrease from 25.2 percent in the fall of 1987.

The National Center for Education Statistics has estimated that higher education enrollment may increase nationally by less than 1 percent over last year's total.

At the Dubuque meeting, the board will also receive a progress report on the organizational audit of state institutions.

The audit studies will include program reviews to search for unnecessary duplication, reviews of financial and operational management and assessments of human resources.

The audit studies are progressing, but there have been some postponements in presenting some of the final project reports, according to regents' documents.

Proposal aims to lower loan defaults

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

A new proposal that goes before Congress after the upcoming election may help decrease the number of student loan defaults, local experts say.

Under proposed regulations, if an institution had default rates in excess of 20 percent, the U.S. secretary of education could start limitation, suspension and termination of the loans involved.

The bill comes just in time to meet the mounting cost of defaults, which is expected to reach $1.6 billion next year. This amount is only half of what the government now spends annually on Stafford Loans — formerly called Guaranteed Student Loans — the major source of government funding to students.

"As far as defaults are concerned, we're seeing the tip of the iceberg now," said Susan Phillips, UI vice president for finance and university services. "Those who are going to college now are borrowing much more than in previous years."

The UI, which has a 5-percent default rate, will not be affected much by the major regulation on the congressional bill, Phillips said. However, the UI loan system will be changed drastically by another aspect of the new legislation, which calls for exit and entrance interviews for all students requesting loans.

The interviews are designed to be a form of long-term counseling, which would give students information about the cost and responsibilities of repaying loans. Phillips believes the counseling would allow students to answer practical questions that may help them avoid loan defaults in the future.

"I think of it as a form of reality management," she said. "It will probably keep a lot of students from leaving college with huge debts on their heads."

One important aspect of the bill that has been ignored is providing manpower for the interviews, said Mark Warner, director of the UI financial aid office. The bill would require employees to conduct personal one-on-one interviews with 8,000 students needing financial assistance.

"We would need four full-time and four part-time people to conduct all the work that would be needed," Warner said. Currently, the office only has two employees that would be able to handle the necessary interviews.

Warner also said although the financial aid office is eager to cooperate in every way possible, it is wrong for the Department of Education to pass legislation that can't be implemented.

"I'm frustrated with people passing bills who don't understand the long-term implications," said Phillips.

Phillips and Warner both agree the proposal puts too much responsibility on the schools, rather than the lending institutions. Since the students are actually borrowing money from the lenders, both of them believe it is the lender's responsibility to provide the exit and entrance interviews.

Warner thinks there should be a compromise, wherein the larger universities would provide written information and leave personal meetings to the banks.

The bill goes before Congress in March and will be one of the first vital decisions made by the new president.

"No matter who gets elected, the default situation will be an issue," said Phillips. "Unfortunately, I think it will get worse instead of better."

Regents consider student health fee

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

At their monthly meeting in Dubuque the state Board of Regents today will consider a proposal that would subtract $64 from UI students' tuition for a mandatory health fee.

Board Executive Secretary R. Wayne Richey's plan recommends that $64 a year from each student's tuition be placed into a separate student health account.

The tuition fee and funds earmarked for the UI Student Health Service from the General University Education Fund would form a separate "enterprise fund," according to the recommendation.

"I proposed it to get the student health out of the general operating budget of the university," Richey said.

One million dollars set aside for student health by the general university fund and $400,000 for deficit funding would be part of the proposed enterprise fund, Richey said.

Richey said the plan will not affect the total tuition and fees paid by UI students, adding that the regents do not want a fee increase.

"Several regents have expressed concern about adding to the student fees specifically for this increase," he said.

Resident undergraduates would still pay for costs incurred through visits to student health under the plan.

The previous proposal, which recommended converting student health funding into an additional mandatory student fee, drew protests from student government leaders.

The initial mandatory health fee recommended students pay $70 a year with all but $15.22 coming from a tuition increase.

UI Collegiate Associations Council Executive Associate Chris Anderson will speak to the board about the mandatory health fee during the Dubuque meeting.

"I guess we're happy with that (Richey's proposal) because our immediate concern was that it was going to be an increase of tuition that was incurred in a sneaky way," Anderson said.

UI Students now pay $15.22 per year in mandatory fees to support health care, one of the lowest healthcare charges in the Big Ten. Students at The University of Illinois pay $184 for health care each year, earning the distinction for the highest Big Ten health fee.

Melinda Hess, UI student senate president, said the proposal

R. Wayne Richey

"I proposed it to get the student health out of the general operating budget of the university." — R. Wayne Richey, regents executive secretary showed the regents are aware of cost factors that affect students.

"I think that's good news from the student's standpoint," Hess said.

CAC President Gordon Fischer said he was pleased with the new proposal but will attend the meeting to protest the tuition increase.

The board has proposed a 7- to 9-percent tuition increase for resident and non-resident students, respectively.

"It's a fairly large increase and represents a shift away from the state to the backs of students. We're real concerned about that," Fischer said.

Fischer will present figures to the board demonstrating how the amount students paid in tuition has increased while the amount that the state paid decreased.

Tuition comprised 18.31 percent and state appropriations 75.64 percent of the university general operating budget in 1979-1980.

Currently, tuition subsidizes 29.09 percent and state appropriations subsidize 64.85 percent of the budget.

Fischer said per capita income and financial aid has not kept pace with rising tuition.

Soviets eye INF missile destruction

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Eleven Soviet inspectors watched Tuesday as U.S. military personnel using handheld power saws began the historic destruction of Air Force cruise missiles under the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty.

Led by Army Major Gen. Vladimir Medvedev, the Soviets arrived at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base to watch 41 ground-launched cruise missiles, 41 protective canisters for the mobile weapons and seven transporter erector launchers be cut in half over the next few days.

"The INF treaty is one of the most critical steps in the direction of ending the Cold War," Medvedev said after the destruction started. "What we saw today was a critical step in that direction."

The Soviets, who flew from Travis Air Force Base near San Francisco aboard an Air Force C-141 Starlifter, were met by a U.S. delegation headed by Brig. Gen. Roland Lajoie, director of the Defense Department's On-Site Inspection Agency.

"What we saw today should gen-

"The INF treaty is one of the most critical steps in the direction of ending the Cold War." — Soviet Army Major Gen. Vladimir Medvedev erate more confidence and predictability in our relations," Lajoie told reporters after the first missile was destroyed.

The destruction started with several Air Force personnel cutting into a missile and an aluminum canister with handheld power saws. The missile was a 21-foot device built in 1986 by the McDonnell-Douglas Astronautics Co., flight-tested at the Army's Douglas Proving Ground in Utah and deployed at an Air Force station in Sicily before being shipped to Davis-Monthan in February.

Soviet inspectors and U.S. personnel sat on nearby bleachers as they watched the work, which produced loud noise and acrid smells as the saws cut through into metal. Fire extinguishers were positioned near the workers.

Also slated for destruction was a 56-foot, 78,000-pound launcher.

Nuclear warheads, fuel and guidance-related equipment have been removed from each weapon, and the warheads have been returned to the Department of Energy, which stores American nuclear weapons, said Capt. Kendall Pease, an OSIA spokesman.

Soviet inspectors have made two previous visits to the United States under the treaty, once in July and again in August. They are being escorted during their stay by 22 officials from Davis-Monthan and the OSIA.

A total of 443 intermediate-range cruise missiles deployed in Great Britain and Europe are scheduled for destruction, all within the first three years of the treaty.

Signed last December by President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, the treaty also calls for elimination of 169 shorter-range Pershing I-A and 234 Pershing II intermediate-range missiles that the Army has deployed in West Germany.

The treaty requires elimination of all land-based nuclear missiles with ranges of 300 to 3,000 miles. The cruise missiles have a range of about 1,500 miles.

The warheads are not included in the destruction process, which Air Force Lt. Col. Donald Black said specifies lengthwise cuts through the missiles and cutting the launchers in half.

"The treaty does not eliminate the warheads," Pease said. "It eliminates the ability to deliver the warheads."

He said implementation of the treaty is "a confidence-builder on both sides and an important first step."

Peace Corps continues to thrive

By John Bartenhagen
The Daily Iowan

Since the inception of the Peace Corps more than 27 years ago, the organization has been seen by some as a refuge for the young, the idealistic or the undecided.

And with a nationwide trend toward conservatism and a greater emphasis among college graduates upon financial security, Jim Spevak, UI campus Peace Corps coordinator, would appear to be fighting a losing battle.

But Spevak and Griffen Jack, a trainer for Peace Corps volunteers, say that's not the case.

Between 20 and 30 UI graduates are currently volunteering overseas, Spevak said. The UI has produced more volunteers — 500 — than any academic institution within the four-state Peace Corps region that includes Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. The UI ranks 28th nationally among all academic institutions in terms of graduates that have participated in the Peace Corps.

While Jack acknowledged the shift in college students' ideologies, she said other factors are playing a role in maintaining the level of overseas volunteers.

"I think although campuses are becoming more conservative, the economy is stronger and people are in a position where they can think more about social plans," Jack said. "I think there is an increased global awareness — people are more aware of issues overseas."

Another factor affecting the number of volunteers is a change in students' perception of the benefits of a two-year tour of duty in the Peace Corps, Spevak said.

"Part of it is precisely that the Peace Corps is a short-term career choice," he said. "People look at it as an experience they might not get once they begin a career. It's the whole notion of the challenge — that they're doing things that aren't always structured — that is

Proposals improve, expand 911 service

By Kathleen Brill
 The Daily Iowan

A call for help is as easy as nine, one, one for Iowa City residents. But not all areas of Johnson County have access to the 911 emergency number. Countywide access with 911 is being planned, but another proposal for a joint communications facility to handle emergency calls is under dispute by city and county officials.

Establishing an Enhanced 911 system could prove costly for individual emergency services to install, and a variety of proposals for a more cost-efficient joint communications center were made by city and county officials during an ad hoc meeting on Sept. 19.

Concerns over turf complicated the discussion between the Sheriff's department and the Iowa City Police and Fire departments.

All three departments favor establishing a communications center, but they don't agree on who should supervise and where to house the facility.

Sheriff John Hughes said the center should be located in and controlled by the Sheriff's Department. "It's the only thing that makes good common sense," he said.

The final position of the Sheriff's Department will be postponed until the new sheriff is elected in November, Hughes said.

"I think that's kind of the easy way out," Bob Vevera, Republican candidate for sheriff, said.

"Apparently, the sheriff's office has already made a determination without reviewing alternatives with other participants... I fail to understand how any single department can make a decision with such far-reaching effects as this one entirely on its own. This is yet another example of the non-accessibility of the Sheriff's Department," Vevera said.

Hughes said the sheriff's department is more suited to house an emergency communications center. The department currently provides communication services to numerous local and regional emergency and law enforcement departments. Some of these include local hospitals, volunteer fire departments and criminal justice agencies.

"Iowa City has serious problems and is in need of an upgrade of their communication facility in one form or another, while ours is one of the finest in the state," Hughes said in letter Iowa City Manager Stephen Atkins.

Democratic candidate Bob Carpenter could not be reached for comment.

The fire department said the center ought to be under the supervision of a panel consisting of representatives from each of the agencies using the system. "Whenever you have one organization that's in control, there's (an opportunity) for them to treat their organization as better than others," Fire Chief Larry Donner said.

Establishing a standard operating procedure for different types of emergencies should be done under the authority of each agency that applies to the situation, Donner said.

For example, when a fire department, an ambulance service and the Sheriff's Department are sent to the same emergency, all may try to contact the communications center simultaneously. The dispatcher must decide the priority of each department when relaying information.

Donner said avoiding the appearance of favoritism during radio communication is crucial to serving the community effectively.

"To avoid that perception you put it under (the control of) a joint users group," Donner said.

The Enhanced 911 service is a computer-driven system that can tell the caller's telephone number and location. The call will also be routed automatically to the appropriate dispatcher.

"It just facilitates better communication," Iowa City police officer Mike Goldberg said.

Maintaining the computer hardware and updating its data base would be costly for each department to handle individually, Goldberg said.

University Security has its own internal dispatching system, and emergency calls may be made by dialing 9-911.

UI yearbook faces extinction

By Kim Ordway

Special to The Daily Iowan

The UI yearbook is created especially for UI students, but in the past 10 years, low sales and negative perceptions have diminished its reputation.

"The yearbook was a document that was created to save memories and capture the spirit of the UI," said Phil Thomas, the 1988-89 yearbook editor. "It is a student-designed publication built especially for students currently in school. The yearbook is in danger of extinction unless more students start to realize the importance of the yearbook as a memory of college life."

Only about 3,000 UI students purchase yearbooks annually, with the majority of the books purchased by seniors. According to Thomas, this threatens the continued existence of the yearbook.

"There really is no reason to put time and money into a book for students that they do not want and do not buy," Thomas said.

The lack of attention has hurt the reputation of the yearbook staff, but Thomas said the yearbook annually attracts talented staff members.

"We have a very talented staff this year as well as in past years," Thomas said. "The problem lies not with the quality of the book but with the reputation it holds."

According to some UI students, part of the yearbook's negative reputation stems from distribution and marketing.

"It seems like I have been waiting forever for my yearbook," said UI junior Wendy Wolken. "I almost forgot that I ordered one."

Thomas said slow distribution is a problem that cannot be completely remedied.

"We want to capture all the events of the year, from baseball games to graduation," he said. "It takes at least four months from the last event covered to get the book out to the students."

However, Thomas said better organization by the staff could improve distribution speed somewhat.

"We are going to concentrate on making deadlines with quality stories reflecting all parts of the university," Thomas said.

Improvement of the reputation of the yearbook can only happen by destroying some lingering myths, Thomas said. Many students believe the yearbook caters only to sports stars and student leaders, an image that yearbook staffers want to erase.

Sylvia Rodgers, the yearbook's photo editor, said she would like every student to be a part of the yearbook and welcomes picture donations.

"The crazier the photo, the better," Rodgers said. "The only way we can accurately depict student life is with feedback from the students."

Thomas said the yearbook staff plans to capitalize on the yearbook's longevity to increase sales and popularity. The UI yearbook was first published in 1890. This year's edition will focus on tradition, including a special feature on Hayden Fry and his decennial anniversary with the Hawkeye football team.

That tradition has resulted in alumni and other supporters keeping the yearbook alive even when student interest was diminishing, Thomas said. In 1972 the yearbook folded for financial reasons, but was reinstated with a $500 budget through alumni support. Money from alumni is still contributed to the yearbook budget through the UI Alumni Center.

In order to provide physical and moral support to the yearbook staff, a six-member board of directors has been formed.

Local, national leaders call UI voters to action

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Leaders at the university, city and national levels gathered Tuesday for a voter-participation press conference that UI Student Senate President Melinda Hess called a "non-partisan voter call to action."

Iowa City Mayor John McDonald and U.S. Student Association (USSA) Vice President Julianne Marley were among seven speakers urging students to exercise their right to vote and to back candidates who are supportive of higher education.

"I see a general apathy but particularly apathy among college students," said Christine Grant, UI director of women's intercollegiate athletics. "I can't believe that the student body doesn't have a vested interest in things like 'Star Wars' and peace. That's your future."

McDonald said a possible cause of voter indifference is that "maybe people really and truly feel that they don't make a difference. But you really make a mistake when you say there's nothing you can do."

"There's a system in place that's not perfect, but that's because there's people involved in it,"

McDonald said. "But if you want to change the system, you have to get involved and not throw stones from the outside."

Mary Jo Small, UI associate vice president for Finance and University Services, urged students to participate in political activity beyond just registering and voting.

"We owe this country participation. My father immigrated from Ireland where he was desperately poor and couldn't hold a proper job," Small said. "This has driven me on the days that I didn't feel like participating. We owe to this country what it was that our ancestors couldn't have."

Marley's stop in Iowa City was part of USSA's tour of college campuses from Washington, D.C., to California in an effort to urge voter registration and "educate students on the issues."

Marley said part of the reason students are seemingly apathetic and uncaring about political issues is that "the politicians haven't come to us."

Marley also called for a more effective voter-registration process.

"The United States is the only Western democracy that doesn't actively make an effort to register their citizens," she said. "If our process is going to be as truly democratic as it should be, we have to get more people registered."

Another topic discussed during the press conference was the need for citizens to elect officials who support financial aid and other areas of higher education.

James Lee, president of the UI Black Student Union, said that both Gov. Terry Branstad's "conservative stance on education" and President Ronald Reagan's "elitist education policies" have resulted in low-income and minority students being denied access to college educations.

"I think we should be calling for a grassroots mobilization of all citizens concerned with the future of education," Lee said.

Marley said that "voters have to be asking themselves, 'Are the candidates going to continue the trend from grants to loans?' and 'Will the candidates stop the hemorrhaging of financial aid funds?'"

The speakers also cited other education issues, including minority recruitment, education reform and teaching versus research.

Faculty committee proposed

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

A proposal for a committee on faculty development that is multifaceted and focuses on the inspiration of faculty initiatives was presented to the UI Faculty Council at its meeting Tuesday afternoon.

The formation of the committee was proposed by council member John S. Nelson, UI professor of political science and vice president of the Faculty Senate, who says it will elevate faculty concerns and issues to a university level and alleviate other committees from pressures caused by clogged agendas.

"In any good committee structure there is going to be some overlap with other committees," Nelson said, referring to the Faculty Welfare Committee. "But each committee has its clean-cut core and concentrates on that. The faculty development committee would give faculty members the ability to systematically relate with the administration and other faculty bodies."

Council President Peter Shane said he agrees with Nelson in respect to his suggestion for the need of both a faculty development and faculty welfare committee.

"The Faculty Welfare Committee has already been given quite a broad charge, and members are undertaking it seriously," Shane said. "They are promoting the non-academic side of academic development, and that is a full load. We must realize that they only meet six to 10 times in the course of a year, and adding to their agendas all the tasks that are listed in the proposal for this committee isn't reasonable."

Acting UI Vice President for Academic Affairs David Vernon said the move will "help the office of academic affairs stay on top of everything by keeping new ideas coming in and old ideas reviewed."

Designing an expanded program of faculty awards, reviewing standards and procedures for granting and evaluating tenure of faculty and fostering vigor within the faculty itself are all components of the proposed committee that Nelson believes will contribute to the growth of a strong faculty for the future.

"Building for the future has everything to do with this type of committee," he said.

But Nelson also believes development of the faculty cannot be separated from its evaluation and stressed the function of the committee to assess standards and procedures for judging faculty performance as crucial.

The proposal is scheduled to be discussed in further detail during upcoming faculty council meetings and if approved, it will move to the Faculty Senate, where members will decide if the new committee will be formed.

Experts predict rise in gas prices

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowans are seeing lower fuel prices than at the end of summer, but an industry expert predicted Tuesday costs will creep back up as Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays approach.

"We'll see an increase in travel, so prices will likely go up," said Doug Woolf, manager of safety for the American Automobile Association of Iowa.

As of Oct. 15, an AAA survey showed average fuel prices in Iowa 1 cent to 6 cents lower, depending on full service or self service and type of fuel, than a survey taken Labor Day weekend. Woolf said another survey also showed average overall driving costs to be lower in the Midwest than nationally.

In Iowa, the survey showed unleaded gasoline 3 cents a gallon more for both self service and full service. Woolf said that gap has often been narrower.

"It's been like a roller coaster the last 18 months," he said.

The survey showed the average price at self-service pumps on Oct. 15 at 92 cents for regular, down 5 cents from Labor Day; 95 cents for unleaded, down 5 cents; $1.06 for premium unleaded, down 6 cents; and 93 cents for diesel, down 3 cents.

The average price at full-service pumps in Iowa on Oct 15 was $1.06 cents for regular, down 4 cents from Labor Day; $1.10 for unleaded, down 3 cents; $1.24 for premium unleaded, down 2 cents; and $1.04 for diesel, down 1 cent.

Woolf said prices normally drop after peak driving times.

Nationally, Woolf said overall driving costs have gone up from this time last year, though costs in the Midwest remain below the national average.

"A lot of people just consider the gasoline as their costs," he said. "When we put (everything) together, the cost is much higher."

National driving costs averaged 27.5 cents per mile during the fall survey, an increase of 2.1 cents per mile from the same time last year, he said. In the Midwest, overall driving costs averaged 26.6 cents a mile. Last year's average cost for the Midwest was unavailable.

attracting a lot of people."

Jack added that more than ever before, experience overseas is essential in certain fields.

"If people are thinking about going into an international career, many international organizations are saying that you've got to have the field experience before they will even consider you for a position," she said.

"Another consideration might be someone interested in law," Jack said. "Law schools are so competitive now. If a school has applications from 2,000 history majors, 2,000 economics majors and 2,000 political science majors, they are more likely to notice the 15 people who have taken the time to get out and see something of the world while working for the Peace Corps."

But despite a network that currently includes about 6,000 volunteers, Spevak said there are common misconceptions that hinder Peace Corps recruiting efforts.

"In the 1960s and 1970s, the focus of volunteers was more to provide technical assistance," Spevak said. "Today's volunteers not only have to be interested in doing something like the Peace Corps, they also have to have skills and competence in those areas a city is asking for and they have to have the understanding to make that exchange."

"In some cases, it's like someone walking in with a computer science degree and expecting a Lindquist Center," he added. "It's just not going to work that way."

Another misconception is that there is an upper age limit for volunteers, Jack said, adding that 10 percent of volunteers are over age 50. In many ways, older volunteers are better suited for their duties because of their experience, she said.

"Younger volunteers tend to have less problems with learning languages, with cultural adaptation and with the physical taxation," she said. "On the other hand, senior volunteers bring in work experience, community experience and plus, people who have started families are much more used to a lifestyle of give and take."

The Peace Corps, founded in 1961, currently has volunteers in more than 60 countries. Applicants must be a U.S. citizen in good health and at least 18 years old. Married couples are welcome, but those with dependents are rarely accepted.

For more information on the Peace Corps, contact Jim Spevak at 453 Van Allen Hall or call 335-1175.

INF

of the equipment should be completed within about 72 hours.

The inspectors were to wear protective eye gear and ear plugs and would remain within the 600-by-300-foot fenced compound at the Aerospace Maintenance and Regeneration Center. The compound houses missiles, canisters and launchers stockpiled for destruction.

"When you have four rescue saws going, it's worse than going to the dentist," Stone said.

Black said 58 Pershing missile stages were eliminated between Sept. 8 and Friday at the Longhorn Army Ammunition Plant at Karnack, Texas. The Army is destroying at least some of the Pershings by burning their engines.

The Pershings each have two stages, and their launchers will be eliminated beginning this week in Germany, said Susan Franklin, a spokeswoman for the On-Site Inspection Agency in Washington.

As of Friday, the Soviet Union had eliminated 277 missiles under the treaty, which specifies destruction of 1,846 missiles of several types: SS-20, SS-23, SS-12, SSC-X4, SS-4 and SS-5.

The INF treaty is the first to allow on-site inspection and is viewed as a trial for the proposed Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. That pact would slash arsenals of long-range superpower nuclear weapons by 30 percent to 50 percent and call for more intricate verification procedures.

Rescuers race to free icebound whales

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Freezing temperatures and shifting winds combined to shut off all escape routes for three stranded whales Tuesday as rescuers readied for a dangerous, go-for-broke attempt to free the animals.

The effort has become a race against time, complicated by the wind, bitter cold and shifting ice. Early Tuesday, the young whales were tired. At least one may have pneumonia. Their barnacle-encrusted snouts were worn raw from grating on the jagged ice surrounding their tiny breathing holes.

At Prudhoe Bay, some 200 miles to the southeast, an Army National Guard Sky Crane helicopter was ready at midmorning to hook onto a 185-ton, ice-breaking hovercraft barge owned by VECO Inc. for the tricky journey across the desolate Arctic Ocean to reach the whales.

The whales became trapped nearly two weeks ago while migrating south to warmer waters. They were hemmed in by new ice 18 miles northeast of this Inupiat Eskimo village. The whales are in shallow water only a few hundred feet offshore.

The trip from Prudhoe Bay to Point Barrow is expected to take 25-40 hours, and crews must be careful, authorities said. If the tow cable were to snap and wrap in the helicopter rotors, it could be disastrous.

President Ronald Reagan telephoned the commander of the operation to offer his support, telling him that Americans' hearts are with you, and our prayers are also with you.

North: I was protected by exemption

WASHINGTON (AP) — The judge in the Iran-Contra case Tuesday ordered a hearing on Oliver North's claim that the National Security Council where he worked was exempt from a ban on helping arm the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

The Nov. 3 hearing scheduled by U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell will focus on defense claims that North cannot be prosecuted for conspiring with three co-defendants to illegally divert proceeds from the sale of U.S. arms to Iran to the Contras.

In a brief scheduling order, Gesell said he was particularly interested in hearing arguments on North's claim that the congressional bans on U.S. military aid to the Contras, known as the Boland amendments, did not apply to the National Security Council staff.

The judge said he also wanted to consider North's claim that the diversion of arms-sale profits wasn't illegal because the weapons sold to Iran weren't U.S. government property at the time the deals were brokered by arms dealers Richard Secord and Albert Hakim.

Secord and Hakim, co-defendants along with John Poindexter, former national security adviser also claim they owned the weapons after they purchased them from the U.S. government.

According to this argument, Secord and Hakim were legally entitled to the profits from the resale of the weapons and could distribute them however they wished.

The Associated Press

One of the three stranded California gray whales surfaces to breathe through a hole cut in the polar ice sheet off the coast of Barrow, Alaska. A rescue operation is underway, but biologists are pessimistic about the whale's survival.

"I just wanted to tell you that everybody down here, their hearts are with you, and our prayers are also with you."

Marvin King, VECO chief of operations at Prudhoe Bay, said the barge was ready to go but would not budge Tuesday. "We're up and running and ready to go. Everything is fixed, and it's flying, but something's got us tagged," he said. "It could be a half-inch rope frozen to the ground or something like that. We're checking."

"With the temperatures we get up here, you can have a two-inch strip stuck to the ground and you're not going anywhere."

He said VECO planned to use a tracked vehicle with a winch to knock the $3-million barge loose.

The helicopter cannot lift the barge, said Army National Guard spokesman Mike Haller. The Sky-cranes can only lift about 22,500 pounds, but when the barge is on its air cushion, the aircraft will be towing only about 18,000 pounds, he said.

The effort had been scheduled to begin Monday, but was delayed when it was discovered the barge needed repairs.

A National Weather Service analysis of the ice in the Point Barrow area Monday provided little hope for the animals.

A satellite photo shows the nearest open water is 200 miles to the west, in the Chukchi Sea, he said. The next ice analysis was scheduled for Wednesday.

Last week, the ice around the whales' breathing holes was so thin that biologists did not dare walk on it. By early Tuesday, the ice was 18-24 inches thick. The California gray whales, despite their size and mass, have shown no inclination to bull their way through the ice pack.

Haller said authorities were aware of the analysis but were going ahead with the attempt. "We're committed to this," Haller said. "We're going to go ahead and see what happens."

As the world watched and waited, biologists and North Slope residents worked with chain saws to keep the whales' small breathing holes open. One of the holes is 24 feet by 20 feet; the other, 24-by-10.

The population of endangered California gray whales numbers about 20,000 and has been growing at an annual average of 2.5 percent for the past decade.

— or 16,272 metric tons for the first nine months of 1987. That translates to 17,899 regular tons.

The drop in tonnage also is reflected by intelligence estimates of the dollar value of the arms received.

The Pentagon estimated the material delivered during the first nine months of this year was worth $350 million. Shipments in 1987 were worth about $42 million a month — or about $378 million for nine months.

During all of 1987, the Nicaraguans received 21,700 metric tons of arms valued at $505 million, the Defense Department estimated.

The slowdown in deliveries to the leftist Sandinistas comes at a time when American military aid to the Contra guerrillas has been cut off completely for eight months. The administration, under congressional pressure, ended its military assistance to the Contras at the end of February, three weeks before a truce and cease-fire took effect.

The truce has failed to produce a permanent peace, and skirmishes are still being reported between Sandinista forces and the rebels. Absent a major Sandinista offensive, however, President Ronald Reagan announced last week he would not attempt to win congressional approval for more lethal aid.

Soviet arms shipments to the Sandinistas have climbed steadily over the past eight years, rising from only about 1.6 metric tons in 1980 to a record 22,000 metric tons in 1986 and last year's near-record 21,700 metric tons.

At a news briefing, Howard also noted that in terms of individual shipments, there had been more port calls in Nicaragua this year by ships ferrying arms than occurred during the comparable period last year. The vessels continue to unload smaller shipments, however.

During the first nine months of the year, the Soviets and their Warsaw Pact allies shipped 13,000 metric tons — or about 14,300 regular tons — of military equipment to Nicaragua, according to Pentagon estimates released Tuesday.

By comparison, shipments of Soviet equipment during calendar year 1987 arrived at an average rate of 1,808 metric tons per month

Oliver North

Separate trials have been ordered in all four cases. North is scheduled to be tried first, but Gesell has set no trial date.

North's lawyers argue that if Congress intended the restrictions, named for Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., to apply to the NSC, it would have included them in appropriations measures to finance that White House agency.

Instead, the defense notes, the Boland amendments were part of bills that appropriated money for the CIA and the Defense Department.

Gesell also indicated he was interested in considering arguments on defense claims that North cannot be prosecuted on the three major conspiracy counts because the alleged offenses involve foreign policy matters exempt from judicial scrutiny.

North is also charged with 13 other alleged offenses, including making false statements to Congress about efforts to help the Contras and destroying documents during a 1986 investigation of the Iran-Contra affair by then-Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Soviets reduce military shipments to Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has reduced the amount and changed the types of arms it is shipping to Nicaragua, but it is too early to chart any fundamental change in Moscow's support for the Sandinista government, administration officials said Tuesday.

The arms shipments "are down in dollar value and tonnage," said Dan Howard, the Defense Department's chief spokesman. "But we don't necessarily conclude that this means the Soviets are backing off from their support for Nicaragua."

"Apparently, it's a move from the supplying of heavy equipment — everything from bulldozers to tanks to artillery — to providing them more sustainability, like ammunition supplies," Howard added. "You can draw your own conclusions about what that is about. Certainly, the war-fighting capability (of Nicaragua) has not gone down."

At a news briefing, Howard also noted that in terms of individual shipments, there had been more port calls in Nicaragua this year by ships ferrying arms than occurred during the comparable period last year. The vessels continue to unload smaller shipments, however.

Hurricane cuts
BOGOTA, Colombia — Its unusual path through the region unleashed floods in the north, dead, missing or injured. Joan was headed for the coast, 500 miles north of Bogota, at 65 mph before heading for Honduras.

In Costa Rica, officials said, a town of about 100 people was evacuated. In the northern part of the country, at least 38 were missing, government officials said.

Korean man ju
SEOUL, South Korea — An anti-American slogan on a campus building Tuesday led to police in anti-government protests.

Officials at Seoul's Yonsei University said they identified him as a student named Tae-woo and then he was hospitalized with a head injury. Ritualistic suicide is a common form of protest among dissidents in South Korea.

Iranians claim
NICOSIA, Cyprus — A Persian Gulf war coalition spokesman said it was not clear if the Tehran radio quoted the Iranian parliament and military officials as saying "probability exists" that the country would be invaded again.

He said Iran could be a source of peace, despite a recent Aug. 20, 1988, report that Rafsanjani said Iran did not describe it.

President Saddam Hussein said his country had developed a nuclear device.

Senate votes to
WASHINGTON — The Senate Tuesday voted to allow the use of sewage sludge in the construction of roads.

The measure, passed by a 54-42 vote, sets a deadline for dumping sludge in New York and New Jersey.

The bill would prohibit the use of prohibitively expensive alternatives to using sludge, or face fines and penalties for a principal sponsor of the bill.

The measure reconvened the Senate in August to vote on a House vote on Wednesday, with President Bush vetoing the bill.

Some 8 million tons of sludge are stored at sites across the country, closed a site just 12 miles from New York City.

Poll: lower income
WASHINGTON — A survey by the U.S. Census Bureau shows more generous with their upper income groups released Tuesday.

"Contrary to popular opinion," the survey described as generous, independent Sector, a volunteer organization, said.

"Giving and volunteering are heart-warming generalizations," the survey noted the results of the survey with 2,775 Americans.

O'Connell told a news conference that the survey with incomes below $10,000 gave 2.5 percent their incomes to charity. $30,000 gave 2.5 percent and $75,000 gave 1 percent. $100,000 donated 1 percent. $100,000 gave 2.1 percent.

Overall, the survey showed that 45 percent volunteered for causes and organizations. The margin of error was plus or minus 1.5 percent.

These figures translate to 19.5 billion hours worth of volunteer work a year, O'Connell said.

Woman embezz
KALAMAZOO, Mich. — A woman was sentenced to 30 days in jail for embezzling money from a wedding to a sheriff's deputy.

Kelly Susan Horton, 28, was sentenced to 30 days in jail for embezzling $10,000 from the National Bank in Plainfield, Mich. Horton used the money to pay for a vacation.

District Judge James J. Conroy ordered full restitution to her. "This isn't the worst I've seen," he said.

"You say that what or better," Enslin said. "You say that what or better," Enslin said. "You say that what or better," Enslin said.

Because Horton's husband is a sheriff's deputy, she was sentenced to jail in Kent County Jail.

Hurricane cuts through southern Caribbean

BOGOTA, Colombia — Hurricane Joan, puzzling forecasters with its unusual path through the southern Caribbean Tuesday, unleashed floods in northern Colombia that left about 50 people dead, missing or injured, officials said.

Joan was headed toward the Colombian island resort of San Andres, 500 miles north of the Colombian coast. On Monday, the storm buffeted northern Colombia with heavy rains and winds of 65 mph before heading north toward Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Honduras.

In Costa Rica, officials said the storm was headed for Puerto Limon, a town of about 8,000 people 105 miles southeast of the capital, San Jose. The officials said they were considering an evacuation.

In the northern Colombian town of Carmen de Bolivar, 360 miles of Bogota, at least three people were killed Monday and about 38 were missing, Victor Leon Mendoza of the Bolivar state government said.

Korean man jumps 4 floors in anti-U.S. protest

SEOUL, South Korea — A man wearing a headband with anti-American slogans jumped from the fourth-floor window of a campus building Tuesday, and 400 students clashed with riot police in anti-government protests.

Officials at Seoul's Yonsei University said the man wrapped himself in a large South Korean national flag, shouted slogans against the United States and the government of President Roh Tae-woo and then jumped.

They identified him as Kim Kyong-ku, 32, a laborer and said he was hospitalized with two broken legs.

Ritualistic suicide is often used by radical students and dissidents in South Korea to dramatize their cause.

Iranians claim to have mystery weapon

NICOSIA, Cyprus — An Iranian leader said Tuesday that the Persian Gulf war could resume, but that Iran has a new mystery weapon with which to deter Iraq from resuming attacks on cities.

Tehran radio quoted Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian parliament and military commander-in-chief, as saying the "probability exists" that the 8-year-old war with Iraq could break out again.

He said Iran considers itself "neither in a state of war nor a state of peace," despite a U.N.-sponsored cease-fire that took effect Aug. 20.

Rafsanjani said Iran had acquired a "device" to deter Iraq, but did not describe it.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq claimed on Sept. 27 that his country had developed a weapon only two other countries possessed. He did not elaborate but said it was not a chemical device.

Senate votes to ban ocean sewage dumping

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Tuesday voted to ban disposal of sewage sludge in the Atlantic Ocean after 1991.

The measure, passed by voice vote, would set a Dec. 31, 1991, deadline for dumping in the Atlantic by nine authorities in New York and New Jersey.

The bill would impose stiff fines aimed at making the dumping prohibitively expensive and use penalty fees to pay for alternatives.

"Today's action means that ocean dumpers have to find alternatives to using the sea as the world's biggest garbage pail, or face fines and penalties," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., a principal sponsor of the legislation.

The measure reconciles differing sludge-dumping bills passed by the Senate in August and by the House earlier this month.

A House vote on the compromise could come as soon as Wednesday, with President Ronald Reagan then expected to sign the bill.

Some 8 million tons of sludge a year are dumped by the nine agencies at a site about 106 miles east of New Jersey. Congress closed a site just 12 miles offshore in 1987.

Poll: lower income Americans most generous

WASHINGTON — Americans of low and moderate incomes are more generous with their financial contributions and time than their upper income counterparts, according to a Gallup poll released Tuesday.

"Contrary to popular opinion, the well-to-do in America cannot be described as generous," said Brian O'Connell, president of the Independent Sector, a coalition of 650 corporate, foundation and volunteer organizations that commissioned the survey by the Gallup Organization.

"Giving and volunteering in America is a stark contrast between heart-warming generosity and bone-chilling selfishness," he said, noting the results of the in-home interviews conducted last March with 2,775 Americans 18 years and older.

O'Connell told a news conference that contributing households with incomes below $10,000 gave an average of 2.8 percent of their incomes to charity, while families between $10,000 and $30,000 gave 2.5 percent. Those with incomes between $50,000 and $75,000 gave 1.5 percent; families earning $75,000 to $100,000 donated 1.7 percent, and those with incomes over $100,000 gave 2.1 percent.

Overall, the survey said seven out of 10 households in America contributed an average of $790 to charitable organizations, with 45 percent volunteering an average of 4.7 hours a week in time to causes and organizations in 1987. Independent Sector said the margin of error was plus or minus 3 percentage points.

These figures translate into 80 million people giving a total of 19.5 billion hours with a dollar value of time contributed at $150 billion, O'Connell said.

Woman embezzles $5,000 to outdo sister

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — A 26-year-old woman has been sentenced to 30 days in jail for embezzling almost $5,000 to pay for her wedding to a sheriff's deputy because she "wanted to look better than her sister did."

Kelly Susan Horton was sentenced Monday after pleading guilty Aug. 28 to embezzling $4,870 from what was then American National Bank in Plainwell, where she worked as a teller. Horton used the money to pay for her wedding in August 1985, according to court records.

District Judge Richard Ensen also ordered Horton to pay full restitution to her creditors.

"This isn't the worst crime I've ever seen," Ensen said, "but it's the shallowest."

"You say that what you wanted was to look as good as your sister or better," Ensen said. "Your father had already contributed money that he probably did not have, and you repaid that kindness by stealing."

Because Horton's husband, Ken Horton, is an Allegan County sheriff's deputy, she will serve her sentence in the Kalamazoo or Kent County Jail.

We have witnessed, through the combined efforts of the Republican party and their nominees for president and vice president, one of the most outrageous displays of negative campaigning ever seen in the history of national politics.

Nation's factories boom on export sales

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's factories are booming thanks to strong export sales, but a slight slowdown late this summer has left manufacturers cautious about next year, the Federal Reserve Board said Tuesday.

"Manufacturers are becoming less optimistic about coming months" despite current strength, the Federal Reserve said in a review of the economy based on reports from its 12 regional banks.

The report lends new weight to the prevailing view of economists that the Fed will refrain from pushing interest rates higher at least until after the Nov. 8 elections and possibly until early next year.

"Virtually every district indicates continuing strength or expansion in the industrial sector. Many cite rising exports as a primary source of demand," said the Fed report, known internally as the "tan book."

The expansion encompasses a wide range of industries, including chemicals, paper and pulp, steel, autos and trucks and machinery, it said.

However, it added, "several districts say a slight slowdown became evident in late summer and that manufacturers, foreseeing a leveling-off of activity through the first half of 1989, have become very cautious."

The report will be used as a starting point for discussions when Fed policymakers gather on Nov. 1 to map monetary strategy.

Federal regulators approve experimental trading-halt plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal regulators announced approval Tuesday of an experimental plan for coordinated trading halts — or circuit breakers — in stock and futures markets during steep price dives.

The plan, proposed by the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, provides for a one-hour trading halt across markets when the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks plunges by 250 points or more from the previous day's closing.

It calls for a two-hour halt when the Dow falls by 400 points. The Securities and Exchange Commission, which regulates the stock markets, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, which oversees futures exchanges, approved the one-year experiment on the eve of the first anniversary of the Oct. 19, 1987 stock crash.

The New York Stock Exchange is the nation's largest stock market and the Chicago Mercantile Exchange is the largest market for trading stock index futures. Other markets are joining in the plan.

Government approval is effective immediately. It is up to the exchanges to decide when the circuit-breaker plan begins.

During the 1987 crash, the Dow plunged a record 508 points, wiping out $500 billion in paper wealth in a single day.

Israeli court bans anti-Arab official from election, benefiting Shamir

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's supreme court barred U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane on Tuesday from running in the Nov. 1 election, calling his anti-Arab Kach movement racist.

The unanimous ruling was expected to benefit the right-wing Likud bloc of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in its close race with the left-leaning Labor Party.

An angry Kahane, speaking at a news conference, urged backers to boycott the vote. One agitated activist tore up his Israeli identification card needed for voting, scuffled with bystanders and was dragged out of the room.

The court also ruled the Progressive List for Peace, which calls for an independent Palestinian state, could compete in the elections. The Likud had demanded the party's ouster for allegedly seeking to destroy Israel's Jewish character.

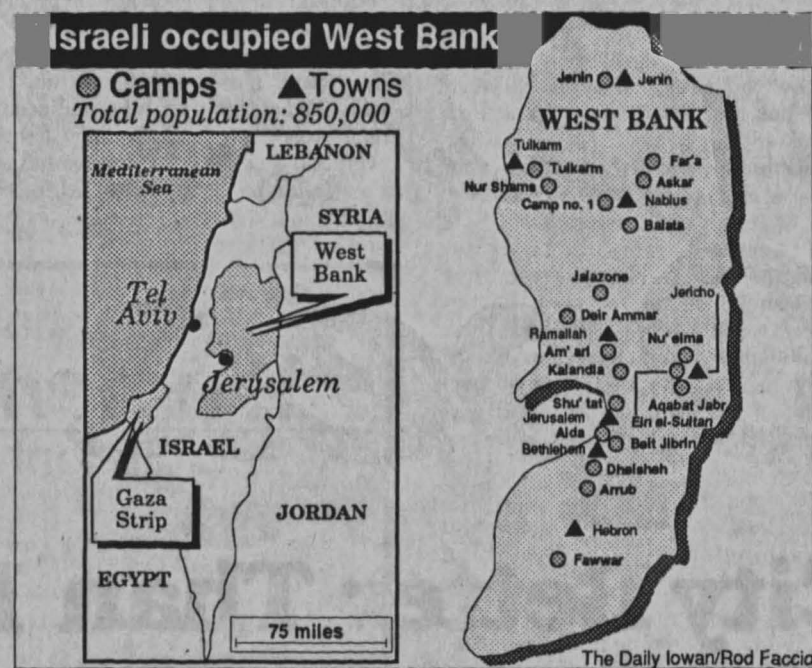

In its unanimous ruling on Kahane, the court found that Kahane incites "racism and negates the democratic character of the state."

The 56-year-old, Brooklyn, N.Y.-born founder of the militant Jewish Defense League demands the ouster of all Arabs from Israeli-held territory and a ban on Jewish-Arab marriages. The movement's symbol is a clenched fist inside a Star of David.

The court ruled on a Kach appeal against a decision by the Central Elections Committee to bar the movement from the elections. The decision was based on a 1985 law banning parties advocating racism and opposing Israel's Jewish or democratic character.

But Kahane said there was a "contradiction between Zionism and democracy," noting that Israel's Law of Return discriminates against non-Jews by granting automatic citizenship only to Jews.

He spoke during a chaotic news

conference that was repeatedly interrupted by supporters chanting "Kahane, king of Israel."

Kahane urged supporters to boycott the elections, saying he wanted to punish Likud, which had joined Labor in supporting Kach's ouster from the race.

Kahane won a seat in the 120-member Parliament in 1984 after three failed attempts.

Analysts said many Kach supporters would probably ignore the boycott call and support the extreme right-wing parties Tsomet and Mokedet instead of Likud.

Shamir said Tuesday his party would not make a special appeal to Kach voters. But even if potential Kach voters switch to other right-wing parties, Likud would benefit because potential coalition partners would be strengthened.

The Supreme Court, meanwhile, rejected demands by Likud and the right-wing Tehiya Party that the Progressive List for Peace should be barred from the election because it allegedly seeks to destroy Israel's Jewish character by negotiating with the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Likud and Tehiya first challenged the PLP in the Elections Committee and then took their case to the Supreme Court.

Also Tuesday, Shamir told reporters that the struggle of Palestinians to achieve independence was "useless" and that there would never be a Palestinian state.

Likud's campaign platform, published Tuesday, suggested that Shamir would annex the occupied territories if elected.

"Israel has a right and a claim to sovereignty over Judea, Samaria and the Gaza District," the platform read, using the biblical names for the West Bank. "Israel will raise this claim and act toward implementing this right."

Israelis fire on children, U.S. photographer

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli troops firing plastic bullets killed two Palestinians — a teen-ager and a 5-year-old boy — and wounded a U.S. journalist during clashes Tuesday in the occupied West Bank, Arab hospital officials said.

An army spokesperson confirmed the deaths and said five people had plastic-bullet wounds, including American photographer Neal Cassidy — the first foreign journalist shot in the 10-month Palestinian uprising over Israeli rule in the occupied lands.

Hospital officials said six people were wounded. The deaths raised to 301 the number of Palestinians killed since Arabs launched the uprising Dec. 8. Six Israelis also have died.

Cassidy, 37, of Oakland, Calif., was hit in the right leg while photographing a demonstration in the Nablus market area.

The spokesman, who cannot be identified under military regulations, said Cassidy was close to the rioters and "endangered himself" by being in the area, which was closed to outsiders under military orders.

Cassidy was covering the Nablus protest for Frontline, a biweekly newspaper published in Oakland. He also works for Impact Visuals, a photo agency in New York.

Frontline writer Phyllis Bennis said Cassidy was standing in the Nablus market "near a group of young men chanting and banging on doors." She said a group of Israeli soldiers was nearby.

Officials at the Government Press Office in Jerusalem said they had no record of Cassidy being accredited to work in Israel.

Cassidy plans to file a formal complaint with the U.S. Consulate after his return to Jerusalem, Bennis said.

East Germans agree to compensate Jews for Nazi atrocities

BERLIN (AP) — The president of the World Jewish Congress said Tuesday the East Germans have agreed to accept moral responsibility and pay reparations for the Nazi extermination of 6 million Jews, but he would not give specifics.

Edgar Bronfman also said he hoped for better relations between East Germany and Israel, which have never recognized each other diplomatically. "I have been given the understanding that serious consideration is being given to some renewal of relationship," he said.

Bronfman, 59, spoke to reporters at the end of a three-day visit to East Germany that included meetings with Erich Honecker, president and Communist Party chief, Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer, and other officials. Before meeting Honecker, Bronfman said he expected a reparations agreement. East Germany had said it would provide unspecified "humanitarian aid" to Holocaust victims.

Bronfman was asked about a statement by Heinz Galinski, a West German Jewish leader, that East Germany would pay up to $100 million, and replied: "The $100 million was not part of my mission."

West Germany has paid more than $48 billion to Holocaust victims and their relatives since it signed a compensation agreement with the World Jewish Congress in 1952.

Dukakis assails Bush on fiscal issues

By The Associated Press

Democrat Michael Dukakis lashed out at front-running George Bush as a man with "no convictions, no ideas and no plans" Tuesday and blamed Republican policies for last year's stock market plunge. Bush tried to contain supporters' enthusiasm over polls showing him building a large lead.

"We're not going to lighten up," the Republican presidential nominee said while campaigning in Missouri. "No votes can be taken for granted, and I'm not taking any votes for granted. I will continue to campaign as an underdog."

There was no question who was the real underdog — Dukakis. But he drew enthusiastic crowds as he campaigned through Michigan with aides battling the growing perception that Bush had taken an insurmountable lead with just three weeks until the election.

The Massachusetts governor sharpened his language as he focused on economic issues and portrayed Bush as the candidate of the wealthy.

"George Bush cares about the people on Easy Street," Dukakis said. "I care about the people on Main Street. He's on their side. I'm on your side."

"Duke, Duke, Duke," chanted the crowds.

Dukakis also brought up the huge stock market drop that occurred one year ago Wednesday.

"The trade deficit had soared," he said. "Republican policies of borrow and spend and borrow and

Michael Dukakis

spend had done the damage."

He pledged to eliminate the $150 billion trade deficit in four years by reducing the budget deficit, increasing foreign trade, investing in education and putting more emphasis on research. He said Bush wouldn't talk about his plans.

"He's got the flags and balloons but no convictions, no ideas and no plans," Dukakis said.

The Democrat's aides disputed an NBC-Wall Street Journal poll showing Bush with a 17-point lead, his largest of the campaign. They pointed instead to other polls indicating about one-half that margin.

Bush, trying to avoid overconfidence, campaigned in Fulton, Mo., and invoked the memory of Winston Churchill at the Westminster College where Churchill delivered his 1946 "Iron Curtain" speech warning of Soviet expansionism in Eastern Europe.

Bush said the demarcation between East and West is now "a rusting curtain." He said that if elected he would be wary of Soviet intentions, despite what he called more enlightened leadership under Mikhail Gorbachev.

"Now is not the time to abandon realism about what moves the Soviet Union," Bush said.

The Bush campaign began airing tough new television commercials that ridicule Dukakis and say he has "opposed virtually every defense system we developed."

The ad uses videotape of the helmeted Dukakis in the turret of an M-1 tank, a ride the Democrat took in September in an attempt to show toughness on defense issues — but that critics said made him look silly.

Dukakis spokeswoman Lorraine Voles called the ad "more distortions from the Bush campaign."

The Dukakis campaign dispatched dozens of workers from his national headquarters in Boston into the field, along with more than 1,300 new volunteers from Washington. The campaign said 60 percent of the headquarters staff was being assigned to campaign duties in target states.

Among the other volunteers are students, congressional aides and Washington attorneys taking leaves for the final three weeks of the campaign. Public polls ranged from bad to worse for Dukakis, though his aides pointed to what they said was a new Harris poll putting the gap at nine points. Barbara Winokur, a spokeswoman for Louis Harris & Associates, said Harris would release a poll Wednesday but declined to comment on its results in advance.

Bentsen slams Republicans for 'nonsense, negativism'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Democrat Lloyd Bentsen unleashed a scathing attack Tuesday on the Republicans for running a campaign that has turned the presidential election "into a carnival side show of nonsense and negativism."

"We have witnessed, through the combined efforts of the Republican party and their nominees for president and vice president, one of the most outrageous displays of negative campaigning ever seen in the history of national politics," Michael Dukakis' running mate said in a speech intended for a crowd of more than a thousand students in a UCLA auditorium. They were attending a forum on public service sponsored by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.

"The idea of citizenship, in fact, the very idea of self-government itself, is under attack," the Texas senator said. "And there is no greater violation of that trust than to turn a great national election into a carnival side show of nonsense and negativism."

"What has happened — almost without notice — is an utterly vicious onslaught of distortion and character assassination" directed at Dukakis, he said.

"They don't seem to mind if what they say is untrue," he said. "They don't seem to worry if it's misleading. They don't seem to care that what they do is downright mean. If it sounds good, say it. If it sells, package it. If it looks good, nominate it."

"We've been a little too flabbergasted sometimes to make a proper response," he said. "But I don't think we ever imagined that George Bush and the Republicans would be so willing to debate that precious currency of our democracy."

The Democrats have "taken a beating from the pundits and the pollsters" who have all but pronounced them dead, he conceded. But Bentsen, who had been promising a "give 'em hell" campaign for days, said, "We've got three weeks to go, there's a lot of work ahead, and there's no time for mourning because we intend to win."

"They don't understand the need for strong, ethical boundaries between public service and private gain," he said.

Quayle claims 'obligation' to help Bush manage change

DANVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Dan Quayle said Tuesday he feels "a special obligation" to help George Bush deal with a new generation of younger Americans and manage inevitable changes in the nation's economy.

Speaking to college students and touring farms in rural downstate Illinois, the Republican vice-presidential candidate spoke of a "powerful renewal of change" Republicans have created during the Reagan administration.

"What is on the new page is dramatic, exciting, a little scary, a world of incredible change, a world of incredible opportunity," he said. Quayle spent the day in his brightly festooned bus, occasionally blaring music from loudspeakers, cruising through what he called "the heartbeat of this country" against a backdrop of fall colors on a gloomy and chilly day.

At several stops, Quayle was greeted by knots of protesters chanting "Quayle go home" and waving signs, but he was cheered by crowds at the events.

"It is a special obligation for me — one which I feel more deeply every day — to help George Bush define the needs of a new generation of Americans, their challenges, their responses," Quayle said.

Quayle said changes are inevitable in the workplace and the economy.

Man charged with threatening Bush

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — A 21-year-old man has been charged with threatening Vice President George Bush's life by allegedly sending a letter bragging that the writer could have shot the Republican presidential candidate at a rally.

The unsigned letter, which was sent to President Ronald Reagan from Owensboro, included three photos of Bush taken as he spoke at the rally here Sept. 27. The writer claimed to have been within 50 yards of Bush while carrying a concealed .45-caliber pistol.

"I could have easily pulled the pistol out and killed him where he was," the writer said.

David Allen Russell of Owensboro appeared before U.S. Magistrate Stewart Elliott on two counts — threatening to take the life of the vice president or inflict bodily harm on him, and sending a threatening letter through the mail, according to U.S. Attorney Joseph Whittle.

He had been arrested Monday and was being held without bond at Daviess County Jail pending another hearing Thursday before Elliott.

No credibility

In a recent ad published in The Daily Iowan, hundreds of Iowa Citizens protested The Campus Review's demagogic attempts to scapegoat gays. Their point is well-taken. But another aspect of The Review also deserves attention: its unrelenting personal attacks on opponents.

Examples are abundant: For several years, The Review victimized an overweight DI staffer, running demeaning cartoons of her and referring to her as "Big Mama." And several New Wave activists — Bruce Nestor in particular — have been subjected to slanderous, highly personal attacks. Perhaps the most telling example occurred during the last gubernatorial campaign: Throughout it, The Review kept harping about the fact that Democratic candidate Lowell Junkins wears a toupee. (This is a campaign issue?)

Or consider The Review's most recent issue: It contains an anonymous piece of doggerel directed at Student Senate President Melinda Hess. It calls her a "bitch," says she's ugly, accuses her of promiscuity, and gay-baits her.

Of course, Renander and company fancy themselves as wits and their paper "irreverent," even a local version of National Lampoon. But The Review isn't funny. It's vicious, malicious, petty, and puerile. It appeals to the worst in us.

Obviously this ad hominem approach isn't necessary if the paper's true intent is to inform, persuade, or even entertain. But it's crucial to understand that The Review seeks to do far more than present the conservative point of view: It seeks to personally embarrass and humiliate its opponents with the ultimate aim of intimidating them.

Thus, despite its intellectual pretenses, The Review is in essence a thug — a brownshirt in print. As such, it is, and must remain, a pariah in our community.

Retaining women

There was good news and bad news for the UI in a report on the state of the faculty prepared for the state Board of Regents recently.

The report said that faculty resignations at the UI dropped from 97 during the 1986-87 academic year to 64 for the 1987-88 year. This means that the faculty resignations for 1987-88 were below the average number of resignations for the previous decade.

UI administration officials and faculty members were quick to credit both double-digit salary increases over three consecutive years and an improved morale among the faculty for the high retention rate.

But there was a dark side to the report that undercut its general good news — the percentage of resignations of female faculty members jumped from 24 percent to 34 percent at the UI.

The report, coming on the heels of other studies indicating that female faculty members continue to have difficulties at the UI achieving tenure, indicates there is a need for stronger measures to make female faculty members feel more comfortable at the UI.

The UI Faculty Senate has taken a step in the right direction with a committee on affirmative action to identify strategies for increasing the retention of female and minority faculty members.

The UI should support this effort as well as the efforts of the Council on the Status of Women and other groups trying to determine the problems that female faculty members still face at the university. The high rate of retention is a good sign for the UI, but the continued exodus of female faculty shows that there are still improvements that need to be made.

Saving our nation begins at Kinnick

I came up with a great merchandising suggestion over the weekend for those fine folks who market Iowa football items. How about a T-shirt that says, "I SURVIVED BEING IN KINNICK STADIUM DURING AN IOWA GAME"?

After all, if people will buy T-shirts bragging about riding on a roller coaster or skiing a dangerous mountain, there's probably a very good chance they'll also shell out money to brag about a much more frightening experience.

Watching a Hawks game while in Kinnick stadium has become the Iowa equivalent of doing time in an extremely overcrowded prison — if you're lucky, you can make it through the experience, but don't expect to enjoy yourself or escape without injury.

It didn't used to be this way. When I first came to this university five years ago, I remember football games as being a somewhat pleasant experience. Because so many people were intoxicated at the game and couldn't find their seats, everybody basically just sat where they wanted to. So you could sit by your friends, drink from a bottle filled with some appetizing combination such as tomato juice and peach schnapps, pass a few people up to the top of the stadium and have a great time.

But one day, the fine people who run this university took a look at this situation and said to themselves, "Hey, wait a minute, these students are having too much fun!"

Why was this a problem? If you don't understand, you are probably unaware of the change that has come over fun in the 1980s — it's either no longer allowed, or it costs a lot of money to have.

This is because the people who had kids during the 40s and 50s — and who now run this country — took a look at what their kids were doing at college in the 60s and 70s and said "All right, this generation is having a lot more fun than we did, but because we stupidly sent them off to Vietnam to get killed and allowed Richard Nixon to become president, we'll let them have their fun because we feel guilty. However, with the next generation we have nothing to feel guilty about, so they won't be allowed to have any fun at all."

And those people who went to college during the 60s and 70s — and who now allow their parents to run the country — said "O.K., we admit that we had too much fun when we were growing up, and as a result, all of our major rock stars died of drug overdoses and we all turned into yuppies. So we'll join our parents and make sure any kids we have won't be able to have any fun at all, so they won't make the same stupid mistakes we made when we were allowed to have fun."

So now we have a new anti-drug bill that would fine you $10,000 for possession of one marijuana cigarette, a higher drinking age, stricter drunken-driving laws, AIDS, the "just say no" campaign, labeling on rock records, Playboy magazines banned from convenience store shelves, noise ordinances, anti-pornography ordinances, new-age music, tofu, higher college tuition, lower government grants and a conservative Supreme Court.

The University of Iowa administration, wanting to be part of this general trend against having fun in the 1980s, noticed that many students were enjoying themselves during football games, thus annoying both aging baby-boomers, who were too old to have fun anymore, and their parents, who were never allowed to have fun in the first place. So, they resolved to crack down.

First, they banned kegs from the parking lot at Kinnick. Then they banned passing people up in the stadium. Then they used the marching band to drown out obscenities from the crowd. Then they banned the marching band from playing "Cocaine." Then they made sure no non-students could attend games without paying exorbitant prices for tickets. Then they banned botas. Then they made sure many students would have to go to the games with their parents by requiring that guest ticket holders be accompanied by students when entering the game.

In short, other than requiring a rosary to be said before the opening kickoff, the university did everything possible to minimize the enjoyment of watching an Iowa game.

These new rules and regulations have meant that people who go to games are now sober enough to read their ticket stubs and more likely to be upset if you're sitting in their seat. This has resulted in more people being kicked out of the seats they are sitting in, which in turn means they have to kick other people out of their seats.

Of course, if the seat which you have a ticket for is being occupied by some guy who looks like he hangs out at New Life Fitness World when he's not attending games, you can't do much about kicking him out of it. This explains the huge number of people standing in the aisles every game.

Add this to the fact that the powers who control the athletic department have made the seats in Kinnick too small for a four-year old child to squeeze into, as well as apparently selling more tickets than the stadium has a capacity for, and you begin to understand the kind of conditions calves raised to produce veal have to live in.

So why go to games anymore? Well, here else can you have the excitement of watching a game with 66,000 other fans, ranging from elderly men who complain about every call the referees make to drunken fraternity guys who feel the need to entertain the crowd with their off-key versions of "In Heaven There Is No Beer" at least 100 times per game.

But obviously, even with incentives like that, this situation regarding Kinnick cannot continue. I needn't remind Mr. Rawlings, Mr. Elliot and the other men who have control over the university that these same sort of conditions existed in stadiums throughout Germany in the late 1920s and early 1930s. As a result, Nazism was able to secure its stranglehold on the population of the country, resulting in World War II and eventually, "Hogan's Heroes."

Such a dark occurrence must not be allowed to repeat itself. Allowing a student to bring in a bottle filled with Everclear and milk may seem to some like a threat to the security of the stadium. But I'm sure we can all agree, it is a small price to pay for the security of our great nation.

Vote Dukakis

To the Editor:

It is time to set the record straight. While the Republicans hide behind the flag and throw poisoned darts at their opponents, the Democrats have come forth with programs that will work for America.

Governor Dukakis has offered a way for college students to finance their educations, has proposed "Home Start" to help young families buy homes in their hometowns, and has offered cost-effective universal health care insurance for the 37 million Americans not covered.

Congressman Nagle has provided aid for drought-stricken farmers, has worked to cut down on needless defense spending and was an original co-sponsor of ethics legislation for Congress. Constituents have consistently received caring and competent service.

I would rather cast my vote on No. 8 for the people who have answers, not innuendos — Michael Dukakis, Lloyd Bentsen and Dave Nagle!

Winner or weiner?

To the Editor:

So Matt Devine thinks George Bush "won" the second (and unfortunately last) presidential debate because Bush was forceful and "displayed a new congeniality." (The Daily Iowan, Oct. 17)

Is George Bush a winner because he offers nothing to the 37 million Americans who live without health care?

Is George Bush a winner because three times he cast the deciding vote on the Senate floor in favor of chemical weapons?

Is George Bush a winner because he's supported dictators like Pinochet in Chile, Marcos in the Philippines, and Noriega in Panama?

Is George Bush a winner because income for the poorest 10 percent of Americans has dropped 10.5 percent in the last 10 years?

I wish The Daily Iowan and political scientists would stop this analysis and spell out the substantive differences between the candidates.

Enough already

To the Editor:

Like many others, I'm sure, I am getting a bit tired of the feud between Callista Gould and David Goodwin concerning "The Last Temptation of Christ" that's been running in The Daily Iowan letters column. Therefore, I feel compelled to write myself, in the vain hope of hushing them both up, for a while at least.

First, as regards to Ms. Gould's question as to the difference between those who attack blacks and those who attack Christians, she is right. There is no difference. However, in this case, "attack" is a misleading word. Martin Scorsese is not attacking Christians. He himself is a Christian and, from what I've seen, more sincere and straightforward than I would be hard to find.

He may disagree with Ms. Gould's view of Christianity, as she is entitled to do, but there is no way that she can authoritatively say that he is not a Christian. She can only disagree with his point of view, as he does with hers, and allow him to express his view freely, as she does hers. (As for myself, I also consider myself a Christian and, though I have minor differences with Scorsese's view, I can understand

Idiot alumni

To the Editor:
 Now that all the hoopla surrounding homecoming week has subsided, I think it's time to put things in perspective. Let me relate an incident that occurred at Fries restaurant on homecoming night.

A friend and I entered the restaurant for a leisurely dinner at about 9 p.m. It appeared that we walked in on a group of disgruntled Wisconsin students who were shouting, throwing things and generally abusing the employees. To the relief of everyone, they finally left peacefully.

A few minutes later, a large group of Iowa alumni came in. They had obviously been to the game and had been drinking but they were by no means drunk enough to excuse their actions.

First they decided they were hot. So with total disregard for the other customers, they propped open both inner and outer doors with stools. The employees immediately closed the doors which were again re-opened by the alumni.

I guess our worst mistake was thanking the employees for closing the doors since we were cold. Freedom of speech and expression doesn't go very far with UI alumni.

The verbal harassment that followed was inappropriate and undeserved. We were ridiculed and insulted to the point that one employee told them that their sort of behavior was unnecessary.

First, I commend Fries' employees for their undying patience. If it was me, I would have slapped a few of them.

Second, it's not that I can't take a joke. What bothers me is that these people were alumni, adults in their 30s — college graduates! To me, their mentality didn't exceed the level of a two-year-old. And for that matter, I know more well-behaved two-year-olds.

When I saw the behavior of the Wisconsin students, I thanked my lucky stars that my school wasn't like that. Perhaps I was wrong.

Coming from Chicago, I have always admired the friendliness and warmth of Iowans. Perhaps I was wrong again.

As a general rule, I have never had much use for homecoming or alumni. This only further convinced me that they are obnoxious and unruly. I'm sure some normal people exist in the ranks of the UI alumni and to them I apologize. But as yet, I have seen few examples.

As a senior, I will soon call myself an alumna. I am sorry to say that I cannot do it proudly.

Positive seeds

To the Editor:

I fully realize the severity of rape. I pray to God no one should have to bear the humility and pain of such an ordeal. Fact is, rape does happen, but scare tactics are not going to reduce the number of unfortunate victims.

Rape awareness is fine and important, but not front page material. Are we trying to create a society of paranoid, insecure women and men? High statistic after statistic is not going to help me be aware. It will turn me into a hermit!

Using some mathematics, combined with some statistics in the article, (The Daily Iowan, Oct. 12) one can figure on at least 1,000 rapists on campus alone. Do not expect me to live in a residence hall. There are approximately 43 rapists living in Burge alone.

Do not expect me to study in the library where about 80 rapist lurk each night. My brother can forget about me ever visiting his fraternity. I would not want to risk meeting one of the two or three that reside in each fraternity.

Finally, to the guy that sits next to me in my anthropology lecture, do not even think of speaking to me because you might be one of the 12 rapists in class. Sounds like I've gone too far? That is what I thought when I read the article.

It is not that rape is not an important issue, it is. It is just too overpublished. Why put ideas into someone's head? Publish stories of suicide and kids start forming suicide rings and packs. Publish stories about rape and some guy is going to think: What an idea.

Why not try a new, original subject? How about Lyme disease? How many people are aware of this killer disease? Why not do a story on the problems of elderly care and the lack of employees in that field? I know it exists, but I have never read about it! Ideas get planted in people's heads because of what they read. How about planting some positive seeds?

A Snack So Good, People Even Eat The Wrapper!

October
Is National
Apple
Month!

A sweet Washington apple is the perfect snack food. Apples have no cholesterol, no artificial flavors & no artificial colors. Unlike snacks made with processed sugar, apples satisfy your sweet tooth naturally. Apples are a good source of dietary fiber, rich in potassium (for body fluids and neuromuscular activity), a natural source of pectin (found to lower cholesterol levels) and have up to 15% of the daily recommended allowance of Vitamin "C". Best of all they taste great.

So, the next time you have a snack attack reach for a healthy helping of Washington Granny Smith, Red or Golden Delicious Apples from econofoods, your store for quality, variety and low prices!

Little Known Facts About Red Delicious Apples!

The story begins in the early 1870s near Peru, Iowa, when farmer Jesse Hiatt planted an apple tree. The tree failed to thrive but a seedling root sprout did. Eight years later this seedling-turned-tree bore a distinctive apple unlike any other. In 1893, the Stark Brothers Nursery, well-known developers of fruit varieties, held a fruit fair at Louisiana, Missouri, inviting exhibits of fruit from around the world and offering prizes for the best known and unknown varieties. Hiatt carefully boxed up his "Hawkeyes," as he called them, and sent them off to the competition. The apples won a first prize and gained an official name, Clarence Stark tasted the apple and proclaimed it, "Delicious!" But the tag of origin was lost so Mr. Stark had to wait another year for another fruit fair to discover Jesse Hiatt and buy the tree that was the progenitor of the apple that we know today as Red Delicious.

Tyson's trainer makes plea

You could sense the pain in Kevin Rooney's heart when he pleaded for Mike Tyson "to stop the head games and let the dream survive."

The trainer was on the phone from Catskill, N.Y., with an open letter to the heavyweight champion, whose personal problems have become a mass-media craze.

Rooney's letter: "Hey Mike Tyson, what's going on? What's happening that you don't call me at all? I'm alive. If you heard I died, I didn't. I guess I'll try to keep this short, but you know me."

"Mike: Camille, Jay, myself and all the people in the gym and town want you to come back to this beautiful, sleepy area... You have a lot of people who love you because you're just Mike Tyson, who did good."

(Camille Ewald, 83, was the sister-in-law of the late Cus D'Amato, Tyson's mentor who became his legal guardian in 1984, and Tyson lived in her home. Jay Bright is a friend of Tyson, who lives in Ewald's house.)

"We're getting tired of reading about your troubles. Camille and I are tired of going on shows talking about the same bull. It's a circus and only you can stop it. Talk, say something Mike... I see your new old friends are talking bad about Cus. That hurts, Mike, tell them to shut up. Never forget what Cus taught us. Some of your actions say you are forgetting."

"Mike, you want Don King as your exclusive promoter? Why? If he can get the most money, fine. Let your manager worry about it. Let him deal with him. Talk to us, let us know what time it is. Is this another package, that does not allow your family in?"

(Tyson's wife, actress Robin Givens, who is suing for divorce, as is Tyson, has said she came as a package with her mother, Ruth Roper, and her sister, Stephanie.)

"Talk to us. Remember Bill and Jim were just following the plan Cus laid out for you. Cus explained these plans during all the long talks with Jim, day after day, hour after hour, even when he was sick. Cus figured that if something happened to him, these guys, Bill and Jim, would follow the plan that was best for you. Jim and Bill had your next two years planned out when your friend and mine, Jim, passed away. Let Bill follow it. Back him up. Stop all the head games and let the dream survive."

(Jim Jacobs and Bill Cayton were Tyson's co-managers until Jacobs died in March.)

"I sit and watch the tape of you and Cus in 1984 with Alex (television boxing commentator Alex Wallau) and ABC. You sit there and are questioned about Cus and management. You talk about how funny it would be if Cus got into the ring to do your job — fight — and vice versa. Remember? Well, it's not so funny, is it?"

"You are letting people tell you what to do. First, your mother-in-law and now Don King and his people. Mike, you're too smart for that. Cus taught us to talk for ourselves. You know the deal. When you say they are stealing from you (Jacobs and Cayton) — and that was never proved — you are saying Cus, and Cus stole from no one."

"Cus left these people for you. Let them carry on Cus's plan. Your life has become a soap opera, and that's wrong. You are the only one who can stop it. Talk. It's time to put your life in order. Don't turn your back on Camille and me. We've been there from the jump. The dream was bigger than money. It was about life, loyalty and love..."

It sounded as if Kevin Rooney was sobbing.

Los Angeles pitcher John Tudor releases a pitch in first-inning action in Game 3 of the World Series in Oakland Tuesday night. Tudor left the game in the second with an injury.

McGwire wins Game 3 with 9th-inning homer

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Mark McGwire hit a solo home run with one out in the ninth inning as the Oakland Athletics finally broke through and beat Los Angeles 2-1 Tuesday night, cutting the Dodgers' lead in the World Series to 2-1.

McGwire fouled off three 2-2 pitches before lining a drive over the left-center field fence for his first hit in 10 World Series at-bats.

The Athletics managed just five hits, but McGwire's homer was the difference in a game in which Oakland's bullpen did the job.

The Athletics escaped a bases-loaded, no-outs jam in the sixth inning and Rick Honeycutt allowed one hit in the final two innings for the victory. Howell entered in the ninth and retired Jose Canseco on a popup before McGwire homered.

The Dodgers will pitch Tim Lincecum in Game 4 Wednesday night against Dave Stewart in Game 4 Wednesday night, a rematch of opening-game starters. The home team has now won 13 straight games in the World Series. The Dodgers blew a chance to break the game open in the sixth when they loaded the bases with no outs but failed to score.

Danny Heep's double, John Shelby's single and a walk to Mike Davis finished Bob Welch, who had never lasted beyond 2 1/2 innings in four postseason starts.

The Oakland bullpen, the most effective in the majors this year, did its job. Left-hander Greg Cadaret stopped lefty Mike Scioscia on a foul popup and right-hander Gene Nelson got Jeff Hamilton on a force at the plate and Alfredo Griffin on a grounder to first.

Kirk Gibson, the Dodgers' pinch hitter deluxe in Game 1, was not employed this time, even though Los Angeles was at the bottom of its batting order.

The Dodgers' injury problems worsened as starting pitcher John Tudor and right fielder Mike Marshall each were forced from the game. Tudor, bothered by hip and elbow problems throughout the season, left in the second inning with more arm trouble, and Marshall's weak back stiffened up in the third.

Welch and Tudor, big winners who had done poorly in post-seasons, each started out well on

Fry says he won't release injury reports

By Brent Woods
 The Daily Iowan

In his latest apparent reaction to media coverage, Iowa football Coach Hayden Fry said Tuesday he would no longer discuss players' injuries or game status at press conferences.

"No more medical reports," Fry said. "No more, period. I'm not giving out any more medical reports. It takes away completely from the football, and some people have a lot of fun with their columns, and the kids are suffering."

"It's just gotten completely out of hand. If they show up for the game, you know they're there, and if they don't show up, either they've gone fishin', they're hurt, or maybe studying."

Mark Stoops and Gary Clark are not on the two-deep chart, so Brian Wise and Greg Brown will move into starting secondary spots.

The other Iowa players hurt against Michigan, including running back Tony Stewart, are listed either first or second team. However, Fry muddled the already-mysterious injury situation by telling the media not to count on the two-deep chart, either.

Concerning Saturday's game against Purdue, Fry said he was surprised that the Boilermakers were able to beat Ohio State at Columbus last week.

"That's a very big surprise," Fry said. "But they are number one in the Big Ten in pass defense, second in the nation... Coach Akers really has them coming along."

Purdue will start a freshman quarterback, Brian Fox. He rallied the Boilermakers from a 14-0 deficit in front of 90,000 hostile Buckeye fans last week.

"He (Fox) completed an awful lot of passes," Fry said. "He doesn't know any better right now. He's not going to get rattled. He's performing like a veteran quarterback."

"He evidently is a very mature young man for his age."

Fry added that Purdue's offense is more diversified this year than last, though it's still similar.

"They're throwing the ball very well," Fry said. "They have an adequate running game. But where they've really improved is defensively."

Iowa tight end Marv Cook said executing the passing game against the tough Purdue secondary won't be easy.

"We definitely have our hands full," Cook said. "They have a great scheme. We need to go out and execute and play our game."

"They play man-to-man, they just challenge you right across the board."

Fry said the Hawkeyes are "determined," despite a 3-2-2 record that has Rose Bowl hopes dimmed.

"I think the two losses by three points each and the two ties... we're more determined than ever to pull this thing out and have a decent, respectable season," Fry said.

Hawks will attempt to reverse trend against Minnesota

By Anne Upson
 The Daily Iowan

Although the Iowa volleyball team leads the series against Minnesota, 18-7, Iowa has only defeated the Gophers three times in their last eight meetings.

When the two teams meet tonight at Minnesota, Iowa, with a 6-4 conference record, should be the favorite. The Gophers are 3-3 in conference play.

"We took Michigan and Michigan State in three games and they did it in four," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said. "We take them as a credible team. We respect them. We have always had good competitive matches against them."

Minnesota Coach Stephanie Schlueder agreed with Stewart about the difficulty of the upcoming match.

"It will be a battle with Iowa," Schlueder said. "We scouted them when they played at Western Illinois. I know that wasn't their toughest match, but I think we are a little bit of an underdog going into this match."

The Gophers will be without 6-foot-1 middle hitter Dawn Thompson. Thompson, out with an ankle injury, was Big Ten Freshman of the Year in 1987. Thompson was also second on the team in overall kill percentage and total blocks last season. Schlueder said the Gophers have been imbalanced because of the change in the lineup.

"We started out really good with several wins in California," Schlueder said. "When we came back here, we have played very inconsistently."

"It has been our lack of intensity. We are still struggling. The changes in the lineup in the last couple of weeks have really precipitated this inconsistency."

Intramural field goal kicking contest draws 73

By Matthew Zlatnik
 The Daily Iowan

Jeff Bearden won the intramural field goal kicking contest this past Sunday at Kinnick Stadium, amassing 32 points, eight more than runners-up Chris Courtney and Tim Quinn.

Competitors attempted nine mandatory kicks, one each from the left and right hash marks and the center of the field, from 10, 20 and 30 yards out. Each contestant then took three additional kicks from anywhere on the field. Points were awarded depending on distance and difficulty.

Bearden, a freshman from Hot Springs, Ark., missed his first two kicks from 20 yards but made his next 10.

"I'm a future hopeful for the Arkansas Razorbacks," Bearden said. Former Iowa kicker Rob Houghtlin set the precedent for future contest champions when he won the contest in 1984 and later walked on to the Iowa football team.

Runner-up Courtney, a senior, said lack of practice hurt his efforts, but he was nonetheless pleased.

"I haven't kicked for quite a while, so I can't really complain," Courtney said. "I made some 60-yarders after the contest ended. Too late, I guess."

Courtney, a high school all-state kicker from Burlington, missed two kicks at 40 yards which would have given him nine more points and the win.

"I was kicking into a strong, swirling wind," he said. "The problem wasn't distance. They went left or right."

Seventy-three kickers participated in the event.

Intramural notes:

● Flag football playoff schedules are available at Recreational Services, Field House, Room E216. Playoffs begin this week with over 100 men's, women's and coed teams in a double-elimination tournament. Championship games in each division will be played Nov.

13 in Kinnick Stadium beginning at 11:30 a.m.

● Home run derby signup ends Oct. 21. The contest for men will be Oct. 22-23 at the baseball stadium, and Oct. 23 at the softball complex for women. Balls, bats and helmets will be provided.

Men will hit baseballs from a pitching machine, while women will hit softballs. Women must provide their own pitcher.

Points will be awarded depending on the distance the ball is hit. Each participant will hit 20 pitches including five practice hits.

McLain pleads guilty to federal charges

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Former Detroit Tigers pitcher Denny McLain pleaded guilty to federal racketeering and cocaine charges Tuesday, 14 months after an appeals court overturned his conviction stemming from a 1984 indictment alleging baseball's last 30-game winner engaged in loan-sharking, gambling and drug dealing.

In a plea agreement accepted by U.S. District Court Judge Elizabeth A. Kovachevich, the government recommended the two-time Cy Young Award winner receive a prison term not to exceed 12 years. McLain, 44, was convicted in March 1985 and served 29 months of a 23-year sentence before his release from the Federal Correctional Institution in Talladega, Ala.

Kovachevich, whose handling of the case is criticized in McLain's recently published book "Strikeout," set sentencing for Dec. 15.

If convicted during a retrial, the former baseball star could have faced eight years in prison and a $25,000 fine for racketeering and 15 years and a $25,000 fine for cocaine possession with intent to distribute. The negotiated agreement calls for the government to drop extortion and conspiracy charges against McLain as well as the forfeiture of $8,900.

"This needs to be over with," McLain, accompanied by his wife Sharyn and one of the couple's four children, said after a 20-minute hearing. "It's been living hell the way we've been living. We can now look forward to some kind of future."

Opponent's injury costs Hearn title shot

NEW YORK (AP) — Thomas Hearn will not get a shot at a fifth title because of a rib injury to Fulgencio Obelmejias, promoter Bob Arum said Tuesday.

Hearn was to fight Obelmejias, of Venezuela, in a scheduled 12-round bout for the World Boxing Association super middleweight title on Nov. 5 at the Las Vegas Hilton.

Hearn would have been trying to become the first fighter to win at least a piece of five titles, an honor that can go to Sugar Ray Leonard should he beat Donny Lalonde Nov. 7 at Caesars Palace. At stake will be the World Boxing Council light heavyweight championship held by Lalonde and also the vacant WBC super middleweight title.

"There's no question there is an injury," Arum said from his New York office. "Whether it's as serious as the doctor says, I don't know."

Arum was searching for another opponent for Hearn and said, "The show will go on."

"We have confidence that Bob Arum will be able to present an equally exciting and entertaining card," Bruce Banke, a Hilton official, said Tuesday.

Obelmejias has said that a rib injury sustained in a bout with South Korea's Chong Pal Park prevented him from fighting Hearn. Arum insisted on seeing the X-rays, Luis Spada, the champion's personal promoter, said early Tuesday at Margarita, Venezuela, the site of the WBA convention.

"Martinez showed him the X-rays with a fracture in Obelmejias' rib cage, and Arum decided the fight could not go on," Spada said.

Fans arrested during Jets-Bills game

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Fifteen New York Jets fans were arrested for fighting and burning complimentary Jets caps inside Giants Stadium as their team was humiliated 37-14 by the Buffalo Bills, officials said Tuesday.

Beer sales were suspended earlier than usual Monday night when the fans began to get restless and fight with each other, said Paul Wolcott, a spokesman for the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, which owns the stadium.

"Because the crowd was getting a little unruly we cut beer sales off at the beginning of the third quarter," he said, noting the usual cut-off time is the end of the third quarter.

Tension began to rise as the Bills scored early and often with little resistance from New York. Buffalo led 17-0 at the end of the first quarter.

One key Minnesota player who will see playing time is three-year all-Big Ten player Andrea Gonzalez. Gonzalez is Minnesota's all-time kill leader and ranked eighth in the nation in kills per game. She also leads the Big Ten in aces per game.

Schlueder said Gonzalez and teammate Chris Schaefer are the strength of the Gopher offense. Schaefer, a 6-foot-1 outside hitter, is also nationally ranked. Schaefer is second in the nation in kills per game and leads the Big Ten in the category.

Stewart said she is aware of the potential of the two Minnesota standouts but said the Hawkeyes are ready for the challenge.

"We have had a great practice," Stewart said. "We will need to pass well and stay consistent. We know what we have to do, it's just a matter of doing it."

Ex-Gamecock tells of steroid use

NEW YORK (AP) — Former South Carolina football player Tommy Chaikin used bodybuilding anabolic steroids for three years and says they drove him to violence and nearly to suicide before last year's Clemson game, according to this week's issue of Sports Illustrated.

"I was sitting in my room at the Roost, the athletic dorm at the University of South Carolina, with the barrel of a loaded .357 Magnum pressed under my chin," the story, written by Chaikin and ST's Rick Telander, begins.

"My finger twitched on the trigger. I was in bad shape, very bad shape. From the steroids. It had all come down from the steroids, the crap I'd taken to get big and strong and aggressive so I could play this game that I love."

Chaikin said he had been having "anxiety attacks" for five months and said they had become "so tense that I couldn't stand them anymore. I'd lost control of every-

and the bullet, about how it could take away this pain."

Chaikin, a 6-foot-1, 250-pound defensive lineman from Bethesda, Md., lettered in 1984-5-6-7 after redshirting in 1983. He said he didn't pull the trigger because his father, who had flown to Columbia, S.C., for the game, knocked on the door and took him to Sibley Memorial Hospital in Washington, D.C.

In the waiting room, Chaikin said he "started to have spasms. My body was having a reaction to Stelazine, the drug that a psychiatrist had prescribed for me a few weeks earlier when I'd first come home from South Carolina to get some professional help."

Coach Joe Morrison, who took over the South Carolina program in 1983, refused comment on the story. "Coach Joe Morrison does not plan to have any comment on the story tonight," sports information director Kerry Sharp said. "What they're going to do," defensive line coach Jim Washburn said,

"is Kerry Sharp is going to have press release tomorrow. I'll just wait and we'll give a press release tomorrow."

Not immediately available for comment were Bob Marcum, who was athletic director during the period described by Chaikin, and university president James B. Holderman, who reportedly was out of town.

Chaikin weighed 185 when he first played football as a junior in high school. He said he built himself up to 200 pounds as a senior by lifting weights.

As a freshman at South Carolina, he "held a dummy for the scout team and got knocked around all fall. ... Already guys had asked me if I wanted to take steroids — they called the stuff "juice" — so I could beef up and fight back."

In the spring of 1984, Chaikin said, "I decided I was going to take steroids to get big and strong and aggressive. I finally broke down. ... I saw how well the guys already on steroids were doing, maybe 30 of them at that time."

He said assistant coach Jim Washburn told him, "Do what you have to do, take what you have to take."

Chaikin said that "getting the stuff was no big deal. ... I had a friend there, and I knew he could get me what I wanted or tell me where to go for it. He got me some steroids, and I told him I also wanted HGH, human growth hormone. He told me where I could get it."

"I only got $800 worth, enough for 10 injections over eight weeks. ... My supplier told me that if I didn't get too crazy with this stuff, didn't abuse it, I'd be OK. Then we went down into his basement at home, and he gave me my first injection."

Chaikin said he went from 210 pounds to 235 in eight weeks, taking 12 injections a month. In addition to muscle growth, he said he "got real bad acne on my back, my hair started to come out. I was having trouble sleeping, and all these effects you hear about."

When he took his football physical that fall, a doctor told him he had developed high blood pressure and a heart murmur. But Chaikin said he "never heard a word about it from the coaches."

Schembechler says 'it's do or die'

CHICAGO (AP) — Things have changed — and in a big way — in the Big Ten football race.

Not only are Indiana and Illinois tied for first place with 3-0 records but with five games still to play, Coach Bo Schembechler says his Michigan team is in a "do or die situation" this week.

Michigan, ranked 20th, is coming off a 17-17 tie at Iowa and takes on No. 14 Indiana Saturday.

"It's a game we have to win," said Schembechler Tuesday during the weekly Big Ten coaches' telephone interviews. "If we don't win, it will be difficult for us to be a factor in the race. If we had won at Iowa, we could still lose a game and win the title."

Schembechler likens Bill Mallory's Hoosiers to his own team. "We're quite close," said Bo. "We both like to run and we both believe in sound defense."

But he also added the Wolverines will have the added edge of playing at home.

"It's always an advantage to play at home," said Schembechler.

Mallory, whose undefeated Hoosiers are coming off a 33-13 victory over Minnesota, knows Michigan will be Indiana's most formidable foe to date.

"No question about it, this will be our best opponent so far," said Mallory. "Take six points and they could be the No. 1 team in the country. It's a very crucial game for us. We're in the thick of things and the farther you go the more important things become."

That's also the case with surprising Illinois. The Illini have won four in a row and are getting ready to play defending champion Michigan State, with a 1-4-1 record overall.

"They have played as tough a schedule as there is," said Illinois Coach John Mackovic. "They are 1-1-1 in the Big Ten which puts them in a position of a must game. We have been fortunate things have been going our way."

Iowa is 1-0-2 in the Big Ten and travels to Purdue in still another game with title overtones.

"The two ties makes it a little harder," said Coach Hayden Fry.

"But we still have a shot at it. Two ties are like one loss or one win, all in the way you look at it. Normally we win those close games. We are heartbroken."

Purdue's Fred Akers is pleased with his team's 2-1 Big Ten mark.

"We're still in it," said Akers. "We're 2-and-1 and I think there are several teams who would like to be in our place."

Namely, Minnesota, Northwestern, Ohio State and Wisconsin. All four are winless in the Big Ten, although Northwestern and Minnesota did play to a tie.

Barring any more ties, two of the four will have the opportunity to win this weekend since they face each other. Ohio State will be at Minnesota and Wisconsin at Northwestern.

Korean: U.S. athletes hurt relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The conduct of U.S. athletes at the Seoul Olympics and excessively negative television coverage of the games damaged relations between South Korea and the United States, a Korean who serves on the U.S. Olympic Committee charged Tuesday.

"There had been an anti-American sentiment, but only among radical college students," said Dr. Dong Ja Yang, a Korean native who serves on the executive board of the USOC. "But the 'Ugly American' image spread to more people because of the U.S. athletes and NBC TV coverage."

"Problems began when U.S. track stars arriving for the Olympics allegedly were rude to South Korean citizens and journalists who wanted to greet them, Yang said. "Almost immediately, Koreans took offense and asked, 'Why are these people so arrogant,'" said Yang. "Koreans thought that these people should behave with the dignity of those coming from such a civilized country."

South Koreans also were critical of the casual manner in which U.S. athletes marched in the opening ceremonies, but still cheered the American delegation as the competition began, Yang said.

The U.S.-Korean problem was exacerbated when NBC repeatedly showed footage of a dispute over a boxing match in which Korean security guards and boxing fans stormed the ring to protest a loss by a Korean fighter.

"People thought that NBC's coverage was unjust, biased, negative, and possibly with malicious intent," said Yang, who stressed that he did not think NBC had acted with malice. "That incident was in no way reflective of the goodwill of the games."

As NBC continued broadcasting footage of the "embarrassing, shameful" event, Korean fans who had seen NBC's coverage over Armed Forces Television began to boo and heckle American athletes, Yang said.

"To the Koreans, NBC is the United States," Yang said. "They don't understand that the network is an independent group, and they thought this was the view of the United States."

However, Yang said anti-American sentiment likely will be short-lived. "I do not believe the anti-American sentiment will be everlasting," Yang said. "Most Koreans understand the aid and sacrifices this country has provided them."

To prevent such cultural clashes in the future, Yang suggested that American athletes be instructed on the cultural mores of the country in which international competitions are being held.

"With a little more sensitivity, these things would not happen," Yang said.

The policy should be implemented not just for the Olympics, but for other athletic competitions.

However, he also acknowledged that perhaps the South Koreans did not try to understand Western culture.

"The phrase was, 'The world is coming to Seoul,'" Yang said. "Sometimes, that means different attitudes."

Stewart, Belcher have things to prove

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Dave Stewart hopes the country is watching him in Game 4 of the World Series. He has something to prove.

Stewart started Game 1 for Oakland and got a no decision when Kirk Gibson pinch hit a two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth off Dennis Eckersley to give Los Angeles a 5-4 victory.

Stewart gets another chance Wednesday night and is expected to be opposed by Dodgers rookie Tim Lincecum. Los Angeles carried a 2-0 lead into the best-of-seven series Tuesday.

Stewart, who pitched his first three seasons for the Dodgers, was hoping to get some recognition from a victory in the World Series. Two consecutive 20-game seasons haven't been good enough.

"I was a 20-game winner last year and I was left off 12 Cy Young ballots. That's a shame," Stewart said. "The reporters that cover the A's respect my ability and show that in the way they write about me and my ability. I wasn't very happy about it last year."

Stewart had reason to be unhappy after Game 1 but he didn't show it. "Our record speaks for itself," Stewart said. "We know we're good. I've got no reason to think we're not going to make a run at this thing."

Stewart pitched eight innings in Game 1 and allowed three runs and six hits. He struck out five and walked two.

"The thing I wanted to do is just what I did — I kept us close and gave us a chance to win," Stewart said. "I can't ask for too much more than that."

Stewart was 20-13 in 1987 and 21-12 this year. Not a bad record for a guy who was released by Philadelphia in 1986.

"I called the Dodgers, Detroit, Toronto and the White Sox," Stewart said of his job hunting. "I talked to Tommy (Lasorda) personally in his office and he commented on how they had some up-and-coming arms. He then referred me to talk to Al Campanis."

The A's signed Stewart as a free agent on May 23, 1986 and found an ace after he discovered a new pitch.

"I picked up the forkball and I'm also a better all-around pitcher," the right-hander said. "I'm more of a true pitcher because I can work to each hitter individually and set them up as opposed to when I was relieving. Then I was required to pitch in certain situations."

Belcher also started Game 1 and had all kinds of trouble.

In two innings, he allowed three hits and four runs while walking four. The big hit was Jose Canseco's grand slam in the second inning.

"I was keyed up and anxious, and usually I walk behind the mound and relax," Belcher said. "But on Saturday I stayed right on the mound, got the ball and toed the rubber."

"I started thinking 'I can't walk him (Canseco), or I can't hang a slider to him.' I tried too much to make great pitches."

'Sunday' premieres new season

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

University Theatres premieres its 1988-89 season tonight with Stephen Sondheim's "Sunday in the Park with George" at 8 in Mable Theatre.

The musical, winner of the Pulitzer Prize and Tony Award, constitutes one of the most ambitious plays ever staged by the UI's Theatre Department. "This is one of the biggest shows we've ever done here," said Erich Heinz, the M.F.A. student who's directing the University Theatres production. "That's why everybody here is working their little buns off."

The show, with a libretto by James Lapine, spans an entire century and centers on the struggles of two artists. The first is famous 19th-century French painter Georges Seurat, who is in the act of creating what is arguably his masterpiece, "Sunday Afternoon on the Island of La Grand Jatte." The work hangs prominently in the Chicago Art Museum, a triumph of pointillism.

Likewise music director Peter Alexander and Heinz must rise to the challenge of fulfilling Sondheim's goal of transposing that pointillism into the show's music.

"Sondheim was able to use chord-clusters as an analogue to Seurat's juxtaposition of colors in the same area — it really does fit together just perfectly," said Heinz.

John Lynch and Jeri Lynn Schulke portray French pointillist painter Georges Seurat in "Sunday in the Park with George" tonight at 8 in Mable Theatre.

"I think it's a wonderful show," said Alexander. "First of all, it speaks directly to me as someone who's involved in the arts and working with creative people, but I think it goes much deeper than that, since the show relates what it says about art to everyone's life."

The show is deeply involved in the creative processes of art, centering around the art of making art itself, the drain it produces on other relationships. John Lynch, who stars in the demanding double-role of both Georges, commented on this ongoing theme. "The simplicity is the beauty of it — it says something so beautiful and simple that I think we all need to hear."

"My major emphasis in doing the show is inspirational — the show is about finding the things inside each individual and bringing them to fruition. I want the show to inspire the people who see it, which is especially important in a university setting, since we deal with grades all the time, professors have tenure and it's a very judgmental atmosphere. This show is about rediscovering the inspiration to do it all. This is about giving some of that back."

Tickets for "Sunday in the Park with George" are $9 ($7 for UI students, senior citizens and persons 18 and under) and may be purchased in advance from Hancher box office. Free pre-performance discussions will be given before Saturday night performances.

'Portraits' stirs imagination

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Art museums are strange places, very quiet and full of wonders that unfold like flowers when exposed to thought. And one of the UI Museum of Art's main exhibits this fall is a prime example of this.

Continuing through October in the UI Museum of Art is the "Roman Portraits" exhibition, a collection of 36 objects ranging in date from 625 B.C. to A.D. 250. The exhibit is designed to display and explore the growth and development of Roman portraiture from realistic funerary documents to idealized political images, with some examples of Greek and Etruscan work added to throw additional light on the subject.

All of which can sound fairly intimidating — not to mention boring — unless one remembers that the capacity to feel wonder doesn't hinge on knowledge but on imagination. And this exhibit, which runs through Oct. 30, is full of overflowing with things that stir the imagination.

Many of the Roman portraits are from the collection of Tom and Nan Riley of Cedar Rapids, and they are well acquainted with that sense of wonder. "Just the idea that these pieces were crafted by people in the Roman era fascinated me," said Tom Riley in a telephone interview from his home. "Rome is still used as a metaphor for life and vibrancy," added Nan Riley, pointing out how far from irrelevant this whole exhibit can be for those with eyes to see.

And such things can be seen here as could keep the imagination well fed for ages. Creatively set up — "Our hats are off to the museum staff for doing such a magnificent job arranging the pieces," said the Rileys. "We've been in quite a few museums, and this is about the finest arrangement we've ever seen." — the exhibit leads the visitor through bust after bust, ranging from emperors like Caracalla to conquerors like Alexander the Great, but in many ways achieving its greatest impact in the faces of the anonymous.

One such piece, the bust of an unknown old man of Republican Rome, was sculpted around the second half of the first century B.C. and loaned to the exhibit from the Detroit Institute of the Arts. We don't know the identity of the man, but the detail is so exquisite that a unique person can be seen in the lifelike creases and the weary eyes.

Commanding the center of the exhibit is an impressive bust of the Roman emperor Marcus Aurelius. The statue is understatedly regal, with a full nose, pensive mouth and large, forgiving eyes.

But probably the most arresting single piece comes from the Riley collection and is set near the back of the exhibit. The bust of a boy, carved around A.D. 170, depicts a young man just barely out of childhood, wearing a light tunic fastened with an emblem of high status, probably indicating noble origins. Quite possibly this was an imperial prince, captured here in thoughtful, beautiful youth. The smooth stonework is simple but hauntingly elegant, powerfully conjuring images of this life now centuries over, preserved only here.

Treat yourself to the wonder of those ages past.

'Subtle clarinet

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Jazz clarinetist Daniels will appear at 8 p.m. Sunday in Hancher Auditorium. Daniels has been credited with almost single-handedly revolutionizing the jazz clarinet. Veteran Leonard Feather wrote in the Los Angeles Times, "It is a jazz when one man reinvents an instrument, to a new stage of its evolution."

Daniels first attracted attention as a clarinetist with an album "Breakthrough" earned a Grammy Award nomination for Best Jazz Instrument Performance. His follow-up "With Love," inspired by saxophonist Charlie Parker, was nominated for two Grammys.

The International Writers Program presents a new session of its four-day conference, "The Resurgence of Regionalism in American Literature," at 3 this afternoon in the 304 of the UI English Building. In addition, a reading from her work will be held on Thursday, Oct. 20, in the Auditorium.

An native of Charleston, Humphreys has written two winning novels, "Dreams of Sleep," and, more recently, "Rich in Love," published by the University of Iowa Press. The latter was named to The New York Times, Publisher's Weekly, and Gannett newspapers' 1988 year's best novels, as well as a Literary Guild selection. Movie rights were recently purchased by MGM.

"Dreams of Sleep," published in 1984, won the Ernest Hemingway Foundation Award for Best Novel. The movie rights to the novel were purchased by Godmother Productions. Humphreys, who was born in Charleston, S.C., still lives in Charleston, outside of New York, and writes regional fiction. She seems to me that in writers and readers alike, she has found her home," commented Humphreys.

The South, though, is a regionally southern thing. There are different kinds of living there, and the money. Also, there's a market that creates family and comfort that is all Americans. In a losing what was clear. We're hanging onto it, times has to be manu-

'Subtle' and 'human' jazz clarinet comes to Hancher

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Jazz clarinetist Eddie Daniels will appear in concert at 8 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 23 in Hancher Auditorium. Daniels has been credited with almost single-handedly reviving and revolutionizing the art of the jazz clarinet. Veteran jazz critic Leonard Feather wrote in the Los Angeles Times, "It is a rare event in jazz when one man can all but reinvent an instrument, bringing it to a new stage of its evolution."

Daniels first attracted widespread attention as a clarinetist with his album "Breakthrough," which earned a Grammy Award nomination for Jazz Instrumental Performance. His follow-up "To Bird With Love," inspired by the work of saxophonist Charlie Parker, was nominated for two Grammys and became one of the top-selling jazz albums of the year.

His rise to prominence was reflected in his selection as No. 1 clarinetist for the last three years in the readers' poll of Downbeat magazine.

Daniels is a classically trained musician. A native of New York City, he started with the alto saxophone at age 9 and added clarinet at age 13. After graduating from the High School of the Performing Arts, Brooklyn College and the Juilliard School of Music, where he received a degree in clarinet performance, he launched into a career as a saxophonist, winning first prize in the International Jazz Competition in Vienna.

The clarinet hit its peak in jazz with Benny Goodman and Artie Shaw in the Swing Era of the 1930s, but in the last two decades jazz clarinetists have been a rare breed.

In the 1960s he developed a solid reputation as a fleet-fingered sax player, performing with the Thad Jones-Mel Lewis Jazz Orchestra, working extensively as a studio session player, and releasing several albums as a band leader.

The success of the clarinet tracks on one of his albums, "Morning Thunder," launched Daniels' career as a clarinet player.

"I felt that the clarinet was a voice that was needed today," commented Daniels in a phone interview. "It's more subtle, more human and spiritual versus electric and brassy. It doesn't scream out at you. It certainly has the power and drive, because after all, it was the music that our parents danced to."

"I felt the need to play music that reached out and touched peoples hearts on a deeper level. It's the wood reaching out from the forest, where we all come from. It's the difference between someone grabbing you and someone touching you with a light soft touch."

When asked what he will be playing in his Hancher performance, Daniels replied "I'm going to have fun. I'll play some new work, some standards that everyone knows."

International poets read 'gifts to Iowa' on Friday

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Poets from the International Writing Program will read from their works in "The Word We Share" at 8 p.m. Friday, Oct. 21, in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Guatemalan writer Felipe Valenzuela, along with Waqas Khwaja of Pakistan, are the organizers of the event. He described the reading as "a gift to Iowa from the International Writing Program poets, because Iowa is giving gifts to us every day." Each poet will read three poems, on subjects ranging from politics to the environment to love.

Among the 34 published writers participating in the IWP this fall, poets from Hungary, Iceland, Indonesia, Korea, Nigeria, Pakistan, the Philippines, Poland, Sierra Leone, the Soviet Union, Thailand, Luxembourg and Sudan will read from their works.

Valenzuela refers to the ethnic diversity of the reading as a "sensitivity salad. Soon after I arrived at the program I sent an article home entitled "Human Salad," referring to the variety of writers here."

Images of food crop up frequently in Valenzuela's description of the IWP. "It's an incredible human experience. Imagine a floor full of different nationalities and different kinds of writers. We call it the International Eating Program because someone is always preparing a meal for everyone on the floor. It's a great experience here."

Valenzuela, at 25, is the youngest writer in the IWP. He has been given the nickname "El Presidente" because of his frequent mention of the novel "El Señor Presidente," written by the 1967 Guatemalan Nobel Prize winning writer Miguel Angel Asturias.

Award-winning author talks about American regionalism

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

The International Writing Program and the Writers Workshop will present novelist Josephine Humphreys in the final session of its four-part mini-conference, "The Resurgence of Regionalism in American Literature," at 3 this afternoon in Room 304 of the UI English-Philosophy Building. In addition, Humphreys will read from her work at 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 20, in Shambaugh Auditorium.

A native of Charleston, S.C., Humphreys has written two award-winning novels, "Dreams of Sleep" and, more recently, "Rich in Love."

"Rich in Love," published in 1987, was named to The New York Times, Publisher's Weekly and Gannett newspapers' lists of the year's best novels, as well as being a Literary Guild Selection. The movie rights were recently purchased by MGM.

"Dreams of Sleep," published in 1984, won the Ernest Hemingway Foundation Award for best first novel. The movie rights were sold to Godmother Productions.

Humphreys, who was born and still lives in Charleston, feels that, outside of New York, "American writing is regional writing. It seems to me that in all regions, writers and readers are staying home," commented Humphreys.

"The South, though, is less specifically southern than it used to be. There are different kinds of people living there, and there's more money. Also, there's an influence from television and the real estate market that creates a type of family and comfort that is similar to all Americans. In a way, we're losing what was clearly southern. We're hanging onto it, but it sometimes has to be manufactured — it's not clearly there.

Both of Humphreys' novels deal with southern families. "I never sit down and worry about a southern voice in my writing, I read about those kinds of things later in reviews. The situations and settings come to me naturally. I concentrate on the language more than character and plot — they take care of themselves."

Jan Weistmiller, a graduate of the UI Writers Workshop who currently works at Prairie Lights Books, describes Humphreys' 17-year-old character (Lucille) in "Rich in Love," as a "female Holden Caulfield. It's a meditative, wise voice that thinks through situations from many different angles and through the eyes of many different characters. In Lucille's meditation on 'Huck Finn' she writes, 'Boys have that extended phase of innocence. I do not think girls have it at all. Imagine Becky Thatcher writing that book, and you have an altogether different concept. You have something dark.' I think Humphreys hits on the essential difference between men and women, or boys and girls in our culture, that being that girls don't have a childhood after 12 years old, they become so aware of the world around them."

Humphreys, who "doesn't even know where Iowa is," is looking forward to her first visit to Iowa City. "Friends of mine who have taught at Iowa tell me they feel comfortable there in a way that writers don't often feel. They get the feeling that Iowa is not only a place to receive training but is also a home for writers."

"By the way, I have a connection with Iowa. I don't like to shop, but when I do, I go to a store in Charleston that is run by a Writers Workshop graduate. I feel like I'm buying writer's clothes."

Kids' ne inspire new gro

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

More than 100 Iowa students, several of them community leaders, met the needs of children by attending the first Children's Agenda Program at the Iowa City Public Library. The program aims to train teens, advocates and projects and task force to meet the needs of youth.

There is trouble in River City, and it stands for children's needs. Rev. Bob Welsh, pastor of the Christian Church, who chairs the Children's Agenda Committee. "Right now the population in Iowa City is growing," he said.

The keynote speaker was state Sen. Lloyd Jones, who chairs the Social Service Committee.

"The trouble with trying to address the children's agenda is that there are so many problems and the need in our community," Jones said.

"We've all heard the statistics. Twenty percent of our children grow up in poverty, or seven drops out of high school, one-third of our pre-school children are not fully immunized, and over 20 percent of our homeless is composed of children."

Lloyd-Jones said the program is a government priority.

"Somehow we can find the money to defend our country from enemy attack, but we don't have the money to invest in the education, the investment in our children's future," she said. "This year we spent $10 million on child abuse prevention, but we haven't seen a drop in the number of children in foster care."

Lloyd-Jones said new legislation must be made in order to resolve the situation.

"The word 'crisis' has been used, but I think we need to change the position where 'crisis' is a term," she said. "This is a needy group of people who need help now and they need special help."

After Lloyd-Jones spoke, representatives from different organizations gave reports on the situation of children and youth in the Iowa City community.

Among the organizations that were represented were: United Action for Women, Domestic Violence Program, Big Brothers and Sisters, Before and After School Program, Handicare, Youth Homeless, and United Way.

Bill McCarty, director of the Iowa City Department of Public Works, said the need for more money to run foster care facilities.

"So far this year, through the generosity of the community, we have turned 100 homeless children into emergency shelter families. We had no beds to spare. That's the crime that we need to work with these children every day."

Sally Stutsman from the Iowa City Community Daycare Center said that daycare is vital to working mothers.

"The statistics from the last year show that over 50 percent of the children who have mothers in the workforce are in daycare," she said. "It's not enough how important it is to make sure the infants and young children have available, quality daycare."
