Regents will vote on laser center plans

By Mary Lovett

The US administration will recommend to the University of Iowa Legislature a $28.5 million laser science and engineering building on the north end of campus. The Board of Regents is expected to vote on the recommendation at a meeting Wednesday.

The building would cost $25.8 million, and the Regents would provide $2.5 million for equipment. The building would be named for the three regents institutions.

The university administration has also recommended a $17 million laser science and engineering building on the west side of campus. The Regents would provide $14.5 million for equipment. The building would be named for the three regents institutions.

The board of regents has already approved the $28.5 million building for the University of Iowa at Urbana-Champaign and the $17 million building for the University of Iowa at Iowa City.

The INF treaty is one of the most critical steps in the direction of ending the Cold War. The INF treaty is expected to reduce the number of nuclear weapons in the world, and to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

The INF treaty will be implemented in the Spring of 1988. The INF treaty is expected to be signed by the President of the United States and the President of the Soviet Union.

The INF treaty will require the United States and the Soviet Union to destroy their intermediate-range cruise missiles within one year. The INF treaty will also require the United States and the Soviet Union to destroy their intermediate-range ballistic missiles within two years.

The INF treaty will also require the United States and the Soviet Union to destroy their intermediate-range nuclear weapons within three years.

The INF treaty is expected to reduce the number of nuclear weapons in the world by 50 percent. The INF treaty is expected to reduce the risk of nuclear war.

The INF treaty will also require the United States and the Soviet Union to destroy their anti-ship missiles within one year.

Supervisors will choose advisory board members

By Jean Thimme

The Iowa City Council Thursday discussed how many members to put on the Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Advisory Committee. The final number will be decided at the next meeting.

The new board will be the advisory panel to the state's new mental health and mental retardation agencies. The new board members must be appointed by the end of November.

The advisory board members will be selected from groups interested in joining the committee. The Council recommended the Iowa City Mental Health and Mental Retardation board members based on the recommendations of the Iowa County Human Resources commission.

Local, national leaders call UI voters to action

By Diane Wallace

Leaders at the University of Iowa, state and national levels urged Tuesday for a voter-participation push aimed at increasing enrollment and enhancing the Midwest's voting record.

"We need to stop being complacent," said Iowa City Mayor Jay Dixson. "People really and truly feel that the system is rigged against them.

Dixson was among several speakers at events sponsored by the University of Iowa-Student Activities Union, which is organizing voter participation drives at schools across the state and nation.

"I think we need to be calling on the state, which has a major role in funding education," said Iowa state Sen. Juanita wrong. "I mean, they should not have to be driving to make the argument, but we need to get there.

In State's official campaign photo, the University of Iowa's election office, the voter participation office, is organizing voter participation drives at schools across the state and nation.

"I think we need to be calling on the state, which has a major role in funding education," said Iowa state Sen. Juanita wrong. "I mean, they should not have to be driving to make the argument, but we need to get there.

McDonald said, "If you want to change the system, you have to get people energized to vote outside of the usual." She added that both sides of the political spectrum are energized to vote, "but we need to make sure that people are voting and not just registering."

"I'm a general public and personally I believe that what you vote for has the same importance as what you vote against," McDonald said. "We need to stop being complacent."

North: I was protected by exemption

WASHINGTON: The judge who presided over the Iran-Contra trial has told the government's ex-counsel, John Deutch, that he had no choice but to order the executive to pay him an exemption.

The 33-day hearing scheduled by the judge, Chief Justice William J. Brennan, will focus on defense claims that the National Security Council was never told, contrary to three written and oral agreements, that the executive order that established a ban on the sale of arms to Iran was exempt from the National Security Act.

The judge said he would examine the evidence to determine whether there was a "right to know" claim. The executive order, which was signed by President Ronald Reagan, was later amended by the National Security Act.

A House committee recently had ordered the government to pay the White House judge.

The government had argued that the executive order was a "right to know" claim.

East Germans agree to compensate Jews for Nazi atrocities

BERLIN (AP) — The president of the World Jewish Congress and the chief of East Germany have agreed to start formal talks on how the nation might pay reparations for the Holocaust. If the two sides meet, they would work toward an agreement that might lay the groundwork for future negotiations.

The meeting was announced by World Jewish Congress President Elie Wiesel and East German Foreign Minister Oskar Fischer. The meeting will take place in East Berlin, and details were not yet available. The two sides have already met informally several times during the past year.

The meeting is the first step in a series of discussions that could lead to formal talks on the Holocaust. The two sides have already met informally several times during the past year.

Dukakis assails Bush on illegal aliens

By The Associated Press

Wednesday, Oct. 19, 1988 - 3:30 p.m. - 4:00 p.m.

Dukakis assailed Bush on illegal aliens today in an attempt to show increased strength in his campaign.

Bush would have us believe he's going to lead us to a new era of peace, prosperity and security, the Massachusetts governor charged.

Bush's record in the Senate and the White House has demonstrated that he is not the leader America needs at this critical time in our history, Dukakis said.

No credibility

In a recent article published in The Daily Iowan, hundreds of Iowa Citizens protested the Constitution Review's draconic attempts to appease gay rights, a move well-intentioned. But another aspect of the Review deserves attention: its interesting policy aimed at opposing gay rights.

Examples are abundant. For several years, the Review has maintained an extensive list of cartoons depicting images of gay rights advocates and referring to them as "Big Junkins wears a toupee."

They have been subjected to slanderous, highly personal attacks. Perhaps the most telling example occurred during the last gubernatorial campaign. Throughout it, the Review kept hugging the fact that Democrats couldn't possibly win. It listed how successful conservative Leaveld Jenkins won a victory. (Is it in a campaign issue?)

On October 7, the Review's most recent issue: It contains an anonymous piece of dogged dedication at Student Senator President Melissa Heus. It calls her a "thief," says she's ugly, accuses her of pretentiousness, and gastrovolta her.

Of course, Remington and company form themselves as wise and their paper "informative" over a local version of National Lampoons. But The Review isn't funny. It's vicious, petty, and employs it in the worst way.

Obviously this ad hominem approach isn't necessary if the paper's point is to satirize, persuade, or even entertain.

But it's crucial to understand that The Review seeks to do far more than just make opposition feel uncomfortable. It seeks personally embarrass and humiliate its opponents with the ultimate aim of intimidating them.

Perhaps the most telling example occurred.

President Melinda Hess. It calls her a "coaster or skiing a dangerous game." Obviously this ad hominem approach isn't funny. It's vicious, malicious, and it's not funny.

Examples are abundant. For several years, The Daily Iowan has been covering Iowa State University's attempt to cut down on the number of resignations for increasing the retention of female and minority faculty.

Determinedly, the university has worked to cut down on the number of resignations from 97 during the 1986-87 academic year to 64 for the 1987-88 academic year. The university's Director of Women's Affairs has written that the retention rate is a good sign for the university. The high rate of retention is a good sign for the university. The high rate of retention is a good sign for the university.

However, we can see a new and disturbing trend emerging.

There are still improvements that need to be made. The university has worked to cut down on the number of resignations from 97 during the 1986-87 academic year to 64 for the 1987-88 academic year. The university's Director of Women's Affairs has written that the retention rate is a good sign for the university. The high rate of retention is a good sign for the university.

They're not even very convincing.

None of these statistics and reports are very convincing, and they're not even very convincing. None of these statistics and reports are very convincing, and they're not even very convincing.

The University of Iowa administration officials and faculty members should be aware of the change that has come up with a great measure of one marijuana possession case, and Noriega in the 1980s, Martin Scorsese is a great director of one marijuana possession case, and Noriega in the 1980s, Martin Scorsese is a great director.

By the way, sponsored by the university, the Daily Iowan, Martin Scorsese is a great director.

By the way, and those people who don't agree with the university need to entertain the crowd because Bush was forceful and because Bush was forceful.

And those people who do agree with the university need to entertain the crowd.

It's not that we're saying the university is right and those who disagree with the university are wrong. It's not that we're saying the university is right and those who disagree with the university are wrong.

The Daily Iowan — Iowa City, Iowa — Wednesday, October 19, 1988 — Page 13A

There is no beer at the stadium has been going on for years. I can still remember the time when I was a student at Iowa City and we were unable to go to games because of the stranglehold that the university had on the area. I always felt that this was unfair and that there should be a better way to enjoy the games. However, as time went on, I realized that the situation was inevitable. The university had too much control over the area and was able to prevent us from enjoying ourselves.

I was greatly disappointed when I heard that there would be no beer at the stadium this year. This is a terrible decision, and I urge the university to reconsider. It is not fair to the students who want to enjoy a game without having to worry about alcohol.

If the university truly wants to help us, then it should find a way to allow alcohol at the stadium. It is not a good idea to ban alcohol completely, but there must be some way for us to enjoy ourselves.

I hope that the university will take this issue seriously and find a solution that is satisfactory to all parties involved.

October Is National Apple Month!

Little Known Facts About Red Delicious Apples:
The story begins in the early 1870s near Peru, Illinois, when Jesse Hiatt planted an apple tree. The tree failed to thrive but a seedling root sprout did. The seedling grew and produced apples. Hiatt and the apple that the progenitor of the apple that we know today as Red Delicious.

The apples were a big hit and gained an official name. Clarence Roper, a writer for the "Hawkeye," called them Red Delicious. The story goes that the apple tree was accidentally lost in a train car, but the tree survived. It was later found and brought back to life. The tree bore a distinctive apple unlike any other. The tree was carefully boxed up and shipped to a nursery.

In the early 1870s, the Stark Brothers Nursery, well known developers of fruit varieties, held a fruit fair at Louisiana, Missouri. The apple tree was exhibited at the fair. It was placed in a display case and was considered a novelty. The tree was eventually purchased by Mr. Stark, who decided to make it a commercial apple variety.

McGwire wins Game 3 with 9th-inning homer

By Anne Wosch

In Game 3 of the World Series, the athletes were up against each other, fighting for victory. They knew that if they didn't play their best, their dreams of becoming the champions would fade away.

The game was intense, with each team拿出最好的表现。在关键时刻，本垒打成了决定胜负的关键。麦克圭尔在第九局一击必杀，为他的队伍赢得了比赛。

The key Minnesota player who will play in time against Iowa on Wednesday was on the court Tuesday during practice in preparation for the Big Ten Conference match. The home team, which is 8-3 and 7-1 this season, is under the leadership of head coach John MacFarlane. The Gophers are currently ranked 16th in the nation and will travel to Minneapolis to face the Hawkeyes for the conference title.

Fans of the Gophers and Hawkeyes are expected to attend the match, which is set to start at 7 p.m. at Coffman Natatorium. The game will be broadcast live on the Big Ten Network.

The Minnesota-Texas Christian University (TCU) series is known for its competitiveness, and both teams are aiming for a victory in this match.

Ex-Gamecock tells of steroid use

NEW YORK—Former South Carolina football player Tommy Cassella, a former holder of the school's all-time rushing record, has admitted to using steroids and other performance-enhancing drugs during his time at the university. Cassella, who played for the Gamecocks from 1984 to 1986, said he started using steroids in his junior year to try to regain his strength after missing an entire season due to injury.

Cassella told the Associated Press that he used anabolic steroids, human growth hormone, and human chorionic gonadotropin (HCG) during his time at South Carolina. He said he continued to use these drugs throughout his collegiate career and into the early part of his professional career.

Cassella's admission comes amid a nationwide investigation into steroid use among college athletes. The NCAA has been actively pursuing cases of steroid use, and several high-profile athletes, including former NFL player Greg LeMond and former NBA player Steve Francis, have been disciplined for using performance-enhancing drugs.

Cassella's story highlights the ongoing battle against steroid use in sports and the challenges faced by athletes who struggle with addictions. It also underscores the need for stricter regulations and education to prevent the use of performance-enhancing drugs in the future.
Korean: U.S. athletes hurt relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presence of U.S. athletes in the Seoul Olympic and Paralympic Games has done little to ease enduring tensions between South Korea and the United States, a Korean writer who serves on the U.S. Olympic Committee’s management team.

"It’s difficult for us to be a factor in the Olympics," said Bo Schembechler, a former U.S. Olympian and current coach at the University of Michigan. "We’re quite close, and if we really want to do the right thing, we need to do it.

In 1980, Seoul was threatened with a boycot by the United States and other nations over South Korea’s human rights record.

We have been fortunate things are going well this year. In March, we were able to stage the Winter Olympics in South Korea, and it's a great opportunity for us to put on a good show.

Young athletes from around the world have descended upon Seoul for the event, and we are excited to see how they perform.

Rob Stewart, Belcher have things to prove

SOUTH BAY, Calif. (AP) — The Athletic in the Big Ten season.

Rob Stewart, who pitched his first complete game last week against Wisconsin, has been struggling in recent outings.

"It's been a tough season for me," Stewart said. "I've been working hard to improve, but I have to be better.

Sandy Belcher, a former U.S. Olympian, has been a key figure in the Michigan lineup.

"I've been working hard to get back to my old self," Belcher said. "I'm excited to see how I perform in these situations.

Sundays premieres new season

By Steve T. Denehy

The Daily Iowa

U

iversity Theatre pro-

nounces its 1988-89 season with the University of Iowa’s "Sundays" today at 7:30 in Mabel Theatre.

The musical, winner of the 1987 Tony Award for Best Musical, is being performed in the University Theatre’s Main Stage Theatre. The show, directed by Kevin Goulding, features a cast of talented performers, including20-year-old son of the original Stearns, who has always dreamed of performing in the show.

The musical, which has been a favorite of audiences for more than 20 years, has been performed all over the world and has won countless awards. It is a story of love, loss, and redemption, and is sure to leave audiences with a new appreciation for the power of music and the human spirit.

The show runs through Sunday, Oct 21, and tickets are available at the box office or online. Don’t miss your chance to see this beloved musical and experience the magic of "Sundays."

"Like many other students, I found it difficult to find a job to help pay for my college expenses. My part-time job at PITT met my needs financially & gave me the opportunity to apply the skills I was learning in class. I have since turned that part-time job into a very promising career in sales management with one of the largest telemarketing firms in the nation."

-Jody Harmon

"PITT gave me the opportunity to work part-time evening hours while attending college. Since being promoted to supervisor, I have been able to learn many real-life experiences that will supplement my ongoing education."

-Keith Bohle

"I started at PIT as a part-time telemarketer while attending college in 1986. The professional and positive atmosphere along with the great people I work with makes my job fun and very rewarding."
