Library budget awaits regents approval

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

The state Board of Regents will vote on recommended library automation projects funding at a meeting Saturday in Iowa City.

The proposed budget includes more than $1.6 million to finance automation programs at the three state universities over the next two academic years.

The UI Library Automation Project would receive $400,000 in 1990 and $250,000 in 1991 if the proposal is accepted, Regent Mary Williams said.

The board revised its budget recommendation after its Oct. 19 meeting in Dubuque when officials from the three state universities criticized funding cutbacks.

The UI had originally requested $600,000 and $400,000 for library automation during the next two fiscal years but received no funding in the board's initial proposal.

Regents should support the library funding proposals because there is considerable need, Williams said. She said the library is "the real key to the university and to think that it has suffered is really regrettable."

UI administrators asked regents to include library automation funds in their request because funds were no longer available for library automation or other special projects, university librarian Sheila Creth said.

Since 1984, approximately $1.8

million of the UI general operating budget has been invested in the Online Access System for Information Sources, she said.

OASIS is an on-line catalog of more than 60 percent of all library holdings and may be accessed from UI computer clusters operating on the SYTEK network or OASIS terminals.

The catalog operates from a single data file and the integrated system will eventually support all library operations, including ordering and circulation throughout campus, Creth said.

Because all new card cataloging is now performed on OASIS, the system's maintenance and future improvements depend on adequate funding, she said.

The UI must rely on the regents to support the OASIS project, said Mary Jo Small, UI assistant vice president for Finance and University Services.

"I think the university and in particular the libraries have been squeezed about as tightly as they can be squeezed," Small said.

The university and UI Libraries' budgets are not in a position to allocate funds toward the library's automation project at a time of a hiring freeze and financial constraints, she said.

"The library is not in a position to reallocate internally to fund this," Small said.

Portuguese relive panic of radio tale

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — A 50th-anniversary re-creation of Orson Welles' "War of the Worlds" radio broadcast caused panic in a region of northern Portugal on Sunday, police and radio employees said.

Residents flocked to an area outside the town of Braga where the local radio station reported aliens from Mars were landing, officials said. Others began fleeing in cars while police and fire services were alerted by scores of calls, according to news reports from the area.

Lines reportedly formed at some gas stations.

The 90-minute broadcast was a recreation of Welles' radio dramatization of the H.G. Wells novel "The War of the Worlds."

On Oct. 30, 1938, the actor and director interrupted radio broadcast in the United States with a report that Martians had landed in New Jersey. The broadcast caused panic.

In Portugal, police were called to control 150 to 200 demonstrators who gathered outside the studios of Radio Braga to protest the broadcast of the re-creation of Welles' version, said Paulo Sousa, a reporter at the station.

Sousa said the station received more than 100 calls. "Some called to complain, some to inquire and some to offer congratulations," he said in a telephone interview.

Sousa said the broadcast was intended as an homage to Welles and had been well publicized previously in newspapers and on the radio station itself.

CIA-Off-Campus effort seeks to educate, petition, protest

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

After four years of anti-CIA recruitment protests and petitions, UI activist group New Wave is at it again.

In their continuing effort to heighten awareness of the activities of the Central Intelligence Agency and to stop the CIA from recruiting UI students on campus, New Wave members met last week to start their latest campaign, CIA-Off-Campus.

Approximately 30 UI students, Iowa City community members and UI faculty and staff gathered to discuss what New Wave member Bill Barry called a "coalition-building" strategy for stopping the CIA's next UI recruiting visit, scheduled for Dec. 6.

"New Wave is reacting to the CIA's covert activities and protesting the human rights violations of our government that are supported by the CIA," said New Wave member Roberta Branca.

Included in plans for the CIA-Off-Campus effort is a meeting with UI President Hunter Rawlings this week to present New Wave's demands.

"The reason we're running the whole gamut of drawing up our demands and presenting them to the president is that, with Rawlings being so new, we really have no idea what his stand is on this," New Wave member John Stonebarger said, but added "we really don't expect the UI to change its policy that any employer can recruit on campus as long as it meets the guidelines."

The next steps for CIA-Off-Campus will include "educational set-ups" and a petition drive to get signatures from members of the UI community opposed to the CIA's on-campus recruiting, Barry said.

"Our petition drive has gotten a positive response in the past," Stonebarger said. "It's a strong, face-to-face public reaction."

New Wave has planned protests every semester since the fall of 1984, coordinating with the occasions that the CIA has held interviews on campus, he said.

New Wave's past demonstrations have raised the public's awareness of the issue and also put pressure on the CIA and the UI to stop the recruiting visits, Stonebarger said. Approximately 70 have been arrested during the protests.

Modern witches shrug 'Bewitched' cliché

By Hilery Livengood
The Daily Iowan

Tonight at least 150,000 people across the United States will be celebrating the new year.

Halloween is more than just a time for carving pumpkins and trick-or-treating to this group. It is also a sacred holiday for witches across the nation, a time for them to pay respect to departed loved ones and ancestors.

"For thousands of years, witches have celebrated the new year, Samhain, on Halloween," said Selena Fox, a Wiccan high priestess at Circle Sanctuary in Bar-neveld, Wis. "It's a very sacred time for us. We spend a lot of time out in nature holding parties and ceremonies and celebrating the changing seasons."

Fox is a member of the Wiccan Church, "a contemporary form of nature religion," she said. "The focus of our religion is communing with the divine through nature."

However, Fox must continually defend her religious preference and occupation. She is often called a satanist and a criminal simply because many Wiccans call themselves witches.

"Many practitioners use the word 'witch' to describe themselves,"

Fox said. "Witch is a term of honor used hundreds and hundreds of years ago that meant wise one, healer, a person associated with medicine."

"But today people are using the word in many different ways," she said. "People are persecuting members of religions different than their own by saying other religions, such as ours, is satanic. People used the lie that we are satanic criminals to stir up public hatred."

Wiccans neither believe in nor worship Satan. "Unfortunately, satanism and witchcraft are often seen as one in the same, and they are not. Witchcraft has gotten a

U.S. reduces Persian Gulf warship fleet

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The United States plans to reduce its fleet of warships in the Persian Gulf this week with the withdrawal of a frigate, U.S. sources said Sunday. The move reflects confidence in the Iran-Iraq truce.

The sources said the vessel will leave barring a last-minute change in plans. It would be the first American warship to be removed from the gulf since Iran and Iraq agreed to an Aug. 20 cease-fire in their eight-year war.

The 3,600-ton missile frigate, the USS Rodney M. Davis, will be detached from gulf duty on Tuesday, said the sources on condition of anonymity. It will sail for its home port in Yokosuka, Japan, they said.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Mike Stepp refused comment, citing a Defense Department policy of not discussing ship movements or locations for security reasons.

The ship's departure would trim overall American naval strength in the region from 26 to 25 vessels. The Pentagon says the U.S. gulf force will gradually be scaled back to a pre-war level of about five ships if the cease-fire stays in effect.

U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf and nearby waters have frequently departed, but they were replaced by other vessels in a rotation schedule.

The fleet dropped from 27 to 26 ships when the USS Vincennes cruiser departed from the Arabian Sea on Sept. 5. The Vincennes was to have been replaced by the cruiser USS Mobile Bay, but the orders sending it to the gulf area were canceled a day before it was to have left.

Since the cease-fire, no flareups of violence have been reported in the waterway. More than 500 commercial ships were damaged there by air and gunboat attacks in the four-year tanker war that spun off the main Iraq-Iran ground conflict.

U.S. military officials have already ended 17 months of escorting convoys of U.S.-flagged Kuwaiti oil tankers and curtailed regional air surveillance.

The U.S. Navy squadron inside the gulf itself, normally about 16 ships, includes six minesweepers, an amphibious landing ship and the flagship USS La Salle. There are also two missile cruisers, one missile destroyer and four frigates besides the Rodney M. Davis.

U.N. mediates release of Iran-Iraq prisoners

GENEVA (AP) — U.N.-mediated peace talks between Iran and Iraq resume Monday in an effort to consolidate the precarious truce and disengage troops in the 8-year-old Persian Gulf war.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar flew to Geneva Sunday and said he hoped for substantive progress on an exchange of prisoners held by the two countries.

Each country released 25 prisoners of war Sunday but still holds thousands of others.

Iraq freed 25 disabled Iranian prisoners, and they were flown to Tehran, the capital of Iran, aboard a plane chartered by the International Red Cross. Iran reciprocated immediately by releasing 25 Iraqi prisoners who boarded the same plane for the return flight to Baghdad, Iraq, according to Françoise Derand, a spokesman at the Red Cross office in Geneva.

In a brief chat with reporters after his arrival, Perez de Cuellar said he hoped the meetings in Geneva would be "if possible much more useful" than the 10-day round early this month in New York.

Perez de Cuellar last week named withdrawal of the forces as his first priority in the new negotiations.

Urgency to his efforts was added by a report warning that forces "remain in dangerous proximity" after eight years of fighting that has killed or wounded an estimated 1.5 million.

The report by the U.N. Iran-Iraq Military Observer Group warned of constant danger of renewed fighting between the two sides, whose soldiers are separated in some places by only 30 feet.

Javier Perez de Cuellar

A cease-fire has been in effect since Aug. 20.

Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and his Iraqi counterpart, Tariq Aziz, have said no progress was made on the principal issue stalemating the talks since they began in Geneva Aug. 25 — the delineation of a border between the two nations.

Iran says a 1975 treaty set the border in the middle of the Shatt-al-Arab waterway, Iraq's only navigable outlet to the sea.

Iraq, which rejected the treaty in 1980, demands sovereignty over the entire waterway.

Other disputed stretches line the more than 800-mile-long frontier, according to U.N. sources. They say the discrepancies have impeded an exact definition of the "internationally recognized boundaries" to which the two countries are to withdraw

Art historian to lecture on UI campus tomorrow

Internationally acclaimed art historian Svetlana Alpers, a professor at the University of California at Berkeley, will give a lecture, "Rubens and the Engendering of Art," at 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Art Building, Room E109.

Alpers received her doctorate from Harvard University and has taught at Berkeley since 1965. She is distinguished by her numerous awards and fellowships, as well as her contributions to Baroque art and the theory and practice of art history.

Alpers' book, "Art of Describing: Dutch Art in the Seventeenth Century," published in 1983 and since translated into five languages, won the 1983 Eugene M. Kayden Award for the best book in the humanities published by a University Press. Her most recent work, "Rembrandt's Enterprise: the Studio and the Market," was published this year.

Alpers is also the co-founder of the distinguished interdisciplinary journal, Representations, for which she is currently serving as co-director, as well as a consultant for other art history and humanities journals.

The lecture is free and open to the public. A reception will follow.

Mercy Hospital holds support group meeting

Mercy Hospital's family-centered maternity care facility has scheduled several educational workshops during the month of November. They include:

- Childbirth Preparation, for couples in the third trimester of pregnancy, will meet Nov. 1 and 8 or 15 and 22 at 7 p.m.
- Early Bird, for couples in the first trimester of pregnancy, will meet Nov. 16 at 7 p.m.

- New Mother and Baby Classes are held every Thursday at 10 a.m.
- New Brother/New Sister classes are scheduled for Nov. 10 at 10 a.m. or 6 p.m. for children ages 3 to 6 and 7 p.m. for children age 7 to 12.

Mercy has also scheduled two meetings this month for its Stroke Club. The club will meet at 1:30 p.m. Nov. 1 and 15 in the First Floor Conference Room.

The Stroke Club is a support group for stroke victims and their families and friends. Participants share experiences in an atmosphere that is confidential and supportive. Kim Stewart, an occupational therapist, hosts the meetings.

For additional information on any of Mercy's support groups and workshops, call the Education Office at 337-0670.

Nominations wanted for small-business award

The U.S. Small Business Administration is seeking nominations for outstanding small-business owners and operators, as well as small business advocates, for Small Businessperson of the Year and Small Business Advocates of the Year awards.

Awards for outstanding achievement for small businesspersons and advocates (including those in the areas of accounting, financial services and the media) will be given at the state level, and those winners will then be nominated for the national award, which will be announced during Small Business Week. The 1989 Small Business Week, which has a theme "Small Business Is America's Future" will be observed from May 7 to 13.

The deadline for submitting nominations is Nov. 17. Specific details and criteria may be obtained by calling J.C. Studer, District Public Information Officer of the U.S. Small Business Administration Cedar Rapids office at 399-2571.

Nagle gets campaign boosts from teaching, farm groups

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

Third District Congressman Dave Nagle, D-Iowa, received endorsements Friday from the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation and the Iowa State Educators Association — both the largest groups of their kind in the state.

Nagle faces Republican challenger Don Redfern in the November elections. Redfern is a Cedar Falls, Iowa, attorney running his first political race.

Friday's endorsements are the latest in a growing list of organizations that have decided to support Nagle in his bid to retain the seat he won two years ago. His victory in 1986 ended 52 years of Republican congressional control in the 3rd District.

ISEA president Ken Tilp said the endorsement by the educator's association was prompted by Nagle's 100-percent congressional voting record in favor of measures to increase educational funding. The ISEA gave Nagle a 100-percent rating based on this record, he said.

In his two years in Congress, Nagle has frequently criticized the Reagan administration's funding cuts in education. Since 1981, educational spending by the federal government has decreased 29 percent in real dollar amounts.

Nagle said these cuts indicate the administration's "skewed priorities."

"We have, as a country, dropped tremendously in terms of educational achievement," said Nagle. "You've got to invest to grow."

Tilp gave Republican presidential candidate George Bush a grade of "F" for his educational policies.

"Bush wants to be the education president," but we believe he's been playing hooky," said Tilp.

Nagle's other endorsement Friday from the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation carried with it a $2,500 campaign contribution from the IFBF's Political Action Committee.

Nagle regularly accepts PAC contributions to fund his campaigns. Sixty-five percent of his total campaign funds since January 1985 have come from such groups.

Agricultural organizations like the Iowa Farm Bureau have been Nagle's second-largest contributor — donating a total of $16,983 to date since January 1985, according to Federal Election Commission records.

Other groups who have already endorsed Nagle include: The National Farmers Union, The Iowa Council of Senior Citizens, The Iowa Medical Association, the American Agriculture Movement, The Council for a Livable World and the Iowa Nurses' Association.

The Sierra Club is expected to announce its endorsement of Nagle on Tuesday.

Iowa City drivers gear up for winter

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents may not need parkas and snowblowers for a few weeks yet, but it's not too early to prepare cars for the frigid winter months ahead.

Iowa City garages are busy servicing customers' cars with pre-winter checkups and overhauls.

Joyce Harney, receptionist for Ed Harney Auto Service, 404 S. Van Buren St., said business is heavy.

"We've been very busy lately," Harney said. "I'd say we average six to seven (pre-winter checkups) each day on top of the normal routine."

Cars need to be serviced and readied for winter during autumn, before the weather gets too cold, she said.

"Between now and November is the best time to do it," said Harney. "It should be done before it gets really cold."

Harney said various parts of the vehicle — including the battery, hoses, belts, oil, filter, anti-freeze and windshield wiper blades — need to be examined before cold weather sets in.

"Hoses and belts need to be looked at because they can get soft and cracked when they get old," she said. "You also need to look at tires for wear and air pressure and make sure windshield wiper blades are operating properly for the slush and snow. We suggest getting a tuneup once a year or every 10,000 to 12,000 miles."

Harney said snow tires are important for driving in winter weather conditions.

"Snow tires are a real good idea," she said. "We also recommend that light cars with rear-wheel drive put some kind of weight in the back."

The woman took a bottle and a half of pain relievers with alcohol, according to the report.

Report: An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with assault causing injury, according to police reports.

Eugene F. Alvis, 26, address unavailable, was charged at Colonial Bowling Lanes, Highway 218 South, according to the report.

Courts

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with domestic abuse and assault causing injury Friday for allegedly injuring a woman with whom he lived at their residence on Bartelt Road, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Beverly James Randall, also known as James Wright Jr., 36, of 2534 Bartelt Road, allegedly choked the woman, struck her in the head and twisted her arm, according to court records.

Iowa City police officers had responded to a report of a domestic assault made by someone other than the victim or the defendant when they observed marks and abrasions on the woman's body, according to court records.

Court records state the defendant allegedly provided the arresting officers and Johnson County Jail staff with two names. He and the victim identified the defendant as Beverly James Randall at the time of the arrest. While he was being booked, Randall allegedly told deputies his name was James Wright and signed information cards with that name.

Randall/Wright is being held on $1,000 bail. He was ordered not to have any contact with the victim. A preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 4, according to court records.

An Iowa City woman was charged with third-degree theft Friday for allegedly taking $200 from the safe of the department store where she was employed, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Lillie Mae Miller, 22, of 906 Harlocke St., allegedly took the money from a safe in the office of Petersen Harned Von Maur, Sycamore Mall Shopping Center. The action was recorded on videotape and Miller allegedly admitted to store security officers to having taken the money, according to court records.

Miller was released from custody on her own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 16, according to court records.

Two Iowa City men were charged with third-degree criminal mischief Friday for allegedly breaking a picture window of a house on Rider Street with a frozen chicken, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Thomas L. Swartzbaugh, 21, and Cecil Ray Hall, 22, both of 816 N. Dubuque St., were arrested after Iowa City police officers saw a vehicle matching a description and having a license plate number reported by the Rider Street resident. The resident told police he had seen the vehicle speed away after the window was broken, according to court records.

Swartzbaugh was identified as the driver of the vehicle and allegedly admitted to having been in the area of the house. Hall, the passenger in the vehicle, also allegedly admitted to police to having been in the area about the time the incident occurred, according to court records.

Both men were released from custody on their own recognizance. A preliminary hearing for each case is scheduled for Nov. 16, according to court records.

UI poll: F

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

The race between presidential candidates George Bush and Michael Dukakis has once again reached dead heat, according to a UI released Friday.

Bush only leads Dukakis 46 to 44 percent in a seven-state region composed of Iowa and its adjacent states, with 10 percent of those surveyed remaining undecided. The poll's margin of error in the entire region is plus or minus 3.5 percent.

In Iowa, Bush maintains an advantage he achieved following the second presidential debate leading Dukakis 51 to 49 percent with a possible sampling error plus or minus 9 points.

The figures are the result of a second wave of the Heartland Poll conducted through the UI Science Institute. The telephone survey of 670 respondents was conducted between Oct. 15 and Oct. 26, with approximately 100 eligible voters interviewed in each of the seven states.

"If I had to map the momentum of the media, I would say that the opinion is moving back toward Dukakis," said Arthur H. Miller, UI political science professor and director of the institute. "I think that people who were negatively affected by his performance in the second debate are now drifting back towards the Dukakis camp."

A major part of the change in Dukakis' more aggressive stance in the media, Miller cited Dukakis' CNN and Nightline appearances as well as his more forceful attacks on George Bush as being positive for the candidate.

While many UI students spent the weekend relaxing indoors, 90 Army ROTC cadets battled the cold and rain while they carried out their fall field training exercises.

The FTX was held Oct. 21 and 22 at Sugarbottom Recreation Area, 15 miles northeast of Iowa City. Fall and spring FTX's are the two major Army ROTC training programs executed at the UI every year.

FTX's are designed to prepare junior cadets for Advanced Camp, a six-week program that tests leadership abilities of all cadets. The 1989 camp will be held in Fort Lewis, Wash.

The two-day exercises provide junior cadets with experience in a situation that has less pressure than the Advanced Camp, according to Lt. Col. Steven Frederic, professor of military science and head of the UI Army ROTC program.

"I would hate to say that the negative campaigning is working for Dukakis, but unfortunately I think it is," Miller said.

Another factor influencing public opinion is the fluctuating opinions of independents and conservative Democrats.

Commenting on the indecisiveness of these groups, Miller said, "Their choices are stamped in Jell-O, not cement."

According to the poll, the race has tightened considerably in Minnesota and Wisconsin, states in which Bush made heavy advances following the debate. Dukakis and the vice president are still virtually tied in Iowa, Illinois and South Dakota, with neither candidate ahead or behind by more than a two-point margin. In Missouri and Nebraska, Bush has a clear-cut advantage, with at least 20-point leads in both states.

The election race in the Midwest is much more volatile than in the rest of the country, where polls show a definite leaning for one candidate or the other.

"The Midwest is not doing as well economically as the rest of the country," Miller said. "The issues in this part of the country, like agriculture, are more likely to push voters towards Dukakis. Crime and drugs are not as important here."

"The race here is mostly up for grabs. It could be a real battleground," he added.

Other findings from the poll indicate that in the Midwest:

- The public image of Bush as an honest, moral candidate has declined in the past weeks, probably due to increased mudslinging in his ads and campaign speeches.

- Dukakis' more forceful rhetoric and ads have paid off, with a 3-percent increase in the public view of him as a strong leader and a man of action.

- Dukakis is also ahead of Bush in the polls as being a caring, compassionate person. Since September, Dukakis has risen from 30 percent to 33 percent in this category. Bush achieved a 17-percent rating in September and has consistently remained at that level throughout the campaign.

Field training tests ROTC cadets

By Joe Duggan
Special to The Daily Iowan

While many UI students spent the weekend relaxing indoors, 90 UI Army ROTC cadets battled the cold and rain while they carried out their fall field training exercises.

The FTX was held Oct. 21 and 22 at Sugarbottom Recreation Area, 15 miles northeast of Iowa City. Fall and spring FTX's are the two major Army ROTC training programs executed at the UI each year.

FTX's are designed to prepare junior cadets for Advanced Camp, a six-week program that tests the leadership abilities of all cadets. The 1989 camp will be held in Fort Lewis, Wash.

The two-day exercises provide junior cadets with experience in a situation that has less pressure than the Advanced Camp, according to Lt. Col. Steven Fredericks, professor of military science and head of the UI Army ROTC program.

"We want them to make mistakes now, then hopefully mistakes won't be made when they count," Fredericks said.

Cadet Major Luke Peters, a UI senior who has been through the Advanced Camp, said one exercise the cadets must learn to master during the FTX is land navigation.

"In the Army, you have to know where the hell you are," Peters said. "You can't do anything without land navigation skills."

During the FTX, land navigation means finding hidden flags. Junior cadets are given a map and coordinates and have two hours to find flags staked somewhere in the area.

Cadet Major Mark Beaird, who was responsible for much of the planning and organization of the FTX, said some cadets occasionally get lost on the navigation course.

"But you never say 'lost' in the army," Beaird said. "You say 'misoriented.'"

Beaird said the elements provided motivation for the cadets to decipher the coordinates. "When they get cold, they will find their way back to camp," Beaird said.

In planning the FTX, Beaird said an effort was made to make the exercises as enjoyable as possible without compromising the effectiveness of the training.

One thing no one could plan for was the weather. "I went to sleep under the stars and woke up with frost on my sleeping bag Saturday morning," Peters said.

Fredericks said good weather prevailed for the initial stages of the exercises until the wind picked up Saturday night. Later that evening, the cadets broke out their foul-weather gear as the rain poured down.

Fredericks said poor weather conditions make it more difficult to concentrate on the exercises and add more stress to the situation.

When the exercises ended for the day, the cadets could not retreat to a warm bed and a hot meal. In the field, the cadets sleep in a small tent, and their supper consists of an Army-issued meal.

Student Health meets variety of needs

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

For students who hate to wait, it's best to visit the UI Student Health Service on Monday or Friday afternoons, the service's least busy days.

But predicting the number of patients that will visit Student Health during the average day is difficult. Anywhere from 40 to 270 drop-in patients receive treatment from the 10 doctors and nine nurses there daily. Last year doctors treated 40,000 patients for various injuries or ailments.

Head Nurse Karen Terra said students may not be aware of the savings and variety of services provided by Student Health.

Student Health may perform minor surgery for small cysts, moles and ingrown toenails. Doctors also treat many common health problems such as influenza.

The clinic screens foreign students for tuberculosis and tries to provide health literature in foreign languages as part of the International Health Program.

Patients with broken bones and acute illnesses requiring hospitalization are referred to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, Terra said.

Confidentiality is guaranteed to all students, Terra said. The staff may not disclose any information to students' parents.

Birth control and sexually transmitted diseases are also treated with confidentiality.

The staff makes an effort to be convenient for busy students by calling them when a strep throat test is positive. If the student cannot be reached by phone, the office will send a letter. Terra said.

Student Health employees have taken phone numbers home to try to call students during the evening.

Terra said there is a lot of concern for students at the clinic. "There's a lot of concern there. I'm not sure that you would see this in a (non-student oriented) office," she said.

Officer Sid Jackson checks local bars for illegal drinkers

By Amy Boyle
Special to The Daily Iowan

One of the most recognizable personalities frequenting many Iowa City bars is not looking for a drink and a good time. It is Iowa City police officer Sid Jackson, and he is looking for underage drinkers.

Jackson began patrolling local bars three and a half years ago and has been increasing his surveillance due to the change in Iowa's legal drinking age. Jackson said success at his job comes from "an ability to read people."

front of the police" is a prime candidate for an ID check.

Intuition and patrons' body language lead him to underage drinkers, he said. "It's pretty obvious when they are nervous."

Jason, a UI junior, said he was arrested last year by Jackson at the College Street Club, 121 E. College St.

"The guy I was with saw him and said 'I'm going to the washroom,' and that's why he ID'd us," he said.

Jackson said he will ask for a valid form of identification, and students will usually offer it or deny that they have any. According to Jackson, experience with traffic violation stops and a police handbook of valid licenses from every state help him recognize fake identification.

UI students often go to great lengths to alter an ID or obtain one from someone of legal drinking age who looks like them, Jackson said. However, he said it is usually very easy to recognize IDs that have been altered or notice differences in height, weight, eye color or other distinguishing characteristics.

"Most people who get caught have IDs that aren't that good," Jackson said.

Controlling underage drinking is complicated when 18- to 20-year-olds are allowed into bars, Jackson said. Employees in a bar cannot effectively monitor underage customers, especially when groups of them find a legal drinker to purchase their drinks for them.

Despite police patrols, Jackson said nothing can completely curb underage drinking.

"If people want to drink in their dorm or in their apartment, we can't really control it," Jackson said. "We're not the Gestapo. They just can't drink in a licensed bar."

Jackson said he sees a variety of reactions when he arrests students, ranging from tears to finding the ordeal humorous. Some students who had dealt with Jackson complained that he was too tough with them.

UI junior Elizabeth Delagardelle was arrested by Jackson at The Airliner, 22 S. Clinton St., her freshman year.

"He made me get into the car and

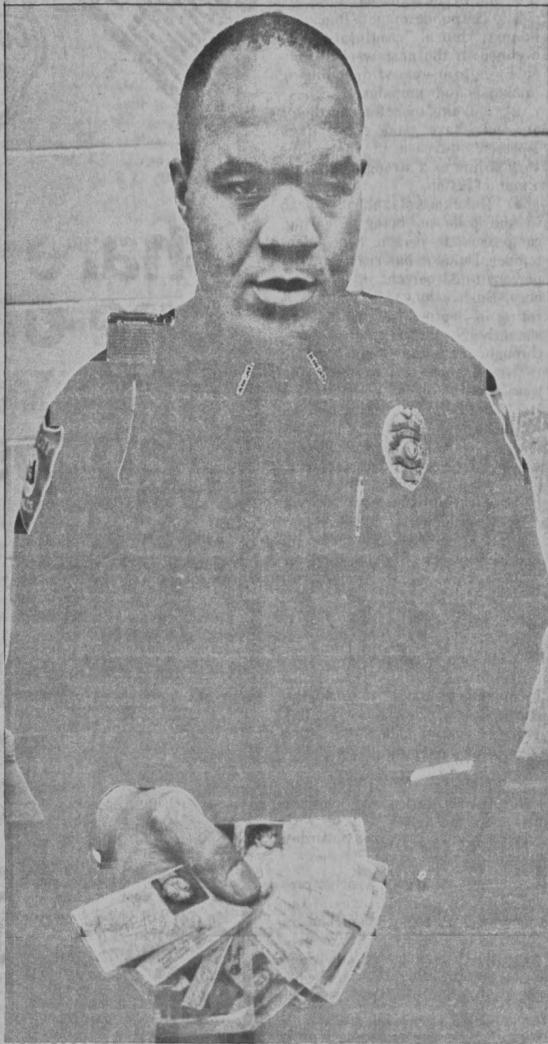

Jackson said his normal procedure is to enter the bar and scope it out for a few seconds. He said anyone in the bar who "starts sprinting and who is generally uneasy in front of the police" is a prime candidate for an ID check.

"It's looking for general youngness," he said. "It's anyone who doesn't look like they're 21."

Bar patrons can expect to see Jackson or other police officers during the prime arrest hours of 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Wednesday through Saturday nights. During this time, Jackson said he averages about 10 arrests per hour on a busy night.

"It's not so much trying to catch everyone," Jackson said. "It is to make students think before going down to a bar."

Jackson said his normal procedure is to enter the bar and scope it out for a few seconds. He said anyone in the bar who "starts sprinting and who is generally uneasy in threatened to make me spend the night in jail while making sarcastic, rude comments," Delagardelle said. "I was really scared, and there was no reason for him to humiliate me like he did."

Bar patrons who have had experience with Jackson may find his views on the current drinking age surprising.

"My feeling is that it should probably be 18 years old," Jackson said. "The whole thing was political."

Jackson said the state of Iowa changed the law in order to keep federal highway funding. He said that when the state lowered the simple misdemeanor fine from $100 to $15 for consuming alcohol under the legal age, it sent a mixed message to those who did not make the legal age.

If the laws were to change back to the 18-year-old drinking age in the future, Jackson said it wouldn't be much of a problem controlling underage drinking.

Zetas 'recolonize' at UI for fresh start, strength

By Julie Creswell
Special to The Daily Iowan

When the national organization of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority celebrates its 19th anniversary next year, the UI Zeta chapter will be celebrating its first year of a new beginning.

Based on a mutual decision between the national sorority and the UI Zeta Tau Alpha chapter, the local sorority was recolonized in the spring of 1988.

Alisa O'Donnell, a UI junior who became the new president of Zeta Tau Alpha, said both the national organization and the UI chapter felt the chapter needed a fresh start. All previously active members of the sorority were made alumni at that time, and the colony started over with new members, she said.

"We're a colony, not a chapter, because we have no actives," O'Donnell said. "Right now, we're doing the work of actives and pledges. We're starting the reputation of this house on this campus, which we will build on in the following years."

A drop in the recent recruitment of the UI Zeta chapter was cited as the main reason for the recolonization.

"There gets to be a point in any organization when recruitment becomes not so good," said UI Office of Campus Programs and Student Services Coordinator Mary Peterson. "Unfortunately, we live in a world of stereotyping. When a chapter becomes smaller in size, people believe because you're small, you're not good."

Peterson said she supported Zeta's decision to recolonize. "It's not something you like to have happen," she said. "But it was the best move."

The recolonization would have a positive effect on the entire greek system as well as the Zeta house, Peterson said. "It makes our system even stronger as a whole," she said.

The Zeta house participated in the UI's formal rush this year and is still holding an open-bidding informal rush. Zeta pledged 36 women during formal rush and have increased their membership to 50.

During formal rush, O'Donnell said the other greek chapters were helpful in tackling problems that arose.

"The other sororities and fraternities have been incredibly helpful," O'Donnell said. "Many sororities donated girls to be our 'big sisters.' They helped us get started and make a smooth transition for the first six weeks. It was great to get insight from people on trouble spots."

The UI Panhellenic Council also helped the Zeta members during formal rush week.

"I'm real proud of our Panhellenic officers," Peterson said. "They were there during rush helping to serve food and being very supportive."

Two other UI sororities have recently recolonized. "Sigma Kappa sorority recolonized a year ago and they are doing excellent, and Delta Zeta recolonized recently also, and they are doing outstanding," Peterson said. "When this happens, it really builds up the program."

O'Donnell said she has an optimistic outlook on the future of the house.

"We have an incredibly busy schedule," she said. "This change is one of the best things that could have happened. It has a positive effect on this house, which extends to the entire greek system."

New law requires registration of all health clubs with state

DES MOINES (AP) — Health clubs must register with the state under a new Iowa law, Attorney General Tom Miller said Friday.

Miller said he proposed the law after hundreds of Iowans were left with worthless memberships to clubs that closed. In many cases, the clubs sold memberships while their facilities were under construction and never opened.

Miller said the new law gives the Attorney General's office information that will help officials track down club owners.

L'Engle defends philosophy behind Christian writing style

By Steve Brewer
Special to The Daily Iowan

"I am not a Christian writer, I am a writer who is a Christian and that is a very different thing. Christian writers write for Christians, people who already have the message, and as long as they get the message right, they don't have to write very well," Madeleine L'Engle said.

L'Engle, author of the Newbery Award-winning book A Wrinkle in Time, spoke to a capacity crowd at Old Brick Thursday night about the Christian and creativity.

"My understanding of the Gospel is that it is to be spread to those who don't have it, not kept for the little in-group that is already there. If my work is not comprehensible to a Jew or a Mohammedan, then I have failed," L'Engle said.

L'Engle believes all activities under creation — whether they be visual or verbal — are religious. Writing and praying are similar, she said, because each involves being in tune with one's inner self.

"My art has always been an expression of my faith," L'Engle said.

Her faith, the fruit of an introspective childhood, is still maturing. She attended grade school in New York City and hated it because others perceived her as being "not very bright," she said. The author found that her intellectual sustenance had to come from her home life.

She said she believes one of the most important ingredients for producing a good storyteller is growing up in an atmosphere where reading and writing are taken for granted.

L'Engle spent her adolescent life at an Anglican boarding school where she was known as number 97. The dehumanizing effect of being a number produced in her a passion for naming things, which is a theme found in several of her books.

While attending boarding school, she cultivated a poppy garden and unknowingly consumed the opium in poppy sandwiches. The hallucinogenic effect of these sandwiches put her into a dream world, she said.

"What I did with my dream book and poppy sandwiches was to rebel against the limited world of proven fact alone," L'Engle said.

In her childhood, L'Engle began reading the Bible because it was a storybook about "ordinary, sinful, unqualified people like the rest of us," she said. Daily Bible study is still an important part of her schedule, along with reading Shakespeare and 16th-century writers, who have a "marvelous vocabulary and help make up for living in a vocabulary-deprived country," she said.

Many of her books have been rejected by publishers because the vocabulary in the books and the content was thought to be above the understanding of children. She confesses she does not have an audience in mind when she writes but writes mainly for herself.

"The only difference in writing for children is that most 12-year-olds don't want to read about some disenchanting 40-year-old protagonist," L'Engle said. "I know that when I have written something which is too difficult for grown-ups, I should introduce a young hero and market it for children."

Since childhood, much of her writing has been motivated by grief. But does suffering necessarily make one a better writer?

"Well, it helps, but don't go out searching for pain," she said. "Just wait, and it will come to you."

L'Engle uses writing to air her frustrations and pain, she said. She encourages every budding author to begin a journal.

"When something really gets to me and hurts me, I cannot heal myself until I have written about the experience," L'Engle said.

L'Engle is currently a writer in residence at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

Salvation Army opens center to homeless for frigid days

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County's homeless need no longer fear frigid daytime temperatures.

The Salvation Army opens a day center for the homeless today. The center, 331 E. Market St., will be open daily from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

Lt. Kenneth Nicolai, newly appointed administrator of the Salvation Army Services in Johnson County, said the center opened because the homeless needed a place to stay warm during the day.

"They have a shelter to sleep in at night, but no place to go during the day," Nicolai said. "This will be a place where they can go to get out of the cold and get a cup of coffee."

The center will serve other purposes for the homeless as well.

"We want it to be set up as a referral service they can use to find a job," he said. "There will be contacts they can use to help them get out of their homeless situation."

The Salvation Army opened its office last week after a study revealed the need for an office in Johnson County, Nicolai said.

Before opening the new office, a local service extension, composed entirely of volunteers, worked with the Sheriff's Department, the Veterans Administration Hospital, the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the Crisis Center to serve the area, Nicolai said.

Nicolai said the need for services increased during the last several years, putting a strain on volunteers' time and necessary funding.

"Last year, $12,000 was spent in vouchers," he said. "That's unusually high compared to the $2,000 to $3,000 that was spent each year, five or six years ago."

Nicolai is confident the office will be successful.

"There was a lot of planning, studying and consideration put into setting this up in Iowa City," he said. "The Salvation Army invested about $67,000 in this."

"People tend to think that because this is a college town, there isn't a problem here," said Nicolai. "But there are some people who can't match up to a master's degree or even go to college at all. It creates a stressful situation which sometimes results in an alcohol or drug-related problem."

Nicolai said the Salvation Army is different from other community service agencies because it attends to physical, emotional and spiritual needs.

"We counsel, encourage and direct people in over 92 countries," said Nicolai. "We offer a unique ministry to all walks of life. We help with alcohol, drugs, if you're hungry, lonely or just down and out. We address all needs."

Palestinians kill 3 in passenger bus ambush

JERUSALEM — Palestinians ambushed and fire bombed a passenger bus in the occupied West Bank on Sunday night killing an Israeli woman and her two infants and injuring eight other Israelis, officials said.

The bus was stopped by a barricade of stones set up in a main street of Jericho, a Biblical town seven miles east of Jerusalem, Israeli officials said on condition of anonymity.

Israel radio quoted military sources as saying Palestinian youths hurled five fire bombs at the bus, which was carrying about 20 people, most of them civilians.

The red and white Egged bus was traveling from Tiberius on the Sea of Galilee to Jerusalem when it was halted about 8 p.m.

It was engulfed in fire before the woman and her babies, sitting in the rear, could be rescued, witnesses said. Their identities were not released, and officials said they did not know the ages of the infants.

Earlier, a Palestinian was killed and 21 others wounded in clashes between Israeli soldiers and Arab demonstrators in the West Bank and occupied Gaza Strip.

The deaths raised the toll to 305 Palestinians and nine Israelis killed since the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation began Dec. 8.

The deaths, the worst shedding of Israeli blood since the Palestinian uprising began 10 months ago, came two days before Tuesday's Parliament elections.

Gorbachev impatient with pace of reforms

MOSCOW — President Mikhail Gorbachev says he's had enough of meetings and sloganeering and that it's time for Soviet society to get down to work.

Speaking to a gathering of the Young Communist League, or Komsomol, Gorbachev expressed his impatience with the slow pace of reform under his policy of perestroika, or restructuring.

"Society has been engaging in meetings for too long," he said Saturday. "Meetings, slogans and criticisms should be followed by acts which would set the policy and the entire potential of society into motion."

Gorbachev's remarks were distributed late Saturday by the official news agency Tass. They appeared to signal the Soviet leader's impatience to get the country moving rather than any disenchantment with the more open atmosphere he has fostered.

His policy of glasnost, or greater openness, has encouraged more open public debate and a wide-ranging re-evaluation of Soviet history and future prospects.

Explosion, fire destroy portion of oil refinery

WHITING, Ind. — A fire in a section of an oil refinery that makes asphalt triggered an explosion Sunday, killing one worker and injuring three others, authorities said.

"We have three males covered with asphalt, and they are working them up. It looks like these guys are going to have some pretty good burns. We're probably going to helicopter them up to Chicago," said Marian Hall, a nursing supervisor in the emergency room at St. Catherine's Hospital in East Chicago.

The fire at the Amoco Oil Co. refinery began shortly before 2 p.m. in the No. 3 oxidizer unit, which makes industrial asphalt, and was controlled by the refinery's firefighting crew within a half-hour, said Elise Sims, a spokesperson for the refinery.

The cause of the fire and explosion were not immediately known.

Keg thrown onto campfire explodes, kills 1

DANBURY, N.H. — An empty beer keg thrown onto a campfire exploded Sunday, killing a man at his birthday party in the second such death reported this month.

Chris John Widebeck, who turned 21 on Friday, had been with more than a dozen friends from his hometown, Northborough, Mass., when the aluminum keg exploded at 12:45 a.m. and a piece struck him in the head, said Danbury Police Chief Stephen Corsetti.

Widebeck died at the scene. No one else was injured. Corsetti said the friends had gathered for the weekend at a cottage owned by Phillip Giroux, 26, of Northborough. His birthday also was Friday.

"The weekend was planned as a birthday celebration for the two individuals," Corsetti said.

Corsetti would not say who put the keg into the fire.

Imelda Marcos

Marcos jets to N.Y. in lap of luxury

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Philippine first lady Imelda Marcos arrived by luxury jet and limousine along with her entourage Sunday to face arraignment on federal charges she and her husband looted their homeland of $100 million.

Marcos' flight aboard the borrowed private jet from Honolulu was the first time she had left the couple's home in exile since she and former president Ferdinand Marcos fled the Philippines nearly three years ago.

In Manhattan, N.Y., she remained in her limousine for several minutes before bodyguards could reach her to help push through a crowd of about 100 journalists for a 10-yard walk to the Waldorf Towers, where she will stay.

Photographers swarmed over the black stretch limousine, pressing their lenses to the smoked, concealing glass and firing flash after flash.

Once out of the car, neither she nor anyone in her entourage spoke as they entered the luxury apartment-hotel that has served as the Marcos base in New York for years.

But one of the bodyguards shouted: "What are you, pigs? Back up! Let her through!" Photographers shouted at each other to back up and get out of the way. Several cameras fell to the pavement.

The Marcoses were indicted Oct. 21 on charges they embezzled more than $100 million and used it to buy New York real estate, art and other property. If convicted on the main racketeering charge, they could receive up to 20 years in prison.

Defense lawyers have said Imelda Marcos, 59, would plead innocent at Monday's arraignment.

The criminal charges mirror civil complaints filed in 1986 on behalf of the Philippine government.

"We developed an idea, which the American courts bought, that a dictator can't fleece his country, deposit the loot in the United States and expect to get away with it," said Morton Stavis, president of the Center for Constitutional Rights, a non-profit legal group that is representing the government of Corazon Aquino in the United States.

harm to anyone," he said. "We feel that anything that you do, whether it be good or evil, will eventually return to you. If you really believe that, then it isn't smart to do anything harmful."

This attitude affects the Wiccan's treatment of magick, which is also an integral part of the religion, Harismides said. Wiccans believe there is a spirit in all things — both live and inanimate objects — and it is this spirit they call upon when performing magick.

"We use a combination of practices that change reality or cause things to happen," he said. "We do something called magick that is very analogous to prayer."

"We work through visualization and by raising our energy to make things happen," Harismides said. "There is scientific evidence that some of the things we call magick do work."

"We're not saying we have magic powers. We aren't like Samantha on 'Bewitched,'" he said. "Magick is not the reason people get into witchcraft, though. It is an integral part, but not the purpose of the religion."

These many misconceptions associated with witches today have negatively affected numerous members of the Wiccan religion.

"Most witches do not talk about their religious practices because been successful in its efforts because the CIA's recruiting visits have become shorter, and less students are interviewing with the agency. The CIA did not recruit at the UI during spring semester last year.

"The whole situation is ludicrous. More people would be willing to open up if there were a greater climate of religious tolerance in this country," Fox said. "Most witches these days are really very positive people. They don't seek to draw attention to themselves. They just want to be left alone and have a good Halloween."

But information about witchcraft is now more readily available to the public than ever before, Harismides said. With more than 100 national Wiccan publications, it has become much easier to learn about witches and their practices.

"Witchcraft isn't all that secretive these days," he said. "We're looking for legitimization in the eyes of everyone else. There are many concerns that witches want to express and we are doing this more and more these days."

However, the Wiccans' push for national awareness and acceptance does not revolve around their hopes for recruiting new members.

"We do not say our way is the only way," Fox said. "But people are finding a spiritual satisfaction in this religious form that they aren't finding elsewhere."

Though Stonebarger said New Wave will probably hold a similar demonstration this semester, he doesn't know "what form the protest will take," until Rawlings and UI officials initially respond to the group's demands.

the implementation of OASIS though the 12 UI departmental libraries, the Main and Law Libraries.

Four office professionals have been responsible for instructing library staff about OASIS, checking the quality of data, defining the goals of the program and planning terminal locations, UI Automation Project Manager Donna Hirst said.

There are 160 terminals on campus that search 800,000 titles of the libraries' 1.5 million volumes, she said.

"Hopefully the funding problem will ease up and we'll be able to install more of them," Hirst said.

Hardware purchases, Administrative Data Processing Service and Weeg Computer Center are other areas that receive a large portion of the department's yearly operating funds, she said.

The department contracts with administrative data processing to coordinate the OASIS computer program. Computer equipment and the SYTEK network are provided by Weeg.

Hirst said the $1 million, two-year request was necessary to finance a planned development in OASIS, which will include computerization of business and circulation transactions.

Economic investment scenarios

By Dean Jarnow
Special to The Daily Iowan

How do you invest in a time of financial upheaval... or deflation? Prospects for tough times? The answer could, at least in part, depend on how you define either rich or poor. It all depends on how you define your anticipation of the future. Here are six economic scenarios along with the best investment strategies for each.

- Inflation is defined as a rise in prices for goods and services. Usually the result of an expansion in the economy. What's good: metals, gold and silver, natural resource stocks.
- What's bad: any fixed-income investment, such as CDs, municipal bonds or almost anything that offers a fixed yield.

• Depression is characterized by falling prices, slow or no economic growth. What's good: bonds, gold, real estate, equities, real estate, and anything that offers a fixed yield.

• Recession is defined as a decline in economic activity. Economists as two quarters of decline in GNP. What's good: bonds, CDs, government treasuries, any fixed-income investment. What's bad: the stock market, real estate, for a depression, except for a fixed yield.

• Stagflation is a term used to describe the condition of economic growth, low unemployment and high inflation. What's good: current natural resources, issues of equities. What's bad: same as for inflation, certain grouping of products.

• Stability. What's good: convertibles, writing calls and a lot of trading. What's bad: hedges against inflation, gold, bullion, numismatics, estate and highly leveraged investments.

• Volatility. What's good: puts and calls (the writing puts and calls are undervalued issues). What's bad: Fixed income, upside potential — such as certain stocks and highly leveraged investments.

Currently our assessment of the environment most resembles a stable economy with pressures. These pressures give way to an evolutionary attitude in the years ahead.

Economic investment scenarios

By Dean Jarnow
Special to The Daily Iowan

How do you invest during an era of financial upheaval? Inflation ... or deflation? Prosperity ... or tough times? The answer to these questions could, at the extreme, make you either rich or poor. It all depends on how well you're able to move your money in anticipation of the actual events. Here are six economic scenarios, along with the best and worst investment strategies:

- Inflation is defined as rising prices for goods and services, usually the result of an active economy. What's good: precious metals, gold and silver stocks and natural resource stocks. What's bad: any fixed-income investment, such as CDs, bonds, municipals or almost anything that offers a fixed yield.

Dean Jarnow

- Depression is a condition characterized by falling prices and slow or no economic growth. What's good: bonds and T-bills. What's bad: gold and bullion coins, equities, real estate, collectibles and anything numismatic.

- Recession is defined by many economists as two consecutive quarters of decline in a country's GNP. What's good: bonds, T-bills, CDs, government treasuries and any fixed-income oriented investment. What's bad: the same as for a depression, except that real estate is not necessarily bad.

- Stagflation is a term coined by economists in the 1970s to describe the condition of slow economic growth with high unemployment and rising prices. What's good: currencies, the natural resources and selected issues of equities. What's bad: the same as for inflation, but also a certain grouping of real estate products.

- Stability. What's good: stocks, convertibles, writing puts and calls and a lot of trading in all markets. What's bad: all those hedges against inflation such as gold, bullion, numismatics, real estate and highly speculative investments.

- Volatility. What's good: buying puts and calls (the opposite of writing puts and calls) and certain undervalued issues. What's bad: Fixed incomes with no upside potential — such as CDs, certain stocks and highly speculative investments.

Currently our assessment is an environment most representing a stable economy with inflationary pressures. These pressures may give way to an eventual recessionary attitude in the next two years.

Budget shortfall rises to $155 billion in 1988

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit, after dramatically improving last year, grew in fiscal 1988 to $155.1 billion, the Reagan administration reported Friday.

The administration's final accounting for the budget year that ended Sept. 30 showed that the imbalance between revenues and spending rose $5.4 billion, or 3.6 percent, from the previous year's $149.7 billion deficit.

But Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, in a joint statement with the White House Office of Management and Budget, said "the underlying trend in the deficit ... remains downward."

The 1988 budget gap was still well below the all-time record of $221.1 billion set in the 1986 fiscal year.

Brady said special factors such as the phase-in of the new tax law in 1987, the sale of the federally owned Conrail freight railroad and a one-day shift of military pay from 1987 into 1988 either shrank the 1987 deficit or inflated the 1988 gap.

Excluding the one-time factors, the deficit would have fallen by $31.1 billion between 1987 and 1988, he said.

Red ink for the year exceeded both the initial administration projection of $146.7 billion issued in February and the updated estimate of $152.3 billion released in July. It hit the Congressional Budget Office projection of $155 billion nearly exactly.

However, the deficit was well below initial projections of private economists who feared last year that the October stock market crash would slow economic growth, cutting into tax collections and producing a deficit as high as $185 billion.

The administration said its mid-summer projection was off because it underestimated spending by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the agency that rescues insolvent savings institutions. The board spent $8.1 billion in fiscal 1988, $3 billion more than expected.

The board, in a spate of activity from mid-August through the end of September, rescued more than 60 savings and loans. However, much of the spending doesn't show up on the budget immediately and analysts say assistance to the ailing S&L industry could contribute $15 billion a year to the deficit over the next three years.

There have now been deficits in 27 of the past 28 years, running up a total accumulated national debt of $2.61 trillion. The last year the United States had a budget surplus was 1969, when government revenues exceeded spending by $3.2 billion.

The administration is predicting it will whittle down the budget deficit for the current fiscal year to $145.5 billion, but most private analysts expect less progress.

The flood of government red ink has been blamed for the nation's chronic trade imbalance, for holding interest rates above historic averages and for helping to trigger last year's stock market crash.

Kraft agrees to Philip Morris buyout

NEW YORK (AP) — Kraft Inc. said Sunday it had agreed to a $13.1 billion buyout by Philip Morris Cos. Inc., ending a short but intense takeover fight in the biggest merger ever between two non-oil U.S. companies.

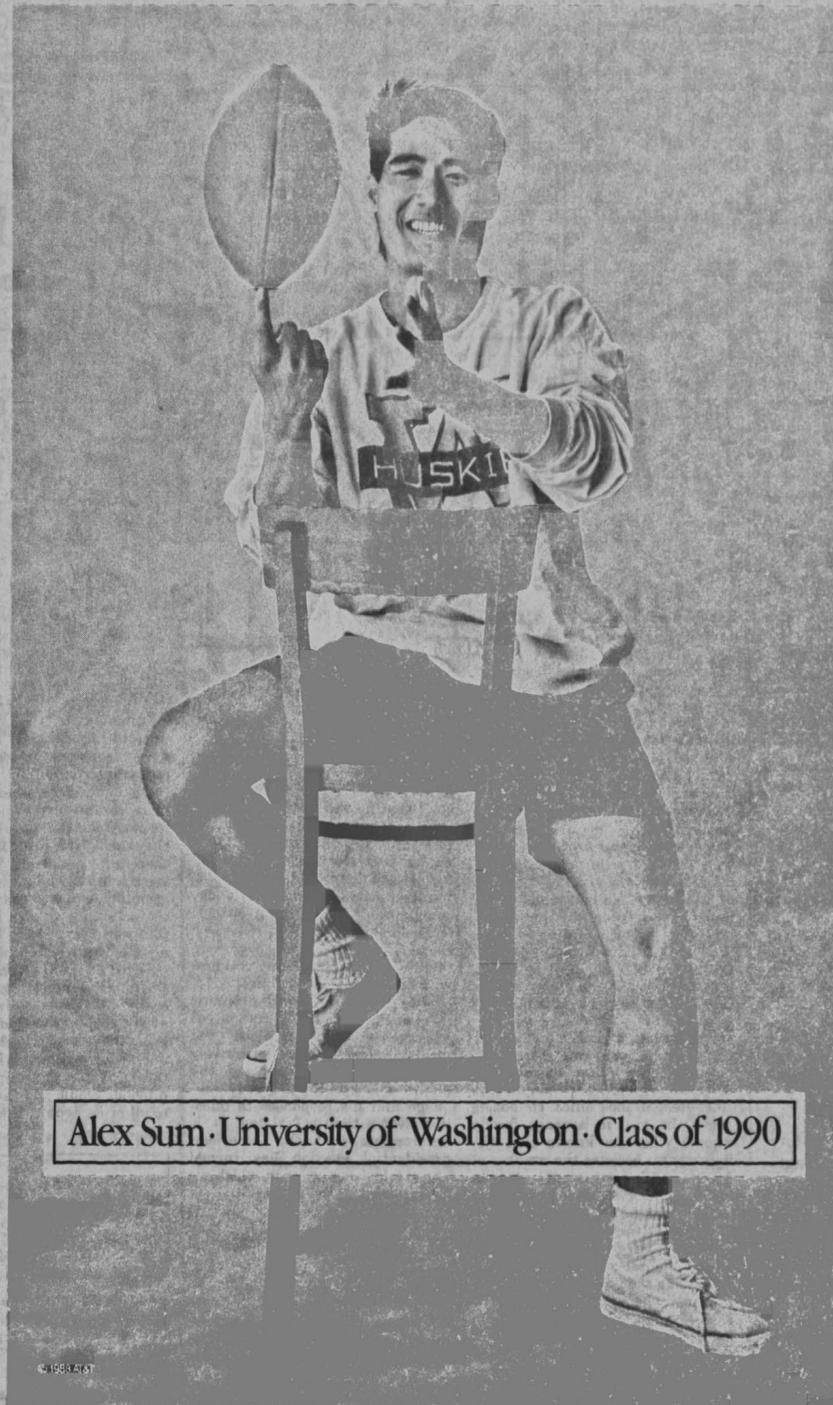

In a joint statement, the two food giants said they reached a definitive agreement in which Philip Morris would pay $106 cash for each of Kraft's outstanding shares.

Kraft shares closed at $96.50, up $2 a share, Friday on the New York Stock Exchange. Philip Morris closed down 25 cents at $94.75 a share.

The agreement comes just five days after Kraft, which is based in Glenview, Ill., said it would negotiate with Philip Morris only if the tobacco and consumer products company raised its initial $90 a share buyout offer to equal the value of a defensive restructuring proposed by Kraft.

Kraft rejected Philip Morris' initial offer on Oct. 23 as inadequate and unveiled a restructuring it said would pay its shareholders $110 a share in cash and securities, but also add $12.4 billion in new debt.

Breaking ground

The Des Moines Register named a new editor last week to replace James Gannon, and the choice came as a surprise to many.

The new editor seemed well-qualified, having previously served as an editorial writer for The New York Times on a Nieman Fellowship, and was also a former deputy editorial page editor for The Register. But what came as a real surprise was the sex of the new editor — Geneva Overholser, 40, is the first woman to head up the paper in its history.

Why should the fact that the new editor of the Register is a woman come as a surprise? Because the fact of the matter is that women currently are in the top position at about 1 percent of the nation's newspapers with circulations over 200,000, and the percentage of women editors isn't much higher.

Yet women now comprise the majority of staff members at newspapers throughout the country, and their numbers continue to grow as the low salaries paid to journalists make the newspaper field more and more of a "pink collar ghetto".

While it is assumed that Overholser was hired for her qualifications rather than because she was a woman, it still has to be regarded a victory for those women who continue to be victims of sexism in the newsroom in terms of both hiring and promotion.

For that reason, even those who think The Register has been in terminal decline since the Gannett Corporation bought it have reason to wish Overholser the best of luck in her new position.

Simply rhetoric

Rising costs and insufficient funds are again causing problems for the UI libraries, forcing the cancellation of magazines and periodicals, and prohibiting the ordering of numerous books.

The Main Library has already limited the number of hours the north entrance is open, in an effort to cut down on manpower and save money.

The financial woes of the libraries are not exceptions at the UI. Similar budget crunches are facing other university departments, as well as the students themselves. The UI needs more money, but after squeezing the student body for it with continual tuition increases, that well is nearly dry.

This crisis is hard evidence that George Bush's inane "thousand points of light" rhetoric is only that: rhetoric. The "thousand points of light" have not and will not fill the void created by freezes and decreases in financial aid to students and federal grants to colleges and universities.

Tuition increases have been unfair to students in recent years, not because the UI doesn't need or deserve the money, but because the students' "incomes" have not risen over the same period.

Republicans, those masters of economics, should recognize the problem: too little income, too many expenses. When your income is $10,000 and your expenses are $10,000, you can survive. But when those expenses reach $12,500 with no parallel rise in earnings, you're in trouble.

That's what has happened to students at the UI and across the country in this decade, and the same thing has happened to the schools themselves.

"A thousand points of light," "trickle down theory" — those terms sound good, but they can't overcome the economic realities of life on a college campus. Save your imagery George, give us something we can read, or eat, or live in. Until then, the economic crunch will continue, and our students and the educational system will pay the price.

Alarming veto

Congressional leaders expressed outrage over President Reagan's decision to pocket veto a bill which would have provided protection to federal employees who report government wrongdoing. By not signing the bill while Congress is not in session, the bill will die.

The outrage stems from the fact that Congress was assured of the administration's support by the Office of Management and Budget. The Justice Department, however, raised objections to the bill on constitutional grounds and was instrumental in persuading Reagan to use the pocket veto.

The tactics used are especially unsettling when one considers the character of the derailed bill. The bill, passed by Congress without a single dissenting vote, would have made the Office of Special Counsel an independent agency. The Office of Special Counsel was originally intended to protect whistleblowers; the new legislation would have strengthened that role. Currently, the OSC is part of the Merit Systems Protection Board, which has actually acted against whistleblowers when they came for help.

Reagan justified his opposition to the bill by stating that employees "who are not genuine whistleblowers" would have used it to thwart disciplinary actions. Also, he claims it is unconstitutional because it would have allowed agencies of the executive branch to take legal action against each other.

Was Reagan sincere in opposing the bill on these grounds or were they merely convenient excuses to kill a bill he didn't like? The appearance given is of a president who is more concerned with protecting the government from its citizens than the other way around. Also, making it tougher for conscientious federal employees to criticize their government could spare a lot of embarrassing and troublesome revelations.

Our presidential witching hour

Kim Painter

In fact, a less tainted record than that which Mr. Bush has managed to compile.

Spooky things are bound to happen in a campaign which is run like a Jaycees' haunted house. We voters are blindfolded and led through unfamiliar places. Something falls into our hands; it is wet and cold. A voice we don't know pronounces awful words identifying it (this is the heart of a dead man... this is Willie Horton, and this is the man who let him do what he did).

My first haunted house experience occurred when some neighborhood kids converted a small shed, filling it with items to trick the senses and perceptions of their victims. Inside it was utterly dark, dark as the absence of all color, dark like it never is for grownups. Two warm, mushy round things landed in my palms. (I later learned they were peeled grapes soaked in warm water.) The neighbor girl whispered, "These are eyeballs." I wanted to disappear through the floor, which was momentarily accomplished as I had been led onto a trick platform. Smack at the end of a very theatrical speech — of which I recall only the last word, which was "HELLLLL!" — a lever was pulled and I plunged into what I was certain would be pits of fire inhabited by creatures sporting horns and tails. While the mean trick is a staple of childhood, America's voters should be able to hope for somewhat better at the hands of politicians.

Alas, it was not to be. The fault for this lies with George Bush, Democratic taunts aside. "Where was George?" was merely a chiding refrain, like the Republicans' invocation of Jimmy Carter. It was up to each man to separate himself from the mud his opponent pasted to him. The problem was, George Bush had been at the core of Iran-Contra and so could not extricate himself. Being no fool, and up to his belt buckle in doo-doo, George surrounded himself with a lot of sharp Southern boys suffering from testosterone poisoning. They would know what to do, how to attack.

Taxachusetts, furlough distortion and fear-mongering, the Democratic troika (BOO, white America!), false representation of Dukakis' stand on gun control issues, the card-carrying ACLU membership; these were the moral high points of a campaign seemingly run by goblins.

The low points surfaced on the heels of the Republican convention. Jerry Falwell's smug face was never so puffed with pride as when he beamed his hallelujah-grin into the living rooms of America upon the announcement of Dan Quayle's place on the ticket. Willie Horton presents less of a threat to the future of our children than the set of attitudes Dan Quayle embodies. The radical right had more to do with the Republican platform and the accretion of mud-slinging that formed the Bush juggernaut than any mainstream voices.

Not surprisingly, the mud has persuaded many Americans. We're each unreasonably afraid of something. Such fear is potent and easily kindled, something public servants have always known. Since World War II, there has been tacit agreement among the world's political leaders to keep the Pandora's box of nationalism closed. This is because once it opens, the spooks come out and we are overtaken by a long night of terror.

Harping on nationalist themes and inflaming people's fear is an attempt to do the unthinkable. Nudge the door open just a bit. Just enough to allow an otherwise laughable candidate to obtain the presidency. But this door is not like others. It is spring-loaded, and it really does lead to hell. We used to know that. Even though it's morning in America, each of us struggles against the night within. We win that battle by smaller margins than anyone cares to admit. The campaign for president enters our nightside. That it should do so is more terrifying to people of reason than any other phenomenon of contemporary life. If we are collectively stupid enough to vote Bush into The White House, we must demand his commitment to shut the door to our national haunted house and lock it for good.

The Duke's Cabinet Choices.

Dukakis' vision is clear, educated

Victoria Lim

It seems that Dukakis is buried before the election. I am still voting for him despite the predicted Bush landslide victory. To me, he is the more capable candidate. Given any circumstances, Dukakis, I believe, is better able to make intelligent choices than Bush.

He may not be an articulate speaker, but he has a better comprehension of the important problems facing our country today. He addresses many vital issues such as the budget deficit, trade imbalance, environmental pollution, drugs and problems facing the poor and the disadvantaged. He eloquently said: "We cannot be strong militarily while we are teetering on top of a mountain of debt."

By contrast, Bush is a big liar. He talks about economic prosperity when he knows that our national debt has increased many folds since Reagan took office. He boasts about the rise in average family income when he knows that the figure is up because the number of families with two parents working has increased tremendously. He claims that he is an environmentalist when the record shows that he has actually down regulated the environmental codes.

He asks the children to say "No" to drugs when he repeatedly dealt with Noreiga, the biggest pusher of our time. He is so concerned about the welfare of our country that he chose Quayle as his running mate and told people that he won't die in office if he becomes president. He vows that he will keep the defense strong and at the same time maintain social programs, and he guarantees that there will be no tax increases. "Read my lips," he says, "no tax increases under any circumstances." This is an utterly irresponsible statement. Given a choice, I would rather pay more taxes now than saddle my children with trillions of national debt.

Why then is there such dramatic success in the Bush campaign? Apparently the "gurus" of the media industry have effectively packaged George Bush to the public. His speech, his body language and his responses to questions were tightly scripted. It is unfortunate that the American presidential election has turned into a television event in which we have seen some of the ugliest campaign attacks. The TV ad attempting to show Dukakis' softness toward crime by showing a black man who raped a white woman is beneath any campaign dignity. There is no need to incite this racial antagonism. I am surprised that black members of the Republican party tolerate these ads.

Perhaps Dukakis uses the wrong tactics. Bush concentrates on the present: "We are doing well, we are prosperous, why make any changes?" What he does not emphasize is the trillions of national debt. Financially weakened, a nation can never be strong internationally.

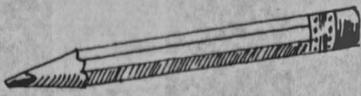

Dukakis, on the other hand, has a more ambitious vision for the future. Like parents, he is telling the kids: "We are OK now, but there are problems. We have to work harder, we have to pinch our spending, and we need to be able to compete with foreign countries in the world market." These statements, while absolutely true, are not pleasing to the ears.

Unlike the Republicans, who generally are more oblivious of the needy people, the Democrats have been the social conscience of this nation for decades. While I do not think it's the government's job to provide "cradle to grave" security to all of its people, I do not believe that the government, working with the private industry, should provide incentive and creativity attempting to resolve the problems facing the inner-city poor, the elderly and the elderly.

Dukakis can provide better leadership in these matters. He understands that while it is important to keep the rich happy, it is imperative to improve the lives of the poor, to educate the children of minorities, and to take care of people who are ill and unable to provide for themselves. I am a left-wing liberal, but I believe unless we help the less fortunate, the social stability of our country will crumble, and law and order may then be difficult to restore.

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Mike Dukakis bragged Sunday about liberal tradition, claimed George Bush was "dead wrong" saying Dukakis wanted to change the country and challenge rival to a debate on the eve of election.

"I'm going to be a president unites America," Dukakis reporters during a daylong trip through California's Central Valley. "If he wants to talk that, then I'd be happy to meet face-to-face."

That showdown, Dukakis could take place election eve during the hour of network television purchased by the Democratic and Republican campaigns. Last-minute appeals to voters moderator would be present the candidates — not reporters would ask the questions.

Dukakis, convinced his campaign is surging in the waning days of the election contest, delivered impassioned defense of liberal subject he has largely ducked.

"We need a president in tradition, yes the liberal tradition of Franklin Roosevelt and Kennedy," Dukakis told a rally in Hanford, Calif., a community surrounded by a sprawling cotton farms.

He reported that call at rallies in Bakersfield, Calif. Fresno, adding former President Harry Truman to his list of liberal Democrats at those stops.

At the Fresno news conference, Dukakis said he decided it was time to set the record straight after President Ronald Reagan said last week that if Truman alive today he would support and the GOP.

Dukakis scoffed at Reagan's comment and said his fiscal conservatism and concern for child health care, education, the environment and average families aim squarely in the mold of Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy. "That's the tradition of liberalism grew up in," Dukakis said. "That's the tradition I believe and I'm not going to let

Bush clutches advantage on key state battlegrounds

By The Associated Press

George Bush maintains a solid lead over rival Michael Dukakis in statewide polls in Texas and New Jersey and holds a slight advantage in the key battleground states of Michigan and Washington.

Bush led the Democratic nominee by 15 and 21 points, respectively, in two statewide polls in Texas, which has the third largest electoral prize of 29 votes.

In a poll of 608 likely voters, surveyed Oct. 22-25, 54 percent favored Bush to 39 percent for Dukakis, the Houston Chronicle reported in its Sunday editions. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percentage points.

In the other Texas poll, released Saturday by the Fort Worth Star-Telegram and WFAA-TV in Dallas, Bush led Dukakis 58 percent to 37 percent. The poll of 1,443 likely voters, conducted Oct. 21-24, had a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

In Michigan, with its prize of 20 electoral votes, 47 percent of the 400 registered voters surveyed favored the Republican ticket while 41 percent prefer the Democratic slate, Detroit station WJBK-TV reported Sunday.

The survey, conducted Tuesday through Thursday, had a margin of error of 5 percentage points.

Iowans remain apathetic toward fall election races

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

WATERLOO (AP)—There's a real sense of nervousness settling over the political community as Election Day draws near.

When reporters gather to gossip, at some point they'll shake their heads and concede, "It's a weird one, this year." If a politician happens to shuffle past, it doesn't take long for him to turn the tables and ask, "What do you hear out there?"

It's far from unusual for reporters to gossip, nor is it unprecedented for a politician to be nervous a week or so before an election.

There is a suspicion, however, that to an extraordinary degree this year, politicians simply haven't connected with voters. Despite an election campaign that essentially began three years ago and has been waged with unprecedented ferocity, it seems that politicians have yet to give voters a reason to care.

Driving around the state, you see farmers putting the finishing touches on their fall field work, workers beginning to erect snow fences for the inevitable Iowa blizzards and parents hustling their children off to school.

What you don't sense is any urgency about Nov. 8, a feeling that people are paying attention or have any feeling that the election matters very much.

Sure, there are the inevitable yard signs dotting the countryside, but those are the work of a hard-core group of activists who campaign almost by instinct.

All of the mechanics are there. The political parties are doing their thing, the candidates are giving their speeches and the airwaves and billboards are filled with political messages.

What isn't there is the feeling that most Iowans are chatting about the establishment has been its credibility.

Throughout that period, politicians have been promising that the solution to all those troubles is as simple as casting a vote for Republicans or Democrats. It isn't, of course, and the cost to the political establishment has been its credibility.

A lot of people simply no longer believe much they hear from their politicians, and it's hard to blame them.

Analysis

The result is a grand irony. This is a year when the electorate has been polled, probed, gathered in focus groups and put under a microscope like never before, and yet politicians don't know what's going on "out there."

Will voters simply yawn and stay home? Is their silence because things are going pretty well and most are happy with their lives? Are many simply fed up with the political establishment and ready to throw some rascals out? Are they simply ignoring the campaigning and planning to make up their minds when they walk into the voting booth?

Despite all the scientific analyses this year, the answer to all those questions is simple — no one knows. It's all of the above, and maybe a few others yet to surface.

It's possible to add one more. This year marks a quantum leap in focusing on the mechanics of politics. Candidates at all levels have sophisticated political strategies, and the consultants are getting richer than ever designing slick packages to sell to voters.

Those packages are carefully assembled right down to what sort of announcer should provide the voice-over for a commercial, and the best colors for a billboard.

What they don't include is a message, a reason that Iowans ought to care about who wins or a theme that touches people.

Iowans by and large are politically sophisticated and fully understand that.

election over their morning coffee or putting the outcome very high on their list of things to worry about.

There are a host of reasons for that feeling. Iowans, after all, have been bombarded for more than a decade with campaigns that more resembled holy wars than political exercises. This year, they don't have a big statewide race to grab their attention.

The relentlessly negative thrust in every election from president to Statehouse races has turned many off, but it goes deeper than that. For most of the 1980s, Iowa has suffered in the throes of a deep recession that's cost thousands of people their homes, their careers and their dignity.

Throughout that period, politicians have been promising that the solution to all those troubles is as simple as casting a vote for Republicans or Democrats. It isn't, of course, and the cost to the political

Dukakis challenges Bush to showdown

FRESNO, Calif. (AP)—Michael Dukakis bragged Sunday about the liberal tradition, claimed that George Bush was "dead wrong" in saying Dukakis wanted to divide the country and challenged his rival to a debate on the eve of the election.

"I'm going to be a president who unites America," Dukakis told reporters during a daylong train trip through California's Central Valley. "If he wants to talk about that, then I'd be happy to meet him face-to-face."

That showdown, Dukakis said, could take place election eve during the hour of network television time purchased by the Democratic and Republican campaigns for last-minute appeals to voters. A moderator would be present, but the candidates — not reporters — would ask the questions.

Dukakis, convinced his campaign is surging in the waning days of the election contest, delivered an impassioned defense of liberalism, a subject he has largely ducked.

"We need a president in the tradition, yes the liberal tradition, of Franklin Roosevelt and John Kennedy," Dukakis told a depot rally in Hanford, Calif., a valley community surrounded by sprawling cotton farms.

He repeated that call at similar rallies in Bakersfield, Calif., and Fresno, adding former President Harry Truman to his list of liberal Democrats at those stops.

At the Fresno news conference, Dukakis said he decided "it was time to set the record straight" after President Ronald Reagan said last week that if Truman was alive today he would support Bush and the GOP.

Dukakis scoffed at Reagan's statement and said his fiscal conservatism and concern for children, health care, education, the environment and average families put him squarely in the mold of Roosevelt, Truman and Kennedy.

"That's the tradition of liberalism grew up in," Dukakis said. "That's the tradition I believe in. And I'm not going to let the Republican Party pervert that word and give it a meaning it doesn't have."

Michael Dukakis

In an interview on the "MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour," Dukakis said he objected to the manner in which Bush has used the term to describe his opponent.

"A way which I think is very deliberately designed to suggest that I and people like me don't have a sense of values, that we're kind of permissive, that anything goes," he said in the interview taped Saturday and scheduled to air Monday night.

Yet at the Sunday news conference, Dukakis refused to add less popular liberals — George McGovern, Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale — to his list.

"I'm not going to go through a litany of people" who share that tradition, Dukakis said when asked about the latter group of Democrats. He did, however, refer to a recent joint appearance with Carter.

Dukakis drew large and enthusiastic crowds at each of the depot rallies, taking time during each to speak in Spanish to the large number of Hispanics in the crowds.

Many upcoming events can be publicized free in The Daily Iowan's Tomorrow column, which appears daily on page 2.

SIDELINE

On The Line

It's tie time again in the Big Ten

Wow. Just like that, the Hoosiers are out of the Big Ten race. They gave it a good shot in the half at Indiana, but came up short.

The On The Line race is still being played out, though. About as close as it's ever been between Minnesota and Iowa, which once again brings us back to the tiebreaker game.

Our guest picker, Indiana back Dave Schnell, had a hunch. Not only did he pick Iowa, he went 10-0 in the Big Ten, correctly choosing O to beat Muskingum.

The best the Daily Iowan mustered was Mike "Magic" Trilk's 8-2 effort. Trilk missed on Arizona State upset over Iowa and the tiebreaker.

Sports Editor Brent Trilk checked in at 7-3, as did Assistant Sports Editors Matt Zlatos and Neil Lewis. The readers as a whole turned in a 9-1 showing.

Trilk, now 68-22 overall, has never lost a one-game lead over Woods, and Lewis has dropped out of the race. Trilk is usually close to being out of the race with 63-27 records.

The winner of the frosty Big Ten race is the Iowa Sports Columnist, Sally Hammond. Sally went 10-0 and only missed six points on the tiebreaker.

If the name "Hammond" is familiar to DI sports readers, it's because Sally is the wife of sports columnist George Hammond. George is now in the Des Moines Register.

We realize this reeks of coincidence, and it looks even worse. George said he wants to have a party with the prize. But it's a fair and all those other cliches.

"That's pretty funny, because I don't know what she's doing," says Hammond. "Maybe she ought to be the writer in the family."

Maybe you're onto something, George.

Sally was at work when we called, but we offer our congratulations on a job well done.

Now the bad news. At the time of this writing, there is no keg to offer the winner. BUT, we have some things to offer. Maybe a keg. Maybe a piece of Hawkeye apparel. Maybe a fine area store. Maybe a coal and a switch.

But believe us now, if you take that few minutes to fill out a ballot and play, you don't have a chance to win anything.

To play, just circle the tiebreaker, and write down a number. Then fill in your name and number, and drop the ballot in the DI Business Office, 111 Communications Center, in the OTL ballot box by noon Thursday.

Remember, no ballot box is open only three per person. It's close to election time, and cracking down.

On The Line

It's tie
 time again
 in the Big Ten

Wow. Just like that, the Hawkeyes are out of the Big Ten race. They gave it a good shot in the second half at Indiana, but came up short.

The On The Line race is still close, though. About as close as that tie between Minnesota and Illinois, which once again brings the tiebreaker into play as the 10th game.

Our guest picker, Indiana quarterback Dave Schnell, had a heck of a weekend. Not only did his team beat Iowa, he went 10-0 on his picks, correctly choosing Otterbein to beat Muskingum.

The best the Daily Iowan could muster was Mike "Magic" Trilk's 8-2 effort. Trilk missed only the Arizona State upset over Oregon and the tiebreaker.

Sports Editor Brent Woods checked in at 7-3, as did Assistant Sports Editors Matt Zlatnik and Neil Lewis. The readers as a group turned in a 9-1 showing.

Trilk, now 68-22 overall, has a one-game lead over Woods. Zlatnik and Lewis have dropped dangerously close to being out of contention with 63-27 records.

The winner of the frosty keg of beer from the nice people at the Sports Column is Sally Hammond. Sally went 10-0 and only missed by six points on the tiebreaker.

If the name "Hammond" sounds familiar to DI sports readers, it's because Sally is the wife of ex-DI sportswriter George Hammond-Kunke, who now is a correspondent for the Des Moines Register.

We realize this reeks of conspiracy, and it looks even worse because George said he wants to have a DI party with the prize. But it's on the level. Up and up. Fair and square, and all those other cliches.

"That's pretty funny, because she doesn't know what she's doing," Kunke said, showing his embarrassment and aching male pride. "Maybe she ought to be the sportswriter in the family."

Maybe you're onto something there, George. Sally was at work when we called, but we offer our congratulations for a job well done.

Now the bad news. At this point there is no keg to offer this week. BUT, we have some things in the works. Maybe a keg. Maybe a nice piece of Hawkeye apparel from a fine area store. Maybe a lump of coal and a switch.

But believe us now, if you don't take that few minutes to fill out a ballot and play, you don't have a chance to win anything.

To play, just circle the teams you think will win, including the tiebreaker, and write down a score for the tiebreaker.

Then fill in your name and phone number, and drop the ballot off at the DI Business Office, 111 Communications Center, in the official OTL ballot box by noon Thursday.

Remember, no ballot box stuffing. Only three per person. It's getting close to election time, and we're cracking down.

Indiana tramples Rose Bowl hopes

Records fall
 as Hoosiers hold on

By Brent Woods
 The Daily Iowan

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Records fell for Iowa Saturday at Memorial Stadium.

But so did the Hawkeyes. Despite record-breaking performances by quarterback Chuck Hartlieb, receiver Deven Harberts and fullback Nick Bell, the Hawkeyes fell out of Rose Bowl contention with a 45-34 loss to the Indiana Hoosiers.

Iowa slipped to 4-3-2 overall, 2-1-2 in Big Ten play, while the Indiana moved to 6-1-1, 4-1, to remain a half-game behind Michigan in the conference race.

After being blown out in the first half and falling behind 35-11 by intermission, it was the aerial comeback bid in the second half that set up the records.

Hartlieb set Iowa and Memorial Stadium records by completing 44 of 60 passes for 558 yards and three touchdowns.

Hartlieb broke his own school record of 471 yards set last season against Northwestern; shattered Chuck Long's 1985 mark of 30 completions; and broke the old Iowa record for attempts of 49, set by Gary Snook in 1964.

All three of Hartlieb's school-record stats also broke Memorial Stadium marks.

Harberts hauled in 11 catches for 233 yards, setting the Stadium mark for receiving yardage.

Bell caught 13 passes, breaking the former Iowa record of 12 held by Keith Chappelle and Al Bream, and passing up the Stadium mark of 11.

All that, and it didn't matter. "It wasn't a good enough performance," Hartlieb said. "It was a frustrating day for all of us. The record doesn't matter. The record isn't going to help us at all."

Harberts wasn't aware he had

 comeback

By Neil Lewis
 The Daily Iowan

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — It took a 32-point deficit and more than a full half of two-minute offense for the Iowa Hawkeyes to discover just how explosive their passing game could be.

As the time ran out on Iowa's comeback hopes in the second half at Indiana's Memorial Stadium in Bloomington, Ind., the Iowa offense slowly overtook passing and receiving records, one at a time.

The first to fall were the Iowa single-game marks for most passing yardage, attempts and completions. Iowa quarterback Chuck Hartlieb passed the records midway through the fourth quarter, and his 44 completions on 60 attempts for 558 yards shattered Iowa school and Memorial Stadium marks.

Even with their offensive display, the Hawkeyes' crucial mistakes and turnovers cost them the game, and Hartlieb was quick to dismiss the importance of his individual statistics.

"The record doesn't matter," he said. "I'd have done anything in the world to get a win out of this ... throwing five times for 10 yards and take the victory, way over any records."

The 558 yards eclipsed Hartlieb's 471-yard Iowa-record performance against Northwestern last year. The old mark for completions was held by Chuck Long with 30 against Michigan State in 1985, and Gary Snook formerly held the attempts record with 49 against Purdue in 1964.

The Indiana records for opponent completions and yardage also topped with Hartlieb's efforts.

Indiana's counter for the Iowa air game was to freely mix in cornerback and linebacker blitzes with their three-man rush, prevent defense.

At times, Hartlieb took advantage of the light pass rush, hitting secondary receivers and backs.

Hawks
 finish
 4th in

For the sixth year in a row, Wisconsin's women's cross-country team won the Big Ten Championship.

The Badgers scored 27 points on the 5,000-meter circuit at Finkbine Golf Course Saturday, while Indiana had 42 points and the first-place runner to take second place. Michigan scored 87 points for third.

Iowa was fourth with 110 points, led by Renee Doyle's eighth-place finish.

According to Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard, the ninth-ranked Hawkeyes will send a full team to NCAA District IV competition Nov. 12 in Champaign, Ill.

Wisconsin Coach Peter Tegen said he owed the consecutive number of wins to fate.

"I'm just a lucky guy," Tegen said. "This is the 12th cross-country championship for the school, and I think we have won eight, and the other four times were second places."

"I'm very fortunate. I always have very nice athletes and nice people to work with."

The Daily Iowan/Jack Coyer
 Iowa cross country runner Jennifer Brower paces herself during the Big Ten cross country championship meet Saturday at Finkbine Golf Course. Brower was the fourth Hawkeye to finish, with a time of 18 minutes, 26 seconds.

Hassard said Iowa didn't have a very good meet.

"It's not the way we expected to finish," Hassard said. "But we have to live with it and learn to make adjustments for regionals."

Besides Doyle, who had a time of 17 minutes, 43 seconds, Iowa was led by Jeanne Kruckeberg, 10th in 17:49. The meet was won by Indiana's Michelle Dekkers in 16:31.

Hassard said the Hawkeyes didn't run as well as they can.

The Iowa volleyball team had already beaten Northwestern and Wisconsin this season. This past weekend, the Hawkeyes did it again.

The wins broke a tie for second in the Big Ten between Iowa, 19-5, and Northwestern.

In the first matches this season, Iowa, 8-3 in league play, took five games to beat the Wildcats and had little trouble with Wisconsin. This time, the Hawkeyes easily rolled past Northwestern but struggled to subdue the Badgers.

When the Hawkeyes played Northwestern Oct. 1, they set eight records. They set or tied three records this past weekend, but this time in the 16-14, 9-15, 16-14, 11-15, 15-11 win over Wisconsin.

Volleyball

In the match with the Badgers, Iowa's Toni Zehr had 13 block assists and the Hawkeyes tied their team total block assist record with 43. They also had 136 digs to surpass their school record of 134, set earlier this season against Northwestern.

Lisa Boyd and Susan Wohlford led the Badgers Saturday. A 6-foot sophomore from Dolton, Ill., Boyd led the match with 26 kills. Iowa's Barb Willis followed with 22 and Zehr had 20. While the Hawkeyes set a school record in digs, led by Janet Moylan's 68, Wisconsin also set a record with 141 digs.

Flutie leads Patriots to win over Chicago

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Doug Flutie, sent back to the scene of his college stardom by the Chicago Bears, rose up to throw four touchdown passes Sunday in leading the New England Patriots to a 30-7 upset romp over the Bears.

The Bears, 7-2, had allowed only a combined 32 points in rolling to five consecutive victories before running into the Patriots, 4-5. Flutie, showing the gambler's daring that helped win him the Heisman Trophy as a quarterback at Boston College in 1984, connected with Irving Fryar on an 80-yard scoring pass on the first play from scrimmage.

"There's not much you can say about a debacle like that," Chicago's seventh-year coach, Mike Ditka, said. "It's the worst game

McMahon injures knee against Patriots

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Chicago quarterback Jim McMahon will be sidelined at least four weeks after suffering an injury to his right knee in Sunday's 30-7 loss to the New England Patriots, the Bears' team physician said.

Clarence Fossier said if a torn ligament or cartilage damage is found, the often-injured McMahon would miss more than a month. McMahon was hurt about two minutes into the second quarter on a third-and-9 play at the Chicago 23-yard line with the Bears trailing 9-7. Sensing a strong New England pass rush, he hurried a short incompleting and was hit from behind as he threw.

Graf eases to Midland Group title

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — Steffi Graf, saving her most powerful display of the tournament for the final, trounced Manuela Maleeva 6-2, 6-0 Sunday to win the Midland Group women's tennis championship, her 11th title of the season. The West German's winning prize money of $50,000 boosted her 1988 earnings past the $1.3-million mark as she extended her winning match streak to 44.

Maleeva, who was seeded third, played her usual baseline game but found Graf even more steady from the back of the court, a far harder hitter and a clever exponent of the drop shot.

The Bulgarian stayed in the match for just five games, at which point she trailed 3-2. Then, the world's No. 1 player took complete control, ripping through the last nine games for a 54-minute victory.

Illness keeps Grayer from exhibition

AMES (AP) — Jeff Grayer missed his homecoming Sunday night because, of all things, the chicken pox.

Grayer had been scheduled to appear with the Milwaukee Bucks in an NBA exhibition game against New Jersey at Hilton Coliseum, where he had starred while playing for Iowa State. But the Bucks' first-round draft choice came down with the chicken pox late Friday or early Saturday and was hospitalized in Milwaukee, Iowa State assistant coach Jim Halihan said.

"I talked with him for quite a while and he's really disappointed," Halihan said.

out there like they are capable of racing," Hassard said. "They ran more of an offensive than a defensive race. I don't think you can run a race like that in a major meet situation and expect to do anything. Unless the athletes attack the race, I think they are not going to find the formula for success that needs to be done."

Doyle, plagued with a sore left foot, said she had hoped for a better outcome. "I wish I had gotten in the top seven," Doyle said. "I'm happy with how I raced. I never really gave up. I kept on trying. I haven't had very good luck the last couple of weeks, I've been up and down. I'm happy that I just kept in there and fought."

Last year's national champion, Kim Betz of Indiana, sat out the meet because of recent knee surgery. Indiana's 1987 Female Athlete of the Year, Betz said she is playing a support role for the team this year.

Stewart, the outcome of both matches depended on the performance of the offense, especially passing.

"Against Wisconsin we did not pass as well as we could have," Stewart said. "We struggled. We were not as consistent, and they were really strong defensively. They had a good block on our hitters."

"Against Northwestern, our passing was perfect. It seemed that every thing we touched went down."

In Friday's victory over Northwestern, 15-4, 15-7, 7-15, 15-4, Iowa co-captain Kari Hamel led the team with 16 kills, and Willis followed with 15. Shelly Brzo-zowski led the Wildcats with 12 kills. Northwestern's leader in kills and attacks, three-time letter-winner Janine Maker, ended the match with a negative hitting percentage. She had 4 kills, 7 errors, and 30 attempts.

Iowa, with 10 matches remaining, has already surpassed last year's victory total of 17. Stewart said her team is looking towards national competition.

"We would like to go to NCAA's," Stewart said. "We are taking one match at a time. We are not going to look past anyone."

The Hawkeyes' next opponents are Ohio State and Indiana this weekend in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Passing

Other times, Hartlieb found himself face down on the Memorial Stadium turf.

"He had a bad knee," Iowa Coach Hayden Fry said, "but he took some shots I never saw a quarterback take and kept coming back."

On the other end of Hartlieb's longest toss was wide receiver Deven Harberts. Harberts' 233 yards receiving was just shy of Quinn Early's team-record 256 yards against Northwestern last year.

"They were taking away a lot of stuff," Harberts said. "They were giving us the in-routes and then they started taking those away."

The biggest offensive break for Iowa came in the third quarter, when Iowa beat the Hoosiers at the guessing game. Hartlieb picked up the blitz, and Harberts stung the Indiana secondary for a 59-yard touchdown reception.

The score brought the Hawkeyes within nine points, 35-26, with with the entire fourth quarter remaining.

"Yeah, it was an audible," the senior wide receiver said of the scoring catch. "They checked off early and then we audibled. Hopefully the guy was biting, which he did, and then I released and Chuck just gave him a pump fake."

Following the game, Harberts said

Hawks shut out Michigan, Ohio State

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

After the Iowa field hockey team grew up offensively last weekend, scoring 19 goals in three outings, the next logical task was to hone the defensive game.

If the past weekend's scores are any indication, then the Hawkeys accomplished that feat.

Iowa Coach Beth Beglin watched her team record 2-0, 4-0 victories over Michigan and Ohio State, respectively, this past weekend in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The Hawkeys, 15-5 and 5-2 in the Big Ten, used 22 shots to the Wolverines' nine to come away with their second win over Michigan on consecutive Fridays. On Oct. 21, Iowa waltzed to an 8-1 win in a game about which Beglin said "everything went right."

Iowa also had faced the Buckeyes once before this season, a convincing 6-1 victory Oct. 8. Beglin said she wasn't surprised that the outcomes were closer the second time.

"They played a lot better and we expected that," Beglin said. "When you dominate a team like we did against Michigan, they set their sights on you. We knew they would come out tough."

Erica Richards continued to show her offensive ability by scoring four of Iowa's six goals on the weekend. The junior from Pennsauken, N.J., had both scores against the Wolverines and joined freshman Kris Fillat and junior Cherie Freddie with tallies in the Ohio State win.

Richards is still atop the Big Ten in scoring as she raised her season total to 24.

Beglin pointed to the play of sophomore goaltender Andrea Wieland as one of the keys in the weekend's wins. Wieland had nine saves in the Michigan game and combined with freshman Eileen Moyer for seven stops against the Buckeyes.

Wieland seemed pleased with her performance.

"I'm happy with the way I played," Wieland said. "I feel we finally earned the shutouts. I think all our defensive work paid off."

Junior defender Erin Walsh had different thoughts.

"Obviously, they came out at us," Walsh said, "but we seem to play at the level of the team we're playing."

"I think we know what to do, but we have to be playing a North Carolina or an Old Dominion before we really do it."

Iowa should move up from No. 5 in the polls as No. 3 Massachusetts lost 3-2 in overtime to Connecticut.

With Iowa moving up in the rankings and only one regular-season game to go, Nov. 5 at Michigan State, it might seem that this team is gearing up for post-season play at the right time.

But Beglin said there is still work to be done.

"Defensively, we were not taking as many unnecessary risks in our end," she said. "We still have a few things to think about, though."

"Our midfielders need to come back for the ball and Diane (Loosbrock, Iowa's sweeper) needs to get the ball through the gaps. Also we have to fine-tune our passing game where we can play it under pressure. We still have things to think about."

Hawkeyes drop opener to Minnesota

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

Youth and inexperience were the watch words for both teams at the Field House Pool Saturday, when the Iowa women's swimming team opened its season with a 171-129 loss to Minnesota.

Minnesota won nine of 15 events, including a three-place sweep in the 200-yard backstroke.

More than one-third of the Iowa and Minnesota swimmers are freshmen, and the newcomers figured prominently in the meet. Gopher and Hawkeye freshmen combined to win five of the 13 individual events and anchored both winning relay teams.

"We put some freshmen in some pretty critical positions," said Iowa Coach Peter Kennedy. "We had to see how they'd perform. We thought they did real well."

Iowa freshman Beth Janis, of Anchorage, Alaska, had a veteran day, capturing wins in the 200- and 100-yard butterfly. Stacie Gillette also kicked off her Iowa career in style, placing second in the 200- and 500-yard freestyle events, third in the 100 freestyle and swimming the third leg of Iowa's winning 400 freestyle relay team.

"Beth Janis swam two great races for a freshman," Kennedy said.

In the season's inaugural race, the 200-yard medley relay, the Iowa backstroke slipped at the outset of her leg, opening the door for Minnesota to edge the Hawkeyes by .85 of a second. Kennedy said the loss was the turning point in the meet.

"But that's the breaks of the game. If she hadn't fallen down, we probably would have won the first medley," he said. "I think it was a real key in that if we'd won that medley then you really get psyched. It's like coming out and hitting your first three shots in basketball."

Minnesota freshmen Lynn Newton and Karyn Ward outswam Iowa in the following 1000-yard event, notching first and second place respectively in front of a trio of Iowa swimmers.

"Once we got first and second in that, I think we kind of had a cushion," Minnesota Coach Jean Freeman said.

Two other bright spots in the Iowa loss were the performances of divers Terri Millmier, who earned all-America honors two years ago, and freshman Katie Ketoff. Millmier and Ketoff earned NCAA-qualifying scores in the one-meter event and Millmier bested the field in the three-meter competition, again posting national-qualifying marks.

Freeman said she thinks the Hawkeyes have potential.

"Becky Anderson is very talented. They're solid," the Minnesota coach said. "Katie Van Verst looked real good."

Anderson logged first place in the 50 freestyle and placed second in the 100 freestyle. She also swam with the second-place 200 medley relay team and Iowa's victorious 400 freestyle relay team. Van Verst won the 100 backstroke.

NFL

connected with Michael Haynes for the winning touchdown.

Browns 23, Bengals 16

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Herman Fontenot returned a blocked punt one yard for a touchdown and set up another score with an 84-yard kickoff return as Cleveland, 6-3, moved within one game of Cincinnati in the AFC Central.

The Browns, with the top-ranked defense in the conference, didn't allow a touchdown by the Bengals' No. 1-ranked offense. Cincinnati's only touchdown came on David Fulcher's 16-yard interception return that gave the Bengals a 7-3 lead.

Bills 28, Packers 0

Free safety Mark Kelso returned an interception 78 yards for a touchdown and defensive end Leon Seals recovered a fumble for another score as the Bills, 8-1, dropped the Packers to 2-7.

Rams 12, Saints 10

NEW ORLEANS — Mike Lansford kicked field goals of 37, 18, 47 and 30 yards to supply all the points needed by Los Angeles, which improved to 7-2 and tied New Orleans atop the NFC West. The Saints had a seven-game winning streak snapped.

Dolphins 17, Bucs 14

TAMPA, Fla. — Dan Marino threw third-quarter touchdown passes of five and eight yards to Mark Clayton as Miami, 5-4, won for the fourth time in five games. Tampa Bay, 2-7, lost for the third time in four games against its Florida rival.

Cardinals 16, Cowboys 10

IRVING, Texas — A 42-yard pass from Neil Lomax to Ernie Jones set up Earl Ferrell's one-yard touchdown plunge with 50 seconds to play as Phoenix, 5-4, broke a two-game losing streak.

Dallas, off to its worst start in 25 years, fell to 2-7.

Jets 24, Steelers 20

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — John Booty pitched a punt to set up Freeman McNeil's clinching 5-yard touchdown run, then intercepted a pass with two minutes to play to preserve New York's first-ever victory over the Steelers in 10 games.

The Jets, 5-3-1, trailed 10-0 in the first quarter, but used mistakes by the Steelers, 2-7, to build a 17-10 edge in the third period.

Giants 13, Lions 10, OT

PONTIAC, Mich. — A blown hand-off by Detroit's Tony Paige on the first play of overtime set up Paul McFadden's 33-yard field goal that kept New York, 6-3, atop the NFC East. The Lions, 2-7, tied it 10-10 on Eddie Murray's 37-yard field goal with 5:19 remaining.

Seahawks 17, Chargers 14

SEATTLE — Rookie Kelly Stouffer passed for two touchdowns, including a six-yarder to fullback John L. Williams with 3:43 left, as Seattle, 5-4, moved into first place in the AFC West.

49ers 24, Vikings 21

SAN FRANCISCO — Reserve quarterback Steve Young scrambled 49 yards for a touchdown with 1:58 remaining as San Francisco, 6-3, rallied past Minnesota, 5-4. Young dropped back to pass and then raced through the middle of the line and eluded several tacklers in the secondary before stumbling into the end zone.

LOS ANGELES — Steve Beuerlein passed for 248 yards and Bo Jackson and Marcus Allen each scored touchdowns as the Raiders, 4-5, outscored the punchless Chiefs, 1-7-1.

Wisconsin claims 4th straight Big Ten title; Iowa takes 9th

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

The Wisconsin men's cross country team captured the Big Ten Championship for the eighth time in the last 11 years at Finkbine Golf Course Saturday.

The Badgers literally ran away from the field, claiming their fourth consecutive conference championship. Iowa placed last in the nine-team field.

Wisconsin, ranked No. 1 in the nation, placed four runners in the top seven. Mike Huffman finished third; Chris Borsa, fourth; Jay Korhonen, fifth; and Scott Fry, seventh.

The individual champion was Indiana freshman Robert Kennedy. Kennedy claimed his third meet victory of the year, outdistancing second-place finisher Brad Barquist of Michigan by six seconds with a time of 24:19.9.

The top finishers for the Hawkeyes were Sean Corrigan in 33rd place and Rod Chambers in 45th.

Corrigan said he wasn't surprised by the strong competition and that his early-season injury problems were not a factor.

"My injuries are totally healed,"

Sean Corrigan

Corrigan said, "It's just that the field is very fast."

The Badgers' score of 30 was the lowest finish since 1985. Michigan State was a distant second with 42, followed by Michigan with 43.

Illinois claimed fourth place with 129, Minnesota was fifth with 130, Indiana finished sixth with 144, Ohio State placed seventh with 146, Purdue was eighth with 198 and Iowa finished with a total of 242. Northwestern has no men's or women's team this year.

Kennedy, named the Big Ten Freshman Runner of the Year, was pleased with his performance.

"I knew I had a chance to win, but there's no way to tell because there are so many good runners in the Big Ten," Kennedy said. "The first loop I surged and tested everyone, and then backed off a bit. I thought the pace was very comfortable and anybody in the front pack could have won."

Kennedy struggled early but came on strong after the 6,000-meter marker.

"It felt pretty effortless until about six kilometers," Kennedy said. "Then I started to move. I don't plan a specific time to move, just when it happens to feel best."

Barquist, the junior from Bellevue, Wash., was disappointed in his race.

"I really wanted to let someone take it in, but all of the sudden it just happened so I ran out in front," Barquist said. "The field was slowing down and I was speeding up. I didn't know if I would go with them or hang back. Obviously, I should have made my move earlier."

The Moscow State Symphony Orchestra played to a crammed house in Hancher Auditorium Sunday afternoon, and during a scrupulously sterling performance that followed, several things became obvious.

Foremost of these was the fact that no matter how someone is expecting perfection, actually witness it, or anything close, is every bit as spontaneous and wonderful as it would be by surprise, unwarned. This was the case with the first half of Sunday afternoon's show: Pi Lubov Timofeeva strode onto stage seemingly slightly uncomfortable, but as Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 took shape, this impression was dispelled by just the thing every most jaded ears in the audience couldn't be expecting. Near perfection.

Timofeeva herself has commented on the difficulty of this piece.

Wildfire entertainment — that's what call the poun drums and dance feet of the National Dance Company of Senegal. With a luminescent moon hovering over the City, Friday night was perfect. An evening of African dance soon as the curtain opened in Hancher Auditorium was transformed into a rural Senegalese village exploding with activity.

The liveliness began with "Kebe" featuring impressive percussion. Women in shimmering dress contributed pure and naive voices. Soon a wedding celebration.

'Wisdom' tops Halloween list

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Oh, sure you could sit around tonight and watch "Halloween 6 — The Tupperware Party," or "Friday the 13th part 23 — Jason Gets a Manicure" or even "Nightmare on Elm Street 9 — Freddy Meets Elvis." But wouldn't you like to try something different for a change? Take your pick from this pile of bad taste and good clean fun — The Top Ten Non-conventional Halloween Films.

10) "Q" — (1982, Larry Cohen) Scorsese has DeNiro, Herzog has Kinski and Larry Cohen has Michael Moriarty. Both the King of B-movie schlock and his No. 1 leading man are in fine form here as an Aztec winged serpent, Q, terrorizes the Big Apple. The plot and script are nothing new, but there's a wonderful scummy cynicism throughout. Best moment: smalltime hood Moriarty "feeding" his partners to Q.

9) "Basket Case" — (1982, Frank Henenlotter) Not since "East of Eden" has brotherly love and sibling rivalry been so moving. The story of a boy and his ex-stiamese twin — an ugly little spud kept in a basket. Literally separated at birth, Beliah, the basket thing, and his keeper stir up all sorts of nuttiness in NYC, especially around dinnertime. Kinda seedy, kinda gross, kinda fun. Best moment: unmentionable in a family newspaper.

8) "Killer Klowns from Outer Space" — (1988, Stephen Chiodo) It's a nightmare come true for everyone who ever covered in fear at the circus as evil, mutant clowns descend from the stars to terrorize Smalltown, USA. A little bit "The Blob," a little bit "Invaders from Mars" and a little bit "Greatest Show on Earth." Best moment: evil space-clown luring small child so he can whack her with a mallet.

7) "The Toxic Avenger" — (1985, Michael Herz and Samuel Weil) Bad taste and sick horror/humor are par for the course when you're dealing with Team Troma (makers of "T.A.," "Class of Nuke 'em High," and "Surf Nazis Must Die"). Melvin's just another grade-B nerd until, in the best superhero tradition, he's transformed into 200 pounds of angry mutant. And then the fun begins! Best moment: the Toxic Avenger ripping off a bad guy's arm and beating the villain to death with his own severed limb.

6) "Evil Dead II" — (1987, Sam Raimi) Raimi didn't really make a sequel to "Evil Dead," he just bettered the original with a bigger budget remake. Bruce Campbell is still out in the woods, dealing with dancing corpses, basement zombies, crawling hands (his own, of course), flying eyeballs (somebody else's) and something... well, evil in the trees. Plenty here to gross out, shock and bring up recent meals, but while the outrageously gory effects and dark humor may be too much for most, they're too good to pass up for the rest of us. Best moment: an eyeball flying through the air and landing in a camper's open mouth (much funnier than it sounds).

5) "Big Trouble in Little China" — (1986, John Carpenter) Forget "Halloween," here is Carpenter's "Raiders-esque" homage to Kung Fu and Scooby Doo. Kurt Russell is Jack Burton, a rough, tough and hilariously stupid truck driver caught up in supernatural goings-on in Chinatown. So tongue-in-cheek it nearly gags, the film coasts delightfully on a variety of deadpan lines and genre juggling. Best moments: everytime Jack opens his mouth.

4) "Blood Simple" — (1984, Joel Coen) Before there was "Raising Arizona" The Bros. Coen took a dark and savvy jaunt through noir-land, Texas style. The usual infidelity, murder and deceit is handled with delightful visual bravado and tonal laconism, resulting in a mixed cinematic bag of eerie humor and violence. The true stars are the behind-camera Coens, but M. Emmet Walsh is perfect as the obligatory sleazy detective. Best moment: Walsh's dying words.

3) "The Dead Zone" — (1984, David Cronenberg) Cronenberg's least grotesque and most aesthetically pleasing film. Adapting one of Big Steve King's better novels, the film tells the tragic tale of John Smith (Christopher Walken), an Everyman who awakes from a 4-year coma to find his former life gone and his mind cursed with psychic abilities. A splendidly ironic second half and fine performances from Christopher Walken and Martin Sheen add to the chill. Best moment: Walken losing his cool when warning a father his son's hockey practice will be dampened by thin ice.

2) "Forbidden Zone" — (1980, Richard Elfman) In 3-D! Disgusting, demented and depraved! This hideously campy musical from "The Mystic Knights of the Oingo Boingo" makes "Rocky Horror" look like a Baptist church sing. Follow Frenchy, Flash and Squeeze-it as they venture into the 6th Dimension, ruled by King Fausto (Herve Villechaize) and his evil Queen Doris (Marie-Pascale Elfman). While a must for Boingo and "Rocky" types, a little raunchy for Aunt Flo. Best Moments: all of Danny Elfman's score and songs.

1) "Wisdom" — (1986, Emilio Estevez) Young Estevez, the Orson Welles of our generation, wrote, directed and starred in this powerful tale of a disillusioned teen-ager who decides to rob banks and becomes a grassroots hero. And finally — in the best "Dallas" tradition — it all turns out to be just a dream! Really scary! Not for young children, pregnant women or the weak of heart. Best moment: too darn many to mention.

Moscow's solo sends crowd to its feet

By Steve T. Donoghue

The Moscow State Symphony Orchestra played to a crammed house in Hancher Auditorium Sunday afternoon, and during the scrupulously sterling performance that followed, several things became obvious.

Foremost of these was the simple fact that no matter how much someone is expecting perfection, to actually witness it, or anything this close, is every bit as spontaneously wonderful as it would be by surprise, unwarned. This was definitely the case with the first half of Sunday afternoon's show: Pianist Lubov Timofeeva strode onto the stage seemingly slightly uncomfortable, but as Tchaikovsky's Piano Concerto No. 1 took strength and shape, this impression was dispelled by just the thing even the most jaded ears in the place couldn't be expecting.

Near perfection. Timofeeva herself has commented on the difficulty of this piece; its

... so jarringly impressive was Timofeeva's talent that, far from "making it look easy," she freed the music from its own complexity and made it soar.

intricacy and power, the shifting of its tone — not to mention its sheer duration. And yet, so jarringly impressive was Timofeeva's talent that, far from "making it look easy," she freed the music from its own complexity and made it soar. Though often promised virtuosity, Hancher's audience Sunday — as with audiences everywhere — was astounded and pleased to receive it. From the power and strident pounding of the very famous first movement to the sliding, rippling delicacy of the second and on through to the end, Timofeeva exceeded even high expectations and produced the best rendition of the Tchaikovsky piece this reviewer has ever heard.

The audience was on its feet seconds after she finished, and several times the applause brought her back to the stage.

Another thing that became obvious during Sunday's concert was how much an audience tends to identify the orchestra with its conductor. For this reason, if for no other, the absence of Yvgeny Svetlanov from the podium seemed almost to lessen the performance. In his place was Mark Ermler, a stately and extremely expressive conductor who only seldom seemed lacking in the kind of control for which Svetlanov is known.

Yet even without Svetlanov at the center stage, this performance was superb; perhaps only slightly lessened by the departure of Timofeeva from the stage for the second half, Symphony No. 1 in D minor by Rachmaninoff. This is a tortuous and moving piece, at times sublimely so, and throughout its rambling length there are very few passages that are easy to conduct. Ermler rose to this challenge well and the overall execution of the piece was seamless, but something was missing.

That something was Timofeeva and her brilliance. In placing the Tchaikovsky concerto first on the program, the orchestra virtually invited the slight loss of focus felt by the audience in the second half. This made another maxim obvious: audiences generally respond more to works featuring soloists than to those without, especially when the soloist is as talented and leaves as powerful an impression as did Timofeeva.

Nevertheless, the Rachmaninoff piece was stark and rousing enough to close the program on a strong note. Ermler chose to respond to the standing ovations with two well-known encores.

Senegalese dancers revel in rhythm

By Kathleen Hurley

Wildfire entertainment — that's what you call the pounding drums and driving feet of the National Dance Company of Senegal. With a luminous hunter's moon hovering over Iowa City, Friday night was perfect for an evening of African dance. As soon as the curtain opened, Hancher Auditorium was transformed into a rural Senegalese village exploding with activity and life.

The liveliness began with "Khady Kebe" featuring impressive percussion. Women in shimmering draped cloth contributed pure and natural voices. Soon a wedding celebration progressed with full vigor. Dance proved to be a universal language as the narrative unfolded. The story focused on the young fiancée cruelly poisoned by her step-mother. Machine gun percussion soon aroused dance so fast and energetic that feet seemed to tease hot coals. In a dramatic death scene, the girl convulsed to the edge of the stage and died in exaggerated agony.

Between pieces, musical interludes provided entrancing quality. Played by a soberly intent musician, the kora, an instrument made from a giant gourd, produced a light, bouncing sound when plucked. The gold star for the performance was the second interlude of the balafon. With 21 wooden keys in the shape of a xylophone, the instrument resonated in a high hollow pitch.

The audience laughed in surprise when the man playing it suddenly spoke English: "Everybody... sing with me, OK?" Common words, yes, but surprising after such an immersion in African culture. The audience immediately and eagerly participated in the highest moments of the show. Magical words grew louder and louder as all of Hancher sang with the enthusiastic soloist. Occasionally "Senegal" and "America" conspicuously popped out of his lyrics. Finally the music tapered to a faint hum, and the man receded into the wings. Reluctantly, the audience let him go.

'Cathy' stirs political controversy

By The Associated Press

Complaining that the comic pages are for comedy, not campaigning, editors at a number of newspapers have refused to run installments of the cartoon strip "Cathy" that are critical of the Reagan-Bush administration.

"We don't think that our comics page is the place for political endorsements on behalf of one party or the other," said Richard Halicks, executive editor of the Messenger-Inquirer in Owensboro, Ky.

His paper, which has not yet made its presidential endorsement, said it will not publish any strips that take partisan political stands.

Other papers that have rejected the "Cathy" installments are The Evansville (Ind.) Courier and The Union Leader of Manchester, N.H. The Daily Oklahoman went further, dropping the strip permanently.

The Oklahoma City paper's managing editor, Frank Boggs, said its management decided to discontinue "Cathy" "for the same reason we don't carry 'Donesbury' and we don't carry 'Bloom County'... We don't pay cartoonists to do editorials."

The newspaper has endorsed Republican Vice President George Bush for president over Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, a Democrat.

The Honolulu Advertiser, while not dropping "Cathy," is not running the strips on its comic page. "At The Advertiser, we believe in 'Cathy's' right to free speech; we'll run sample 'endorsement' strips tomorrow" on the page opposite the editorial page, its management said. "Politics is getting plenty of space in the rest of the paper; we don't want to spread it to the comic page, too."

The paper has not made a presidential endorsement.

The cartoon strip's criticisms are made by a character named Andrea, who lost her job after having a baby because her business did not offer maternity leave.

In Friday's panels, Andrea complains the Reagan-Bush administration has done nothing on several women's issues, including equal pay, day care or impoverished single mothers. And yet, she says, many people "think things are going pretty well."

"The government," she concludes, "is like a baby. It looks like a little angel when it's sleeping."

Contacted at her home in Los Angeles, the strip's creator, Cathy Guisewite, said she anticipated her two-week political series would generate controversy.

"I knew people did not look for the strip to be political opinion," she said, noting that past strips dealt with the modern woman's more personal problems, from inattentive boyfriends to "cellulite and the disastrous bathing suit."

"But I felt it was in keeping with the strip to comment on women's issues that are at stake in this election. I really searched my soul over drawing this strip. I knew I would be offending some women readers I have who believe the extreme opposite."

Universal Press, a newspaper features syndicate that handles "Cathy," received several complaints since the political series began Monday, said Editorial Director Lee Salem.

"But it's that many complaints out of some 500 papers," Salem said. "I think that needs to be put into perspective."

Guisewite said she was not really certain why newspapers would pull her strip and not others with a political point of view, such as "Donesbury." But she said, "I think people are having problems with this series because I am coming out for a specific candidate."

At the Evansville paper, Managing Editor Paul McAuliffe said, "We are trying to cure the problem of a cartoonist using our comics page to espouse a political view that is heavy-handed and in favor of one party over the other."

He said the Courier was running two strips in the political series out of sequence Friday and Saturday and will substitute old "Cathy" strips for six current ones.

The Union Leader ran an advisory Thursday on the comic page that said: "Readers looking for the comic 'Cathy' will have to wait awhile. Several installments scheduled for this week and next take the strip into presidential political advocacy to an extent the editor feels oversteps the strip's entertainment purpose. 'Cathy' will return as soon as she gets off her soap box."

Davies gives auld melodies a bonny twist

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

In a week thickly forested with arts events to tempt the nighttime attention, Tuesday will provide one of the strongest temptations of all.

Sir Peter Maxwell Davies will lead the Scottish Chamber Orchestra in a concert featuring piano, tenor and bagpipe soloists at 8 p.m. Tuesday in Hancher Auditorium. The program, the chamber orchestra and the man on the podium all combine to promise a delightful post-Halloween treat.

The night will feature Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 1, with celebrated soloist Cecile Licad; Mozart's Symphony No. 35 in D major; and two works by Maxwell Davies himself — one of which, "Into the Labyrinth," will feature the tenor for whom it was written. "I wrote the piece for Neil," said Maxwell Davies in a telephone interview from California. "I've known him for — ooh! — since '77; he's just a good artist and a great joy to work with."

The second piece by Maxwell Davies, "An Orkney Wedding, with Sunrise," comes to a rousing conclusion by bagpiper Neil Johnstone, a member of the orchestra's cello section who performs the finale in full highland regalia. Davies described it as "a very good piece of light music — I wrote it for the Boston Pops, and it was first conducted by John Williams."

Davies was introspective on the experience of conducting his own works: "I think it's a very good for a composer to do that — you get a good idea of all sorts of technical details in the working of an orchestra that you'd have a hard time knowing otherwise. The same thing is true with conducting the works of other people, like the Beethoven, or the Mozart — you get a much better understanding of the music than you could ever get from studying the score."

Filipino pianist Cecile Licad, who will perform the Beethoven concerto, is one of the most sought-after young artists in the world. A student of Rudolph Serkin, she received the Levintritt Gold Medal in 1981, the first artist to be awarded that honor in 10 years.

She rose to prominence after her 1980 Tanglewood debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Seiji Ozawa, and she has made many international appearances since. Davies called her "one of Columbia Artists' rising stars, lovely to work with."

The appearance of the Scottish Chamber Orchestra in Hancher is part of a North American tour that includes concerts in Chicago's Orchestra Hall, the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., and Carnegie Hall in New York. This broad range of locations led Maxwell Davies to comment on the different audiences he encounters.

"You go to New York, to Carnegie, which fills up with cognoscenti who know exactly what they're going to hear... they've heard it all before. Then go to San Diego, where the audience might not know all that, and you get a much different reaction. I think in a way that's more spontaneous."

Since its foundation in 1974, the Scottish Chamber Orchestra has evolved from a national touring ensemble into an orchestra recognized internationally for its exciting performances. Its repertoire includes both established masterworks of Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven, and newly commissioned works.

The orchestra has commissioned Maxwell Davies to compose, over the next five years, 10 concertos for the principal members of the ensemble. This unique project involving composer, soloists and orchestra has no modern equivalent.

Davies was enthusiastic about this unique arrangement. "It's a lot of work, and it's very nice to do it with an orchestra you know and like — it's one of the most exciting commissions I've ever had, and there really hasn't been anything like it since Haydn at Esterhazy. And that's where the comparison ends, mind you..."

And after the commission? "If I'm still here, I imagine I'll be writing..."
