Local veterans group fights healthcare cuts

Mark Devene

An Iowa veteran group is sponsoring a petition drive to bring the Veterans Administration matters that should be highlighted concerning healthcare. The group is a chapter of the American Legion.

"If we don't meet those percentages, we can get penalized again by repeated savings and cutbacks," said Dan Carter, assistant to the mayor. "The City Council and the Veterans Administration have not kept up with the state or local health care cuts."

The group has 4,000 members in the county. The group's main goal is to keep veterans' benefits and treatments available.

Local drug information bureau serves U.S. healthcare needs

By Anurag Sengupta

The internationally renowned pharmaceutical information service of the University of Iowa serves the health care needs of the country, its states and in 42 countries.

Since it began in 1965, the IDIS has compiled a vast database of reference information. Through the use of computerized literature searches, the information service is able to pay particular attention to the available Drug Literature Monographs and to and by computer compiled databases and text books, and the purpose of the database microform system is to help practice-oriented users of reference in drug use and disease management.

Says Mehta, "it's very useful and effective because it's an entirely computerized information service. As a matter of fact, the most important section serves medical facilities as a tool for any hospital. It's a great help to us."

Mehta and another advantage of the IDIS is that the information is available online. "I think in the next 10 years we will not only have the information online but also in a database search." The service is needed because it is a "hot topic." The IDIS will continue to grow and expand to serve its users better.

The new arrivals include new products such as "little wafers," which will go into hospitals and nursing homes. They have been augmented by new models of products and services that will be on display in the coming weeks.

In the future, the IDIS will continue to grow and expand to serve its users better. In the meantime, the IDIS is a valuable tool for any hospital and a great help to those who need it.

Colder winter may increase bills

By Stephen Hinton

The Daily Iowan

Bitter cold is one of the most damaging factors to the economic welfare of the state. Colder weather can cause many problems for the state and its residents, including increased energy costs, which can be a major financial burden for many individuals and families.

The University of Iowa's Department of Economics has studied the effects of colder weather on energy consumption and has found that the state's winter climate can cause a significant increase in electricity usage. This is because the state's heating systems must work harder to keep homes and businesses warm in the cold months.

In addition to increased energy costs, the colder weather can also cause other problems, such as increased demand for natural gas and coal, which can lead to higher prices for these energy sources. This can put a strain on the state's economy and can also lead to increased air pollution, which can harm the environment and public health.

To help mitigate the effects of colder weather on energy consumption, the state is investing in energy efficiency programs and has implemented policies to reduce energy waste. These efforts are helping to reduce the state's overall energy consumption and to protect its citizens from the effects of colder weather.

The IDIS is a valuable tool for any hospital and a great help to those who need it.

New Small Speakers Deliver Big Sound

By Clifton H. Gage

HARVEY BROWN, brows and beards are filling up and so are old cars. With the whole world reeling over the economic depression, poor people are trying to survive by buying used cars. The used car business is booming and people are willing to pay top dollar for the old cars.

However, the used car business is not the only business thriving in this economic downturn. The liquor business is booming as well. People are spending more money on alcohol as a way to escape the economic hardship.

Another way people are coping with the economic depression is by investing in small businesses. Small businesses are doing well in this economy and are providing opportunities for people to start their own businesses.

In conclusion, this is a difficult time for many people. However, people are finding ways to cope and are making the best of the situation. Whether it's buying used cars or investing in small businesses, people are finding ways to survive and thrive in this economic downturn.

It's getting more and more difficult to remember the last time a major source of environmental protection did something to protect the environment. Instead, as it has done repeatedly over the years, the administration, the EPA continues in its impotent Which is one reason why every administration, especially the 1981 tax cut administration, is a bad administration. The reason is that those who still cling to the belief that the U.S. government should not try to influence what goes on in the private sector. For example, by a string of environmental decision in recent years, the EPA has used every conceivable pesticide to be carcinogenic to the public and its report the general public receives will continue to be skewed statistics. Reagan legacy is income disparity

At the last bastion in the surveillance of the American psyche, on Saturday, November 6, the campaigns will continue in the town of the issues not addressed during the course of the campaign. There has been no genuine debate, so the media-staged events and remote-controlled Q&A sessions have been the norm. It's too bad, because the candidates and the public have a right to know what the candidates stand for.

Greg Zieren

1980 was the year of legislative victories The new President continued to move to the right, and the perception of Reagan's administration is that he was comfortable and always had a smile on his face. In fact, there was a sense of foreboding about the future under Reagan. However, the Reagan Administration was not without criticism. Concern was raised about the treatment of minorities in the Department of Justice, and the appointment of a conservative like Antonin Scalia to the Supreme Court was roundly criticized.

The next bastion, the Assistance Center for Community Services, spread its message of despair and declined to compete with the more optimistic message of the Reagan Administration. The economy policies of this administration, especially the 1980 tax cut, were not well received by the American public. New regulations were proposed to reduce the burden on businesses, but these regulations were largely unsuccessful. The American public does not want to see a return to the policies of the previous administration, and the candidates and the public have a right to know what the candidates stand for.

Israel election turns on Palestinian uprising

YERUSHALAYIM — Israel’s core political parties on Sunday tried to make their case for the upcoming general elections, which will be held on Wednesday.

The election, which was called by Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, has been overshadowed by the ongoing conflict with the Palestinians.

Netanyahu has promised to negotiate a peace deal with the Palestinians, while his opponents say he is more interested in maintaining Israel’s control over the occupied territories.

The election is expected to be the most significant and complex in Israel’s history, with a wide range of issues at stake.

In this context, the election campaign has focused on issues such as security, economy, and social welfare.

On the economic front, the candidates have promised to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment.

On the security front, the parties have differed on how to tackle the conflict with the Palestinians.

The election is taking place against the backdrop of a heated debate on the fate of Jerusalem, with some parties calling for its annexation by Israel.

The election campaign has also been marked by a sharp increase in violence in the occupied territories, with multiple attacks and rocket launches.

The election results are expected to determine the next government and the direction of Israel’s policies for years to come.

In the meantime, the current government has continued to implement various policies, including the annexation of parts of the West Bank and the expansion of settlements.

The United Nations and other international organizations have condemned these actions as illegal and have called for a peaceful resolution of the conflict.

The election is expected to be a turning point in the region, with implications for the future of the Middle East peace process.

This is a challenging time, and the outcome of the election is uncertain. However, one thing is clear: the stakes are high, and the consequences of the election will be far-reaching.

Will Israel move closer to peace with the Palestinians, or will it continue on its current path?

Only time will tell, but one thing is certain: the election will be a significant event in the region's history.
Republic candidates taunt Dukakis for using "liberal" label

On the Associated Press

The Republican ticket of George Bush and Dan Quayle has launched a $5 million television campaign to argue that Michael Dukakis, the Democratic candidate, is not a liberal. The campaign, which began Monday, is part of a broader strategy by the Bush campaign to portray Dukakis as too moderate and incremental in his approach to the nation's problems.

Bush is introducing the “liberal” charge in two commercials that will air throughout the country. In one, Bush says: “I won a campaign based on the idea of getting something done. Mike Dukakis won a campaign based on the idea of doing nothing.”

In another commercial, Bush says: “If you believe that the jobs problem is too big to solve, then you believe the job of government is too big to solve. If you believe that the problem of crime is too big to solve, then you believe the job of law enforcement is too big to solve. If you believe that the problem of drugs is too big to solve, then you believe the job of law enforcement is too big to solve.”

NCAA to issue Kansas decision

"Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — The University of Kansas on Monday held a press conference to announce the NCAA's decision on a request for penalty reduction. The NCAA has accepted the university's offer to vacate certain scores and games, but has imposed a probationary period of one year. The university has 10 days to appeal the decision."

Hawks still hope for bowl game

Garner, Marble play well in 1st intrasquad scrimmage

"SUNFLOWER, Kan. (AP) — It takes a lot of time to get everything ready for a basketball season, and the Hawks were no exception. The team practiced on Monday and Tuesday, and the players were evaluated on Wednesday. The Hawks will play the next game on Friday, against the National Champions.

Garner, a 6-4, 220-pound senior from Milwaukee, Wisc., would have had even more assists had his teammates not missed shots. He averaged 10.5 points and 5.5 assists per game during his junior season. "We need a lot of people to play well for us to be successful," Garner said. "I made a lot of mistakes on offense, but that's where you should make them because it's where you make your point."

"I think it's going to be a good season for us if we can keep playing the way we did in the last scrimmage," Garner said.

For the most part, they probably throw a decent ball. But the game was so close and there were the number of uncharacteristic mistakes that the ball was in good, and, on occasion, not so good.

But the point is, no matter how good or how bad the defense is, they will always have a chance. We have the ability to have a chance every time we go out there and throw a pass.

I'm not going to give up on the defense. We have a lot of work to do and we're going to get it done.

For the second consecutive year, the US Fencing Club swept its competition for the first time this past weekend. A total of 19 competitors, including five from Indiana, earned the gold, silver, and bronze medals.

Sports Clubs

Three teams competed in the foil competition, and in the saber competition, one man was the winner. The event was the National Individual Championship which was held in Columbus, Ohio. The fencing was judged on accuracy, timing, and control.

"Everyone will benefit from this competition," said "It was great to win." "We got second place last year and beat this team this year, as it was".

The US Fencing Club was also the Big Ten Champions (violence avoidance) at the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign. A total of 12 teams, 12 men and 12 women, participated. The final score was a tie with a total of 113-102.

Iowa's Byron Schenk (men's foil) and Nick Adam (men's saber) were the only two athletes from the Midwest.

At the end of the season, Davis mentioned that "We did great."
