Local groups offer turkey and trimmings to residents

By Heidi Mathews
The Daily Iowan

Maybe you think you'll be sitting alone this Thanksgiving without enough culinary skill to whip up a turkey dinner, or perhaps money is so tight at home that a family celebration on Thursday hardly seems possible.

Well, change this outlook, because even if you don't have an oven to cook a Butterball in, you won't have to settle for a processed turkey slice dinner on Thursday.

This year, as in years past, Iowa City organizations and churches are sponsoring a variety of meals to fill empty plates in the community.

On Wednesday, from noon to 1 p.m. the Iowa City Free Lunch program is providing a free Thanksgiving-style lunch at the Wesley Foundation, 120 N. Dubuque St., for families and individuals who are in a financial bind this holiday season.

Polly Porter, who is the program's free-lunch coordinator, said the lunch will be patterned after a "traditional Thanksgiving dinner — turkey, trimmings, and all." She also stressed the no-charge policy of the program.

"Nothing will be asked of the people who come to eat," she said. "We don't ask for donations or time."

Porter said all of the dishes in the free-lunch program are financed and prepared by community volunteers who donate their time and money each month.

"There are 18 different teams who take turns cooking and serving every Monday, Wednesday and Friday," she said. "Each team is composed of four to six members."

Volunteer Gertrude Schmidt, who works for the program as a Red Cross volunteer, said she is enthusiastic about her participation in the program.

"It's to help people who are down and out," she said. "There are people who are going through town without food or money, mothers with little children and older people who come to eat. Some people have no other place to go."

In addition to filling stomachs with roasted turkey, apple stuffing and pumpkin pie, the free-lunch programs and other sponsored programs provide a format for community members to meet and converse with others during a holiday when no one wants to be alone.

Bethany Baptist Church, 3001 Muscatine Ave., will also sponsor a See Turkeys, Page 5

UI council questions realignment

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Imminent structural and personnel changes in the UI office of vice president of Research and Educational Development drew questions from the UI Research Council Monday afternoon.

Members of the council heard from Duane Spriestersbach, who has held the office of vice president of Research and Educational Development as well as dean of the Graduate College since 1970.

Beginning this summer, the dean of the Graduate College and vice president of Research and Educational Development will not be held by the same person.

The vice president's title will be shortened to the vice president of Research. The Graduate College dean's duties will be reassigned by the vice president of Academic Affairs.

At the Monday meeting, Spriestersbach candidly addressed questions about the changes.

"The combining of these offices is not an unusual thing. It is not unique to this office," he said.

Six colleges in the Big Ten combine dean of the Graduate College duties with the research vice president's office, Spriestersbach said.

Spriestersbach said he didn't oppose UI President Hunter Rawlings' decision to separate the duties of the office and said he was not going to make the reorganization an issue.

Spriestersbach, who will retire June 1, 1989, said he was not totally informed as to why the restructuring will take place.

"It was my understanding that one of the changes the president hoped the vice president would do was spend more time with outside agencies," Spriestersbach said.

The impending separation of the Graduate College may create communication problems and make it more difficult for graduate students to obtain research grants, he said.

"The Graduate College has been given a vehicle here and one I believe we have used quite effectively," Spriestersbach said. "The point is that it does allow the person who has held this dual position to go with the flow and go where needed at the time."

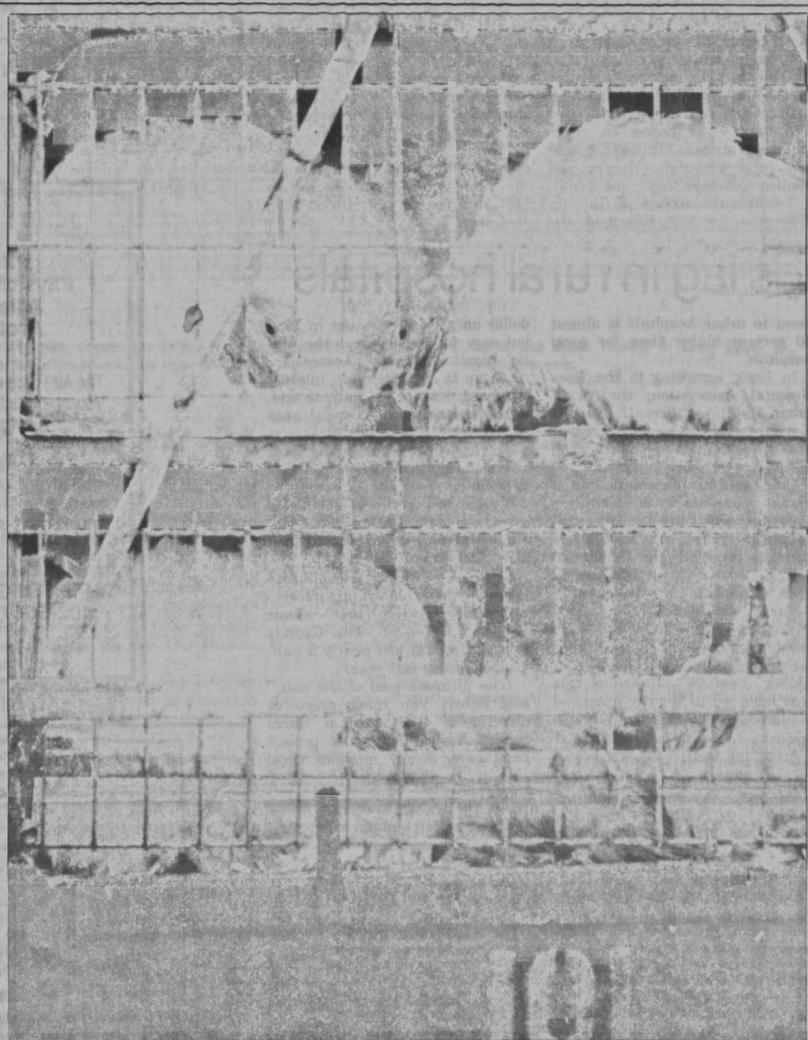

The dual titles of vice president and dean also facilitated the distribution of grants to areas that had been previously overlooked, he said.

Spriestersbach said he feared the possibility of the dean of the Graduate College not pursuing research possibilities.

"I would hope graduate colleges are more than administrators, and let me tell you there are some graduate colleges that are nothing more than that," he said.

Several Research Council members said the change concerned them. The council will request to meet with Rawlings before winter break.

The vice president for Research search committee is headed by UI Professor John Kennedy.

Nixon: Quayle's no intellectual midget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon on Monday praised Vice President-elect Dan Quayle's intelligence and dedication and blamed the news media for portraying the Indiana senator as an "intellectual midget."

At an impromptu news conference outside Quayle's transition office, Nixon said Quayle, a target of derision for his mediocre academic record and campaign gaffes, bears no resemblance to that media-created image.

"This is the first time I had a chance to have a talk with Sen. Quayle. I understand we have met before, but we did not have a discussion," Nixon told reporters. "I was very surprised. He is a very different man from the intellectual midget who has been portrayed among the media."

"This is a man who has strong views. He's highly intelligent. He's highly dedicated. I think he's going to be an excellent vice president," the former president said.

During their meeting, which lasted just over 90 minutes, Nixon and Quayle also discussed foreign policy, including U.S.-Soviet relations and the role of the vice president.

Nixon served as vice president under Dwight Eisenhower from 1953 to 1961. He was elected president in 1968, serving until his resignation in August 1974 in the wake of the Watergate scandal.

"The important thing for the vice president is to recognize that his responsibility is to serve the interest of the country — and that means to serve the interest of the president," Nixon said.

The advice he gave to Quayle was to "follow the example of George Bush. He's been a very successful vice president, and it's important that you follow his example."

Richard Nixon

The former president said he was confident that President-elect George Bush would succeed in arms control negotiations with the Soviets and also had praise for Quayle in that area.

"At the present time I cannot think of six other senators who know as much about the complexities of arms control as Sen. Dan Quayle," Nixon said.

Pesticide, poor venting caused worker's death

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

The Village Inn Pancake House ventilation system was not turned back on from a circuit box on the roof the night before a man died at the restaurant, Iowa City Detective Tommy Widmer said Monday.

Terry Ray Schneider, 19, assistant night manager at Village Inn, 9 Sturgis Corner Drive, was found in an employees' restroom Oct. 6.

Toxicology reports released Friday said Schneider died of methyl bromide poisoning. W.B. McCloud & Co. used methyl bromide to fumigate the restaurant for insects the day before Schneider's death.

Widmer said exterminators seal up a building to create a gas chamber during methyl bromide fumigation. When the process is completed, they must ventilate the building again because methyl bromide is a poisonous gas.

Exterminators said they determined that the level of toxicity was well below the company's safety standards. Widmer said the exterminators probably tested the level of methyl bromide in the dining room, a large, well-ventilated area where the doors were open.

The level of toxicity was probably safe in the dining room, but not in restrooms, offices or smaller, sealed-up rooms in the restaurant, Widmer said, adding that all of the rooms would have been ventilated properly if the system had been turned on.

Police called an electrical company the morning of Schneider's death after discovering that the restaurant's ventilation system was not operating even though the switches for the ventilation system were turned on in the circuit box inside the restaurant. The electrical company then turned on the ventilation from the circuit box on the roof, Widmer said.

The officers were exposed to the gas in the improperly ventilated building for about an hour until the electrical company arrived and switched on the ventilation from the roof, Widmer said.

"Our officers were running around and didn't even know the ventilation wasn't on," Widmer said. "They flicked the switches on, and nothing happened."

The restaurant was then aired out with the ventilation system. The Iowa City Fire Department also aired out the building around noon with large fans as a further precautionary measure, Widmer said.

Five Village Inn employees were tested at UI Hospitals and Clinics the morning of Schneider's death, but none of the officers involved was. Since then, Widmer has checked with officials at UI Hospitals and Clinics to determine if the officers were in danger from exposure to the poisonous gas.

"Some of our officers may have been in danger. We don't know," Widmer said.

Hospital officials told Widmer the officers weren't exposed to a large danger.

Methyl bromide is a dangerous poison with symptoms that can appear several months after exposure, according to a report Widmer received from the Iowa City Fire Department. Central nervous system depression, kidney injury and permanent brain damage are possible aftereffects.

Widmer said methyl bromide is a See Village, Page 5

Snipers attack rafting party on Rio Grande

LAJITAS, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers and Mexican trackers threaded their way across 400-foot cliffs Monday looking for clues left by snipers who shot at a Rio Grande rafting party and killed a man trying to drag his wounded wife to safety.

Up to four snipers were believed responsible for the Saturday ambush on the river in which the couple's river guide also was wounded. He and the woman were hospitalized in stable condition Monday.

"The woman said she remembered seeing some smoke coming from the high bluff on the Mexican side of the river . . . and that moments later, shots were fired and bullets hit on either side of their raft," said Mike Cox, a spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety in Austin. "The woman says it was a nightmare. There was no provocation or anything. It was just an attack."

Cox said it was the second time this year that American tourists have reported being shot at from the cliffs on Mexico's side of the Rio Grande.

Officials believe between 20 and 30 shots were fired, Cox said. Searchers found 12 shell casings Sunday on the cliffs in an area reachable only by boat or helicopter and once notorious for its marijuana cultivation.

The three were rafting down the river outside Big Bend National Park in southwestern Texas when they were fired upon.

Guide Jim Burr had led Michael Heffley and his wife, Jamie, of Eastland, down two miles of their planned 12-mile trip in the rented 14-foot inflatable raft when the shooting began.

Jamie Heffley thought at least two people were on the bluff but Burr said he saw four, Cox said.

Majority projected for Mulroney's free trade agreement

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney and his Conservative Party won the House of Commons majority needed to save the free trade agreement with the United States, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. projected Monday night.

The projection at about 8:40 p.m. EST, before the polls closed in western Canada, had Conservatives leading for 107 of the 295 seats in the Commons.

John Turner's opposition Liberals, who fiercely attacked the trade pact, were leading for 71 seats, and the socialist New Democratic Party of Ed Broadbent, which also opposed the accord, was ahead in 12 races.

Conservatives were expected to do well in the Western districts, which were not included in the projections.

They had a jittery start in the four Atlantic Maritime provinces, but did well enough in central Quebec and Ontario to get at least the 148 seats necessary for a majority, according to the CBC projection.

U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Mulroney signed the free trade agreement last Jan. 2. Mulroney needed a majority in the Commons to keep it alive. The U.S. Congress has approved the pact, but Parli-ment has yet to do so.

The plan is to take effect Jan. 1, 1989 and phase out remaining tariffs over the next 10 years between Canada and the United States, whose two-way trade is worth $150 billion a year.

Mulroney was buoyed in the last days by polls that showed his party back in the lead with a chance at a majority. He told reporters he would convene Parliament quickly to act on the trade deal.

He led the Conservatives to a smashing victory in 1984 that gave them 210 of the 282 seats, but no party has won two successive majorities in Canada since 1953.

Turner used a weekend rally to repeat his plea that voters "keep Canada Canadian for Canadians" and kill the agreement by voting for his party.

Mulroney spent the last campaign weekend in his native Quebec, the French-speaking province that has 75 of the 295 seats in the Commons. Turner hoped for a big score in the 99 seats of Ontario, a predominantly English-speaking province where opposition to the agreement was strongest.

Quebec and Ontario are home to the majority of Canada's 26 million people, 17.5 million of whom are eligible to vote.

Although the Liberals were far behind when the campaign began Oct. 1, Turner revived their prospects with relentless attacks on the free trade agreement as a sellout of Canada.

Mulroney says the deal guarantees future Canadian prosperity by assuring access to the U.S. market.

In an interview with Maclean's, the Canadian news weekly, Mulroney said: "The trade deal is a must for Canada's future. It's a visionary instrument of job creation and new wealth and it is clearly something that is on the right side of history."

Turner calls the agreement "a bad deal for Canada."

High-risk individuals urged to get flu shot

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

As nights grow longer and wind chills plummet, health officials are advising Iowans to prepare for winter by being vaccinated against influenza and pneumonia.

Bonnie Kay, director of Occupational Health at the American Lung Association of Iowa, said individuals in high-risk groups need to be vaccinated.

"Anyone 65 years or older should be vaccinated," said Kay. "People with chronic lung disease, chronic heart disease, renal disease and immune system abnormalities need it also. We consider people with AIDS to be in this category."

Kay said the individuals who live or work with people in these high-risk categories should also get the vaccine.

"People who work in nursing homes, and those who live with someone in the high-risk category, should also get it," she said. "That way they won't get sick themselves and pass it on to others."

Kay said it is also important for high-risk children to get the shot. "Kids with chronic lung, heart, and kidney diseases and diabetes are at risk also," said Kay.

Kay said the American Lung Association of Iowa is urging people to be immunized as soon as possible.

"The peak flu season is right after the holidays, in January," she said. "Because it takes six weeks to reach full immunity we encourage people to be vaccinated now."

Kay said researchers at the Centers for Disease Control study various strains of influenza each year before deciding which bugs the vaccine will be based on.

"They look for what will probably be the most common types of flu for that year," said Kay. "This year the vaccine is based on three different strains: Taiwan, Szechwan and Victorian. They're just named for where they come from."

Because the strings of flu vary from year to year, Kay said, the shot from one flu season might not be effective the next.

"We especially encourage those in the high-risk category to get the shot every year," she said.

Exactly how effective is the influenza vaccination?

"We can't guarantee it will work 100 percent," said Kay. "It is 80 percent effective. Those who do get sick after being vaccinated usually don't have as bad of symptoms. They don't get as sick."

Kay said a small number of people experience mild side effects from the vaccine.

"Some people complain of tenderness in their arm where they got the shot," she said. "Sometimes they get a little fever or feel a bit under the weather."

Bacterial pneumonia is also a threat to high-risk individuals, Kay said.

"The vaccine kills the pneumococcal bacteria, which is in pneumonia," Kay said. "It's very important, and you only need to get the shot once."

Medicare funds lag in rural hospitals

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Rural hospitals in Iowa and across the country have made some gains in increasing their share of Medicare reimbursement funds but lag behind urban healthcare centers, officials say.

The National Rural Health Association is going to court to try to win a bigger split of the Medicare money. The association has filed suit in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., against the secretary of Health and Human Services.

Robert Quick, a spokesman for the rural health group, based in Kansas City, Mo., said some expenses, such as labor, are less in rural areas.

"But not as much as people think," he said. "And when rural hospitals buy a new piece of equipment, they have fewer patients in spreading the cost."

Quick said Medicare reimbursement to urban hospitals is almost 40 percent higher than for rural hospitals.

In Iowa, according to the Iowa Hospital Association, the rural-urban Medicare differential was 36 percent two years ago. Last year it was 33 percent, and now it is 30 percent.

Quick said rural hospitals have a higher percentage of Medicare patients, with Iowa's 96 rural hospitals averaging half their patients on Medicare. About 40 percent of the patients in urban Iowa hospitals are on Medicare.

Rural hospitals, effective Oct. 1, received an increase in Medicare reimbursement higher than that received by urban hospitals. Higher inpatient admissions this year have led to slightly improved conditions at Iowa's rural hospitals.

According to IHA figures, Iowa's rural hospitals lost 5.3 cents per dollar on patient revenues in 1987 but only 2.7 cents during the first six months of 1988. Losses are made up by contributions, interest on investments, other income and, in the case of public hospitals, tax subsidies.

No Iowa rural hospitals have closed since 1986, but several are in trouble.

A group in Postville is looking for ways to sustain the Postville Community Memorial Hospital, which had 1987 losses of $169,000.

Grape Community Hospital in Hamburg is in bankruptcy reorganization, having lost about $900,000 last year. The Grundy Center Hospital lost nearly a half-million dollars last year.

"The ultimate goal of the suit," said Robert Van Hook, executive director of the National Rural Health Association, "is to protect healthcare access for our rural elderly."

CAC supports tuition proposal

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

UI student leaders voted Monday to support a state Board of Regents' proposal to postpone tuition decisions until after the Iowa Legislature has approved its annual budget.

The UI Collegiate Associations Council agreed that regents should not finalize tuition rates for the three state universities until the Iowa Legislature completes its annual spring budgeting process.

Iowa law now requires that the board make tuition decisions in October or November, a requirement both regents and student leaders would like changed.

"This is something we had discussed going back a few years," CAC President Gordon Fischer said. "I've talked with President (Hunter) Rawlings about it, and it seems change is right around the bend."

The resolution also stated that UI students support higher state appropriations so that tuition increases can be held to a reasonable level.

UI students are paying a higher proportion of the cost of education than in previous years, due to rapidly increasing tuition and a slowdown in the rate of growth of state appropriations to higher education, according to the resolution.

Fischer said CAC should continue to work with regents to meet other educational goals.

"I think it's important to show solidarity now that the tuition policy has been decided. . . . We all need to work together on this in the future," he said.

Several regents criticized both state-mandated tuition procedures and the time frame in which these decisions must be made during the board's November meeting in Cedar Falls, Iowa, last week.

"The present tuition policy is unfair to regents, students and university officials," said Regent Charles Duchon at the November meeting. "The board should take a bold step and skip a year of increases so we can make the decision in the spring."

CAC Councilor Dan Shanes initially objected to this resolution because it implied the regents were not helpful in the past.

But the resolution passed when the word 'again' was added to encompass the past efforts of the regents.

"I think, regardless of whether they have been thanked in the past, it's obvious they have this year, and they should be thanked," said CAC Councilor Mary Snyder.

In other business, the council supported a request by the Iowa College Aid Commission to nearly double the amount of State College Work Study funding from $2.65 million to $5.15 million.

Fischer said the additional funding may provide extra workers to keep the libraries open following the cutback in operating hours at all UI libraries this fall.

CAC Councilor Bill Lipton said five Teaching Assistant Awards for $1,000 will be distributed next semester from the UI Council of Teaching.

Lotto jackpot entices lowans; ticket sales at a record high

DES MOINES (AP)—The prospect of a $10 million Lotto America jackpot pushed ticket sales to a one-week record in Iowa last week, and officials said Monday they expect even bigger sales this week with the prospect of a record payoff in the multi-state game.

Lotto America sales in Iowa hit $826,989 last week, said assistant lottery commissioner Nicky Schissel. "And with a record Lotto America jackpot of $12 million this week, we'll set new records," she said.

No one matched all seven numbers selected in the regular weekly Lotto America drawing Saturday night — 3, 5, 9, 10, 19, 32 and 36

— so the jackpot will continue to grow. The previous record jackpot for the Iowa-based Lotto America game was the $11 million awarded to Linus McCue of Park City, Kan., in the May 21 game.

Other lottery game tickets also are selling well in Iowa, Schissel said.

"Tickets for all products are moving faster than hot cakes," she said. Total sales last week went over $4 million, the second highest since the Lottery began in August 1985, she said.

The lottery sold 1,628,000 in scratch tickets last week, $1,086,000 for Iowa Lotto and $507,915 in pull-tab tickets.

Boot camp tactics

School officials in Creston, Iowa, are taking a firm stand on student discipline, using psychological tactics straight out of a Marine boot camp training manual.

The school is using group punishment on fourth-graders, restricting privileges for the entire class if one student is disruptive. The goal is to get the well-behaved kids to force the others to shape up, and the school's principal says it's working.

Of course it is. Picture the scene: "Well, kids, Bobby was chewing gum in the hall so everyone will be staying inside during recess." Guess what happens to Bobby after school. If he's lucky he'll be verbally abused and ostracized. If he's unlucky, he'll be beaten up.

"It sounds like something right out of some psychology book," one parent said. "I'm not a psychologist, but I am a parent. And I know that kind of thing only causes problems. It has some kids scared to go to school."

Kids are cruel enough as it is. They don't need encouragement from teachers and principals. The officials in Creston are turning their "good" students against their "bad" students, forcing the latter to conform or prepare for constant abuse.

The tactic is reminiscent of every boot camp movie from Stripes to Full Metal Jacket; single out the disruptive or non-conforming soldiers and make them the scapegoats and punching bags for the entire barracks.

Peer pressure, including emotional and physical abuse, will break the spirit of a fourth-grader in no time. Sure you'll have order in the classroom, but what of originality, creativity and individuality? Apparently in Creston, they're willing to sacrifice those qualities for the sake of a quieter day. What a place to be a kid.

For the wrong reasons

There is a certain group of Democrats that is just looking for a good slap in the face.

They say they've endured eight long years of Ronald Reagan's policies and they're really not looking forward to four years with George Bush at the nation's helm. Bush makes their skin crawl — he is a rich yuppie.

That's why this group refuses to wish him well as president. They want to see him fail in a big way.

Bunk.

Think about it. They want to see Bush fail. They want to see the nation's deficit grow. They want to see our foreign relations worsen. They want more people to fall below the poverty line. They want to see more people lose their homes.

This would enable the Democrats to capture the White House in 1992.

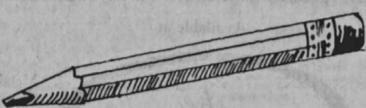

That's wrong. They want Bush to fail for the wrong reasons.

I did not vote for George Bush. But I hope the country succeeds with him in office. I don't care which party gets credit for America's successes. That's not important. Just so long as we succeed.

Guest opinions are articles on current issues written by readers of The Daily Iowan. The DI welcomes guest opinions; submissions should be typed and signed. A brief biography should accompany all submissions. The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length and clarity.

Opinions expressed on the Viewpoints page of The Daily Iowan are those of the signed author. The Daily Iowan, as a non-profit corporation, does not express opinions on these matters.

Exactly what is feminism?

Life's irony has often caused me to remark that "O. Henry is God." If I am correct in my assumption that the heavenly father exhibits attributes which cause people to miss phone calls by scant seconds (phone calls which say, "Honey, I didn't mean what I said last night; I was only scared. Will you marry me?"), or to toss lottery tickets into the trash in despair over a bounced check, tickets which turn out to be worth millions... if this is true, then God cavorted in a state of ecstasy in Iowa City last week.

Both men were feminists. That's the ironic knife which remains twisted at the heart of a ridiculously inflated situation. The first thing John Golden and Chris Lamb learned about me when I trooped into the newsroom with a letter to the editor in my hand was my sexual preference. I was responding to a letter of complaint about the gay pride march. I handed the letter to John. Like all enthusiastic and naive letter-writers, I wanted it printed the next day. He read it immediately, after finding me a chair and handing me a copy of the Times.

I watched him with the apprehensive peripheral vision so highly developed in writers. He laughed at the clever bits, seemingly with real pleasure in the sentiments I expressed. He nodded earnestly when more serious points were enumerated. He printed my letter the next day. Before I left the office he asked me to take a pen and indicate where, if such were necessary, he should make any cuts.

A few days later I saw an ad for editorial writers. I sent a quick note asking if I could try one or two. His response was immediate: he had enjoyed my letter, and I should feel free to write some guest opinions for the Viewpoints Page. When I finished, I should bring them in, and we would sit down and go over them. John Golden put me on this page.

I know about Rate-A-Babe. It doesn't take a genius to be living in this town in 1988 to realize that, aside from being juvenile and insulting, such a list was just plain dangerous. But the whole incident has erupted through the DI organization with all the violent power of a grain elevator explosion.

As for the list itself: how many of you know that the women at the top of it were put there because they stamped themselves as independent in dress and manner? Women with flair, not to mention spunk, topped the list. That doesn't change the name of the list, and I know well that the road to hell is paved with good intentions, but I've heard more tall tales about this damned silly list than Twain, Irving and the Brothers Grimm told between them.

Other, more flagrant acts ensued. There's no excuse for a judgemental column being printed publicly in response to a private staff problem of this nature. That amounts to using the paper against those who work for it, and is unconscionable. There is less than no excuse for firing a staffer in front of colleagues amidst such an incendiary situation. But I refuse to stop there. I have another question: when the situation became visibly out of control, immediately upon learning of the firing, where was the supervisor who could call the staff together and say, in front of everyone "—, you're behaving like a horse's butt?" "—, you're reinstated." "Staff, I'm going to be sitting on you for awhile now, because you've shown that you need some close watching. If anything this stupid happens again, people will be tossed off this paper. DO I MAKE MYSELF CLEAR?"

Instead, things were allowed to snowball. The situation became public. The Rate-A-Babe list ended up clearing the DI's editorial decks. Two plum positions now sit empty. The paper's supervisory board was dragged in, assorted campus offices were contacted about the sexism and injustice of the DI newsroom, and people bought it.

I don't buy it. I know better. My gratitude to feminism, my dedication to the principles of professional equality and justice, are undying. I refuse to work in an environment where men feel free to play Rate-A-Babe. By the same token, based upon those same principles, I refuse to quietly acquiesce during the creation of an environment in which women feel free to wrap themselves in a flimsy, transparent cloth of feminism and play Nail-A-Male.

This incident has harmed morale at the DI to an untold degree. It has also been a slap in the face to feminism; it has removed two staunch feminists from editorial positions on the paper. Because they happened to be men, the silence that has fallen over their departure from the paper and from Iowa City has remained unbroken. I have no choice but to break that silence. Feminists' highest priority in the coming decade must be to choose their battles carefully, squandering noble ideals on trivial issues is tantamount to suicide for this movement. We will never enjoy the widespread support we deserve while such things occur.

I cannot vouch for anyone's stubbornness, stupidity or meanness in this scenario; that spirit goes for both "sides" of the issue. All I know is that harm was done out of all proportion to the actions which started it. That seems to me a very apt definition of injustice, and I thought it would do my heart good to point it out to you.

Kim Painter's column appears periodically on the Viewpoints Page.

Chorus of Boos

To the Editor:
Another year, another tuition increase. And, another chorus of "boos" from students. Out-of-state students choose to come here, their families haven't paid Iowa taxes. Should we compensate them for gracing us with their presence? Boy, $1,826 for a full academic year for in-staters really is asking a lot, isn't it? That's about $7,300 for a four-year college degree! What does one year of in-state tuition cost at the University of Illinois?

The DI (Nov. 17) quoted a student who might have to take some time out of her education to get the money for tuition. Geez, imagine the horror of that! What about the folks who never made it to college, who pump gas, drive trucks and work at the lumberyard? Think they feel sorry for her? When bars, liquor stores and retail clothing outlets start closing shop, then I'll believe that students can't afford the lowest tuition around.

I made it through the university in four years, with no help from my parents, and about $500 in my pocket when I hit town. I drank my fair share of recreational beverages, even bought new clothes once in a while. Why should my parents' tax money go to fund your college education, when it didn't fund mine? If the heat is too intense... go get a job. Or find a different school.

Myth of Burge

To the Editor:
I would hope that if you wanted to print a fair story on Burge Residence Hall (DI, Nov. 14) you would send a reporter to investigate the decrease in false fire alarms, success of the new alcohol policy, expansion of custodial service on the weekends or specific events such as the quick staff response in evacuating the building during last Thursday's fire. This would provide an accurate, documented description of Burge. It would not be the creative writing whim of a student trying to get a cheap laugh on the front page of the paper.

I do not dispute the basic points in the story. There is graffiti in some bathrooms and on some doors. The cafeteria food doesn't taste like home cooking, but what family has 1,900 people in it? Your paper is perpetuating the "myth" that Burge Hall is somehow different. Residence Halls at this university and throughout the country can also point to problems along these lines. By specifying Burge, you contribute to the problem. Resident Assistants are repeatedly given the excuse that loud or destructive behavior is acceptable because "This is Burge."

Burge has many freshmen who are away from their spotless and quiet homes for the first time. The combination of this culture shock, along with the natural tendency for individuals and the media to embellish stories, has given Burge its negative reputation. This reputation may make for a good read, but it is far from deserved. By printing one man's opinion as a front page news story, you serve only to keep the issue confused.

Challenger Inaccuracies

To the Editor:
I would like to point out several inaccuracies in Paul Stolt's editorial "Real Tragedy," Nov. 16) concerning the Challenger accident. If Mr. Stolt had spent more time investigating the facts instead of quoting Tennyson, he would have discovered that Dennis Powell's articles in The Des Moines Register were nothing but sensationalistic journalism. In contrast to what his editorial states, NASA did not "spread the story" or "claim" that the crew had perished in the explosion; this is clearly evident in the official NASA report concerning the cause of death of the astronauts. This report (which was released over two years ago) concluded that the crew probably survived the initial explosion and either perished due to depressurization of the crew module or impact with the ocean, (most likely the latter) although neither could be proven conclusively as the cause of death. This report was cited in articles in August 1986 issues of Time and Aviation Week and Space Technology, which hardly makes it news now. Naturally, this report barely received mention in Powell's tabloid-like articles in the Register, which I was surprised to see that Mr. Stolt, being a journalist, did not see through as being just that.

There also was no "cover-up of the events" leading to the accident; the presidential commission which investigated the accident made it clear that negligence on the part of NASA management as well as technology was an important contributor to the accident. The commission report cited numerous examples (furnished during testimony by NASA employees and contractors) of communication breakdown and high-level management pressure which resulted in the ill-fated decision to launch.

The "real tragedy" is that the crew module escape system proposed in the editorial was eliminated from the orbiter design due to congressional budget cuts imposed on NASA in the early 1970s (which have plagued the shuttle throughout its development). Accordingly, the shuttle was not designed to allow the crew to survive in-flight accidents. Such a "simple" system cannot be implemented in the current orbiter except by a complete redesign of the orbiter and by imposing severe weight restrictions on payload capacity, as well as a tremendous burden on the NASA budget. Therefore, NASA has to press on with the present shuttle system, underfunded, overworked and with its fingers crossed, hoping that nothing like the Challenger accident happens again.

New Wave finalizes plans for CIA-recruitment protest

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

For the last few weeks, members of the UI student activist group New Wave have been spreading the word in preparation for the protest against the CIA's next recruitment session at the UI on Dec. 6.

But now only two weeks before recruitment day at the UI, New Wave members finalized their plans at a Monday night meeting.

"What it boils down to now is educating people before Dec. 6 and rallying people together on Dec. 6," said New Wave member Roberta Branca.

Since it began its current CIA-Off-Campus campaign in late October, New Wave has been on a mission to see that all facets of the UI community hear its message. UI President Hunter Rawlings heard this message directly from New Wave members during a Nov. 10 meeting with the group.

"We just presented our case, exchanged views and presented our demands," said New Wave member William Brinkman.

expected." But despite the negative response the group feels it received from Rawlings, New Wave members say they will move forward with their CIA-Off-Campus effort through a series of educational events.

In addition to a petition drive and the disbursement of leaflets around campus, New Wave's plans include presentations to rhetoric classes, a "torch parade" from the Pentacrest to Rawlings' house and a showing of the movie "Cover Up," a documentary of the Iran-Contra hearings, Branca said.

"We don't hold too many illusions that if we show the university a bunch of names on a petition they're going to say, 'Okay, we won't let the CIA recruit here,'" Cadwell said, "but we want them to see that they're all these people here whose demands aren't being met."

On Dec. 6, New Wave has scheduled the appearance of several speakers, including former CIA agent Vern Lyons, and a march from the Pentacrest to the recruitment site.

"We've taken it to the administration," said Brinkman, "and now it's time for the students to speak."

particularly dangerous gas because it has practically no odor and few irritating effects. Methyl bromide is also a carcinogen.

There is no way now to test the officers, but Widmer said the police department has carefully documented those officers present at the scene of investigation.

He said there is a remote possibility of the officers developing cancer several years from now as a result of methyl bromide exposure.

"I'm not really worried about it, but I don't know," Widmer said.

Mark Rathke, a Schaumburg, Ill., spokesman for W.B. McCloud, said Monday the company could not comment further on the case until it has received the toxicology report from Johnson County medical examiner T.T. Bozek.

Rathke said the company has cooperated fully with the investigation launched by the Iowa Department of Labor, Iowa Department of Agriculture and Iowa City Police.

The Schneider family attorney, John Carlin of Carlin, Hellstrom and Bittner in Davenport, said Sunday the family's decision to file suit is also pending receipt of the report.

Widmer said the Johnson County Attorney's Office will determine if further investigation is needed in the case, but he has closed the investigation for now.

Thanksgiving dinner Thursday from noon to 6 p.m.

Jackie Petersen, the wife of the Rev. E. Robert Petersen, said the congregation will be working together to develop a sense of family environment for anyone who is looking for food or company this Thanksgiving.

"This includes shut-ins," Petersen said. "All they have to do is call us, and we'll deliver turkey and all the trimmings to them. Also, if anyone needs a ride to the dinner, we'll pick anyone up who needs one."

Church members will be taking turns cooking and serving hot dishes and visiting with dinner guests. "This way no one will feel left out," Petersen said.

JFK memorial draws hundreds of visitors

DALLAS (AP) — Hundreds of people came to the John F. Kennedy Memorial in downtown Dallas on Monday, as the city where he was killed 25 years ago prepared to mark the anniversary with private remembrances but no official ceremony.

Kennedy was traveling in a motorcade through downtown Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963, when shots rang out across Dealey Plaza and he fell, mortally wounded. Today, a stone slab inscribed with Kennedy's name and surrounded by partial walls stands near the site as a memorial.

It was to this slab that visitors came Monday, the eve of the anniversary, to pay tribute to a president some of them were too young to remember.

Raul Miranda, 40, was in Dallas for a convention when he recalled the anniversary and decided to visit the memorial before going home to Los Angeles.

"It's something that I can tell my kids what happened," he said. "I'm going to tell them that 25 years ago this event changed the history of the United States, the history of the world."

Ernest Saucedo of Dallas hadn't even been born when the tragic events unfolded but visited the memorial anyway.

"I just made it my business to come by," said Saucedo, 20. "I understand he was a good president. I just feel I needed to come by. This is history."

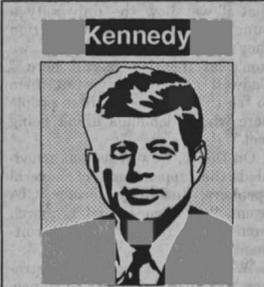

On Sunday, 30 former Green Berets and 150 onlookers gathered at the memorial to remember Kennedy. The members of the U.S. Army Special Forces wore their berets — the ones Kennedy had authorized in 1961 — as they saluted four wreaths laid at the memorial.

At Parkland Memorial Hospital, where Kennedy was taken after being shot, a round-table discussion was planned Tuesday with five doctors and nurses who were at the hospital when the president arrived.

Also Tuesday, Dallas-area painters, poets, performance artists and musicians planned a series of exhibits and live performances at the Texas Theater, where assassin Lee Harvey Oswald was apprehended only hours after the assassination.

At Dealey Plaza, a small American flag with a bouquet of flowers lay in front of a plaque, about 200 yards from the memorial and across the street from the Texas School Book Depository Building, where authorities say Oswald fired from a sixth-floor window into Kennedy's motorcade.

The attention given to the 25th anniversary has aroused more interest than usual in the site, said Gary Mead, who drove one of several tour buses that stopped at the memorial Monday.

"They're very much aware of it," Mead said. "They don't want to miss this part of the tour."

Darrell Jordan, a Dallas native, was making his first visit to Dealey Plaza. He spent about an hour Monday touring the areas around the assassination site.

"I've been watching all of the specials the past several months and trying to formalize my own opinions" about what happened, he said. "I've been walking all over the place."

Jordan said he is disappointed the city and county planned no formal ceremonies to commemorate the anniversary but that he believed he understood why. "Local officials" worked 25 years to try to get the nation to forget it, he said.

The Dallas County Democratic Party, which had been in charge of the official observance, last marked the anniversary five years ago. Since then, it has sponsored ceremonies every May remembering Kennedy on his birthday.

"We got the impression that the family preferred we remember the happier moment celebrating his birth," said Sandy Kress, county party chairman.

UI history professor relates Kennedy's effect on civil rights

IOWA CITY (AP) — The assassination of President John F. Kennedy helped advance the cause of civil rights in the United States, a UI history professor said Monday.

Robert Weems, professor of history and Afro-American studies, said Kennedy's shooting death in November 1963 helped win swift passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 because of the president's strong backing of civil rights causes.

"Definitely, (the reason) that the bill went through as smoothly as it did was the fact that there was a real sentiment to honor Kennedy's legacy," Weems said. "It was quite obvious that Kennedy was strongly in favor of such legislation."

Weems said Kennedy sent federal marshals to protect freedom riders trying to end racial segregation in the South in the early 1960s. In 1962, the president sent troops to Mississippi to see that Gov. Ross Barnett let James Meredith enroll at the University of Mississippi, he said.

"During his particular administration, government took a much more activist role in protecting civil rights demonstrators during the early 1960s," Weems said. "During this period, you had sit-ins occurring in the South, as well as the phenomenon known as the freedom rides. In certain locales of the South, a lot of the local police officials didn't protect the civil rights demonstrators as efficiently as they could have."

Weems said that in June 1963, Kennedy delivered a nationally televised address that laid the groundwork for the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

"This was the first time that a U.S. president had unequivocally spoken out against racial segregation and discrimination in the United States," Weems said. He quoted Kennedy as closing the speech by saying, "Next week I shall ask the Congress of the United States to make a commitment it has not made in this century, to the proposition that race has no place in American life and law."

Weems said Kennedy took a much more active role in the civil rights struggles than had previous presidents.

"Eisenhower appeared to have pretty much of a laissez faire attitude concerning government involvement in the civil rights struggle," Weems said. "Whereas, in some instances, Kennedy went out of his way to offer assistance to the civil rights movement or express his support of the civil rights movement. Something that Dwight Eisenhower, for instance, never did."

Weems said the civil rights struggle was one waged over who held the higher power over such issues — states or the federal government.

"For example, had George Wallace gotten away with not permitting a black student to enter the University of Alabama or had Gov. Ross Barnett, during this period, gotten away with keeping James Meredith out of the University of Mississippi, that would have set a very dangerous precedent in terms of a particular region or state ignoring a federal law that they didn't particularly like. And more or less getting away with it," Weems said.

Yugoslavian ethnic groups protest ouster of 2 leaders

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia (AP)—Thousands of ethnic Albanians angered by the ouster of two leaders defied threats of a crackdown and took to the streets Monday, extending a wave of ethnic protest for a fifth straight day.

At least 7,000 demonstrators braved pouring rain and marched about 40 miles to Pristina, capital of the restive southern province of Kosovo. In the liberal northern republic of Slovenia, about 10,000 people staged a peaceful rally to press for more democracy. The protests in the two regions were unrelated.

The protesters in Kosovo have been angered by the resignations Thursday of Azem Vllasi and Kacusa Jasari, both ethnic Albanian members of the province's 13-member ruling Politburo.

The two stepped down under pressure from Serbian Communist Party leader Slobodan Milosevic, who wants greater control over Kosovo for its republic, Serbia. He has demanded changes in the 1974 constitution that gave Kosovo broad autonomy.

Provincial party leaders have promised to review the resignations of the two ethnic Albanians later this week.

In a speech Monday in Belgrade, Milosevic reiterated his demand for the constitutional changes he says are needed to protect Kosovo's Serb minority from harassment by ethnic Albanians. He made no reference to the weekend protests in Kosovo by up to 100,000 ethnic Albanians.

At Monday's protest in a Pristina sports hall, a crowd of about 7,000, mostly workers who trudged 40 miles from the town of Orohovac, dispersed after a Serbian factory worker defied Milosevic and backed the ethnic Albanians.

The worker, Ruzica Imsa, was cheered wildly as she spoke out against the constitutional reforms pressed by many of her fellow Serbs.

"The working class will not allow itself to be pushed around," she said. "We will not let anyone impose constitutional changes the people do not want."

Local Communist Party leaders were jeered and whistled when they tried to get the crowd to return home.

Soviet panel reconsiders constitution

MOSCOW (AP)—A panel considering President Mikhail Gorbachev's plans for change recommends curtailing the power of a new national council in response to accusations that the Kremlin concentrates too much power in Moscow.

Pravda, the Communist Party daily, said Monday the commission of the Supreme Soviet recommended dropping language that gives the new Council of People's Deputies the power to reject laws adopted by legislatures of the 15 Soviet republics.

The commission is reviewing constitutional amendments to be considered by the national parliament next week.

Proposed amendments designed to reorganize the governing apparatus have generated considerable opposition, not only in the independence-minded Baltic republics but also in letters published by the Soviet press.

In one manifestation of recent demands for more autonomy, thousands of Lithuanians chanting "For shame!" jammed the center of Vilnius, capital of Lithuania, on Monday to protest their legislature's refusal to declare the republic's autonomy from Moscow, residents said.

The Supreme Soviet commission, in a Saturday meeting that was the subject of Pravda's report Monday, also suggested changing language that authorizes the new council to decide the composition of the Soviet Union, its constituent republics and autonomous regions.

Arab-Israeli Conflict

Israeli parliament opens amid turmoil

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israel's 12th parliament opened Monday with fiery exchanges between political rivals and a plea from President Chaim Herzog to save the institution "from the weakening of its foundations."

Fifteen members initially refused to take the oath of office from a representative of the extreme right, dramatizing their opposition to his party's advocacy of expelling Arabs from the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

About 1,000 Israelis, most of them teen-agers, demonstrated outside against demands by ultra-Orthodox religious parties that only conversions to Judaism by Orthodox rabbis be recognized.

In the atmosphere of sharp division, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir continued seeking a broadly based coalition including the rival Labor Party of Foreign Minister Shimon Peres.

Labor and Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc have been equal partners in a "national unity" coalition government since indecisive 1984 elections.

Likud won 40 seats in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament, in the Nov. 1 elections and Labor got 39. Shamir has been negotiating with small religious and right-wing parties for a parliamentary majority, as well as offering Labor a junior partnership.

Labor and Likud leaders met in a Monday night negotiating session, Labor officials said.

Before the meeting, Peres expressed pessimism about prospects for an agreement with Likud. "In my estimation we are heading for the opposition benches," the daily Davar quoted Peres as saying in an interview published Monday.

Israeli media quoted Shamir as saying "the chances of forming a broad government are close to nil," but his spokesman Yossi Ahmeir said the question remained open.

"It's a war of nerves," Ahmeir said. "Of course he would like as broad a government as possible, if it is possible. All options are open."

Labor wants two of three important ministries: defense, finance and foreign affairs. Likud has agreed to give only one, preferably defense.

In the Knesset, leftist legislators from six parties refused to take the oath from Yair Sprinzak, 77, who as the oldest member was made chairman of the meeting in keeping with tradition.

"In my worst nightmare I never thought someone like you would swear me in as a member of parliament," dissenting legislator Yossi Sarid shouted in protest.

Three Arab members — Tawfiq Zayad, Tawfiq Toubi and Abdel Wahab Daraushe — refused the oath by saying they would swear only "to fight against oppression and transfer."

Transfer is the term Sprinzak's Molelet party uses for expelling Arabs.

The 15 protesting legislators later agreed to take the oath so they could vote for a Knesset speaker.

'Orthodox-only' amendment may endanger U.S.-Israeli relations

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. and Canadian Jewish groups Monday began fighting a proposal that would accept only Orthodox conversions to Judaism and limit converts who can immigrate to Israel.

Four U.S. congressmen who met with Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said adopting the so-called "Who is a Jew" amendment would hurt U.S.-Israeli relations.

About 800 Israelis demonstrated against the amendment Monday as the newly elected parliament convened for the first time. "Don't divide our people," read their posters.

Rep. Matthew McHugh, D-N.Y., told reporters the proposal "would engender some strains which would not be healthy for the U.S.-Israeli relationship."

His congressional delegation, organized by the U.S.-based Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, was one of three U.S. and Canadian Jewish groups lobbying in Israel against the amendment.

It would give Orthodox rabbis exclusive authority to approve conversions to Judaism. This means Jewish converts would be granted automatic Israeli citizenship under the "Law of Return" only if brought into the faith by Orthodox rabbis.

Ultra-Orthodox political parties are demanding the change as a price for supporting either the right-wing Likud bloc or left-leaning Labor party. The 18 parliament seats they won in Nov. 1 elections may give them the power to choose who heads the next government.

The amendment is fiercely opposed by Reformed and Conservative Jews whose branches make up the majority of Jews in the United States and Canada.

"We are dealing with 5 million American Jews. This law would make them feel like second-class citizens," said Martin Stein, chairman of the trustees' board of the United Jewish Appeal, a major American Jewish fund raiser.

Richard Cohen, a spokesman for the New York-based American Jewish Committee, said after meeting Likud politicians that Israel should not risk alienating U.S. Jews.

"American Jews see Israel as an extension of ourselves. If the law is imposed on us, we will wonder if we are welcome in the State of Israel," said Cohen.

Peres told reporters he assured the congressmen that his Labor Party would vote against the proposed change even though it involves only a few foreign converts and does not affect most of Israel's 3.5 million Jews, who are Orthodox but non-observant.

Reserve soldiers smash windows, topple cars after Palestinians throw stones at army bus

JERUSALEM (AP) — Dozens of Israeli soldiers smashed doors and windows and overturned cars in a Palestinian refugee camp after their bus was pelted by stones, Arab witnesses and state-run television said Monday.

An army spokesman said the incident, which occurred Sunday night at the Kalandia camp north of Jerusalem, was being investigated.

"Apparently reserve soldiers were involved," said the army official, who cannot be identified under military rules. "If the reports are true, the soldiers will be brought to court."

Reserve units have been activated to support the regular army in trying to contain the 11-month-old Palestinian uprising against the 21-year Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Six Palestinian teen-agers suffered gunshot wounds Monday in clashes with Israeli troops in Gaza, Arab hospital officials said.

In Gaza's Jabaliya refugee camp, two Palestinian children, a teen-ager and a 55-year-old woman were treated for injuries from rubber bullets fired to break up demonstrations, the doctors said. They insisted on anonymity.

The army spokesman's office confirmed two wounding, both in the Shati camp in Gaza City, and said it was checking the other reports.

Iraqi president's son kills bodyguard

BAGHDAD, Iraq — President Saddam Hussein said Monday his eldest son, Odai, bludgeoned to death a presidential bodyguard, and he ordered an investigation into the slaying.

In a letter to the minister broadcast on state radio, Hussein said Kamel Hana Gegeo was killed the night of Oct. 18 when the trusted bodyguard was firing his gun in a private villa near the presidential palace in Baghdad.

He said Odai sent his own bodyguard to ask Gegeo to stop shooting, but Gegeo did not obey. Odai and his bodyguard went to see why Gegeo disobeyed him, as well as a presidential order that prohibits firing personal weapons during celebrations.

Odai went to Gegeo and asked him if he received his order to stop shooting, and when the bodyguard said yes, Odai hit him with a wooden bat.

Gegeo was rushed to a hospital where he died the next day from a head wound.

Gegeo, 25, is the oldest of the president's five children.

Pakistan ignores signal, downs Afghan plane

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Pakistan ignored a distress signal and shot down an Afghan military transport plane that was having mechanical problems, killing all 27 people on board, Afghanistan's state radio said Monday.

Pakistan said it shot down the aircraft after it crossed the border and failed to identify itself.

Kabul radio said the Soviet-made Antonov-26 was flying from Kabul to Jalalabad in eastern Afghanistan when it had technical problems Saturday night. The radio did not describe the problems but said the pilot put out a call for assistance that Pakistani authorities ignored.

But a Pakistan Foreign Ministry spokesman said the plane was shot down by a Pakistani paramilitary force several miles inside Pakistan, near Parachinar town.

"The plane was asked to identify itself, and it didn't," the spokesman said. Pakistan has repeatedly complained of air violations by neighboring Afghanistan.

FDA approves drug for AIDS-related cancer

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration announced Monday the approval of alpha interferon as a treatment for Kaposi's sarcoma, a cancer that primarily affects AIDS patients.

Alpha interferon is a disease-fighter that is present in the body naturally in small amounts but has been artificially produced in large quantities in recent years through the use of gene-splicing techniques. It previously had been approved for treatment of hairy-cell leukemia and for genital warts.

Frank Young, FDA commissioner, said approval of the artificially-produced alpha interferon "shows biotechnology's emerging role in helping modern medicine fight some of the most serious diseases which plague mankind."

Kaposi's sarcoma, named for a European doctor who first described it more than 100 years ago, was a rare cancer until the appearance early in this decade of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

Survey: Women smoking more, sooner

NEW YORK — Women are starting to smoke earlier in life, smoking more and inhaling more deeply than they did in the 1960s, according to surveys by the American Cancer Society.

The incidence of lung cancer in women increased five-fold during that time, from an average of 24 cases per 100,000 women in 1960-1964 to 131 per 100,000 between 1982 and 1986, the cancer society said.

The number of women who smoke 20 or more cigarettes a day climbed by 20 percent between 1960-1964 — when the cancer society conducted its first Cancer Prevention Survey — and 1982-1986, when it conducted the Cancer Prevention Survey II.

Consumer group sinks "Mickey's Motorboat"

WASHINGTON — A "Mickey's Motorboat" toy is being recalled because the wind-up boat's propeller could come off and cause a child to choke, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission said Monday.

The federal commission said consumers should take the toy away from young children immediately and return it to the store for a refund.

The 6-inch-long plastic boat has figures of Goofy, Donald Duck and Cap'n Mickey Mouse, with a propeller to move the boat in water and wheels to push it along the floor.

Report criticizes bailouts of savings institutions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Insolvent savings and loans should be shut down as soon as possible, the General Accounting Office said Monday, criticizing the current policy of keeping troubled institutions alive with government rescues.

"The time has come to move as quickly as possible to close insolvent institutions," the congressional watchdog agency said in one of a series of transition reports addressed to the next administration and Congress.

"That means fully recognizing and finding the money to pay for the losses in those institutions — money that FSLIC (Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.) does not have today," it said.

In another report, former presidents Jimmy Carter and Gerald Ford called on President-elect George Bush to close all insolvent S&Ls within two years.

"The current approach of merging or selling insolvent institutions . . . defers but does not solve the problem," Ford and Carter said in their report, titled "American Agenda."

The two former presidents said the industry must continue to pay for the cleanup of ailing institutions, but they acknowledged, "the next president and Congress (also) must go to the taxpayers."

GAO analyst Craig Simmons said his agency's call for swiftly closing insolvent thrift institutions was an implicit criticism of the current Federal Home Loan Bank Board policy of rescuing failed thrifts by providing private investors with government cash and guarantees against future loss.

Simmons said the GAO was not against all mergers but said so far the bank board hasn't had the money to recognize all the losses and is covering them with open-ended guarantees.

"They're not really resolving the problem in the sense of putting it behind them," he said.

The GAO also said the problem was too large for the industry to bear alone and said the "depositing public" must help, either through an appropriation of tax dollars or some sort of user charge.

Karl Hoyle, a spokesman for the bank board, said "there are inherent dangers to local economies" in closing too many institutions. Selling too much of the property from failed S&Ls too fast would drag down the value of property held by healthy institutions, he said.

"There are places in the country where wholesale closings would result in no services to a community," he said. "It would be devastating if we were to do wholesale liquidations in a state like Texas."

U.S. to investigate Japanese building trades operations

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter announced an investigation Monday into the way Japan runs its building trades, to see if it includes unfair practices that hurt or threaten U.S. industry.

He said the action was required by the Trade Act that President Ronald Reagan signed into law in August.

The investigation will cover Japanese acts, policies and practices that may be barriers to U.S. architectural, engineering and construction services, and consulting services related to them. Yeutter's statement said the U.S. government will consult with the government of Japan and seek advice from business committees and the public.

A finding of unfair practices could lead to U.S. retaliation.

GAO report claims IRS workers' pay below standard

WASHINGTON (AP) — In some areas of the country, the people who process your federal tax return are paid less than those who make your hamburgers, congressional auditors said Monday.

The problem of low salaries was one of several cited by the General Accounting Office in a report on how the Internal Revenue Service might improve the tax-collection process. The report was one of a series by GAO, an arm of Congress, on major problems to be faced by the new president and new Congress.

"If these issues are not addressed," GAO boss Charles Bowsher wrote, "the IRS commissioner can expect: (1) serious problems in processing tax returns, (2) a decline in taxpayer confidence in the tax system, and (3) a significant loss in tax revenues that could help reduce the deficit."

The most pressing IRS need is modernization of the tax-processing system, GAO said, noting the agency already has approved a basic plan that will cost several billion dollars and is expected to take 10 years to complete.

"IRS cannot afford to wait until the mid-1990s for a solution to an impending computer capacity problem," GAO said. "If it does, the processing problems encountered in 1985 in processing tax returns and issuing refunds could recur."

Most recommendations in the report had been made previously by the GAO.

Avant-garde works visit UI art museum

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

For many of the avant-garde artists, the written word is more than mere information — it also can serve as provocative ornamentation.

"The Avant-Garde and the Text," an exhibition of 125 works on paper from the collection of Dr. and Mrs. Hans J. Kleinschmidt of New York, will be on display in the UI Museum of Art through Dec. 27.

The works include books, periodicals, brochures and letterheads by artists including Marcel Duchamp, Kurt Schwitters, John Heartfield and Raoul Hausman. The exhibition, the first show of its kind, includes work produced from 1909 to 1953 by artists connected with various American and European avant-garde movements — Futurism, Expressionism, Dada, Surrealism, International Constructivism and the Bauhaus.

"The Avant-Garde and the Text," a traveling exhibition from the Visual Studies Workshop in Rochester, N.Y., is sponsored by the State University of New York College at Brockport. It was organized in association with the UI Fine Arts Dada Archive and Research Center.

Curators of the exhibition are Stephen Foster and Estera Milman from the UI School of Art and Art History and Roy F. Allen of Wartburg College. A special edition of the journal Visible Language serves as the catalog of the exhibition.

"The primary purpose of the exhibit is to present a retrospective of pivotal avant-garde paper works to the American art public," wrote Foster and Milman in the catalog's preface. "While examples of avant-garde texts are often included in exhibitions of 20th-century art, there have been few systematic attempts to mount retrospectives of this scope within the United States."

"One factor contributing to this surprising situation has been the lack of attention paid to the innovative formal characteristics of the works themselves. . . . Scrutiny of many of these texts discloses a sense of aesthetic purpose rarely surpassed in the 20th century."

The avant-garde artists in the current exhibition attempted to redesign text in order to make it more communicative, using changes in the format, look and context of the written word to call attention to the content.

And a sense of humor. Even the catalog goes in two directions at once — text and photos of the show are printed horizontally on the left-reading pages of the quarterly journal Visible Language; densely written, scholarly essays on the avant-garde movement are printed vertically on the right-reading pages.

"Many of the paperworks which make up this exhibition are diminutive in size," wrote Susan Cohen and Nathan Lyons in the catalog's

"Die KunstSMen," part of the exhibit, "The Avant-garde and the Text," which runs in the UI Museum of Art through Dec. 27.

foreword. "As such, they are a shock and a delight to the modern viewer. . . . They are meant to be held, scrutinized and read. Some of the pieces are in unfamiliar languages, yet their common and most powerful quality — that of purposeful engagement with the beholder — it is clearly transmitted through innovative page design, witty typography and gestures of the hand."

"The importance of the avant-garde text rests, in part, in its transposition of the problematic of culture into visual statements," wrote Foster and Milman. "It is the concern of the curators of this exhibition that the materials be rediscovered as some of the most innovative artistic statements of the last 100 hundred years."

The Museum of Art is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Show features Nigerian gourds

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

"The Essential Gourd," an exhibition of decorated gourds from northeastern Nigeria, will be on display through Dec. 27 in the UI Museum of Art.

Organized by the Museum for Cultural History at UCLA, the exhibition features gourds collected by Barbara Rubin Hudson and exhibition curator Marla Berns.

The 80 gourds, crafted by members of 25 ethnic groups, are carved and decorated with geometric and naturalistic patterns burned into the surface with heated metal blades.

"The remarkable number of shapes and sizes in which it (gourd) grows has made it suitable for a host of purposes ranging from the obvious to the ingenious," wrote Marla Berns, principal author of the catalog that accompanies the exhibition. "The hollowed-out shells of gourds are used for storage or for serving food and drink. In combination with other materials, they become musical instruments, smoking pipes, fishing floats or ritual regalia.

"Beyond utility, the fruit also lends itself to a rich array of decorative enhancements — from lustrous patinas, to complex patterns of incised or pyro-engraved designs, to the addition of elements as basic as fiber or as precious as beads or cowries."

Christopher Roy, museum curator of art of Africa, the Pacific and New World cultures, said the exhibition "demonstrates the African skill in transforming ordinary, mundane materials into beautiful art objects."

"Among some groups, farming responsibilities are divided and both sexes harvest gourds," wrote Berns. "Among others, such as the Ga'anda, men have exclusive control over their cultivation and preparation."

Peach Bowl will be on local television

DUBUQUE (AP) — Dubuque and Cedar Rapids television stations have reached an agreement allowing the Peach Bowl to be telecast into the Waterloo, Cedar Rapids and Iowa City areas. The cities had been blacked out for the Dec. 31 game in Atlanta between Iowa and North Carolina State because KDUB-TV in Dubuque had bought the rights to broadcast the game in the area and its signal did not reach them. Joe Denk, news and program director for KDUB-TV in Dubuque, said Monday his station reached an agreement with KGAN-TV in Cedar Rapids to broadcast the game. KDUB also will carry the telecast.

Four Hawkeyes named all-American

Four members of the Iowa field hockey team have been named to the 1988 College Field Hockey Coaches Association/Penn Monto all-American Team. Attackers Cherie Freddie and Erica Richards and defender Diane Loosbrock received first-team all-American recognition. Attacker Tina Parrott was given honorable mention honors. Freddie, a junior from San Diego, Calif., finished the season with two goals and 13 assists. She was first team all-Big Ten and an NCAA all-tournament team selection. Richards, a junior from Pennsauken, N.J., was named the Big Ten Conference Player of the Year, Offensive Player of the Year, and was a first team all-league selection. She led the Big Ten in scoring with a record 13 goals and one assist in league play, and led the Hawkeyes with 27 goals and three assists. Richards was a CFHCA/Penn Monto honorable mention selection last season. Loosbrock, a senior from San Diego, Calif., was a first-team all-Big Ten selection and was named to the 1988 NCAA all-tournament team. Parrott, a senior from San Diego, Calif., joined the Hawkeyes this season after San Jose State dropped its program. She had 20 goals and four assists, second best on the Hawkeye squad.

Hubbell dies after car accident

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Carl Hubbell, who won 253 games as a left-handed pitcher for the New York Giants, died Monday, two days after being critically injured in an automobile accident. He was 85. Hubbell was injured Saturday when he lost control of his car while driving near his Mesa, Ariz. home, and the vehicle struck a metal pole. A spokeswoman at Scottsdale Memorial Hospital-Osborn said Hubbell died at 1 p.m. Hubbell's most celebrated feat was striking out five future Hall of Famers in a row in the 1934 All-Star Game. Nicknamed "King Carl" and "The Meal Ticket," Hubbell was one of the top pitchers of the 1930s. He won 21 or more games five years in a row, earned the Most Valuable Player Award with a 26-6 record in 1936 and set a then-record of 46 1/3 consecutive scoreless innings from July 13 to Aug. 1, 1933. "Young left-handers still look on Hubbell as one of the legends of the game," Giants spokesman Duffy Jennings said from San Francisco.

Widenhofer resigns as Missouri coach

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — Woody Widenhofer, 45, resigned under pressure Monday as Missouri football coach. He had a four-year record of 12-31-1. "I want to thank my football players and coaches for hanging in there. It was tough times here the last seven or eight weeks... lots of adversity and lots of things going on," Widenhofer said in a brief statement at a news conference. "I love the University of Missouri. I'm still a Missouri Tiger and I'm going to support this football program 100 percent." Chancellor Haskell Monroe said a search would begin immediately for a replacement and he hoped to have the successor identified by Dec. 1. Widenhofer's resignation followed weeks of speculation that his contract, which expires Jan. 31, would not be renewed after finishing 3-7-1 in his fourth season. In his first year, the Tigers were 1-10, followed by marks of 3-8 and 5-6.

teams met in a NCAA regional championship game that Louisiana Tech won 66-65. "I knew then that we were playing a very fine basketball team," Louisiana Tech Coach Leon Barmore said. "Nobody down here knew much about Iowa, but I wouldn't have been surprised if we would have lost that game. They were a good team then and I expect them to be a good team now." The Hawaii event is not a new one to Barmore. His teams have played in the Wahine Classic several times and he thinks this yet to be the toughest tournament yet. "I used to enjoy this tournament," Barmore said. "We used to come out here and mix fun and pleasure and I don't know how I can do that this time. It used to be we would lay on the beach and the only thing I had to worry about is when the next wave would come in." "Now I have some competition to worry about."

Davis said. "We've got to improve our defense and rebounding. That will take the longest. That's where our younger players are having the biggest problems, on the other end of the court." "It's just going to take some time." After AIA's Lorenzo Romar punished the Iowa defense by hitting eight of 11 3-pointers, Davis said a weak link was exposed. "Defensively, we've got to come out and put some pressure on the ball, and do a better job helping off the ball," he said. "It's going to take literally all season long. That's what veteran teams can do, and younger teams can't, with consistency." Senior guard Roy Marble said Iowa's two exhibition contests have been a valuable preseason experience. "It's told us a lot about ourselves," Marble said. "I think we've got to do a lot to improve our defense. We have a lot to work on."

because of the prestige of those programs. "We didn't lose to them, plus we had the six victories. In the eyes of other people, those ties look good. It's a gosh, they probably put more importance to them than some of the local people." Win or lose in the Peach Bowl, this Iowa team will have fewer victories than any previous Hawkeye squad that went to a bowl. Since going to the Rose Bowl with an 8-3 record in 1981, the Hawkeyes won between eight and 10 games every season until this year. Asked his reaction to those who think the Hawkeyes don't deserve to be in a bowl, Fry said, "I haven't run across anybody who said that at all. All I know is there were four bowls that were ready to make us a commitment. They did it on the prestige of our program." Fry did not name the other three bowls, but the Liberty, Freedom and the All-American had followed

Iowa throughout the season. Fry said the Hawkeyes are an attractive bowl team because of quarterback Chuck Hartlieb and the large number of fans who follow them on postseason trips. Hartlieb set a school record for passing yardage this year and became the first Iowa quarterback to throw for more than 3,000 yards in a season twice. "We've always had a great individual player that we could sell," Fry said. "Plus we have a great tradition of playing exciting football games right down to the wire when we're playing on television, whether it's a bowl game or not." Fry has given his players two weeks off to rest from the long season, which began Sept. 3 in Hawaii. They'll start organized weightlifting and conditioning drills Dec. 5 and resume practice Dec. 12. Aguirre reaches quarters at ITCA

By Julie Deardorff
The Daily Iowan

Extra training and conditioning helped bring Iowa's Martin Aguirre to the quarterfinals of the ITCA Rolex Midwest Regional Tournament this past weekend, the furthest any Hawkeye has ever advanced in the Bloomington, Ind., tournament.

According to Iowa Coach Steve Houghton, Aguirre's playing his best tennis since coming to Iowa from Northwest Louisiana three years ago. "Aguirre had a great performance," said Houghton. "He's become the most improved player on the team this fall, and I couldn't be more pleased with him."

Aguirre reached the quarterfinals with wins over Dan Bowers of Northern Illinois, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5; Bryan Nelson of Wisconsin, 6-4, 7-6; Pep Llinas of Miami, 6-3, 6-4; and Rofer Leach of Minnesota, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5. He then lost 6-1, 6-2 to David Rass of Michigan.

"It's nice to see Martin rewarded for hard work and to see it paying dividends," said assistant coach Mike Henrich. "Hopefully the rest of the team will follow suit."

Iowa's Lars Nordmark defeated Michigan's Chip McColl 4-6, 6-3, 6-3, before losing to Todd Martin of Northwestern 6-2, 7-6. According to Houghton, it was Nordmark's best performance in a tournament situation.

"I've been working a lot harder in practice and it definitely goes hand in hand," said Nordmark, a senior from Stockholm, Sweden. Nordmark said he has also working on mental aspects by listening to tapes with subliminal messages.

"Those seem to help," he said. "I felt a lot calmer during this tournament."

Senior Claes Ramel recorded wins in singles by beating Purdue's Brian Ritz 6-2, 6-4, and Illinois' Brian Dillman 6-1, 6-4. Ramel lost to Svina Tummala of Michigan 6-2, 7-6 in the third round.

"Our doubles were a little bit disappointing, although we lost to two teams that made it to the semi-finals and finals," Houghton said. "It's been a frustrating fall because of injuries, but when everyone gets better I expect to be an outstanding team."

Iowa's Doyle places 62nd at nationals

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

For the third year in a row, Iowa cross country runner Renee Doyle ran in the NCAA national meet Monday in Johnston, Iowa.

Doyle, who finished 40th in the 1987 national meet and seventh in 1986, had a time of 17 minutes, 37 seconds this year, which put her in 62nd place.

"It wasn't as fast as I was hoping," Doyle, a senior, said. "But I ran as fast as I could for the day. I'm just happy I made it there."

Women's Cross Country

With a sixth-place finish in 17:45.5 at the District IV meet Nov. 12, Doyle was one of three individual qualifiers from the district for the NCAA meet. The team as a whole did not qualify.

"It's very disappointing," Coach Jerry Hasard said. "It's been a very tough conference this year, and things just didn't fall the way we wanted them to. There's been a lot of work and a lot of energy put out by the team and myself, and we've fallen short of the mark."

The overall individual winner was barefoot runner Michelle Dekkers of Indiana in 16:30. Dekkers, a South Africa native who transferred from Houston, also won the Big Ten meet this year.

Kentucky won the team title with 75 points, led by Lisa Breiding with an 11th-place time of 16:52.

Big Ten competitors Wisconsin, Indiana and Michigan ended in fifth, sixth and seventh places, respectively.

Wisconsin was led by a sixth-place finish by Suzy Favor in 16:46.

Since her Iowa cross-country career is now over, Doyle plans to take some time off and said she's looking forward doing other things. "When I was a freshman and sophomore, I thought I'd be upset when it was all over," Doyle said. "But I don't really mind it being over. It's like a stepping stone to other things."

Ice Hawks sweep Loras

By Matthew Zlatnik
The Daily Iowan

The Black team of the UI Ice Hawks hockey club improved its record to 4-0 with a sweep of Loras College in Dubuque this past weekend.

The UI club won by scores of 6-5 Friday and 11-3 Sunday. Player-coach Todd Benson said the first game was closer than expected.

"We thought we'd blow them out because we always did last year," Benson said.

Last year's club went 18-0-1 and two of the top three scorers return. Benson and linemate Matt Fuller lead the club again this season, along with Aren Cohen.

The club will play Ripon College Dec. 2-3 in Waterloo.

Led by Sarah Baker, who won her second meet of the season, the UI Fencing Club continued a successful season by sweeping the foil division of a tournament in Omaha, Neb., this past weekend. Gene Browing won the epee competition, and Larry Segriff and John Goodnow took first and second in the sabre division.

Ken Baker and Fred Metzger also scored for the UI club.

The UI club will host a tournament at the Field House Dec. 3-4.

This past weekend the UI Water Polo Club played in a tournament in Madison, Wis., and compiled a 1-3 record.

The UI club began by losing 18-15 to a club from Minnesota, and followed up with a loss to Milwaukee 21-17.

"It was a very physical game," Rowan McDeid said. "There were a lot of people who came out of it with war wounds."

The UI club beat Wisconsin 9-8 after goalie Andy Nugent traded places with Lionel Iorgulescu.

The UI Volleyball Club opened its season by defeating Minnesota in five games and losing to Wisconsin 3-1 this past weekend at the Field House.

The Minnesota match began poorly for the UI club as it fell behind two games to none. "But the crowd really got us going," Brent Slietfer said.

The joys of double-dip strawberry

It would probably have to be the ice cream.
 Of all the impressions of Philadelphia gained during my coverage of the Iowa field hockey team's trip to the final four, all things pale in comparison to the ice cream.
 There's a little place called Hillary's around the 2100 block of Chestnut in Center City. It lay in the wake of the skyscrapers, a haven for the weak-of-will.
 The man set in front of me a creation of pure artistry. It was a double-dip strawberry and chocolate cone. Nestled deep inside were peanut M&M's, far below the surface. All this rested, like a crown, on top of a chocolate chip waffle cone.
 At 1:30 a.m., in the heart of the city of brotherly love, I had fallen for a cone.
 But there was life between indulgences.
 Sure, I stuck my finger in the crack in the Liberty Bell, although I had to bodycheck a little girl to get the strategic position to make my move. I toured Independence Hall and marveled that the spot where the Declaration of Independence was drafted by our founding fathers was now in the shadows of a bustling metropolis.
 It had potential for a nauseating, patriotic essay.
 The greatest revelation came to me upon touring the U.S. Mint. Watching dumpsters empty innumerable amounts of currency, I had a sick feeling about how little I had in my pocket.
 The more I looked, the more I noticed how much money was scattered on the floor. I saw a great plan to solve the national deficit — a broom and a dustpan.
 There were quarters everywhere, a fortune's worth. Maybe I could offer to clean the floors.
 Flying out of O'Hare in Chicago on my way to the East coast, I had set one goal for myself. I would not look like a fish out of water. No one would know this kid was from Iowa.
 Nice try.
 Following the Hawkeyes' win over Northeastern on Saturday, I had filed back to the hotel. It had been a cold, rainy day at Franklin Field and I was ready to relax.
 I skimmed down to my boxer shorts, flipped on the television and ordered room service. With dinner a memory, I went into the hall to get rid of my tray. I had forgotten one crucial detail — automatically locking doors.
 As fate would have it, half the hotel emptied out into the hall from the elevator to view me in full splendor. I tried to be coy by acting like I was going to the pool. Then I remembered there was no pool.
 The chuckles came, but I took it in stride. For all they know, I could be from New York, Dallas, Guam. Mistakes are granted to everyone, no matter where they're from. Surely, they couldn't assume I was some hayseed from Iowa.
 Then I remembered. I looked down.
 I was wearing Iowa boxer shorts.

San Francisco tight end Brent Jones jumps into the end zone in front of Washington's Barry Wilburn to score the first touchdown in the first quarter of Monday night's game in San Francisco.

49ers dominate Redskins 37-21

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — John Taylor returned a punt 95 yards for a touchdown and Joe Montana accounted for three scores, sparking San Francisco to a 37-21 victory over Washington Monday night.
 The loss leaves the Redskins in peril of becoming the ninth straight NFL champion to fail to repeat.
 In a battle of survival involving the NFL's winningest teams of the 1980s, the 49ers prevailed, thanks in large part to Taylor's return. It was the first of two touchdowns in the final 4:24 of the second quarter as San Francisco took a 23-7 halftime lead.
 Washington, 6-6, lost for the third time in four games and fell to fourth in the NFC East behind Phoenix, Philadelphia and the New York Giants, all 7-5. Washington, plagued by mistakes all year, turned the ball over four times.
 The Redskins may now need to win all four remaining games to have a chance at the playoffs.
 San Francisco, which had lost three of its last four games, improved to 7-5 and moved into a second-place tie with the Los Angeles Rams in the NFC West. More importantly, it kept the 49ers in the thick of the battle for a wild-card playoff berth.
 The teams exchanged first-quarter scores, the 49ers scoring first on an 18-yard pass to Brent Jones from Montana, who had thrown only one touchdown pass in his five previous starts.
 The Redskins made it 7-7 on Doug Williams' 15-yarder to Ricky Sanders with seven seconds to go in the quarter.
 Mike Cofer's 52-yard field goal gave the 49ers a 10-7 lead, and then the spotlight fell on Taylor.
 The second-year wide receiver who was suspended for the first four games this year for failing a substance-abuse test, fielded Greg Coleman's 49-yard punt at the 5-yard line. Jones broke a tackle by Clarence Vaughn.

Hawks prepare for regular-season openers

Excuse Vivian Stringer if her Iowa women's basketball team shows up in Hawaii this weekend looking like a M.A.S.H. unit.
 Iowa will take four injured players to the Wahine Classic this weekend, a tournament that features some of the nation's top women's basketball teams. The tournament will showcase defending national champion Louisiana Tech, final four participant Tennessee and NCAA tournament participant Washington, as well as Hawaii, Illinois, North Carolina and Iowa's first-round opponent, Wyoming.
 "Thursday was the first time we

of. If that happens then we have a chance to win, but it doesn't happen very often. But it is basketball, and that's why we play the games."
 Stringer said she feels that her team is capable of beating the Cowgirls but hopes that the Hawkeyes won't be looking ahead.
 "They haven't been real successful," Stringer said. "But this is the type of game that could establish the Wyoming program. It puts us on the block more than it does for them."
 Should Iowa defeat Wyoming, and Louisiana Tech gets past Hawaii, the Hawkeyes would get a chance to avenge a loss to the Lady Techsters two years ago. The two Iowa Coach Tom Davis isn't sure he is ready. But ready or not, McNeese State is on the way.

 The Hawkeyes will open their regular season Saturday at 8 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena against the Cowboys.
 McNeese State, which finished last season with a 7-22 overall mark, 4-10 in the Southland Conference, has never faced Iowa.
 "You always wish you had a little more time," Davis said. "But I'm sure the players are ready to start the season. We just haven't had enough time to teach some of the things, and do them well. So, no, I'm not ready yet."
 "But the season is upon us,

Men's Basketball

whether I'm ready or not."
 Despite the Cowboys' poor mark last year, they have four starters returning as Coach Steve Welch enters his second season.
 The Hawkeyes' offense has been impressive, totaling 232 points in two exhibition games. However, what has Davis worried is that his team has given up 184 points in those contests — 107 to Athleten in Action Sunday.

Duke holds down No. 1 spot

(AP) — Duke remained the No. 1 team in the Associated Press college basketball poll with a big victory over Kentucky, while Louisville dropped from fourth to 12th with a first-round loss in the Big Apple National Invitation Tournament.
 Duke, the preseason No. 1, beat Kentucky 80-55 in the Tipoff Classic last Saturday, and easily outpolled Georgetown for the top spot in balloting released Monday.
 Following Duke and Georgetown were Michigan and Oklahoma. Duke was the only one of the top four teams to have played a game.
 Louisville lost 85-83 to Xavier, Ohio, in the first round of the NIT.
 The Blue Devils received 46 first-place votes and 1,276 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. Georgetown received six first-place votes and 1,108 points. Michigan, with three No. 1 votes, had 1,100 points,

Fry: Iowa deserves bowl berth

(AP) — So what if Iowa has won only half its football games and none of those victories has been over a team with a winning record?
 Coach Hayden Fry says that with a top-notch quarterback and loyal fans, the Hawkeyes deserve to go to a bowl game as much as anyone.
 Iowa finished the regular season

6-3-3 after defeating Minnesota 31-22 Saturday night and will play North Carolina State in the Peach Bowl Dec. 31 in Atlanta. The teams that Iowa beat have a combined record of 14-49-3.
 This marks the eighth straight year the Hawkeyes have gone to a bowl, and it will be their second appearance in the Peach Bowl.

 "Every year they have teams go that don't have great win-loss records," Fry said. "I think the hidden stat on ours is that we have impressed people nationally with those three ties with Michigan, Michigan State and Ohio State."

Hawkeyes will face Illini, Boilermakers in weekend action

By Anne Upson
 The Daily Iowan

The final Big Ten volleyball standings will be decided after this weekend's action, as Iowa winds down the season against Purdue Friday and Illinois Saturday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.
 The Hawkeyes, 23-8, are still tied for second in the conference with Minnesota, while the Boilermakers are in third and Illinois is in first.
 Iowa will face Purdue at 7:30 p.m. and Illinois at 4 p.m.
 Coach Sandy Stewart said that Iowa's conference fate will be on the line this weekend.
 "Purdue is one match behind us," Stewart said. "This will be a pivotal weekend. But really we don't know how the Big Ten will end up. There are a lot of 'if' type of things that could happen."
 The Boilermakers, who have won nine out of their last 11 matches, are finishing the season on an positive note. And though Iowa defeated the Boilermakers earlier in the season, Stewart said Purdue has picked up the pace since then.

 "They started out the season 0-5," Stewart said. "They got off to bad start. But they are a much-improved team."
 Purdue middle hitter Debbie McDonald is expected to be a tough player, Stewart said. McDonald was a second-team all-American and first-team all-Big Ten selection last season.
 Stewart added that she expects an extremely difficult matchup against the Fighting Illini.
 "They are the Big Ten champs," Stewart said. "They have the firepower. They have a lot of top players, like Mary Eggers and Bridget Boyle."
 Eggers is a two-time Big Ten Player of the Year selection. She also led the nation in hitting efficiency in 1986 and was second last season.
 Boyle earned second-team all-conference and was ranked 16th in the league in hitting efficiency.
