Superpower summit rife with symbolism

Day includes U.N. speech, sightseeing

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, President Ronald Reagan and President-elect George Bush pause

Wednesday for a photo session on a platform overlooking New York harbor.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev, calling for a "period of peace" and less reliance on the force of arms, announced Wednesday a cutback of 500,000 Soviet troops. President Reagan and Vice President George Bush embraced the dramatic gesture as the three leaders emerged all smiles from a lunchtime summit.

In a speech before the United Nations, Gorbachev billed the Red Army reduction in troops, artillery, planes and tanks as "unilateral." But a few hours later he told reporters, "We do hope that the U.S. and the Europeans will also take some steps."

In a day of superpower substance and symbolism, the Soviet president answered Bush's welcoming handshake with a vigorous two-handed embrace. He declared the president-elect would find the Soviets ready "without long pauses or backtracking" to continue work toward a new arms control treaty as well as on other issues.

Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, asked how Bush and Gorbachev got along, said the two were developing "maybe not personal chemistry, not yet, but the beginning is very good."

In a scene that summed up not only the dramatic changes in superpower relations over the past four years but also the change in administrations in Washington, the three leaders ended their lunch by riding together to a specially constructed platform that gave them a breathtaking view of the Statue of Liberty. Reagan took Gorbachev by the arm to assist him up the steps.

"We've accomplished much. There are still things to do," he said would be pulled out of Eastern Europe by 1991, and pledged reductions on Western and Eastern soil within the Soviet Union, as well. Overall, the reductions were to reach half a million.

Gorbachev also called for steps to end the war in Afghanistan under U.N. auspices within a month and urged international cooperation on issues ranging from arms control to the environment.

"I would like to believe that our hopes will be matched by our joint efforts to put an end to an era of wars, confrontation and regional conflicts, aggressions against nature, terror of hunger and poverty, as well as political terrorism," he said in an hour-long speech.

The U.N. speech and summit talks came on the second of Gorbachev's three days in New York. Thursday is devoted to sightseeing, and the Soviet leader departs for Cuba on Friday.

Reagan seemed reluctant to let his final moment on the summit stage end.

Gorbachev used his U.N. speech to declare that military force no longer "can or must be an instrument of foreign policy." He said 50,000 Soviet troops and 5,000 tanks included his wife, Raisa, Secretary of State George Shultz and a hall filled with diplomats, Gorbachev pledged to continue his reform of Soviet society as well, saying that nations should "look for ways together to improve the international system and build a new world."

Local activists work to keep Roe v. Wade

By Matt Devine
The Daily Iowan

After 15 years of often bitter and sometimes violent public debate, the abortion issue has landed back on the doorstep of the Supreme Court.

Local women's rights groups are worried that the newly forged conservative majority on the high court will roll back 15 years of progress by ruling to overturn its embattled Roe v. Wade decision that legalized abortion in 1973.

Executive branch officials and pro-life advocates are lobbying the court to reconsider Roe by adding a Missouri abortion rights case to its docket. The case, Webster v. Reproductive Health Services, involves a statute that says life begins at conception and outlaws the use of public funds for abortion facilities.

"It's a question of whether we're going to return to the back-alley abortions of yesteryear," said Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic, 227 N. Dubuque St. "It would leave many women right back where they were, (having) illegal abortions and self-induced abortions."

Emma Goldman opened its doors following the Roe verdict in 1973. The clinic performs about 1,500 abortions per year, Sand said.

The abortion issue was revived in the Supreme Court two days after the election, when Attorney General Richard Thornburgh submitted a brief to the court urging them to reconsider Roe by adding Weber to its caseload. The move touched a nerve among women's rights activists and rekindled hope among pro-choice groups that the Roe case is ripe to be overturned.

"I think it would be an encouraging development for me because I'm not a big fan of Roe v. Wade," said John Boyle, director of the UI school of religion and a Catholic priest.

The current makeup of the court puts the Roe standard in its most vulnerable position since it was decided.

Three of the seven justices who voted in favor of Roe in 1973 have since retired and have been replaced by a trio of Reagan appointees, leaving a 5-4 conservative majority on the court, according to Tim Hagle, a UI political science professor.

Even Justice Harry Blackmun, the author of the Roe majority opinion, is saying that the numbers on the court are tipped against pro-choice advocates. "You can count the votes," said Blackmun, as reported by Newsweek magazine.

Hagle said Reagan appointee Antonin Scalia would most likely join Roe dissenters William Rehnquist and Byron White to outlaw abortion. But Hagle said the leanings of conservative justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Anthony Kennedy are tougher to figure and the pair would probably cast the key votes if the Webster case was heard by the court.

Kennedy's and O'Connor's votes could go either way and both could still defend their position as conservative. While conservatives have traditionally opposed abortion, they have also been known to abide by stare decisis, a policy of courts to stand by settled points of law, Hagle said.

So a conservative judge could theoretically side with the pro-choice cause by citing an unwillingness to disturb the ruling precedent.

The issue is further muddled because of a 1986 court decision See Abortion, Page 4A

West Bank, Gaza Strip plan strikes

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian leaders called for two days of strikes starting Thursday in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to mark the first anniversary of their uprising against Israeli rule.

The conservative Hebrew daily Maariv said the army was increasing forces in the territories in anticipation of trouble.

Army officials declined Wednesday to comment on the report for security reasons.

"So far it's business as usual," said an official, who cannot be identified by name under military rules. "We will respond in accordance with the situation."

The "intifadeh" — Arabic for uprising — began Dec. 8, 1987 with riots in the Jabalya refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip after an army truck collided with a van, killing four Palestinians. Rumors had spread saying it was no accident, and was instead revenge for the stabbing death of an Israeli businessman three days earlier.

A day after the riot, soldiers opened fire on protesting students in the camp after a firebomb was hurled at an army patrol. Two Palestinians were killed, the first of 319 to die in the yearlong uprising. Eleven Israelis also have died in the violence.

Israel has controlled the territories since it took Gaza from Egypt and the West Bank from Jordan in the 1967 Middle East war.

On Wednesday, eight Palestinians suffered gunshot wounds in stone-throwing clashes with Israeli troops in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, Arab hospital officials said.

Dec. 13 primary intended to narrow city council field

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The 1988 election season may have ended on Nov. 8 for most politicians, but locally, a few loose ends remain before the last ballot box can be put away.

Two at-large seats on the Iowa City Council are being contested by five local citizens and a Dec. 13 primary will narrow the field to four.

The vacant seats were previously held by Kate Dickson and George Strait and have one year and three years left, respectively. Dickson left the council in August to move to New Jersey and Strait resigned in early September to take a professorship at a Washington, D.C. law school.

The council appointed former Iowa City mayor John Balmer in September to temporarily fill Dickson's seat. Under Iowa law, he must run for election to keep the seat. He is opposed by Iowa City resident DyAnne Dudley in the Jan. 10 election for the position.

Three citizens are vying for Strait's three-year seat. Karen Kubby, Fred Bluestone and Mary Jo Streb will face off in the Dec. 13 primary that will eliminate one candidate.

Each of the three primary candidates said they oppose the kegger ordinance currently being considered by a city ad hoc committee, saying current laws are adequate to deal with problems large parties sometimes create.

But the three differ on what they consider to be the most important issues in Iowa City.

"Many of my neighbors have raised concerns about the lack of stop and yield signs in Iowa City," said Bluestone, a former Coralville city administrator. "There are many intersections that do not have stop or yield signs that are dangerous."

Bluestone cited the Lucas and Fairchild street intersection as one of the most hazardous in the city. He said he has witnessed many close calls there that could have been serious accidents.

Bluestone said he is also concerned about the encroachment of businesses into Iowa City's historic residential neighborhoods.

He called the recent council decision to disapprove a rezoning proposal for Iowa Avenue that would have facilitated expansion of the UI Community Credit Union "absolutely logical."

"We must preserve the residential areas in Iowa City," said Bluestone. "The older homes and tree-lined streets are why we love Iowa City so much."

Bluestone has also served as city planner for Plantation, Fla., as village manager of University Park, Ill., and as city planner of Valparaiso, Ind.

Make no bones about it — Lucy astonished anthropologist

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

It was a normal Sunday morning on the sun-drenched slopes of the Olduvai Gorge, when young anthropologist Donald Johanson came across what is probably the greatest discovery of the 20th century in human evolution.

After merely four months of digging with his crew at the Tanzanian site, Johanson found the bones of "Lucy" — an extremely rare example of the family Australopithecus afarensis, one of man's distant ancestors.

"When I initially found her in '74,"

Johanson said, "I knew immediately that she was at least 3 million years old, because we knew the geology well, and that it was part of a skeleton, which is extremely rare."

"The discovery of Lucy was astonishing. I was totally blown away by the fact that here was a 3-million-year-old partial skeleton that was looking very different than anything we had found before," he said.

Johanson, who will be lecturing on his discoveries tonight at the Union, dramatically changed the way scientists view evolution.

Prior to his revelations, scientists believed that Homo habilis, man's earliest direct relative, had roughly the same build as its successor, Homo erectus.

The Lucy finding in 1976, and the addition of a younger sister in 1986, show that man's distant ancestors were much smaller than was thought previously, sometimes standing as little as 3.5 feet tall. The skeletons also reveal that early man had very long arms that dangled to his knees, like those in gorillas and other primates.

Scientists conclude that the modern body type did not emerge until Homo erectus, and that this change occurred very rapidly.

"I think the discovery of the partial Homo habilis skeleton in '86 at Olduvai opened our eyes to a number of different issues concerning the timing and sequence of evolutionary change," Johanson said.

One of these issues is the existence of more primitive features on the skeleton, such as longer arms. Johanson thinks that man's ancestors did not use their arms in exactly the same way that primates do today.

"I suspect that they spent most of the day on the ground, and if they did use their arms to climb the trees, they used them for sleeping at night and occasionally for gathering fruits."

Though precise information about life in Homo habilis' time is difficult to ascertain, Johanson does know that man's older relative lived in a lake environment, where they smashed bones up for tools and eventually stored stone found in nearby locations.

Johanson noted that no stone tools were found from Lucy's time, only those made from pebbles. He believes their discovery among Homo habilis created an incredible technological breakthrough that should not be underestimated.

Candidates to discuss environmental issues

Environmental issues will be included on the agenda of a Candidates' Forum to be held at 7 p.m. tonight at the Iowa City Public Library, Room A.

The five candidates seeking to fill two Iowa City Council vacancies will answer questions on their views regarding the handling of municipal garbage and how to balance growth and development while maintaining environmental quality.

The candidates will each be allowed a three-minute introduction and three additional minutes to answer each of two questions.

The forum is being co-sponsored by the Environmental Advocates and the Johnson County Environmental Coalition.

All interested citizens are encouraged to attend.

City primary absentee ballots now available

Registered voters who will be unable to vote during the Dec. 13 Iowa City Primary Election may request absentee ballots in the Auditor's Office, located in the Johnson County Administration Building at 913 S. Dubuque St., until 6 p.m. Dec. 12.

Voters who received absentee ballots in person in the auditor's office must vote at the time of the request.

The auditor's office will also mail an absentee ballot to any registered voter who requests one by mail. Requests should be addressed to the Auditor's Office, P.O. Box 1350, Iowa City, Iowa 52244, and should include the voter's name, current address, social security number, the name and date of the election and the address to which the ballot should be sent.

Absentee ballots may be returned by mail or delivered by hand to the auditor's office. They must be post-marked no later than midnight of Dec. 12 and received no later than Dec. 15. Hand delivered ballots must reach the Auditor's Office no later than 8 p.m. Dec. 13.

Project Holiday seeks community assistance

Project Holiday is a coordinated effort among agencies, churches and service groups to meet the needs of individuals, families and agencies during the winter holiday season.

Project Holiday is seeking assistance from the community in spreading the word of the following programs:

- Clothing: Ecumenical Council Clothing Giveaway will take place from 9:15 a.m. to 8:15 p.m. Dec. 8 at St. Andrew Presbyterian Church, 1300 Melrose Ave.

- Food Baskets: The Food Bank will distribute food from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Dec. 22 at the National Guard Armory, 925 S. Dubuque St.

- Toys: Parents can sign up for toy distribution by calling 351-1042. Toys will be distributed Dec. 21 and 22.

Project Holiday has also set up several forums for the donation of goods.

- Food items can be donated to the Food Bank at 321 First St.

- Elderly Services is in need of slippers, gloves, hats and fresh fruit. To donate, call 356-5215.

- Free Lunch Programs is asking for donations of number ten size cans of food, paper cups, napkins, socks and gloves. Call 354-6641.

- The Emergency Housing Project is asking for donations of gloves, hats, socks, underwear, blankets, linens, meat and other food items. Call 351-0326.

- Community Support Services is looking for volunteers for its "Friend" program and cash donations to assist victims of chronic mental illness.

Campaign volunteers recoup after election

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

UI student volunteers from both the Bush and Dukakis campaigns are readjusting to a slower pace in the wake of the presidential election season.

UI sophomore Tom Cope took a year off from school to work for President-elect George Bush's national campaign organization during the primary season and returned to the UI as campus director of Victory '88, a combination of the Bush organization and other Republican campaigns in Iowa.

Cope said election day meant an end to some of the close relationships formed between Victory '88 volunteers during the campaign.

"By the end of the campaign, there was a core group of people established that worked together very closely on a daily basis," Cope said. "Once the campaign ended, you just don't see that core group as often, and it is kind of a letdown. Of course, winning was very exciting, and it is nice to be reading about Bush in the newspapers after all the work we did."

During the latter stages of the campaign, Cope said he worked on the campaign for about three or four days each week. His responsibilities included distributing literature about the candidates to areas on campus and organizing voter turnout drives.

But Cope said he preferred working full-time for the Bush campaign during the primary season, with stints in Iowa for the caucuses as well as those in South Dakota, Illinois, Florida and Wisconsin.

Cope worked between 60 and 80 hours a week until Bush's major competitor, Sen. Bob Dole, dropped

"The problem is that Dukakis just wasn't a very visionary national candidate . . . He wasn't talking about any deep and fundamental changes that would attract people." — UI graduate student Rob Hogg out of the race. After months of grueling hours during the primaries, Cope said it was difficult to adjust to his part-time campus position and get back to his studies.

"Once you are used to working that hard with those kind of hours, it is really tough to go back to the part-time work on campus," Cope said.

Rob Hogg, a UI graduate student who served as outreach coordinator for the UI Students for Dukakis organization, said many of the Dukakis volunteers were faced with a sudden abundance of free time at the end of the campaign. Many are now finding other outlets for their political energies, Hogg said.

"There are a lot of other things going on around campus," he said. "A lot of the students who worked for the Dukakis campaign are now interested in the Iowa City city council elections. Personally, I will be working for Mary Neuhauer, one of our state representatives."

"Plus, now I have an opportunity to start getting back to my studies," Hogg said. "During the campaign, it was tough to be working every day and still jell with school."

Despite Dukakis' loss, Hogg said the campaign volunteers were pleased with the overall results. "The Democrats as a party did very well," Hogg said. "We won with Nagle, we won Johnson County, and we won Iowa."

Hogg said many of the problems with the Dukakis campaign were caused by a lack of effective organization.

"The problem is that Dukakis just wasn't a very visionary national candidate," Hogg said. "He wasn't talking about any deep and fundamental changes that would attract people. The campaign from Boston was out of touch with the American people. The people in Boston did not produce stuff that would appeal to different regions."

Chuck Larson, a UI sophomore and current president of the UI College Republicans, said the Bush campaign was well organized in the Midwest.

"The materials and information we needed were always there for us," Larson said. "Unfortunately, the Bush campaign may have written Iowa off a little early after the caucus results. We had a lot of outstanding volunteers in the state and at the UI."

Larson said key campaign workers are often rewarded for their services later, but said the experience he gained from the campaign was a reward in itself.

"My main goals were to get Republicans elected and to gain experience for the future," he said.

Des Moines officials 'not concerned' by TCE

DES MOINES (AP) — Officials with the Des Moines Water Works say they are not concerned even though the federal government has found more of a suspected cancer-causing chemical in nearby soil.

General Manager L.D. McMullen said traces of trichloroethylene, or TCE, were found near the Des Moines water supply by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The EPA has been investigating the area around the waterworks for a decade since traces of TCE were found in the utility's water supply. TCE can cause irritation of the skin and mucous membranes, and laboratory animals have developed liver cancer when given TCE in high doses.

The latest EPA tests found the highest concentration of TCE, 16 parts per billion, was more than a mile from the water works.

David L. Hansen, 24, address unavailable, was arrested at Jack's Discount Store, 1101 S. Riverside Drive, according to the report.

Report: An man reported Wednesday he has been receiving harassing phone calls from a female co-worker, according to police reports.

The woman has been accusing him of making obscene phone calls to her, according to the report.

Police advised him to tell her that he is not making the obscene calls. He will file charges if she doesn't stop calling him, according to the report.

Report: A caller threatened Wednesday to bomb West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave., according to police reports.

The school building was not eva-uated because the caller did not say there was a bomb inside the building, according to the report.

The outside of the building was searched and nothing was found, according to the report.

Report: A man called the Iowa City Police Department at 10:11 p.m. Tuesday and requested a ride, according to police reports.

A person at the front desk at the police station told the man the Police Department doesn't provide taxi service, according to the report.

The man then asked to speak to an officer, according to the report.

Theft: A person reported his art project stolen Wednesday at 1401 Burge Residence Hall at 12:30 a.m., according to UI Campus Security reports.

The art project was a dead bird, according to the report.

Courts

By Belinda Bloor

Michael Robert Sack pleaded guilty Wednesday to a third-degree arson charge, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Sack, 22, of 522 E. College St., withdrew his original plea of not guilty and entered the guilty plea in open court before 6th District Judge August F. Honsell; his attorney, Leon Spies; and Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, according to court records.

Sentencing for the third-degree charge is scheduled for Jan. 27, according to court records.

Sack was also charged with one count of first-degree arson and one count of second-degree arson for allegedly setting fires in an apartment building and in seven cars resulting in damage to an additional car and a motorcycle. All of the alleged fires occurred July 16, according to court records.

A trial for the other charges remains scheduled for Dec. 12, according to court records.

An Iowa City man was charged Wednesday with possession of a controlled substance with the intent to deliver and going armed with the intent to use the weapon against another person, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Robert Henry Trumbo, 28, of 20 Lincoln Ave., was arrested when Iowa City police officers responded to a call about a subject with a gun at College St. Club, 121 E. College St., according to court records.

Witnesses told police Trumbo allegedly placed the .38 caliber pistol at someone's head during a confrontation, according to court records.

During a search of Trumbo, six packets of cocaine were found in his wallet, according to court records.

Bail is set at $20,000 plus a 15 percent surcharge. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Dec. 16, according to court records.

Hancher students

By Libby Kennedy
Special to The Daily Iowan

In 1986, Hancher Auditorium voted as the best place in town to date by UI students.

Now Hancher's director is deriding where the couples are.

While total attendance at Hancher has increased substantially in the past few years, Hancher director Wallace Chappell says records of student ID card check show that student ticket sales declined since the auditorium opened in 1972.

"We don't really know what problem it is," Chappell said.

According to attendance statistics, 49 percent of Hancher's audience was students during the autumn's first season. In the 1987 season, only 24 percent of audience were UI students.

Although Chappell plans to the help of a national arts foundation to study the problem, he has few theories of his own to explain the decline in student attendance.

Time and money, according to Chappell, are paramount in determining student attendance.

"I realize that the time factor is crucial for students — we're in heavy competition there," Chappell said.

In addition, Chappell said, he appreciates that student budgets are fairly tight but said Hancher events are heavily subsidized by non-student patrons, business and the National Endowment for the Arts to insure that students receive a substantial discount on ticket prices.

"I keep saying that until I'm in the face," Chappell said, but still believes that students realize what a bargain Hancher programs can be.

Chappell also sees the video cassette recorder as a major competitor for students' attention. "When it comes down to it, it's easier to rent a VCR and call for a pizza than to get dressed and go to Hancher," he said.

On a broader scale, Chappell attendance at Hancher is less reflective of students' values. Recently, there has been a ge-

Clowning around can be serious business, say members of a club organized for individuals to enjoy clowning in their spare time.

Judy Madsen said the club, organized in Iowa City last month, is to provide a forum where clowns can share ideas, criticism and support.

"We are still very much in the formation process," Madsen, founder, said. "We have only members right now, but we hope to expand."

The club is tentatively called Iowa City Clown Club, but it does not have an official title because there are not enough members to vote on a name, Madsen said.

Hancher aims to lure students into theater

By Libby Kennedy
Special to The Daily Iowan

In 1986, Hancher Auditorium was voted as the best place in town to take a date by UI students.

Now Hancher's director is wondering where the couples are. While total attendance at Hancher has increased substantially over the past few years, Hancher director Wallace Chappell said records of student ID card charges show that student ticket sales have declined since the auditorium opened in 1972.

"We don't really know what the problem is," Chappell said. According to attendance statistics, 49 percent of Hancher's audience was students during the auditorium's first season. In the 1987-88 season, only 24 percent of the audience were UI students.

Although Chappell plans to enlist the help of a national arts foundation to study the problem, he has a few theories of his own to explain the decline in student attendance.

Time and money, according to Chappell, are paramount in determining student attendance.

"I realize that the time factor is crucial for students — we're in heavy competition there," Chappell said.

In addition, Chappell said he appreciates that student budgets are fairly tight but said Hancher events are heavily subsidized by non-student patrons, businesses and the National Endowment for the Arts to insure that students receive a substantial discount on ticket prices.

"I keep saying that until I'm blue in the face," Chappell said, but he still believes that students don't realize what a bargain Hancher programs can be.

Chappell also sees the video cassette recorder as a major competitor for students' attention. "When it comes down to it, it's easier to rent a VCR and call out for a pizza than to get dressed up and go to Hancher," he said.

On a broader scale, Chappell said attendance at Hancher is basically reflective of students' values. Recently, there has been a general drop in emphasis on cultural values, not only in America but in Europe as well, he said.

The people most affected by this change are those in the 15- to 35-year-old age group, Chappell said. He added that Hancher is patronized largely by those over the age of 40.

But the Hancher staff does not intend to sit by idly and watch the trend continue.

"The staff of Hancher is committed to maintaining and increasing the size of the student audience," said Hancher Marketing Director Judy Hurtig.

Several new strategies have been developed to target students, she said. These projects, many directed by the Arts Outreach program, include classroom ticket sales, residence hall ticket packages and videotapes of upcoming performances shown in the Union.

The key, Hurtig said, is classroom ticket sales.

"We have a strong sense of mission for the educational goals of the auditorium," she said.

Short presentations are made in classes that are studying material relevant to a particular performance, and tickets are sold at a group discount rate.

To promote the Dance Company of Senegal, Hurtig said, "we went to every class that had anything to do with Africa."

Chappell said particularly valuable strategies are those that bring students who normally wouldn't go to Hancher to a performance.

"Once we get people in, we can usually get them back," he said.

Although the decline in student ticket sales is a source of frustration for the Hancher staff, Chappell said there are bright spots on the horizon.

Last season's figures show a slight increase in the actual number of students who attended Hancher for the two previous seasons.

In addition, the staff is hoping that added emphasis on attracting elementary, junior-high and high-school students to Hancher will bring them back when they are older.

No headstone for drifter

DES MOINES (AP) — A Canadian drifter who died in a Nov. 13 traffic accident will be buried in an unmarked grave because officials can't find any members of his family.

John Russell Wolfe, 26, will be buried Friday at a cost to Polk County of $500. That money will cover the cost of a cemetery lot, a casket and concrete box — but not a headstone.

Wolfe and another person were killed when the car in which they were riding went through a stop sign and collided with a pickup truck. The driver of the car, Danny Scavo, 32, was charged with vehicular homicide.

Wolfe lived at a homeless shelter in Des Moines.

New organization stresses more than clowning around

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Clowning around can be serious business, say members of a new club organized for individuals who enjoy clowning in their spare time.

Judy Madsen said the club, organized in Iowa City last month, hopes to provide a forum where local clowns can share ideas, criticisms, advice and support.

"We are still very much in the formation process," Madsen, club founder, said. "We have only four members right now, but we hope to expand."

The club is tentatively called the Iowa City Clown Club, but it does not have an official title because there are not enough members to vote on a name, Madsen said.

The club would serve clowns in many ways, depending on the needs of the members, Madsen said.

"It could be a place where clowns can come to get help with their makeup, costumes, programs, and skits," she said. "There's all kinds of new things to learn — juggling, ventriloquism, balloon sculpting, riding a unicycle."

Madsen said being a member of a group of clowns provides a variety of skills from which members may benefit.

"In a group there are many different talents," Madsen said. "It can be a give-and-take situation. Males can often make a lot of their props, but they can't sew. The women are able to help them with their costumes."

"Clowns get bored," she said. "They are constantly changing their routines. The club would be the perfect audience to try a skit out on first."

The club would also be a resource for job opportunities.

"There is a multitude of job prospects out there," Madsen said. "The club can be a place where the members can learn of the opportunities."

Most people only clown as a hobby, they enjoy dressing up and working at functions in their spare time, Madsen said.

"I don't know of any professional clowns in Iowa City whose only source of income is clowning," she said.

Dave Panther, another club member, makes just enough money from his clowning experiences to cover costs of props and makeup.

"I would like to show a profit," Panther said. "It's nice to have a job to help support it."

Panther is the owner of the Hamburg Inn No. 2, 214 N. Linn St.

It is important for clowns to relate well to their audience and adhere to 'clown ethics,' Panther added.

"Those who take the ethics seriously don't smoke or drink in front of their audience," Panther said. "And they never set other people up to be the butt of a joke. The joke is always on the clown."

Youths sentenced in C.R. death

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Two more youths accused of chasing another boy onto an interstate highway, where he was struck and killed by a car last September, have been placed on probation after receiving a lecture from a judge.

"Clearly, a tragedy has occurred," said Associate Judge Jane Spande. "Unfortunately, the court can do nothing to change that. I wish I could, but I can't."

Charged with being delinquent by committing assault were Brett M. Osborn, 16; Robert Sherman, 15; and Timothy Sauter, 16, and his brother Troy, 15, all of Cedar Rapids. The four were accused of threatening and chasing 14-year-old Brian McMurrin of Sedro Wooley, Wash., before he ran onto Interstate 380 on Sept. 14.

"The tragedy itself has caused them to deal with the consequences of their actions," Spande said Tuesday before placing the Sauters on probation for at least six months. The same sentence was given earlier to Sherman and Osborn.

All four entered into consent decrees that erase the assaults from their otherwise clean delinquency records, assuming they comply with terms of the probation. The terms include obeying school and home rules, and having no further brushes with the law.

Police said the four boys were riding in a car when they exchanged words with McMurrin and a companion, Robert Conrad, 13, who were walking near the interstate.

As the name-calling and obscene gesturing escalated, at least two of the boys got out of the car and ran up to a fence separating a parking lot from the interstate exit ramp. The boys didn't leave the parking lot, however, police said.

McMurrin and Conrad, meanwhile, jumped the fence in fleeing from the four boys and ran up the ramp. Conrad stopped to hide in some grass, but McMurrin continued on to the traveled portion of the interstate, where he was hit by a car.

Streb, 703 Benton Court, is a realtor with Don Williams Realty, and has lived in Iowa City for 36 years. This is her second bid for city council; she had to withdraw from last year's race because of a conflict of interest with her husband's city-contracted construction company.

Streb said the high property taxes Iowa City home-owners pay is an important issue she wants to address if elected to council.

"We already have an exceptional quality of life in Iowa City, but we need to make our business climate such that new businesses will want to come here," she said.

Streb also said she doesn't think Iowa Citizens can "handle any more taxes" and added that a broader tax base could be achieved by attracting new businesses to the area.

"We need to look to people other than home-owners for our taxes," she said.

Kubby is perceived by many to be the front-runner in the race, and was narrowly defeated in her bid for a council seat last year.

The self-employed Iowa City artist said she is very concerned with accessibility of councilors, and if ected, will have regular office hours to meet with citizens.

Kubby has also pledged to "knock on 25 doors" any time a controversial issue arises in council that she feels needs public input.

Solid waste management is an additional issue that tops Kubby's list of city priorities.

"I would like to see Iowa City become an educator in this area, with public service announcements," she said. "Right now land management is on the bottom of priorities for dealing with garbage. I would like to see it near the top."

Johanson

"We look back on these stone tools and think that they are simple and rudimentary," he said. "But I would suspect that even though these were crude tools, they signify some important behavioral changes."

The creation of tools brought about the need for greater social interaction, which began in hunting groups, Johanson said.

"You need to go about hunting in a coordinated manner. You can't just go out there as a little 5 foot tall Homo habilis and not depend on the members of the group to support you," he said.

He suspects these early hominids developed a complex social life and an enriched view of the world. As they started to hunt and eat meat, they began to travel more widely.

"They were getting to be better hunters and better exploiters of different kinds of food which allowed them to move out of very familiar ranges into more unfamiliar territory," he said.

With the switch to Homo erectus, this ability allowed them to be the first hominids to move out of Africa and into Europe and Asia, thus paving the road for modern man.

In addition to finishing a book which will be released in October, Johanson plans to return to Oldvai next summer and continue his search for man's ancestors.

He has not made any guesses as to what he might find on his next trip.

"It's very difficult to make predictions about what you'll think you'll find, because it seems that whenever you find something, it sends up a whole bunch of new red flags and poses a host of new questions," he said. "I guess I expect to find the unanticipated."

Johanson will deliver his lecture "Lucy: A Three Million Year Old Woman Shakes Up Man's Family Tree" tonight at 8 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Israel

reports.

In Ramallah, a firebomb was thrown at an Israeli military vehicle but caused no damage or injuries, an army spokesman said. Arab reporters said troops rounded up about 200 suspects for questioning, but the army spokesman could not confirm this.

The Defense Ministry announced it uncovered 93 guerrilla cells in the past two months and arrested 610 members, most from the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin praised Israel's security forces for their "daring, determination and courage" in uncovering the groups, believed responsible for 87 anti-Israeli attacks in the past year.

Among the attacks attributed to the groups is an Oct. 31 firebomb assault on an Israeli passenger bus in the West Bank city of Jericho that killed a woman and three of her children, the statement said.

Also Wednesday, an army official said that a commander followed proper procedures in the Monday shooting that killed a 15-year-old Palestinian girl.

Asma Abu Obadah of the Shati refugee camp in Gaza City, was hit in the back of the head with a single plastic bullet. Witnesses said she encountered soldiers trying to disperse a demonstration as she walked home from school and that she panicked and ran.

"She was wounded after the soldiers shot in the air and warned the demonstrators," the official said. "The commander shot in the direction of the demonstrators' legs, and a bullet hit her."

The strikes Thursday and Friday were announced in a leaflet issued this week by the PLO-backed underground leaders of the uprising.

Slogans painted on walls in Gaza City called for five minutes of silence on Saturday "in memory of the intefadeh martyrs," the term for Palestinians killed in the uprising.

In addition to the deaths, the army says 3,500 Palestinians have been shot or severely wounded in the intefadeh. Others give much higher figures, including the Palestinian human rights group Law in the Service of Man, which estimates more than 20,000 people have been shot, beaten or suffered tear gas inhalation.

The Palestinians have lost millions in revenue by keeping their shops and offices open only three hours a day and by closing altogether for almost weekly general strikes. Israel's tourist business has dropped by 14 percent and its construction industry, dependent on Palestinian workers, also is suffering.

that struck down a Pennsylvania statute requiring minors to obtain parental consent before an abortion. The court's 5-4 decision in the case, Thornburgh v. The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, effectively broadened the scope of Roe.

To rescind rights the court affirmed only two years before would fly in the face of stare decisis and open criticism of the conservative block for taking advantage of its new majority.

"That's what makes it less likely they'll overturn (Roe)," Hagle said. "That would look bad for the court."

But even if Roe is undone by the court, it probably wouldn't spell the end of abortion in America, since the issue would then fall to the states. Sand said she is confident Iowa would maintain its current laws, since Iowans voted against President-elect George Bush, who ran on a pro-life plank.

"I don't think Bush received a mandate from the women in Iowa," she said.

Meanwhile, women's rights activists are promising to launch a protest movement to dissuade the court from adding Webster to its caseload.

"We would mobilize people in the state to fight this," Sand said. "I think it's a crucial year in women's rights."

"If we score any points, we can do it only together," Gorbachev said. "If we try to score points alone nothing good will happen."

A few moments later Bush emerged to join them, and when the president-elect offered his hand in welcome, Gorbachev grasped it energetically with both of his own.

Gorbachev, Reagan and Bush ate inside the brick and columned Admiral's House while their wives were being entertained at a ladies-only luncheon in Manhattan sponsored by the wife of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

"I am happy to be in the city you call the Big Apple," Raisa Gorbachev said.

Across town at Governors Island, the lunch menu began with chicken consommé, followed by filets of veal with smoked quail and lobster sausage, and ended with a chocolate tart with raspberry sauce. The wine was from Reagan's home state of California.

New York police said dozens of demonstrators were arrested out-

"It is now quite clear that building up military power makes no country omnipotent. What's more, one-sided reliance on military power ultimately weakens other components of national security." — Mikhail Gorbachev in one of the most memorable gestures of belligerence of the Cold War.

In contrast, Gorbachev spoke calmly and sprinkled references to peace and progress throughout his remarks. His most notable contrary word was a brief criticism of the Reagan administration's decision to deny a visa to PLO leader Yasir Arafat.

He called for a "period of peace" and noted that Cold War politicians "find it particularly hard to abandon old stereotypes and past practices." In apparent reference to Reagan and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, he said, some "are now drawing the appropriate conclusions."

His most dramatic announcement was his declaration of troop cuts. He said his nation will "maintain our country's defense capability at a level of reasonable and reliable sufficiency" to deter attacks.

Asked later as he posed for pictures with Reagan and Bush whether he was getting resistance from the Soviet military establishment, he smiled and said, "Nyet, nyet, nyet." Back home, however, the Soviets announced the retirement of their longtime military chief of staff for health reasons.

Specifically, Gorbachev said he would withdraw 50,000 troops and 5,000 tanks from East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia by 1991. It is estimated that the Soviets maintain 500,000 troops there; the Warsaw Pact holds a side the U.N. after they crossed police lines to protest treatment of Jews in the Soviet Union.

It was the first time a Soviet leader had spoken to the United Nations in 28 years, and the contrast couldn't have been more striking.

In 1960, Nikita Krushchev pounded the podium with his shoe

2.5-to-1 troop edge over NATO in conventional strength.

Gorbachev said many of the forces to be pulled out of Europe, including six tank divisions, would be disbanded.

He said overall he would reduce the Red Army by 500,000 men. Western officials estimate the Soviet army has an overall strength of about 5.6 million men.

Gorbachev said he intended to move his economy to "an economy of disarmament" and would develop and publish plans for converting its defense plants and shifting military specialists into civilian industry.

In other parts of his speech, Gorbachev called for U.N. peacekeeping forces to help assure the "neutrality and demilitarization" of Afghanistan, where a Soviet occupation force that once numbered more than 100,000 troops is being withdrawn.

He called for a ceasefire beginning Jan. 1, and challenged the United States to stop shipping arms to Afghan rebels.

He also:
 • Announced the Soviet Union would soon reform its penal code, and said Soviet Jews seeking to leave would be handled in a "humane spirit." Still, he said, those citizens with knowledge of state secrets would not be permitted to emigrate.

• Proposed creating an international organization that would help Third World countries alleviate their massive debt payments. He said the Soviet Union would be willing to enforce a 100-year moratorium on debt repayment for some countries, and cancel debts altogether in some cases.

• Proposed an international space lab devoted to environmental protection, although he said quickly that any space mission must "rule out the appearance of weapons" there.

University of Iowa 1989 COURSE CHANGES

Registration is now in progress. Students will register through the Registration Center, Room 17, Calvin Hall. New courses and closed courses are posted in this space. The closed list is in numerical order and indicates the department, course, and section numbers followed by a code (CD) indicating why the course is closed.

Code 1: the course or section is full
Code 2: the course or section has been cancelled
Code 3: the course or section is not available until the first day of classes
Code 4: the course or section is pending (undetermined)

These lists should be reviewed and adjustments made prior to entering the Registration Center. Registration information is printed in the Schedule of Courses.

'Loose ends' might extend Wright probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The ethics investigation of House Speaker Jim Wright is likely to extend into next year, members of the ethics committee said following a meeting on the case Wednesday.

"I think you can make book on that," said Rep. John Myers, R-Ind., the senior minority member of the House panel, when asked whether the investigation will extend into 1989.

"It will be next year," said another Republican member, Rep. Thomas Petri of Wisconsin. "We've still got some loose ends to tie up."

Myers said the six GOP members of the 12-member committee all were reappointed Wednesday to new terms to provide continuity at least until the Wright probe is completed.

Wright, D-Texas, has been under investigation since last June on contentions that he improperly used his office for financial gain and that he improperly used his position to lobby federal officials on behalf of Texas interests.

The outside counsel appointed to handle the investigation, Richard J. Phelan, has completed all but the last few of dozens of depositions taken in connection with the case, ethics committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said.

Phelan still has to review the mounds of information collected in the investigation and write a final report for the committee, Dixon said. The panel then can vote to release the report, or use parts of it in writing its own conclusions, he said.

Phelan would not venture a guess as to how long it would take to produce a report, but added: "I don't think it's going to take months."

He said the House panel, formally called the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, had been "very supportive... We said we wanted to do a full and fair and complete investigation, and we have been permitted to do it."

Phelan had no comment on complaints that Wright's lawyer, William Oldaker, also is representing a half-dozen other key figures in the ethics case, including Wright associates George A. Mallick and Carlos Moore.

But he acknowledged that the situation could raise questions of whether such an arrangement conflicts with the committee's ability to get at the truth. "That may well be one of the things on their agenda" to take up after the Wright case is disposed of, he said.

The six GOP members reappointed to serve on the panel into next year, in addition to Myers and Petri, are James Hansen of Utah, Charles Pashayan of California, Larry Craig of Idaho and Hank Brown of Colorado. All are appointed by the House minority leader, Rep. Robert Michel of Illinois.

Democratic members of the panel are appointed by the speaker, and Dixon said he had not heard whether he and the others would be asked to continue to serve.

Mandela moved to prison farm near Cape Town

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela was transferred Wednesday evening from a clinic to live at a house on a prison farm outside Cape Town.

Justice Minister Kobie Coetsee said Mandela, 70, was moved to "a suitable, comfortable and properly secured home" at the Victor Verster Prison in Paarl.

Authorities said last month that Mandela would not be returned to prison when he completed his recovery from tuberculosis at the Constantiaburg Clinic outside Cape Town.

The Justice Ministry said at the time that Mandela, South Africa's best known black leader, would be moved to a "suitable" location but did not give any details.

Mandela has been in prison since 1962 and is serving a life sentence for sabotage and plotting to overthrow the white-dominated government. The outlawed African National Congress is the largest guerrilla organization fighting the government and apartheid, South Africa's policy of racial segregation.

The transfer of Mandela, made without any advance warning, appears to be part of a phased release. The government has said Mandela will have greater access to his family and visitors after he was moved from the hospital.

The government had no immediate details about the conditions of his stay at the prison farm.

But Mandela's lawyer, Ismail Ayob, said Mandela's family will have unlimited access to him. That would include Mandela's wife, Winnie, his children and grandchildren, Ayob said. There was no indication that other visitors, such as the media, would be allowed access to Mandela.

Winnie Mandela said in a statement through Ayob: "I do not intend taking more than the normal 40-minute visit I've been allowed in the past until all political prisoners have the same privilege."

"South Africa is still under a state of emergency and there are thousands of political prisoners and detainees, and large numbers of leaders, organizations and the media remain restricted."

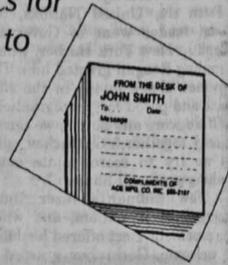

Last August, Mandela was diagnosed as having tuberculosis and was transferred to a hospital from Cape Town's Pollsmoor Prison. Later, he was moved to the Constantiaburg Clinic, a private hospital near Pollsmoor, and Coetsee announced on Nov. 24 that Mandela would not be returned to Pollsmoor when his recuperation was complete.

The government recently has released colleagues of Mandela, fueling speculation that Mandela could be released shortly.

North fails to obtain classified documents for his defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver North on Wednesday dropped efforts to disclose a quarter of the 40,000 pages of classified documents he wants to use to defend criminal charges arising from the Iran-Contra affair.

Defense lawyers filed a brief statement that they were withdrawing 10,000 pages of CIA intelligence cables on Nicaragua that were listed in North's Nov. 14 notice of government secrets he wants to reveal in a public trial.

The monthly intelligence cables covered a three-year period from January 1984 through December 1986, a month after the Iran-Contra affair became known and North was dismissed from his job at the National Security Council.

In a motion last month, Walsh sought to bar the defense from using any secret documents as evidence. Walsh accused the defense of listing a large number of irrelevant documents "to overwhelm the court's and the government's abilities to conduct proceedings" under the Classified Information Procedures Act.

North's statement was filed as U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell continued closed hearings into the use of secret documents at trial. The hearings began last week.

Gesell has not ruled on secrecy issues and must decide if classified material North wants to disclose is needed for his defense. President Ronald Reagan said last week he would allow virtually none of the documents to be disclosed in open court.

If Gesell decides North cannot get a fair trial without disclosing some documents, he could dismiss the central charge that the former presidential aide conspired to illegally divert U.S.-Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Hundred rocks S...

MOSCOW (AP) — The strong earthquake to hit the Soviet Caucasus region in 80 years flattened buildings Wednesday and left thousands homeless. One Soviet official said he received unconfirmed reports of more than 200 people killed.

A scientist at the seismic station in Yerevan, capital of the republic of Armenia, said he visited the disaster area and estimated the death toll probably would run into thousands.

Official Soviet news media did not give any casualty figures. Armenia was the hardest-hit area in the Caucasus.

Deputy duty officer Lyova Oganyan at the Interior Ministry in Armenia said unconfirmed reports to police indicated more than 200 people had been killed.

An official of the Armenian government's office in Moscow, who would not give his name, said the number of casualties was "a very large figure."

The quake, centered near the Soviet-Turkish border, killed at least four people and caused extensive damage in eastern Turkey, authorities said.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the quake centered south of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, occurred at 11:00 a.m. local time.

Estonia de... official; 40...

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Estonia's official language was declared Wednesday, but delegates would force non-native speakers to use it.

The vote on the constitution, 204-49 with four abstentions, was two-thirds required. It was a disagreement yet in the law rubber-stamp body in which the phenomenon.

Under the proposed law, postponed until January, residents of the Soviet Union would have to use the language. Many of them — including police clerks — have lived in Estonia for decades.

About 40 percent of Estonians are non-native, and the non-native Estonians fear they will be expelled from their own homeland and their language die.

The non-natives speak Russian, but the Soviet Union learns. Estonian language and Estonian-language business can be conducted in Russian.

A Russian organization denounced the language proposal last week, some members said.

Hundreds die as earthquake rocks Soviet-Turkish border

MOSCOW (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit the Soviet Caucasus region in 80 years flattened buildings Wednesday and left thousands homeless. One Soviet official said he received unconfirmed reports of more than 200 people killed.

A scientist at the seismic station in Yerevan, capital of the republic of Armenia, said he visited the disaster area and estimated the death toll probably would run into the thousands.

Official Soviet news media did not give any casualty figures. Armenia was the hardest-hit area in the Caucasus.

Deputy duty officer Lyova Oganyan at the Interior Ministry in Armenia said unconfirmed witness reports to police indicated more than 200 people had been killed.

An official of the Armenian government's office in Moscow, who would not give his name, said the number of casualties was "a very big figure."

The quake, centered near the Soviet-Turkish border, killed at least four people and caused extensive damage in eastern Turkey, authorities said.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Golden, Colo., said the quake, centered south of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, occurred at 11:41 a.m. (2:41 a.m. EST) and registered 6.9 on the Richter scale. A quake of that magnitude is capable of causing widespread, heavy damage.

The temblor, followed by a moderate aftershock, struck a mountain region in the Soviet Union already wracked by months of ethnic violence between residents of Armenia and the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan.

Officials said communications had been cut off with Leninakan, near where the quake was centered, and with much of the disaster area. Leninakan, a city of 200,000 people, is 100 miles northwest of Yerevan and close to the Soviet-Turkish border.

The government set up a commission to oversee rescue and salvage operations and sent soldiers and civilian volunteers to the disaster area, Tass said.

The Moscow Central Seismic Center put the epicenter 30 miles from Leninakan.

Estonia declares native language official; 40 percent speak Russian

TALLINN, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Estonia's legislature made Estonian the official language of the Baltic republic Wednesday, but delayed action on a law that would force non-native residents to learn it.

The vote on the constitutional amendment was 204-49 with four abstentions, 14 more than the two-thirds required. It was the widest margin of disagreement yet in the legislature, a former rubber-stamp body in which debate is a recent phenomenon.

Under the proposed law on which action was postponed until January, residents from other parts of the Soviet Union would have to learn Estonian. Many of them — including police, doctors and shop clerks — have lived in Estonia for years without doing so.

About 40 percent of Estonia's 1.6 million residents are non-native, and the number is increasing. Estonians fear they will be outnumbered in their own homeland and their language and culture will die.

The non-natives speak Russian, which everybody in the Soviet Union learns. Estonia has both Russian-language and Estonian-language newspapers, and business can be conducted in either language.

A Russian organization called Intermovement denounced the language proposal as divisive. At a rally last week, some members even called it an incitement to "ethnic hatred."

Martin Kuusk, an Estonian engineer, said hundreds of thousands of people have come to Estonia for well-paid factory jobs and "if they want to stay, they must absorb our culture. If they do not want to learn, their country is in the neighborhood."

A legislator with the Russian name Mayakovsky suggested adding a line to the proposed law defining Russian as the "international language of the Soviet Union." It was defeated 141-35.

Karl Vaino, former chief of the Estonian Communist Party, knew little of the language and government documents were written only in Russian during most of the 1980s. Vaino was replaced last summer Vaino Vyalyas, a reformer and native Estonian.

Estonia joins four other republics in declaring their own official languages. Lithuania, a nearby Baltic republic, passed its law in recent weeks, but Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia have had theirs since 1978.

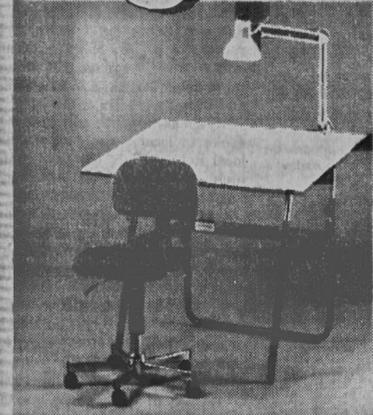

At a special meeting Wednesday of the Estonian party, recently elected Premier Indrek Toome resigned his job as ideology secretary and was replaced by Mikk Titma, one of four men who devised Estonia's current proposals for economic reform.

Titma's elevation to the party secretariat was dramatic because he was not even a member of the Central Committee.

Dynamism indeed

Some days it is tempting to think that Gorbachev is the answer to all our prayers.

Tuesday was one such day, when the author of opereostroika and glasnost winged into New York to address the United Nations and initiate "greater dynamism" in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Even New Yorkers seem to embrace the Soviet leader. A headline in yesterday's New York Times playfully announced: "Manhattan Goes Gorbachev."

If you still wonder how far U.S.-Soviet relations have come since Gorbachev, think of it this way — the last Soviet leader to visit New York was Nikita Khrushchev, perhaps the least embraceable of all Soviet leaders since Stalin. "Manhattan Goes Khrushchev?" It's hard to imagine, then or now.

Certainly Gorbachev intends his visit to steal a certain amount of foreign policy initiative from the incoming Bush administration, and quite rightly senior Washington officials have downplayed its importance in the context of real negotiation. With our government in transition, neither the president nor the president-elect should permit the whirlwind of Gorbachev's personal charisma to sweep them into premature and ill-considered concessions.

Ultimately, though, Gorbachev's grandstanding does far more good than harm for West as well as East. His global popularity galvanizes support at home, and at a time when uprisings in Soviet Armenia and Azerbaijan might signal a return to traditional Soviet repression, the U.N. visit delivers quite a different message — one of candor, growth, and visibility on the world stage.

What other Soviet leader could stifle his critics through the aggressive promotion of potentially de-stabilizing economic and social policies?

Gorbachev may not be the answer to all our prayers — we still have death and taxes to worry about — but we are far better off with him than without him.

Softheaded logic

This week's "eat your words" award goes to actor Gary Busey, who suffered extensive head trauma Sunday after he lost control of the Harley Davidson motorcycle he was riding and smashed his head against a curb.

Busey, who was not wearing a helmet, belongs to a group of Hollywood celebrities who campaigned against mandatory helmet laws — laws which may have lessened the damage to Busey's head had he obeyed them.

An Associated Press article said Busey was a participant in "the latest Hollywood trend" of "hog," or Harley Davidson, riding. Apparently, riding without a helmet is part of that trend.

Perhaps dying a painful and frightening death will be the next trend, if it isn't already.

So far this year, 58 Iowans have died in motorcycle crashes. Fifty-four of them were not wearing helmets.

Almost 4,000 people died in motorcycle crashes in the United States in 1987. Fifty-seven were Iowans, and 91 percent of them were not wearing helmets.

According to these Department of Transportation figures, we Iowans are pretty darn trendy, aren't we?

When a mandatory helmet law passed in the Iowa Legislature in 1975, it lasted only ten months. It was repealed because motorcyclists wanted a choice of whether or not to wear a helmet.

As a DOT clerk said, "I just wonder if they know what dead is."

When motorcyclists choose not to wear helmets, as Busey did, their chances of surviving an accident, if they land on their heads, is greatly diminished.

So, congratulations go to Gary for using his fame to publicly denounce a law that may save lives, or at least prevent serious injuries, and then ending up in a terrifically embarrassing and undoubtedly painful situation.

Leadership lessons

Amid all the summit hoopla, George Bush's cabinet appointments, the price of oil, and another shuttle success, Dan Quayle has kind of been lost in the shuffle. In fact, if it weren't for his meetings with ex-political celebrities, the little guy probably wouldn't be seen at all.

Quayle had a chummy meeting with former President Richard Nixon last week to talk about the agenda for the vice president this time around. Before serving as president, Nixon served as Dwight Eisenhower's vice president. Next week, Quayle will meet with former President Gerald Ford, who served as Nixon's vice president after Spiro Agnew left the office.

Neither of these meetings are a big surprise. What better mentors could there be to coach young Dan on the finer points of the office.

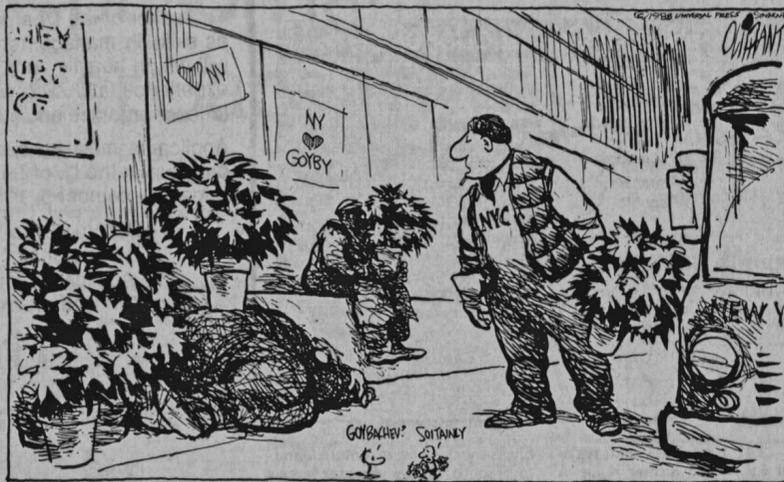

But yesterday, Quayle met with former Vice President Walter Mondale — now that's a surprise. One has to wonder what Mondale could teach young Dan.

While Mondale and Quayle seem an odd pair, their meeting shows what may be Quayle's one redeeming quality: He appears to really want to learn how to do the job. He may even shed his image as a political lightweight unable to handle the position.

Nah.

Duck and cover, or run for your life, its hunting season

It's hunting season. And I don't hunt. I know a lot of people who do though and all they talk about is shooting this and shooting that. If it hasn't occurred to you, this is the wrong time of the year to be camping out. I sure wouldn't go out into the woods dressed in a fur coat, and if I did imitation animal noises I'd practice inside for the next few weeks.

Most hunters practice safety. Of the time accidents never occur. But most years all I ever remember at the end of the season is the news story of a 16-year-old boy shooting himself in the gut while climbing over a fence. Seems like it happens every year just outside some place like Dog's Tooth, Colorado.

I worry about so many people shooting guns. Not that most of them don't hit what they're shooting at; most hunters are practiced and mature adults. It's the raw recruits who worry me. Somebody out there is just now learning to shoot a high-powered rifle. This coming weekend will be the first time in his life he'll pull that trigger. No telling what he's going to hit. I just hope it's a tree and not the hindquarter of a deer that runs eight or nine miles before it falls.

Have you ever wondered what happens to a bullet that's fired into the air? A lot of people have an overwhelming urge to fire a gun into the blue sky the first time they pick one up. Like it's the safest thing around to shoot at. But it occurs to me that that bullet falls down somewhere. That some guy standing out in his yard two or three miles away hears the distant crack of a rifle and only has time to wonder who it might be, before this hunk of lead falls from 10,000 feet in the air right on top of his head. Seems to me he'd never think another straight thought the rest of his life. Forty years later he'd probably still think he was standing out in the yard. The man would be frozen in time and never know what hit him. All because Billy Bob asked if it would be all right if he got to shoot the gun once.

This little fact makes you wonder about places like Beirut. People shoot off guns all the time there. Machine guns and Uzis. Guns fired off in celebration, as often as not, because someone just heard that Resolution 42 had been rejected. And in Beirut, I see whole street fulls of people shooting guns in the air.

Where does it all come down? I wouldn't think Beirut is a good town for corrugated tin roofing. I would suspect that there are a lot of cockeyed half-wits wandering around there with bumps on top of their head.

It's awful what living in Beirut can do to a person. I saw a photograph once of a one-eyed veteran soldier with an amputated leg leaning on a crutch. One arm was off at the shoulder, and the other arm was waving a fire-bomb while he yelled bloody murder. That's what endemic war eventually produces. Monsters from the deep.

Speaking of hunting, part of the reason that hunters are necessary, we're told, is to keep thinned out the herd of deer in the state. If hunters don't thin out the ranks, I guess you end up with a lot of old grey deer who mumble and dribble soup onto their chest. Deer who live past their prime and just slow everybody down because they can't run as fast and are always confusing the herd about what direction to go. "I thought I remembered the creek being over there."

The pro-thin people in the state office of deer control have facts on their side. Last year in the state of Iowa, 5,000 deer were hit on the highways. Now, I guess you could quibble and say that these deer were every one jaywalking and didn't observe the deer crossing signs. And you'd probably be right if you wanted to say something disparaging about the low IQ of so many deer getting nailed on the highways. Not that deer behave that much differently from UI students when it comes to crossing the street, but facts are facts and the highways in this state get pretty bumpy at certain times of the year. So thin we must.

This reminds me of a story I heard about a guy who was driving home late one night. He lived out in the middle of nowhere and had about 60 miles of highway to cover. He was ripping along a two-lane black-top road about half asleep when, out of nowhere, this deer jumps in front of his car. If you've never hit a deer, it's about like driving into a brick wall. The guy barrels right into the side of this deer, wakes up real quick, parks the car and gets out to look. Dead deer. He looks at the deer, decides it's not a bad looking deer as far as highway fatalities are concerned, and decides he might as well take it home and chop it up to eat. He drags the deer into the back seat of his car. He gets back in the car and is tooling along down the road thinking now about deer steaks and deer barbecue, when the little hairs on the back of his neck stand up. He gets this eerie feeling and looks into the rear view mirror. The deer in the back seat is sitting up and looking at him.

If this has never happened to you, you'll have to imagine what it's like to have a full-grown deer in your car being taken somewhere it doesn't want to go. Deer are notorious for making trouble when placed in the back seats of cars headed in the wrong direction. This deer was no different and immediately started a one deer stampede there in the back seat. Brakes were applied and an unexpected stop was made. The deer was left off in a new neighborhood, and I suppose this guy's wife was woke up to hear the story when he got home.

Such trouble can be avoided. Thinking out the deer herd is one solution. Enforcing the deer crossing signs is another. Not picking up hitchhikers is a third. And fourth, if you shoot something, don't miss.

CIA "Terrism?" or tourism?

To the Editor: After spending close to four years at the UI, I have never seen such a blatant misuse of the media than in the December 5 issue of The Daily Iowan.

Although I have nothing against New Wave exercising their right to display their beliefs, I find it appalling and utterly embarrassing that they could hold a public march through the downtown area, openly displaying a sign with such a bad misspelling of the word "terrorism."

Despite the fact that their views are not representative of the majority, most of the readers not associated with the UI will most likely associate the misspelling of the sign with the UI community — both faculty and staff.

Therefore, I feel the UI faculty and students are due a public apology not only from the New Wave group, but also from The Daily Iowan for publishing such a self-defeating photo.

Letters to the Editor must be typed and must be signed. Unsigned and untyped letters will not be considered for publication. Letters should include the writer's telephone number and address. Letters should be brief and The Daily Iowan reserves the right to edit for length and clarity.

Learn from being put on the spot

Your article "Black students still 'put on the spot' in UI classes" (The Daily Iowan, Dec. 2) keenly aroused my interest, as I, a student from mainland China, have had a similar experience. Some black students said that they feel uneasy when they are asked to give their perspective on black history or literature in overwhelmingly white classes.

Tao Chun Tseng

I admit that I felt exactly the same way when I began as a freshman in a liberal arts college in Nebraska that had only 600 students. As the only Chinese person there, I was overwhelmed. If white Iowa students know little about black culture, then imagine my schoolmates at Doane College, who knew even less about Chinese culture.

It is not hard to imagine how frightened I was when one day a professor of history invited me to give a talk in his History of China class. I had learned to read and write English quite well by that time, but speaking was still very difficult for me. I sweated, stuttered and blushed when I asked for directions on campus or made a short telephone call. How could I stand in front of so many students, speaking English?

The professor was very understanding. "Don't be frightened!" he said. "You certainly don't speak fluently, but your pronunciation is clear. Remember, these students are not there to pick on you. You know your stuff well. Be confident."

I don't have to tell you how I wrote down every word and rehearsed half a dozen times in my dorm room. My handkerchief was nearly dripping with sweat when the 20 minutes were over. But strangely, I felt more and more at ease as I went on.

That was the first time I had ever spoken in front of a class whose cultural background was different from mine. I gave quite a number of talks in other classes later. Why should I be afraid of becoming the "in-house expert" on the Chinese language, history, literature, philosophy, religion and politics? I certainly knew more about these than any of my American schoolmates.

In your article, a black student also said that many white students stared at her. I was stared at often when I first entered that small Nebraska college. Most students there were from rural areas, had traveled little, and it was also the first time many of them had seen a Chinese person. Maybe a stare was impolite, but it was by no means unfriendly. After all, I looked so different. What did I do then? In return for a stare, I gave a smile and a "Hi!" Very soon I encountered fewer stares and more smiles and friendly greetings.

My speaking activities expanded: I spoke to local church groups, the local Rotary Club, the local junior high, as well as a grade school in a neighboring town.

Looking back on my years in that small college, I found that the most rewarding and enriching experience was giving speeches in classes.

While there was conflict and segregation between whites and blacks in the United States, the situation was worse between the Chinese and the United States. Had I kept silent, avoiding all these encounters, what would the professors and my fellow students think of me and of the Chinese?

A few weeks ago, I took a lecture test for foreign teaching assistants at the UI. My taped performance was given a good evaluation. I could not have done so well without my experience at Doane College.

To my black fellow students: Uneasiness and stage fright pass quickly. Be frank, bold and confident. After all, you have the advantage of having a command of the English language and a familiarity with American culture. You are put on the spot the first time, but soon, I believe, you will be in control and win over your classmates. Like me, you will find your experience here happy and rewarding.

Tao Chun Tseng, a graduate student in linguistics at the UI, submitted this guest opinion for the Viewpoints page.

Nicaraguan pilot defects, flies to Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — A Nicaraguan pilot defected Wednesday and flew a Soviet-made attack helicopter to a Honduran air base, diplomatic sources and Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government said.

The diplomatic sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the military pilot landed the MI-25 helicopter gunship at the Toncontin Air Base in Tegucigalpa, the Honduran capital. In the Nicaraguan capital of Managua, the Defense Ministry confirmed that a defector hijacked a Soviet-made helicopter Wednesday to Honduras.

A ministry statement said the MI-25 attack helicopter was piloted by ex-Capt. Edwin Estrada Leiva. It said the craft landed in Honduras at the Hernan Costa Mejia Air Force Base, another name for the Toncontin facility.

KHARTOUM, Sudan — Rebels in a southern jungle ambushed a convoy carrying food and medicine to famine victims, and one truck hit a rebel land mine, killing seven people, a U.N. official said Wednesday.

Sorority files suit in panty raid incident

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Sorority sisters whose house was raided by nude fraternity members filed a criminal complaint Wednesday saying the prank was frightening at a time when several campus-area rapes remain unsolved.

Police say they believe two men are responsible for as many as 14 rapes on and near the Ann Arbor campus since September 1987.

The panty raid occurred in the early morning of Nov. 29, Knapp said. Three or four nude fraternity members entered several bedrooms, stole lingerie and asked girls to sign their postiors.

Caldwell said prosecutors will consider such charges as unlawful entry, indecent exposure and theft.

Arafat's meeting with U.S. Jews leads to endorsement

STOCKHOLM (AP) — PLO leader Yasir Arafat ended two days of talks with a U.S. Jewish delegation Wednesday by endorsing a statement accepting Israel's right to exist.

At a news conference, however, Arafat seemed less straightforward than the document he endorsed, and he declined to confirm or repeat the statement's key clauses.

The document, which also denounced terrorism, was hailed by the Jewish group as the most unequivocal acceptance of Israel ever given by the Palestine Liberation Organization. The Jewish group urged the U.S. government to end its ban on talks with the PLO.

Arafat described it as "nothing new," but was "an accurate reading and interpretation" of the policy declaration adopted last month by the PLO's legislative arm, the Palestine National Council.

The two-page statement released Wednesday said the council "established the independent state of Palestine and accepted the existence of Israel as a state in the region."

The council also "declared its rejection and condemnation of terrorism in all its forms, including state terrorism," said the English-language document, read by Swedish Foreign Minister Sten Andersson and distributed to reporters.

Arafat said the renunciation of terrorism excluded the uprising by Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, which enters its second year Thursday.

THE FIRST ANNIVERSARY OF THE PALESTINIAN UPRISING

Since Dec. 9th 1987 till this very moment Palestinians have been struggling for their land, dignity, and freedom. Over 400 innocent civilian Palestinians have been held in concentration camps in the Negev desert. Yet, Palestinians have not given up, and will not. The Uprising will continue until the Palestinians get their human rights, self determination and freedom.

Barbara Bush injects levity into exclusive U.N. luncheon

NEW YORK (AP)—Barbara Bush injected a bit of levity Wednesday into an exclusive U.N. luncheon for sometime-rivals Raisa Gorbachev and Nancy Reagan, putting the first ladies at ease in their final official meeting.

Marcela Perez de Cuellar, the wife of the U.N. secretary-general, hosted the lunch at her posh East Side home for the first ladies, Bush and 20 New York socialites, including cosmetics manufacturer Estee Lauder.

"I'm happy to be here in this city you call 'The Big Apple,'" Raisa Gorbachev told reporters, saying the words 'the big apple' in English.

As photographers urged the first ladies and Bush to smile for pictures before lunch, Gorbachev said, "We can't see you. That's why we don't smile."

"How do you say 'cheese' in Russian?" Bush quipped as the three women posed.

Bush, using her wit and good humor, seemed intent on defusing any problems at the gathering between the two first ladies, who have had their run-ins on previous occasions in the past three years.

The first ladies and the 20 women dined in an elegant room with a marble fireplace, crystal chandelier and tall windows overlooking the East River.

The two first ladies exchanged

verbal invitations with Gorbachev inviting the Reagans to the Soviet Union and Reagan asking the Soviet first couple to visit them in California after they leave the White House in January.

In the "very animated conversation," Gorbachev discussed her husband's efforts to open Soviet society with his policy of glasnost and she added that they would like to see all nations opened, according to Mehle.

Prior to lunch, Bush surprised

Christmas shoppers with a stop at Tiffany's on Fifth Avenue.

The Soviet first lady's itinerary Wednesday also included a visit to the Estee Lauder cosmetic headquarters and a tour by car of Manhattan with her husband.

On Tuesday, Reagan pooh-poohed reports that she and Gorbachev had feuded in the past. She said she intended to wish the Soviet first lady — an avowed Marxist-Leninist and atheist — a merry Christmas.

Gorbachev unveils intent to reduce Red Army forces in Western Europe

NEW YORK (AP) — Mikhail Gorbachev gave new momentum to arms control talks Wednesday with his theatrical announcement at the United Nations that the Red Army would reduce its forces by 10 percent and pull 50,000 of its troops, along with tanks and cannons, from Eastern Europe.

U.S. analysts have been predicting such a move for months, believing it could further boost Gorbachev's popularity in the West and allow him divert needed funds from the military to the domestic sector.

Gorbachev praised U.S. willingness to discuss arms reductions and said, "The Soviet leadership has decided to demonstrate once again its readiness to reinforce this healthy process not only in words but in deeds."

"Within the next two years, their numerical strength will be reduced by 500,000 men," he said near the end of a lengthy address to the U.N. General Assembly. The Soviet Armed Forces total about 5.6 million men and women.

"The numbers of conventional armaments will also be substantially reduced," he said. "This will be done unilaterally."

Gorbachev said the Soviets would pull 50,000 troops out of East Germany, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, reducing by about 10 percent the number of forward-deployed Red Army forces arrayed against the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Conventional arms negotiations will continue, said

President Reagan, "we should certainly adjust (U.S. force levels in Europe) if it would turn out that this left us with a superiority."

Gorbachev and his aides had long been hinting at such a withdrawal, but had been opposed by top Soviet generals, notably Marshal Sergei Akhromeyev, chief of staff of the Soviet Armed Forces. Akhromeyev has resigned his post but will continue as an adviser to Gorbachev on arms control.

Besides the troop reductions, Gorbachev said the Red Army would be shedding 10,000 tanks, 8,500 artillery systems and 800 combat aircraft from forward deployment in Eastern Europe.

Exact details of the withdrawals were not made public, but they appeared to fall short of redressing the 2.5-1 edge the Warsaw Pact holds over NATO in conventional armies.

Nevertheless, Gorbachev's proposals appeared to go a long way toward addressing U.S. concerns over the heavy concentration of Soviet forces near the borders of Western Europe.

A reduction in Soviet forces could increase pressure in Congress and possibly among pacifists in Western Europe to withdraw some of the more than 300,000 U.S. forces stationed in West Germany.

Gorbachev's announcement seemed more significant than a statement by Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev in 1979 that 20,000 Soviet troops would be pulled out of East Germany.

Sometimes the names on the Hall of Fame ballot jump out at you, demanding an instant check next to their names. Sometimes they jump out at you, but the check isn't so instant. Carl Yastrzemski had 452 home runs, 3,419 hits and 1,844 runs batted in. That's an instant check. Johnny Bench had 389 home runs, 1,376 RBIs and defined his defensive position for a generation. Another instant check. Jim Bunning won 100 games in each league, pitched a no-hitter in each league and missed making it by four votes last year when nine blank ballots were cast, disrupting the number required for election. Give the man his instant check. Then we come to Gaylord Perry, who, like Yastrzemski and his 3,000-plus hits, arrives for consideration with one of the credentials that usually guarantees automatic admission. He won 314 games and struck out 3,534 batters in 22 seasons, formidable numbers indeed. Only 14 pitchers won more games. Only four struck out more batters.

Under ordinary circumstances, you put a check next to Perry's name on the ballot and move on to other candidates. But these are not ordinary circumstances. That's because Perry cheated. Starting, he has said, in 1964 when he decided he needed a little something extra to survive, Perry doctored baseballs. For a long time, he played cat and mouse with batters, keeping them guessing as he fidgeted on the mound between pitches like a man with a nervous condition.

What was he up to out there? Why did he keep tugging at his cap that way? And how come the ball did such unnatural things when he finally got around to throwing it? Reggie Jackson was so upset at Perry's act one time that he lugged a bucket of water out of the dugout in protest. If you're going to load it up, Reggie was saying, here's a game-long supply of ammunition. Jackson got thrown out for carrying on that way. Perry, however, kept right on pitching. Eventually, he confessed. Yup, Perry said, he broke the rules. So what?

So maybe he doesn't go in the Hall of Fame. So maybe you don't celebrate his misdemeanor with that ultimate tribute, at least not right away. Ordinarily, there is no abiding reason not to vote for a Hall of Famer in his first year of eligibility. A candidate either qualifies or he doesn't. His credentials will not change. If they are good enough for election, they are good enough as soon as he is eligible.

In Perry's case, though, that may not be so. Maybe he ought to be made to wait on the doorstep for a while. Let him think about just how he achieved those credentials. Now don't misunderstand. Cooperstown is full of pitchers who did funny stuff. Whitey Ford was a devoted husband, but that wasn't why he wore his wedding ring to the mound. Scuffed baseballs, you see, also do acrobatics on their way to the plate.

There is no evidence that Perry ever reformed. In fact, late in his career, he began refining his attack on the rules, using resin as an additional weapon to launch what he called his puff pitch.

Hall of Fame rules require that candidates be judged on more than playing ability. Among the criteria listed are integrity, sportsmanship and character. Nowhere does it say anything about considering how well you conceal a foreign substance and apply it to the baseball without getting caught.

Come back next year, Gaylord, and we'll talk about your check mark then.

Hawkeyes put it together; rout Cyclones 79-46

By Michael Trilk
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa State women's basketball Coach Pam Wettig knew that the Iowa Hawkeyes were ready to break loose.

She just hoped it wouldn't happen Tuesday night against her Cyclones — but it did.

Iowa combined a patient half-court offense with a potent fastbreak attack in routing Iowa State, 79-46, at Carver-Hawkeye Arena in the Hawkeyes' home opener.

"We played a very fine team, and there is no question that this was their best game all year long," Wettig said. "In all the films we watched preparing for this game we could tell that something was missing, and that this team was ready to just bust loose."

Iowa sophomore Stephanie Schueler proved to be Iowa's missing link. Schueler, in her first start ever, scored a career-high 21 points and teamed with junior point guard Jollette Law to spark the Hawkeye fast break. Law finished with 15 points.

"They did a heck of a job," Wettig said. "Not only were they getting down court, but they kept hounding and hounding us defensively."

Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer agreed that the win was her team's best performance to date. "We really hadn't felt good about our half-court offense and we weren't running at all," Stringer said. "Tonight we just came in here fired up. Law and Schueler really were a couple of sparks."

Iowa opened a 6-0 lead early in the ballgame and stretched that to 14-6 with five minutes expired in the first half. Iowa State closed the lead to 16-12 with 12:11 to play, when Vanessa Ward scored on a layup.

After the teams traded a pair of baskets, Iowa went on an eight-point run, giving the Hawkeyes a 32-16 lead with 4:13 left in the half.

Iowa stretched that lead to 44-23 at half when Law sank a half-court heave at the buzzer.

The Hawkeyes opened the second half with a 14-5 run, boosting the lead to 58-28, and sealing the win. Iowa improved to 4-2 while Iowa State fell to 3-2.

It was the second straight year See Iowa, Page 2B

Hawk guards combine for offensive punch

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa guards Stephanie Schueler and Jollette Law had an unfair height advantage when the Hawkeyes hosted Iowa State Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Cyclones started Vanessa Ward and Tracy Horvath at guard, 6-foot-1 and 5-8, respectively. But it was the Iowa tandem, both at 5-3, that stood tall.

Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer utilized the smaller, quicker lineup to come up with a flood of transition baskets that destroyed Iowa State.

Schueler, in her first career start for the Hawkeyes, exploded for a game and career-high 21 points. Her previous best was 10 points against Minnesota on Feb. 12.

Schueler went 10 of 14 from the field, including six of seven in the second half. Most of the sophomore's points came on layups.

"I just got going once I hit some of those easy layups," Schueler said.

"That let me get my outside shot going, too."

The Sioux Falls, S.D., native came up with some other personal bests as well: field goals made, field goals attempted and tied her previous high for rebounds with three.

Schueler's partner in the backcourt came up with a big game to complement the play of the sophomore.

Junior Jollette Law, whose 21st birthday was Wednesday, added 15 points. Included in that total was a 50-foot, 3-point bomb at the half-time buzzer to give the Hawkeyes a 44-23 advantage at the break.

"It was a nice birthday present," Law said of the long-range shot. "I just put the ball up and it went in."

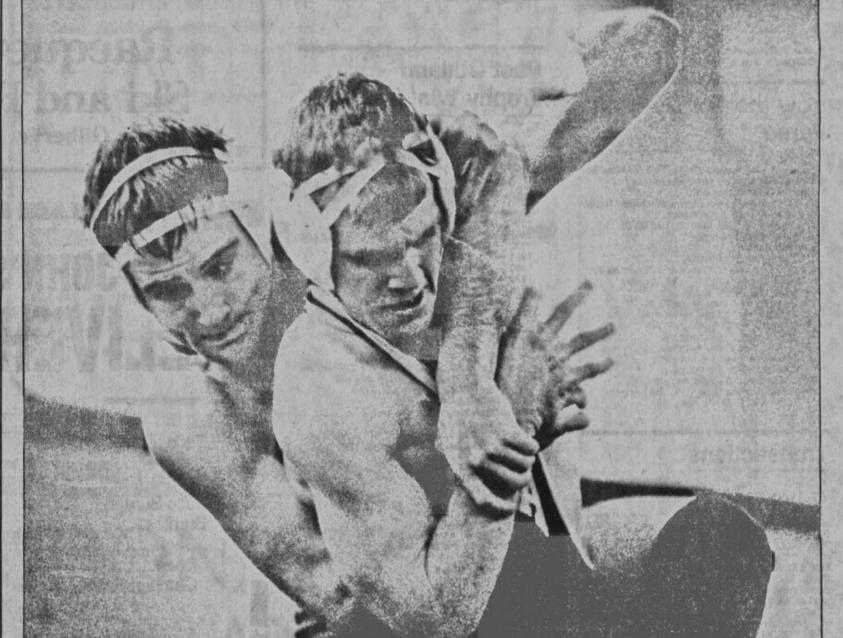

The small Iowa lineup was far too quick for the bigger Cyclones. The Hawkeyes' fast break, led by Schueler and Law, allowed Iowa to breeze to the 79-46 final.

"These two are not uncomfortable playing together," Stringer said. "I think they played relaxed. I think they read each other real well on offense and on defense."

Stringer was unsure, however, if the Hawkeyes would stick with Wednesday's productive guard-court lineup.

"I can't be sure," Stringer said. "It depends. Each day we work different combinations in practice. Somewhere down the road we may have to get more height in there, but tonight it worked."

Iowa junior Steve Martin, left, has freshman teammate Terry Brands all wrapped up in their wrestle-off match Wednesday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Brands won the spot at 118 pounds.

Teammates battle for starting berth

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

It's tough to be teammates vying for the top spot.

At least, that's the way it appeared in the wrestling room of the 6-1 Iowa Hawkeyes in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Wednesday.

In an attempt to solidify the Hawkeye lineup, wrestle-offs were conducted at 118 and 142 pounds. There wasn't much question at the higher weight, but the 118 slot has been the story of a veteran against a redshirt freshman.

Junior Steve Martin and freshman Terry Brands decided things — at least for this weekend. And when it was over, Martin was down on the mat, appearing to be hyperventilating, while Brands walked away with the win after an injury default.

Martin, of Virginia Beach, Va., filled the 118 slot at the NCAA meet last year and posted a 29-14 mark.

Wrestling

Brands is the newcomer. The redshirt freshman from Sheldon, Iowa, has come in to challenge at 118, along with brother Tom at 126 pounds.

"My job is to be the starter," Terry Brands said. "My job is to be the best I can, and you go about it any way you can."

But it was hard to tell these guys are on the same team. Near the end of the opening period, both wrestlers rolled off the mat, and Brands gave Martin a shove. Immediately after that, the two crouched in referee's position with Martin on top.

Upon the referee's whistle, Martin gave Brands a slap to the head. Martin was cautioned and the match continued.

"I like Steve, but we don't say that much anymore," Brands said. "That just comes with the See Wrestling, Page 2B

Iowa assistant joins Snyder at K-State

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP)—Kansas State football Coach Bill Snyder announced Wednesday that Del Miller, a recruiting coordinator at Iowa, will assume the same position at Kansas State.

Miller, 38, was recruiting coordinator and a receiving assistant at Iowa, where Snyder was offensive coordinator. Miller was the first new staff member that Snyder has named since being picked as the Wildcat coach Nov. 30.

"Del brings to this staff a wealth of successful recruiting and on-the-field experience," Snyder said in a statement released by the university's sports information office.

Miller became a full-time assistant at Iowa in 1981, after serving as a volunteer assistant since 1978. He helped develop all-Big Ten receivers Dave Moritz and Quinn Early, who set a Big Ten record with 256 yards receiving in one game in 1987. Current Hawkeye Deven Harberts, another all-Big Ten selection coached by Miller, gained 233 yards against Indiana this past season, the second-highest Del Miller single-game total in league history. Efforts to contact Miller Wednesday night were unsuccessful.

Auburn's Rocker receives Outland

NEW YORK (AP) — Auburn's Tracy Rocker, the No. 1 player on the nation's No. 1 defensive unit, fought off two offensive linemen Wednesday and won the 43rd annual Outland Trophy as the nation's top interior lineman.

The 6-foot-3, 278-pound senior tackle said he was "shocked" when he was announced as the winner over Michigan State tackle Tony Mandarich and Pitt guard Mark Stepnoski "because I've been double-teamed all year by offensive linemen and right now I have two offensive linemen next to me.

"It means a whole lot to me because I can sit here and think about the times where I made some sacrifices and gave up some things because I wanted to have something special. I think right now it paid off."

Auburn led the nation this season in scoring defense, total defense and rushing defense, allowing only 7.2 points and 218.1 and 63.2 yards a game. Rocker made 101 tackles, including 13 behind the line plus five quarterback sacks. His 354 career tackles are the most by any See Outland, Page 2B

Spanish duo advances in Masters

LONDON (AP) — Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez broke a three-year jinx against Ken Flach and Robert Seguso Wednesday, saving four match points to beat the Americans 6-2, 6-2, 5-7, 1-6, 7-6 (12-10) on the opening day of the Masters Doubles championship.

The Spaniards' two-hour, 40-minute victory at London's Royal Albert Hall avenged a five-set defeat by Flach and Seguso in the Olympic doubles final in Seoul and was their first success in six matches between the two pairs.

"This was very important for us but it's only the start," Sanchez said after the thrilling victory, punctuated by spectacular rallies.

Also winning their opening match in the round-robin tournament were American Johan Kriek and New Zealander Kelly Evernden, who qualified as late replacements.

Couple gives $400,000 to SMS basketball

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — A Springfield couple who describe themselves as basketball fanatics have established a $400,000 endowment for the Southwest Missouri State basketball program, school officials said at a news conference Wednesday.

SMS President Marshall Gordon said John and Novella Whittington's gift was the largest endowment ever established for the university. Interest from the fund, estimated at $20,000 a year, will go into the general basketball budget.

"Such funds will forever benefit the university, its faculty, coaches and students," Gordon said.

"We're glad to have John Whittington as a member of the Bear basketball team," Gordon added after presenting a maroon-and-white team jersey to Whittington, a 1960 graduate of SMS who now is a Springfield marketing consultant.

Whittington has served on several SMS fundraising boards.

"It's our privilege and pleasure to help the university and the Bear basketball program," Whittington said. "We've followed the (basketball) team almost everywhere it's gone . . . We're almost fanatics."

Jets say Joe won't go

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Jets have extended Coach Joe Walton's contract through at least the 1990 season.

Jets President Steve Gutman said today that Walton, who had one more year remaining on his current contract, received the extension last Friday. The NFL team would not discuss terms of the agreement, although Gutman made it clear that Walton would not be placed "in a lame-duck situation."

It was believed, but not confirmed, that the extension will include 1991 season.

"We have reconfirmed Joe's authority to do with his staff as he sees fit," Gutman said. "This was done as a reflection of the great confidence the club has in Joe and in recognition of the great progress the team has made in 1988."

Wolverines rout Central Michigan

(AP) — Glen Rice scored 21 points to lead second-ranked Michigan to a 108-62 victory over Central Michigan Wednesday night. The Wolverines had six players in double figures as they posted their largest-ever margin of victory against the Chippewas. . . No. 11 Missouri defeated Tulsa 73-61 as Byron Irvin scored a 23 points, including 15 in the second half. Irvin's second-half performance included eight consecutive free throws for Missouri, 6-2, of the Big Eight Conference. . . No. 4 Georgetown pounded Division II opponent St. Leo, 95-62. Charles Smith scored 13 points and had a school-record 16 assists. Freshman Alonzo Mourning contributed 11 points, 10 rebounds and a school-record 11 blocked shots. Georgetown, which has not yet played a Division I school, has won its three games by an average of 36 points. . . No. 8 North Carolina scored the first 15 points Wednesday night and beat Vanderbilt 89-77 behind 25 points from Jeff Lebo and 20 from Kevin Madden. Lebo scored 19 of his points in the first half, making four 3-pointers in the first nine minutes. The Tar Heels, 7-1, led by as many as 23 points in the first half before Vanderbilt, 2-4, closed to 46-39 at halftime. . . Steve Henson scored 23 points and Fred McCoy added 22 Wednesday night to lead Kansas State to a 85-60 victory over Baylor. The game marked the 100th career victory for Kansas State Coach Lon Kruger, who has a 100-80 record in six seasons of collegiate coaching.

that the Hawkeyes have beaten the Cyclones badly, even though both coaches thought this year's matchup would be much closer.

"We really did come over here with the confidence that we could play this game competitively," Wettig said. "A couple of things happened though. We made some mistakes and they capitalized on them. Then things started to snowball."

The Hawkeyes return to action Saturday, when they host Miami of Ohio in the first round of the Amana-Hawkeye Classic.

game. If you're going to take it easy on your teammate, then you have no business being out there.

"That's my philosophy."

Brands had stopped Martin 3-2 in a similar situation in Newton, Iowa, before the season began. Martin had the job at the beginning of the Hawkeyes' recent East Coast trip, based on a first-place finish at the Northern Open in Madison, Wis., on Nov. 26.

If it seems that close, it is.

After three periods of wrestling, both men were back where they started — tied. It was 5-5, but because of his injury Martin couldn't respond to the referee's call to start the overtime, giving Brands the win.

"It was from exertion," Iowa Coach Dan Gable said of Martin's condition. "It was mental and physical stress."

The 142-pound match pitted another redshirt freshman, Doug Streicher, against sophomore Eric Heneghan. Both wrestlers competed at the weight during the East Coast swing, and both had the same results. Neither recorded a win during the trip, but Streicher had little trouble in disposing of Heneghan 11-1.

"We've had trouble at that weight and others," Gable said. "We've been trying to work with those wrestlers more one-on-one."

Outland

lineman in Auburn history.

"I would think he's probably the best that's ever played at Auburn, period, because I would think that we've probably had better defensive linemen in the last eight years than they've ever had," Coach Pat Dye said.

Rocker usually leads by his play on the field — "My name usually speaks for my play, and that's just the way it's always been. I've been a leader, although it's never been pushed upon me. Everybody looks toward me and I did a good job at it." But he can also lead in more explicit ways.

When Auburn led Florida 16-0 at halftime, Rocker reminded everyone during the intermission that the Tigers had blown a 17-0 lead two years ago and lost 18-17.

"I mentioned it when I got in the locker room," Rocker said. "I just told them, 'Look, this time we're not going to lose this one. We've got Florida where we want them, and we're not going to lose this one."

Rocker is Auburn's second Outland winner. Guard Zeke Smith won it in 1958.

"When you get to this level, it's the inner strength that makes the difference between being good or great, and then being the best," Dye said. "Tracy had those qualities that set him apart from other people."

"He got hurt as a freshman and went through a very traumatic experience dealing with the injury and not playing and homesick."

"Any time you've got an individual as strong spiritually and mentally tough as Tracy is, sometimes it's tougher for those guys to allow themselves to be coached and trained to be team players. A lot of them want to freelance, and know that they've got that talent.

"But Tracy's allowed himself to be trained and to become a team player and has played the game within our schemes. We could have done some things with him that would have him a lot higher up on total stats — sacks and so forth. But he's played within the team concept and made us a much better football team."

"I don't know that he is a devastating pass-rusher, but he is a complete defensive lineman. I don't think anybody could block him and keep him out of a play. You're going to have to figure out a way to fool him or double-team him. You're not going to run the ball at him, and it's very difficult to run away from him."

"I think when he gets into pro football, he will utilize his abilities to be a great pass-rusher, also."

Johnson steps up campaign for title

NEW YORK (AP) — Miami Coach Jimmy Johnson knows what he wants for Christmas — a sloppily played victory for third-ranked West Virginia over No. 1 Notre Dame in the Fiesta Bowl.

"I visited with (West Virginia Coach) Don Nehlen last night and I kind of had a smile on my face and I said, 'I hope you have an ugly win,'" Johnson said Wednesday. He also conceded that "a tie would be nice."

These are probably the only two ways for Miami to have a shot at its third straight national championship. A Notre Dame victory or an impressive triumph by West Virginia — perhaps any kind of win by the Mountaineers — probably would end Miami's hopes.

Johnson, who has been campaigning hard in recent weeks, appeared at an Orange Bowl news conference and made another pitch to the voters not to overlook his second-ranked Hurricanes, who meet No. 6 Nebraska on Jan. 2.

"I hear so much conversation from various coaches around the country and various media people who say, 'We believe that you're the best team in the country,'" Johnson said. "They might believe it, but evidently they don't vote it."

"I'm not saying that people should vote us No. 1. I'm just saying, after the bowl games, vote for whoever you think is the best team in the country. If Notre Dame wins, they should be the national champion. Right now, we're No. 2, we're ranked above West Virginia. Why should that change if we beat Nebraska?"

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, speaking by phone from Lincoln, sided with Johnson when he said that the final Associated Press poll "depends so much on the orientation of the voters."

"If their thought is simply to vote for what they think is the best team in college football, I think that there's a chance that the Orange Bowl could produce the national champion," Osborne said.

"But if their orientation is primarily who has the best record, then obviously we don't have a great chance (Notre Dame and West Virginia are 11-0, Nebraska 11-1, Miami 10-1). From a personal standpoint, I would hope that people would look a little bit at the question of who has played a tough schedule, who has the best team."

"I'm not going to lobby as hard maybe as Jimmy has, but I certainly see his point. I think many people believe that Miami has the best team in the country. They have a great team and they certainly should be considered for the national championship."

What especially irks Johnson is that Miami was ranked No. 1 before its 31-30 loss at Notre Dame, a game the Hurricanes almost certainly could have tied had they attempted a last-minute extra-point instead of a two-point conversion pass that failed.

"I'd hate to see our team penalized simply for the reason that I decided not to go for the tie and not kick the extra point," Johnson said. "Instead, being the defending national champions, I tried to go for the win with a two-point conversion."

"After that ballgame, quite a few players came to me and said, 'Coach, we appreciate you giving us the opportunity to win.' I wouldn't have been able to face them if we'd have just kicked the extra point and took the tie."

IOC scraps plans to bar weightlifting

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A planned move to try and bar weightlifting from the Olympics was scrapped at an International Olympic Committee meeting Wednesday, where the vice president behind it said the sport typified the problems doping can create in the Games.

"I offered it as an example," Richard Pound of Canada said of weightlifting, where he believes there is heavy steroid use.

"We wouldn't want to kick it out forever. It's an exciting sport. But it's clear they can't control it from the top. It might be good to give them this kind of direction."

Weightlifting produced half of the 10 athletes punished for drug use at the Seoul Olympics.

Meanwhile, sources said the IOC agreed to set up a management team to study ways of conducting random drug tests in any country.

The sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the plan was in its earliest stages, with panel members still to be determined. It was not known when the commission would begin its work.

Last month, the IOC's medical chief, Prince Alexandre de Merode, said the committee was thinking about setting up a mobile drug-testing laboratory, which could go to any country where a registered lab did not exist. That lab would be involved in the universal tests, the sources said.

Work continued, meanwhile, on finalizing an anti-drug agreement between the national Olympic committees of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Astros deal Ryan; Schmidt re-signs

ATLANTA (AP) — Nolan Ryan stayed true to Texas, Mike Schmidt said loyalty is keeping him in Philadelphia and free agent Bruce Hurst prepared to make a decision about leaving Boston Wednesday as baseball's winter meetings officially ended.

The final day brought more action, and the Texas Rangers continued their pace as the busiest team. They lassoed Ryan, a 41-year-old free agent, for a one-year contract plus an option year that could be worth $3 million.

"I am a diehard Texan," said Ryan, who left the lukewarm Houston Astros and turned down bigger offers from California and San Francisco. "It didn't come down to a monetary decision. The overriding fact was what I felt was best for me and my family."

Schmidt, 39, also did not want to move and he agreed to a one-year contract with the Phillies.

"The loyalty issue is the most important," said Schmidt, who was actively pursued by Cincinnati.

Schmidt, who underwent surgery in September for a torn right rotator cuff, will be guaranteed $500,000. He gets another $500,000 if he is on the roster May 15, another $500,000 if he is playing on Aug. 15 and can earn $550,000 more in incentives.

"I feel physically better than at any time in my life at this time of the year," said baseball's seventh all-time leading home run hitter.

Hurst was expected to decide soon between re-signing with the Red Sox or accepting offers from either San Diego or California. Each team has proposed three-year deals approaching $5.5 million.

"We're getting close," said Hurst's agent, Nick Lampros, without indicating the favorite.

The New York Mets joined the dealings by sending second baseman Wally Backman and a minor-league pitcher to Minnesota for three minor-league pitchers, none of whom played above Class AA last season. Backman hit .303 in 294 at-bats last season.

The Twins also acquired reliever Todd McClure from Houston, completing a trade that sent pitcher Mark Portugal to the Astros three days earlier.

Milwaukee sent reserve catcher Bill Schroeder to California for backup infielder Gus Polidor.

Several free agents, facing a mid-night deadline to return to their former teams, came to terms. Right-hander Scott Sanderson, injured most of last season, agreed to a one-year, $200,000 contract with the Chicago Cubs. Greg Harris, 4-6 for the Philadelphia Phillies in 1988, agreed to a one-year contract for $325,000.

Nolan Ryan

Dave Collins agreed to a one-year deal for $225,000 with the Cincinnati Reds, $125,000 of which is guaranteed. Collins, 36, batted .236 in 99 games.

Pitcher Ted Power agreed to a $575,000 non-guaranteed contract with the Detroit Tigers. He was 6-7 last season with a 5.91 earned-run average.

Free agent pitchers Lary Sorensen (San Francisco), Odell Jones (Milwaukee) and Mario Soto (Los Angeles) all agreed to Class AAA contracts for one year.

Mike Schmidt

The Phillies also announced they would not offer contracts to two other free agents, pitcher Kent Tekulve and outfielder-pinch hitter Greg Gross.

In other business, the 26 owners met for five hours. Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said he hoped a new television contract could be worked out next week while commissioner-elect Bart Giamatti, speaking about expansion, said, "we're very, very far away from (picking) cities."

Giamatti's spot as National League president will not be filled until January, it was announced. Simon Gourdin, a former executive in the NBA, is the leading choice and would be the first black ever to head a pro sports league.

Gold Glove choice irks veteran White

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Second baseman Frank White of the Kansas City Royals dreamed of winning a record ninth Gold Glove for his position this year — and figured his league-leading fielding percentage and low number of errors made him a natural for the honor.

Instead, Seattle's Harold Reynolds edged White for the American League's Gold Glove second baseman Wednesday.

The selection of Reynolds left White disappointed and tied with former Pittsburgh Pirates second baseman Bill Mazeroski for the most career Gold Gloves by a second baseman.

White, winner of the American League Gold Glove the last two seasons, led the league in fielding in 1988 with a .994 fielding percentage and committed a league-low four errors. Reynolds, who had a .977 fielding percentage and committed 18 errors in 10 more games and 71 more fielding chances than White, edges the Royals' infielder 33-31.

"You always dream and hope of having that one great year, and I did that in the field," White said in an interview after being informed of the decision. "I'm disappointed because it was so obvious. It wasn't only obvious to me but to all those who watched me. And those coaches and managers who voted for part-time and platoon players should be embarrassed. They (the coaches and managers) don't even deserve to be in the league."

"I think I'm the best second baseman in baseball. I have trouble believing that any second baseman in the game could have a year like I had. I think it was one of the best defensive years anyone's had in baseball for quite a while."

"It had become such a challenge. I thought after the '82 season, when I didn't win it, I wouldn't win it again. Then all of a sudden, in the twilight of my career, it's like I'm a new person. I won two straight and reached the top of the mountain. The problem is I couldn't go over it," said White, 38.

Royals General Manager John Schuerholz called the choice of Reynolds over White ludicrous.

"I've said all along that he's the best second baseman to ever play the game. I can't for the life of me understand how he could not have won that. It's an absolute travesty. Harold Reynolds is a good young ballplayer, but he's not in Frank White's class right now. I mean, the guy who won it had 18 errors; Frank has four."

Sl: Shul of Dupe

MIAMI (AP) — Mark D. Miami Dolphins' wide receiver pending for violating the substance abuse policy, has a convicted drug dealer been a cocaine user since 1986, according to an article published in this week's Sports Illustrated magazine.

The magazine quotes a source saying that Dupe's close acquaintance with jailed drug dealer Nelson Aguilar that Dolphin owner Joe Robbie Coach Dan Shula knew in photographs of Dupe and other reputed drug dealers.

The article also cited claiming a former driver far delivered cocaine to North Miami condominium in January 1986. In addition, Knight, the estranged wife of Aguilar's former associate she snorted cocaine with Dupe in a limousine in 1986.

In the article, Aguilar, serving a 13½-year federal term in Oxford, Wis., for trafficking, described Dupe as a "very good friend" and LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — Chicago Bears are trying to deal its first wild card post-season hand since 1979.

The Bears, wanting nothing than their second NFL title seasons, know a wild-card road to the Super Bowl is one — playing that extra game mostly on the road.

Earlier in the season, after go's 31-7 loss to Minnesota said half-seriously that he could only hope for a berth — that it appeared Vikings were going to win Central.

That was a long time ago was reminded of the remark.

SI: Shula, Robbie saw photos of Duper with drug dealers

MIAMI (AP) — Mark Duper, a Miami Dolphins wide receiver suspended for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy, has ties to a convicted drug dealer and has been a cocaine user since at least 1986, according to an article published in this week's Sports Illustrated magazine.

The magazine quotes a variety of sources saying that Duper was a close acquaintance of jailed Miami drug dealer Nelson Aguilar and that Dolphins owner Joe Robbie and Coach Bill Shula knew in 1986 of photos of Duper and Aguilar and other reputed drug dealers.

The article also cited sources claiming a former driver for Aguilar delivered cocaine to Duper's North Miami condominium twice in January 1986. In addition, Kim Knight, the estranged wife of one of Aguilar's former associates, said she snorted cocaine with Duper in a limousine in 1986.

In the article, Aguilar, who is serving a 13½-year federal prison term in Oxford, Wis., for cocaine trafficking, described Duper as "a very good friend" and said he keeps in contact with the seven-year NFL veteran from Northwestern State in Louisiana.

Bruce Greer, Duper's lawyer, said the article was based on "disreputable sources" and failed to cite a polygraph test taken by Duper last week which indicated Duper was telling the truth about not being a cocaine user.

"The article is rushed into print based on disreputable sources and without the knowledge of a lie detector test demonstrating Mark's honesty," he said.

Robbie and Shula also blasted the article as inaccurate.

"I have never been shown pictures of Mark Duper with any reputed drug dealers, and I never until last week been aware of Mark Duper's possible involvement with drugs," said Robbie in a prepared statement.

Shula acknowledged he knew of the photos, but he vehemently denied any knowledge that Duper was using cocaine.

"For SI to imply that I was aware in any of Mark either using cocaine or consorting with cocaine dealers and not doing anything about it is totally untrue," said Shula in a prepared statement.

"I consider it an insult to my integrity and to the discipline that I demand from myself and my players."

In a news conference this afternoon, Shula said that when he became aware of the photographs, he notified NFL security officials and visited with the players involved.

"That was the extent of what I could do," Shula told reporters.

Duper, 29, is appealing a 30-day suspension issued last week for missing drug tests. Earlier this week, various news reports in South Florida named Duper as a friend of John Rafael Gomez, a former frequent visitor to Dolphin practices who is awaiting trial on drug charges.

NFL spokesman Joe Browne would not comment on the story, and Duper was not available for comment, The Miami Herald reported.

Duper averaged 18.1 yards per catch last season on 33 receptions.

Islanders fire Simpson, hire Arbour

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Islanders, mired in last place in the NHL's Patrick Division after winning the title last season, fired coach Terry Simpson today and named former coach Al Arbour to replace him.

The Islanders, who finished with a 39-31-10 record last season, now are 7-18-2, having lost their last eight games.

Last season's first-place finish, in Simpson's second year as coach, was the Islanders' first division championship since 1983-84, and their sixth in the team's 16-year history.

Arbour, 56, was in his third season as the Islanders' vice president in charge of player development.

Bears could be dealt wild card

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The Chicago Bears are trying to keep a poker face, but the team may soon be dealt its first wild card in a postseason hand since 1979.

The Bears, wanting nothing less than their second NFL title in four seasons, know a wild-card team's road to the Super Bowl is a tough one — playing that extra game and playing mostly on the road.

"There's a lot of things that can happen positively out of it," Bears Coach Mike Ditka said.

Earlier in the season, after Chicago's 31-7 loss to Minnesota, Ditka said half-seriously that the Bears could only hope for a wild-card berth — that it appeared the Vikings were going to win the NFC Central.

"That was a long time ago, but he was reminded of the remark this week.

"You're going back to a statement I made after the third week of the season. I forgot all about that statement," Ditka said.

Chicago rebounded from that early loss to the Vikings, winning nine of their next 10 games, clinching a playoff berth and going two games ahead of Minnesota in the division race.

But now the Vikings have won five straight, including Sunday's 45-3 rout of the New Orleans Saints.

And the Bears, after Monday night's 23-3 loss to the Rams in Los Angeles, find themselves only a game in front of the Vikings, a team they have to face in Minnesota in the very last game of the regular season on Dec. 19.

"Everybody wanted a dogfight, and that's what it's going to be," Ditka said of the division race.

But the Bears are riddled with injuries that have cost them their top two quarterbacks, Jim McMahon and Mike Tomczak, and top pass-rusher Richard Dent.

Three other defensive starters — Shaun Gayle, William Perry, and Otis Wilson — and tight end Emery Moorehead are out for at least the regular season.

Even with the injuries, Chicago, 11-3, is expected to beat Detroit this Sunday, while Minnesota, 10-4, should win at Green Bay.

That would make the winner of the Vikes-Bears clash at the noisy Hubert Humphrey Metrodome the NFC Central champ, and the loser a wild-card team in the playoffs.

Even though the teams would tie with identical records if the Vikings won, Minnesota would be declared the champ because of the head-to-head play.

"You just have to put pressure on yourself to go up there and play well. But first, you have to worry about Detroit this weekend. You can't look ahead," said Bears offensive tackle Jim Covert.

Even though Ditka says wild-card teams have gone all the way, only the 1980 Oakland Raiders went from wild card to Super Bowl.

Rock 'n' roll star Orbison dies

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Rock 'n' roll pioneer Roy Orbison, whose soaring falsetto mourned the misery of fading romance and who recently had become popular with a new generation of fans, was felled by a heart attack and died. He was 52.

The Grammy Award-winning Orbison, famed for hits like "Oh, Pretty Woman," "Only the Lonely" and "Crying," died shortly before midnight Tuesday at Hendershott Hospital, where he had been taken by ambulance, said Melanie Lamb, a spokeswoman for the suburban Nashville hospital.

"He was and always will be one of the greats of rock 'n' roll," said former Beatle Paul McCartney. "We toured with Roy in the early days, and he was a really good guy."

A singer, guitarist and songwriter who was instantly recognizable by his ever-present sunglasses and dark attire set off by an ebony pompadour, Orbison had 27 straight records on the charts during his heyday in the early 1960s.

But his biggest success came with "Oh, Pretty Woman," which sold more than 7 million copies in 1964. A cover version later was a hit for Van Halen.

In 1977, Elvis Presley, one year Orbison's senior, introduced him as "the greatest singer in the world." Bruce Springsteen saluted him in his song "Thunder Road."

But it was Orbison's recent recordings as one of The Traveling Wilburys — along with ex-Beatle George Harrison, Tom Petty, Bob Dylan and Jeff Lynne — that brought him a new generation of fans. The group's "Handle With Care" is No. 45 on the charts, and their swift-selling album "The Traveling Wilburys" is No. 8.

The upturn in his career surprised him, Orbison said last week as he was leaving London's Heathrow Airport for home.

"I've been rediscovered by young kids who had never heard of me before the Wilburys," he said. "They are getting into my original songs, and apparently the old stuff is selling at the rate of 20,000 copies a day."

"It's very nice to be wanted again, but I still can't quite believe it."

Orbison got his early recording experience in the 1950s with Sun Records of Memphis, the label that launched the careers of Elvis Presley, Johnny Cash and Jerry Lee Lewis. He was one of the first "rockabilly" singers — a hybrid of rock 'n' roll and hillbilly music, as country music was known then.

With an impressive three-octave range, he continued to perform concerts right up to his death, appearing Sunday in Akron, Ohio, before 2,000 people.

Writer Shacochis comes home

By Kevin Goulding
The Daily Iowan

Bob Shacochis, winner of the American Book Award for his "Easy In The Islands" (1985), will read from his new collection of short stories Saturday, 8 p.m., in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Shacochis, a native of Virginia, is a 1982 graduate of the Iowa Writers' Workshop. Among his honors are a James Michener Award, a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship, Playboy's Best New Fiction Award and the 1985 American Book Award. Shacochis, who has a B.A. in journalism from the University of Missouri, writes frequently in Esquire, the New York Times Magazine and Harper's.

Currently finishing a semester as a visiting writer in residence at Wichita State, Shacochis resides in Tallahassee, Fla. He considers his visit to Iowa City a "homecoming."

"It's a great feeling, I'm very loyal to Iowa," he commented in a phone interview. "I believe in what's taking place at the Workshop and the community — it's a haven for both young and established writers. Beyond New York City, it's one of the premiere literary communities in the U.S. I can't think of one that compares to it. LA is too diffuse. Iowa is blessed to have it."

Shacochis was presented the Michener Award, a one-year grant presented to promising Workshop writers, in order to finish "Easy In The Islands." "It meant I could write for a year without having the world bear down on me," he said.

"Bob Shacochis is a natural storyteller," commented T.C.

The following is a passage from Shacochis' short story "Where Pelham Fell," from his new collection "The Next New World."

Almost a year without independence had made Colonel Coates lust for a prowl at Brandy Station. After the War between North and South, that was all the aristocracy had left, the right to remembrance. Taylor had claimed this right and felt obliged to it; his vigil registered in the bloody heart of the land as if he himself — his existence — were the true outcome of the fray: a florid, half-bald man alone in a rolling pasture, hitching his loose pants up repeatedly to keep them above the horns of his failing hips, stricken by the deep blue plunge of loss for those things he wanted but now knew he would not have; for those things he possessed and loved but whose time was past; for myth and time itself, for what was, for the impossibility of ever being there. And yet he would return from the battlefield uplifted.

Boyle, a writer and visiting Workshop instructor. "His stories are full of action and odd details. His writing is very vital and goes against the grain of the realistic, minimalist fiction of the past decade. It's more expansive and goes back to a more traditional way of storytelling."

Shacochis said that he might read the first chapter of his new novel "Swimming In The Volcano."

The novel is his first. "I just wish it would get done," he laughed. "It has contaminated my life for four years. My friend Russell Banks (author of "Continental Drift") described the process as living with an ugly, depressed person. A first novel takes time unless you're a genius, which I'm not."

"Volcano" takes place in Virginia and the Caribbean and covers a 20-year time span, according to Shacochis. "It's a love story, with political shenanigans, the first versus the third world... sex, guns and power — isn't that what all books are about?"

Bob Shacochis' reading is sponsored by Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. Shacochis will be signing copies of "The Next New World" following the reading.

Brass quintet features music covering wide span of time

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

What does a dead English monarch have in common with a young-but-talented Canadian composer and the man whose name was given to Clapp Recital Hall?

An interest in music for brass, you might answer. But the similarity goes one step further.

All three — Philip Greeley Clapp, James Dowdy and King Henry VIII — have works on the program of the Iowa Brass Quintet's concert tonight.

"Brass music tends to cover a wide span of time," said Robert Yeats, the quintet's tuba player, and he wasn't exaggerating.

In addition to "A Rose Without a

"Brass music tends to cover a wide span of time," said Robert Yeats, the quintet's tuba player, and he wasn't exaggerating.

Thorn," an arrangement of music by King Henry VIII, the concert will feature the world premiere of James Dowdy's "Movement for Brass Quintet."

"Dowdy is a young Canadian composer, and we became aware of his work when our trumpeter David Greenhoe met him through the International Trumpet Guild," explained Yeats. "Greenhoe was impressed by Dowdy's work and asked if he had written a piece for brass quintet. He had, and was very happy to have us premiere it."

"It's not a quiet piece," said Yeats, commenting on Dowdy's "Movement." "It's a very good work."

Dowdy plans to attend the concert to hear the premiere.

The quintet will be joined by trombonist George Krem to perform Philip Greeley Clapp's "Sextette." Clapp was the long-time head of the UI School of Music, for whom Clapp Hall is named.

"The piece is lovely, in a very romantic, late 19th century style,"

Yeats said. "It's lightweight."

The Quintet will also perform Ingolf Dahl's "Music for Brass Instruments."

The players in the quintet are Greenhoe and Barbara Deur, trumpet; Virginia Thompson, horn; John Hill, trombone; and Yeats, tuba. Greenhoe, Hill and Yeats are faculty members of the UI School of Music.

The Iowa Brass Quintet was founded in the early 1950s and has been widely acclaimed for its artistry in performing brass chamber music from Renaissance works to contemporary compositions. The quintet has toured the country and has made four recordings. Its recording of the William Mayer quintet on CRI records was listed by Saturday Review as "Best of the Year."

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials said virtually thousands of people. Armenian journalists said Nikolai Ryzhkov received people died in the Wednesday Richter scale. Soviet officials but provided no death toll.

President Mikhail Gorbachev and flew home to lead a southern republic, which he said "urgent measures are being taken to prevent a terrible tragedy, and I have planned to fly to Yerevan to see the disaster first-hand."

President Reagan offered to dispatch London firefighters. Soviet TV showed a clock tower Turkish border near the earthquake — the instant the disaster struck. The earthquake destroyed second-largest city with 16,000 people from the face of the Earth, Tass, the Soviet government reported. A special meeting of the Soviet Union was held in Yerevan, the Armenian capital.

Soviet authorities dispatched supplies to the area, and injured northward to hospital. Tass said 2,300 people were

Reagan praises

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ronald Reagan said Thursday night that "extraordinary things have happened in superpower negotiations" after Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev's troop withdrawal pledge.

The president told a news conference that Gorbachev's move would strengthen the Soviet Union with "superiority in some regions."

Reagan, asked if there was any chance of releasing American prisoners held captive in Lebanon, thought eventually the States would have to negotiate with Iran because they had control of the kidnapers.

Concerning the prospect of negotiations with Iran, he said, "are conditions that have to be met also there. Any time that they are ready to come forward on a basis, we would be ready to meet them."

Reagan said Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir Arafat did not make a clear-cut commitment to recognize the State of Israel despite a statement effect this week. The president said Arafat "left himself open to the subject."

Reagan also sidestepped questions about the war in Afghanistan, saying it would be unacceptable to stop the rebels there. He said the Soviet-backed regime's military operations. But he said he would support a detailed response to Gorbachev's call for a comprehensive settlement to be signed by the United Nations.

It was Reagan's 46th and final news conference as president held in a White House East Room decorated with Christmas trees. He began with a quip — "stop meeting like this," and
