Inquiry into Villiage Inn poisoning enters new phase

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Department of Agriculture and Land Stewardship asked the Iowa Attorney General's Office Wednesday to further investigate W.B. McCloud and Co., the Davenport company that fumigated the Villiage Inn Pancake House the night before an assistant night manager died of methyl bromide poisoning.

Terry Ray Schneider, 19, was found in the employee's rest room Oct. 6 at the restaurant, 9 Sturgis Corner Drive.

"The decision was that the case warranted a full investigation through the Attorney General's Office, and that's why we referred the case to them," said Daryl Frey, director of the laboratory division of the Iowa Department of Agriculture.

The department will decide in conjunction with its legal counsel, the Attorney General's Office, if any legal action will be taken under the Iowa Pesticide Act, said Tim Benton, assistant attorney general.

No other pesticide cases have been referred to the Attorney General's Office this year, Frey said, noting the serious and unusual nature of the case.

He knows of no other pesticide-related deaths this year in Iowa.

"The death is very unusual. There was a loss of life involved and that tends to raise the stakes," Frey said. "As a result of that, we are going to conduct a full and thorough investigation."

The Attorney General's Office has been called on to investigate whether the methyl bromide fumigation at the restaurant was lawful and proper, Benton said.

Benton said possible legal actions include revoking W.B. McCloud and Co.'s license and revoking individual pest-control worker's certification. No criminal charges or claims for damages will be filed by the Attorney General's Office, Benton said.

"We intend to move as soon as possible. Obviously, it would be in the interest of all parties to move as quickly as we can," Benton said. "And that decision will be coming shortly."

Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Dale

Cochran reviewed the department's final report and made the decision to ask the Attorney General's Office to conduct an additional, more in-depth investigation, Frey said.

Frey said the further investigation of W.B. McCloud and Co. will be thorough, complete and not necessarily quick.

"The case will move forward as quickly as it can, but the primary

U.S.-PLO detente praised

By The Associated Press

Palestinians, the Arab world, European countries and U.S. congressional leaders on Thursday hailed the U.S. decision to open a dialogue with the PLO as an important step that could inject new life into the stagnant Middle East peace process.

Only Israel expressed opposition to the move, saying it would not serve the cause of peace.

"This is a great step by a great nation," said Mohammed Milhelm, a former Palestinian mayor who was expelled from the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

Some radical factions of the Palestine Liberation Organization also hailed the U.S. decision, which was announced Wednesday in Washington.

In Washington, leading members of Congress gave the new opening between the United States and the Palestine Liberation Organization a wary welcome and sought to reassure Israel that U.S. officials will be alert to any PLO tricks.

"This is good news and the right path to follow," said Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "I think we would best be very careful that the PLO continue to show real seriousness and be wary of any deception."

Kays al-Samarai, spokesman for the Marxist Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, called the move "a new victory for the PLO" and for the intefadeh — the yearlong Palestinian uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

George Habash, leader of the radical Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, called the U.S. decision "yet another victory" for the uprising and said he welcomed it, even though "the U.S. administration says that initiating the dialogue does not entail recognition of Palestinian rights to ... an independent state."

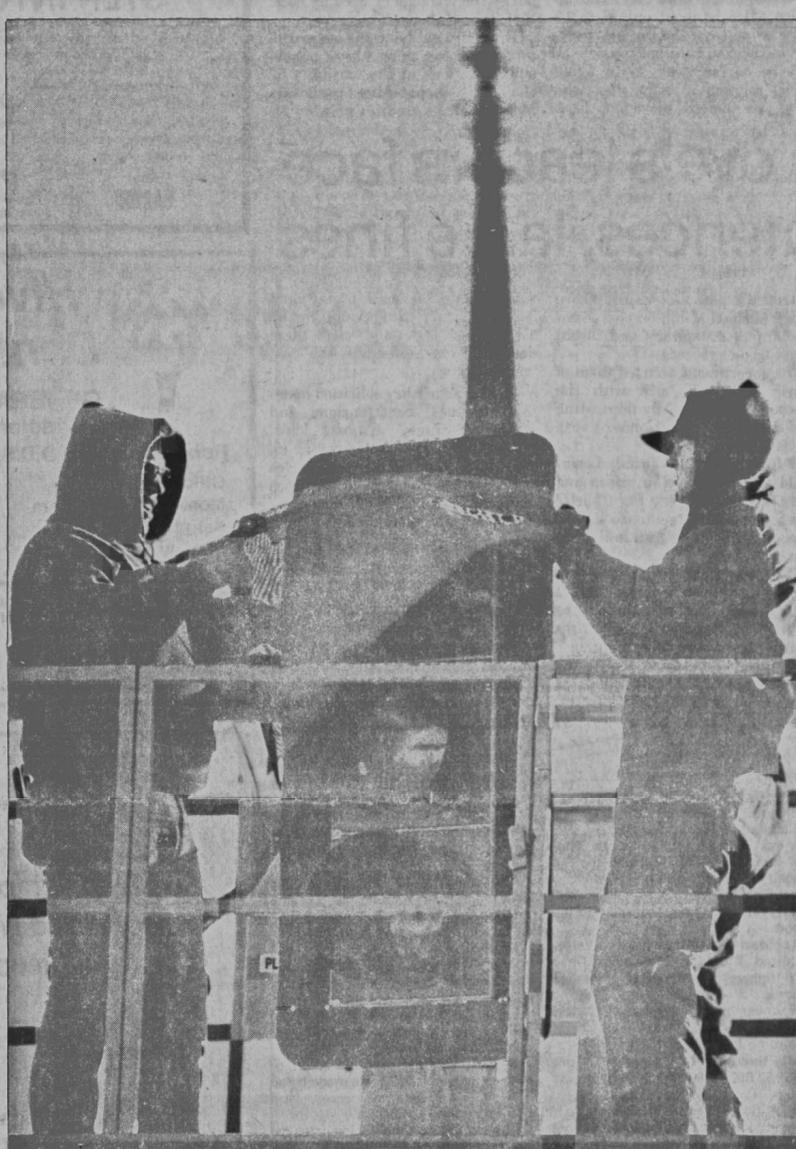

Palestinians declared an independent state last month in Algeria. Habash's statement referred to "Israel" instead of "the Zionist entity," the phrase the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and other factions have traditionally used to describe the Jewish state.

In Israel, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said it was "sad day for all of us."

Western European and other nations expressed their approval of the U.S. move and the hope it would lead to progress.

In Britain, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Yasir Arafat's recent statements had qualified the PLO to take part in a peace conference.

The British Foreign Office Minister, William Waldegrave, who was visiting Cairo, said: "I welcome the fact that the Americans share our analysis that the PLO has moved to positions that represent real progress."

Residents rage over proposed waste incinerators

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The controversy over the construction of two hospital-waste incinerators on the UI's Oakdale campus raged Wednesday night as residents addressed questions and concerns to state officials during a public hearing in Coralville.

Area residents asked representatives from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources to postpone granting the UI a preliminary permit to build the incinerators, which would burn an estimated 2.8 million pounds of waste per year from the UI Hospitals and Clinics and research laboratories.

Bill Youngquist, a departmental engineer at DNR, said the department has extensively researched the potential environmental and health hazards of the incinerators.

He stressed that the levels of dioxins and furans (cancer-causing materials) emitted from the incinerators' 180-foot smokestacks would be well below the levels considered unsafe by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Pete Hamlin, DNR's chief of air quality and solid-waste protection, said that a person who breathed the air for 70 years at the point of highest concentration — about 3,200 feet north of the facility — would have a one-in-a-million chance of getting cancer.

Other concerns were also discussed during the meeting. These included the location of the incinerators, the radioactive materials that would be emitted from the incinerators, the validity of standards used to regulate the facility and reliability of the UI once the incinerators are operating.

Because of concerns brought up during the hearing, Hamlin said Thursday that he still didn't know for certain if the DNR would give the UI a preliminary permit.

"We've listened to the concerns and will evaluate comments," Hamlin said. "We want to make sure we haven't missed anything."

Dr. Shirley Lindell, biological safety director in the UI's Health Protection Office, said she is still confident the DNR would give the UI a permit and "hopefully, it will be within a month."

Once given a permit, the UI would have 60 days to begin construction, Lindell said.

But Pat Lenz, who lives approximately a mile north of Oakdale, said she wants the UI to put the project on hold and expressed concern as to the safety of the incinerators.

"Iowa doesn't have hazardous waste regulations that, I think, are tough enough to protect the environment and the people," Lenz said.

The hazardous waste limitations written for the Oakdale incinerators by the DNR, which are based on regulations in the Administrative Code of Iowa, allow more particulates and hydrogen chloride to be emitted into the air than the federal limitations set in the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, she said.

But because the Iowa Code and RCCR regulations don't apply to hospital incinerators, "I really think this project should be put off until the Department of Natural Resources sets those regulations," Lenz said.

Lenz explained that "ordinary incinerators do not burn high amounts of chlorinated products, as hospital incinerators do. It's the chlorine that's producing the dioxins and furans. Because of this, the regulations for hospital incinerators aren't strict enough."

The UI's administration of the Hawkeye fans' Peach Bowl plans still a little fuzzy

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

As 1988 draws to a close, thousands of Hawkeye fans will descend upon Atlanta and the Peach Bowl to witness the Iowa Hawkeyes' eighth-straight bowl appearance.

Iowa will face North Carolina State University on Dec. 31, and UI Athletics Ticket manager Mike Naughton said that as always there will be plenty of Hawkeye fans traveling to the game to support the Hawkeyes.

Naughton said the UI has sold approximately 7,200 Peach Bowl tickets through his office. The UI was originally allotted 15,000 tickets for the game, but Naughton said there has been a considerable amount of trading back and forth between the UI, North Carolina State and the Peach Bowl.

"The idea is to cooperatively sell the Peach Bowl out," Naughton said.

Iowa fans purchased approximately 11,000 tickets for each of the Hawkeyes last two bowl appearances. However, eight years of bowl games may be diminishing some fans' interest, he said.

After the Hawkeyes accepted their Peach Bowl invitation, the UI offered bowl tickets to season-ticket holders, Naughton said.

Once season-ticket holders' orders were filled, Naughton said, a number of travel agencies purchased between 600 and 800 tickets for bowl tour packages. But many Hawkeye fans who go on bowl tours are season-ticket holders and obtain their bowl tickets from the UI office in order to retain their priority seating status, he said.

Most of the requests the UI is receiving are coming from Hawkeye fans and alumni in the Southeast part of the country, Naughton said.

"We sent out a 15,000-piece mailing to alumni in that area, and we seem to be getting more requests from that area now than from local fans," Naughton said.

Naughton said it is possible the UI office may sell up to 10,000 tickets for the game, but he said there will probably be several thousand more Hawkeye fans at the Peach Bowl than UI ticket sales reflect.

"A lot of fans bought tickets directly from the Peach Bowl or from friends in Atlanta," Naughton said. "Historically, most people believe that it is impossible to get Iowa football tickets unless you are a season-ticket holder, so a lot of people will panic and try to get them straight from the bowl."

Andy Piro, assistant director of the UI Alumni Association, said the Alumni Association's four-day package is the official Peach Bowl tour of the UI.

"We're very excited that Hayden (Fry) and the team have earned another bowl appearance and that we are offering our eighth bowl tour," he said.

Piro said the Alumni Association tours will leave by chartered jet from Cedar Rapids and Des Moines

Bionic Bus program expands interim service

The Cambus Bionic System will expand its weekday interim service five hours per day in response to the additional needs expressed by the disabled community.

Beginning Dec. 21, the Bionic Buses will run from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., including a previously unavailable midday service. This schedule will be used in all interim periods and is intended to be a permanent expansion.

For more information regarding the new service or to schedule rides, call 335-7595.

Applications available for Carver Scholarships

Applications for the Carver Scholars Program for the 1989-90 academic year will be available Dec. 19 in the Office of Student Financial Aid in Calvin Hall, Room 208. Each of the six undergraduate colleges will be dispersing applications as well.

The Carver Scholars Program was established by a grant from the Roy J. Carver Charitable Fund in memory of Roy Carver. The trust is set up to assist students like Roy Carver, who have great potential but have to work hard to achieve it.

Recipients will be awarded two-year scholarships of $3,000 per year. Renewal for the senior year will be based upon a 3.0 cumulative grade point average.

To be qualified, applicants must have a 2.8 current cumulative GPA, be starting their junior year in the fall of 1989, be a U.S. citizen and have graduated from an accredited Iowa high school.

The application deadline is Jan. 17. The recipients will be announced March 17.

Old Capitol Center hosts donation program

The Old Capitol Center is sponsoring a program called Santanonymus to help local organizations collect donations during the holiday season. Seven local agencies are represented in the program, which is in its eighth season. The organizations and the types of donations they recommend are:

- Willow Creek Neighborhood Center — toys and clothes for children, preschool children through teenagers.
 - Emergency Housing Project — gifts for all ages.
 - Big Brothers/Big Sisters — gifts for children 6 to 14 years old.
 - Crisis Center — toys and gifts for all ages.
 - Association for Retarded Citizens.
 - Youth Homes, Inc. — teen-age personal items, gifts and clothes.
 - Domestic Violence Center — personal hygiene items, small toys, gloves, scarves and hats.
- Donations can be placed in bags that have been hung in the Old Capitol Center.
- Contact Lisa Stevenson at 338-7858 if you have questions.

UI College of Nursing students and faculty will soon have access to research and literature from around the world.

Sigma Theta Tau International has established a $4 million Center for Nursing Scholarship and International Nursing Library in Indianapolis, Ind., that will provide a computer link to valuable resources for nursing professionals.

Scheduled for completion in November 1989, the center will house a state-of-the-art electronic nursing library that will make available new resources to the international nursing community, other professions and the general public.

It will serve as a focal point for nursing scholarship and research, including a unique data base featuring unpublished literature unavailable elsewhere.

City, county should jointly determine fate of 911 system

By Jean Thilmay
The Daily Iowan

Both the city and the county must determine the future of the enhanced 911 emergency system, Iowa City Councilors and Johnson County Supervisors agreed at their Thursday joint meeting.

Supervisor Dick Myers updated council members on the process of the proposed E911 system. Myers is chairman of the committee formulated to study the issue.

"This is something we could get together on and save our citizens some money," Myers told the councilors.

Under a recent state bill, Iowa counties are required to formulate a plan to adopt the enhanced 911 system, which would be able to immediately inform emergency personnel of the address and phone number of an emergency caller.

Church of Love's leaders face lengthy sentences, large fines

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — A jury was asked Thursday to decide whether tales of nude "angels" at a retirement paradise were meant for a lonely-hearts club or a scam by con artists to coax $4.5 million from 31,000 men.

Prosecutors called creators of the Church of Love fantasy "con artists, liars and manipulators" while a defense attorney described them as "loving, caring... dream merchants," in closing arguments in federal court.

Assistant U.S. Attorneys K. Tate Chambers and Darlynn Knauss made the charges in the case of Donald Lowry, 59, of Bettendorf, Iowa, and Pamela St. Charles, 25, of Moline, Ill.

Jurors began deliberating the case about 1:15 p.m.

Lowry and St. Charles have been

The current 911 systems do not provide emergency crews with the phone number of the caller.

Myers said a joint E911 dispatching unit could be shared by both the Iowa City Police Department and the Johnson County Sheriff's Department.

Iowa City is also currently updating its 911 system.

"If we have to buy more than one (public service answering agency), it's going to cost our citizens a lot more," Myers said.

Sheriff-elect Robert Carpenter said communication between the two dispatching units — were they to be housed in the same building — would be vital.

He said that in Iowa City a backup police office is about only 5 to 10 miles away from the initial office. But in the county, a backup deputy may be as far away as 15 to 20 miles, making a dispatcher who could give updates on deputy location all the more vital.

Carpenter feared the joint dispatchers may be hindered by the noise from the other dispatching desk.

"It is so important our deputies have someone to talk to who is right there and not doing anything else," Carpenter said. "If this takes away from the safety of the officers of the service of the public, I'm not for it."

The councilors and the supervisors agreed.

Myers and Carpenter suggested locating the joint dispatching unit in the Johnson County Sheriff's Department because it houses the jail — the one agency used by both the city and the county.

The board studying the issue will probably recommend hiring a consultant to look at the feasibility of the joint dispatching proposal, Myers said.

on trial the past four weeks before Judge Michael Mihm on charges of mail fraud, conspiracy and illegal use of fraud proceeds.

The government accused them of preying on men "sick with the illness of loneliness" by fabricating an elaborate mail-order sex-fantasy scam.

If found guilty of fraud, Lowry could face 130 years in prison and fines of $6.5 million. St. Charles faces a possible sentence of 65 years in prison and $2.5 million in fines.

"This was a classic of example of the old line 'if you're going to tell a lie, tell a big lie,'" Knauss told the jury. "They deceived their victims in order to achieve financial gain."

Knauss said Lowry, a former English teacher who founded the Church of Love in 1965, and St.

Charles, his assistant, targeted lonely men for membership in the Church of Love and sent them letters from non-existent "love angels."

In exchange, they solicited membership fees, contributions and "love offerings," Knauss said. When the money started rolling in, she said, Lowry and St. Charles fabricated a series of misfortunes suffered by the angels to generate sympathy and more money.

"Donald Lowry and Pamela St. Charles were smart," she said. "They are con artists. Their letters were full of lies. They are wordsmiths and manipulators."

Defense attorney William Schick of Moline called the letters "healthy fantasies" and said Lowry was a businessman doing honest work.

A California man who pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent was sentenced Thursday to a maximum of two years in prison at Johnson County District Court, according to court records.

Nathan Powell Everhart, 31, Sacramento, was charged with first-degree theft in October for failing to return a Ryder rental truck, valued at approximately $5,000, that was reported stolen from California, according to court records.

Sixth Judicial District Judge Kristin Hibbs handed down the sentence in open court Thursday.

Everhart was also ordered to make restitution for more than $4,700 in pecuniary damages, court costs and court-appointed attorney's fees, according to court records.

Within 30 days, Everhart must prepare a plan of restitution with the assistance of the 6th Judicial District Department of Correctional Services. The plan will be submitted to the court for approval, according to court records.

An Arlington, Iowa, man was charged with second-degree robbery Thursday for allegedly committing a theft at a local food store and assaulting an employee while escaping from the scene, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Kenneth Leon Knipper, 22, allegedly struck an employee who confronted him about his alleged theft of two cartons of cigarettes from Randall's Mini-Priced Foods, Sycamore Mall, according to court records.

During his arrest as a suspect in the theft, Knipper was also charged with operating a vehicle while intoxicated, according to court records.

Knipper was placed in the custody of the 6th Judicial District Department of Corrections. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Jan. 3, according to court records.

University five- and-dime?

Book Store gets a charge out of student IDs

By Kristin Rosenow
Special to The Daily Iowan

With a constantly expanding product line, the University Book Store is beginning to look more and more like a five-and-dime. But it's not the silver of nickels and dimes that pay for most student purchases — it's the gold of UI student identification cards.

"Sixty-five percent of our total sales at the bookstore are from charges," said Union Business Manager Richard Templeton.

He said that students' ability to charge on their cards definitely increases business at the Union.

"It adds to convenience," he said. "It's the ability to go in and buy something, whether it's a necessity or a non-necessity, with or without having the cash on hand. It's an advantage. If we had unlimited space and room, we could sell anything."

Bookstore cashier Shelley Yoe said the percentage of student charges to her seems even higher than 65 percent. "Students laugh when we ask 'Cash or charge?' " Yoe said. "They say 'Cash, what's cash?'"

UI senior Jeanette Martin said she often charges at the bookstore.

"I've been totally frivolous," she said. "I'll walk in to buy toothpaste and walk out with hairspray and mousse too, even if I didn't need them."

Troy Weier, a UI senior, said he is a little more conservative with his card.

"I just charge my books," he said. Sales figures indicate that students charge an average of $23.16 on each purchase, but that figure is escalated by book sales at the beginning of the semester.

Bookstore Manager George Herbert said it's obvious that student charges help business and that it's a technique more and more university bookstores are using. He said only a lack of space keeps the University Book Store from expanding.

"The room is critical," Herbert said. "If we really want to expand one department, it would have to be to the detriment of another department."

Herbert divides the store's product line into three sections — required books and supplies, sundries and apparel and gifts.

Sundries and electronics are two departments that Herbert said have recently expanded their product lines.

"I'm somewhat surprised at how well sundries has taken off," Herbert said.

The store doesn't profit much from sundries because these products are bought in smaller amounts, and therefore the store must pay a higher price, he said.

He said the electronics department is growing as more UI people start to use computers.

"Electronics are definitely expanding, especially the software and diskette section. Now, we're also looking into word processors," Herbert said.

Heavyweight Champion sweat-shirts are the store's most popular non-book item, he said.

"We can safely say that we probably sell in excess of 10,000 sweat-shirts a year," he said. "I think a typical student probably has three or four."

UI senior Kris Seaberg agrees. "I know everyone on this campus has charged at least one sweatshirt," she said. "It's like freshman initiation."

Templeton said charging with student IDs poses difficulties because students are billed only once a month and have 15 days to pay these bills.

"It restricts cash flow, and it's hard to meet bills with such a delay," Templeton said. "It's a timing problem. If it were a Visa or Mastercard they would charge 18 or 22 percent interest to defray those costs. We don't, so we have to do other things to deal with them."

"If I were running a small business, I couldn't afford to meet my bills," he said.

Area travel agencies offer tours

In addition to the UI Alumni Association's 1988 Peach Bowl tour, several other local travel agencies are offering tour packages to Atlanta.

Red Carpet Travel Services is offering a five-day package leaving Dec. 28 that includes air fare, hotel accommodations for two and transportation to the Peach Bowl for $499.

Tri-State Tours Inc. of Cedar Rapids is offering both a $259 four-day package and a $289 five-day package leaving Dec. 29. Both include hotel accommodations, game tickets and motorcoach transportation.

Hawkeye World Travel Inc. of Iowa City is offering a $489 four-day package leaving Dec. 30 that includes air fare, hotel accommodations and game tickets.

Travel and Transport Inc. of Cedar Rapids is offering a $230 three-day motorcoach tour leaving from the Quad-Cities Dec. 29. It includes overnight stays in Nashville, Tenn., and Atlanta, and game tickets. Travel and Transport Inc. also offers a four-day tour leaving Dec. 29 from Des Moines that includes air fare, lodging transfers and game tickets for $443 a person.

AAA Travel Agency of Cedar Rapids is offering a $439 motorcoach tour leaving Dec. 29 and returning Jan. 1 that includes two overnight stays in Evansville, Ind., two nights in Atlanta and transportation and tickets to the Peach Bowl.

Destinations Unlimited, Inc. of Cedar Rapids is offering a four-day tour leaving Dec. 30 for $429 that includes air fare, transportation to the game and hotel accommodations for two, with optional game tickets.

American Travel and Tour of Cedar Rapids has a $457 three-day tour and a $526 four-day tour. Both include air fare, hotel accommodations for two, game tickets and a pre-game buffet breakfast.

Iowa's growth rate may rise, firm predicts

DES MOINES (AP) — Conflicting with recent U.S. studies, a private forecasting firm predicts Iowa's population will grow 3.4 percent by the year 2010 to 2.9 million.

The new report by Woods and Poole Economics of Washington, D.C., conflicts with estimates by the U.S. Census Bureau that Iowa will lose 17 percent of its population over the next 22 years, ending the period with 2.3 million residents.

But officials with the private firm said the estimates of population growth in Iowa are down from earlier studies they conducted. A 1984 survey predicted a population of 3.3 million for Iowa in 2010.

"And when you stretch 3.4 percent population growth over 22 years," said Woods and Poole senior economist Martin Holdrich, "it's basically zero growth."

Private and public forecasters use differing means to reach their predictions. Woods and Poole relies more on expected economic conditions, and it assumes more Iowans will be involved in service-oriented industries and less of manufacturing and farming.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Dual membership on boards may be conflict of interest

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

Having a member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors serve on the Systems Unlimited Inc. Board of Directors constitutes a conflict of interest, says Iowa City lawyer Robert Downer.

Systems Unlimited, 1040 William St., is a non-profit organization for the developmentally disabled.

Richard Burger, president of the organization, requested an opinion from the Meardon Suelppel Downer and Hayes law firm as to whether supervisors serving on the Systems Unlimited board constituted a conflict of interest in cases where Systems Unlimited has a contract with a county.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors reviewed letters on the issue from Burger, Downer and Chad James, Muscatine County supervisor, at its Thursday meeting.

"In my opinion, such a relationship would constitute a conflict of interest," Downer wrote in his statement to Burger. "An officer or employee of a county shall not have an interest, direct or indirect, in a contract with that county. A contract entered into in violation of this section is void."

"In that case, we should just take ourselves off every mental health board in the county, so we would never know what was going on," Supervisor Robert Burns said.

"You know lawyers' opinions. You can just walk around the block and get another one," Supervisor Don Sehr said.

The supervisors expressed their support for Chad James, who serves on the Systems Unlimited board.

He wrote in a letter to Supervisor Betty Ockenfels, "(Burger) has presented an opinion to the Systems board prohibiting any county supervisor from serving on that board because of an apparent conflict of interest. I told the board that such a move would require me to directly oppose him on this recommendation, and that he would have to forcibly remove me from serving. "I have taken this to our county attorney for his opinion. Perhaps he and (Johnson) County Attorney (Pat White) could work together in supporting us in this stand," James wrote.

The supervisors will write James a letter of support and will decide later whether to consult White on the issue.

In other business, the board voted to hire the Iowa City engineering firm of Noel W. Willis as a consultant for a new bridge. Willis had a low bid of $11,925.

The county hopes to begin construction on a new American Legion Road bridge this summer.

The old bridge will remain open while the new one is being built. The new bridge will be built slightly west of the current one. The board also approved the Noel W. Willis firm as a consultant for bridge inspection.

By state law, the county is required to have all its bridges inspected by July 1.

Female detective utilizes judgment

Schedule combines family, work

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

In the lower level of the Iowa City Civic Center lies a room the size of a moderate storeroom. The room is crammed with three metal desks, four chairs, two large file cabinets and shelves full of thick, hardcover law books.

This room — with no windows, two telephones and a complete set of fireman's gear — is home to Vicki Lalla, the only female detective in Iowa City. Lalla, was promoted from patrol officer to detective three months ago.

Although Lalla is a novice in the detective department, she is not a greenhorn to the law enforcement business. Lalla, who has been in police work more than ten years, said she likes her job because the duties vary from day to day.

"I like meeting different people, and to be frank, I'm good at it," Lalla said. "Everyone has their strong suit, and I have found mine."

One of the key qualities of the job is a keen sense of judgment and the knowledge that any situation has the potential to becoming dangerous, Lalla said.

Imagine a young man lying face down outside a local bar. Nearby another man is stooped over him giving what looks like some sort of assistance. Viewed from the driver's side of a police car, this looks like a typical case of public intoxication.

She said that when she came closer to the man who appeared to be passed out, she noticed a small pool of blood beginning to take shape outside of the man's right ear. When she saw this, Lalla said she quickly entered the bar and saw a woman sitting inside with the left side of her face swollen and disfigured.

The man who had been giving first aid had gotten into a severe argument with the woman in the bar, his girlfriend, and in the heat of the moment took her outside and proceeded to bash her head repeatedly against the hood of a car.

The other man witnessed the scene from the bar window and tried to come to the aid of the woman. As he rounded the building, the offender landed one hard blow to the man's right ear, knocked him unconscious and crushed a bone in his skull, leaving the man with 40 percent of hearing in that ear, Lalla said.

"Just one example that things aren't always what they seem," Lalla said of the event.

Lalla herself is also a good example of someone who is not what she seems. The mother of the four small children in the framed picture on her desk, Lalla had worked as a patrol officer during each of her pregnancies. Lalla's children, three boys and one girl, are between the ages of 2 and 7. Lalla said she became more aware of her capabilities with every pregnancy.

"I remember once when I went to unlock an old woman's car. I got out of the car, and she said, 'You're pregnant.' I'm glad she told me." — Iowa City Police Detective Vicki Lalla.

"Most everyone was very considerate of being pregnant," Lalla said. "With my first two children, I did more filing and paper work, not because I didn't want to do the foot beat, but because I wanted to free up the other officers to do the real action work. If a call came out and I was the closest, I would answer it. It is not like I didn't do my job."

Lalla said being noticeably pregnant lent itself to varied reactions from people.

"I remember once when I went to unlock an old woman's car. I got out of the car and she said, 'You're pregnant.' I'm glad she told me," Lalla said.

When Lalla became pregnant with her fourth child, she said she vowed to perform her job as normally as she could.

"I did everything in my last pregnancy," Lalla said. "I did the downtown foot beat, and I busted bar fights. I knew what I could do, and I just didn't do anything stupid."

Stupid means being careless and putting herself into a dangerous situation. Being a good law enforcer means not taking any outlandish risks and using your common sense, Lalla said.

In two of her pregnancies, Lalla said that she worked up to the full term.

"I worked a Tuesday night, and she was born on a Wednesday," Lalla said. "Same with another one, I worked a Wednesday night, and he was born on a Thursday."

Lalla said in the future she would like to finish her education, which she started before attending the police academy.

"I would like to get a degree in the social science area," Lalla said. "Psychology really fascinates me."

But Lalla said she is very happy with what she does and doesn't foresee any change in occupation.

Mother faces life sentence for assisting torture of son

DES MOINES (AP) — Donna Simmons was found guilty Thursday of first-degree kidnapping for helping her live-in boyfriend keep her son Tracey confined in the basement of her home.

Simmons, 32, faces a mandatory life sentence without parole for the conviction on the first-degree charge.

Larry Siemer, Simmons boyfriend, already has been convicted of first-degree kidnapping in the confinement of Tracey Simmons and is awaiting sentencing on a life prison term.

The jury began deliberations Thursday morning.

Testimony at both trials said Siemer burned Tracey, then 7 years old, with scalding water, beat him with a board, broke his leg and hung him from a basement water pipe.

Defense attorney Peter Berger said Wednesday in closing arguments that Simmons should not be convicted of the crime because her son was free to leave the Simmons house for school every day.

"The boy can't be kidnapped one day and not kidnapped the next day," argued Berger, who called no witnesses on Simmons' behalf. "Kidnapping is when a person is confined, and as a result of that confinement he's hurt. What you have here is handcuffing and child abuse."

But prosecutors defended their charge, saying Simmons allowed Siemer to handcuff Tracey to a bed and abuse the child.

"This is what made it much, much more than a child-abuse case," said Polk County prosecutor Melodee Hanes, holding a pair of handcuffs for the jury to see.

to the United Nations in Geneva, told the assembly the resolutions "are unhelpful and inconsistent with the search for peace." In a statement explaining the U.S. vote, Petrone described U.N. supervision in the occupied territories as "impractical and unrealistic."

He said changing the U.N. reference from PLO to Palestine "is vague and could be susceptible to various interpretations. We cannot support attempts to lend even a degree of purported legitimacy to the self-proclaimed Palestinian state."

Petrone repeated the statement Washington made Wednesday that the PLO had met U.S. conditions for direct contacts: explicit acceptance of Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 (calling for Israeli withdrawal from occupied land and secure borders for all Middle East states), recognizing Israel's right to exist and renouncing terrorism.

"We view this as another step forward toward the direct negotiations between the parties concerned that are essential to achieving a comprehensive settlement," he said.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering passed on oral assurances that the United States was not recognizing PLO claims to an independent state.

Javier Perez de Cuellar, U.N. secretary-general, said the U.S. policy change was "excellent news" and created "much more favorable" conditions for an international peace conference including the PLO.

Vladimir Petrovsky, the Soviet deputy foreign minister, said it was "a reasonable action going in the right direction" but added: "It is not enough today to maintain just dialogue for the sake of dialogue."

U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani said Perez de Cuellar would return to New York on Friday for consultations intended to speed the peace process.

Benton said he will be the primary investigator from the Attorney General's Office. He will go to Iowa City to personally examine witnesses.

"For the most part, it's a point of going back over what the department has already done and kind of seeing how it looks," Benton said.

"I want to stress that nothing has been filed and no charges have been made," Benton added. "This is strictly the investigative stage."

"The common impression in town is that the university gets what it wants," said Marsha Wright, a rural North Liberty resident.

"I think the whole idea of allowing license-holders to police themselves — to tattle on themselves when they make a mistake — is unrealistic," Lenz said. "Some type of monitoring from an outside agency is needed."

Hamlin said members of the DNR would meet to discuss concerns addressed during the meeting, but as of Thursday the department had not met.

on Dec. 29. The $633 tour package includes air fare, game tickets, a special welcome reception, a pregame brunch and hotel accommodations for two.

For Hawkeye fans traveling to the Peach Bowl on their own, the Alumni Association is offering a $465 tour package without air fare for fans joining the tour in Atlanta.

"That's a nice option because Atlanta is within relatively easy driving distance," Piro said. "It's not like California for the past few years, and we are anticipating that a number of Iowans will be joining our tour package in Atlanta."

Piro said he anticipates accommodating 225 Iowa fans through the Alumni Association's tour packages, with a third of those fans joining the tour in Atlanta.

"This is the eighth time around, so some Iowa fans may be saving their money for the NCAA basketball tournament or for other vacations, but we still anticipate a good turn out of Hawk fans in Atlanta," Piro said. "Atlanta is a great city — it's the gateway to the South."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young had a busy speaking schedule in the first weeks of the year, jetting to places like Atlanta, Los Angeles, Dallas and Seattle for the multimillion-dollar annual honoraria circuit.

Between Jan. 5 and Feb. 10, Young gave 10 speeches, all of them to defense contractors who had more than passing interest in a member of a House subcommittee that has a major role in Pentagon spending.

The whirlwind schedule without its reward: $25,000 in speaking fees from the Rockwell, Lockheed and Boeing companies. The amount that the Census Bureau says is just $1,853 below the median U.S. household income for all of 1987.

Young didn't keep all of the money. His financial disclosure statement says he gave $3,200 to the University of Iowa, which brought his net worth to $25,800, or more than House rules allow. He made no more speeches after Feb. 6.

Help for cancer victims may lie in cells

WASHINGTON (AP) — Experiments in two California laboratories suggest that genetically engineered cells may offer promise for suppressing the growth of some cancers and for correcting brain disorders such as Alzheimer's disease.

The studies, in two different laboratories at the University of California-San Diego, involved the use of cells that were genetically altered and then injected or grafted into laboratory animals, according to reports published Friday.

In a study of cancer, Wen-Hwa Lee, a professor of pathology at UCSD, and a cancer-suppressing gene was inserted into the altered genetic pattern of a retrovirus, a type of virus that controls the genetic pattern of a normal cell.

The retrovirus carrying the cancer-suppressing retinoblastoma gene (RB) was then transplanted into cancer cells.

To serve as a comparison, another type of gene, called luciferase (LUX), was processed in the same way.

Lee said both types of altered cancer cells then were injected into mice. Each of seven mice received both kinds of the altered cells, one type in each rear flank, he said.

After a month, said Lee, the flanks injected with the LUX-infected cells developed tumors. No tumors, however, grew on the flanks that had received the RB-infected cells.

Lee said it appears that the virus carrying the cancer-suppressing gene is able to prevent the formation of malignant cells.

Lee said cells receiving the RB gene would be blocked permanently from turning into cancer and that the virus carrying the gene could contribute this tumor suppression to other cells.

He said the technique using the RB gene theoretically could work in treatment of breast, bone and lung cancer, and a rare type of eye cancer in children. The absence of the RB gene has been linked to all these types of cancers.

In another UCSD experiment, Theodore Friedmann, professor of pediatrics, said he and a group of researchers grafted genetically altered cells into the brains of rats to produce a special protein called nerve growth factor that prevented damaged brain tissue from dying.

The work, he said, "is the first demonstration of this sort of combination of genetic modification of cells and grafting as an approach to central nervous system disease."

Friedmann said the researchers disarmed a retrovirus by removing part of its genetic pattern. A gene that carries instructions for the production of nerve growth factor was then put into the pattern of the retrovirus.

Next, the team put the altered retrovirus into cells called fibroblasts. These fibroblasts now had the genetic instructions for producing nerve growth factor.

The scientists then made surgical lesions in the brains of 16 rats, cutting the connection between the forebrain and the hippocampus.

Eight of the rats received brain grafts containing fibroblasts altered to produce nerve growth factor. The other rats received grafts of unaltered fibroblasts.

After two weeks, both groups of rats were killed and autopsied.

Friedmann said the rats that received the unaltered fibroblasts experienced a loss of 51 percent of their cholinergic cells. But the rats that had received the fibroblasts carrying the nerve growth factor gene lost only 8 percent of their cholinergic cells.

He said the study demonstrates that brain conditions caused by a shortage of certain proteins could perhaps be corrected by grafting genetically altered cells that produce this protein.

"The long-range implications from this study," he said, is that "one can start thinking about treating diseases that are a result of gene defects in the brain at the level of the gene defect."

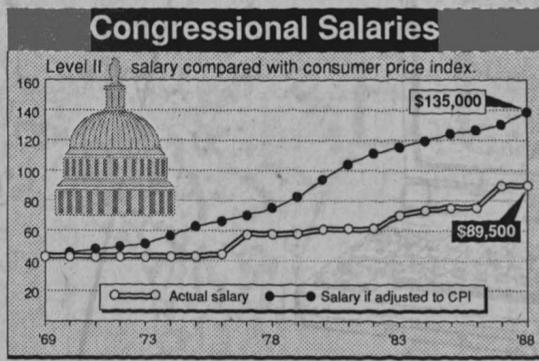

Congressional honoraria may face ban

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Bill Young had a busy speaking schedule in the first weeks of 1987, jetting to places like Atlanta, Los Angeles, Dallas and Seattle as part of the multimillion-dollar congressional honoraria circuit.

Between Jan. 5 and Feb. 6, the Florida Republican made 18 speeches, all of them to major defense contractors who have more than passing interest in hearing from a member of a House Appropriations subcommittee that has a major role in Pentagon spending.

The whirlwind schedule was not without its reward: $29,000 in speaking fees from the likes of Rockwell, Lockheed and Boeing, an amount that the Census Bureau says is just $1,853 below what the median U.S. household collected in income for all of 1987.

Young didn't keep all of his earnings. His financial disclosure statement says he gave $3,200 to charity, which brought his speech-making net to $25,800, or $84 less than House rules allowed him to keep. He made no more for-pay speeches after Feb. 6.

Harry Glenn, Young's press secretary, said Thursday the lawmaker's honoraria appearances were lumped together because he only schedules them during times when Congress either is not in session or has a light schedule, as generally occurs in January. He said Young generally works a 7 a.m.-10 p.m. day while on these visits, meeting with company officials and touring plants, not just speaking for a fee. "He learned something from these trips," Glenn said.

Young is not unique among the 390 representatives and 87 senators who in 1987 pulled in $9.8 million on the honoraria circuit — a controversial perk being targeted for oblivion by reformers, a federal pay commission and influential lawmakers like House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas.

The commission said that public faith in the integrity of Congress is threatened by the steady growth in honoraria, which rose 30 percent from 1986 to 1987.

"The only principled argument that can be made for the practice of accepting honoraria is that official salaries are far too low and must be supplemented for a public official to meet his family obligations," the panel said.

Its recommendation to the White House and Congress: ban honoraria and raise congressional pay from $89,500 a year to $135,000.

The champion honoraria earner for 1987 was Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the panel that originates most tax legislation in Congress.

Rostenkowski is so much in demand by a broad segment of businesses, industries and trade associations that his 22 paid appearances in January 1987 brought in $76,500 in honoraria.

Placing blame

In a speech to administration officials Tuesday, President Ronald Reagan, as only he can do, reconstructed another piece of history in a sad attempt to erase the most unsightly blemish on his Presidency: the federal deficit.

Reagan, who refuses to admit any responsibility for the huge budget deficits during his two terms, claimed the cause of deficits is an "iron triangle" made up of Congress, special-interest groups and the press.

Congress, Reagan said, accepts massive campaign contributions from special-interest groups, in exchange for creating and funding spending programs. The press then refuses to report administration criticism of this practice.

The result, according to Reagan, is that government has lost its "constitutional balance," with Congress enjoying too much power over the budget and the White House too little.

Congress is not innocent on the issue of the deficit. It fights for its programs and Reagan fights for his. Both sides are guilty of failing to control the budget. But in the last eight years the combination of higher military spending and tax cuts — Reagan's two primary budget objectives — has been the main contributor to the massive deficits.

Reagan is concerned with his place in history, and he worries the budget deficit will scar his image in the eyes of historians. But instead of coming to grips with the deficit in his second term, he has tried to pass responsibility off on Congress, special interests and the press.

There's plenty of blame to go around, and Reagan should shoulder his fair share. But unfortunately, it's easier for him to rearrange reality than it is to say, "I accept responsibility." That's our President.

Steps toward peace

"I repeat for the record that we renounce all forms of terrorism, including individual terrorism, group and the state terrorism." With this sentence, PLO Chairman Yasir Arafat threw the door wide open for the United States to enter into discussions aimed at arriving at a just and lasting peace in the Middle East. Yet it all seems too simple, too easy, too conciliatory.

These words were but a small step for Arafat. After all, he only expressly stated what he had been implying for the past weeks. "You were right all along, I was a terrorist," he seemed to say. "But I'm not any more." Chances are, Arafat means what he said. No one fails for twenty-plus years just to keep on failing. He also has a keen knowledge of whom he has to please in order to gain legitimacy for his organization.

In his speech before the United Nations Assembly meeting in Geneva, Arafat accomplished what those twenty-plus years of terrorist activities had failed to do. He persuaded Secretary of State Shultz and President Ronald Reagan to do an about-face on their pledge not to deal with terrorists. While Shultz reaffirmed that the United States still would not accept the PLO's declaration of an independent homeland within the territory now under Israeli control, he did make the giant leap of promising to discuss the subject.

With the U.S. conditions met, the next step must be Israel's. It is now obvious that Yitzhak Shamir's condition that the PLO "disband themselves and cease to exist" will never be met. The United States remains staunchly in support of Israel, as well it should. To abandon Israel now for the PLO would be the ultimate in hypocrisy.

Yet with the door open, the United States must pressure Israel to at least consider some type of negotiations. President Reagan and Secretary Shultz — as well as the incoming Bush administration — must stand in the doorway between the PLO and Israel welcoming both sides to enter and sit at the negotiating table. It won't be easy.

Meanwhile, the intifadeh continues in the Occupied Territories, terrorism — even if not supported or condoned by Arafat — continues, hostages continue to be taken in Lebanon, people in the United States and Israel continue to be split on whether to trust Arafat and the PLO, and the people of the Middle East seem no closer to ever being able to live in peace. But the small step made by Arafat and the giant leap made by Shultz and Reagan in the direction of peace may be enough to start a parade — only time will tell.

Why 'party animals' sell the brewski

We may soon be observing a significant test of the loyalty that consumers show to a particular product.

For quite some time, the people who make Bud Light beer have been using a dog in their TV commercials.

They call this mutt Spuds MacKenzie, although we can't be certain that is his real name. For all we know, it might be Spot or Fido or Shiphead. In show biz, assumed names are common.

Anyway, this dog is described as a "party animal," and whenever the dog appears, three lovely young ladies sing and gush over him, while everybody becomes frantic and festive.

These commercials have caused the consumption of Bud Light to increase, especially within the younger set.

So a competitor, the maker of Miller Lite beer, is planning an advertising campaign to woo away some of the younger beer drinkers.

Miller strategy is to use not one, but three animals in its commercials, which indicates it means business.

There will be a monkey, an elephant and a lion. These beasts will wear sunglasses and dance. An announcer, presumably two-legged, will say that in taste tests these "party animals" preferred Miller Lite.

Never having worked in advertising, I'm not sure what all of this animal beer-selling means.

Mike Royko

So I sought an opinion from Dr. I.M. Kookie, the famous psychologist and all-around expert on just about everything.

"You want me to explain why young people drink beer because of that dog, Spuds MacKenzie?" Dr. Kookie asked.

Yes, what is his special appeal? "Appeal? He has no appeal. He's dumb, bland-looking dog. He don't bark, he don't sit up, he don't roll over, he don't chase cats or mice. A burglar could probably step on his tail without waking him up. I bet he's not even house broke. If I had a dog that dumb, I'd kick him out the door and buy a goldfish."

Then why does his presence on the TV screen stimulate the sale of a particular brand of beer among young people?

"You want the clinical, scientific explanation?"

Yes. "Because they're stupid."

Ah, the stupidity factor. Could you elaborate?

"What's there to elaborate? Anybody who buys a beer because they see three dummies singing and shaking their bottoms at a dog on TV is just as dumb as that dog. I'd kick them out the door, too."

But the dog must have some subtle, unique appeal. He's had a dynamic effect on the product's sales. Could it be that there are those who identify with this bland dumbness?

"Like some little fat people have little-fat dogs? And people with long noses get dogs with long noses? And people with flat faces buy dogs with flat faces? Yes, it's known that many people have dogs that look like them. So what you're saying is that maybe a dumb-looking dog can sell beer to dumb people. Not a bad theory. I might write a scholarly paper on that for some professional journal. Then I can go on Oprah's show and talk about it."

Fine, but what impact do you think this competing commercial will have — with the dancing monkey, elephant and lion as its "party animals?"

"I don't know about the elephant and lion, but the monkey will definitely sell beer."

Why the monkey?

"Because a lot of people subconsciously identify with monkeys."

Is that a scientifically proven fact?

"Sure, I said it, didn't I? You ever go to the zoo?"

On occasion.

"Then you've been to the monkey house?"

Yes.

"You ever stand there a while and look at what the monkeys do?"

I have.

"Then you know that monkeys are the creeps of the animal world. Talk about obscene gestures, disgraceful conduct, lewd behavior — there's nothing worse than a cap full of monkeys. If this guy Cagione from Penthouse Magazine ever reincarnated, it will be as a monkey."

Then why do you think a monkey as a "party animal" will sell beer?

"Have you ever seen a rock concert?"

A few, out of professional curiosity.

"Well?"

"Well, what?"

"Did you see the way the rock performers acted?"

Ah, you mean the leaping about, the shaking, wriggling, grabbing of crotches and other gestures?

"You got it. It's right out of the monkey cage, except the monkeys don't have guitars and amplifiers and they do a better job of picking up the fleas off each other. Other than that, they carry on pretty much the same, and their lyrics make about as much sense."

So you're saying that many of the young beer drinkers will subconsciously identify the monkey with one of his or her favorite rock performers.

"No doubt about it."

But if that's the idea, why didn't the beer company just hire a rock star to do the commercial?

"For one thing, a monkey works cheaper than a rock star."

That's true.

"Besides, a monkey or a rock star — how many people can tell the difference?"

Mike Royko's syndicated column appears on the Viewpoints page periodically.

WISHFUL THINKING IN THE MIDDLE EAST.

Chicago Tribune/Jeff Machley

The positive effects of civil disobedience

It has now been over a week since this year's CIA-Off-Campus protest took place. From listening to people talking about the rally and civil disobedience, it appears that many people took it to be just a joke. The most often heard opinion is that nothing was accomplished and that the members of New Wave, the Young Americans for Freedom and the Campus Review all looked like fools.

At this time it is impossible to say whether or not the CIA will be back, so the obvious question to ask is what results, if any, have these protests produced? To answer this question those who care should simply think back to three years ago, before the CIA protests began. Was the CIA and its covert action an issue then?

Today, as a result of the efforts of the CIA protests on campuses all over this country, the CIA is an issue. In history classes there is more discussion of the supposed necessity of covert action and the results of this U.S. action in third world countries. In newspapers, every week, there are articles and editorials that openly discuss the illegal actions of the CIA and the need to reform this agency. Most importantly, these protests have resulted in more people than ever thinking to themselves about the CIA. By forcing the CIA's covert actions into the spotlight, New Wave and similar groups have made the future leaders of this country, and those who will elect them, question the role of this previously unquestioned agency.

When I went to the CIA-Off-Campus rally on Dec. 6, I wasn't interested in only getting people to think about the CIA; I wanted this agency off campus, and I was willing to do whatever I could to achieve that goal. In this I failed, all thirteen interviews took place. But in forcing more and more people to look at and think about the role of the CIA, we who protested have won a major victory.

One can criticize the methods used by members of New Wave, but no one can deny that these methods have produced results, just as it took non-violent civil disobedience to end the Vietnam War and to achieve what civil rights legislation we have, and just as such civil disobedience is the minimum requirement for freedom of oppressed peoples all over the world.

And to the members of the Campus Review and the Young Americans for Freedom, who tried so diligently to mock and disrupt the New Wave protest, who tried to turn a serious matter into a joke, and who tried to keep the CIA issue from being raised at all: you failed. Someday you will learn that you can't silence the truth through mockery and avoiding the issue.

It is my deepest hope that the CIA never comes back to this campus until something is done to ensure that what the CIA has done in the past will never happen again. Unfortunately it is more likely that in the near future the CIA will be back, and nothing will be done to bring the agency under control. Should this happen, I will again join in attempts to stop the CIA from recruiting. But in the meantime: Do you know where your intelligence agency is?

Bill Barry, a sophomore majoring in biomedical engineering at the UI, submitted this guest opinion for the Viewpoints page.

Fear is the real enemy

To the Editor:

Of all the news concerning last Tuesday's CIA demonstration, something was missing. I would like to report on a positive occurrence that took place that day.

Shortly after confronting the counter-protesters with "you guys think this is funny, that people are being murdered, raped, etc. somewhere, don't you?", I found myself in the middle of about 100 people, in a sort of lop-sided debate. We were practicing democracy and education in action.

Some people were heckling me, some were asking dumb questions, some were debating and some were listening and learning also. I kept trying to find some common ground, trying to get at some common idea of right and wrong. People act like they still don't know it's wrong to enforce your will with violence and murder. The thing we seemed to share the most was some heavy fear stuff. From the farmer's daughter to the CIA employee's nephew, to the macho jock-types — everyone was afraid. What if the CIA wasn't keeping us safe, what if I don't get a job, we were afraid of each other, the world and its future.

It's hard to make all the connections for someone when they haven't done any homework or independent thinking and alternative reading. We talked of freedom. They were concerned about freedom to interview with whomever they pleased, while I'm trying to talk about someone's freedom to even exist in their homelands from El Salvador to South Africa. They talked about their "rights" to jobs, to interviews, while I'm talking of people's rights to basic human respect and consideration, the right to choose their own individual and national destinies. We were worlds apart at times, but instead of just increasing the polarities and the distance between us we worked for a while together.

Blatant errors

To the Editor:

The letter from William J. Daily Iowan, Dec. 7 (p. 10A) contains many blatant errors that stand uncorrected.
Mr. Blair sought to "point out a few things" that Paul "forgot" to put in his letter about Reagan's reaction to the hurricane-devastated Nicaragua.
First: La Prensa is not the only non-state newspaper. Nine years ago, 80 percent of the paper's staff were chief editors and owners of the right, beginning a pro-campaign for the Contras, accepting money from the government.

Second: La Prensa has not been "bombed or burned" — at least since 1979 when former-Somoza was run out of the country (Somoza assassinated by the CIA). Perhaps it had been bombed with the plan opposition paper La Tribuna which was bombed in June 1987.
Third: Nicaragua's army is not the "largest" in Central America. El Salvador and Guatemala both have larger armies than Nicaragua. The CIA has passed out over 200 million dollars to its citizens — some of it to the Salvadoran and Guatemalan governments have never done anything to help the obvious reason that the government used against them? One of the largest areas could consider the area could consider a highly-armed citizen militia.

Callous attitudes

To the Editor:

I am grieved by the callous attitudes of those who strongly support abortion. A recent article "Local activists work to keep Roe v. Wade," The Daily Iowan, Dec. 8) suggested that Roe v. Wade brought about 15 years of progress. Caring people must admit that killing 25 million innocent people can never be considered "progress."

These child killers try to appear conscientious by hiding behind their argument that legal abortions prevent unsafe abortions. They maintain that a person's right to life is not valid for all age groups. What they are really doing is using the front of free choice based on religious beliefs to facilitate their own convenience at the expense of taking innocent lives.

Let me draw a parallel. Right now, human sacrifice is illegal. Many Satanists, however, make the choice based on their religious values that they can ritually sacrifice people to Satan. Since this practice is illegal, they have to go to some backwoods area to exercise their choice.

If pro-child killing advocates are consistent, they should favor legalizing human sacrifice.

In closing, I would like to make this appeal to women. I don't direct it at men, because most of them would disregard it and settle for the status quo of sex without responsibility.

My appeal is simply this: Please wait until marriage to have sex. If your boyfriend won't wait, watch out! He doesn't love you. And if you get pregnant before marriage, he will more than likely leave you, forcing you into a vulnerable position where pressures can cloud your judgement regarding the killing of your own flesh and blood baby.

Blatant errors

To the Editor:

The letter from William Blair (The Daily Iowan, Dec. 7) contained many blatant errors that must not stand uncorrected.

Mr. Blair sought to "point out a few things" that Paul Dougan "forgot" to put in his editorial about Reagan's reaction to hurricane-devastated Nicaragua.

First: La Prensa is not "Nicaragua's only non-state run newspaper." Nine years ago, 80 percent of the paper's staff quit when the chief editors and owners moved to the right, beginning a propaganda campaign for the Contras and accepting money from the U.S. government.

Second: La Prensa has not been "bombed or burned" — at least not since 1979 when former-President Somoza was run out of the country. (Somoza assassinated La Prensa's editor in 1983.) Perhaps Mr. Blair had it confused with the Guatemalan opposition paper La Epoca, which was bombed in June 1988.

Third: Nicaragua's army is not "by far the largest" in Central America. El Salvador and Guatemala both have armies as large as Nicaragua's. Nicaragua has passed out over 200,000 rifles to its citizens — something the Salvadoran and Guatemalan governments have never done for their citizens. The obvious reason that the guns would be used against them! Only someone with out much knowledge of the area could consider such a lightly-armed citizen militia to be an "OFFENSIVE army."

Fourth: The Pope was not shabbily "received" in Nicaragua. After he told a group of mothers that he would not pray for the souls of their sons who had died fighting in the revolution, this "apolitical" Pope was heckled sporadically.

Fifth: while a "TOTALITARIAN government" does control every aspect of its subjects' lives, "Uncle Ortega does not control 'what painters paint, what poets write, (or) even what newspapers print.'" Seven political parties have seats in the National Assembly and hold rights guaranteed by a constitution that they helped draft in 1985.

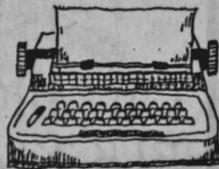

After three years in the U.S. Army, Mr. Blair should have a pretty good idea how a totalitarian institution operates.

In defense of Donald Trump

To the Editor:

Reading Steve Donoghue's editorial on Dec. 6 was irritating. To put it simply Mr. Donoghue, you are an idiot. If you knew anything about the man Mr. Trump is, you would know that he is a very selfless person and indeed does everything possible to help others.

Mr. Trump led a fundraiser that netted more than $100,000 for the Annabel Hill fund, which was used to pay off her mortgage and to save her farm that has been in her family for more than 60 years.

After the city of New York took more than five years and $13 million to do almost nothing to the Wollman Ice Skating Rink, Mr. Trump took it upon himself to finish it. He did it not because he could make a profit, but because he felt the people of New York were being cheated out of something they deserved.

He purchased the Commodore Hotel, which was losing millions of dollars a year and made it into a profitable investment as well as a beautiful place to stay instead of leaving the building to deteriorate and taking the neighborhood with it. Now, not only is the Commodore Hotel an exquisite place to stay, the neighborhood surrounding it is prospering.

I suggest to you, Mr. Donoghue, that you read the facts and stop jumping to foregone conclusions. Mr. Trump has done more for the city of New York than you could possibly know. In the process, I see no reason why he shouldn't make a profit out of it and to use that money for other investments like Trump Tower, which is now one of the biggest tourist attractions in the world. As for the other things Mr. Trump has done, I suggest you read a book on the subject. It may enlighten you.

The Joffrey's 'Nutcracker': Humorous and Human

By ANNA KISSELGOFF

"The Nutcracker," in the Joffrey Ballet's year-old heartwarming version, has alighted earlier than expected.

Tchaikovsky's music, it is true, needs no calendar. This production, which runs through Dec. 4 at the City Center, 131 West 55th Street, New York, is nonetheless a Christmas card of a ballet, expressly designed with holly and heart in mind.

The Americana-style décor, with its rocking horses and Victorian furniture, looks even cozier now in the intimacy of the City Center than it did at its East Coast premiere last year at the Opera House of the Kennedy Center in Washington. The Joffrey takes to the work like eggnog and stirs up a rollicking party atmosphere.

Eschewing the grandeur and sweep of the New York City Ballet's approach, this "Nutcracker" works on a human and humorous scale. Its family gathering may be set, by way of Oliver Smith's delightful period scenery and John David Ridge's costumes, in 19th-century America, but the tantrums and dreams portrayed are universal.

Friday night's Christmas party was dominated by Edward Stierle, whose performance as Fritz, the scion of the house, was nothing short of phenomenal. His boyishly expressive gestures, the bursts of energy in his dancing and his spirited acting all suggested not a young adult pretending to be a child, but a distillation of childhood emotions. Nowadays Fritz would be sent to a therapist, but his bulging and the breaking of his sister's nutcracker doll have the virtue here of setting the plot in motion.

"The Nutcracker" was the last ballet that Robert Joffrey, the troupe's founder, supervised before his death in March. His conception, staged by George Verdak and Scott Barnard with additional choreography by Gerald Arpino, the company's current artistic director, has more dramatic and visual consistency than is first apparent.

Look closely in the party scene in Act I and you will see that little Clara — admirably portrayed by Mary Barton — receives certain presents. These gifts subsequently come to life in Act II.

Some of the dolls are later symbolized by children in related costumes, who introduce the diversissements. A charming little gingerman ushers in the huge stork puppet called Mother Ginger; a child in a Chinese costume announces the adult Chinese couple who spout out of a teapot. The miniature castles have a dramatic point: later, during the swiftly paced battle scene, the mice are infidels, making their sortie from a Saracen tent while the toy soldiers are crusaders. Their turrets fly the American flag.

The deus ex machina is Drosselmeyer, acted with uninhibited power by the former Royal Ballet star Alexander Grant, who has come from Britain again to swirl his cape and throw stardust all over the stage. This is perhaps too flamboyant a magician for traditionalists. But in the America of P. T. Barnum, he looks right — the grand showman who finally rises into the (hot) air with Clara in a balloon gondola.

There is plenty of dancing. Drosselmeyer's nephew turns into the Nutcracker Prince and is the cavalier to the Sugar Plum Fairy in Act II; Glenn Edgerton was courtly and Tina LeBlanc was all lyrical purity (also strong in her diagonal of turtlenecks) in Friday's pas de

Vietnam returns U.S. MIA remains

BANGKOK, Thailand — Vietnam on Thursday gave a U.S. military team 38 sets of remains believed to be those of American servicemen, a U.S. spokesman said. It was the largest such repatriation since the Vietnam war ended.

In a 50-minute ceremony at Hanoi airport, a U.S. military honor guard loaded the remains, each in metal caskets draped with U.S. flags, onto an Air Force plane, said Lt. Col. Thomas Boyd of the U.S. Pacific Command.

He said the plane took off for Honolulu, where the Army Central Identification Laboratory will determine if the remains belong to any of the 1,747 Americans listed as missing in action in Vietnam.

Cruise missiles destroyed under treaty

TUCSON, Ariz. — The last of 43 ground-launched cruise missiles currently scheduled for destruction under the Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces Treaty was eliminated Thursday at Davis-Monthan Air Force Base.

Capt. Mark Besch, an Air Force spokesman, said the last missile and sixth and final transporter erector launcher slated to be cut in half occurred Thursday morning, with the inspection by a 13-member Soviet team officially over at 9:15 a.m.

He said the Soviets subsequently began writing their inspection reports and would return to Travis Air Force Base near San Francisco either Thursday night or Friday morning.

High winds strike California, kill 1

SAN FRANCISCO — Howling winds clocked at up to 102 mph battered Northern California on Thursday, claiming at least one life, overturning trucks, toppling trees and cutting power to more than 300,000 customers.

The winds littered scenic Northern California with downed power lines, branches and trash, and authorities closed dangerous highways and issued travel warnings.

The San Francisco Bay waterfront was ravaged by the winds, which tore yachts adrift, sank several and sent waves up to 10 feet high slamming into seawalls. A 60-foot floating dock at San Francisco's Pier 43 sank.

Bush nixes questions at photo sessions

WASHINGTON — An apparently exasperated George Bush told White House reporters Thursday they can be seen but not heard at picture-taking sessions after his inauguration.

The president-elect, fending off questions about his Cabinet vacancies, decried speculation about prospects in the news media and then declared what he called a "new policy in terms of the press."

Bush, like President Ronald Reagan, has been responding to a few questions from the small group of reporters that accompanies photographers and camera crews for "photo opportunities" at the start of White House meetings with visiting dignitaries or guests. The group is almost always escorted out after a minute or so.

Bush to name Kemp as HUD secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect George Bush will name one-time rival Rep. Jack Kemp of New York as secretary of housing and urban development, sources said Thursday.

Sources close to both Kemp and the vice president said Kemp had accepted the job after meeting with Bush on Wednesday and that the HUD announcement was likely to come Monday.

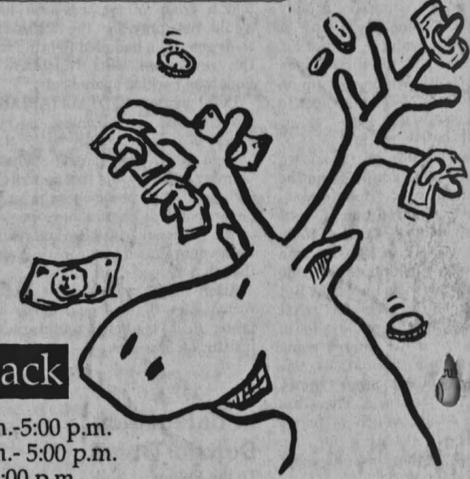

Kemp, 53, a former professional football quarterback who has championed conservative causes, campaigned for the Republican presidential nomination last winter. He was an original sponsor of the 1981 tax cut legislation later endorsed by President Ronald Reagan and is an ardent advocate of free enterprise and government deregulation.

Kemp has called for housing vouchers for the poor and allowing tenants of public housing to purchase their units at low cost as part of his urban redevelopment proposals.

Bush met privately with Dr. Louis Sullivan, a black medical school chief and contender for secretary of health and human services, and was on the verge of naming Samuel Skinner as secretary of transportation, according to the sources.

Cowboys will oust Eagles

Look at Philadelphia's situation this way: if the playoffs began this week, the Eagles would be a wild card team. But they can beat the Dallas Cowboys Sunday and they'll still be out of the playoffs.

Or look at it this way: Buddy Ryan, who the year he took over a moribund team, predicted it would win the NFC East (it finished fourth at 5-10-1) now says he wants to make the playoffs this year only to give the team experience for next. Does that mean he'll throw in the towel if he gets there?

He certainly won't throw in the towel Sunday when the Eagles have a chance for their first division title since 1980 and their first playoff berth since 1981.

But neither will the Cowboys, who having beaten the Washington Redskins, would like a little more momentum going into next season. They might have beaten the Eagles at Philadelphia, had Tom Landry not misjudged a yard-line and blown a chance for a field goal in what turned out to be a 24-23 loss.

The Eagles are two-point favorites, largely because they have incentive and the Cowboys have disincentive — a loss, coupled with a Green Bay victory at Phoenix, and Dallas gets Troy Aikman in the NFL draft.

Who needs Aikman?... Cowboys, 24-23.

Tom Brands, left, and Terry Brands match up during wrestling media day earlier this season. The identical twins from Sheldon, Iowa, have combined for a 22-2-1 record in their first year competing for the Hawkeyes.

Brands brothers share looks, intensity

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

It's hard to tell Iowa wrestlers Terry and Tom Brands apart.

The twins are physically out of the same mold, they both wear stocking caps and they only wrestle one weight class apart for Coach Dan Gable. Terry secured the spot at 118 pounds by topping veteran teammate Steve Martin, while Tom is the top wrestler at 126.

The first problem when the Brands boys are side-by-side is to try to figure out which is which. The solution: Talk to them.

"I want to go into history with an education major," Tom said. "My goal, right now, is to get a head-coaching job at a major university."

Sounds reasonable. Many athletes make that move.

"I want to coach somewhere down the line, too, but I don't want to go into education," Terry said. "I want to go into the D.E.A. (Drug Enforcement Agency), border patrol, something like that."

Wait a second. The reasoning behind this could be interesting.

"I watched Scarface (drug-underworld movie with Al Pacino) a couple of times," Terry said. "I'd like to pack a gun."

Neither of the twins from Sheldon, Iowa, needs anything but their ability on the mat, and they're proving it.

Both wrestlers have outstanding records, especially for redshirt freshmen. Terry is 11-1-0, with the only loss coming to Jack Griffin of Northwestern 9-6 at the Northern Open in Madison, Wis.

Tom is 11-1-1, losing at the same meet and tying defending national champion Jim Martin of Penn State, 3-3, on Dec. 2 at University Park, Pa.

"That proved something to me," Gable said of the tie. "In enemy territory, Tom can stand up with the best."

But often, it's Terry and Tom facing off against each other — off the mat.

"They started piling on each other when they were still crawling," Tom Brands Sr. said. "They are natural competitors. Do everything as well as you can, that's the bottom line."

Gable agrees.

"They have both stepped right in," Gable said. "That helps us at the beginning of a meet and builds momentum, but they still have a lot of proving time for the ol' coach."

It's not surprising that the Woman will sue Tyson for $1 million

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. (AP) — A Long Island woman charged Thursday that heavyweight champion Mike Tyson sexually molested her in a Manhattan disco last weekend.

The woman, Lori Davis, 29, of Bay Shore, N.Y., said she planned to sue Tyson for mental anguish and trauma. She is the second woman to charge that Tyson molested her.

Davis said she was dancing with a male partner at Bentley's Disco Lounge on East 40th Street in New York City around 2 a.m. Sunday when "Someone grabbed me under my dress.

"I turned around and screamed, 'try that again and I'll slap you,'" she said.

"Then it dawned on me that I was screaming at the heavyweight champion of the world," she said.

Tyson was in Los Angeles to announce his upcoming fight with Frank Bruno, which will be Feb. 25 in Las Vegas. He and his entourage had left their hotel Thursday evening and he could not be located for comment.

Tyson will receive $7 million for fighting Bruno, according to promoter Don King. Bruno will receive $3.6 million.

Davis said she was willing to put aside the incident, but decided to come forward when she read two days ago that another woman had charged Tyson with sexually molesting her at Bentley's on the same night.

Davis said Tyson was standing on the dance floor with two male companions when the incident occurred.

"He put his hands up in the air and said 'Whoa, whoa, we have a live one here,'" Davis said.

Tyson and his friends then moved to another area of the disco.

Asked if her male partner confronted Tyson on the dance floor, she replied: "No, the man had common sense."

Her attorney, Stuart Berg, said the lawsuit will seek $1 million in damages for "trauma, shock and mental anguish."

Berg said Davis is scheduled to be interviewed by detectives in Manhattan to determine if any criminal complaints should be filed.

"I am really angry and embarrassed at the whole thing," Davis said.

Murphy's big chance will come in Atlanta

(AP) — For Iowa kicker George Murphy, the Peach Bowl means going back to his Southern roots as well as a chance to prove himself one more time.

Murphy took over the Hawkeyes' placekicking duties from freshman Jeff Skilleit in the regular-season finale at Minnesota.

Skilleit set an Iowa freshman kick-scoring record with 64 points, but was inconsistent all year, hitting just 11 of 24 field goals. After he missed an extra point and a 43-yard field goal attempt in the Minnesota game, Coach Hayden Fry gave Murphy a chance and the junior from Greenwood, S.C., made the most of his opportunity.

Murphy kicked fourth-quarter field goals of 22 and 40 yards and added an extra point in Iowa's 31-22 victory. He had a third field goal negated because of a penalty.

"It felt like 10,000 pounds were taken from my shoulders," Murphy said of his chance to finally kick in a game. "A few things happened and I got my chance to go in and show them what I could do. "It's been real frustrating for me to sit and watch. I just waited for my chance to go out and prove myself."

Murphy's performance convinced Fry, who named him the kicker for the Dec. 31 bowl game in Atlanta against North Carolina State.

"Murphy earned it on the battlefield and we'll give him a chance in the Peach Bowl," Fry said.

Murphy, who used to kick barefoot but now keeps his shoe on, answers reporters' questions with a "yes, sir" and "no, sir."

Is he nervous about his first starting role?

"No sir," he says, noting his main worry is scrounging up enough tickets for his family and friends so they can attend the game, which is only 130 miles from his hometown.

"It couldn't have been better for me because I get to go home next to my home state," Murphy said. "This is the first time my family and friends will get to see my play. "My cousin has a band there, the Atlanta Underground, and I go and listen to them a lot."

George Murphy

Murphy has been at Iowa four years, and he admits it has been frustrating. First, he watched from the sidelines as Rob Houghtlin set the school scoring record. Then he was beaten out by Skilleit this season.

But he says he never got down on himself or thought about transferring.

"I just had faith in myself," he said. "There's been a lot of sweat and tears sitting on the bench. The only way to prove yourself is on the field. I don't want to sound cocky, but I feel confident in my ability."

Study: Steroid use is rising in high schools

CHICAGO (AP) — As many as half a million teen-age boys may be using anabolic steroids to improve their appearance or athletic performance, despite possible dangerous side effects, a researcher said Thursday.

"We're talking about potentially abusive behavior that has to be addressed directly, or we may have individuals who grow up and suffer adverse health consequences," said W.E. Buckley, assistant professor of health education at Pennsylvania State University.

In a survey of 3,403 senior boys at 46 public and private high schools nationwide in the fall of 1987, 226 boys, or 6.6 percent of those responding, said they had used steroids, Buckley and associates reported in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Although the research wasn't based on a random sample of the nation's high schools, the study suggested that 250,000 to 500,000 adolescents are using or have used steroids.

"I didn't have any idea it would be this high," Buckley said, calling his study the first of its scope in the nation.

Androgenic anabolic steroids are synthetic derivatives of male hormones some athletes take to help build up their muscles. Doctors have reported in recent years that steroids have been linked to serious side effects such as mood swings, severe acne, baldness, temporary sterility, abnormal liver function, high blood pressure, cardiovascular disease and possibly cancer of the liver and testicles.

While nearly half the boys in the study using steroids said they did so to improve athletic performance, 26.7 percent said they popped them or injected them for the muscular appearance the drugs can help produce.

"It's the new-age, body beautiful, fitness people out there as well who are using anabolic steroids," Buckley said in a telephone interview.

Pryor knocks out Morales

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Former junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor took the first step in his comeback bid with a third-round knockout of lightly regarded Herminio Morales Thursday night.

The knockout came 1 minute, 33 seconds into the round, when Pryor landed a left-right combination to the head that knocked Morales to the canvas.

Neither fighter landed any substantial blows in the first two rounds, but Morales managed to land more punches than Pryor. Pryor, 33, was considered one of the toughest fighters in the world in the early 1980s. He is trying to make a comeback after a two-year bout with cocaine addiction.

Thursday's knockout improved his record to 37-1. Morales, 26, of Chicago, has been knocked out in his last six fights and is 11-6-1.

Wilander will face Steeb in Davis Cup

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — Mats Wilander of Sweden, the world's top-ranked tennis player, on Thursday was drawn to face West German second-stringer Carl-Uwe Steeb in the opening match of the Davis Cup final.

Wimbledon champion Stefan Edberg, picked for singles and doubles, will play West Germany's top player Boris Becker in the second singles of the best-of-five match series Friday.

Edberg, who missed the final because of a foot injury last year when Sweden whipped India 5-0 here, will team with Anders Jarryd against Becker and Eric Jelen in Saturday's doubles.

Both captains, however, can change their teams up to one hour before the doubles begin.

Edberg was drawn to face Steeb first up in Sunday's reverse singles followed by Wilander against Becker.

The draw was held on center-court at the 12,000-seat Scandinavia Arena, where the matches will be played on a clay court.

Hans Olsson, who has captained the Swedish team to three Davis Cup victories since 1984, has always downplayed the importance of the draw and he did it again Thursday.

"The draw is not that important," Olsson said. "But I'm glad that Mats was drawn against Steeb in the first match."

"Mats should win his match and it will be good for Stefan to go in and play Becker after that."

Switzerland's Walliser wins Cup downhill

ALTENMARKT, Austria (AP) — Switzerland's Maria Walliser, a disappointing 11th at the season's opening race, showed world class form Thursday and won a downhill event that counted toward the season's first combined event for women.

"It was the moment I had to show that I still know how to ski," Walliser said after her 11th career World Cup downhill victory, "otherwise Christmas wouldn't have been all that quiet for me."

She had a winning time of one minute, 35.23 seconds, one tenth of a second faster than runner-up Veronika Wallinger of Austria. Third was favored Swiss veteran Michela Figini in 1:35.55 and fourth was another Austrian, Barbara Sadleir, in 1:36.22.

The combined is a paper race awarding extra points. It will be decided along with a special slalom to be staged on Friday.

California group bids for NHL team

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Prospects for a return of NHL hockey to the San Francisco Bay area have taken their biggest glide forward since the California Golden Seals flopped 13 seasons ago.

With words of encouragement from Los Angeles Kings owner Bruce McNall, a local group on Wednesday kicked off a campaign to land an expansion franchise.

The target date for NHL Hockey San Jose Inc. is 1992, when a downtown arena is scheduled to be finished and the league's Board of Governors may be ready to expand beyond the current 21 teams.

"San Jose is a very, very good candidate for expansion," McNall said via special telephone hookup at a press conference. Milwaukee, Dallas, Seattle, San Diego and Hamilton, Ontario, also are considered strong candidates, but he said San Jose may be the front-runner because of its future arena and strong population base.

"The Bay area is the largest market in the United States without a hockey team, and we want to correct that," said attorney James Hager, president of the group of hockey fans and business people.

The Golden Seals, who played in both Oakland and San Francisco, folded following the 1975-76 season due to heavy losses caused by lack of support. The Seals lost between $2 million and $3 million in their final season, when they had 2,500 season ticket-holders and averaged a franchise-high 6,900 fans a game.

Ailing Quebec coach resigns after win

QUEBEC (AP) — Michel Goulet, Peter Stastny and Paul Gillis scored during a four-minute span of the third period Thursday night as the Quebec Nordiques rallied and beat Montreal 6-4, ending the Canadiens' nine-game unbeaten streak.

Quebec Coach Ron Lapointe quit after the game. Dr. Pierre Beauchemin said Lapointe, 39, had a tumor on one of his kidneys.

"It's a day I'll never forget," said Lapointe, his voice choking with emotion as he appeared briefly to read a statement at a news conference. "I got a slap in the face in the morning and a win at night."

"Nothing is over, that's for sure. I really appreciate the support shown me by (team president) Marcel Aubut and (general manager) Martin Madden. I'll be ready for the playoffs, I'm convinced of that."

Madden said he would name a new coach on Friday. "We're all in a state of shock right now," Quebec forward Alain Cote said. "I don't have the words to describe it."

Twins

transition to major college wrestling has been smooth.

Last year, wrestling unattached, Terry compiled a 19-4 record, while Tom was 21-5 with three of those losses coming to fellow Hawkeye and national runner-up Joe Melchiorre.

There was a time when these two were among the many who watched Gable and Iowa wrestling from afar, however.

"At the 1986 nationals, I was looking through a pair of binoculars at Gable," Terry said. "He was about (40 feet) away from me and he turned and was looking right at me and I put them down real fast. He didn't seem human."

Gable wrestled more like a machine than a human at the prep and college levels, amassing an incredible 182-1 mark. But he does know people, especially wrestlers, and he has two potential greats in Terry and Tom Brands.

"They seem to have an intense drive," Gable said. "They seem to have continued a type of performance that is very good for the fans and the team to see."

Steroids

About 10 percent said they used steroids to treat sports-related injuries and 7.1 percent cited social reasons, such as peer pressure.

The study also showed that about one in five seniors claiming to take steroids said they got the drugs from a doctor, pharmacist or veterinarian, and 38.3 percent said they first took the drugs at age 15 or younger.

The study called for starting education to head off steroid use as early as junior high school, noting that 35 percent of those who said they used steroids did not participate in school sports.

Societal attitudes must be changed to get young people to avoid the quick-fix they think steroids can provide, Buckley said.

"You have to change the values. We're the ones putting all the emphasis on sports. We're the ones putting all the emphasis on appearance."

Focus on steroid use intensified after the Summer Olympics, where Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson was stripped of his gold medal in the 100-meter dash when it was determined he had used the anabolic steroid Stanozolol.

Miami beats Clippers for first win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Heat is off . . . and winning.

Just as the vise of the NBA record for consecutive losses in a season was tightening, Miami got a break and played what had heretofore been the worst team in the league, the Los Angeles Clippers.

The Heat won its first NBA game over Wednesday night, 89-88, trading 17 games worth of agony for at least one night of ecstasy.

"What a great feeling!" said Pat Cummings, 32, the oldest member of the expansion Heat.

"It's another step for this team," Cummings, a 10-year veteran who is with his fourth team, said in a locker room that wasn't as loud as it was cheerful. "We're a determined group of guys. We've played real hard all along and it's nice to finally come away with a big win like that."

So does that mean the Heat is on? "It feels like we can go on and win the next one," said Grant Long, who joined Cummings and Billy Thompson in scoring 15 points apiece.

"Our confidence level is high," Long said.

The Heat avoided by three games the record 20 straight losses by the Philadelphia 76ers during the 1972-73 season. But its 0-17 start stands as the longest NBA losing streak at the start of a season.

Yet six of those games were decided by six or fewer points, including an overtime loss to Golden State.

The all-time record for consecutive losses is 24 by Cleveland, which lost 19 during the 1981-82 season and five to start 1982-83.

"I'm just thrilled to finally get a win we deserved," Heat Coach Ron Rothstein said. "We've been in about six games this season that could have gone either way, and I thought at least three of those should have been ours."

"But this is great. I'm just sorry the first win didn't come for the fans in Miami. . . I'm happy for them as well as our players. But hey, this isn't the first game we've deserved to win."

Miami did, however, nearly blow a 12-point lead to the Clippers, who started the Heat's losing streak on opening night, 5½ weeks ago.

"Tonight, we slipped a little bit, but we held on," Kevin Edwards said. "We got some big shots from (Jon) Sundvold and Cummings down the stretch."

Sundvold scored 14 points and helped the Heat to its biggest lead, 72-60, by hitting four jumpers from about 19 feet in the last five minutes of the third quarter.

The Clippers, who had the NBA's worst record each of the last two seasons, got 23 points from Danny Manning, 21 from Quintin Dailey and 15 from Ken Norman. They led 25-23 at the end of the first quarter, but fell behind for good in the second period and trailed 53-44 at halftime.

Twice the Heat took three-point leads in the last two minutes, on Cummings' 21-footer from straight out and Rory Sparrow's 14-footer. Both times, Manning scored to cut the lead to one, the second time at 89-88.

Norm Nixon got the last shot for the Clippers, but missed from 19 feet.

"Contrary to popular belief, this is just one game," Nixon said. "In the scheme of things, it is one of 82 games."

Bruce considers CSU position

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Northern Iowa Coach Earle Bruce has interviewed for the head football coaching position at Colorado State, the Rocky Mountain News reported Thursday.

Sources close to the CSU athletic department confirmed that Bruce was interviewed Wednesday and that recently-fired Detroit Lions Coach Darryl Rogers was in Fort Collins for an interview on Monday.

Northern Iowa Athletic Director Bob Bowsby told the Cedar Rapids Gazette on Wednesday that Colorado State had not asked permission to talk to Bruce.

"I would be informed if a school sought permission to talk," Bowsby said. "Nothing has changed. He would have to contact me."

Bruce, the former head football coach at Ohio State, and Rogers are the third and fourth applicants to be interviewed for the job vacated by Leon Fuller, who resigned Nov. 28 after seven seasons with the Rams.

Fuller's offensive coordinator, Kay

Dalton, and defensive coordinator Harold Richardson were interviewed last weekend.

Bruce, 57, is head coach at Division I-AA Northern Iowa, where he compiled a 5-6 record this season after taking over in July. Bruce was 81-26-1 in nine seasons at Ohio State. He previously had a 36-32 record in five years at Iowa State and was 10-2 in one season at Tampa.

CSU athletic director Oval Jaynes said he hoped to name a new coach by the end of this week.

Holtz honored as nation's top coach

HOUSTON (AP) — Looking back over Notre Dame's undefeated season, Coach Lou Holtz accepted humbly the Bear Bryant Award as the nation's top college football coach.

The top-ranked Fighting Irish, 11-0, had some close calls this season.

"You look back and if Miami converts the two-point conversion and if the field goal goes through at Michigan, there were so many things," Holtz said Wednesday night. "So I accept this humbly."

Notre Dame beat Michigan 19-17 and edged second-ranked Miami 31-30.

Holtz, who won the award for the second time, beat out Miami's Jimmy Johnson, West Virginia's Don Nehlen and Southern California's Larry Smith for the award, presented by the Football Writers Association of America.

Holtz said he and his staff may have done a better job in 1985, Holtz's first at Notre Dame.

"I thought we did a good job our first year at Notre Dame when if it weren't for 14 points, we could have won 10 football games," Holtz said. "We were so close we had to get over that hurdle. "But coaching gives you a chance to win. The athletes have to win it for you."

The Fighting Irish have one game remaining, against No. 3 West Virginia in the Fiesta Bowl, before wrapping up a national title.

"This season has a chance to be special, but right now it's not. I can't put it any simpler," Holtz said.

Nehlen thinks the Mountaineers should be national champions if they beat the Irish.

Johnson said No. 2 Miami should get the nod if the Hurricanes beat Nebraska in the Orange Bowl and West Virginia beats Notre Dame.

Nehlen listened calmly and responded strongly.

"Our football team went through that schedule and never was tested," Nehlen said of his 11-0 Mountaineers. "We're number three and we're playing the team they (Miami) lost to and if we beat that team ... I love Jimmy, but he's full of it."

Holtz, also sitting on the panel, stayed out of the discussion.

"I haven't figured out who's number one anyway," he said. "I don't have to make the selection so I won't. I'm just worried about West Virginia."

Johnson's Hurricanes will play No. 6 Nebraska in the Orange Bowl and No. 5 Southern California will play Michigan in the Rose Bowl.

"When you're number two and the number one team loses, if that were to happen, normally number two moves up," Johnson said.

New York Giants front office denies rumors of Taylor trade

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The general manager of the New York Giants said Thursday that All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor's reported request to be traded was news to him.

"It's never been brought up to me," said George Young when asked about a published report that Taylor had told the NFL team he wants to play outside the New York area.

Newsday, quoting a pro football source, reported in Thursday's editions that Taylor is fed up with the mental and physical demands of playing with the Giants, and wants to end his career away from media glare in New York.

Taylor, who would not comment on the report Thursday, a day earlier spoke about having made a deal with Coach Bill Parcells, but never said the deal was.

Taylor said he and Parcells spoke earlier this season after the coach questioned Taylor's lack of enthusiasm when the linebacker returned from a 30-day suspension for violating the league's substance abuse policy.

"I just wasn't into it," Taylor said. "I just wasn't sure what I wanted to do. Bill and myself struck a little deal, and I guess I went out that day and played very well.

"I've been playing well since. Just as long as he keeps his part of the deal."

Parcells would not discuss his earlier conversation with Taylor.

"There is no Taylor issue," he said Thursday. "Whatever I say in a conversation with my players is private."

"Just because one guy makes up what he thinks is a story, I'm not going to comment on it. No one thinks that just because he draws a conclusion, it could be incorrect. I talk about the future with everyone of my players. I talk to them every year."

Gary Kovacs, Taylor's agent, would not comment until he spoke with Taylor.

People familiar with the situation around the league questioned whether Taylor, named to the Pro Bowl for the eighth time in eight years, could be easily accommodated if he desires to be traded.

As a two-time violator of the NFL's substance abuse policy, another offense would bar Taylor at least for a year.

He would also come with a pretty hefty price tag, $1.1 million next season, when he will be 30, old, and $1.21 in 1990, the contract's final year.

With that kind of baggage, might be hard finding a team interested in trading away a major draft choice which the Giants would certainly require.

Taylor has mentioned several times "since returning from suspension that he was not wanted to continue playing football."

Yet, he has apparently never told anyone close to him about leaving New York.

Steve Rosner, who represents Taylor for endorsements, said "That never came from Lawrence. I'm close to him and, he never told me of a desire to leave New York."

The Giants were 2-2 when Taylor returned for the fifth game of the season against Washington. He has been in the lineup ever since, recording 5½ sacks and forcing five fumbles.

The Giants are now 10-5, and victory Sunday over the New York Jets will give them the NFC East.

In his interview Wednesday, Taylor said that when the season is over, "certain things have to be done."

PARIS (AP) — A widow of the Louvre and its army-powered art experts in a legal battle over ownership of a 17th century painting sold for $1.4 million.

The Louvre bought "Olympos and Marsyas," the rustic scene of a 17th century landscape artist Poussin, for $366 in 1983.

But owner Suzanne Arroman, 78, won her fight in French courts and forced the Louvre to take it out of its return to her.

"My aunt was delighted," was very emotional because her husband was not there to witness the victory," said a niece who accompanied Suzanne Saint-Arroman to the auction.

The niece said Suzanne Arroman would not because her doctor advised days' rest after the excitement.

McLain receives five years probation

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Denny McLain walked out of a federal courtroom a free man Thursday after a judge sentenced the former Detroit Tigers star to time served and probation on racketeering and drug convictions.

McLain, major league baseball's last 30-game winner, pleaded guilty in October to avoid a retrial on the charges after an appeals court threw out his original conviction. He had already served 29 months of a 23-year sentence imposed by U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich.

On Thursday, the judge gave McLain a 12-year sentence, but ordered him released on five years probation because of the time he had spent in jail.

"I screwed up. I'm sorry," McLain told the judge during an emotional hearing that last 3½ hours.

"Whatever I did, I did. I've said I'm sorry and agreed to the plea agreement. I don't know what else to say," he added. "I can only live from day to day and do what's expected of me. That's what I'll do."

The two-time Cy Young Award winner hugged family members after Kovachevich announced her decision, saying she didn't think additional prison time was necessary.

"We're elated — it's an early Christmas present," McLain, accompanied by his wife and four children, said. "I had no idea what to expect. I'm just going to go home and try to get on with the rest of my life."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ernst Mueller appeared unhappy with the sentence, but said the judge "did what she felt was proper, and I have no quarrel with it."

McLain, 44, maintained his innocence throughout his trial, but pleaded guilty to racketeering and cocaine dealing on Oct. 18 under a plea bargain in which the government recommended the 12-year maximum.

During the emotional hearing, in which eight people testified on McLain's behalf, one of his two sons tearfully pleaded with the judge to spare his father from returning to prison.

"There's no reason to put him back," Timothy McLain said. "It would be a crime to send him back. He's a changed man."

His wife, Sharyn, echoed his sentiments.

"If he had not changed, if he was the same man he was when he went into prison, I wouldn't be standing here today," she told the judge. "You may have done us a big favor by taking him from us at the time you did."

McLain was convicted in March, 1985, and served 29 months before a ruling by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta freed him from the Federal Correctional Institution in Talladega, Ala.

"Not one shred of evidence had been produced to show that I was a danger to the community, yet she put me in jail," McLain recently wrote. "What she was doing was vengeance, plain and simple. She never had any intention of setting me free."

French widow beats Louvre to the tune of $1.4 million

PARIS (AP)—A widow has beaten the Louvre and its army of high-powered art experts in a 20-year legal battle over ownership of a 17th century painting that she has sold for $1.4 million.

The Louvre bought "Olympos and Marsyas," the rustic scene by 17th century landscape artist Nicolas Poussin, for $366 in 1968.

But owner Suzanne Saint-Arroman, 78, won her fight in the French courts and forced the gallery to take it out of storage and return it to her.

"Olympos and Marsyas" was sold Monday night at an auction house off the Champs-Elysees for the equivalent of $1.4 million.

"My aunt was delighted, but she was very emotional because her husband was not there to enjoy the victory," said a niece who accompanied Suzanne Saint-Arroman to the auction.

The niece said Suzanne Saint-Arroman would not comment because her doctor advised several days' rest after the excitement.

A Swiss man is the new owner of the painting. But he bid by telephone and did not wish to reveal his identity, according to Jacques Tajan, a spokesman for auctioneers Drouot-Montaigne.

The Poussin affair began in 1968 when Suzanne Saint-Arroman's husband, Jean, a mining engineer, decided to sell a family heirloom. He chose a dark, shadowy painting executed between 1625 and 1628 of scowling gods making music, surrounded by nymphs and a rosy-cheeked infant holding up a crown of flowers.

Jean Saint-Arroman consulted auctioneer Maurice Rheims, who studied the work with expert Robert Lebel. They attributed it to the Carracci School, a lesser known group of Bolognese artists.

The painting brought $366 at auction. But the Louvre — whose experts recognized it as a Poussin — took advantage of its right of "pre-emption" under French law to acquire the picture at the last bid price.

Shortly after, Le Monde newspaper reported the Louvre had made "a rare discovery ... akin to a shooting star" with the purchase of a Poussin for a scant sum.

The "shooting star" turned out to be Jean Saint-Arroman's painting, and he filed suit against the Louvre, the auctioneer and the expert.

The case has been in court ever since. In 1972, the auction sale was annulled by the Tribunal de Paris. The Louvre then took the painting down and put it in storage, where it has been ever since.

In 1984, Jean Saint-Arroman died and his widow continued the fight.

Three years later, after a series of appeals, a Versailles court handed down a final ruling ordering the Louvre to return the painting to Suzanne Saint-Arroman.

In a statement, the French judge said the Louvre did not have the right to use its vast resources, financed by the public, to cheat a private citizen.

"The Louvre has so many resources — experts, documents, high-tech equipment — which should all be in the service of individuals and not used to make a profit at their expense," Tajan said in an interview.

But he said he considered the painting "hardly a masterpiece."

The good, the bad and the ugly of Hollywood '88 come to haunt

By Locke Peterseim The Daily Iowan

1988 in film. It was the best of years, it was the worst of years. It was the year that "The Last Temptation of Christ" didn't make it to Iowa City but "Rattle and Hum" did — Falwell fans basked in the glow of their own self-righteousness, and U2 fans basked in the glow of the Bono-Christ.

It was the year that Charles Grodin, Jeff Bridges and Jessica Lange — the stars of 1976's "King Kong" — achieved long-deserved successes in "Midnight Run," "Tucker" and "Everybody's All-American."

It was the year that Roger Rabbit proved that blubbering, whining and smoothly interacting with live humans can make you rich. Of course, Meryl Streep had known that for years.

It was the year that that shameless ego-creature Ted Turner continued his crayola-ization of everything in sight and announced his plans to produce an epic film chronicling the life of his newest buddy and fellow greedmonger Donald "Stinky" Trump.

It was the year Eddie Murphy and his Hollywood "Black Pack" proved, with films like "Raw" and "Coming to America," that black actors can be just as infuriatingly sexist, homophobic, greedy and devoid of worth as white actors.

It was the year the long-awaited "E.T." was released on videocassette, but then again so were the long-awaited "Sorority Babes at the Slimeball Bowl-o-rama," "Surf Nazis Must Die" and "Assault of the Killer Bimbos."

However, cinematically it was not slimy, shady or otherwise lacking any merit whatsoever in 1988. There were a few decent films shown in Iowa City theaters in the past year.

Here then, to counter the wild accusations that I never like anything, are my 10 favorite films of the year. (Key in on the "my" in the preceding sentence, folks — I plan to do a little resting and relaxing for the next three weeks, and I don't need some indignant chowder-head calling me at 9 a.m. on New Year's to tell me how "Hope and Glory" was much superior to "Empire of the Sun" or that "Who Framed Roger Rabbit" was the greatest film ever.)

10) "Empire of the Sun" — "Jim! try not to think so much!"

9) "The Accused" — Contains the single most shattering powerful scene committed to celluloid in 1988.

8) "Bull Durham" — Summer fun with the sexual metaphysics of the sandlot. Unfortunately it's kicked off a flurry of baseball filmmaking that probably won't let up until the late '90s.

7) "Die Hard" — Warmly humorous, but at the same time powerfully moving.

6) "The Man of Spring" — I didn't actually see it, but everyone says it's really good, and it helps to have at least one French film on these lists.

5) "Matewan" — Though his vision blurred later in "Eight Men Out," John Sayles was dead-on with a beautiful harshness in this drama of union violence and human tenacity.

4) "My Life as a Dog" — No, it's not the life story of Steve Donoghue.

3) "The Moderns" — Hemingway: "Paris is a . . . portable banquet."

2) "Broadcast News" — Network Head: "It must be tough always being right." Jane: "Yes, it is."

1) "A Fish Called Wanda" — Otto: "Apes don't read philosophy." Wanda: "Yes they do, Otto. They just don't understand it."

Spirit of 'Bill' recalled fondly

Cigale Ahlquist Special to The Daily Iowan

The simple furnishings in the sun-lit room lend a homey atmosphere to the former classroom on the third floor of North Hall.

Several students pop in for bagels and coffee. A middle-aged man sits at a table reading a newspaper. A quiet conversation can be heard from a corner booth.

This is Wild Bill's Coffee Shop. Behind its unobtrusive atmosphere lies a rich history — the history of Bill Sackter.

Bill worked at the coffee shop for eight years. He was retarded and couldn't count change, but he was a friend to many.

"There was something in his personality that people enjoyed being around him," Tom Walz, a professor in the UI School of Social Work, recalls. "And he enjoyed being with people."

Bill was born in Minneapolis to Russian-Jewish immigrants. His father died when he was young. His mother, who ran a small storefront grocery and was raising two daughters, was unable to care for the mildly retarded boy, so he was eventually placed in a state institution, where he spent 44 years of his life.

Bill moved to Iowa City in 1975 when he was 62 years old. Soon after, he began working in the North Hall coffee shop.

Walz, the faculty adviser for the coffee shop, describes Bill as having "a quality of innocence, almost child-like."

"He was very much an adult," Walz said recently. "But he had this innocence — there was no anger, no hatred, no envy, no jealousy. He was very happy. He had a great love for life, for children, for people."

Leslie O'Leary, a 34-year-old Iowa City woman who has worked at the coffee shop the past three years, met Bill through Independent Living, a program that teaches handicapped people independent living skills.

"He honestly thought everyone should love everybody, and if they didn't, he made it a point to try to help them."

Bill lived for eight years at an Iowa City boarding home run by Mae Driscoll, now 87.

"He was the best man I ever knew," she remembers. "He was so kind and never complained. That's unusual when you think about where he came from and how he was treated."

Driscoll recalls Bill's special affection for children.

"He just loved kids," she said. "He'd sit out on the porch and play his harmonica, and all the kids in the neighborhood would come and listen. . . . He played Santa around here for as long as he lived here."

"He was deeply religious," Driscoll added, growing more serious. "He was Jewish, you know, but it didn't matter to him what church he went to. He expected the Lord would always take care of him."

His life has been portrayed in two made-for-TV movies and is the focus of a book to be published in October 1989.

The films, "Bill" and "Bill: On His Own," starred Mickey Rooney as Bill and Dennis Quaid as Bill's guardian, Barry Morrow. A documentary of Bill produced by Morrow, then an audiovisual specialist at the UI School of Social Work, prompted the Hollywood films.

Rooney later earned an Emmy and Golden Globe Award for his role in "Bill," which premiered at Hancher Auditorium in December 1981.

The book, by Jim Dooley of Iowa City, will include much of Bill's early life in Minnesota. "I've been dealing with people in Minneapolis and Faribault (site of the Minnesota State Hospital)," Dooley said. "I have also been talking to members of the Jewish community in Minneapolis to see what kind of an education would have been available to him."

Bill died in 1983 and is buried in a local cemetery.

Morrow remembered Bill at his funeral thusly: "He was a single-minded man with a single-minded dream. That was to bring as much joy to everyone he met as he could."

Memories of Bill still remain at the coffee shop that bears his name, where one wall is devoted to newspaper clips and other mementos of his life.

1988: The year that pop music was rediscovered, so to speak

By Brian Jones
The Daily Iowan

A year ago, this list would have been little more than a token gift placed at the feet of noise-scuzz rock. But Big Black broke up, and what's left looks like little more than a facile reaction against the '70s hard rock moves that I'll bet clutter just about every noise band's nightmares.

So, 1988 meant rediscovering the relatively simple pleasures of pop music in all its forms, from Brian Wilson's flawed-but-moving solo album to the pop-as-atmosphere of England's Creation or Sarah labels. So then, 1988 — the year that was, sort of. Let's get categorical.

RECORDS OF THE YEAR: Dreck is still dreck, but mediocre records look better in any year whose great records can be counted on one hand. In no particular order, with comments where appropriate.

Feelies — "Only Life"; Sonic Youth — "Daydream Nation" (pop deconstruction motivated by sprawling noise); Game Theory — "2 Steps From the Middle Ages"; Big Dipper — "Craps"; Died Pretty — "Lost" (mannered, orchestral Australian rock not unlike the Doors, but far less stupid); Die Kreuzen — "Century Days" (vicious guitar-heavy sludge with the brain of a rhino and the body of a jaguar); Chills — "Brave Words"

(vague and understated New Zealand pop with an uncanny knack for textural beauty); Jean-Paul Satre Experience — "Love Songs"; Happy Hate Me Nots — "Out"; Pontiac Brothers — "Johnson" (the best Rolling Stones record this decade); Lyle Lovett — "Pontiac"; Eleventh Dream Day — "Prairie School Freakout"; Bird Nest Roys — "Bird Nest Roys"; Band of Susans — "Hope Against Hope" (Sonic Youth without the excess, with added clang); Choo Choo Train — "Briar Rose"; Grant Hart — "2541."

SONGS OF THE YEAR: Dinosaur Jr. — "Freak Scene"; Die Kreuzen — "Elizabeth"; Choo Choo Train — "Briar Rose"; Dangtrippers — "Cult Pop Guru"; Grant Hart — "2541"; House of Love — "Christine"; Membranes — "Tatty Seaside Town"; Biff Bang Pow — "Miss California Toothpaste 1972"; Mighty Mofos — "Mindreader"; Lyres — "Try You Anyway"; Cheap Trick — "The Flame."

BEST RAP RECORD: In a genre increasingly fragmented into social awareness ("Night of the Living Baseheads") versus everything else, Public Enemy's "It Takes a Nation of Millions to Hold Us Back" combines sonic whomp with an incredible, muddle-headed anger masquerading as radical politics to create a dizzying sound document. Chances are I'll play this once a year, but for sheer power and ability to rankle, nothing tops this.

BEST DANCE SINGLE/REMIX: I don't care.

TIGHTEST DOWNWARD SPIRAL: REM, who on "Green," managed to become .38 Special.

BITCHY U2 COMMENT: "Rattle and Hum" reaffirms the truth that you can lead a band to America, but you can't make them think. Bono searches for his vision of America (in Graceland and in Sun Studios; with B.B. King as spiritual guide), finds it and just doesn't get it. What should have removed them from the pedestal they so self-consciously leapt onto only served to make them seem even more self-reflexive and generally annoying in their calculated grimness.

LOCAL STUFF: 1988 was a good year for Iowa City and Iowa bands. Full Fathom Five released a very good 12-inch EP and have a new LP coming out very soon. Iowa Beef Experience's "Cool Ass Gravytrain" is among the best of the noise-for-its-own-sake records released this year, but it's only available on import. Horny Genius released their debut 7-inch to generally favorable press. Local bands continued to multiply. The Dangtrippers recorded a wonderful LP, which should be out soon, as did the Hollowmen.

T.G.I.F.

At the Bijou

Friday — "The Bicycle Thief" (1948) — This is the story of an impoverished Roman laborer, his son and the bicycle that is essential to their identities. In Italian, with English subtitles. 7 p.m.

"The Women" (1939) — Rosalind Russell, Joan Crawford, Joan Fontaine, Paulette Godard and Hedda Hopper star in this all-female screwball comedy. 8:45 p.m.

Saturday — "It's a Wonderful Life" (1946) — Frank Capra's perennial Yuletide favorite — I'm quoting strictly from the Bijou calendar here — features Jimmy Stewart as a small-town businessman who MAKES A DIFFERENCE. 7 p.m. Sunday at 9 p.m.

"The Wages of Fear" (1952) — Four men, desperate to get out of a small, gritty South American town, agree to drive trucks filled with nitro across the country. In French, with English subtitles. Sunday at 6:30 p.m.

W.C. Fields

Television

Friday — "Doctor Who — The Horns of Nimon" — The Nimon, a terrifying figure not unlike the mythical Minotaur virtually none of you knows anything about, dominates this adventure (10 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Saturday — "The Spencer Area Presents 'The Messiah'" — Residents of the Spencer, Iowa, area perform music from Handel's sacred oratorio while wearing clod-buster boots and John Deere caps (9 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Sunday — "W.C. Fields Straight Up" — This program traces the life and career of W.C. Fields through film clips, newsreel footage, home movies and interviews (11 p.m.; IPTV 12).

Art

Ruth Johnson's art will be displayed on both floors of The Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 124 E. Washington St., through Jan. 11.

"The Avant-Garde and the Text," an exhibit that examines the social and aesthetic impetus behind the textual works of the early 20th century avant-garde, is featured in the UI Museum of Art through Dec. 27.

"The Essential Gourd" features gourds made by more than 25 ethnic groups from the Benue River valley of northern Nigeria and is on display in the UI Museum of Art through Dec. 27.

Nightlife

Friday — Divin' Duck plays at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Saturday — House of Large Sizes and The Services play at Gabe's.

Champagne corks compact space with tossed mortar and confetti Sunday at commencement in Hawkeye Arena.

Graduates walked between rows of potted poinsettias and administrators on the Carver stage Sunday to shake the hand of UI President Hunter Raw Duane Spriestersbach, president for Educational and Research.

"He said, 'Way to go, Barrett said, recounting with Rawlings. 'We figured was alternating 'Way to go, Congratulations.'"

Champagne corks arch the ceiling at points of 2 1/2-hour ceremony. The which filled approximately third of the arena, applied best shots.

The UI awarded approximately 1,115 undergraduate degrees, 685 graduate degrees, but total number of UI graduates more than 204,600 since university's founding in 1847.

UI officials estimated students attended the ceremony Sunday. The graduates occupied four fold-out chairs on the protected basketball court.

A crowd of nursing students gold confetti when they vied for degrees. They settled on their Oxford further decorating already boasting the left spelled out in tape to newly bestowed degrees.
