Local insurance agents oppose unisex rate plan

By Paige Bierma
The Daily Iowan

Local insurance salespersons are opposed to legislation that would ban sex discrimination in insurance rates, a bill that will soon be introduced to the Iowa Legislature by State Representative Minnette Doderer, D-Iowa City.

"Women will end up getting penalized more than the males (if the legislation is passed)," said Ron Cochran, from RJJR Enterprises Inc. Insurances and Bonds, 210 Kirkwood Ave.

The controversial bill would prohibit insurance companies from basing rates of policies such as health, life and auto insurance on gender. Women currently pay proportionately higher rates for health and life insurance, while younger women (ages 16-24) pay less for auto insurance, Doderer said.

"Insurance rates should be based on risk factors other than a person's gender," said Doderer, chairwoman of the House Small Business and Commerce Committee that supervises all insurance bills.

"Women should pay the same as everyone else for insurance, just as they pay the same for credit and shoes and everything," Doderer said.

But the Iowa insurance industry on the whole is opposed to the legislation and is beginning to lobby against it, according to a recent Des Moines Register article. Cochran said the reason health insurance rates for women are

Trend toward social awareness piques interest in UI program

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Graduate social work programs across the country are maintaining strict admissions caps, despite growing interest in the field.

Many private and public institutions, including Michigan, Texas and Washington universities, reported substantial increases in applications to graduate social work schools for the past two years.

Despite this growing interest, most schools have held their enrollments steady, according to the Jan. 4 Chronicle of Higher Education.

Administrators at the UI School of Social Work also noticed a similar trend during 1987 and 1988 as the number of applications increased while enrollment numbers held steady.

"Our applications have been increasing at the same time we have been trying to cut back on enrollment," said Catherine Alter, UI School of Social Work director.

The UI school admits approximately 100 full-time and 100 part-time graduate students each year, Alter said.

Beginning with the 1981 recession, the UI budgeted less money to most departments, including social work. Fewer classes were offered, and smaller numbers of students allowed into the social-work program after instructors were laid off, she said.

Alter attributed the increased interest in the field to the rising nationwide awareness of substance abuse, child abuse and homelessness.

Many applicants are non-traditional students with volunteer or paid working experience in social service work, she said. The majority have diverse professional backgrounds, ranging from business and journalism to ministry

Facing execution, Bundy offers confession to 9 murders

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — A tearful Ted Bundy, moving ever closer to the electric chair Sunday, tried to head off execution by at last confessing to some of the dozens of murders he is suspected of committing, authorities said.

Bundy, 42, will die at 7 a.m. Tuesday unless the U.S. Supreme Court stays the execution. The court denied a Bundy appeal just a week ago, as have all other courts he has turned to since Thursday.

Anthony Kennedy, who favors the death penalty, is the Supreme Court justice assigned to consider last-minute Florida death appeals. One justice may stay an execution pending review by the full court.

In talks with authorities over the weekend, Bundy, who grew up in Tacoma, Wash., confessed to killing at least eight young women in that state in 1974, said investigator Robert Keppel of the Washington attorney general's office.

Bundy also confessed to the 1975 slaying of Julie Cunningham, 26, a Vail, Colo., ski shop employee whose body was never found, said Vail Police Chief Ken Hughey.

Hughey said Bundy is convinced that the only way he will get to heaven is to confess.

"He's attempting to purge himself," said Colorado Attorney General Duane Woodard. "It is part of his repenting."

"The man is trying to save his life," Keppel told KIRO-TV of Seattle in a telephone interview Saturday night from Florida. He added that Bundy was shaken and tearful as he responded to questions from investigators.

Bundy had not previously admitted to any slayings.

"Bundy is welcome to talk all he wants, but he better say it by Tuesday morning," said John Peck, press secretary to Florida Gov. Bob Martinez.

Bundy, scheduled to die for the 1978 kidnapping-murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Leach of Lake City, Fla., at one time was linked to as many as 36 killings and disappearances of young women in Washington, Colorado, Utah and other Western states.

The law school dropout was visited Saturday by officials from Washington state and Colorado, said Paul Decker, assistant superintendent of Florida State Prison near this north-central Florida town, where Bundy is held.

Bundy's lawyers lost two more bids for a stay of execution Saturday. U.S. District Judge G. Kendall Sharp refused to issue a stay, and then a three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta denied Bundy's appeal.

Last week Bundy offered to trade information about other slayings for a delay in his execution, but Martinez, who signed Bundy's fourth death warrant Tuesday, said he would not "negotiate with a killer."

Diana Weiner, a Sarasota attorney who has represented Bundy in some civil matters, asked Washington state Attorney General Ken Eikenberry to request that Florida's governor delay the execution.

"I am not going to do it," Eikenberry said.

Fire destroys shed, vacant farmhouse

Buildings' owner suspects blaze was work of arsonists

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

An abandoned house and machine shed located just north of Iowa City on Highway 218 burned in a spectacular late-afternoon blaze Sunday, and the owner thinks it was the work of arsonists.

"There's nothing left — it's all gone," said owner Art Colony, as he watched firefighters from Tiffin, North Liberty and Coralville douse the smoldering ashes that remained of the structures.

The burned buildings were part of an old farm site in Clear Creek Township that has not been used for years. Colony said the blaze was likely the work of arsonists because there was nothing in the house or shed that would have spontaneously combusted or caught fire quickly.

"Somebody had to have torched it. There's always kids running around," he said. "It had some sentimental value, but it's no big deal."

Colony said he was leaving his father's Coralville home Sunday when he saw clouds of billowing black smoke in the distance. He was immediately suspicious of the smoke's apparent location.

"I was pulling out of the driveway of my father's home and I seen some smoke in a familiar location. Then I came here and they said

UI pharmacist receives Taiwan alumnus award

Ting-Fong Chin, UI professor of pharmacy, has received a Distinguished Alumnus Award from the National Defense Medical School in Taipei, Taiwan.

Chin was invited by the Taiwan school and Taiwan's Food and Drug Administration to give a two-day seminar on his research involving the development and manufacture of anti-cancer and anti-AIDS drugs.

"The officials of the school obviously had planned this award months in advance and caught me completely off guard when they presented it to me. I was very surprised and honored," Chin said. "It really makes me feel that I have made a significant contribution in my field."

Chin received his undergraduate degree in pharmacy from the school in 1951.

Chin also was asked to participate in a round table discussion concerning optimum manufacturing practice at the Food and Drug Administration of Taiwan's National Health Department.

Chin came to the UI College of Pharmacy as a graduate student in 1958. He received a doctorate in pharmacy in 1962 and has worked in the pharmaceutical services division of the UI Pharmacy College since 1963.

City finalizes the fine print for 6 new low-income units

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

A low-income housing project is expected to provide six new Iowa City houses priced in the $50,000 to $55,000 range as one of the few lower-priced new-home areas in Iowa City, according to the Iowa City Department of Planning and Program Development.

Although final details have not been ironed out, Don Schmeiser, department director, said the department plans to market the idea to prospective builders and request their bids for the project.

The selected builder will work on the First Avenue Project, so-called for its location at First Avenue and J Street on Iowa City's East Side.

The tentative plans allow buyers to have a say in where the houses are to be constructed and located on the land plot, Schmeiser said.

The city plans to work with local lenders to prepare a financial package to potential buyers. But it is crucial the package is one that will be suitable for the type of buyers the First Avenue Project wishes to attract, said the project's coordinator, Associate Planner Mary Nugent.

"We do want to target a population with incomes at least below $25,000," Nugent said.

After the project staff receives input from local lenders and representatives from the Home Builders Association, with whom contact has already been made, they plan to develop criteria to use in selecting buyers.

Once selected, buyers would find a loan independent of the builders and the city for the purchase of the home and land, Schmeiser said.

Nugent said the department has not been able to fix a definite time schedule for completion at this point, but the tentative implementation date for the program is Dec. 30, 1989. She said this may be fairly optimistic.

Some work has already begun on the project. Surveying of the city-owned land has been started, Schmeiser said.

The fact that the city owns the land makes it more feasible to market the project, he said. It is sometimes a problem if a building contractor must first purchase land privately — the company would then have to pass the cost on to the future home-owner.

Warm winter may not mean another drought, experts say

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa's unusually dry and snow-free winter has raised fears that last year's drought will return with a vengeance this year, but weather experts say there's still time for Mother Nature to turn things around.

"I think it's a little early for anybody to be crying wolf," said Al Perkins, a meteorologist for Freese-Notis Weather Inc., of Des Moines.

But it's not too early to worry. "It's really got people spooked," said Don Gilman, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service headquarters in Washington, D.C.

The dry and warm winter would normally have Iowans thankful for low heating bills and no snow to shovel, but on the heels of the 1988 drought, the unusual weather has caused concern instead.

Last year, the state rainfall average of 21.64 inches was more than 11 inches short of the average. Even so, the amount of precipitation since last August has been only one-half inch shy of normal. From November until last week, the state had received more precipitation than normal.

What is missing is snow and cold. Iowa averaged 1.3 inches of snow in December, compared to the 6.6-inch normal. In January, the state has averaged a half-inch of snow, compared to the average 7.4 inches, and temperatures are 8.6 degrees above normal.

Crop experts say the lack of snow hasn't hurt very much so far.

Gary Benson, an Iowa State University agronomist, said the latest soil survey in November showed that a quarter of the state — concentrated in southeast, southwest and east-central Iowa — has less than 4 inches of moisture available in the top 4 feet of soil, well below the normal amount of 8 to 9 inches.

Business College tops charts

UI keeps the Ivy League company on national report

By Troy Stanton
The Daily Iowan

The UI's Business College ranks 13th in the nation, according to a recent study that George Daly, dean of the College of Business Administration, called one of the few objective reports to rate schools.

"We've always known that we've been a pretty strong college," he said. "And this report just validates it."

The 10-year study conducted by Albert Niemi, dean of the College of Business Administration at the University of Georgia, ranked the colleges by the output of faculty research at each school, rather than by public opinion survey results.

This ranking method produced a more objective list of top schools, Niemi said in The Review of Business and Economic Research.

"Opinion surveys are particularly weak," Niemi said. "Respondents are motivated by loyalty to their alma maters, personal experience and relationships, general impressions about the overall quality of an academic institution and other such factors."

Daly agreed. "Opinion polls tend to be very subjective," he said. "We're not in New York or Chicago. . . . We're in Iowa, so to see this report was good."

Niemi hypothesized that universities whose faculty members were the most industrious researchers would also provide the highest quality of instruction.

Between 1975 and 1985, UI Business College faculty averaged 33 pages of published research per year.

In the study all figures were shown as proportional to faculty sizes. This adjustment may have helped the UI attain the top 20 ranking, said Ron Mustaine, assistant dean for operation in the College of Business Administration. "We're small compared to other Big Ten schools," Mustaine said.

Stanford and Purdue claimed the top two spots, respectively, while schools such as Duke, Dartmouth and Yale all ranked below Iowa. Daly said it was good to finally see the UI listed with the traditionally top-notch schools.

"What really pleased me was the company we're in," he said. "It's not just some crazy list of schools."

The study also ranked specific areas, such as management and marketing. The UI's Accounting Department was ranked second and its Real Estate and Insurance departments 19th.

The only criticism Daly did have of the study was the exclusion of economics departments, a factor that would have put the UI up even higher on the list.

"They didn't include economics, which had they done that, we clearly would have been rated much higher," he said.

The UI's Business School has gradually improved since 1985, Daly said, and is seen as a growing college with highly qualified instructors.

"I think this is an attractive place, and they have a substantial sense that something is going on here," he said. "We're on a roll."

The future of the Business College is bright, Daly said, thanks in part to the recommendation for a new business facility included in Gov. Terry Branstad's budget proposal.

Daly told The DI in September that since a new building was promised in 1983, "it has been an integral part of our recruiting strategy."

But chances for a new building are "really up in the air," he said. "Right now we don't have a single appropriate classroom."

Sci fi fans beam over to ICON

By Julie Creswell
Special to The Daily Iowan

Over 380 science fiction enthusiasts converged on Coralville this weekend for ICON XIII, the Iowa City area's annual science fiction and fantasy convention.

The convention has been held during 13 of the last 14 years, beginning in 1975 when ICON was formed as an offshoot of UI Writers' Workshop graduate Joe Haldeman's workshop class.

"This is the best turnout we've ever had," said Brandon Ray, the co-chairman of this year's convention.

"We've never really figured out why people come each year, but we're glad that they do," he said. "We're a non-profit organization that goes from year to year. This year we've definitely made our budget."

Haldeman, a Nebula and Hugo award-winning author who returned to the convention this year, said he was also surprised by the large crowd for this year's event.

"In fact, I'm surprised it's survived," Haldeman said. "Usually, when an organization like this is started by a writer who then leaves, it doesn't survive."

Haldeman said the Iowa City atmosphere is part of the reason for the group's success.

"Partly it's the Iowa City spirit," he said. "Lots of the original people who organized the club are still around."

Haldeman is currently occupied with the release of a new book, "Buying Time." But he said he still tries to attend as many conventions as he can during the year.

"I like to meet my readers socially," Haldeman said. "One of the delights of being a science fiction author is that your readership tends to be well-read."

Artist Darleen P. Coltrain, a guest of honor at this year's convention, said she also likes to meet her audience on a one-to-one basis.

"I do art shows and conventions to get input on my art," she said.

Her drawings and paintings lean more toward fantasy than science fiction.

"Science fiction is to me a speculative look at what could be to things that are," she said. "You fantasize what might be. . . . I see fantasy as kittens dancing on a fence or polar bears as clouds over Iowa. Fantasy is a very broad thing that we don't always realize is there."

Even though many who attended the convention came simply to enjoy themselves, Minneapolis author Joel Rosenberg said science fiction books and authors serve an even bigger purpose than pleasure.

"Without science fiction authors and books, there would not be a space shuttle program," he said. "The engineers and pilots got turned on to space by writers such as Arthur C. Clarke."

Ray said Clarke originated the idea of the geosynchronous orbit that many satellites are in today.

"If Clarke had patented it, he'd be a millionaire," Ray said.

Buyers find farmland is scarce

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Realtors report increased demand for farmland in Nebraska and Iowa, but they say buyers are most interested in high-quality land that is already in short supply.

"There's been a tremendous selling of land in the past couple of years, so there isn't that much land left to sell," said Bill Harris, president of Ag-Land Realty in Lincoln, Neb.

Les Mealiff, president of the Iowa chapter of the Realtors Land Institute, said high-priced land is particularly scarce.

"People won't buy just any piece of land now. They want the good stuff, and there's not much of it around anymore," said Mealiff, a real estate man from West Des Moines.

Dry-land prices in Nebraska and Iowa peaked at more than $2,000 an acre in 1981, and then tumbled to less than $800 five years later.

100 rush Union, UI fraternities

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Informal Rush Night, sponsored by the UI Interfraternity Council, drew almost 100 men to the Union Ballroom Wednesday night.

Morgan Sackett, IFC rush director, said 24 of the 25 men's social fraternities at the UI had information tables at the Union from 6 p.m. to 7 p.m., and most of those chapters held open houses and tours from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Sackett said Wednesday marked the first time IFC has attempted to coordinate an informal rush event.

"Overall, it went pretty well," Sackett said. "We had about 85 or 90 people show up at the Union and some more that just went through the house tours.

"There were some things that we found we needed to do a little differently, and there's some things we can add to build upon this in the next couple of years, but we are very satisfied with the turnout," he said.

Sackett said the event was designed as a cost-effective means to help the UI's fraternities with spring informal rush, as well as a convenient way for interested men to get information about all of the UI's fraternities in one evening.

Sackett said three members from each chapter were available at the information tables to meet the rushees and answer any questions they might have. Afterward, IFC provided transportation so rushees could tour the houses of their choice, meet more of the members and get more information about the individual chapters, he said.

Mark Easler, IFC public relations director, said the event was a good way for men who missed formal rush in the fall to learn more about the UI greek system.

"I think the night went really well," Easler said. "We really weren't sure what to expect, but all but one of the chapters participated and a lot of rushees showed up at the Union and at the houses.

"I think it was a good, cost-effective way for IFC to let the chapters see a lot of rushees and for the rushees to get a closer look at the chapters they are interested in," Easler said. "It was a mutually beneficial situation."

Sackett said about 20 of the UI's 25 fraternities will be extending bids to rushees for their spring pledge classes.

"A lot of houses' informal rush events are still going on, but they will be closing up soon," Sackett said. "Even the houses that don't take spring classes participated in the informal rush night, and they used it to get a look at potential rushees for their fall classes."

Novice investors can lose to greed

Match investments to need

By Dean Jarnow
Special to The Daily Iowan

There is a dangerous condition that threatens every investor's success. This condition is not a bear market in stocks, changing interest rates, market volatility or budget problems. The threat I speak of is so powerful and undermines so subtly an investor's objectives and positions that one is often powerless against its effects. This condition is known as the get-rich-quick syndrome, the gambling attitude or simply greed. This problem can completely destroy a sound financial plan or portfolio.

Too many times, both novice and experienced investors try to outsmart the markets and shoot for those mostly elusive supernormal returns. This happens because of a recent investment speculation turned to success or persuasion from another individual. The promise of early retirement, enormous wealth or incredible gains can emotionally paralyze an individual and keep him from being prudent and using common sense.

There are many ways to invest and beat the market. Unfortunately few of them ever work. It takes either great amounts of money for the advice or great quantities of time. Both of these commodities, obviously, are in short supply. Therefore, it is important to regularly review the reasons for making investments and saving one's money.

There are many valid reasons to invest: retirement planning, saving for a new home, college education funds, starting one's own business and building a cushion or emergency fund. The point is to invest for specific reasons, rather than for the sake of greed alone. Base investment decisions also on sound fundamental factors, rather than a lot of blue sky and lofty promises.

Try to match investments to each need. For example, if you are saving for a house and want to buy in two years, consider investments with principle protection and little volatility. If you lose in a speculative investment, you lose your home. When saving for a retirement 30 years in the future, don't leave a large percentage in short-term assets like money markets. Build a savings and investment portfolio the same way you would build a pyramid — with conservative and stable investments at the bottom, working your way to speculative, high-risk investments at the top. Naturally, allocate a larger percentage of money toward the base of the pyramid than the top. If this is not done, the pyramid may be in danger of toppling over and may become a burden greater than most of us can bear.

Five general rules to follow will be of great assistance in achieving one's financial goals. First, allocate assets. This is the notion of having exposure in different markets and asset types. Second, diversify in each asset category. Third, follow the pyramid strategy. Fourth, get good advice. And fifth, buy low and sell high.

Branstad prison plan splits Iowa Legislature

DES MOINES (AP)—Gov. Terry Branstad's $9.3 million prison expansion plan is a tiny slice of his proposed state budget, but it has opened an emotional fissure in the Legislature that won't soon heal.

Democrats are at each other's throats, while Republicans are wondering if maybe they at last have an issue they can use to bolster their legislative standing.

In the middle is a prison system, portions of which were built before the Civil War.

"The prisons are going to have problems, no matter how much mud gets tossed back and forth," said Paul Grossheim, head of the Department of Corrections.

The battle lines are simple. Branstad and hard-line Democrats in the Legislature see a jammed prison system and want to increase its capacity by 386 prisoners. Their critics say some extra space may be needed but say the system can be managed better.

They say state officials have locked up non-violent criminals who shouldn't be in jail in a blind rush to appear tough on crime.

"The political mainstream is an area where people are concerned about public safety, and the political mainstream is where people are concerned that taxpayer dollars are wisely spent," said Rep. Ralph Rosenberg, D-Ames. "That includes every area of state government, including corrections."

"We have got to get over this idea that criminals and repeat criminals are food stamp recipients," said Rep. Gary Sherzan, D-Des Moines, who derides "this social work attitude about those kinds of people."

Rosenberg, a lawyer and a prosecutor in Ames, argues for stronger rehabilitation and treatment programs. Sherzan is a parole officer in Des Moines who said it is time Democrats get some street-sense.

They represent the two poles. "I see these people every day," Sherzan said. "I know who they are, what they do and, to some extent, how they think.

"These are not the kind of people who, if you just send them to school, will see the error of their ways," Sherzan said.

"The issue is not whether you're soft or not, it is whether we can improve the current system," Rosenberg said. "I reject people trying to frame it like that."

At bottom, the issue is political. Branstad faces re-election in 1990, and Democrats badly want to hold control of the Legislature so they can control reapportionment after the 1990 census.

Both are aware of last year's presidential campaign, which featured attacks on Democrat Michael Dukakis for a prison furlough program allowing an inmate named Willie Horton free to murder a woman.

The "revolving door" television commercial that devastated Dukakis was designed by media guru Roger Ailes, who also advises Branstad.

Sherzan said it doesn't take a genius to figure out what's coming down the road.

"I frankly think that what happened in the presidential election is going to happen in the gubernatorial and legislative races two years from now if we don't address the problem," he said. "The public wants something done."

Branstad denies any partisan motives but makes it clear he thinks public opinion is on his side.

"I think the evidence is overwhelming," said Branstad. "It makes sense, and I think the people of Iowa recognize that."

In gubernatorial jargon, that's the equivalent of "read my lips" and get ready for the onslaught.

Caught in the middle are Democrats like House Speaker Don Avenson, an Oelwein machinist who is considering a run for governor.

Senate debates enrollment bill

DES MOINES (AP) — The barriers between Iowa school districts have been gradually breaking down in recent years as struggling districts share classes, administrators and athletic programs.

Now the Legislature is considering an "open enrollment" plan that would free students to transfer among districts without losing state aid that currently remains in their district of residence.

Open enrollment bills have been before the Legislature before but died in the face of resistance from school districts who feared losing their state budget base as students transferred to districts considered to have better resources. But this could be the year for passage of an open enrollment bill, according to Senate Education Chairman Larry Murphy, D-Oelwein.

"In about a 12-month period, we've really seen a major change in philosophy," said Murphy, who will try to steer an open enrollment bill to Senate passage this week.

The Senate Education Committee's open enrollment plan is one of three bills slated for debate by the full Senate this week. The other measures would allow handicapped Iowans to hunt by crossbow and change Iowa law to conform with a federal law prohibiting landlords from discriminating against renters who have children.

In the House this week, the focus is expected to be on a controversial bill that would set a state minimum wage that would be higher than the federal minimum wage of $3.35 per hour. Under the bill, offered by Rep. Gary Sherzan, D-Des Moines, the state minimum wage would rise 50 cents in each of the next three years.

The bill has drawn considerable opposition and is not expected to be signed by Gov. Terry Branstad.

Abortion

"I think the key is that there are certain classes of abortion that would be beyond the class of being legally able to be carried out and this would call for prosecution." He did not answer directly when asked if he personally favored prosecution of women who illegally obtained abortions, saying again that such decisions would be made by states.

Thornburgh defended the administration's position on abortion when asked whether Bush had considered polls showing that a majority of Americans believe a woman should have the right to choose abortion.

"You want to follow public opinion where you can but there are also matters of principle involved and these are matters that the president feels strongly about," Thornburgh said.

The Supreme Court most recently reaffirmed Roe v. Wade in 1983, but the current court is viewed as deeply divided on the issue. Its two most junior justices, Antonin Scalia and Anthony Kennedy, both conservatives appointed by Reagan, have not voted in an abortion decision.

work. "We really look for graduate students who have some background working in human services," she said.

First-year social work graduate student Becky Kuntz agreed.

Kuntz said she is one of three students at the UI to enter the graduate program immediately following the completion of undergraduate study.

"Most of the other students have been out in the field for two or three years getting experience," she said.

Kuntz, a 1988 Iowa State University graduate, said the school's selection criteria stress practical experience, entrance exam scores and grade point average.

The school specifies human development and change or administration and social development as courses of study. The UI School of Social Work Program holds part-time courses in Davenport and Des Moines. It is the only social work graduate program offered by a regent institution in Iowa.

Kuntz said she is following the human-development-and-change track to facilitate her future counseling plans. She added that many of her friends have found a master's in social work allows a wide range of career options.

The Chronicle of Higher Education reports that a number of trends contribute to the renewed interest in social work following a drastic decline in the early 1980s.

• Social work schools are benefiting as older students return to school to make career shifts.

• Increased legal recognition of social work has attracted more students. About 46 states, including Iowa, currently license social workers.

• Many schools have attracted new students by offering part-time programs.

• The nation seems to be showing greater concern over the problems of homelessness, family disintegration and substance abuse than it did in 1980.

Any number of options may be pursued by the social work graduate, Alter said.

"The stereotype that is often portrayed is the mean-spirited caseworker," she said. "In fact, social work is very broad, incorporating both direct therapy and indirect social work."

Services include direct counseling for people with substance abuse or family problems, or indirect social work involving organizational development.

Many Iowa graduates are employed in Washington, D.C., Des Moines or other state capitals where they research or fund-raise for non-profit groups, Alter said.

Social workers also find employment in the public sector with various governmental human service agencies, she said.

The Johnson County Human Services office provides therapy, investigates charges of abuse and advises people who are in need of assistance, said Connie Sarchet, JCHS social work supervisor.

Providing family therapy, counseling parties involved in child abuse and aiding people who are mentally retarded or physically disabled are among the department's responsibilities.

"Maybe we can teach them some ways to behave differently, depending on the situation," Sarchet said.

Insurance

higher on the average is because statistics show they get sick more often than men. Women pay higher life insurance premiums because they live longer.

"But what (a woman) makes up in health insurance, she'll lose in auto insurance (if the bill is passed)," Cochran said. "I think what insurance companies do is fair based on the statistics and studies that have been done."

But Doderer claims it's not fair. "Right now the National Organization for Women and the Women's Equity Action League estimate that for all of the different kinds of insurance a woman would want to buy, she will pay 17 to 20 percent more than a man in her lifetime," Doderer said.

"Women pay 25 to 40 percent more for health insurance throughout their lives," Doderer said. "Insurance companies have decided (women) get more illnesses and stay in the hospital longer. I don't believe that."

Insurance companies also say that banning gender-based factors would hurt their industry, according to the Register article.

Doderer is currently meeting with insurance companies and women's groups and drafting the bill with other legislators.

Doderer expects the bill to pass the House but to "have a rougher time" in the Senate.

Fire

there had been something like an explosion," he said.

A passing motorist spotted the smoke and alerted fire officials, who arrived around 4:10 p.m. to find the dilapidated wooden structures engulfed in fire.

The house and shed burned rapidly and brisk winds fanning the flames spread them to surrounding grassy areas. But firefighters were able to control the fire, leaving a barn and additional shed intact.

Little attempt was made to put out the flames in the early part of the blaze and Tiffin Fire Chief Tom Morgan said the burned buildings were a complete loss.

Colony said the farm site, which also contains a barn and storage shed, has not been used for some years. It was not insured.

"There's nothing left now to do but clean up," said Colony.

Laser hoax?

UI administrators would have faculty, staff and students believe that creation of a multi-million dollar laser center was the Great White Hope for the UI, the city and the state.

Lasers, they told us, were the wave of the future. Now, rather than being just a cool addition to a skull-shattering rock concert, these things could actually help save lives. But much more importantly, these high-tech babies could really rake in the bucks for any institution with the foresight to invest a paltry $25 million in them.

Lasers, they told us, would "light a path to the future from the Heartland of America."

Lasers, they told us, would be big business and would bring 12,000 jobs to the area. (Never mind that three of the world's top scientists — three scientists whose presence UI administrators promised while lobbying for the green in Des Moines — have backed out.)

The awful truth is that UI administrators stand guilty of perpetrating a horrendous hoax on Iowa taxpayers.

The administration assured the men and women on Capitol Hill of the success of the laser center long before administrators themselves had completed their homework on the undertaking, for if they had, they would also eventually have told us that the creation of a laser center is the modern-day equivalent of the Edsel.

Bush's opportunity

President George Bush has an excellent opportunity to reduce military tensions with the Soviets during his administration. Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev faces a host of domestic problems and may be hungry for a deal that would allow him to spend less on defense.

Gorbachev's difficulties include ethnic unrest and violence, a stagnant and inefficient economy, a new rebelliousness among his people sparked by glasnost and a lack of any visible progress that his reforms were supposed to produce. In addition, the Soviets are uneasy over trouble in their satellite states. At this point, huge military expenditures are something they would rather do without.

There are hopeful signs that Soviet attitudes and actions are undergoing a thaw. There is greater honesty in Soviet media, Soviet troops are being withdrawn from Afghanistan, and Gorbachev recently outlined plans for unilateral reductions of Soviet troop strength in Eastern Europe and an overall reduction in Soviet military strength. Such actions would have been inconceivable during the Breshnev era.

It appears that the Soviets are casting aside some of their earlier misplaced paranoia and are beginning to realize that domestic problems are a greater threat to them than are Western nations. This new realism presents a golden opportunity for the Bush administration.

The United States and the Soviet Union could help themselves and each other by bilateral military reductions. President Gorbachev has already pledged Soviet military cutbacks — the ball is now in the United States' court.

Bad advice

The Des Moines Register reported last week on the status of black enrollment at Iowa's three state universities. While Iowa State University showed a slight gain since 1976, black enrollment at the University of Northern Iowa and the UI has fallen.

The state Board of Regents has set a goal of increasing minority enrollment to 8.5 percent of the total enrollment at Iowa's three state universities. Despite vigorous efforts to reach this goal, the Regent's universities were only able to muster 4.67 percent minority enrollment in 1988. Of this figure, less than half were black.

Some argue that Iowa's population is at least 95 percent white, and that most blacks in Iowa live in areas where there exists remaining pockets of recession. But even if these assumptions are deemed valid, shouldn't more blacks be ready to enter the state universities after high school?

Various administrators and legislators have attempted to offer reasons why black enrollment is so obscenely low. But Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services, may have the best. He says that secondary schools in Iowa are poorly informing black students, advising them "into programs of study that do not lead to college but rather lead to employment directly upon graduating from high school." In short, blacks may not be getting the kind of support they need from high schools in the state.

According to Hubbard, "one-third of the people in this country will be minorities" by the next century. "Working and interacting with minorities" is something everyone will have to become more accustomed with in order to be successful.

The solution to reaching the regent's goal may not be to increase funding for recruitment per se, but to increase funding for efforts at the local level to better train and equip high school counselors to assist and support blacks and other minority students.

Perhaps if the real source of the problem is addressed, then the Regents' goal can be met, and the three state universities can begin to provide an even more diverse and less culturally biased education for the 21st century.

Who's afraid of analogies?

Business is slow at AAA Analogy Service in Fairfield . . . Marc Halberstadt said "Ideally, I would like to have an 800 number and a beeper so people can catch me at any time of the day or night. . . . Most people seem to get into arguments in the evening at home. This is for emotional episodes and I want people to be calling me in a charged emotional state." — The Des Moines Register, January 13, 1989.

Certain things between husband and wife are irrevocable. Bryden Huffington knew her husband Barton was sleeping with his secretary, Livvy Moskowitz. Bryden had Livvy pegged for a bimbo since the summer office party; the girl had spilled a Bellini down Barton's shirt front and then spent 40 minutes rubbing away at it and the rest of him in close quarters while Bryden talked clap-trap with his boss and stole hostile glances at the pair.

Bryden resented her husband's success. She knew him for a chump with no mind and great pees, but Allied Leveraged Buyout hadn't seen through him yet. He was pulling down a cool half-mil as VP of the corporate debt division.

O reader, judge not lest ye yourself be judged. Married life is tough. The average sexual encounter between couples in this country lasts 10 minutes; Bryden was simply fed up.

It was 1:30 Saturday morning in their country home. Barton had just entered the foyer and hung his Burberry greatcoat on the hall tree. He was about to slip out of his burgundy Weejuns when a shriek cut the quiet air, followed by the sound of glass shattering on the wall above his head. He knew, with a pinpoint explosion of fear in his chest, that they were in for a hell of a night.

"Bry! For God's sake, what's the matter?" Bryden stood before him in a french leotard. His eyes went to the pair of sterling silver antlers at his feet. "My decanter! You witch, I'll kill you!" The $2,500 Glenfiddich Edinburgh crystal decanter, a gift from Bryden's mother, was now a string of shards sparkling across the floor.

"Just try it. Go ahead. KILL ME! Solve your problems like . . . like . . . You always act just like . . ." She ran to the kitchen and picked up the phone. Her voice quivered. "Yes. American Express is fine." She returned to face Bart. "You have the maturity level of a child who's never been away from his mother any longer than it takes her to go to the bathroom!"

"Oh, yeah? Well just what do you think it's been like living with you for the past nine years, huh? Pretty? Has it been pretty? No! It's been like . . . It's been worse than — Dear God! Our marriage is like . . . like . . ." He tore up the stairs to his phone in the master bedroom. Moments later Bry heard him clonking down again. "Being married to you is like being the husband of a rabid porcupine!"

She sneered in his face. "How much did they charge you for that one, you moron?"

Through teeth gritted so tightly they squeaked, he snarled. "Don't worry, darling. The accountants budget fifteen-hundred a month for hateful analogies, and I intend to spend every cent of it to tell you just what I think of you!"

The pinpoint of pain in his chest expanded; he wished he hadn't forgotten his every-other-day aspirin. Although sweat dripped down his red face, hatred overcame the daunting prospect of another trip up the stairs. He'd run steps until death took him for the joy of nailing her with the perfect analogy.

Bryden dashed back to the kitchen. It had been two months since they'd set up separate phone lines to allow each of them analogy access during the heat of battle. It worked well. She called in, got her play, and ran out. At the sight of Bart resting on the landing with a palm over his chest, she stopped.

"Honey! Are you alright?" "My chest," her husband sighed. "Feels like . . . like . . ." He wheezed a pathetic little laugh.

Bryden ran to him. "It's alright, darling. You're just exhausted." He felt her lift his head and scoop him into her arms. God, he thought, I love how she feels in this leotard. Almost against his will, noises of desire struggled from his dry throat. He greedily filled his hands with her. She covered his mouth with hers and kissed him ferociously.

"Oh, God!" he breathed. "I love you, baby. I love you so much I . . . I . . . I love you like . . ."

"I know, Bart," she cried. Her breath was hot in his ear. She bit the lobe and pulled it into her mouth. "I want you. I want you so bad I . . . I just . . ." But Barton was already out of her arms and half-way up the stairs. She leapt down three stairs at a time. They turned to beam silently at one another, then made for the phones.

Wake up! Here's today's horoscope

Today's Joe Bob Briggs Horoscope: ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll want to stay in bed until 3 p.m. There's an excellent chance that you will die soon.

TARUS (April 20-May 20): You've been evasive lately and people are noticing. Enter the Federal Witness Protection Program. Your chart promises excitement, but only when nude in public.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your attention centers on a person of the opposite sex. Look for some excitement and changes in your life. You are probably a homosexual.

Joe Bob Briggs

CANCER (June 21-July 22): All of those money problems will be solved soon. Time to make that decision about your dwelling place and your legal affairs. The next three days are a good time to buy a handgun. If you feel nauseous any day this week, you have cancer.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't be surprised if you feel like you woke up in a sitcom. CBS is about to offer a contract! You are perceived as powerful, secure and in control. They're suckers, aren't they?

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): On the inside you feel like Jello. On the outside you LOOK like Jello. Go to the health spa for a facial and body wrap.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your lunar aspect highlights sensuality, travel, a stranger with a mole on his or her inner thigh, and a non-alcoholic pina colada. Soon one of your friends will start saying things behind your back and you'll have to be a jerk about it.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Time for a fresh start and new look. Refuse to bathe today and dye your hair a pastel color. A former teacher will come back into your life and laugh at your briches.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You must get to the heart of the matter today. Pay attention to anyone who has a Japanese name, especially if they seem real stupid.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good day to kill anyone named "Jennifer" or "Brad." Otherwise, plant yourself on the couch for the day and imitate a garden vegetable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You have lost the Publishers Clearinghouse Sweepstakes. Nyah nyah nyah. Good day to cancel all the magazine subscriptions that didn't do you a damn bit of good.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Moon in your sign corresponds to a deep secret about THAT THING that you did as a kid. EVERYONE is going to find out. You can't avoid it. The whole WORLD is going to know. You'll be HUMILIATED. Good day to start a hobby.

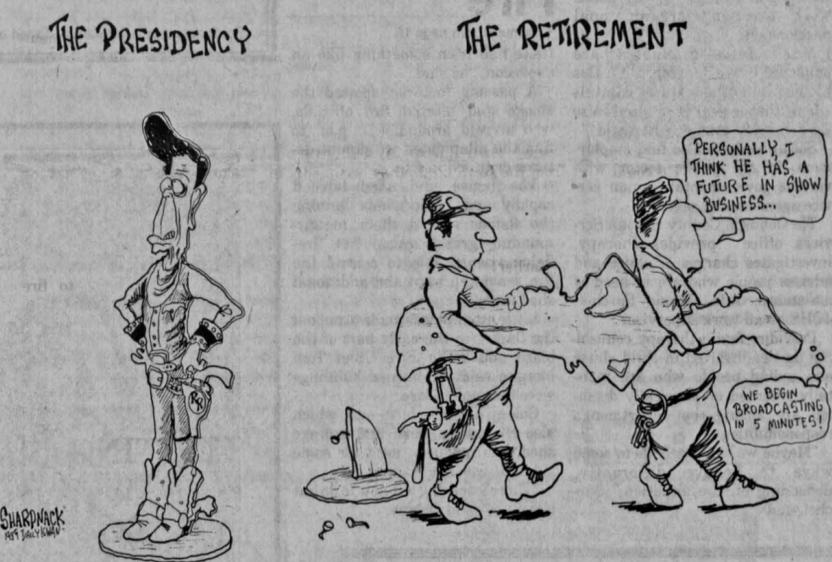

Speaking of grisly gunk spewing out of the newspaper, "The Terror Within" is a pretty decent new flick about what will happen when Khadafy fires up his new chemical-warfare plant, wipes out 99 percent of the earth, and we end up with George Kennedy and a bunch of TV movie actors living in an underground shelter in the Mojave Desert. I'll TELL you what's gonna happen. There will be these giant intestine-head lizard-legged loonies roaming through the desert raping all the women so they can breed more genetic-DNA mucus monsters to populate the earth. And that's the only solution, to save us from these mutated mush-heads!

Andrew (son of Stella) Stevens! He has an abortion policy! Like he tells his girlfriend after she gets raped by a giant piece of protoplasm with with legs: "We shouldn't really abort until we know it's not mine." The only problem is, these slime-sewer fetuses grow so fast that they're the size of Lincoln Continentals within 24 hours.

There's only ONE THING that can stop em: A dog whistle.

Three stars. Joe Bob says check it out.

The Daily Iowan/Joseph Sharpnack

Assessing 16 years of Roe v. Wade

In 1973, the Supreme Court declared the option of a safe and legal abortion to be every woman's right. The decision, Roe v. Wade, states that the right to privacy "is broad enough to encompass a woman's decision whether or not to terminate her pregnancy." Yesterday marked the 16th anniversary of the legalization of abortion and a time to review the numerous public and private health benefits that have evolved from this decision.

Since the advent of legal abortion, physicians may openly research, debate and practice new and safer medical techniques. Today, mortality rates of abortion are about equal to the risk of receiving a shot of penicillin.

The Guttmacher Institute cites statistics demonstrating that abortion-related mortality has dropped over 90 percent since 1972. In Iowa, not a single woman has died as a result of a legal abortion. There is less than a 1 percent morbidity rate today. Prior to legalization in 1969, over 6,500 women in New York alone were admitted to municipal hospitals for treatment of complications caused by induced abortions.

As we look back over the years of safe and legal abortions, it would be will to share the facts about abortion:

Who gets abortions?

Nearly 40 percent of all abortions are obtained by women for whom pregnancy risks are greatest, teenagers and women over 35. Women who have abortions are married, single, wealthy, poor; they are from every race, religion, political affiliation and background; they are healthy, and some are afraid of passing on a disease or defect. In short, there is no "type" of woman who has an abortion.

Is legal abortion a safe procedure?

Yes. 91 percent of all abortions are performed before the 12th week of pregnancy. Serious complications occur in less than 1 percent of these abortions. First trimester abortions are 14 times safer than childbirth.

Wouldn't responsible use of contraceptives eliminate the need for abortion?

If it were always available and if women always had access to the information that would allow them to choose birth control, it would certainly help. But it still would not prevent all unplanned pregnancies. Even if all women used the pill or the IUD — the two most effective methods of contraception — a minimum of 450,000 unplanned pregnancies would occur each year. This statistic does not take into account the thousands of women who cannot use the pill or IUD because of the various health risks associated with the two methods.

Would a total ban on abortions prevent them from occurring?

No. Before states began to liberalize their abortion laws in the 1960s, illegal abortion in the United States were estimated at more than one million yearly. Legal abortions today occur at almost exactly that same rate but with many fewer complications and deaths.

Why do women have abortions?

The reasons women give for having abortions are as individual as the women themselves. Most did not intend to get pregnant. They speak of not being ready to be parents, of being too young or too old, having too little money, feeling that another baby would make it harder to raise the children they already have, needing to finish school, or not having a supportive companion. The decision is never easy; however, it is intensely personal and private.

Public opinion shows the majority of people in this country have for years supported the right of women to choose legal abortion. The medical community overwhelmingly supports legal abortion; most recently, the Surgeon General concluded that there is no evidence that legal abortion has any harmful physical or psychological effects on women.

It is clear that abortion is a safe and necessary option. The possibility that it could once again become illegal poses the threat of thousands more deaths as women are forced to seek out illegal abortions. Roe v. Wade guarantees not only a woman's right to choose, but also her right to safe medical treatment.

Gayle Sand, associate director of the Emma Goldman Clinic for Women, submitted this guest opinion for the Viewpoints page.

Saudi Arabia allows Amin's return

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Former Ugandan dictator Idi Amin, who angered Saudi authorities by slipping out of the country, will be allowed to return and resume his life in exile, an authoritative Saudi source said Sunday.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said King Fahd was acting in response to requests by unidentified African leaders. He refused to say whether Amin had returned or whether a date had been fixed for that.

The African leaders reportedly included King Hassan II of Morocco, who has close ties with the Saudi monarch, and President Mobutu Sese Seku of Zaire.

Amin, 61, was ousted from his east African nation in 1979 and was granted political asylum in Saudi Arabia in 1980.

He slipped out of the desert kingdom on a forged passport and was spotted in Kinshasa, the Zairean capital, with one of his sons on Jan. 17.

At least 24 die in Sri Lankan violence

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — At least 24 people, including four Indian soldiers, were killed across Sri Lanka in separatist violence during the weekend, military officials said Sunday.

The officials, who cannot be identified under standing briefing regulations, said 16 Sinhalese were killed in seven separate attacks since Saturday.

The attacks were blamed on the People's Liberation Front, an organization of radical Sinhalese opposed to Colombo's peace overtures to the Tamils, who have been fighting for a separate homeland in the Indian ocean republic since 1983.

Tamils, who make up 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million people, allege they are discriminated against by the Sinhalese, who account for about 75 percent of the people.

The front says that Colombo was offering too many concessions to the Tamils.

In the Tamil-dominated north, four Indian soldiers were killed Saturday when ambushed by the most powerful of the Tamil separatist group, the Liberation Tiger's of Tamil Eelam. The attack occurred at Vavunia, 135 miles north of Colombo.

Solidarity welcomes negotiations

GDANSK, Poland — Solidarity on Sunday welcomed the government's offer to negotiate legalizing the trade union movement and said talks should begin as soon as possible to combat Poland's chronic economic and social ills.

A Solidarity statement, released after a nearly two-day meeting, clears the way for the first formal talks between Solidarity and authorities since a December 1981 military crackdown crushed the organization.

But Solidarity leader Lech Walesa cautioned, "I wish that there be no euphoria. Anything is still possible."

Solidarity's National Executive Commission said it is willing to meet the government's condition that it respect Polish law and observe the statute that made Solidarity the East bloc's first and only legal, independent union in 1980.

Dead man's ashes attend Super Bowl

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — Les Boatwright's death didn't keep him from going to the Super Bowl on Sunday. He was there in a small brass urn.

Boatwright, 75, died of a heart attack Monday, clutching two Super Bowl tickets as he prepared to place a bet with his bookie, said Boatwright's widow, Midge.

His two sons took the urn carrying the ashes of the San Jose, Calif., resident to the Big Game between the San Francisco 49ers and the Cincinnati Bengals, Boatwright's widow said. "I told the boys, 'Do it for your daddy,'" she said.

"It's a shame the Lord took him so soon," she said. "He could have at least waited until after the Super Bowl."

My guess is that they will return the regulation of abortions, like many health and safety questions, to the states.

Iraqi weapons equipment linked to W. German firm

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Authorities suspect a West German company illegally shipped equipment to Iraq that could be used to make chemical weapons, a prosecutor said Sunday.

Darmstadt prosecutor Thomas Brand said documents seized from offices of the Preussag company of Hanover indicate it shipped containers and other equipment to Iraq that "with relative certainty, could have been used in the production of chemical weapons." Brand spoke in an interview broadcast by the Hamburg-based Spiegel TV network.

The documents, some seized in 1987, also indicate the company delivered specialized equipment to Iraq that could be used to produce poison gas shells and bombs, he said.

No charges have been filed, Brand said.

Preussag's administrative offices in Hanover and Darmstadt were closed Sunday, and company officials could not be reached for comment.

Brand's office is investigating three other West German companies in connection with sales to Iraq. The prosecutor has jurisdiction in the case because Preussag owns a subsidiary near southern Darmstadt.

Brand last week named two of the companies, Karl Kolb GmbH and Co. and the now-defunct Pilot Plant company. He refused to name the third company.

Arafat rejects Israeli proposal of limited Palestinian self-rule BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — PLO chairman Yasir Arafat on Sunday rejected a proposal for limited self-rule for Palestinians in the occupied territories and elections to choose peace negotiators.

"It isn't worth the trouble to reply to these proposals, which have been rejected even by Palestinian children," Arafat told a group of reporters. "It is a new attempt to get out of the bottleneck in which Israel has found itself."

The Palestine Liberation Organization chief was in Baghdad for a meeting of Palestinian leaders involved with the 13-month uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

A peace plan proposed last week by Israeli Defense Minister Yitzak Rabin calls for a period of limited self-rule for Palestinians in the territories, followed by a three-way confederation of Israel, Jordan and Palestine.

Rabin also said if the Palestinians halted the uprising, they could hold elections to choose peace negotiators.

Other Palestinian leaders also have rejected the plan, which Israel says was Rabin's private proposal. Jordan's foreign minister, Marwan Kassem, also rejected it, Amman's daily Ad Dustour reported Sunday.

Kassem was quoted as saying "Israel is required to withdraw from the Arab lands they occupied in 1967, then to give the Palestinians an opportunity to set up their Palestinian state in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank."

Earlier Sunday in Nicosia, Cyprus, Arafat called on "Arab kings, presidents and princes" to rally in support of the revolt.

He said the uprising will continue "until our people establish their own independent state with Jerusalem as its capital," according to a statement issued in Nicosia by the Palestinian news agency Wafa.

Yasir Arafat

In Baghdad, Arafat accused Rabin of stepping up repression in the occupied territories in an attempt to halt the rebellion.

Arafat spoke surrounded by members of the PLO executive committee and several Palestinian leaders he said had traveled from the occupied territories.

He said he was chairing meetings to discuss "means of escalating resistance" in response to tougher Israeli measures to crack down on the uprising.

Last week, Rabin announced a policy that allows troops to fire plastic bullets more freely at stone-throwers and Palestinians setting up roadblocks. The rules also call for destroying the homes of suspected stone-throwers.

Soviets delay Afghan pullout

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — A Soviet military commander said Sunday the Red Army is leaving Afghanistan with a sense of failure. He also denied the Soviets have resumed their pullout but said they still plan to be out of the country by Feb. 15.

"We have not succeeded in everything we planned to do here," Maj. Gen. Lev Serebrov, a political officer at the military high command in Kabul, told Western correspondents.

Serebrov, dressed in camouflage uniform, chain-smoking and joking occasionally with reporters, said Soviet officers are communicating with guerrilla commanders on parts of the key Salang highway, the main route to the Soviet border, to try to keep it open.

Serebrov's contention that the remaining 50,000 Soviet troops have not begun to leave contradicted estimates by Western diplomats in Kabul that the withdrawal began in earnest at the beginning of January.

In addition, Afghan troops are manning former Soviet posts on the perimeter of this beleaguered capital, not far from guerrilla positions.

Hundreds of fully equipped Soviet troops board giant Ilyushin 76 transport aircraft ferrying in and out of the airport daily.

Asked how the Soviets planned to evacuate troops by air and up the hazardous, 250-mile Salang highway by Feb. 15 in bitter winter weather, Serebrov noted: "That's our problem."

Pressed about visual evidence of troops leaving, Serebrov, speaking through an interpreter, argued that the departing troops had merely completed their two-year military service and "are being replaced with new ones."

"We are ready . . . to end the withdrawal by Feb. 15, but we have not yet received the order to start the final stage of withdrawal," he said.

He dodged questions about reports, including one from a Soviet source in Kabul, that the military high command will move from the Afghan capital to the town of Hairatan on the Soviet border between Jan. 31 and Feb. 2. Asked how the commanders will go if they remain in Kabul until the deadline, he said, "We will find a way."

Under a U.N.-mediated accord signed in April, the Soviets' 100,000 troops began leaving Afghanistan on May 15, and half were out by Aug. 15.

Endara challenges Noriega for Panamanian presidency

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — An opposition coalition on Sunday formally selected attorney Guillermo Endara as its candidate in the May 7 presidential election.

In a related development, the Panamanian military accused the United States of harassing Panamanians.

Endara, 52, pledged to form a "government of national reconstruction" and replace Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, head of Panama's Defense Forces and country's de facto ruler.

The opposition alliance also selected Ricardo Arias Calderon, 53, as candidate for first vice president and Guillermo Ford, 52, as second vice president.

Arias Calderon, a former vice-presidential candidate, is president of the Democratic Christian Party. Ford, a businessman, is a member of the executive committee of the National Liberal Republican Movement Party.

"Let's go into the streets to end this regime," said Arturo Vallarino, a delegate from the Republican party.

The Civic Crusade and several other small opposition parties took part in the convention along with the Democratic Christian Party and the National Liberal Republican Movement.

Another opposition party, the Authentic Liberal Party, plans a nominating convention next week and the seven-party government coalition will announce its candidate on Feb. 1.

Meanwhile, Noriega's Defense Forces on Sunday accused U.S. troops of having "intensified their campaign of persecution" against Panamanians entering areas under U.S. control.

S. Korean riot police disrupt march protesting Roh, U.S.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police hurling tear gas grenades battled thousands of protesters who tried to march through Seoul on Sunday to demand the overthrow of President Roh Tae-woo and the expulsion of U.S. troops.

Dozens of the estimated 5,000 radicals were injured or detained when 6,000 riot troopers charged them, but police had no figures on injuries or arrests.

The demonstrators chanting "Yankee go home!" and "Down with Roh Tae-woo!" were trying to reach the headquarters of the governing Democratic Justice Party.

Troopers in green combat fatigues and black, visored helmets blocked the march and retaliated with tear gas when some protesters threw firebombs and rocks to try to force their way.

The riot police charged the protesters, forcing many to flee down stairs into subway stations where some were trampled or hit by people leaping from above.

Police beat and kicked groups of protesters who were surrounded by the charging security forces. Other protesters hurled scores of firebombs, and some police were beaten to the ground by radicals using clubs and fists.

"You are the enemies of our people!" an enraged man yelled at police.

Clashes continued for more than an hour along one of Seoul's main shopping avenues. Hundreds of terrified pedestrians ran to escape the fighting and clouds of tear gas.

Demonstrators repeatedly called for removal of the 42,000 U.S.

Protesters use their feet to fight columns of riot police blocking a march in Seoul Sunday after an anti-government rally denouncing alleged government suppression of labor freedom. About 5,000 people attended the rally.

troops based in South Korea under a mutual defense treaty.

An effigy representing Roh, President George Bush and top Korean industrialists was burned during the march. The rally before the march also demanded an end to controls on labor unions.

The protest was the first action organized by a new dissident alliance, the National Coalition for a Democratic Movement, which was formed Saturday by about 20 dissident, labor and student groups.

Coalition leaders said it was the largest dissident group ever formed in South Korea and claimed a membership of 30,000 people.

Coalition leaders pledged to seek the fall of the Roh government, charging it is a front for military rule. The coalition also called for an end to South Korea's powerful industrial conglomerates and to all foreign influence.

The coalition claims it will launch a movement of students, workers and farmers to remove Roh and create a "society of equality" for workers and the poor.

Lee Bu-young, a leader of the new group, said, "Since the organization is based on grassroots groups, it will be able to resist any government oppression."

Formation of a similar dissident alliance in May 1987 was a key event in sparking major anti-government protests that forced the authoritarian government of President Chun Doo-hwan to agree to democratic presidential elections.

Mortuary's 'Hitler' and family face trial for mass cremations

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Two years after burning bodies were found in a ceramics factory's kilns, members of a prominent family who ran a mortuary face trial for alleged mass cremations and removal of organs and gold from corpses.

The case has conjured up Holocaust-like images of bodies packed into ovens and produced preliminary testimony that one member of the family was called "Hitler" by his employees and engaged in strongarm tactics.

David Sconce, 32, and his parents, Jerry Sconce, 55, and Laurieanne Lamb Sconce, 52, are accused of 67 counts including multiple cremation of human remains and unlawful removal of body parts from human remains.

Their trial was scheduled to begin today but Los Angeles County Deputy District Attorney Jo Ann Glidden said Friday it is expected to be postponed because attorneys have other case commitments.

David Sconce on Friday was ordered to stand trial by himself on one count of conspiracy to murder the owner of a cremation society that Sconce once wanted to take over. Glidden said she will seek to consolidate the two cases.

The scandal has already produced a state law allowing crematory inspection on demand. And lawsuits have been filed against 100 mortuaries that used the Sconces' cremation service on behalf of families of 17,000 decedents cremated between March 1983 and December 1986.

The case involves the Lamb Funeral Home, which was founded in 1929 by Sconce's grandfather; Coastal Cremations Inc., of which David Sconce was president; and Coastal International Eye and Tissue Bank.

Coastal Cremations charged other mortuaries only $55 per cremation and sought business widely as the use of cremation boomed in California.

On Jan. 20, 1987, authorities in Hesperia responded to complaints of odors at David Sconce's Oscar Ceramics plant in the desert and found burning bodies in its furnaces and cans of human ashes.

The investigation led to shocking testimony.

Officials alleged the mortuary and tissue bank removed and sold gold teeth plus brains, bones, corneas and other organs without consent of next-of-kin; embezzled interest from prepaid funeral trust accounts; illegally cremated more than one body at a time; and comingled ashes.

It is a felony to dismember human corpses in California and a misdemeanor for crematoriums to burn bodies together without the permission of survivors.

David Edwards, a driver for the crematory from 1983 to December 1985, testified at one hearing that David Sconce paid to have funeral directors beat, pry gold teeth from corpses and boasted of the number of bodies he could burn at one time.

Edwards said he and two others divided $750 for attacking the directors, whom David Sconce feared would publish allegations of multiple cremations in an industry magazine.

He said he often saw as many as a dozen bodies in the crematory retorts, or ovens.

Edwards said David Sconce sometimes spoke about setting records for stacking bodies. "It was over 13, and the old records were continually being broken," he said.

Gandhi loses ground in election

MADRAS, India (AP) — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's Congress Party appeared headed for a setback Sunday in a state election seen as a barometer for national races later this year.

The Congress party was not expected to win the legislative contest in the southern state of Tamil Nadu. But a respectable showing against the strong regional parties would have bolstered the Gandhi party's national image.

"The voting trend shows a major setback for Gandhi. . . . He will have to accept most of the blame," said the state's top political analyst, Cho Ramaswamy.

The frontrunner for the Tamil Nadu state assembly seats was the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam Party, or Dravidian Progressive Front, headed by screenwriter and politician Muthuvel Karunanidhi.

With more than half the ballots from Saturday's election counted, Karunanidhi's party or its allies led in 151 of the 232 constituencies, the government election control room reported.

The state assembly has 234 seats, but elections in two districts were postponed due to the deaths of candidates.

The Congress Party was ahead in 35 districts. Gandhi must call a national parliamentary election before the end of the year. The races will decide which party governs India for the next five years.

A surprise victory could have encouraged Gandhi to call early national elections before the various opposition groups join together in sufficient strength to unseat Congress.

"The results will have an effect on national politics," said Ramaswamy.

State elections also were conducted Saturday in the northeastern states of Nagaland and Mizoram, but results were expected to come in more slowly than those in Tamil Nadu.

The other two groups in Tamil Nadu to make a showing were rival factions of a party splintered between the wife and the leading lady of late movie star-politician M.G. Ramachandran.

Former movie actress Jayalalitha Jayaram's faction of the All-India Anna Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam Party led in 37 districts. Jayaram, 42, was a long-time close companion of Ramachandran and played opposite him in many movies.

His widow, 64-year-old Janaki Ramachandran, also an ex-actress, heads a party faction that was leading in four districts.

Independents led in eight districts. Cold weather delayed tallying in two other districts.

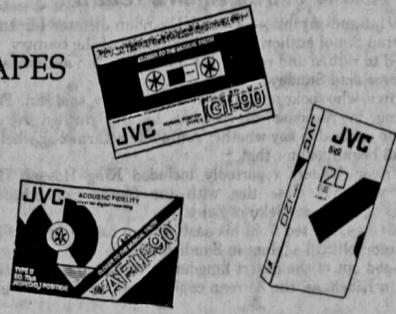

Gandhi's most visible national political foe, V.P. Singh, had backed Karunanidhi.

Singh served as Gandhi's finance and defense minister before he was expelled for conducting tax raids on government officials and inquiries into foreign arms deals. He is trying to unite the Janata Dal, a loose coalition of three north Indian parties, to muster enough strength to challenge Gandhi in national elections.

"V.P. Singh will project the DMK's victory as his own," Ramaswamy said, referring to the Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam Party.

Drugs halt Wilson's career

MIAMI (AP) — Stanley Wilson, trying to come back from a five-year battle with drugs, was barred from the Super Bowl because of a cocaine problem that has ended his football career, Cincinnati Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said Sunday night.

"Stanley Wilson didn't screw up," Wyche said after the Bengals were beaten 20-16 by San Francisco. "The cocaine overtook him, and I don't know but that our country is going to hell in a handbasket and we don't know it. This is a symptom of it."

Wilson, who has missed two full seasons because of drugs, was declared ineligible for the Super Bowl hours before the game because of what the NFL said was a violation of league substance abuse policy.

No one would say exactly what happened. But NFL spokesman Joe Browne said Wilson ran into problems Saturday night, when he missed a team meeting.

Refusing to give a detailed account of what led to Wilson's latest troubles, Wyche said: "The league will make all statements on that. We're going to do that for the sake of Stanley. I still love the man. I'm still pulling for his life. Football is now over for him, but his life is not."

Wyche said there would be no appeal of any action taken by the NFL against Wilson.

Wilson, suspended twice and penalized three other times because of drugs, has been in and out of rehabilitation since 1983. Wilson, the Bengals' third-leading rusher this season, was Cincinnati's primary backup.

His suspension left Stanford Jennings, who carried only 17 times this season, in the role. Jennings rushed only once in the Super Bowl for three yards.

Cincinnati police chief Lawrence Whalen, who is helping with security at the Super Bowl, confirmed the violation stemmed from an incident Saturday night. Whalen said Wilson was not arrested, but would provide no further details.

Browne would not say if the information came from the Bengals or if it stemmed from a drug test. He said no other information would be released.

"We are pledged to confidentiality," NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle said. "You can be certain I will meet with him, but I don't know when. That's all we can say because of confidentiality."

Wilson missed the entire 1987 season with his fourth drug problem and had been cleared to return to the league by Rozelle last summer.

Wilson was admitted to a drug treatment facility in December 1983, his rookie season. In August 1984, he required further treatment, and after relapsing again, he was suspended indefinitely Oct. 30, 1984, missing the entire 1985 season.

He was reinstated May 6, 1986, after petitioning the league. But he was suspended again June 24, 1987, and reinstated April 20, 1988.

Under the NFL's drug policy, only violations since 1986 count for discipline purposes, because that's when the league's current policy was instituted.

Browne said it had not yet been determined whether Wilson's suspension would carry into the 1989 season.

"You wonder what the future of the fellow is," Bengals president John Sauer said. "Historically, you know it's not successful, but you always hope. I'm sure a lot of thought will be given to the future, but I wouldn't want to make a spur-of-the-moment decision."

Mike Brown, assistant general manager of the Bengals, said, "I'm disappointed and saddened. . . It's a surprise. We didn't know anything until late last night. We lost a productive player. It's a setback, one we're going to have to overcome."

Recovery from drugs is not an easy task, Wilson said.

"My whole philosophy is to stay in the moment, keep myself busy and not get involved in other things. It's good for me to stay busy, be more productive. In my situation, it's not good to have idle time."

Montana's late drive wins Super Bowl

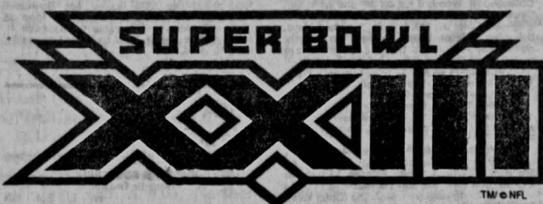

MIAMI (AP) — Joe Montana hit John Taylor with a 10-yard touchdown pass with 34 seconds left as San Francisco staked its claim as the Team of the '80s Sunday with a 20-16 victory over Cincinnati in the most dramatic Super Bowl ever.

The victory was achieved through the brilliance of Joe Montana and Jerry Rice, who led the 49ers.

The winning score came at the end of a 92-yard drive, engineered by Montana, whose touchdown pass gave him a Super Bowl record with 357 yards passing. Twelve of his completions were to Rice, who finished with 12 catches for 222 yards, both also records.

It was the fifth straight win for an NFC team, but by far the most dramatic — the previous four had been by an average score of 41-14.

It also gave Coach Bill Walsh his third Super Bowl win in 10 seasons as the 49ers coach. It would be a fitting climax to a career that may end this week when the 57-year-old Walsh could announce that he will step down as San Francisco's coach.

The winning drive began after Jim Breech had kicked his third field goal of the game, a 40-yarder with 3:20 left, to give the Bengals a 16-13 lead. A holding call on the kickoff forced the 49ers to start from their own 8-yard line with a little more than three minutes left.

But Montana, who was 23 of 36, made himself the quarterback of the decade on the winning drive. He passed for 8 yards to Rice, 9 yards to tight end John Frank and 17 more to Rice. Then, he hit Roger Craig for 13 yards and hit Rice 27 yards over the middle on a second-and-20 play.

After an 8-yard pass to Craig, he hit Rice for 10 yards to set up the winning score to Taylor.

The game that was supposed to be a shootout went 44 minutes and 26 seconds without a touchdown, the longest dry spell in the 23 Super Bowls.

Then came two within 91 seconds.

After Mike Cofer's 32-yard field goal tied the game 6-6 for San Francisco with 50 seconds left in the third quarter, Stanford Jennings took the kickoff 93 yards for a score, racing untouched through the San Francisco defense until Terry Greer ran him down and tripped him as he fell over the goal line.

But the 49ers, whose offense sputtered, suddenly came to life, going 85 yards in just four plays to tie the score at 13-13. Montana hit Jerry Rice for 31 yards, Roger Craig for 40, then Rice for a touchdown in the left corner of the end zone from 14 yards out.

The first half of what was supposed to be a shootout ended with the score tied 3-3 and each team licking major wounds. It was the first halftime tie in Super Bowl history and the first without a touchdown since Pittsburgh led Minnesota 2-0 at halftime 14 years ago.

The Bengals started without backup fullback Stanley Wilson, who was suspended by the league about five hours before the opening gun for what the league simply called "a violation of the NFL's substance abuse policy."

Hawks beat buzzer, Boilers

By Brent Woods
The Daily Iowan

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Ed Horton was called on Saturday at Mackey Arena. He answered, and delivered.

After a designed play to get the ball inside didn't develop, Horton floated through the lane and hit a 14-foot jumper with :04 remaining in the game to give seventh-ranked Iowa a 67-66 lead over the Boilermakers.

Men's Basketball

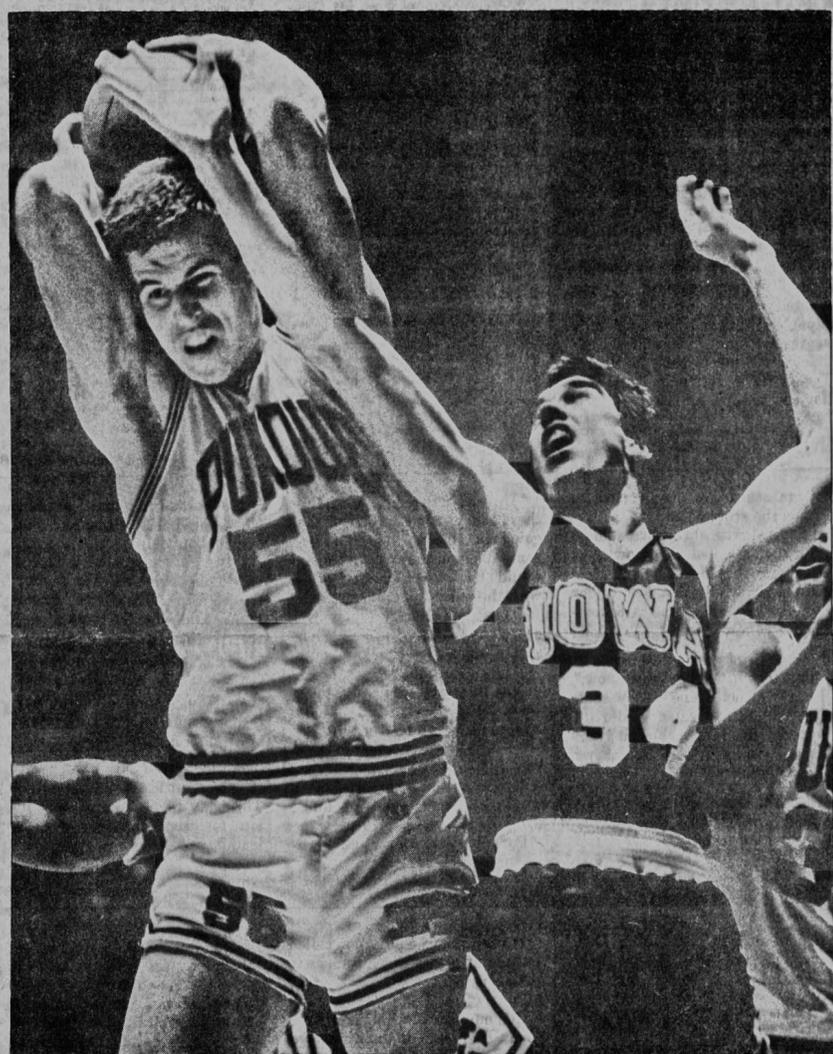

Purdue did have a chance to pull the contest out, but Steve Scheffler's 18-footer rimmed out at the buzzer.

"This was a win we needed real bad," Horton said. "I just felt I had the hot hand, and B.J. (Armstrong) and Roy (Marble) felt I had the hot hand. I'm a senior, and somebody had to take over out there."

Horton did take over, scoring a career-high 26 points on 11-of-15 shooting and grabbing 10 rebounds.

Scheffler had a clear shot from the top of the key for Purdue, but the ball skipped over the front rim, off the back rim and out as the game ticked away.

"I was just trying to get it off on time," Scheffler said. "I just see Hawkeyes, Page 2B

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — The Iowa Hawkeyes trailed by one, they had the ball, and the clock was winding down.

"I meant to take it to the basket," senior forward Ed Horton said, "but Tony Jones stepped in and tried to swat the ball away. I just had to pick it up, and all in one motion I shot it."

Horton's 14-foot jumper after a short pass from fellow senior Roy Marble gave Iowa a 67-66 win Saturday afternoon at Purdue.

"I thought it was a good shot," Horton said. "I didn't hesitate or anything. I just wanted two points, and it fell for me."

The winning basket gave Horton 26 points for the game, a career high. He scored the Hawkeyes' final 10 points, mostly on short jumpers after dribbling into the lane.

"They backed off me a lot," Horton said. "So I just took it to them, and it worked. It was one of those things where I just had to put the ball on the ground."

"Eddie really did a good job for us," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "He's really our only horse in there. Eddie was the key, with his rebounds and his shooting. He wanted the ball late."

"He was determined, he was going to take it in. He made a pretty tough shot, across the lane, and they defended him pretty well."

Haman's win seals Iowa victory, 22-17

By Bryce Miller

With the No. 5 Iowa wrestling team ahead 19-17 going into the final match against No. 6 Minnesota, the Hawkeyes needed a draw or win from heavyweight Andy Haman to keep Iowa's string of 95 consecutive Big Ten dual victories alive.

The senior responded with a 2-0 win to lift Iowa to the 22-17 final at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Sunday.

"That's happened at Penn State, Iowa State, Wisconsin and tonight," Haman said of his matches that have decided the outcomes of duals this season. "I'm starting to get practiced at it. I came out with a victory, so I have to be happy with that."

Haman was awarded a point at the 52-second mark of the match because of a technical violation on Jeff Thue. The Gophers' heavyweight head-butted Haman, and Haman's eye bled throughout the match.

"The first one we had against Penn State, he didn't handle well at all," Iowa Coach Dan Gable said of Haman's deciding matches. "He's making progress. Tonight he went back a little ways in terms of skills. It would be nice if we wouldn't put him in that situation as much."

Wrestling

The win, coupled with Iowa's 24-14 victory over No. 7 Wisconsin in Madison, Wis., Saturday night, raised the Hawkeyes' Big Ten record to 3-0, 11-1 overall. With the loss, Minnesota slipped to 7-4 on the year.

Minnesota Coach J. Robinson, a former assistant to Gable at Iowa, wasn't surprised at the kind of team the Hawkeyes put on the mat.

"It was a typical Iowa team," Robinson said. "They wrestled competitively and with a lot of emotion."

There were some unexpected outcomes in the dual.

Junior Steve Martin, 21-1 and second-ranked in the nation at 118 pounds, didn't fulfill his role as the heavy favorite Sunday. Martin wrestled 8-8 freshman Ben Morris, apparently winning 9-8, but later the match was ruled a 9-9 draw.

After the match, Minnesota protested that a one-point locked hands violation the referee signaled in the second period wasn't scored. The official agreed and declared the match a draw.

Navratilova wins in Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Three-time champion Martina Navratilova took advantage of Hana Mandlikova's poor serve to beat her former Czech countrywoman 6-4, 6-1 Monday and advance to the quarterfinals of the Australian Open tennis tournament.

Mandlikova, who beat Navratilova in the 1987 Australian Open final, double-faulted nine times and was broken five times. She had a pair of double-faults in three of her losing service games.

"I knew I had to serve well because she was going to come to the net and put pressure on me," said Mandlikova, who has lost 12 of her last 13 matches against Navratilova. "I just didn't do that."

John McEnroe will have to beat the only other American left in men's singles to reach the quarterfinals of the Grand Slam tournament.

McEnroe, seeking his first Grand Slam title since the 1984 U.S. Open, meets 10th-seeded Aaron Krickstein on Tuesday in a fourth-round match at the National Tennis Center. They've met twice, with McEnroe winning both times.

"Krickstein is not the type of player who beats himself, but if I keep up my concentration I think I'll be in good shape," McEnroe said Sunday, after beating West German Patrick Kuhnen 6-2, 7-5, 6-2.

Palmer claims $70,000 in Skins game

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Arnold Palmer, showing signs of his old magic under pressure, rolled in a pair of dramatic putts Saturday to win two holes and collect $70,000 on the opening day of the Senior Skins Game.

Gary Player won one hole to earn $50,000. Chi Chi Rodriguez, who dominated last year's tournament, and Skins newcomer Billy Casper were shut out over the first nine holes of the competition at La Quinta Hotel Golf Club.

The final nine holes, with a total of $240,000 at stake, of the $360,000 tournament will be played Sunday.

Iowa freshman Don Finch, with a 10-9-1 season record, battled back in the final period to come away with a 6-6 draw with Dave Dean at 177 pounds. Dean, a senior, was 12-1 but unranked at the weight.

"At the time, I figured that (Iowa's Brooks) Simpson would win," Gable said in reference to the 190-pound match to follow Finch. "At the time, I didn't realize how important (a draw) was."

The draw at 177 pounds moved the team score to 19-13 in favor of Iowa. Simpson dropped a superior decision to Chris Short, 14-6, making it 19-17 and setting the stage for Haman.

In a match between Iowa's second-ranked Joe Melchiorre and Minnesota's fourth-ranked Jim Hamel at 134 pounds, the Iowa co-captain gained a little revenge, winning 11-5.

"(Hamel) beat me at the Northern Open," Melchiorre said. "I just wanted to go out and do what I was capable of doing. I just tried to be aggressive and it paid off."

Iowa will now prepare for the Big Ten duals in Indianapolis on Friday and Saturday.

Hawkeyes

wanted to get it up there and hope it would go in."

The contest, which improved Iowa's record to 14-3, 2-2 in the Big Ten, was the latest in a series of blown opportunities for the 9-9, 2-3 Boilermakers.

Purdue recovered from Iowa's 8-0 run to start the game, leading Iowa 21-11 with nine minutes left in the first half.

However, that lead shrunk to 34-30 by halftime.

Purdue stretched that margin to 56-45 with 10 minutes remaining in the contest, but Armstrong hit a 3-pointer, Marble stole an inbound pass and scored on a layup and Horton scored inside off an assist from Les Jepsen to make the score 56-51.

Several critical turnovers down the stretch gave the Hawkeyes the room they needed to squeeze out the win. Purdue lost under similar circumstances at Minnesota Wednesday night.

"I think I've seen this same thing seven, eight times now," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "I'm not sure what I did to anyone this year, but it's an exercise in agony and I'm getting fed up with it."

Iowa Coach Tom Davis said he would have been proud of his team win or lose.

"The way both teams worked out there today, I was proud of that going in," Davis said. "If that shot falls, and we lose the game, I would have been very pleased with the effort my ballclub gave."

Davis said Horton's play was especially necessary against the very physical Boilermakers.

"They (Purdue) are so good inside, they play tremendous post basketball," Davis said. "Eddie was the key, and I thought Les (Jepsen) had a nice game in there with him."

Jepsen scored a career-high 11 points and had eight rebounds, while Armstrong had 17.

Purdue was led by Ryan Berning, who had 13, and Scheffler, who scored 12 points and had eight rebounds.

Davis said that though the rough inside play was clean, he thought the referees lost control of the game and should have called things a little closer.

"We've got to make a firm commitment — you've got to call it, even if it means a lot of free throws some nights to get the kids under control," Davis said.

Marble scored only seven points in the contest and needs 11 Thursday night against Wisconsin to become Iowa's all-time leading scorer.

Horton

Horton had 10 rebounds, which should keep him near the conference lead. He also made all four of his free throws, after going one-for-five from the line at Ohio State this past Thursday.

"Free throws are nothing but confidence — building your confidence up and concentration,"

Horton said "It's something that every person should realize, hey, it's a free shot. That's what I've got to believe, hey, the referees are giving me a free shot, take advantage of it."

"Ed played very well," senior guard B.J. Armstrong said. "He got the job done in crunch time."

Horton said the situation called for one of Iowa's three seniors to take control.

"It's our ballclub," he said. "We go out there and do the things we know are going to make us win. The three of us can go out there and make things happen."

Iowa

mantled the Gophers with their speed. This year they did it with their muscle. Shanda Berry scored a career-high 29 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to pace a patient Iowa offense.

"Somewhere down the line we are going to have to execute at the half-court level," Stringer said. "What's the use of seeing how fast we can go? We already know we can run."

Berry said she was helped by the emotion from Iowa's close win last Wednesday at Drake.

"I was still playing on the emotions of Wednesday's game," Berry said. "I guess it was the way I approached it. I was mentally in the game."

Iowa's center position was the key for Iowa, even when Berry was taking a breather. Iowa centers combined for 46 points Saturday. Trisha Waugh scored eight points, and Felicia Hall had nine off the Iowa bench.

"(Berry) is an outstanding player," Fields said. "Our post players couldn't decide how to play her. They didn't know whether to front her, play behind her or help her shoot the ball. We decided to go for the rebounds but there were never any of those."

The 4,130 fans at the Arena were hoping Iowa would score 100 points, but Stringer said she told her players to keep it down.

"I told them not to score," Stringer said. "Coach Fields is a good friend of mine and I really wasn't interested in (100 points). We actually were playing a zone that allowed (Minnesota) to hold the ball. The players got jumpy and wanted to spread it out and I can't blame them."

Fields said her team came in thinking upset of the fifth-ranked Hawkeyes, but never really got on track.

"The time was right," Fields said. "Our men just had a big win over Iowa's men last week. We just did not rise to the occasion."

The win, coupled with a Purdue loss at Ohio State Friday, leaves Iowa in sole position of the Big Ten lead at 5-0. The Hawkeyes are 15-2 overall. Minnesota slips to 1-4 and 4-11.

Iowa hosts Indiana on Friday and travels to ninth-ranked Purdue Sunday.

Kruckeberg records three wins in invite

By Matthew Zlatnik
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track team approached the unscored, season-opening Missouri Invitational in Columbia, Mo., this past weekend as a warm-up for future competition.

"It was good to get competitive again, into racing again," senior all-American Jeanne Kruckeberg said. Kruckeberg, a middle-distance specialist, led the team, recording wins in the mile and the 800-meter run.

Kruckeberg also anchored the two-mile relay, which won at Missouri for the third consecutive year. Others on the relay were Rachelle Roberts, Kim Schneckloth and Tami Hoskins.

Women's Track

"I think it went well for everyone," Kruckeberg said. "Most of the people I talked to said they felt pretty decent."

Schneckloth finished second to Kruckeberg in the mile, and Roberts was the runner-up in the 1,000-meter.

Coach Jerry Hassard cited the efforts of freshmen sprinters Karen Layne and Amy McRell, who had what he called "sparkling debuts."

"I thought they did well in their first contest," Hassard said. "We have some athletes that still have to work to be prepared for collegiate-level competition — all years, not just freshmen. They know who they are and what they have to do after this weekend."

Other freshmen who performed well included Jennifer Brower, who took second in the 3,000-meter in a personal-best 10 minutes, 7.61 seconds; Laura Kriener, who placed third in the shot; and Angela Chadwick, who was second in the 400-meter in 60.40 seconds.

"I didn't feel nervous, just uncertain that the competition would be like," Chadwick said. "I'd been training hard, so I just went out and ran my race."

Becki Borg won the triple jump and was third in the long jump. The mile-relay team of Jill Freed, Chadwick, Layne and McRell finished second.

The Hawkeyes expected a low-key meet, but Hassard said it was competitive.

"Missouri came out a little more prepared to compete this year," Hassard said. "We faced stiffer competition than we expected from them."

"It was a fairly competitive meet, one that helped us assess where we are on the Division I level."

Besides Iowa and Missouri, teams from Missouri-Rolla, Missouri-Baptist, Indiana State, Western Missouri and Lincoln competed.

"It was a nice, relaxed meet," Chadwick said, "to ease into it gradually. It was just intense enough to get your adrenalin flowing."

Men take 4th; women beat Huskies

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes blew into the Windy City to compete in an 11-team invitational hosted by Illinois-Chicago this past weekend.

When the gales finally subsided, Iowa landed in fourth, right where Coach Tom-Dunn expected.

"We had our best performance of the season," Dunn said. "We hit much better on our routines. But, because the judges were tougher, our score was similar to our results against Illinois."

"With all the injuries we've had, I was hoping to finish no worse than fourth. We probably couldn't have done any better. Because, even if we would have hit all the pommel horse and horizontal bar routines that we missed, our score would have been higher — but not our finish."

Once again, Jeff Dow captured the all-around title, with a total score of 109.2. Dow finished first in the compulsory on Friday night and maintained his lead through Saturday's optional routines.

Dow was followed by Minnesota's Mike Miller with a 108.25 and David Ramero of Illinois who finished at 107.7.

Iowa claimed four of the seven possible individual titles. Dow led the way for the Hawkeyes, taking both the all-around and the horizontal bar titles.

Junior captain Keith Cousino made the finals in two events, finishing sixth in floor exercise and capturing the parallel bars event. Cousino made the finals with a 9.1 preliminary round score and clinched the title by scoring a 9.5 in the finals routine.

Finally, senior Paul Wozniak won the still rings championship with a score of 9.65 in the finals.

"I was pretty excited about winning," Wozniak said. "But, we need to improve on pommel horse and we need a little more improvement on high bar. But considering our four individual titles, it was pretty exciting."

Dunn was pleased with the performance, but said his team needs to continue to improve in order to have a chance at winning the Big Ten.

"The depth is really hurting us," Dunn said. "Obviously, our best people are some of the best competing in the tournaments. But you have to count five scores."

By Anne Upson
The Daily Iowan

In an extremely close meet, the Iowa women's gymnastics team slipped past Northern Illinois Saturday, 177.05-174.55, at the Field House North Gym.

Iowa, 2-1, which was defeated last season by the Huskies, led by one point after the first event. Iowa junior Robyn Zussman's 9.35 earned her a first place on the vault.

"She had a very fine vault," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said. "It is a difficult move, but she did it well."

In the following event, the uneven bars, Michelle Cahal placed first with a 9.50, followed by teammate Lori Cole with a 9.05. Northern Illinois' top performers were Angie Tasetano and Martha Unger, each with an 8.85.

The balance beam proved to be even closer. Cole's top score of 9.30 was a bright point for the Hawkeyes. DeMarco said she thought the beam could use some improvement.

"We need to work on being aggressive on the beam," DeMarco said. "Zussman has a difficult mount, but that didn't hold her back. We need to stay on the beam."

The Hawkeyes' 43.35 final score in the beam edged them past the Huskies' 43.1. At this point, the score was 131.8-129.70, Iowa leading, with only the floor exercise rotation left.

The floor was the strongest event for Northern Illinois. The Huskies had three competitors score above 9.0. Northern Illinois Coach Bobbie Cesarek said she was surprised by the outcome of the floor.

"I didn't think it was one of our better events," Cesarek said. "Some girls like to perform on the floor exercise like it because it is different. I am very pleased with our scores."

But the Hawkeyes had an outstanding performance from Cole. She said she thought her record-breaking 9.50 performance on the floor was close to perfection.

"I felt that I can't really improve on my routine," Cole said. "I was kind of disappointed by the score, because I thought I did it well."

Though the Hawkeyes didn't outscore the Huskies in the floor event, DeMarco said she was happy with the team's performance.

"Individually, Jane Powers' double-back was great," she said.

'Solid' Hawks race to third straight win

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

The water was unusually cold at the Anderson Hall Pool in DeKalb, Ill., but the Iowa women's swimming team heated up on the way to its third consecutive dual meet victory, over Northern Illinois Friday.

"The water was frigid," said junior Louise Keogh. "But everyone pulled together and it turned out to be a solid team victory for us."

With the 168-132 victory, the Hawkeyes closed their dual meet season at 4-7.

"This means a lot to us," said junior Becky Anderson, "because instead of going into the Big Ten meet with just one win, we have four under our belt, and a lot more confidence."

Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy said he was pleased with Friday's meet because everyone swam well in every event.

"We were solid in every race," said Kennedy, "and they were tired too, from the Hawaii trip, the start of classes and the intensive workouts we've had."

The meet took off in the right direction for Iowa with a solid victory in the 200-yard medley relay. Winning members included Katie Van Verst, Keogh, Colleen Thome and Anderson.

Beth Janis then captured the first of her two victories on the day with a win in the 1,000-yard freestyle. She later won the 200-yard butterfly.

Anderson later won the 50-yard freestyle, while Keogh won both the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events. Van Verst came in ahead of the field in the 200-yard backstroke.

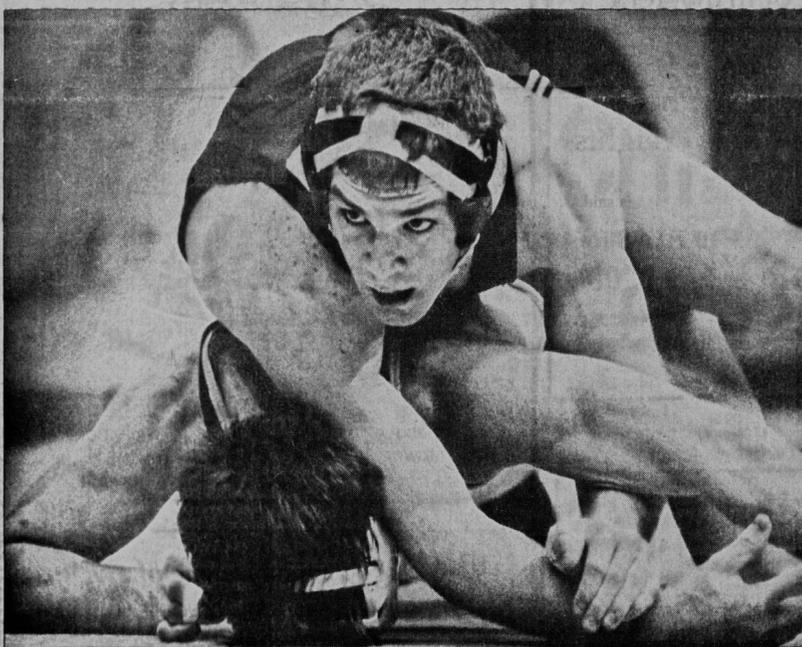

Senior Leah Holzwarth, competing in her last dual meet, placed second in the 200 butterfly and third in the 100-yard butterfly.

Kennedy also said he was pleased with the performances of Katie Decker, who took second in both the 1,000 freestyle and 500-yard freestyle, and Sue Chess, who finished third in the 400-yard individual medley.

On the boards, senior Terri Millier won the one-meter diving event, while Debbie Wirth captured second place on the three-meter board.

The Hawkeyes' final meet before the Big Ten championships in mid-February is the Illinois Invitational, next weekend in Bloomington, Ill.

Illini slip past Georgia Tech; Big Ten teams slump on road

Big Ten basketball teams — even the mighty — are finding it harder and harder to win on the road.

On Saturday, lowly Wisconsin managed a 71-68 road ambush of sixth-ranked Michigan; No. 7 Iowa had to squeeze out a 67-66 victory at Purdue; No. 19 Indiana, playing at home, whipped Michigan State 75-60; and Northwestern posted a 75-67 homecourt win over Minnesota.

On Sunday, second-ranked Illinois beat Georgia Tech 103-92 in double overtime, improving chances the Illini will be picked No. 1 in the next Associated Press poll.

Fans screamed "We're No. 1" as the final seconds ticked off, but Coach Lou Henson later played down the importance of the rankings.

"Sure, I feel good about it, but I'm just thinking about our team and what we have to do the rest of the season," said Henson.

Senior Kenny Battle scored 25 points to lead the Illini. Unranked Georgia Tech, which dropped to 11-5 for the season, got 29 points from Dennis Scott and 20 from Tom Hammonds.

Big Ten Basketball

The Illini, down 14 points at the half, outscored the Yellow Jackets 21-10 in the second overtime to clinch the victory and the best opening record in school history.

At Madison, Wis., on Saturday, Trent Jackson made the go-ahead free throw with 30 seconds left and Tim Locum added two more with four seconds to cement Wisconsin's upset victory.

"It's a huge win for us. It shows we're a very capable team," Badger Coach Steve Yoder said.

Locum had to wait several minutes to shoot his first free throw as officials checked a television replay to see whether three or four seconds remained.

"I told the referee to take all the time he needed. My legs were tired and I needed the rest. I knew I had to make them," Yocum said.

Jackson led the Badgers with 21 points and Danny Jones had 19. Glen Rice led the Wolverines with 25 points.

Michigan led 24-14 with 9:25 left in the first half but Wisconsin, spurred by a technical foul on Sean Higgins, scored nine straight to get back in the game as Locum made four free throws, Jackson hit a 3-pointer and Kurt Portmann made a basket.

The game was tied at 35 at the half.

Both of Michigan's league losses this season have come on the road. At Bloomington, Indiana won for the 12th straight time and upped its record to 5-0.

The home crowd, angered after Bob Knight got his first two technical fouls of the season, began tossing coins onto the court in the first half.

That upset the coach, who grabbed the public address microphone and told the fans, "Keep in mind we don't throw things here. I don't Knight had once been thrown out of a game a few years ago for throwing a chair.

In Evanston, Ill., Brian Schwabe's 22 points helped Northwestern break an 18-game Big Ten losing streak that dates back a year ago.

Schwabe said, "It was our first Big Ten victory in a long time."

Ex-manager makes allegations against N.C. State program

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A former North Carolina State basketball student manager says he was offered cars, cash, apartments and money while involved with the program, and told an interviewer that the public will be "appalled" when they read about the behind-the-scenes activities with the Wolfpack in Peter Golenbock's forthcoming book, "Personal Fouls."

John Simonds Jr., thought to be the source of allegations in the book, was the subject of an interview televised by NBC Sports during halftime of the N.C. State-North Carolina game on Saturday. He said he decided to give information about the Wolfpack program and Coach Jim Valvano because he thought the public should see behind the scenes.

"I was on the inside. I saw things that the average public person does not see," Simonds said in the interview, which was conducted by NBC investigative reporter Armen Keteyian.

Valvano, who watched the video tape of Simonds' interview, responded, saying: "Integrity has always been, maybe, the most important aspect of the coaching profession. My integrity has been questioned for the last several weeks," Valvano said.

"All these allegations are false and they have hurt me personally and professionally," Valvano said. "My family has suffered a great deal."

In response to Simonds saying he received cars, cash and an apartment, Valvano said: "It's also shocking, the thought that a manager was offered cars, cash . . ."

The allegations of wrongdoing in the Wolfpack basketball program focus on the 1986-87 season, and appeared on the dust jacket of the book, published by Simon & Schuster. Those allegations were published two weekends ago by the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Jim Valvano

Among the charges were that Valvano funneled money from the Wolfpack Club to players, that grades were changed to help players retain eligibility, and that players received cars and money.

Also, the dust jacket said that one player "deliberately lost" an NCAA first-round game so as not to be detected for drug use which would have jeopardized his NBA career.

Simonds has said that he is not the lone source for the book, but that several players and faculty members were involved in revealing information about the allegations.

"When the public sees this, I think that they're going to be shocked and appalled, especially back home, where basketball is a fever," Simonds said. "People just eat, drink, breathe basketball."

Simonds, now a student at Florida State, said he doesn't have an ax to grind in making the allegations.

Injuries slow Hawks at doubles tourney

By Neil Lewis
 The Daily Iowan

Illness and injury affected the Iowa women's tennis team this past weekend in the Minnesota Doubles Invitational in Minneapolis, but there were also a few bright spots.

Team scores were not kept during the three-day tournament, which matched teams from Drake, Nebraska, Minnesota and Southwest State.

With four wins in five matches, the No. 3 doubles team of Karen Muldowney and Colleen Nichols provided the strongest performance for the Hawkeyes.

The No. 1 pair of Liz Canzoneri and Madeleine Willard produced two wins in six matches for Iowa and the No. 2 team of Tracey Peyton and Tracey Donnelly had one win.

Muldowney, who has played doubles with Nichols for the past year, said this weekend was a new high point for the duo.

"I think it's the best Colleen and I have played," she said. "We were aggressive, we communicated well and we came to the net together — that was something we had worked on."

Peyton and Donnelly forfeited their final match Sunday morning

because Donnelly had sprained an ankle the previous day.

Absent from Coach Micki Schillig's traveling squad were Patti Desimone, Susan Evans and Catherine Wilson. Desimone is out with the flu, Evans has a possible stress fracture in one of her hands and Wilson is recuperating from knee surgery.

Schillig said the invite was a "so-so" weekend for the Hawkeyes.

"It was good experience," Schillig said Sunday. "Karen and Colleen played very well. It will be interesting to see what happens when everyone is healthy."

Schillig was ailing herself over the weekend and spent part of Saturday in the hotel room with a 103-degree temperature.

Since the spring season is just beginning, Nichols said, it's important to be cautious of injuries.

"Tracey (Donnelly) hurt her ankle going for a wide angle," she said, "and this early in the season it isn't worth risking a more serious injury."

Calcavecchia takes Phoenix Open win

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia, who let one get away a week ago, was never seriously challenged in a front-running, seven-stroke victory Sunday in the Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Calcavecchia held a three-shot lead starting the final round and steadily expanded it with a brilliant bogey-free 64 that left the rest of the pack straggling far behind.

He won this one, his fourth on the American tour, with a 263 total, a distant 21 under par on the TPC course at Scottsdale.

By his own estimate, the victory was a week late in coming. He held a two-shot advantage going into the final round of the Bob Hope Classic last week.

"I expected to win that one. I was playing so good I expected to win. And I blew it," he said.

There was never any chance of a repeat performance in this one, however.

The current Australian Open champion pushed his leading margin to four shots after four holes, led by five at the 10th and was six in front over most of the back nine.

There was no caution, no conservatism, no holding back. He was aggressive all the way, reaching both back-nine par-5s in two and attempting to drive the green on the 332-yard 17th.

Cards beat UNLV; Cyclones fall in OT

(AP)—Pervis Ellison matched his career high of 28 points as No. 4 Louisville saw a 23-point lead cut to five before recovering to beat No. 10 Nevada-Las Vegas, 92-74.

Louisville, 13-2, now owns the nation's second-longest winning streak with 13 straight, while Nevada-Las Vegas, 13-3, had its 11-game skein snapped.

Louisville built a 59-36 lead with 14:40 in the game before Nevada-Las Vegas charged back to make it 66-61 as Stacey Augmon scored 12 points and Clint Rossum eight.

Louisville then got the benefit of a technical foul on the Nevada-Las Vegas bench for arguing a call. By the time the ensuing foul shots and Louisville's next possession were over, the lead was back to 77-63 with 5:35 remaining.

In other games this weekend, top-ranked Duke lost at Wake Forest 75-71, No. 5 Oklahoma beat Iowa State 109-100 in overtime, No. 8 Missouri downed Oklahoma State 105-83 and No. 9 Arizona stopped Villanova 75-67.

Also, No. 11 Syracuse defeated Notre Dame 99-87, No. 12 Seton Hall routed New Hampshire College 108-67, No. 13 North Carolina escaped North Carolina State 84-81, No. 14 Florida State beat Cincinnati 95-80, Kentucky downed No. 18 Tennessee 66-65, No. 17 Kansas defeated Colorado 89-74, No. 19 Indiana topped Michigan State 75-60 and No. 20 Stanford beat UCLA 84-75.

No. 12 Seton Hall 108, New Hampshire College 67

Seton Hall hit a school-record nine 3-point shots, including five in the first half by Andrew Gaze, as the Pirates ran past Division II New Hampshire College.

Gaze keyed a decisive 22-3 first-half run that sparked Seton Hall to its 17th victory in 18 starts. The point total was one more than the Pirates scored in beating Mt. St. Mary's of Maryland earlier in the season.

Seton Hall took a 3-2 lead on the first 3-point basket by Gaze and never again trailed.

New Hampshire College fell to 11-5 after seeing its eight-game winning streak end.

The Pirates led by as many as 45 points in the closing minutes. Gaze and John Morton each finished with 20 points. Carlos Baez topped New Hampshire with 20.

Wake Forest 75, No. 1 Duke 71

Freshman Derrick McQueen scored 20 points and Wake Forest upset the visiting Blue Devils, handing the No. 1 team its second straight loss.

Duke cut a 15-point deficit to two in the second half. But McQueen, playing with four fouls, made two baskets as the Demon Deacons stayed in charge.

Danny Ferry scored 29 points for Duke, 13-2 overall and 3-2 in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Wake Forest is 9-6 and 2-4.

No. 3 Georgetown 59, Connecticut 55

Sam Jefferson made two free throws with 15 seconds remaining to give Georgetown a Big East victory that served as a welcome-back gift to Hoyas Coach John Thompson, who returned to the bench after his two-game protest over the NCAA's Proposition 42.

Georgetown rallied from a 51-41 deficit with 5:24 left. The Hoyas tied it on a three-point play by Alonzo Mourning with 1:30 remaining and Jefferson, who was fouled after rebounding a missed shot, put Georgetown ahead. Charles Smith added the last two points on free throws after a missed Connecticut shot.

No. 5 Oklahoma 109, Iowa State 100

Mookie Blaylock scored a career-high 38 points and Oklahoma scored the final nine points in overtime to beat Iowa State in the Big Eight.

Tony Martin made two straight baskets as the Sooners broke away from a 100-all tie. Oklahoma, which trailed by 11 points in the first half, is 15-2 while the host Cyclones are 9-6.

Stacy King, who did not start because he was late for a pre-game meeting, made two foul shots with 29 seconds left in regulation to force the extra period. King, held to one point in the first half, finished with 15.

No. 8 Missouri 105, Oklahoma State 83

Byron Irvin scored 30 points and sparked a second-half comeback that sent Missouri past visiting Oklahoma State in the Big Eight.

The Tigers trailed 62-54 before going on a 25-8 burst. Anthony Peeler added 22 points for Missouri, 16-3.

Freshman Byron Houston scored 27 for the Cowboys, 10-3.

No. 9 Arizona 75, Villanova 67

Sean Elliott had 31 points and set the school's all-time scoring record as Arizona beat visiting Villanova.

Elliott now has 2,147 points. Bob Elliott, no relation, held the old mark of 2,132.

Arizona is 13-2. Doug West scored 29 points for Villanova, 10-8.

No. 11 Syracuse 99, Notre Dame 87

Syracuse ended a three-game losing streak as Sherman Douglas scored 26 points at Notre Dame.

Stephen Thompson added 25 points and Derrick Coleman had 21 for the Orangemen, 15-4. Joe Fredrick led Notre Dame, 8-3, with 24 points.

No. 13 North Carolina 84, No. 15 N. Carolina St. 81

Steve Bucknall scored 14 points and North Carolina held off North Carolina State, leaving the teams tied for the Atlantic Coast Conference lead.

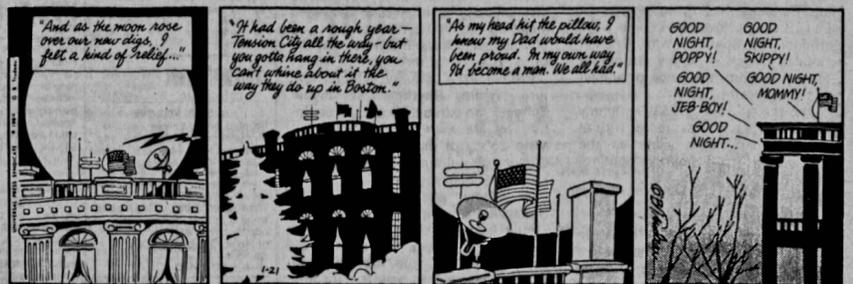

North Carolina improved to 16-3 and visiting North Carolina State fell to 12-2. Both are 3-1 in the ACC.

Entertainment Today

At the Bijou

"Wuthering Heights" (1952) - You can tell by the date that it's not the off-talked-about Olivier version. But Luis Buñuel's riveting screenplay of Emily Brontë's novel is in some ways stronger. In Spanish, with English subtitles. (Heck - Emily Brontë in Spanish is worth the price of admission all by itself.) 7 p.m.

"The Naked Spur" (1953) - Jimmy Stewart plays a bounty hunter with at least as many dark sides as the ne'er-do-well he's bounty hunting. 8:45 p.m.

Television

"The Power Game" - The Congress - A close look at the lives of powerful members of Congress who spend many amounts of time, energy and money vying for re-election. Not for young children, expectant mothers or the weak of heart (9 p.m., IPTV 12).

"Predator" - Arnold Schwarzenegger faces a horrific alien murder machine with an underbite somewhat reminiscent of Joan Rivers. Only one emerges alive in this left-right ripoff of science fiction author David Drake's very entertaining novel "Killer" (11:35 p.m., HBO).

Art

The UI School of Art will present an All-Media Forum at 8 p.m. in EPB, Room 304. The forum - part of a monthly series - will feature the works of painting student Dan Ayala, music student Philip Blackburn and the sculpture of visiting faculty member David Jokinen.

"Art of the Red Earth People: The Mesquakie of Iowa" - Over 200 items make up this first-ever public display of Mesquakie art and artifacts. At the UI Museum of Art through Feb. 26.

Project Art's January exhibits feature "Winter Rhythms; Archetypal Echoes," an exhibit of ceramic sculpture by Maureen Seamonds in the Main Lobby of the UI Hospitals and Clinics; oil paintings by Linda Lockridge are displayed in Boyd Tower East Lobby; photographs by Tim Strang are on display in Boyd Tower Lobby along with panoramic and medium format photographs by Drake Hokanson, the first artist to exhibit work in the new Patient and Visitors Activities Center.

Zhuo Min and Alison Albrecht will display their art at The Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 E. Washington St., through Feb. 5.

"Multiple Talents: An Exhibit of the Book Arts" is on display at the Arts Center, 129 E. Washington St., until Jan. 31. The Solo Space features "Time to Remember" by Ruth Johnson, while "Seeking to Secure - Part I" by Anne Goehner can be seen in the Installation Space.

Radio

Craig Kessler slips into his "Blues Groove" and slops out some of the soothing sounds of the entire day (8-11 p.m., KRUI 89.7 FM).

East nearly meets West in Peking

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Considering the difficulty Hancher Auditorium had last semester giving away tickets to the National Dance Company of Senegal, the full house Thursday night for the Peking Opera — another event in the International Series — was encouraging. There's nothing quite so deadly to the artistic life of a community than an unwillingness to try new things.

Still, after the first 20 minutes of Thursday night's program, many stalwarts in the audience were probably wondering if what they were watching was just a little too new. The Peking Opera Company decided to open its four-segment program with an excerpt from "The Sword is a Gift from Bai Hua," a long scene in the bedroom of Bai Hua, daughter of the warlord An Xi.

The scene calls for much singing, but even listeners familiar with Luciano Pavarotti or Kathleen Battle belting out Verdi or Bizet were surely nonplussed with the singing they heard — all in Chinese, all sounding somewhat harsh and angular to Western ears and all feeling as foreign to Western culture as it looked. And the audience sat there, feeling the first skitterings of "I'm giving up my night for THIS?"

Such fidgeting was a pity. "The Sword is a Gift" was a brilliantly rendered piece of mannered Peking Opera, a fine and flawless performance that tried the patience only because it lacked the pyrotechnics to bridge the culture gap.

But pyrotechnics followed. "Stealing the Stored Silver" was from the story of the demigoddess Green Snake, who steals a treasure of silver from a county governor. The lights went up on Green Snake alone, a graceful woman in bright blue, dancing and flashing her eyes — all of the actors did more with their eyes than most Western Oscar nominees can do with their entire anatomies — and the audience may have feared another slow segment was in store.

They needn't have worried. Within minutes, Green Snake's ghost-henchmen lept on-stage in some-rasulting blurs of color. After stealing the silver, Green Snake and her ghosts must defend it against a warlord of Heaven and his army. The ensuing battle had the audience laughing and gasping.

And justifiably so. There's no spectacle like it anywhere — a dozen colorfully costumed actors, leaping and diving with inhuman agility, juggling spears, swords and each other, the entire stage vibrating with motion, then no movement at all. All of it freezing in an instant. A perfect tableau vivant — then erupting again into action. True see-it-to-believe-it stuff.

Western audiences who've seen feats like those that filled "Stealing the Stored Silver" must have wondered what else there was in China's vast cultural history. Surely it couldn't all be acrobatics.

But show a Western (or maybe just a Midwestern) audience more of that tradition, and what do you get?

In the night's third segment, "Li Kui Visits His Mother," you get badly embarrassed. Prior to the segment, narrator Gin-Gin Wu specifically pointed out that in Peking Opera, wavering hands mean great emotion, great dramatic emotion.

The story that followed depicted the outlaw Li Kui, who, long lost to his mother, finally meets her — only to find she's blind. He must tell her stories of his childhood to convince her of his identity, and when he succeeds, they move to embrace each other, and their hands are fluttering.

And people laughed. It was a wonder the actors didn't choke in shock.

Fortunately, the next segment, "Havoc in Heaven," featured the irrepressible Monkey King — a character Gin-Gin Wu likened to Mighty Mouse — and a bucket-load of eye-opening acrobatics and slapstick. Once again the physical feats were amazing, stunning the audience into bursts of applause as the Monkey King fought off the minions of Heaven. Gymnastic feats — and the Monkey King's Bugs Bunny outlook on life — were immediately accessible to the audience, and when the curtain came down on the assembled cast, the audience filed out smiling.

But the fact it took the Monkey King to win over the crowd speaks volumes about East meeting West.

He's back! Ronald Reagan shows his 40 faces in unprecedented art exhibit LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Ronald Reagan is a mythical centaur. He's also Rocky, a human television set and a warrior.

These images of Reagan by nearly 40 artists, including Andy Warhol and Red Grooms, appear in an exhibit titled "Reagan: American Icon" at Bucknell University's Center Gallery.

"It's unprecedented that a president has had contemporary artists do this many images of him," said Robert P. Metzger, the gallery's director.

The Reagan interpretations range from flattering to critical, but Metzger was quick to point out the exhibit was put together based on the quality of the art, not politics.

"You don't go out of your way to offend someone with an art exhibit, but on the other hand, art is not docile. We do want to arouse people; we want to make them think," he said.

Included in the exhibit is a lifelike portrait of Reagan by Leon McFadden, with the president's face covered by tiny, nearly invisible logos of all of the Fortune 500 companies.

Soviet villag buried by qu

MOSCOW (AP) — An earthquake in Soviet Tajikistan unleashed a 50-foot wall of mud that buried a village and swept through two others Monday, killing 1,000 people as they slept.

The devastating earthquake in the republic of Tadjikistan second to strike the area in two months.

"Almost everybody died," said Tass, the news agency, said by television. The wreckage of the village of Sharora, the number of dead was 600.

Sharora "had more than 100 households before the earthquake," Tass reported. "Now it is razed to the ground by the force of the natural disaster."

Tass said the number of people in the disaster zone southeast of Moscow at 1,000 but caution that is a preliminary figure.

"Rescue work is being carried out in the area and distant mountainous regions," Tass said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush set a brisk pace for his first full week in the White House Monday, cautioned officials against ethical problems and told anti-abortion activists that Supreme Court rulings on abortion "was wrong and overturned."

On his first full week in the White House, Vice President Dan Quayle was briefed by CIA officials on developments in the Middle East before 5 a.m. EST. Ronald Reagan began his first full week in the White House by speaking to a group of White House staff members.

Fitzwater said Bush left the White House at 5 p.m. EST, with a 10-hour or so delay. Bush warned his staff that jobs would be "a tight market" and said "it's brightly well after this place." He said spouses would underwrite the cost of the confirmation, but that the White House would pay for the first official meeting photo. They were to discuss the budget and foreign policy as his mandate for the standards, Fitzwater said.

The press secretary said later saying that Cabinet meeting.
