Iowa shows recovery

Branstad's budget proposal falls short for UI

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

The state of Iowa is showing signs of economic recovery, but it may be some time before the state's three universities reap the benefits.

Earlier this month Gov. Terry Branstad promised in his Condition of the State address that his 1990 budget proposal for the UI, Iowa State University and The University of Northern Iowa would reflect the financial priorities detailed by the state Board of Regents in November.

But despite increased funding for undergraduate education, Branstad's proposal failed to address a number of the UI's funding priorities.

Susan Phillips, UI vice president for finance, said Branstad's proposal was a positive sign for the future, but fell short of the UI's needs in several critical areas.

"We did not get everything we asked for, but the governor did respond very positively to some of the things we recommended," Phillips said. "It is quite meaningful that there is anything in it (the proposal). This is the first time in a number of years that the governor has recommended any money for undergraduate studies."

Branstad's proposal included $900,000 to improve the quality of undergraduate education at the UI in 1990. The UI also received some funding for fire safety costs and price inflation, as well as two "contingency list" plans for an $11.3 million addition to the UI Pharmacy Building and a new $20.3 million business building.

But Phillips said Branstad's proposal did not provide adequate funding for minority recruitment, library automation and acquisitions, or fire and environmental safety — areas that are high on the UI's list of funding priorities.

She said most of the money for undergraduate education will be used to hire more faculty members, but she added the $900,000 proposal represented a substantial cut from the UI's original request.

Earlier this year, UI officials estimated it would take at least $5 million over the next two years to hire a sufficient number of faculty members to teach undergraduate classes.

Phillips said the original UI request was for $7.2 million over two years. That request was modified by the regents to $1.8 million a year over four years, which Branstad's proposal cut to $900,000.

Phillips said the series of cuts will primarily affect how quickly the UI can develop its faculty.

"The governor has cut our request back, but if we were to continue to get additional funds in the next few years it will be possible to build up our undergraduate academic program adequately over time," she said.

Phillips said Branstad's proposal also failed to include funding requests for Opportunity at Iowa

— the UI's minority recruitment program — for the second straight year.

"I guess I really don't know why the governor's office has been so unresponsive in that area," Phillips said. "Our next step is to work with the Legislature to generate some funding, and if that doesn't work, we may have to resort to other sources of funding, either through internal sources or external."

The regents' budget request also included provisions for increased library funding to cover the inflation rate, acquisitions and the completion of the UI Main Library OASIS automation project. Branstad's proposal included funding to cover the 3.5 percent inflation rate, but recommended no funding for either acquisitions or automation.

David Vernon, UI vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties, said last October that most of the funds already invested

Soviet villages buried by quake

MOSCOW (AP) — A predawn earthquake in Soviet Central Asia unleashed a 50-foot wall of dirt and mud that buried a mountain village and swept through at least two others Monday, killing up to 1,000 people as they slept, officials said.

The devastating earthquake in the republic of Tadzhikistan was the second to strike the Soviet Union in two months.

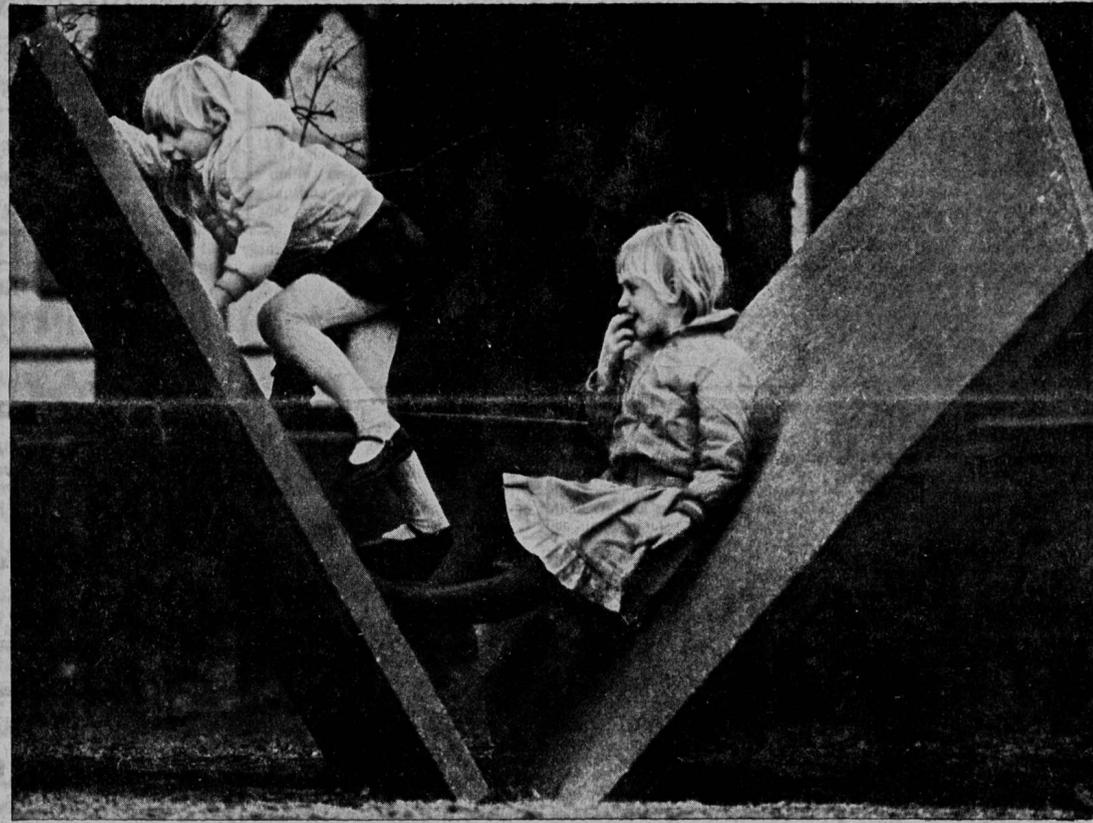

"Almost everybody died," Zainiddin Nasreddinov, editor-in-chief of Tadzhikistan's official news agency, said by telephone after visiting the wrecked farming settlement of Sharora. He estimated the number of dead there alone at 600.

Sharora "had more than 150 peasant households before that tragic moment," the Soviet news agency Tass reported. "Now most of it is razed to the ground by the ruthless force of the natural calamity."

Tass said the number of dead in the disaster zone 1,800 miles southeast of Moscow was estimated at 1,000 but cautioned that was a preliminary figure.

"Rescue work is being continued and distant mountain villages have

Branstad's budget cuts 'Opportunity'

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Despite high-priority efforts of UI officials and the state Board of Regents to bolster minority recruitment, the UI's Opportunity at Iowa program has become a casualty of Gov. Terry Branstad's latest budget proposal.

For the second year in a row, Branstad recommended no funding for the UI program designed to develop effective minority recruitment and fair educational opportunities at the UI.

Philip Hubbard, UI vice president for student services and dean of academic affairs, said UI President Hunter Rawlings has made minority recruitment a principal issue at the UI.

"The effectiveness of President Rawlings' appeal is to sell this program to the Board of Regents, and he definitely sold it to them," Hubbard said. "The regents are committed to the Opportunity at Iowa program. If we are trying to explain why nothing is happening, we have to look above the regents."

Hubbard said the lack of funding is especially frustrating because Opportunity at Iowa seems to be directly in line with some of Branstad's principal areas of concern for the state.

Specifically, Hubbard said the need to expose young Iowans to a diverse educational situation and to attract talented minorities to Iowa for the state's industries is consistent with both the intent of the Opportunity at Iowa program and Branstad's own goals for the state.

Hubbard said a key element in successful higher education today is exposing students to a "real world" situation populated with

Fast pace sets tone for new presidency

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush set a brisk pace for his new presidency as he rose before dawn Monday, cautioned White House officials against ethical lapses and told anti-abortion activists that the Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion "was wrong and should be overturned."

On his first full working day, Bush reported to the Oval Office at 7:21 a.m. EST. He had breakfast with Vice President Dan Quayle, was briefed by CIA officials on intelligence developments and attended the morning meeting of his staff — all before 9 a.m. EST, the usual hour Ronald Reagan began work.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Bush usually works past 5 p.m. EST, whereas Reagan left an hour or so earlier.

Bush warned his aides that their jobs would be "a time-consuming killer" and said "the lights burn brightly well after dark around this place." He said he hoped their spouses would understand.

All of Bush's Cabinet still awaits confirmation, but they were summoned to the White House for their first official meeting and group photo. They were briefed on the budget and foreign policy, as well as his mandate for high ethical standards, Fitzwater said.

The press secretary issued a statement later saying that during the Cabinet meeting, chief of staff

John Sununu discussed "major themes and initiatives to be taken in the weeks ahead."

Secretary of State-designate James Baker gave an overview of foreign policy, telling his colleagues that "we're going to be very busy, but we start with a strong hand and a strong America."

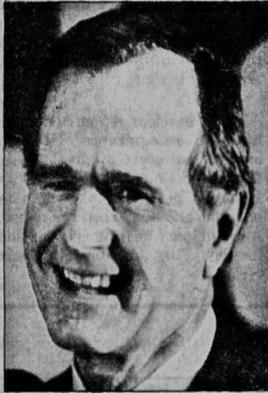

Making good on a promise, Bush refused to answer reporters' questions during the photo-taking session with the Cabinet. "I think it's a better system this way," he said, adding that he would be available in other forums.

Following a practice adopted by Reagan, Bush spoke by telephone hookup in the Oval Office to tens of thousands of anti-abortion demonstrators on the Ellipse near the White House.

Bush said he wanted "to restate my firm support of our cause and to share with you my deep personal concern about our American tragedy of abortion on demand." He said the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion "was wrong and should be overturned."

Bush, who saw the Reagan administration's reputation tarnished by questions of ethical lapses, told his staff he wanted them to set a high standard of conduct.

He said the guidelines should be "pride, honesty, spirit of idealism when it comes to public service, knowing that our actions must always be of the highest integrity.

"It's a question of knowing right from wrong, avoiding conflicts of interest, bending over backward to see that there's not even a perception of conflict of interest," Bush said.

Fitzwater said Bush was not trying to draw a contrast with the Reagan administration on ethics. "He simply wants to do it his way and make the points that he feels are important. . . . He is familiar with the difficulty of inspiring and insuring ethical conduct among an organization as vast as the 2 million person government."

"He simply wants to be on the record and clear about his feelings from day one," Fitzwater said.

Fitzwater said Bush would give a similar charge this week to the bureaucrats in the senior executive service and to the inspectors general of various departments.

School board fields support for new tax

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

About 25 community members gathered with the Iowa City Community School Board last night for a public hearing on the enrichment tax referendum that will go before voters Feb. 14.

Little opposition was raised against the proposed tax, which would generate about $2.3 million in revenue, but several citizens, mostly parents, had questions regarding the implementation of a tax rather than a bond issue.

Board member Jay Christensen-Szalanski said bond issues are a bigger burden on rural residents.

"The tax won't hit rural farmers as bad as a bond issue," Christensen-Szalanski said. "The enrichment tax is only 25 percent property tax, versus a bond issue which is 100 percent property tax."

Other board members replied that the enrichment tax is considered to be a more long-term solution to budget problems because bond issue funds are limited in what they can be used for and they

Vice president search draws more than 100 applicants

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

Interviews of applicants for two of the UI's most influential administrative positions will begin next month, UI officials said Monday.

The positions, which became available last July, represent two of the top offices shaping UI policy: vice president for research, and vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties.

Donald McCloskey, chairman of the search committee for the academic affairs position, said the search has yielded more than 100 applicants so far, some of whom are "quite outstanding."

This position has been held intermittently by UI law professor David Vernon since May, when former vice president Richard Remington resigned to join the UI faculty. Remington took a year's leave of absence from the UI faculty beginning Sept. 1, 1988, to join the School of Public Health at the University of Texas Health Sciences College in Houston.

The position calls for a wide range

City presents 'Reciprocal License Agreement' to UI

By Paige Bierma
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City will present the UI with a new utility agreement proposal within the next two weeks, City Attorney Terrence Timmins told the Iowa City Council Monday night.

The proposal, called the "Reciprocal License Agreement," would allow the UI to build and make improvements on city-owned property and allow the city to do the same to university property with less hassles than were previously involved, Timmins said.

"The same provisions that (would) apply to the university when operating on city streets (would) apply to the city when operating on university property," he added.

Historically, the UI has had to obtain a franchise from Iowa City if the university wanted to build water pipes, telephone or energy transmission lines, traffic lights, other utilities, or to make improvements on city property.

The proposed agreement would cut through the current process in which the university must be granted authority from the city council and the city must go through the state Board of Regents before either can build. A process

Timmins called "cumbersome and time-consuming" in a recent memorandum to the council.

The utility agreement proposal will, however, specifically exclude the UI's cable television system, the council decided. It is an issue that has been debated since the UI began offering cable to the residence halls more than a year ago.

The UI and the city have been trying to hammer out a utility agreement for three years.

In other business, Johnson County Supervisor Dick Myers told the council he would ask the city to help fund a consultant position to study the possibility of implementing an enhanced 911 phone system in Johnson County.

The consultant would consider the feasibility of combining city, county and university dispatching E911 units.

CAC opposes NCAA proposal requiring minimum test score

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

In what CAC Vice President Chris Anderson called a "really symbolic move," the Collegiate Associations Council passed a resolution to support the UI Athletic Department's decision to vote against NCAA Proposal 42.

The proposal, which was passed two weeks ago by the National Collegiate Athletics Association Convention, disallows students to receive an athletic scholarship unless they have a 2.0 high-school core curriculum grade point average and a minimum ACT score of 15. The proposal amends NCAA Proposition 48, which allowed scholarships to be given to students who met only one of these requirements, but forced them to sit out their freshman year.

Bump Elliott, Iowa men's athletic director and the UI representative at the convention, said in The Daily Iowan Jan. 18 that he voted 'no' on the proposal and has always been against the testing portion of Proposition 48.

Despite the wide range of opinions expressed during the CAC meeting Monday night, council members narrowly passed a resolution to support Elliott's move in a verbal vote.

Jerry Miller, who submitted the resolution, said that he was against Proposal 42 because, among other reasons, "it could cause chilling effects on the academic performance of inner city high-school athletes," who might lose hope of winning scholarships to attend college, he said.

Miller also voiced a concern about the fairness of making athletic scholarship winners meet both the grade point and standardized test score requirements. "No other institution that I know of goes on the basis of a test score. It is a standard no one else in society adheres to," he said.

Anderson, however, asked the CAC to discuss the issue further before voting on the resolution. "This is a really important issue, but I've seen more heat than light in the discussion so far," Anderson said. "It's a very serious thing to discuss whether to take a position on this or not."

Matthew Goeckner, another council member, added that he supported Proposal 42 because "here we have the NCAA making sure the athletic scholarship winners are students first and that they're not just employed to play basketball or baseball or otherwise."

Unless further challenged, NCAA Proposal 42 will go into effect in 1990.

State minimum wage debated

DES MOINES (AP)—Labor leaders on Monday hailed a proposed state minimum wage as the least the Legislature can do for working Iowans, while business groups insisted it would cause only more unemployment.

"A fair minimum wage is an issue of self-worth for individuals and self-respect for a state that doesn't want to exploit anyone for the benefit of others," said James Wengert, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor.

But business leaders countered that the proposal harms the very people labor leaders are worried about — the working poor.

"In practice, this law increases unemployment and decreases job opportunities for teen-agers, blacks and women entering the job market," said Donald Hauser, a lobbyist for the Association of Business and Industry. "These are the people who often hold the low-paying fringe jobs, many of which will be wiped out by a higher minimum wage."

Don Finch, the 177-pounder for the team, has not lost his as a result of a charge, a UI official said. Bump Elliott, UI athletic director, said Iowa wrestling coach Gable had instead charged a walk-on sophomore, be put on the team.

Iowa wrestler's scholarship 'on hold' after OWI charge

By Troy Stanton
The Daily Iowan

Don Finch, the starting 177-pounder for the Iowa wrestling team, has not lost his scholarship as a result of a drunken driving charge, a UI official said Monday.

Bump Elliott, UI athletic director, said Iowa wrestling Coach Dan Gable had instead recommended scholarships for Finch and Chris Gopen, a walk-on 126-pound sophomore, be put on hold indefinitely.

The scholarship Finch currently receives is an annual award and may not be withdrawn during the year, Elliott said.

"The actual fact is, that with any scholarship, it's good for the length of the award," he said. "(Finch) will retain the award."

Finch was arrested Dec. 31 for operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, and Gopen, a passenger in the car, was charged with public intoxication and carrying an open container.

Confusion surrounding the incident arose after a story appeared in the Jan. 6 Des Moines Register, which said Gable had rescinded Finch's scholarship as a result of the police charges.

That report was inaccurate, Elliott said.

"(Gable) was going to recommend that Finch receive more aid," he said. "When the incident occurred, he withdrew that recommendation."

Gopen was also recommended to receive a scholarship, but Gable chose to withhold his application. Gable said that he wanted to send a message to the team to clean up its image, as it had been tarnished in recent years because of legal problems involving the wrestlers.

"I started a new era two years ago," he told the Register. "It didn't mean just starting over at winning wrestling championships; it means cleaning up any garbage. The bottom line is things are going to change or get the heck out."

Gable could not be reached for comment Monday.

Elliott said recent reports have misinterpreted the terms of the UI scholarship policy. "That's a policy that (Gable) can't withdraw those scholarships during the period of time they're given for," he said. "He just didn't recommend them for additional aid at this time. Now at the end of the year, both will be reconsidered."

Ann Rhodes, administrative liaison to the UI Board in Control of Athletics, praised Gable's efforts to help his athletes who may have substance abuse problems.

Although alcohol isn't considered a drug in UI athletic drug tests, an OWI charge may be a sign of substance abuse, Rhodes said.

"Coach Gable has made some really sincere efforts to work with his team," she said. "And we are willing to provide him with any administrative help he needs."

Both Rhodes and Elliott said the UI follows the drug testing guidelines set by the NCAA. Rhodes said the NCAA's list of banned drugs is very extensive and even includes some minor prescriptions. However, she added that alcohol was not included on the list because it is a legal substance and its use would be very hard to determine from tests results.

"We initiated a policy to be in compliance with the NCAA," she said. "And at this time, the technology just does not exist to effectively test for alcohol."

The UI Board in Control of Athletics will meet today to discuss possible plans for dealing with athletes confronting substance abuse. Rhodes said her highest priority is to insure the medical aspect is addressed first.

"My first concern in any situation where substance abuse is implicated is doing what is best for the student," she said. "After that it's reasonable to sanction measures (such as pulling scholarships)."

Tom Davis, UI head basketball coach, said that the topic of substance abuse is something that all coaches should be conscious of, as it exists at many levels.

"It's an awareness we all have in coaching today," he said. "And it's a problem that needs to be addressed."

He added he believes Gable will handle the recent problem well. "I have great confidence in Coach Gable," he said.

Brad Bruhl, a 126-pound freshman wrestler, said he believes wrestlers have responded well to Gable's "new era."

"I think everybody is watching out a little bit," he said. "I think that's good for the team aspect."

Teammate Bart Chelesvig, a 167-pound sophomore, agreed. "I think the guys are being a little more careful," he said.

Commoner talks ecology

Scientist discusses worldwide technological, ecological issues

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The University Lecture Committee will host Barry Commoner Wednesday night at 7:30 when he speaks on "Technology, Ecology and Your Future" in the Union Ballroom.

Barry Commoner is a nationally known environmental scientist who first made a name for himself in the late 1950s as an opponent of above-ground nuclear testing. The 1963 nuclear test-ban treaty has been lauded by some as a direct result of the campaign Commoner was active in.

In the '60s and '70s, he made a name for himself as a leading advocate of environmental causes and proponent of alternate energy use. He maintains in his numerous publications, books and speeches, that scientists have a responsibility to apply the lessons of their work to world environmental problems.

Along with Studs Terkel and a variety of other personalities known for their activist world views, Commoner founded the Citizens Party in 1980 as an alternative to politicians whom he felt were ignoring dire environmental issues.

Commoner spoke with The Daily Iowan from the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems in New York City, where he has been director since 1965.

Our country is facing some big environmental problems right now, like toxic waste management, the depletion of South American rain forests and erosion of the ozone layer. What do you think the public mentality is when people think about these issues?

I think most people have a sense, because of last summer (when hospital and solid waste washed up on eastern seashores and the drought occurred), that there is a global environmental problem. And they realize that little or nothing has been done about it. There's the whole greenhouse effect — that is, the warming of the earth — which, if it fully develops, would be an absolute, total catastrophe.

Do you think that's a real possibility?

Yes, I think it is. Of course, there is scientific disagreement. But scientific evidence indicates we may be on the verge of this process really beginning to have some effect. It's not clear yet, but even if it's not true, the problem has to be solved, and that means getting rid of our heavy dependency on fossil fuels. This problem will have to be solved anyway for economic reasons, because when you depend on non-renewable sources of energy, it makes (resources) automatically go up faster and faster in cost.

How do you mean?
Every time you take a barrel of oil out of the ground, you make the next barrel more expensive. It's harder to get. What energy does is allow us to produce goods, and the production of goods is the source of economic wealth. So what you have is a situation in which fossil fuel energy keeps taking more and more of the economic output that is needed just to run the system. . . . That's a negative feedback, and it can't work.

Then what should we do to stop what seems like inevitable economic and resource disaster?

What we have to do is shift to renewable sources of energy.

Such as?

Solar. And that's the situation to the greenhouse effect.

So why haven't we put more resources into solar energy?

We haven't done it because we rely totally on the free market. And the free market is entirely dependent on short-term profitability. These things will make us economically better off, but in the long term.

And people don't want to wait that long.

Right.

So if solar energy is a solution we haven't accepted thus far, what approach should we take now?

What we have to do is to find some way of exercising democratic influence over these decisions. The solar problem exemplifies the kind of problems we face.

What systems now exist that address our environmental problems?

We have an entire regulatory and environmental protection system — the EPA.

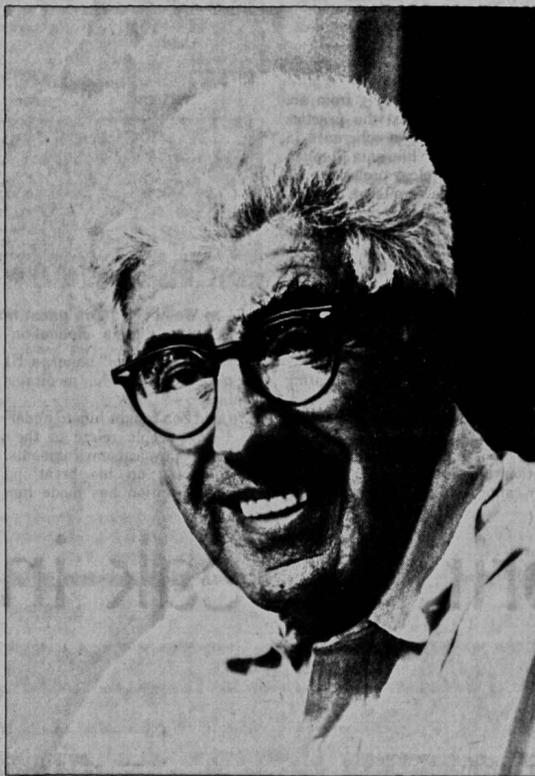

But really, how effective is the EPA?

It's a failure. Because the great bulk of pollutants have only been reduced by about 10 to 15 percent, whereas the environmental laws call for a 90 percent reduction. We have failed to do what we set out to do. We fail to recognize that environmental pollution is an incurable disease — it can only be prevented. Our regulatory system goes into effect only after the presence of pollutants has been discovered. The only thing that works is to prevent the pollution from entering the environment.

Are we realistically able to do that?

Yes. One of the big successes — and there have been a few — has been with lead in the air, which has gone down about 95 percent.

Why has it gone down? Because of governmental regulations?

No, it's because we took the lead out of gasoline and stopped putting it into the environment. The only thing that works is to stop producing the pollutant. What does not work is to put on a control, like on the end of a car exhaust. That has not worked. What that means is that we have to change the technology production, and that is exactly the only thing that will work on the greenhouse effect. We have to shift from using fossil fuels for energy and shift to solar. And that raises a lot of interesting political and economic questions.

In the last decade, you have become increasingly political in your positions on the environment. Does this mean it has become a necessity to involve the political process in the welfare of the environment?

There's no way of solving our environmental problems except politically. The reason is that fundamentally it requires a political change . . . as of now, only private interests have a right to say what is produced and how it is produced. Only the auto companies can decide what kinds of cars we make.

What I'm saying is for the right of the environment, it is absolutely necessary that there is a social determination of what is produced and how it is produced. That means there needs to be a social intrusion into what has been until now a private province of corporations. There's no way of accomplishing anything like that unless by politics.

How do you think Reagan did on that score? Did he help or hurt the situation?

Reagan went in exactly the opposite direction. He tried like mad to privatize as many public activities as he could. We have to completely turn away from Reagan's approach in order to accomplish anything. So you see, there's no question that the political implications of these issues must be explained, and that's one reason why I haven't shied away from politics.

What political activities have you been involved in recently?

I was very active in Jesse Jackson's campaign. I am on the board of the national Rainbow Coalition, and I was Jackson's environmental adviser.

Then Jackson's environmental views must parallel your own.

Exactly.

One last question. How do think George Bush will do in the area of protecting the environment?

Well, you know, it's impossible to tell. Here's a guy who acted one way during the campaign and now claims he's a changed man. I guess the proper approach would be to say "I'm skeptical."

Council calls for increased steroid prevention

DES MOINES (AP)—An advisory council on Monday urged state agencies to "cooperate and increase their efforts" to prevent youngsters from using steroids.

"We're leaders in physical fitness and sports," said Jerry Mathiasen of the Governor's Council on Physical Fitness. "I have a real concern about people who consume or inject steroids."

Mathiasen cited statistics suggesting that as many as 6.6 percent of all male high-school seniors use steroids as evidence that state officials need to move quickly on the issue.

The fitness council unanimously approved a resolution calling for greater urgency on steroid restrictions from agencies including the Department of Public Health, Department of Public Safety, Department of Education, Board of Regents and private groups such as the Iowa High School Athletic Association.

"We urge all agencies and groups involved in recreation, health and fitness to support such preventative efforts," Mathiasen said.

The fitness council is a usually ceremonial group that meets quarterly and isn't often in the public eye.

Mathiasen said the panel decided to issue recommendations on the steroid issue because it's a pressing health matter.

"People think it's a quick way to become a star," said Mathiasen. "We're really concerned about the marginal player."

With intense competitive pressure in athletics, he said, young athletes may turn to steroids to recover from an injury or to improve performance.

While most statistics about steroid use are national, other members of the panel said it would be naive to assume there's no problem in Iowa.

"My impression is there is a fair amount of use around," said Dick Moe of the sports medicine facility at Iowa Methodist Hospital in Des Moines.

Steroid use has been linked to high blood pressure and cancer. Athletes use the drug because it helps build muscle mass quickly.

The issue got public attention last summer when Olympian Ben Johnson was found to have traces of steroids during drug testing.

"I think we need to sound an alarm to our public officials so an anabolic steroid problem does not spread in our state," said Mathiasen.

Currently in Iowa, it's a misdemeanor to have steroids without a prescription.

"A lot of people are taking a look at this," he said.

"In fact, we should be concerned about not only steroid abuse, but all abuse," said Don Casady of Iowa City, another member of the panel.

Morning sessions prepare Zen meditators for daily life

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

At 6:30 a.m. Monday local Zen meditators were sitting cross-legged on black cushions, facing the wall in a room lit with the first rays of the rising sun, trying to focus on their breathing.

The daily morning sessions at the local Zen center allow meditators to mentally prepare themselves for the day ahead.

This week local Zen enthusiasts are sponsoring intensive training in zazen (meditation practice) at the Iowa City Zen Center, 10 S. Gilbert St.

Shoken Weincoff, a Zen priest from the Minnesota Zen Center, will be directing meditation practices and conducting oryoki workshops (meal ceremonies) through Jan. 29. He will lecture at the center at 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Weincoff's visit allows the group some temporary guidance, as the local Zen center has no priest, Fox said. "It makes our practice more precise, stronger and clearer," he said.

Zen is not a religion in the typical sense, Weincoff said. Zen practitioners do not necessarily worship a divine god or subscribe to a mandated list of morals. The teachings of Buddha guide their thinking and daily life. But, those who follow Zen principles may also practice traditional western religions.

"The worship is to put your life into life, it's not like worshipping a divinity," Weincoff said.

Zen philosophy and meditation can be applied to everything from art to daily life. Those who practice Zen contemplate the coherence in all parts of their life, said Stephen Fox, a UI psychology professor who coordinates the events at the Zen Center.

This weekend the center will sponsor traditional morning and evening meals using silent ceremonies that were devised when Zen first began around the seventh century. Three bowls covered with cloth napkins are filled with rice, vegetables and fruit, Weincoff said.

"It's a way to eat while meditating without breaking that centeredness with 'here and now,'" he said.

Learning how to focus on the present is a primary goal of meditation and serves as a preparation for approaching other areas of their lives, said Geoff Lauer, a UI graduate student who meditates regularly.

He said Zen taught him to understand how people relate to their social and physical environments. Concentrating on his breathing during meditation has made him aware of "the air we breathe, the thoughts we share and the support we give one another," he said.

Sitting in meditation helps him focus his thinking throughout the day, Fox said. "I bring my everyday life right there on the cushion. We try to do our whole life just like sitting — focused," he said.

American participation in Zen started about 50 years ago, when Japanese Zen priests moved to American cities with large Japanese populations on the East and West coasts.

Counties, critics vie for road funds

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County could lose more than half a million dollars next year if the Iowa state Legislature decreases the county's percentage of the road-use tax fund.

Johnson County secondary road funds would have to sustain a 21.6 percent decrease overall, or $569,516 if a change is implemented, said Glen Meisner, Johnson County engineer.

Meisner said county, city and state governments have to vie for road money because the federal government decreases road appropriations each year.

"I think it's always going to be an issue," Meisner said.

Supervisor Dick Myers said the Legislature is now preparing to act after 10 years of attempts to change the road-use tax fund distribution.

"I get the sense they're going to do something - the Iowa Legislature - but I don't know what that is," Myers said.

"I hope this can be worked out so that Johnson County won't be hurt," Myers said. "For Johnson County, that's half a million bucks."

Peter Graziano, a state consultant, recommended last week that counties receive only 29 percent of the road-use tax fund, instead of the current 37 percent. He also recommended to a legislative study committee that state highway road-use tax funds be increased 7 percent and city streets receive a 1 percent increase in road-use tax funds.

State highway proponents argue that the state needs a larger percentage of the road-use tax fund because state highways have a higher traffic count and sustain more wear and tear, Meisner said. County road supporters say the county maintains more miles of road.

"This has been a problem that has been ongoing for years. It probably always will be," Meisner said. "Each agency feels they have the most need. I guess it will boil down to who can present the best case to show they need the money."

Meisner said engineers in the Johnson County Secondary Road Department "will be fighting together with the Johnson County Board of Supervisors to lobby against changing the present formula for distribution of the road-use tax fund."

Meisner said a bill to change the distribution will probably be proposed in this year's session of the state Legislature.

Passage of a bill would mean the county would have to cut services or increase taxes or enact a combination of both measures, Meisner said.

Meisner said county roads need more money, not less. According to one study, three miles of road are wearing out for every one mile being repaired.

"I guess I feel our roads are probably wearing out at a more rapid pace than we're able to improve them," Meisner said. "No, I do not feel we're keeping pace, because studies have shown roads are wearing out faster than we're able to replace them."

Graziano said the state Legislature should gradually shift road-use tax fund dollars in the next seven years away from rural roads to the more heavily traveled state highway system.

"What they're saying is that they'll ease the pain over seven years," Meisner said. "There's still pain."

Meisner said the county can fight against the proposed change by contacting state senators and representatives. The county can also utilize the services of lobbyists through the Iowa State Association of Counties and the Farm Bureau.

"The Farm Bureau probably sees the needs that farmers have to get from farm to town where their goods are sold," Meisner said.

Meisner said he will have to make Johnson County residents aware of the proposed change's effects by speaking at meetings.

Myers said the Legislature will either need to compromise on the proposed percentage or consider assessing developers for road use leading to developments in the county.

"Applying the formula the way they're (considering) doing now would be a disaster for counties," Myers said. "I may be wrong, but I just don't think that formula will pass."

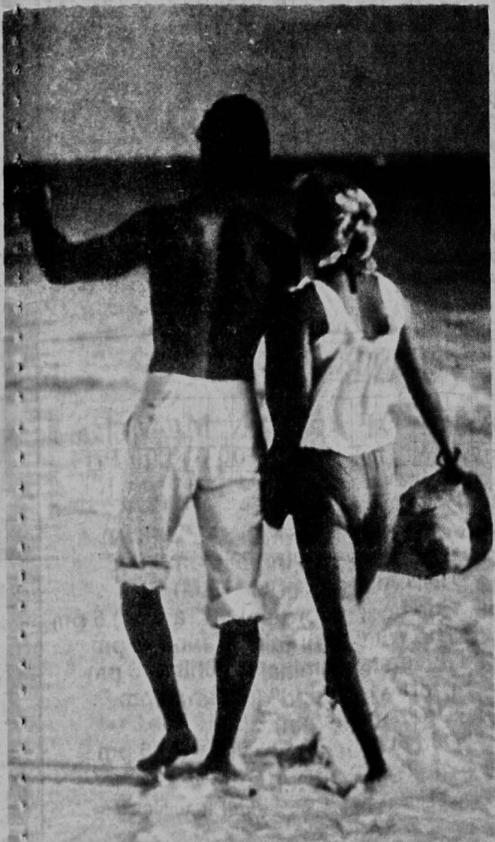

Representative calls to revoke dueling article

DES MOINES (AP)—Rep. Clay Spear is something of a stickler about language and keeping things current, so he doesn't think dueling ought to be in the constitution anymore.

So, Spear has introduced a resolution calling for a constitutional amendment eliminating references to dueling.

It may come as something of a surprise that dueling is mentioned at all in the constitution.

"Any citizen of this state who may hereafter be engaged, either directly or indirectly, in a duel, either as a principal or accessory before the fact, shall forever be disqualified from holding any office under the constitution and laws of this state," it says.

not been checked yet," Tass said. Damaged roads were hampering those efforts.

The quake struck the southwestern part of Tadjhikistan, a Soviet republic of more than 4.8 million people that borders Afghanistan and China.

The 40-second tremor, at 5:02 a.m. (6:02 p.m. EST Sunday) was centered about 20 to 30 miles southwest of Tadjhikistan's capital of Dushanbe, a city of more than 460,000 people, in the fertile Gissar district, a center of grapegrowing and livestock-raising, Tass said.

An official at Dushanbe's seismic center said the quake was strong enough to knock things off shelves in tall apartment buildings in the city, but that it caused no known damage or injuries there. He declined to give his name.

The U.S. Geological Survey in Reston, Va., estimated the quake at 5.4 on the Richter scale, which measures ground motion as recorded on a seismograph. The Dec. 7 earthquake in northwestern Armenia, 1,300 miles west of Dushanbe, registered a 6.9 on the Richter scale and killed 25,000 people.

The earthquake uninged a wall of sodden dirt and mud at least five miles wide that buried the village of Okuli-Bolo and much of Sharora, said Erkin Kasimov, an official of Tadjhikistan's Foreign Ministry.

"Almost all of the victims died asleep in their beds," Police Maj. Alexander Loparev, duty officer at Tadjhikistan Interior Ministry headquarters in Dushanbe said by telephone.

Residents of another village, Okuli-Poyen, apparently roused in time, fled in panic before the mudslide, which traveled 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 miles, could reach their homes, Kasimov said from Dushanbe.

Officials and Soviet media said the devastation was vast and total in places.

In Okuli-Bolo and Okuli-Poyen, near the epicenter, "everything is destroyed — all the homes, the schools, the hospitals and clinics, the stores," Nasreddinov said.

Okuli-Bolo is a "heap of rubble" and the chairman of a local economic cooperative, Hairrulo Yuldashev, said the households of 70 peasant families were "completely demolished and buried by the landslide," Tass said. More than 70 villagers were buried by the landslide, it said.

In Sharora, "cries and wails can be heard everywhere," Tass reported. "Some are bemoaning and burying their near and dear ones, while others are trying to find the few survivors between the thick layer of sand and clay."

It said all of the village's streets had been buried under the 50-foot-high layer of earth that the earthquake detached from a hill near the village.

The TV news program "Vremya" showed aerial footage of Sharora, with white roofs of buried homes peeking through the dirt like seashells scattered on a beach.

Kasimov said that according to preliminary figures, the quake and landslide destroyed about 100 buildings, including five schools and a maternity hospital near the epicenter.

The hospital was evacuated of mothers and newborns before the wall of mud arched and there were no victims, he said.

There was no exact count available for the population of the stricken villages. But the official at the Dushanbe seismic center said families are traditionally large in the mostly Moslem republic and that one dwelling often houses eight to 10 people.

The quake and landslide downed three miles of power lines, destroyed nine miles of telephone lines and inundated four miles of a navigation canal with mud, Kasimov said.

"Thousands of head of publicly owned cattle have perished," Tass said. It said thousands of acres of fertile farmland were covered "by a thick layer of sand and clay."

Nasreddinov said the buildings destroyed were one-story brick structures. Soldiers went to the villages to keep order and restore communications, electricity and water, he said.

Kasimov said geologists believed water from mountain springs had accumulated under the soil of the hills in the Gissar region, making them prone to mudslides.

"When the earthquake came, it was like a catapult, and it hurled the sodden earth onto the villages below," Kasimov said.

Tass said bulldozers, cranes and excavators had been rushed to the quake zone to help dig for survivors and that volunteers had come from Dushanbe and other nearby areas to help in rescue and relief.

of qualifications, McCloskey said. "Above all, (the new vice president) will have to be able to move and lead the university in its academic programs," he said. "Secondary is administrative experience at a high level, and equal to that is intellectual strength."

For Vernon, a replacement can come none too soon. "I would rather be back in the classroom," Vernon said. "I always intended to go back — I will go back."

John Kennedy, chairman of the search committee for the research position, said about 80 potential candidates have been screened so far and added there isn't a definite deadline for accepting applications.

"We'd like to have the selection made by the end of the academic year," Kennedy said. "How long it'll take for this person to move in here is another story."

Duane Spriestersbach, who will be retiring from his dual roles as vice president of research and educational development and dean of the Graduate College this spring, said he is very satisfied with the position he's held for almost 30 years.

"It's been a very wonderful opportunity for me to deal with the responsibility over all this time, and there's been nothing routine about what I've had to work with," he said.

"I think I've been blessed with my job," he added.

Filling Spriestersbach's shoes won't be an easy task, Kennedy said, although it will be made easier by a new UI mandate to restructure that vice president's role.

After Spriestersbach's retirement, the title of vice president of research and educational development will be shortened to vice president for research, and the duties of the Graduate College dean will be transferred to the new vice president for academic affairs.

Spriestersbach said he is unsure if the restructuring of his job is a sound move.

"I have been very comfortable with the fact that they were together," he said. "On the other hand, other universities have decided to go this route and have been effective."

The search committees for both positions have made a specific effort to locate minority and women candidates.

Although quite a few minorities have applied for the jobs, McCloskey said the committees are more concerned with finding someone who can do the job well.

"There's still a lot of white males who'd be excellent for the job," he quipped.

Minorities

people of diverse backgrounds.

"We want Iowans to have a good education for the 21st century," Hubbard said. "In the 21st century, one-third of the people in this country will be minorities, so it is important for all of the students coming out of the University of Iowa to be accustomed to working and interacting with minorities."

"It is simply educationally sound to support a greater emphasis on minority recruitment here," Hubbard said.

In addition, Hubbard said Branstad's concern over the economic welfare of the state justifies significant funding for minority recruitment at the UI.

Hubbard said Iowa industries want the UI to help them attract talented minority graduates, but a lack of effective minority recruitment creates a small pool of graduates at the UI.

Last year, Hubbard said he went to 11 major Iowa cities with representatives from the Board of Regents and the three regents' universities to discuss minority recruitment. He said school officials, community representatives, and minority parents and students were all concerned about the development of an effective minority recruitment system and fair education opportunities at the UI.

"The Iowa school system is grossly unfair to minorities," Hubbard said. "And, if that is the case, then we need to help that situation, but we can't do it with mirrors. We need money."

Despite Rawlings' and other UI officials' commitment to minority recruitment, Hubbard said the Opportunity at Iowa cause is damaged by a lack of tangible results.

Hubbard said it was essential for the UI to continue to stress the value of the program to the governor's office and to work with state legislators to generate funding.

"Last year we were in a similar situation and we received a very sympathetic hearing from a group of state legislators," Hubbard said. "We thought that we had sold them, and at the end of the meeting they said, 'We're going to go to bat for you.' But when the time came, there just wasn't any money for it."

"Certainly there is the possibility of overcoming the lack of funding this year in the Legislature, but experience has shown us that it isn't very likely," he said.

Despite the lack of funding in the past, Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said the Legislature is well aware of the importance of successful minority recruitment.

"If I could raise funding for one thing on (Branstad's) budget, Opportunity at Iowa would be the one I would raise," she said. "It's crucial to the UI and I believe there is considerable support for it in the Legislature. It is hard at this point to estimate whether or not we will see added funding, but it may have a fairly good chance."

State Senator Richard Varn, D-Solon, said there is a considerable amount of interest in affirmative action issues in the Legislature, which may increase the chances of funding for Opportunity at Iowa.

"If we can find some money, I would say that it would definitely be a high priority," Varn said.

Hubbard said whatever the outcome in the state Legislature, the UI will continue to look to other areas of financial support, both internal and external, as alternate means of funding for the program.

Budget

in the OASIS system could be lost if sufficient funding were not approved to maintain the service.

Phillips said Branstad's proposals for an $11.3 million addition to the UI Pharmacy Building and a new $20.3 million College of Business building were on his "contingency lists." The construction projects will not be funded unless there is adequate capital available.

"I'm reasonably optimistic about it, but we'll have to wait to see what the funding balances are at the end of June," Phillips said. "We will have to present our case to the Legislature, but at least we are out of the starting blocks."

Phillips said another major disappointment was the $200,000 Branstad recommended to improve fire safety and environmental protection at the UI.

"I think that means we're facing another year of deferrals in those areas," Phillips said. The UI originally requested $1.25 million for fire safety and $1 million for deferred maintenance costs, Phillips said.

"The governor's recommendations in those areas fell considerably short of our current needs," she said. "It means that we're still looking at not dealing with leaky roofs, plaster falling off and other things of that type."

Even though the state's general economic condition is showing signs of recovery, Phillips said the governor's office and state Legislature have been unwilling to make dramatic funding increases until a number of audits and studies on Iowa's three state universities are completed.

"The regents' request was really quite responsive to trying to address our needs," she said. "I think we really have to recognize the environment in which we are operating and all of these audits and studies that are going on."

"The governor could have simply waited to see the results of all these studies and audits and opted to not fund anything in higher education," she said. "The fact that we got anything at all recommended is a good sign."

Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said the lack of funding requests for special programs in the governor's proposal was not surprising.

Varn said the UI traditionally receives funding for capital money and salaries, and Branstad's request for funding to build undergraduate education at the UI is "the first time we've seen any money for programs to speak of."

"As far as basic educational programs go, the Legislature has been the one coming up with the money for those type of programs," Varn said.

Phillips said that as the legislative year progresses, more funding could become available for the UI in certain priority areas.

"So much depends on how much money the state has," she said. "As the session goes on, we'll be getting a clearer and clearer picture of how much money is available. We may see more money if more money is available."

Sen. Jean Lloyd-Jones, D-Iowa City, said the governor's budget reflects a certain degree of caution about the state's apparent economic recovery.

"Of course, we'd always like to see more for the university, but I don't think the economic improvement will be reflected in very many areas of the state's budget this year," Lloyd-Jones said.

She said the lack of rain during the fall could cause drought conditions again this summer, damaging the agriculture-based segments of the state's economy.

"In light of the conditions, no one is sure how long this recovery will last," she said. "Under those circumstances, I don't think anyone is anxious to increase the budget substantially."

would not provide aid to the district's general fund.

Community members also raised questions regarding the rewriting of the Iowa School Finance Law in the Iowa Legislature, and they questioned what will be done about the phantom students.

One of the provisions in the School Finance Law presently allows districts to cushion enrollment decline by counting 'phantom students.' Districts whose enrollment is below what it was in 1978 are allowed to count 25 percent of that base year enrollment, plus 75 percent of their current enrollment to determine an enrollment used for figuring their budget.

Iowa City has come back from a period of enrollment decline and now has more students than in 1978. It is the only large school district in the state that has no phantom students.

"That (phantom student situation) was a reasonable buffer that was necessary at one time," said one community member. "But now we've lost the equity. Now we've lost a great deal of local control."

Superintendent David Cronin will meet with the Iowa state Senate Education Committee on Wednesday.

Bundy 'subdued' as time of execution approaches

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Confessed serial killer Ted Bundy was "subdued and emotional" Monday while he talked with the defense psychiatrist, and his attorneys filed a flurry of appeals to stop his morning execution.

Ted Bundy

The 42-year-old law school dropout, who confessed to 20 murders in Western states during the last three years, met with psychiatrist Dorothy Lewis while attorneys apparently prepared an argument that Bundy was mentally incompetent to be executed.

Bundy also met with Dr. James Dobson, host of a California religious radio show, during the afternoon. And he was to meet with representatives of the Colorado State Attorney General's office to discuss murders in that state.

Bundy was scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair at 7 a.m. Tuesday for the 1978 kidnapping-murder of 12-year-old Kimberly Leach of Lake City. He also was convicted of killing two sorority sisters in Tallahassee in 1978.

Bundy's attorneys filed an appeal Monday with the U.S. Supreme Court to stay his execution, pending a review of the jury instruction in the sentencing phase of the Leach case. The Supreme Court rejected another Bundy appeal just last week.

The attorneys also filed an appeal in state court, claiming the jury instructions were improper.

Bundy's discussions with the defense psychiatrist meant he might raise the insanity argument once more.

The governor was ready for him. Gov. Bob Martinez told reporters in Tallahassee that three psychiatrists were ready to examine Bundy if his competency was questioned by anyone.

It is the fourth time an execution has been set for Bundy.

But this weekend, he began confessing to a string of murders. He has been linked to as many as 36 killings and disappearances of young women in Washington, Colorado, Utah and other Western states.

But Colorado Attorney General Duane Woodard accused him of stringing along investigators to avoid or delay execution.

Martinez said the execution would go forward whether or not Bundy has time to tell all he knows about killings and locations of bodies.

"I think the way in which Ted perhaps is using the confessions to bargain for time with the law enforcement people has been difficult for some folks to deal with," the Rev. David Ernst, pastor of the Tacoma, Wash., church where Bundy's family worships weekly, said in an interview Sunday.

A San Diego man, William Taylor, asked Martinez to put off the execution until Bundy could say if he was involved in the January 1968 disappearance of his sister in Concord, N.H.

Martinez aide Brian Ballard said Monday that even the approximately 100 requests similar to Taylor's would not make the governor delay the execution.

It's easy to see how people who oppose the death penalty on principle make an exception for Bundy, said Kathleen Taylor of the American Civil Liberties Union in Seattle. "Anybody in their right mind hates that man. You're going get that kind of emotional response," she said.

Once cocky and confident in the courtroom, Bundy acted Monday like a man who believed his time may be running out, a prison spokesman said.

"He's more emotional and subdued," than under the previous three death warrants, said Bob Macmaster, a prison spokesman.

"He knows what he is doing. He knows why he is confessing. His only remorse is that he got caught and he's going to die," said Hugh Aynesworth, co-author of a Bundy book called "The Only Living Witness."

Salt Lake County sheriff's Detective Dennis Couch said Sunday that Bundy mentioned his involvement in up to eight Utah killings, two more than authorities had suspected. Earlier Sunday, Bundy confessed to two murders in Idaho, where officials had never linked him to any killings.

Idaho Attorney General Jim Jones said a number of police agencies were asked to come to Boise to talk about Bundy and determine which old cases might be connected with his confession.

Bundy also provided investigators Friday and Saturday with details of eight Washington killings and two in Colorado for which he has long been suspected.

Argentine infantry regains base

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Soldiers backed by tanks and artillery regained control Monday of most of an infantry base that civilian commandos assaulted and held briefly. Officials said the attackers were leftist guerrillas.

At least 20 of the estimated 50 commandos were killed or wounded in the fighting at the base 12 miles north of the capital, the independent news agency Diarios y Noticias reported, citing an unidentified military source.

Hospital officials said at least four soldiers were killed and 28 wounded, including soldiers, police and one reporter.

"Militarily, the situation at the 3rd Infantry regiment at La Tablada is under control," the secretary for state intelligence, Facundo Suarez, told the government news agency Telam.

He said, however, that some commandos remained on the base 10 hours after the morning attack.

"The army has the strength to resolve the situation immediately, but is trying to avoid unnecessary bloodshed," Suarez said.

By early evening, the commandos were isolated in an officers club, chapel and armory, state-run and independent news agencies reported. Some took positions in buildings and trees outside the base and sniped at soldiers and police, Diarios y Noticias reported.

Earlier, many area residents were evacuated, and traffic was rerouted around the battle scene.

Soldiers held back from an all-out attack on the buildings held by the commandos for fear of injuring conscripts thought to be held hostage by the commandos, the news agencies reported.

Cesar Jaroslavsky, leader of the ruling Radical Civic Union bloc in the House of Deputies, said at least one of the commandos was a member of the Peoples Revolutionary Army, which engaged soldiers in open battle a decade ago but has been inactive since.

"Among the dead is a Mr. Caldu who is identified as belonging to the ERP," Jaroslavsky said, referring to the Peoples Revolutionary Army by its Spanish acronym.

Military sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, also said the commandos were leftist guerrillas. Government officials said they may be members of Montonero, another leftist group that carried out kidnappings, bombings and assassinations in the 1970s.

The commandos, however, threw pamphlets praising an ousted lieutenant colonel who led two insurrections in the past two years.

Defense Ministry spokesmen rejected the possibility that soldiers sided with the commandos. They also said the attack was not a military insurrection against President Raul Alfonsin, who has put down three such uprisings in the past 21 months.

By late afternoon, there were no reports of attacks on other bases in the nation.

The assault was treated as a potentially grave threat, and the most serious of its kind since Montonero and the Peoples Revolutionary Army attacked the Monte Chingolo army arsenal near Buenos Aires in 1975.

Court decision called "giant step backward"

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court, in what three justices called "a giant step backward" for racial equality, drastically limited Monday the power of states and cities to earmark public works contracts for minority-owned businesses.

Voting 6-3, the court said the Richmond, Va., City Council unconstitutionally discriminated against whites in saying a contractor on any city building contract must give at least 30 percent of the value of the project to firms at least one-half minority owned.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, writing for the court, said the city that was once the seat of the old Confederacy and now has a majority of blacks on its governing body relied on "past societal discrimination" to justify the quota.

"None of the evidence presented by the city points to any identified discrimination in the Richmond construction industry," she said.

Adoption of such plans nationwide would obliterate the goal of a colorblind America, she said.

U.S. to aid Peru in war on drug trafficking

WASHINGTON — The United States is sending more helicopters and personnel to help a Peruvian campaign against cocaine trafficking, the State Department said Monday.

The addition of four State Department UH1H helicopters will bring the total involved in the anti-drug campaign to nine, department spokesman Charles Redman said.

He also said additional Drug Enforcement Administration agents are being dispatched to match an increase in Peruvian Civil Guard personnel involved in operations in the Huallaga Valley, a major cocaine growing area.

Redman had no figures but the Washington Post reported in Monday's editions that 25 to 30 DEA agents will be sent to the area over the next few months.

Convicted spy fasts, protests wife's treatment

MARION, Ill. — Convicted spy Jonathan Pollard began a five-day fast Monday to protest what he said was improper medical treatment for his imprisoned wife, Pollard's father-in-law said.

Pollard, imprisoned at the Federal Penitentiary in Marion, was angered by the transfer of his wife, Anne, from a Danbury, Conn., hospital to a federal prison medical facility at Rochester, Minn., said Anne Pollard's father, Bernard Henderson.

Pollard, 34, was sentenced in 1987 to life in prison after he was convicted of supplying classified U.S. documents to Israeli agents. His wife, 28, was given a five-year sentence as an accessory to her husband's illegal possession of the documents.

Randy Davis, assistant to the warden at Marion, said federal privacy regulations barred him from confirming whether Pollard had begun a fast.

EEC to impose sanctions on U.S. imports

BRUSSELS, Belgium — European foreign ministers on Monday approved a plan to impose heavy sanctions on some U.S. imports if the Bush administration fails to move quickly to end a stubborn trade dispute over hormone-treated meat from America.

Ministers of the 12-nation European Economic Community agreed to slap duties on imports of U.S. walnuts and dried fruit but indefinitely delayed implementing the tariffs to allow more time to settle the conflict.

"We hope the new North American administration will adopt a more intelligent attitude," said Spanish Foreign Minister Francisco Fernandez Ordenez.

S. Africa agrees to cut forces in Namibia

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa said Monday it is willing to cut its police force in Namibia by 2,300 officers, and it named two representatives to help coordinate the territory's transition to independence.

At the United Nations, the Organization of African Unity and the non-aligned nations protested any reduction of a proposed 7,500-member U.N. peacekeeping force to oversee the transition. The OAU expressed worry over South Africa's security forces in Namibia.

A report from Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to the Security Council on his recommendations for the size of the peacekeeping force is due Tuesday, said U.N. spokesman Francois Giuliani.

South Africa has ruled Namibia, also known as South-West Africa, for 74 years. It has agreed to begin implementing a U.N. independence plan for Africa's last colony on April 1, leading to elections Nov. 1.

Bomb threat to Boeing 747 diverts plane

SHANNON, Ireland — An Air India jumbo jet bound for New York was diverted safely to Shannon International Airport on Monday after the pilot was notified of a bomb threat, an airline spokesman said.

No explosives were found immediately. The Boeing 747 with 302 people on board was over the Atlantic off the west coast of Ireland, an hour and 15 minutes out of London's Heathrow Airport, when the pilot was alerted.

He dumped fuel and landed at Shannon at 4 p.m., taxiing to a secure section of the tarmac, and 279 passengers and 23 crew disembarked.

Soviet abortions blamed on lack of birth control

MOSCOW (AP) — The highest-ranking woman in the Kremlin decried the chronic shortage of contraceptives in the Soviet Union on Monday, saying it contributes to an estimated 6.5 million abortions a year.

"It is not normal when the number of abortions is about equal to the number of births," Alexandra Biryukova told a news conference.

"Our complaints from women are completely well-founded concerning the number of abortions compared to the use of contraceptives," she said.

The comments by Biryukova, a candidate member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo and a deputy premier, addressed an issue that until recently would not be discussed by the official Soviet media, much less by a top official.

But in the past two years, as the society has begun to discuss openly many of the social problems it kept hidden for decades, women have protested the lack of contraceptives and sex education and the humiliation they say they face when they seek an abortion.

Abortion is used instead of contraceptives as the main means of birth control in the Soviet Union, and Western experts estimate that the average Soviet woman has nine abortions during her child-bearing years.

The Health Ministry newspaper Meditinskaya Gazeta, commenting on a critical shortage of condoms, said some couples were so desperate they had turned to using children's balloons.

"The first thing we have to do is increase production of contraceptives," Biryukova said. "We have to improve conditions in hospitals."

The latest salvo against the medical profession came in an article published in the weekend edition of the newspaper Moscow News.

North may face new charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — An interagency intelligence group in the Bush administration is reviewing classified material in the Iran-Contra case, sources said Monday, a process that could lead to dropping more charges against fired National Security Council aide Oliver North.

A similar review by the interagency group led to conspiracy and theft charges being dismissed earlier this month against North. The new review by the intelligence experts is focusing on classified documents North's lawyers want to use in his defense at his trial. The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said no final decisions had been made by the interagency group.

U.S. District Judge Gerhard Gesell issued a sealed order last Thursday detailing how much classified information that North's lawyers want to present in his defense must be disclosed in order to provide him with a fair trial. The interagency group is conducting the review in light of Gesell's order.

Before the conspiracy and theft charges against North were dismissed, Gesell issued an order Dec. 12 saying the government would have to provide a substantial amount of detail from the 300 classified documents prosecutors presenting 300 classified documents.

Nine of the 12 criminal charges remaining against North focus on his allegedly concealing from Congress and former Attorney General Edwin Meese his efforts on behalf of the Contras fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

North also is accused of illegally accepting a $13,800 security system at his home from a co-defendant Richard Secord, converting to his own use at least $4,300 in traveler's checks from Contra leader Adolfo Calero and conspiring to defraud the Treasury of tax revenue in connection with charitable contributions supporting the Contras.

Meanwhile, the government said North has no Fifth Amendment privilege to withhold notebooks he compiled of his daily activities in the Iran-Contra affair.

Walsh said in a court filing that North's notebooks are "presidential records over which the United States has complete ownership and control."

North last week formally challenged Walsh's efforts to obtain a subpoena for the notebooks, and a hearing is scheduled Wednesday before Gesell.

'Surrealist master' Dali dies, leaving mark in art, culture

FIGUERAS, Spain (AP) — Surrealist master Salvador Dali, who was among the century's most important painters and created a public image to match his art, died Monday in the town where he was born 84 years ago.

The melting clocks and barren landscape of his "Persistence of Memory" made an indelible impression on contemporary culture. It is probably the most celebrated surrealist painting in the world.

Equally identified with "The Divine Dali," as he liked to call himself, were the pointed, waxed moustache curling up like a bull's horns; long hair; and a walking stick, of which he owned more than 30.

Dali, a founder of the surrealist movement, was the last of an outstanding generation of Spanish painters that included Pablo Picasso and Joan Miro.

He died at 10:15 a.m. at Figueras Hospital. His physician, Dr. Charles Ponsati, said: "The cause of death was cardiac arrest brought on by his respiratory insufficiency and pneumonia."

Dali had heart problems and had been confined to a wheelchair since suffering severe burns in a fire at his home in 1984. He was taken to the hospital five days before his death.

The painter was born May 11, 1904, to a notary public in this small Catalan town. After a life of flamboyance and eccentricity, his lawyer Miguel Domenech said Dali died "softly, without making any special last statement."

King Juan Carlos, a personal friend, sent condolences. Culture Minister Jorge Semprun described Dali as the "last of a generation of creators who revolutionized art in our century."

What Dali called his "sublime craziness," began early. He was expelled from art school in 1926 for arrogance and briefly jailed because of political activities for Catalan autonomy.

After becoming famous, Dali said: "The only difference between a crazy person and me is the fact that I am not crazy."

He also said: "Life would be practically impossible on the globe if there existed 20 or 30 Dalis. But there is nothing to fear. That can never happen."

No. 2 Georgetown tops St. John's

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Dikembe Mutombo set a school record with 12 blocked shots and Dwayne Bryant scored 18 points Monday night as second-ranked Georgetown beat St. John's 75-64 in a scuffle-interrupted Big East game.

The Hoyas, 15-1 overall and 5-1 in the Big East, never trailed in taking over first place in the conference with their sixth straight victory.

The fight occurred with just less than 14 minutes left in the game. Georgetown forward John Turner, playing defense, went chest to chest with St. John's leading scorer, forward Jayson Williams. After Williams pushed Turner away, Turner took a swing at him. Williams swung back, and the two were quickly separated and each was ejected.

CBA honors ex-Hawk Jones

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — Ron Rowan of the Cedar Rapids Silver Bullets and former Iowa standout Bill Jones, now with the Quad City Thunder, have been named the Continental Basketball Association players of the week.

Jones, a 6-7 swingman, averaged 31 points in three games during the past week. He also averaged 5.7 assists and 5.3 rebounds in those contests. Both players had high games of 36 points, Rowan against Quad City on Saturday and Jones against LaCrosse last Thursday.

Lendl advances in Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Second-seeded Ivan Lendl overcame a slow start and wore down Israeli Amos Mansdorf 7-6 (7-2), 6-4, 6-2 Tuesday to advance to the quarterfinals of the Australian Open tennis championships.

Lendl, seeking his first title here, rallied from 3-5 down to win the first set and then seized control with his attacking groundstrokes on a sweltering day at the National Tennis Center.

"In the first set, I did not time the ball as well as I'd like to," Lendl said. "It's never perfect, but as long as you can come through, that's fine."

Nance leads Cleveland past Warriors

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Larry Nance, who had a considerable height advantage, scored 22 points as the Cleveland Cavaliers ended the Golden State Warriors' eight-game winning streak 142-109 Monday night.

The 142 points represented Cleveland's best output of the season. The Cavs have won five straight games overall and 12 straight at home to improve their NBA-best record to 30-7.

Ron Harper scored 21, Mark Price 19 and Mike Sanders 18 for Cleveland. Chris Mullin led Golden State with 27.

Pacers 117, Nuggets 102

INDIANAPOLIS — Herb Williams had a team-record 29 rebounds, while Reggie Miller scored a season-high 27 points to lead the Indiana Pacers over the Denver Nuggets 117-102 and snap a five-game losing streak.

Spurs 119, Heat 101

SAN ANTONIO — Willie Anderson scored 26 points and San Antonio snapped a seven-game losing streak by whipping Miami 119-101 Monday night.

Anderson also had nine assists and six steals, both season highs.

Church vetoes Borg wedding

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — The Roman Catholic Church has intervened and stopped a planned marriage between tennis star Bjorn Borg and Italian singer Loredana Berté, a Borg aide said Monday.

The five-time Wimbledon singles winner and the Italian rock star had planned to marry in Milan, Italy on Feb. 26.

"Loredana and Borg are deeply shocked," Ingemar Alverdal told the Swedish news agency TT earlier Monday.

Alverdal said he did not know why the church intervened and declined to speculate.

Borg was formerly married in a Greek Orthodox ceremony to Romanian-born tennis player Mariana Simonescu.

788 and Michigan, 15-3 after a 71-68 loss to Wisconsin, dropped from sixth with 719 points.

Florida State, 14-1, led the second 10 followed by Iowa, Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse, North Carolina State, Indiana, Ohio State, Kansas, Stanford and Providence.

Last week's second 10 was Syracuse, Seton Hall, North Carolina, Florida State, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Kansas, Tennessee, Indiana and Stanford.

Providence re-enters the Top 20 after a one-week absence. The Friars earned their ranking after starting the season with a 12-0 record. They lost to Villanova and dropped out but returned this week despite an 80-77 loss to Georgetown. Providence followed that with a 15-point victory at Pittsburgh.

Tennessee was the only team to fall from the rankings as the Volunteers fell to 12-3 after losing 66-65 at home to Kentucky.

sive, and they (Campion and Bohan) had a lot of positive things to say," Kennedy said. "After that, it was just a matter of writing Louise and recruiting her by phone."

"We're real happy to have her here. She works hard in the pool and she's an outstanding student. She's a team leader."

Keogh is happy to be here, too. The junior qualified for the NCAA Championships last year in three events: the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes, and as a member of the 200-yard freestyle relay team.

Early in 1988, Keogh experienced one of the worst moments of her swimming career. Her bid to become a member of the Irish Olympic team was flatly denied when the Irish Amateur Swimming Association refused to convert her yard times she swam in the United States to the meter times used by the Irish.

"Nowadays, in order to qualify you have to swim in a 50-meter pool," Keogh said, "and they don't even have one in Ireland, so you have to go to England. It was a ridiculous situation."

Considering she spent over 10 months of last year training with the Hawkeyes, her opportunity to qualify in a 50-meter pool never appeared, but her dream hasn't faded.

"If I'm still doing well after I graduate, I'll try for the 1992 Olympics. I think I'll make it," she said. Fortunately for Keogh, a 50-meter pool is currently under construction in Dublin.

Keogh did receive some good news at the start of this season when she returned to Iowa. Her teammates tabbed her as one of the team's three captains.

"I'm was really surprised," Keogh said. "When I was a freshman and sophomore I really looked up to the captains and respected them. I find it difficult to picture myself as one of the leaders, but I'm trying the best I can and I think I can do a lot of things for the team."

Keogh said she was able to adjust to the "faster pace of life in the United States," but it was more difficult getting used to Kennedy's rigorous training program. In Dublin, her summer base consisted of little more than three morning workouts a week for 90 minutes, plus three, one-hour afternoon workouts each week.

"My training has changed dramatically," admits Keogh, who now swims every morning and every afternoon. "I used to be a sprinter, but now that I train hard all year I've gotten better in the 200 (breaststroke). All this practice is challenging but it has its rewards."

Keogh was rewarded with what she calls her "season highlight" thus far during

49ers earn comparison with NFL dynasties

MIAMI — In the final minutes of the Super Bowl, as the San Francisco 49ers drove methodically down the field to the winning touchdown, they carved a permanent niche for themselves in history.

This was not just the most dramatic drive in Super Bowl history, this was a drive that explained just who and what this team is all about. This was a drive that certified the 49ers as special.

There was a championship to be decided on one drive. The challenge was there for Cincinnati. Stop San Francisco now and win the Super Bowl. The problem is, at crunch time, it's awfully tough to stop San Francisco.

Anybody who's watched Joe Montana operate this offense, anybody who's paid the least bit of attention to the cool efficiency of this team — not this season, but this decade — knew the Bengals were in trouble.

Certainly the 49ers knew it. "I kept saying to myself, 'We just have to be us,'" center Randy Cross said. "You just know we're going to win."

"Somehow, some way, we find a way."

There was a time this season when the San Francisco 49ers were 6-5, mediocre at best, traveling a road to nowhere. The difference between them and other teams drifting through that kind of season is that they are the 49ers. They found a way to turn it around.

That may be why Coach Bill Walsh enjoyed this 20-16 victory so much. He has won before. It shouldn't be so special. But it is.

"Compared to the other two, this will be remembered as one of the greatest because we had to come back at the end and win it in the last seconds. This team has great character. They just hung in there."

If Cleveland with Jim Brown and Otto Graham owned football in the '50s, and Vince Lombardi's Green Bay Packers set the standard for the '60s; if Pittsburgh's four Super Bowl championships were the exclamation mark of the '70s, then the 49ers and Montana, winners of three Super Bowls, deserve to be called the "Team of the '80s."

Those other teams were dynasties, built around great players who

Illini take over No. 1; Hawks 12th

(AP) — The Hawkeyes dropped from seventh to 12th and Illinois became the first team this season other than Duke to hold the No. 1 position in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday.

It also marked the first time the Fighting Illini have held the top spot in the regular season in 37 years.

The only undefeated Division I team, Illinois received 62 of the 65 first-place votes cast and 1,296 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters. The Fighting Illini were pushed to the limit Sunday to win their 17th straight, a 103-92 double-overtime victory over Georgia Tech.

The last time Illinois held the No. 1 spot in the regular season was in the poll released on Jan. 22, 1952 when it took over the top spot from Kansas. The Fighting Illini held it just one week as they lost to DePaul four days later.

Illinois was No. 1 in the preseason poll for the 1952-53 season but lost an early season Big Ten game with Minnesota.

Duke had held the No. 1 spot in the preseason poll and in the first nine regular-season votings but the Blue Devils, 13-2, lost their first games of the season this week, a 20-point home loss to North Carolina and a 75-71 loss at Wake Forest to fall to eighth in the voting.

Georgetown, Louisville and Oklahoma each advanced one place in the voting as did Illinois.

The Hoyas, 14-1, took second with one first-place vote and 1,173 points, just six more than Louisville, 13-2, which had the other two first-place votes.

Oklahoma, 15-2, moved up to fourth with 1,079 points and was followed by fellow Big Eight member Missouri, 16-3, which received 939 points in moving up three places from last week.

Arizona, 13-2, which also moved up three spots, was sixth with 884 points, nine more than North Carolina, which improved to 16-3 with victories over Duke and North Carolina State. The Tar Heels had fallen to 13th in last week's voting, the first time in 63 polls dating to the 1983-84 season they had not been in the Top 10.

Duke, Seton Hall and Michigan rounded out the Top 10.

The Blue Devils received 860 points, while Seton Hall, 17-1, had

Hoosiers win 13th straight, 71-70

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Indiana ran its winning streak to 13, six in the Big Ten, as Jay Edwards scored 20 second-half points to lead the 16th-ranked Hoosiers to a 71-70 victory over No. 10 Michigan on Monday night.

The Hoosiers led 71-70 when Edwards' off-balance jumper from beyond the free-throw line spun out of the basket.

Michigan got the rebound and called time out with 40 seconds remaining. When play resumed, the Wolverines ran the clock down to 15 seconds and called another time out.

Terry Mills missed a baseline shot from the right corner then Mark Hughes missed from the left corner as time ran out.

The score was tied at 64 on a basket by Mills with 4:23 remaining. But Edwards hit a 3-pointer with 4:06 remaining and the Hoosiers led the rest of the way.

Michigan's Sean Higgins scored with 3:45 remaining, then Edwards answered with 3:20 showing for a 69-66 Indiana lead.

Indiana, which lost four of its first seven games, now is 16-4 overall, 6-0 in the Big Ten while Michigan, riding a two-game losing streak, has slipped to 15-4 and 3-3.

Edwards finished with 29 points. Glen Rice had 19 for Michigan.

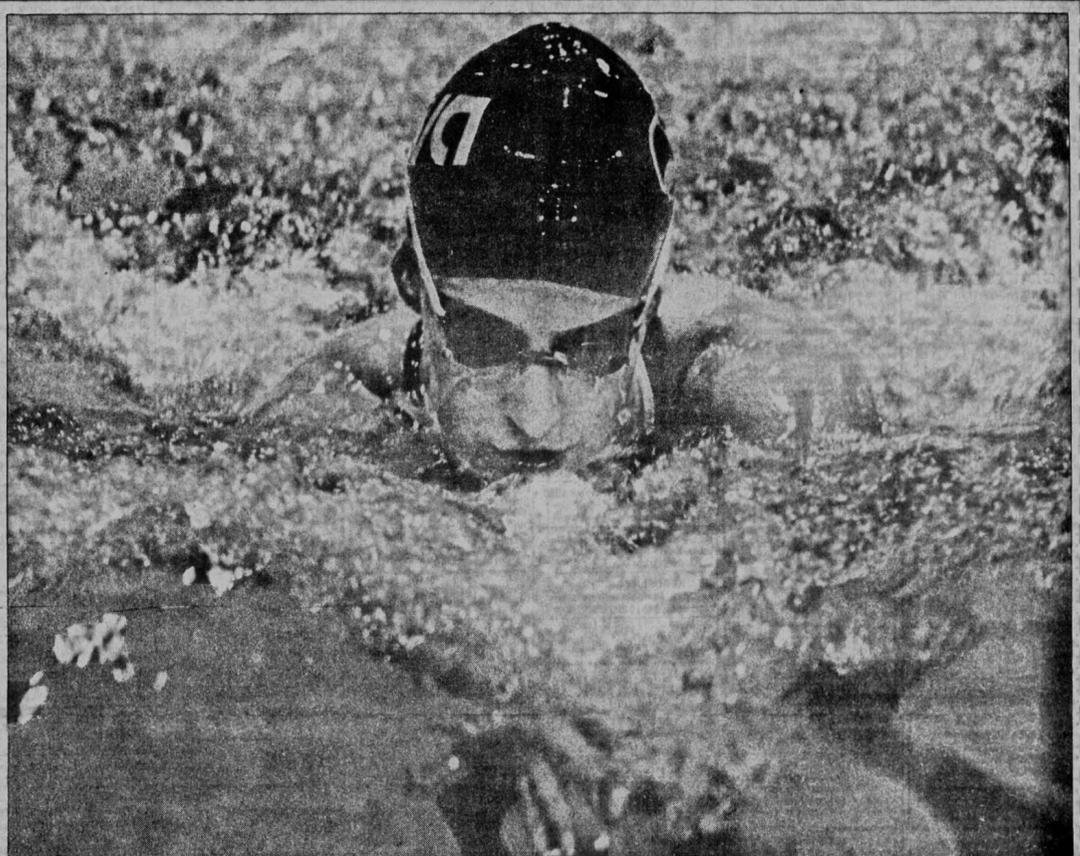

Indiana, trailing 34-32, started the second half with an 11-2 run led by five points by Edwards and four by Lyndon Jones.

The Wolverines, trailing 43-36, called time out with 15:57 remaining.

When play resumed, Hughes hit a layup and Rice hit four points during an 8-2 run that pulled Michigan within 45-44 with 13:33 remaining, forcing the Hoosiers to ask for a timeout.

Joe Hillman hit a 3-pointer after play resumed to put the Hoosiers back up by four.

Then Rumeal Robinson and Rice scored for Michigan to tie it at 48 with 11:57 remaining.

Iowa swimmer Louise Keogh, a junior from Dublin, Ireland, practices the breaststroke in the Field House Pool Monday afternoon. Keogh, one of the Hawkeyes' three captains, qualified for the NCAA meet in three events last season.

Louise Keogh

Louise Keogh came a long way from Dublin, Ireland, to swim at Iowa.

If she keeps traveling in the same direction, she may be on course to break Iowa records in the breaststroke and possibly earn a spot on her homeland's Olympic team in 1992.

In 1974, Keogh moved up from the Dublin Swimming Club to the elite Glenalbyn Swimming Club. Since then, she has continued to excel in and out of the water.

In 1986, Keogh raced her way to the top of the list in Ireland in the 100- and 200-meter breaststroke events, as well as the 50-meter freestyle. A year later, Keogh broke the Irish record in the 100 breaststroke, her favorite event.

"That was a big moment for me," Keogh said, "because the record I broke had stood for eight years. Unfortunately, my record has already been broken."

A determined Keogh returned to the Irish National Championships last year and nearly broke another record in winning the 200 breaststroke.

Chalkie White, coach of the Glenalbyn Swimming Club, was a member of the Villanova men's swimming team before returning to Dublin to coach, and he recognized Keogh's potential to succeed in the United States.

White encouraged Keogh to follow former Irish Hawkeyes Tricia Campion and Catherine Bohan to Iowa City.

"Coach (White) told me what to write in my letter here, and I was pretty excited at the prospect of swimming here," said Keogh.

Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy said that after he received her letter, he checked Keogh's times and asked Campion and Bohan about her.

"Her times were very impres-
