Activists clash over abortion issue

155 'pro-lifers' arrested for blocking clinic doors

By Paige Bierma
The Daily Iowan

One hundred fifty-five anti-abortion protesters were arrested and charged with trespassing Thursday morning when they attempted to block the doors of the UI Special Gynecology Clinic.

More than 300 "pro-life" (anti-abortion) demonstrators marched from the Maranatha Church in Coralville to the clinic at Westlawn where they were met by about 200 "pro-choice" (supporting women's right to choose abortion) counter-demonstrators.

Larry Johnson, a minister from Cedar Rapids and head of Operation Rescue of Iowa, organized the pro-life demonstration.

Operation Rescue is a national movement that has been picketing and blocking entrances to abortion clinics throughout the United States since 1987.

"Our main goal today is to increase people's awareness," Johnson said. "People don't know that eight abortions a day are being done in this place. We're letting the state of Iowa know they're killing babies here and that, since it's a tax-supported institution, our dollars are going for that stuff."

The counter-demonstration was organized by various Iowa City organizations and pro-choice activists. Sponsors included New Wave, the Emma Goldman Clinic For Women, the Iowa International Socialist Organization, and the Womens Resource and Action Center.

"I don't think it's right for certain people to tell other people what they can and can't do with their bodies," said Amy Bell, a UI graduate student and New Wave member.

Chanting pro-choice demonstrators stood between the gynecology clinic and the pro-lifers, who marched in a circle, holding signs and crosses and singing "Amazing Grace" and "Jesus Loves the Little Children" for about one hour.

The protest reached a climax when the Operation Rescue demonstrators moved toward the locked doors of the Westlawn clinic. A few tried unsuccessfully to enter the building.

"God says ..." yelled Johnson through a megaphone, and his supporters responded, "No more killing babies, no. Let my people go."

Pro-choicers responded with the chants: "We won't lose the right to choose" and "Racists, sexists, anti-gays, born-again bigots go away."

Pro-life and pro-choice advocates alike surrounded the doors when William Fuhrmeister, director of the UI Security Department, warned demonstrators that they should leave the premises or be arrested.

Operation Rescue members sat in front of Westlawn's doors and prayed or argued with counter-demonstrators while they awaited arrest.

Counter-protesters cheered when UI Campus Security officers — aided by both the Iowa City Police Department and the Johnson County Sheriff's Department — moved through the crowd to arrest those blocking the doors.

A protester with Operation Rescue of Iowa is forcibly removed by an Iowa City Police officer from the front of the UI Special Gynecology Clinic at Westlawn. The protester was one of 155 "pro-life" demonstrators who were arrested.

DC gunman injures 4 at school

WASHINGTON (AP) — A gunman opened fire on a crowd of students outside a District of Columbia high school Thursday, wounding four, police said. The incident apparently erupted because of a dispute earlier in the day.

One witness said the man "knew where he wanted to shoot, and then he just started shooting at random." Police said the assailant seemed to have targeted the students involved.

There were no immediate arrests, but authorities were said to be searching for three men.

The shooting "seemed to be the result of an altercation that had taken place earlier in the day," said Capt. Robert L. Gales of the District of Columbia police.

School system spokesman Charles Seigel said two "outsiders" entered the school about noon and were involved in a "verbal altercation" with students.

The students agreed to a fight after school, Seigel said, and were on their way to the site when the shootings occurred.

"Students here are obviously very upset," he said. "Obviously, we're shocked."

When asked if any of the victims knew the assailants, Gales said, "I think some of the victims know who was involved."

The shootings at Wilson High School in affluent northwest Washington occurred about 2:30 p.m., 15 minutes after the students were dismissed for the day. None of the injuries were thought to be life-threatening, although police said at least one of the students was seriously injured.

Doug Hill, a weatherman for WUSA-TV, said he was driving in front of the school when he heard what he believed was automatic gunfire and screams as the students dove for cover.

"I was in my car right in the middle of the high school students and there was enough panic that they were running to my car trying to get away," Hill said. "When the gunfire stopped and I looked up ... there were a dozen or two dozen kids crouching down on the ground looking for cover."

Afghans seek U.N. mediation to avoid post-Soviet violence

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Afghanistan has invited Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to visit Kabul and explore ways of avoiding a bloodbath after all Soviet soldiers have left the country, U.N. sources said Thursday.

Under a U.N.-mediated agreement, the Red Army is to be gone by Feb. 15, leaving Afghanistan's conscript army to continue the 11-year-old war with Moslem guerrillas.

The official sources said privately that President Najib extended the invitation recently and it was under consideration.

No details were available, but the sources said Perez de Cuellar might witness the final Soviet withdrawal Feb. 15.

Soviet soldiers entered Afghanistan in December 1979, and the last of an estimated 115,000 are to be out by Feb. 15.

About 70 U.N. monitors are observing the withdrawal, which began May 15 of last year. No plans have been made for a peace-keeping force to prevent violence afterward.

Official spokesman Francois Giulliani said Diego Cordovez, the secretary-general's special representative for Afghanistan, was expected to visit Kabul before the deadline.

Cordovez has been urging Afghan factions to reach a political settlement. The guerrillas have rejected proposals by the Soviets and Najib's government.

Increased attacks by the insurgents, who are supported by the United States and Pakistan, have made it difficult for supply convoys to reach Kabul, creating a severe food and fuel shortage.

A Soviet airlift has carried hundreds of tons of flour and fuel to the capital since last Saturday.

Many observers have predicted a bloodbath after the Soviet departure. The guerrillas, who control the countryside, claim Najib's regime will fall quickly.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, on his first day on the job, decided Thursday to close the U.S. Embassy in Kabul amid rising turmoil during a Soviet troop withdrawal, a U.S. official said.

The U.S. diplomatic contingent in Kabul had already been reduced to less than 10 officers and security guards. Their situation is considered precarious in light of a bitter civil war between the pro-Moscow government and U.S.-armed rebels.

The U.S. official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the pullout would be carried out over several days.

All 50,000 Soviet troops in the war-torn country are supposed to leave by Feb. 15 under the Geneva accords signed last April.

U.N. aid officials in Kabul have said more food and fuel is needed if disaster is to be averted.

Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, U.N. coordinator for relief and rehabilitation, met in Geneva on Wednesday day with representatives of the World Health Organization, U.N. Development Program and UNICEF, the U.N. Children's Fund.

"All came to the conclusion that the United Nations must be present in the whole of the country, including Kabul," particularly to help women and children, Giulliani told reporters at his daily briefing.

Negotiations with guerrillas also have been reported in an attempt to arrange for movement of relief convoys.

Berkley muses on safe sex hotel proposal

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — City officials hoping to stem the spread of AIDS are considering a proposal that would require innkeepers to put safe sex kits beside the good book in each hotel room.

"Certainly if hotels can have a Gideon Bible in every room, they can include a safe sex kit," said nurse practitioner Leland Traiman, a clinical AIDS researcher who proposed the idea.

"There could be a sign with each kit saying, 'The Bible may save your soul, but this will save your life,'" said Traiman, who served on the city's AIDS health commission last year.

The proposal was on Wednesday's agenda for the City Council's Committee on Public Safety and Health and is also scheduled for a hearing before the city's Community Health Advisory Committee next month.

City Councilwoman Ann Chandler, who chairs the council committee, said she is not sure safe sex kits should be required by law. But she added, "Given the crisis caused by AIDS, we must do all we can to educate the community. It's an issue that needs to be discussed."

Each kit would contain condoms and information about how AIDS is transmitted.

David Morris, chairman of the Community Health Advisory Committee, said he knows very little about the proposal but that it "didn't seem like a half-bad idea."

Not surprisingly, some hoteliers disagree.

Surplus hospital funds draw allocation inquiry

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The management of a $9 million surplus at University Hospitals has sparked an inquiry by a state spending committee into revenue spending policies at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

A report issued Tuesday revealed that the hospital had total receipts of $224,900,044 in 1988, approximately $9.9 million more than it spent.

The excess money was funneled back into internal capital investment and construction projects at the hospital and spending committee chairman Rep. Jack Hatch, D-Des Moines, has taken issue with such practices.

"It's not that they misspent," Hatch said. "The question that we are looking at is how the University Hospitals and Clinics allocate revenue and what they do with the excess revenue over expenditures."

"They were going to have to defend their action somewhere along the line," he added.

The committee's inquiry revolves around the long-running question of whether the Legislature should have more control over how the hospital spends its surplus funds.

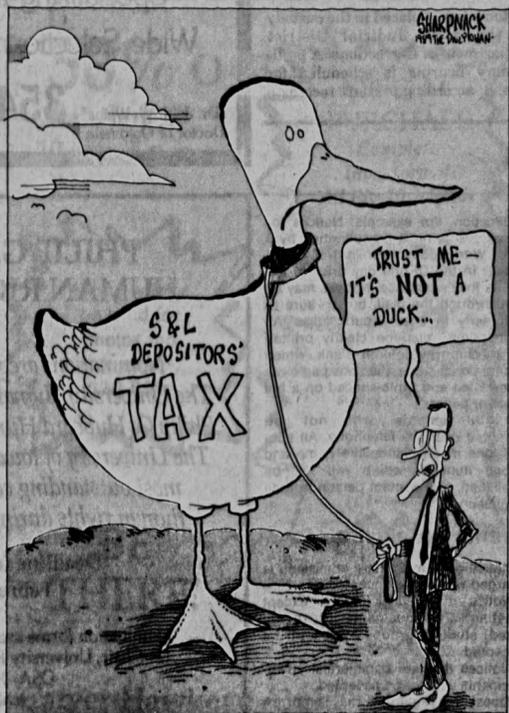

Hatch said the excess money left after expenditures is a direct profit that should be subject to legislative control. The money is handled too independently and is being used for projects that will eventually require financial support from the state, he said.

"They're putting it back into capital expenditures, like new building and equipment. The concern is that they are approving new building projects and new capital projects without the authority of the Legislature, and they still say they don't need (our) support," said Hatch.

"But you can't ignore that it will cost more to keep those buildings occupied and maintained, so it has a direct relationship with future expenditures they'll need from the Legislature," he said.

Kenneth H. Yerington, director of financial management and controls for UI Hospitals, defended the spending policy, saying funds used

Kubby for Council holds potluck, town meeting

The Kubby for Council Campaign will sponsor a potluck and town meeting from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday at 10 S. Gilbert St.

The purpose of the gathering is to create a community forum at which people can express their concerns to the community and the city council in a social atmosphere.

There will also be copies of "Citizen's Summary" available, which is a condensed version of the city budget.

Families are encouraged to participate. Beverages will be provided.

For more information, call Karen Kubby at 338-1321.

Stanley Scholarship lectures to be offered

The UI Center for International and Comparative Studies is offering Stanley Lectures by four previous Stanley Scholarship winners from 4:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Monday and from 3 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Feb. 17 in the International Center, Room 282.

The four are American undergraduate students at the UI. On Monday, the speakers will be Miya Sison, an anthropology major who studied women's role in Guatemala, and Jana Lynott, a global studies major who studied languages and craft cooperatives in India.

Speakers Feb. 17 will be Amy Cornea, a social work major who studied Ghandi's theory of non-possession in India and Shyla Osborn, an Asian languages and literature major who studied intensive Hindi and Barat Natyam classical dance in India.

Stanley Undergraduate Scholarship applications for 1989 will also be available Monday in the CICS office. Application deadline is March 1. For more information, call Karen Chappell, 335-0373.

County Republicans to hold reception

The Johnson County Republican Party will be hosting a reception from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday at the Lakewood Village Manor Party Room, 1512 First Ave. North, Coralville. The event is to honor the members of the local party who contributed to last year's party activities.

Refreshments will be served and will feature products made in Iowa.

All party members are welcome. For more information, call 354-6820 or 338-4649.

Wholistic medicine topic of demonstration

"Wholistic Medicine: The State of the Art," a free lecture and demonstration, will be presented by Philip Lansky, M.D. from 3 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. Sunday at the Iowa Wholistic Institute, 107 S. Linn St.

The event will include a live demonstration of acupuncture and medical qigong by Shen-yu, a traditional Chinese medical doctor. The relationship of classical homeopathy to traditional Chinese medicine will be explored from both an academic and practical perspective.

Cross-country skiing clinic to be held Sunday

Area cross-country skiers interested in learning more about the sport are invited to attend a cross-country skiing clinic from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday at the Coralville Lake Visitor Center.

The program, presented by Ian McLagan, an employee at Racquet Master, 321 S. Gilbert St., will include tips on techniques, equipment care and clothing. Lessons will also be offered if weather permits. Anyone interested in taking ski lessons should pre-register by calling 338-3543.

The 1989 clinic is sponsored by the United States Army Corps of Engineers, Coralville Lake and Racquet Master of Iowa City.

Local group offers support to hearing-impaired people

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City residents who are among the eight million hearing-impaired people in the United States and wish to learn how to cope with their impairment have an alternative to feeling frustrated or alone.

Hearing-impaired people can turn to the local chapter of Self-Help for Hard of Hearing People Inc., for support, education and special resources.

The Iowa City chapter is affiliated with the national non-profit organization based in Bethesda, Md. The organization is devoted to the welfare and interests of those who cannot hear well, but are not deaf, according to an SHHH informational poster.

The local chapter, with about 22 regular members, shares the goals of the national group.

"We try to educate people who are hard of hearing," said George Khal, president of the Iowa City SHHH chapter. Meetings are aimed at self-help education and at dealing with problems associated with hearing impairment. The group provides education and resources otherwise not available to those who are hearing impaired, he said.

Khal said the monthly chapter meetings are open to the public

"We try to educate people who are hard of hearing," said George Khal, president of the Iowa City SHHH chapter and non-hearing impaired may attend, including parents of children who have hearing disorders and anyone who has an interest in the subject. The organization does not contain services appropriate for deaf individuals.

"We differentiate between hard of hearing and deaf because deaf people have different needs," Khal said. Other services are available in the city for the deaf, he added.

The local chapter of SHHH began about 1½ years ago and is one of more than 250 chapters in the United States, Khal said. Meetings are held the third Monday of each month, excluding August and December, at 7 p.m. in the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center, Room 233.

The chapter conducts activities other than educational meetings.

One activity provides free hearing tests at Sycamore Mall each May, which is national Better Speech and Hearing Month, Khal said.

Other groups, such as the Sertoma Club, an international service club with special interest in communication disorders, and audiologists from the UI Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Center, help with the testing service activity, said Charles Anderson, associate professor in the UI Department of Speech Pathology and Audiology.

The four-story Wendell Johnson center, opened in 1968, houses several facilities: the speech pathology and audiology department, faculty and graduate student offices, classrooms, research laboratories, a new preschool for hearing-impaired children and the Wendell Johnson Speech and Hearing Clinic, of which Anderson is the director.

The preschool was started this month. Part of the funding was raised by a cooking school, which featured Middle Eastern recipes and food preparation, sponsored last November by SHHH and the Sertoma Club, Anderson said.

The clinic, which Anderson said receives over 3,000 visits each year, is another resource in the area available for individuals with a hearing impairment. The clinic is open to anyone, but all services are free to UI students.

Emma Goldman Clinic fights back with 'Pledge a Picketer' campaign

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

In an ironic twist, local pro-choice abortion supporters have begun using anti-abortion picketers to raise money for abortions.

A new fund-raising campaign called "Pledge a Picketer" began last Monday at the Emma Goldman Clinic For Women, 227 N. Duquesne St., said clinic director Gayle Sand.

The pledges will be tallied according to the number of anti-abortion picketers who protest the clinic, Sand said.

Donations will be used to provide abortions for low-income women, and pledgers can decide the maximum amount they want to contribute, Sand said.

The clinic decided to start the program after members of the community, angered by the anti-abortion picketers, asked the clinic how they could support the pro-choice movement. More than 50 people have pledged since last Monday, Sand said.

"As long as we are picketed, we'll be doing this program," she said.

Despite the clinic's plan to make money from their actions, the picketers do not plan to stop protesting in the foreseeable future, said Jackie Fordice, director of Defenders for Life, a statewide anti-abortion organization composed of about 200 members. The group will schedule about eight to 12 picketers each week, Fordice said.

"This is a last effort to save their babies," Fordice said.

The Emma Goldman Clinic For Women is following the example of several clinics around the country that have started "Pledge a Picketer" programs after being picketed frequently by anti-abortion activists.

"(Pledge a Picketer) has been very effective around the nation for combatting the harassment the clients feel when they try to go into the clinic," said Jackie Russell, associate director of the clinic.

Courts

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with assault with the intent to commit sexual abuse Thursday for allegedly unzipping another man's pants and offering to pay him to perform certain acts, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Rocky K.C. Romero, 31, 1121 E. Church St., was charged for the alleged incident in which a developmentally disabled man was inside Romero's residence to use the telephone, according to court records.

Romero allegedly told the man he would give him money if he "had sex with him," according to court records.

The victim said he would not and ran from the house. Romero was identified by the victim from a photograph line-up, according to court records.

Romero was placed in the custody of the Sixth Judicial District Department of Corrections. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 9, according to court records.

Insufficient funding leaves OASIS partially completed

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Until the UI receives more state funding, the complete installation of a library automation system will remain stalled.

Gov. Terry Branstad's budget proposal for 1989, released Jan. 13, recommended no funding for the completion of the UI's Online Access System Information Sources library automation project.

According to David Vernon, UI vice president for academic affairs and dean of faculties, the lack of funding will stagnate OASIS implementation.

"Non-allocation means that we're not going to be able to go forward in completing the OASIS service," Vernon said. "It's going to just sort of sit there. We've got the computer capacity to go forward, but without the money we can't do much else."

Donna Hirst, UI manager of library automation, said all new titles received by both the UI Main Library and the UI Law Library are now being entered only into the OASIS system.

Hirst said all of the Law Library's titles are currently available through the on-line OASIS system and estimated that 55 percent of the Main Library's titles have been converted to the OASIS system.

Both libraries are currently using the system to order new books, and both record current periodicals in the OASIS system instead of the card catalog file, Hirst said.

But Hirst said further implementation of the system would be slowed considerably by non-allocation in the governor's budget. "It is going to take a long time to finish this process," Hirst said. "Our goal is to have it completed as soon as possible, but that is dependent entirely upon funding."

Hirst said it would cost the UI $400,000 during fiscal year 1989 to keep the unfinished OASIS system running adequately.

"The simple fact is that maintaining dual systems is a very expensive process, and the sooner we can switch over entirely to OASIS the better off we'll be," she said. "At that point, it will be a great benefit to the campus."

Hirst said the next major step in the implementation process was incorporating circulation information into the OASIS database.

"That will be an expensive process, but very valuable to the UI," she said. On-line circulation information will allow library users to see whether books have been checked out, put texts on hold and provide a variety of other conveniences, Hirst said.

Until more financing is provided, Vernon said the UI will continue to reshuffle funds from other UI areas to maintain the operation of the system.

"As it is, we are going to have to come up with some money to keep the system operating at the level that it is now," he said. "We've been doing it on temporary money for a while, hoping that we'd get some funding eventually. It's probably going to have to come from shifts of funds from other areas."

Vernon said there is a chance that the state Legislature would provide some funding for the project during this legislative session, but said it was difficult to predict the chances of legislative funding.

Rights group seeks high profile

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to assist victims of prejudice at the UI, the Human Rights Committee announced Thursday several steps it would take to make the group's activities more visible to students and faculty on campus.

Formed in 1963 at the beginning of the Civil Rights Movement, the committee works actively to investigate claims of campus discrimination and other breaches of the UI Human Rights Policy.

The policy states that no person at the university shall be discriminated against on the basis of "race, creed, color, national origin, age, sex and any other classifications that deprive the person of consideration as an individual."

The committee's most recent victory was UI President Hunter Rawlings' addition of persons with disabilities to the policy. Committee Chairman Robert Burchfield, who first suggested the change, said he is glad to see something done after a year and a half of bureaucratic legislation.

"It's unfortunate it took so long," Burchfield said. "But in the end, the university reaffirmed its support for people with disabilities."

He said the exact status of discrimination at the UI is difficult to ascertain, since many people don't know of the committee or are victims of "institutional policy" rather than individual prejudice.

"My own personal view on human rights at the UI is pessimistic," he said. "The right people are saying the right things, but nothing is being demonstrated. Nationwide, the number of racial incidents has increased, and the UI is not immune."

He cited the zero-funded Opportunity at Iowa Program and the UI's refusal to give tenure to several women and black faculty members as examples of this problem.

In what Burchfield called "one of the most active and substantial" meetings he can remember, the committee agreed to intensify its role at the university through an aggressive advertising campaign.

Projects already underway include a KRUI radio spot, promotional posters, and a videotape on how to voice discrimination grievances that would be mandatory viewing for all new UI employees.

"If people know that we're not just sitting there — that we're not going to pigeonhole them — it will be very effective," said committee member Dennis Hoyle, a UI junior.

Ozzie Diaz-Duque, a UI Hospital interpreter, said he knows from experience that passivity in the face of discrimination is wrong.

"I'm Hispanic, I'm gay, I'm a faculty member — I've had my foot in a number of things," Diaz-Duque said. "The only way we can get through to people is if we just come out and say we are not going to tolerate this crap."

Protesters who refused to walk away from the doors were dragged and carried to the buses by police officers who stuck their fingers on protesters' pressure points to subdue them.

Four buses with white wooden crosses and "No More Dead Babies" signs hanging out the windows took those arrested to the Oakdale campus where they were processed and released.

As he was standing in line waiting to board the bus, organizer Larry Johnson said he thought the demonstration had been a success.

"We accomplished what we set out to do today," he said. "This was the first rescue. The next one will not be so publicized."

The pro-choice contingent also declared their demonstration a success. "We declare this day a strong victory for a woman's right to choose," pro-choice activist Carol deProse said at a press conference held after the demonstration Thursday.

In response to rising pro-life activity, Iowa's pro-choice supporters will become more active through a coalition movement, deProse said.

"The Iowa City Reproductive Coalition will move out across the state, involving all pro-choice women and men in the battle that we did not choose, but which we must fight," deProse said.

The Special Gynecology Clinic reported that the demonstration did not interfere with its daily procedures.

"Patients were instructed as to what was going to happen today, and all decided to go on with their plans," Chuck deProse, a doctor at the clinic, said.

Seats await eager horse fans

Opening week at Prairie Meadows is selling out fast

DES MOINES (AP) — Horse race fans can still buy tickets to Prairie Meadows for the opening week, including opening day March 1, track General Manager Stan Bowker said Wednesday.

"Sixty percent of the opening week was sold in the first nine days," he said. He said the remainder of the first week's tickets will probably go quickly once the track begins its second wave of advertising.

He said the initial sales are about what officials expected, although he said he was surprised at the lack of demand for the first Saturday of racing.

"After opening day, I would have thought that the second most popular day would be Saturday (March 4)," he said.

During cold weather, only 7,000 indoor seats will be available, and Bowker said about 85 percent of the first day is sold-out. The next most popular request, he said, is March 5.

All tickets for opening week are being sold by mail only. Customers may request up to six tickets at $2 each.

Bowker also said construction on the $51 million track should be completed within two weeks and all 10 of the key administrative positions and 22 supervisory positions have been filled.

He said the track has hired Bruce Seymore to be vice president of administration. Seymore was vice president at the financially troubled Birmingham Turf Club LTD in Birmingham, Ala., but he said Prairie Meadows is avoiding the pitfalls that hurt the Alabama track.

"At Prairie Meadows, we're going to crawl before we run," he said. "At Birmingham, we thought we could just open the doors and we'd be successful. We weren't. We thought everybody would just love us, but they didn't."

He said he was impressed with the financial structure and planning at the Iowa track.

Racing Secretary Steven Kasperski said he was pleased that applications by horsemen to bring their animals to the track have exceeded the 989 stalls available. While some trainers apply to more than one track and aren't seriously interested in Prairie Meadows, Kasperski said the track will be assured of quality animals.

"We're going to have a choice of which horses to run," he said.

In addition to deciding which horses will have stalls at the track, several other decisions must be made by opening day. Among the more controversial is what to do about administering a common pain killer.

Bowker said a state law prohibiting the use of phenylbutazone, known as bute, within 96 hours of a race doesn't make sense because trainers themselves don't know if a horse will be racing until 48 hours before a race.

Track officials have asked legislators to adjust the law.

Also to be decided is the order of first day's races and the horses to run in each.

The feature race that day will be an "Iowa allowance" race for Iowa registered fillies and mares with a total $9,000 purse.

Boy sentenced to 25 years following abuse trial

DES MOINES (AP) — A Polk County man was properly tried as an adult on sex abuse charges even though he was only 14 when arrested, the Iowa Court of Appeals said Thursday.

The Appeals Court pointed to a lengthy criminal history leading up to the charge and a lack of treatment facilities for juveniles in agreeing with a lower court decision that the youth should have faced an adult trial.

"We believe the evidence supports a finding that the prospects for ... rehabilitation with the juvenile system are slim," the court said.

Court records said the case began in 1986, when Damon Montez Willis picked up three young women who were seeking directions. Court records said one of the women was assaulted and Willis was convicted of second-degree sexual abuse.

He was handed a 25-year term after being tried as an adult.

Willis appealed, saying his case should have remained within the juvenile court system.

County lowers speed limit on bridge

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors approved precautionary measures Tuesday to deal with an accident which occurred Wednesday morning at Butler Bridge, one mile north of Interstate 80 on North Dubuque Street.

The board moved to lower the speed limit to 15 mph from 35 mph and change the weight limit to 3 tons from the former 16 ton limit.

County Engineer Glen Meisner said the traffic needs to be slowed down so cars don't cause as many vibrations while crossing the bridge and increase the chances of collapse.

The accident occurred when a man drove a dump truck with the dump box partially raised through the truss bridge and it caught some cross pieces.

An official damage estimate will be available by Tuesday, but Meisner said the damage is around $50,000.

He said the public will be notified through the press if the road needs to be closed or traffic needs to be rerouted.

"Repair work probably will begin next week, and when this happens the bridge will either be limited to one-way traffic, or the bridge could possibly be shut down, but that hasn't been determined yet," Meisner said.

The board of supervisors has approved a proposal to replace the bridge sometime this fall.

In other business, Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said a supervisor needs to serve on the Systems Unlimited Board. Systems Unlimited is a non-profit organization which serves people with mental retardation or other developmental disabilities.

Supervisor Bob Burns said the organization doesn't want a county supervisor to serve on its board although it is funded heavily by Johnson County.

The supervisors decided to have Ockenfels temporarily attend Systems Unlimited board meetings.

The board also moved to allow a Johnson County Ambulance Service employee's grievance to proceed directly to union arbitration.

The employee was disciplined with a 24-hour suspension without pay after he removed sealed mail from someone's desk and photocopied the document.

The employee filed a grievance and decided to proceed directly to arbitration.

Under the current union agreement, the supervisors had only two options: allowing the grievance to proceed directly to arbitration or rescinding the suspension.

Hill said about 200 to 250 students were outside the building.

Stacy Karageorgos, 15, a sophomore at Wilson High School, said she was looking out a window of the school when she saw a man with a gun climb out of a dark-colored jeep.

"He stood out of the jeep and aimed, at first. He knew where he wanted to shoot. And then he just started shooting at random," she said.

"At first they were aiming for one person and then they starting shooting randomly," she said. She said school was dismissed at 2:15 p.m. and the shooting occurred shortly afterwards. Students have been going through midterm exams.

It was not immediately clear how many assailants were involved. Police indicated there was one gunman, but Miss Karageorgos said there were other people in the jeep. She said it sped away after the shots were fired.

A student identified as Miriam Kenyon said she saw an armed man flee the scene.

She also worried that a faulty condom could leave the hotel vulnerable to a lawsuit.

Steve Rodri, general manager of the Berkeley Marina Marriott Hotel, said his Mormon-run franchise places the Book of Mormon in each room and doesn't even allow Playboy Magazine in the gift shop. He said the hotel is not about to place condoms in the rooms.

for capital projects are generated from private sources and should not fall under state jurisdiction.

"(The money) is from reimbursements for services we've rendered our patients. It comes from major third-party payers such as Blue Cross," Yerington said.

The hospital has spent $268 million on major development projects like construction in the past 15 years, but Yerington said none of the money spent involved state funds.

The sale of $60 million in bonds in the past 12 years has been a major source of revenue for UI Hospitals. Yerington said the sale of such bonds incurs a contractual agreement to use the money to finance hospital projects and development.

"It's part of the covenant — we agree to use our reimbursements for the purposes of capital development at UI hospitals," he said.

The hospital's assertion that they are required by Medicare and other revenue sources to put any excess revenue back into internal programs is one of the primary areas that state legal counsels will examine during the investigation, Hatch said.

Yerington also said the hospital has not had to ask the Legislature for money because fund-raising through third-party payers and bond sales has adequately financed new development.

"We've been fortunate in that we've been able to rely upon our own financing," he said. "We've not had to ask the Legislature for any funds. It's not that they have denied us, it's that we haven't had to ask."

"UI Hospitals must have support if they are to finance their own development program, and we have entirely relied upon our own," he added.

Hatch said the investigation will probably take some time, because of the quantity of documents needed to be reviewed by legal counsel. A shortage of staffers might also prolong the process.

If the inquiry eventually leads to a greater role for the Legislature as to how hospital finances are managed, Hatch said hospital officials would likely balk.

"I don't think they'll be very willing at all (to accept more control). They'll be very willing to provide us with information — they can't not do that," he said.

Hatch also said the spending committee is not ruling out the possibility that hospital officials may be able to convince the committee that "what they're doing is appropriate. We're not closing any doors."

For his part, Yerington said hospital officials will cooperate fully during the inquiry.

"We sent (to Des Moines) a mass of documents yesterday to respond to questions committee members requested. We're happy to respond to any request they have," Yerington said.

Ol' boy network

Something's rotten on the state Board of Regents, and some Democrats on the joint House-Senate appropriations panel have caught the scent.

Yesterday in Des Moines, Democrats on the panel grilled Regents President Marvin Pomerantz on his ties to Republicans, questioning his loyalties and whether partisan politics play too great a role in how the regents do business. Rep. Don Shultz, D-Waterloo, and Sen. Rich Varn, D-Solon, wondered whether Marv's political activism on behalf of Republicans, (especially Gov. Terry Branstad, who appointed Marv to the top regents' seat) didn't make it a little difficult for him to objectively preside over Iowa's state-run universities.

In his defense, Marv chastised the panel for asking him to "forgo his rights as a citizen."

"I will not give up my franchise," he said. "I'm not doing anything wrong when I support a political candidate." Maybe not, Marv.

Most of this is just partisan political bickering between some good ol' boys — fairly innocuous. But buried in amongst this innocuous banter is a rather smelly revelation.

Last September, Nancy Norman left her position as director of the Iowa Department of Human Services amid controversy over her husband's extensive slum-holdings in Des Moines. Her husband, Keith Uhl, is a prominent Des Moines attorney and Republican contributor.

After she left her position, R. Wayne Richey, executive secretary to the regents, received a phone call from Branstad's executive assistant Douglass Gross regarding — you guessed it — Nancy Norman. Shortly thereafter, she accepted a newly created position at Iowa State University that pays her $62,500 per year.

Quite simply, this bit of business reeks of good ol' boy (and girl) partisanship — partisanship above and beyond a citizen's franchise.

Flood of litigation

Monday's Supreme Court decision, overturning a Richmond, Va., plan requiring that 30 percent of municipal construction contracts be given to companies owned by women or minorities, deals a serious blow to affirmative action programs nationwide.

The high court opinion, written by Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, stipulated that any such programs must be "narrowly tailored" to address a documented pattern of discrimination.

The use of race and gender quotas in education, business and government hiring practices has faced endless legal challenges, and has always been a difficult practice to defend. It appears, at least superficially, to be a kind of institutionalized racism. More disquieting, it flies in the face of the central principle of a free-market economy — the notion that it's not who-you-are but what-you-do that counts.

The problem lies in the fact that affirmative action, by definition, is far less concerned with rights than with making up for a history of socio-economic encumbrance that has left women and minorities fewer opportunities to compete fairly than their white male counterparts.

In short, it seeks not to undo a documented wrong, but to do a long overdue right.

For just that reason, demonstrating a history of abject rights discrimination under the "strict scrutiny" mandated by Justice O'Connor will prove difficult, if not impossible, for many communities, businesses and schools that currently practice some form of affirmative action. And with the lawsuit floodgates now open, what can they do but retreat from the good they have done?

Pervasive damage

A Congressional report released Tuesday warned that the nation's shoreline waters are in a state of serious decline because unchecked pollutants have been allowed to contaminate harbors, beaches, wetlands and bays.

The House Committee that issued the report based its comments on findings from the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife and the Department of Oceanography. Environmental officials discovered that human development along the coasts and toxic chemicals from industrial run-off have wreaked havoc in coastal waters from Massachusetts to Washington State.

Clearly, there's a problem here. But what isn't clear is what our leaders in Washington will decide to do about it.

Every week the American public hears more warnings about the destruction we are inflicting on our planet. The government pays scientists and environmentalists millions of dollars to research things like why ground water supplies are being poisoned, what causes species to become extinct and why the earth is warming.

Unfortunately, once all the facts are in, our leaders don't act decisively to solve these looming problems.

It seems congressional reports, like the one issued Tuesday, serve little purpose than to generate a lot of paperwork, committee meetings and wasted money. What's needed are fewer studies and more leaders who will draft legislation to stop the practices that create them.

Can abortion really be termed 'correction of Nature's errors'?

Lee R. Cerling

Recently, Dr. Hans Zellweger, a professor emeritus at the UI Hospitals in the field of genetics, offered in The Daily Iowan some "rational comments" from a biologist's view on abortion. As it turned-out, the "rational" view we should all take of the million or so abortions executed — pardon me, "performed" — each year is that "the termination of pregnancy" is "nothing else" than the "correction of Nature's errors."

"The correction of Nature's errors" is the phrase he would have us attach to abortion in the case of "chromosomally abnormal" fetuses; the good doctor didn't make it clear which phrase we are to attach to the full-scale slaughter that makes up the other 95 percent of the abortion industry's business. I guess my own use of "full-scale slaughter" wouldn't work for him, but surely he wouldn't have us believe that all abortions are merely making Nature more natural than it already is? Or would he?

Anyhow, since the professor has already claimed the rational high ground for himself, I would like to take the irrational low ground and offer a view of abortion from the point of view of a person "plagued by religious prejudices."

I definitely qualify as a person of religious prejudice, because I hold a certain pre-formed opinion about all people before I ever meet them — regardless of their creed, color, intelligence, gender, nationality, sexual preference or personal history. Furthermore, this pre-formed, unalterable opinion that I hold is firmly rooted in religion. Thus, I am "plagued by religious prejudices."

One bias, or prejudicial belief, that I hold is that all human beings are created in the image of God. Thus, all humans are entitled to our relentless and uncompromising compassion and protection. This includes compassion and protection for unborn human beings, who cannot speak or act for themselves, as well as for their mothers and fathers, who can.

I can understand that this is a completely unfounded and irrational belief, given the logic of the professor's science. I do not suppose that any geneticist has ever proven that we are all created in God's image, nor do I entertain the hope that one ever will. I guess it is just an irrational belief that I cling to in my religious fanaticism and haughty intolerance of other points of view.

As a matter of fact, I had always thought, until I read Dr. Zellweger's article, that the whole tradition of taking care of the weak and sick and dying in the West, on which our hospital and clinics system is founded, rests squarely on the shoulders of those members of the Church who held precisely this fanatical, irrational view: All humans are made in God's image, and therefore deserve our utmost efforts on their behalf.

But I guess that is irrelevant to the current doctrine of medical practice. Dr. Zellweger's view, at any rate, seems to be that the physician's main responsibility is "the correction of Nature's errors," rather than healing and nurturing human beings.

Who gets to decide when Nature has made an error? Dr. Zellweger? The American Medical Association? The mother? The Women's Resource and Action Center? Certainly not the fetus! Well, at least one group has been rationally and unemotionally demonstrated to be unfit for the potential group of decision-makers: Those of us who Nature has inexplicably plagued with religious prejudice.

Let me put away my sarcasm for one moment and speak frankly. It is a terrible tragedy when a woman becomes pregnant through rape or incest. It is also a tragedy when a woman is informed, through the wonders of modern technology, that the child she carries in her womb and has already begun to love will undoubtedly be born without a brain core.

These are terrible tragedies, and no one with the slightest human compassion can deny it. The appropriate response to human tragedy is sorrow, grief, and mourning. And in such instances, it is possible — I do not say certain, but possible — that an abortion may be the least tragic of a number of tragic options. (And now will you who support the right to abortion impale me with the argument that if I allow any abortions? I must allow all? Must we continue arguing like that?)

But what are we to make of the woman for whom pregnancy comes as a shock, a hated thing, something that is an unqualified burden, even though the actions resulting in the pregnancy were freely and willfully chosen? Perhaps the woman is unfit to be a mother. Does it then follow that the child is unfit to live? By what perversion of logic are we to say that in the name of being human, we will extinguish human life?

And there is yet one more point. You who make up this Iowa City-liberal-democratic community have, in my view, an excellent record in striving for what is truly good and humane and conducive to justice in so many areas of life — why must you be so inconsistent on this one point (or can only we religious fanatics be accidentally hypocritical?)

You rightly oppose nuclear weapons because they kill human beings indiscriminately. You rightly condemn the racist policies of South Africa because they are dehumanizing and hateful. You rightly oppose pollution because it poisons air, water, vegetable, animal and human life. You even justly oppose the indiscriminate killing of whales and baby seals.

Why then do you insist that the right to an abortion is an unqualified good? Why do you say this is "liberation," "freedom," the proper use of one's "rights"? On what grounds are baby seals more entitled to your compassion and protection than 18 million human fetuses since Roe v. Wade? How can you continue to insist that abortion is a good thing, that this national suicide is a wonderful thing, to be protected at all costs? Ought not you rather grieve? I pray the God to whom we are each accountable, but whom we often mock or ignore, that our hearts may be changed. And I cling to a hope that we will one day respect the sanctity of human life in all its spheres.

Commemorating King's birthday recognizes continued racism

The events a week ago have made very clear the value that commemorating Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday can have for our nation. It is important that at least once a year Americans think about King's vision of racial equality and sister/brotherhood, and confront the reality of racism and the inequality and hatred it breeds.

Many people, including President Reagan, would like to believe (or have us believe) that racial prejudice is a thing of the past, that African-Americans need only exploit their possibilities in the Land of Opportunity.

Last Sunday night, Reagan told Mike Wallace on CBS's "60 Minutes" that "(black) leaders are doing very well leading organizashow the nation that in predominantly white areas, African-American males are still seen as instant suspects by police.

A week ago Monday night, rioting broke out in the Overturn and Liberty City sections of Miami in response to the shooting of an African-American by a Miami police officer.

But deeper than the particulars of this incident, there was a feeling among the African-Americans of these depressed communities that their needs had been ignored. While Latin American immigrants were being given special opportunities to become integrated into Miami's economy and American society (as they should be), these long-time residents of the city felt as if they had been pushed aside.

The King holiday brought these inequities into sharp focus. On the tions based on keeping the feeling alive that they're victims of prejudice," implying that racism is dead in America and that there is no need to protest against it any longer.

Racism is dead? Two recent events underscore how far we still have to go to become the nation Martin Luther King Jr. believed we could be:

Last weekend, NBC News followed Donald Jackson, a civil rights activist, with their cameras as he drove into Long Beach, Calif. Jackson was pulled over by a police officer, who ordered him to get out of the car and put his hands against the wall. When he asked why he was being searched, the police officer screamed "because I told you to" and pushed Jackson through a plate-glass window. The police later claimed that Jackson had been weaving, but NBC showed him violating no traffic laws. Jackson's purpose was to

Blacks need scholars, not more jocks

It is too bad we don't seem to see as much effort to raise the academic performance of college athletes as we have seen in recent days to beat back attempts by the National Collegiate Athletic Association to enforce decent academic standards.

The most celebrated moment came when Georgetown University basketball coach John Thompson walked off the court in a one-man protest that drew a standing ovation at the start of a game against Boston College.

He was fuming over an NCAA move called Proposal 42 that would deny scholarships to college-bound athletes who fail to pass minimum academic standards set by the NCAA's three-year-old Proposition 48.

Thompson, who happens to be black, says the standardized tests on which the NCAA standards depend discriminate against students who come from disadvantaged backgrounds, particularly blacks.

Thompson does not wish to imply that colleges shouldn't have standards, he said. Nor does he wish to say that blacks are not capable of measuring up to those standards.

"What I am saying is that people who are economically deprived don't have the same opportunities as people who are not economically deprived, and that happens to be a large segment of blacks," he said.

Of course, he's right. A higher proportion of black athletes come from disadvantaged backgrounds and, as a group, their test scores show it, especially when they are asked to identify high-brow words like "regatta" and "aria."

That helps explain why blacks make up 90 percent of the student athletes who have failed the standards set by Proposition 48. If the NCAA had been looking for a legal way to thin the ranks of black athletes, it could hardly have found a better one.

But I wish Thompson and other critics of Proposal 42 would use their considerable influence to deal with the core of the problem: A school environment and societal values that encourage too many youngsters to put all of their eggs in the single basket of sports.

After all, the NCAA standards are not unreasonable. Proposition 48 requires a minimum 2.0 grade-point average in high school or a score of no less than 700 (out of a possible 1,600) on the Scholastic Aptitude Test or 15 on the ACT Assessment.

I mean, gimme a break, kids. You oughta be able to score 700 through sheer guesswork.

If standardized tests discriminate in favor of the social standards and language of mainstream America, that is because it is that mainstream in which young jocks must swim after their playing days run out.

And, alas, playing days do eventually run out, for some more quickly than others. While some student athletes do achieve sufficient professional stardom to load their fingers with large diamonds, drape their shoulders in mink and buy the obligatory home for their beloved mothers, the vast majority see none of this.

I don't blame John Thompson for being upset. About one in 10,000 public school athletes makes it to superstardom, and the NCAA, which governs big-time college sports, has failed the other 9,999 miserably. But so have the rest of us.

That's why a number of black athletes and former athletes, like tennis star Arthur Ashe and Berkeley sociologist Harry Edwards, disagree with Thompson and support tougher academic standards, even if it means student athletes must spend their freshman year in the less glamorous but also less distracting setting of a junior college.

Let's send clear signals to our kids. We have enough sports heroes. We need more academic heroes.

Walsh leave coach on to

MONTEREY, Calif. — Walsh went out on a limb Monday when he resigned as the San Francisco 49ers' Vince Lombardi coach to step down from a Super Bowl.

Walsh also worked with team owner Jed Walsh Jr. as the 49ers' special coordinator George Seay's new head coach. Walsh reportedly interested in "name" coach to lead the team.

Walsh lobbied hard for Seay as executive vice president of football operations.

At a news conference announcement, Walsh the "greatest coach in the world."

Walsh coached the 49ers to a third Super Bowl in 1982 and the 1980s last Super Bowl in Cincinnati, Benetton, Miami.

Lombardi led the Packers in the first two Super Bowls (1967-1968) and the Packers' front office returned as head coach of the Washington Redskins.

As part of the 49ers' transition, general manager DeBartolo will take on the duties of president of football operations. But DeBartolo said Walsh will be in charge of draft, trades and re-signing.

DeBartolo said he would like to see Walsh out of his job, but the coach had already made his mind up.

The decision was announced at a news conference Wednesday afternoon in San Francisco.

"It got emotional because I don't want to change my life. It has gone so well and I don't want to leave," DeBartolo said.

Walsh said he had made up his mind to leave the season but wanted to see it ended before the final game.

"I look forward to Walsh said. "It's a long career, and I want everybody at the side."

"It's an uplift to me on a most positive way most coaches leave the game."

Relations between DeBartolo and Walsh have been frosty. Last season DeBartolo lost to Minnesota in the NFC playoffs. The league's best record, Walsh lost the Super Bowl.

But DeBartolo denied there was a serious rift between them.

Earlier this month, DeBartolo said, "That's the truth. Bill and I are friends."

Walsh, who held the 49ers' position longer than any other coach and is only the second coach with a winning record, strongly endorsed DeBartolo's decision. Walsh has been an assistant coach since 1980 and assisted Walsh at the 49ers.

Walsh, who ended an overall record of 177 wins, including playoff games, in 1979 after 49ers in 1979 after head coach at Stanford compiled a 17-7 record in bowl games.

"A very lofty standard established in the past and by Bill Walsh," DeBartolo said at the news conference. "We believe we can continue the type of team that the 49ers will be proud of."

In Walsh's first season as head coach, the 49ers compiled a record of 2-14. They were 6-10.

Then the fun began. In 1981, the 49ers went 10-6 in 1983 and 13-3 in 1984.

In strike-shortened seasons, the 49ers went 3-6. But they won the Super Bowl in 1982 and 1984, winning their first Super Bowl with a record over the Miami Dolphins.

Walsh leaves coaching on top

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — Bill Walsh went out a champion Thursday when he resigned as coach of the San Francisco 49ers and joined Vince Lombardi as the only head coaches to step down after winning a Super Bowl.

Walsh also won a power struggle with team owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr. as the 49ers selected defensive coordinator George Seifert as their new head coach. DeBartolo was reportedly interested in getting a "name" coach to take over, while Walsh lobbied hard for Seifert.

Walsh will stay on with the 49ers as executive vice president for football operations.

At a news conference to make the announcement, DeBartolo called Walsh the "greatest coach ever."

Walsh coached the 49ers to their third Super Bowl championship of the 1980s last Sunday, beating the Cincinnati Bengals 20-16 in Miami.

Lombardi led Green Bay to victories in the first two Super Bowls (1967-1968) and then retired to the Packers' front office. He later returned as head coach of the Washington Redskins.

As part of the 49ers' reorganization, general manager John McVay will take on the new title of vice president of football administration. But DeBartolo said that Walsh will be in charge of the draft, trades and roster cuts.

DeBartolo said he didn't try to talk Walsh out of his decision because the coach had already made up his mind.

The decision was reached after what DeBartolo said was an "emotional meeting" with Walsh Wednesday afternoon in Pebble Beach.

"It got emotional a little bit because I don't think anybody wants to change something that has gone so well and so right for so long," DeBartolo said.

Walsh said he had more or less made up his mind to retire during the season but wanted to wait until it ended before making the decision final.

"I look forward to my new career," Walsh said. "It's been 10 great years... It was a 31-year (coaching) career, and there's a time for everybody at some point to step aside."

"It's an uplift to me to step aside on a most positive note. This is the way most coaches would like to leave the game."

Relations between Walsh and DeBartolo have frequently been frosty. Last season, after the 49ers lost to Minnesota in the first round of the NFL playoffs after compiling the league's best regular-season record, Walsh lost his team president title.

But DeBartolo denied that there was a serious rift between the two.

Earlier this month, he told reporters, "That's the furthest thing from the truth that I could imagine. Bill and I are friends, good friends."

Walsh, who held the 49ers' coaching position longer than anyone else and is only the team's fourth coach with a winning record, had strongly endorsed Seifert, a 49-year-old San Francisco native who has been a 49ers' defensive aide since 1980 and before that assisted Walsh at Stanford.

Walsh, who ended his career with an overall record of 102-63-1, including playoff games, joined the 49ers in 1979 after two years as head coach at Stanford, where he compiled a 17-7 record and won bowls at the end of both seasons.

"A very lofty standard has been established in this organization and by Bill Walsh, one I look forward to maintaining," Seifert said at the news conference. "I believe we can continue to produce the type of team that San Francisco will be proud of."

In Walsh's first season, the stumbling 49ers matched their 1978 record of 2-14. The following year they were 6-10.

Then the fun began.

In 1981, the 49ers, with Joe Montana out of Notre Dame at quarterback, went 13-3 and defeated Cincinnati in the Super Bowl.

In strike-shortened 1982, the 49ers went 3-6. But they bounced back to 10-6 in 1983 and in 1984 went 15-1, winning their second Super Bowl with a resounding victory over the Miami Dolphins.

Scoring record falls on Marble's dunk

By Brent Woods
The Daily Iowan

Dunking in an opponent's face is a fitting way to become an all-time leading scorer, but Roy Marble was just glad to end the fuss any way he could.

Marble needed 11 points to surpass Greg Stokes' Iowa career scoring mark of 1,768 Thursday night in Carver-Hawkeye Arena against Wisconsin. He scored Nos. 1,768 and 1,769 on a slam with 1 minute, 57 seconds remaining in the first half of the 12th-ranked Hawkeyes' 78-70 win.

"To tell you the truth, I wouldn't care how it happened," Marble said. "I just wanted to get it out of the way so we could start concentrating on winning the game. I said, 'I got to get this over with in the first half.' It's just like a big monkey has been on my back."

Marble said it is too early to tell exactly how he feels about setting the mark and the shiny new trophy that came with it.

"I got this certain feeling—I don't know what it is, but I feel good about it," he said. "It's something that I won't be able to see how much it affects me until after the season, once I can settle down and look back on my career here."

Iowa Coach Tom Davis was able to reflect on Marble's achievement.

"I'm very appreciative of everything (Marble) has accomplished in his career, especially his attitude this year," Davis said. "If there is any reason why we are 15-3, after losing (Michael) Ingram and losing (Matt) Bullard, (Marble) is one of the reasons."

Marble led the Hawkeyes at the half with 13 points and recorded a team-leading 24 for the game. The first 5:39 of the contest had ticked away before Marble attempted a shot, when he broke the ice with a put-back of a Ray Thompson miss and converted the 3-point play.

Marble confessed that nervousness about the mark has been a problem for the past week, and though he spent part of his afternoon doing housework to ease the tension, it didn't help much once he stepped out on the court.

"I found out the best way for me to handle being nervous is to admit

Gable expects big results at conference dual meet

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The Michigan Wolverines are the favorites to be Big Ten wrestling champions this season, but Iowa Coach Dan Gable doesn't buy that line.

"If my kids wrestle up to their ability, we should come home Big Ten dual champions," Gable said of today and Saturday's conference dual-meet tournament in Indianapolis. The Hawkeyes head into action ranked behind their league foe.

Amateur Wrestling News tabs Michigan fourth, while Iowa is fifth.

Wrestling

At this point, it is speculation that the clash would even take place. Tournament seeding arrangements require both teams to advance to the championship round to face each other.

Friday, Iowa will take on the winner of the Ohio State-Illinois dual. From there, a win over the Minnesota-Northwestern victor would lead to the final round.

"Sure, we're looking past the first round a little, but Minnesota wrestled us tough and Northwestern has been strong this year," Gable said. "There's a lot of hype about us meeting Michigan. We'd like to wrestle them."

Minnesota has already shown this year that it can challenge Iowa. The Hawkeyes needed a win at heavyweight to escape with a 22-17 win Jan. 22 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Gophers were ranked sixth at the time.

Although the name would appear to indicate it, this weekend's competition won't decide the Big Ten championships, only the Big Ten dual championships.

Lafayette, Ind., will be the site of the Big Ten meet March 4-5. See Wrestling, Page 2B

Upstart teams will take upset shot

By Michael Trlik
The Daily Iowan

There are a couple new kids on the block in the Big Ten women's basketball neighborhood.

Iowa and Ohio State are the traditional rulers of the Big Ten's turf, but Purdue and Indiana are starting to make some noise as conference contenders.

Fourth-ranked Iowa, which sits alone in first place in the Big Ten, will play both upstart programs this weekend. The Hawkeyes will host Indiana, 4-2 in the conference and 11-5 overall, tonight at 7

Women's Basketball

Sunday, Iowa will play 11th-ranked Purdue, 4-1 and 13-2, at West Lafayette, Ind.

"We have to prepare for both teams," Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer said. "We recognize the talent of the team we are playing."

Sunday's game is the marquee attraction of the weekend but Iowa can't afford to overlook Indiana. A Hoosier win would throw the Big Ten title picture into a four-team race. Even with those implications, Indiana Coach Jim Izard isn't too excited about coming to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"No, we're not excited," Izard said. "You don't want me to lie. We don't have the talent to challenge for the Big Ten title."

"I'm not a dreamer. The only chance we have of beating Iowa is slim and none, and none just jumped out the window."

Purdue isn't about to concede Sunday's game to the Hawkeyes, but the Boilermakers know that Iowa will be just as ready.

"We're anxious to play them. It will be good for our kids," Purdue assistant Gail Goestenkor said. "They have been playing really, really well. It will take a near-perfect game by us to beat them."

The Purdue game will be part of a Boilermaker doubleheader. The Purdue men's team plays Michigan prior to the start of the women's game. Purdue officials are offering free admission to anyone who stays after the men's game.

"This is a crucial game for us," See Iowa, Page 2B

Hawkeyes hold off Wisconsin, 78-70

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

After all the fanfare over Roy Marble's 1,782nd point subsided, Iowa realized it had a ballgame with the Wisconsin Badgers.

The No. 12 Hawkeyes fought off a Wisconsin comeback bid, fueled by six second-half, 3-point baskets to earn a 78-70 win Thursday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"I think you see more evidence of what we're going to see all season long," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "The depth in this conference is unbelievable."

In the first half, the story was the long-awaited, Iowa career-scoring mark for Marble. The Hawkeye senior from Flint, Mich., eclipsed Greg Stokes' standard of 1,768 points on a slam dunk with 1 minute, 57 seconds remaining before intermission.

"It was just something I wanted to do to make my parents proud," Marble said of the record. "I was nervous all day."

Marble finished with a team-high 24 points on nine of 13 shooting from the field, while teammate Ed Horton pumped in 22.

For Wisconsin, the offense was entirely in the hands of Danny Jones. The junior was strong inside, coming away with a game-high 27 points.

"I was feeling good," Jones said. "For a while there, I got pretty tired and then I got in foul trouble, that sort of thing. It wasn't a great game."

But the Badgers made it a good game.

Men's Basketball

After a Marble free throw with 5:08 left in the contest and Iowa leading 64-53, Wisconsin canned three, 3-point shots. Iowa got just one basket during the stretch, cutting the lead to three with 3:42 remaining.

That was as close as Coach Steve Yoder's Wisconsin team would come, as Iowa advanced to 3-2 in the Big Ten and 15-3 overall. The Badgers slipped to 2-5 in the league, 10-6 overall.

"We didn't play very well the first ten minutes of the game," Yoder said. "Other than that, I thought we played very well. Danny played well, but we couldn't get anybody else involved in the offense."

Marble wasn't the only Hawkeye to receive recognition. Before the tip-off, Horton was given a basketball in honor of becoming the school's 18th, 1,000-point scorer. Fellow seniors Marble and B.J. Armstrong are among the elite group.

"(One aspect) is the quickness of the players," Davis said of the way Wisconsin was able to produce from the perimeter in the second half. "Tonight, we were in a zone and we were doing pretty well for a while, then (Wisconsin) hit a couple of threes, so we went back to man right away."

Minnesota upsets top-ranked Illinois

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Minnesota upset top-ranked Illinois 69-62 Thursday night as Willie Burton had 20 points and 13 rebounds and sparked a first-half burst that sent the Illini to their first loss of the season.

Illinois, 17-1 overall and 4-1 in the Big Ten, had been the only undefeated NCAA Division I team. The Illini, playing without standout point guard Kendall Gill, who was injured in their last game, this week had earned their first No. 1 ranking since 1952.

Minnesota, 11-5 and 3-3, pulled off its second upset in 12 days, having beaten then-No. 5 Iowa on Jan. 14.

Burton enjoyed perhaps the best all-around game of his three-year college career.

His biggest contribution came midway through the opening half when the forward's three consecutive tremendous passes helped Minnesota turn a 12-11 lead into a 25-11 bulge. The Gophers maintained their 14-point lead well into the second half before holding off a late Illinois rally.

After Melvin Newbern's layup made it 14-11, Burton's courtlength pass found Kevin Lynch for a dunk; Lynch was fouled and made the free throw. Illinois turned the ball over and Burton, inbounded from 35 feet, hit Richard Coffey with a perfect lob feed. Burton then assisted on Jim Shikenjanski's layup for a 21-11 lead.

Newbern and Coffey scored to finish the run, during which Illinois went scoreless for 5½ minutes.

Minnesota led 33-24 at halftime and increased its advantage to 53-39 with 9:56 to play. The Illini still trailed 61-49 with 5:16 left but reeled off the next 10 points to close within 61-59; Kenny Battle scored five during the spurt.

Burton then hit a short jumper and Lynch made two free throws to make it 65-59.

The Gophers were content to sit back in a zone defense most of the game. Without Gill, the third-leading 3-point shooter in the Big Ten, the Illini struggled from the outside.

Newbern added 16 points for Minnesota while Battle and Nick Anderson scored 12 points apiece to pace Illinois.

North Carolina State pounds Duke

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Brian Howard scored 23 points and 15th-ranked North Carolina State relied on its ball-hawking defense to take an 88-73 Atlantic Coast Conference victory over No. 8 Duke Thursday night, sending the Blue Devils to their third straight loss.

The Wolfpack's defense made eight steals in the first half, then tightened in the closing 10 minutes of the second half with four more steals to hold off a Duke comeback. N.C. State raised its record to 13-2, 4-1 in the ACC and has won 11 of its last 12.

Duke, mired in a slump after winning its first 13 games and playing without leading scorer Danny Ferry, dropped to 13-3 and 3-3. Ferry has been bothered by back spasms all season.

No. 3 Louisville 95, Southern Mississippi 76
HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Pervis Ellison scored 26 points and No. 3 Louisville beat Southern Mississippi 95-76 in the Metro Conference for its 14th straight victory.

Louisville outscored Southern Mississippi 22-6 to open the second half, increasing its lead to 65-45 with 11:40 to play. Kenny Payne scored nine of his 19 points during the stretch and Ellison added six.

The Cardinals are 14-2 and 3-0 in the league. The loss snapped a three-game winning streak for Southern Mississippi, which fell to 6-9 and 2-3 in the conference.

Eye injury ends Pryor's comeback bid

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Former junior welterweight champion Aaron Pryor, scheduled Thursday to continue his third comeback attempt, was taken off the boxing card after doctors determined that his left eye was too badly damaged to allow him to fight.

New York Athletic Commission Chairman Randy Gordon said the decision was made earlier Thursday.

"The final decision was mine. I waited until I could get all the doctors together. They all agreed," Gordon said shortly before announcing the decision to the crowd at the Rochester War Memorial.

Dr. Robert Vanderlinde of Rochester said Pryor has at least a very dense cataract and maybe a detached retina. Vanderlinde said Pryor will undergo surgery Tuesday.

Raiders, Oakland reach settlement

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The City of Oakland and Los Angeles Raiders reached an out-of-court settlement in which the city will pay $3 million for the football team's legal fees, it was announced Thursday.

City Attorney Jayne Williams said that although Oakland had sought to pay the money over a 10-year period, the maximum allowable, it instead will make payments over a four-year span.

"Actually it is a savings to the city because interest would have been accruing for 10 years instead of four years," Williams said, adding the city was pleased to negotiate a payment plan "that would not be too biting."

Oakland was ordered earlier to pay the fees incurred during its losing legal battle to keep the Raiders in Oakland.

Jets' Carson heads Browns' candidates

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bud Carson, the defensive coordinator of the New York Jets, emerged Thursday as the favorite to become the next head coach of the Cleveland Browns.

Browns president Art Modell and the team's top front office officials planned to meet with Carson at his suburban New York home Thursday night. Modell has indicated he would select the team's next head coach by Monday, if not sooner.

Modell said Thursday that his list is down to Carson, 57, and Fritz Shurmur, 56, defensive coordinator of the Los Angeles Rams. Modell said he hoped to have an announcement on a new coach later this week.

I'm nervous," he said. "After a while, things started coming."
"I just feel so good about it," fellow senior Ed Horton said of the record. "The good thing about it is that I've seen all the points. I've seen every basket he's made, and I know he's glad it's over with."

Marble's parents, who came from Michigan to attend the game, know one thing for sure.
"All three of us were excited," Roy Marble Sr., said. "I don't know who was excited the most, but it was something. We're going to set (the trophy) up on the fireplace."

Stringer said. "It will give us a chance to see how we play away from home against some tough competition. They are taking us into their corner, their alley. Purdue will be a test for us."

Purdue loss would almost eliminate the Boilermakers from the Big Ten title picture.

"We don't like to tell our kids that this is a must win," Goetsenkos said. "But realistically it is. If we want to win the Big Ten we have to beat Iowa and Ohio State at home."

Wrestling

One man on the Iowa coaching staff has some personal interest in a meeting with Michigan.

"I have fond memories of Michigan, but I know where my loyalties are," Iowa assistant Mark Johnson said. Johnson was an 1977 graduate from Michigan and an all-American. "I know the guys on this team as individuals. There's no doubt about it, I'm a Hawkeye all the way."

and is unsure who will be at the spot every day.

"One guy won't wrestle every day," Gable said. Freshman Terry Brands, who owned the weight earlier in the year, will alternate with Martin.

"Martin will wrestle (Friday) and we'll see how he does. Brands will weigh in for Saturday and we'll go from there," Gable said.

Optimistically, the Iowa coach said he is confident about the Hawkeyes at 142 pounds. Sophomore Eric Pierson, who was sidelined with a shoulder injury for most of the season, is back with a 3-0 record.

"Eric has looked good so far,"

Gable said. "Michigan has an all-American at (142 pounds), but I think we'll take it."

"From the media hype, we need to win. A loss to Michigan would take away from our credibility because Oklahoma State, Arizona State and Penn State have already beaten them," Gable said. "With Arizona State and Oklahoma State coming up February 11 and 12, we need to win this weekend."

Iowa takes a 3-0 conference mark, 11-1 overall, into Indianapolis. The only loss came to Penn State Dec. 2 at University Park, Pa. Also at stake is 96 straight Big Ten dual victories.

"I'm not concerned about the streak," Gable said, "but it better be a better team that beats us."

Gable's NCAA record of 100 consecutive non-losing matches, which he set during his college career at Iowa State, was recently broken by Pitt-Johnstown senior Carlton Haselrig. Gable didn't lose until the final match of his college career and finished 100-1.

Haselrig has a record of 100-0-1, but a draw with Northern Iowa's Joel Greenlee during the National Wrestling Coaches Association all-star match last season will prevent him from breaking Gable's record.

Hawks face tune-up for Big Ten meet

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

The Illinois Invitational means more to the Iowa women's swimming team than just the last meet before the Big Ten championships.

The Hawkeyes bring their three-meet winning streak into Champaign, Ill., today as they compete in a meet that mirrors the Big Ten Championships, according to Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy.

"This meet is just about like the Big Ten meet in a lot of aspects," Kennedy said. "It follows the same format in the order of events, this will be scored to 16 places like at the Big Ten (meet) and we will face some really good competition."

The Illinois Invitational will also be the first coed meet for the Hawkeyes as five men's teams, including Iowa, will be competing in Champaign as well.

The women's teams include host Illinois, Northern Illinois, Southern Illinois and Cincinnati. Purdue will also be sending its diving squad.

Today's meet also is similar to the Big Ten championships because it will be swam in three sessions, beginning at 4 p.m. The teams return to the water Saturday morning and conclude that evening.

Kennedy said this meet will be a great opportunity for the Hawkeyes to adjust to swimming a three-session meet, and he will find out which swimmers he'll use in certain relays during the Big Ten championships.

"Everyone has been working real hard in practice and responding real well," Kennedy said. "We'll just have to see if they can face up to the challenge."

The Hawkeyes think they can, according to junior Louise Keogh. "It should be an exciting meet for us, because there is no pressure and we have the confidence coming off of three victories over Hawaii, Villanova and Northern Illinois."

Keogh also said the team has a chance to do well this weekend because they've done well in other three session meets.

Sophomore Debbie Wirth said the divers should benefit from this meet because they will be doing 11 dives per session, the same number they will perform at the Big Ten meet. During the dual meet season they only did six dives per session.

"This is an important meet," Wirth said, "because it's the last meet before the Big Ten meet, and we've been building up to that one all season. This weekend's meet will give us a chance to see where we are as far as training goes."

"The girls have been working hard, and they're in the best shape they've been in all year," Iowa diving coach Bob Rydzek said. "This should be a big meet for the divers."

Iowa returns to pool at Illinois Classic

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

Nearly three weeks have passed since the Iowa men's swimming team last competed, and Coach Glenn Patton feels the team is ready to race.

The Hawkeyes will compete in the Illini Classic Friday and Saturday at Illinois, Indiana, Eastern Michigan, Northern Illinois and Southern Illinois will also compete in the event.

"This will be our first taste of competition since January 2-3 at the Rainbow Invitational in Hawaii," Patton said. "I think we're ready for another meet."

Though Patton said there should be some good swimmers, no one is aiming to make NCAA cuts at this meet.

"It's not a really big competition," swimmer Mark Kohmetscher said. "But it's a chance to swim the Big Ten order of events."

One of the highlights for the Hawkeyes will be the participation of Artur Wojdat, who arrived at Iowa in the beginning of January.

Wojdat, a native of Poland, won the gold medal in the 400-meter freestyle in the Seoul Olympics, but has not competed with the

Men's Swimming

Hawkeyes yet.

The Hawkeyes will be competing without distance swimmer Gavin Lilley, however, since he has been permanently suspended from the team for discipline reasons.

According to Patton, the team is looking ahead to the Michigan meet, which will be at Iowa on Feb. 3.

Michigan won the Big Ten Championships last season and placed fifth at the NCAA meet, while Iowa finished second in the Big Ten and 13th at the NCAA.

"(The Illini Classic) will be good competition experience," Patton said, "and it gives us a chance to tune up in preparation for the big home meet against Michigan."

The Hawkeye divers will also be competing in the Illini meet, and, according to Coach Bob Rydze, this will be a very big meet for the divers.

"Jamie Morrow has been working very hard," Rydze said. "But Tomasz Rossa is suffering from post-

Mark Kohmetscher

Olympic blues."

Rossa, who participated in the Seoul Olympics for Poland, will be competing for the first time since this season began. Eligibility rules kept Rossa from competing during the first semester.

Rydze predicts Pat Evans from Cincinnati will be a favorite in the diving competition, along with Indiana's Mark Lenzi.

"There will be four or five divers that should be in the top eight at the NCAA meet," Rydze said. "The guys' contest should be very, very good. This should be the best diving meet before the conference meet."

Hawkeyes to take best shot at top players in E. Lansing

By Julie Deardorff
The Daily Iowan

Six members of the Iowa tennis team will get their last chance to excel individually before Big Ten indoor play begins, in the upcoming Spartan Invitational at Michigan State.

The unflinching tournament at East Lansing, Mich., throws the players together in one main draw, leaving the pairings to luck. No doubles matches will be played in the competition which runs Saturday through Monday.

"Everybody shows their strengths and what they have for the year at this tournament," Iowa's Dave Novak said. "Once duals begin, the other teams will know that we're going to be pretty decent this year."

The Big Ten teams send their top six players to the tournament, while the top three finishers in the 1988 Big Ten tournament (Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin) send seven. Michigan State, the host team, will also have seven players competing.

Men's Tennis

"It's a tougher meet than the ITCA tournament because the smaller schools aren't going to be there," senior Martin Aguirre said. "The field is going to be much narrower, and it's going to be like Big Tens. Everyone is tough and there isn't going to be an easy match."

Iowa will fill the six spots with Aguirre, Western Michigan transfer Mike Kiewiet, all-Big Ten selection Claes Ramel, Novak, Indiana transfer Paul Buckingham and Jay Maltby.

Among the players they may face are Michigan's Malvai Washington, currently ranked No. 1 in the country, and Dan Goldberg, ranked seventh.

Other nationally ranked players competing will be Northwestern's Steve Herdoiza, 12th, Todd Martin, 33rd, and Pat Hahn, 41st; Indiana's Eoin Collins, 38th, and Gunar Salumaa, 59th; and Ohio State's Steve Miguel, 48th.

"This is the strongest field in terms of nationally ranked players that I can remember," said Iowa Coach Steve Houghton, who enters his eighth season. "It will be a nice change for the players to play different positions, and it will help give me an idea of where they can compete the best. A lot of it does depend on the draw, however."

Graf ousts Sabatini in Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Gabriela Sabatini couldn't stop Steffi Graf at the Australian Open, and she doesn't think Helena Sukova can either.

"I don't think Helena has many chances," Sabatini said after Graf trounced her 6-3, 6-0 Thursday and moved within one victory of a fifth straight Grand Slam title.

"Steffi is playing very well and Helena had to struggle today. I don't think it will be a problem."

The fifth-seeded Sukova overcame jitters and an errant backhand in beating unseeded Belinda Cordwell of New Zealand 7-6 (7-2), 4-6, 6-2 in the other semifinal.

Graf has an 8-1 record against Sukova, whose only victory came in 1983 when the West German star was only 14 years old. But Sukova, who lost her two previous Grand Slams finals at the 1984 Australian Open and 1986 U.S. Open, said she won't be intimidated.

"I have nothing to lose," she said. "I'll try my best and see what happens."

What happened to Sabatini was surprising, even though the 18-year-old Argentine had lost 14 of her 16 previous matches against Graf.

Most of their matches have been close. This wasn't.

"I wanted to win badly today and she didn't seem to be physically there," the defending champion said. "I played well and she was not at her best. She wasn't moving as well as she can."

Sabatini, plagued by stamina problems in the past, moved sluggishly in the sweltering heat on center court. She won only eight points in the second set, which lasted 19 minutes.

Hawks will face Southeast Missouri

By Erica Weiland

After a fast shuffling of plans, the Iowa women's gymnastics team will compete against Southeast Missouri State Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Field House North Gym.

The Hawkeyes were originally scheduled to compete at Ball State with Southeast Missouri and Bowling Green, but the Ball State coach's son was killed in a car accident and the meet was called off.

Women's Gymnastics

Southeast Missouri, which was the 1987-88 Division II national champion, agreed to travel to Iowa for the competition.

"It should be a very good meet," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said. "It should be very competitive and entertaining."

DeMarco also said it will be nice to be at home this weekend instead of traveling, since the team went to Utah about a week ago and will be going to New Hampshire next weekend.

"Traveling's hard on you," junior Robyn Zussman said. "It's nice to be at home with our equipment, and the encouragement helps get us motivated."

The Hawkeyes are led by freshman Lori Cole and sophomore Michelle Cahal, who are currently the top all-around performers for the team.

Another leader for Iowa will be Zussman in the vault. She currently has the fifth-highest score in the Big Ten on the vault.

"I'm excited about the meet," Zussman said. "We look very good this week, and we've been improving day by day. They're a tough team."

Hawkeyes set to compete at UNI, Minnesota invite

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team has more talent than in recent years, and with a little help from underclassmen, the Hawkeyes should finish ahead of their eighth-place finish in the Big Ten last season.

"On paper, this is probably the best team this university has ever had," Coach Ted Wheeler said. While this is a considerable claim, the 11th-year coach pointed to the Hawkeyes' returning strength in the sprint and hurdle events.

Iowa will open its indoor season with a dual meet at Northern Iowa Saturday. Field events begin at 11:45 a.m. and running events at 12:15 at the UNI-Dome in Cedar Falls.

Men's Track

The Panthers may not match-up well with the Hawkeyes in the shorter distances, but Northern Iowa's distance runners were more than a match for Iowa during cross-country season.

The entire core of Iowa's sprint teams returns, led by Curtis Chung, Bernard Heard, Charles Moye, Gary Falls and James Armstrong. Wheeler said this strength should make up for a lack of experience from the 1,500-meter distance through 10,000 meters.

"We have great four-by-one hundred and four-by-four hundred (meter) relays," he said, "and potentially we should be at a high level in the two hundred through eight hundred."

Depth in the hurdle events should continue for the Hawkeyes, with senior intermediate specialist Pat McGhee providing steady point scoring. He has won the Big Ten title in the 400-meter hurdles two of his three years at Iowa, placed second in the NCAA championship this past season and was an Olympic trials finalist.

Simply put, Wheeler said McGhee is one of Iowa's best athletes — in any sport.

"What he is capable of is beyond your imagination," he said. "He's the best athlete I've ever coached."

The Hawkeyes' attitude toward the indoor season is to treat it as a preliminary to the Big Ten indoor meet and the outdoor season.

Senior sprinter Chung, who specializes in the 400 and 200 meters, said, "I've been training well, but I really won't know how far along I am until competition. We should be competitive with the Big Ten teams when we face them."

The format of events is altered during the indoor season, eliminating discus, javelin, steeplechase and the 100-meter sprint.

By Matthew Zlatnik
The Daily Iowan

Last weekend, the Iowa women's track team competed in an unscored meet at the Missouri Invitational.

That will change tonight and Saturday in Minneapolis, where the Hawkeyes will compete in the Minnesota/Reebok Invitational.

"We're trying to make a go of the team title," Coach Jerry Hassard said. "As a team, we'll try to score as many points as we can."

To this end, the Hawkeyes will vary their lineup slightly, both to increase their scoring potential and block opponents' points. Freshman Amy McReil will run in the 400-meter, instead of the 600-meter which she ran last weekend, to try to compensate for the loss of Karen Chevalleau, who was injured at Missouri.

Women's Track

"We're trying to combine athletes competing in their specialties with what we'll face from the competition," Hassard said. "In some cases we're moving people a little bit, to block some points or score some others."

"We're not taking a full team, only those who can contribute to the team effort by scoring in their events."

The Hawkeyes will compete against several teams, including Minnesota, Iowa State, and national powers Stanford and Texas. Hassard said he doesn't expect those teams to send full squads.

"Even if they just send a few individuals, they could be the best people that they have," Hassard said. "Minnesota will have a full squad. They place quite a bit of emphasis on winning their own meet. And Iowa State will have a strong team, too."

Junior Jeanne Kruckeberg, who won three events at Missouri, will run in the 800-meter and the 2-mile relay.

"I think everyone will want to focus more than last time," Kruckeberg said. "We'll try to get some strategy going, to try to win."

Strategy depends on the event, Kruckeberg said. "When there are several people in the same event, you can work together to get in front of other teams," Kruckeberg said. "It's an individual sport, so it can be hard to fit it together as a team."

Chevalleau pulled a hamstring running hurdles at the Missouri meet.

Jazz and woodwinds do mix

By Jennifer C. Weglarz
The Daily Iowan

Being the new kid in the quintet is a trying experience for a musician, and Mark Weiger had not performed with a woodwind ensemble since his undergraduate days.

The School of Music's visiting assistant professor of oboe did not need to worry about fitting into the UI Faculty Woodwind Quintet. "It's an easy atmosphere, no fussing and fuming," he says expansively. "They're very tolerant of all my suggestions ... abiding me very well. They let me change the world for them."

When the quintet takes the stage tonight at 8 in Clapp Recital Hall, it will be not only with the "new kid" but also with an exciting and diverse program, featuring pieces romantic, modern and jazzy.

"It's a pretty jazzy piece, and not a regular style that a woodwind ensemble like ours would play. It's off the beaten path for us," says bassoonist Ronald Tyree of the "Second Quintet" by Hungarian composer Frigyes Hidas. "There are a lot of fresh ideas coming from Hungary, a lot of new ideas and sounds."

Clarinetist Maurita Mead agrees. "The third movement is a jazz clarinet solo ... (in) a similar writing style to Gershwin. I'm adding the opening glissando from 'Rhapsody in Blue.'" The odd meters and rhythmic structures in the first and second movements are reminiscent of Bartok.

The obscure piece was heard by Weiger last summer on the East Coast. "It's from within the last 10 years. You can't get the parts in the United States — we're playing off of photocopies, which I suppose isn't sanctioned." But he adds that the real challenge of the piece lies not within its inavailability but within the fact that making a woodwind quintet sound like an improv jazz combo is no small task.

Also included on the program is Maurice Ravel's "Le Tombeau de Couperin," and Alvin Etler's "Quintet for Winds," which has an interesting connection to the ensemble. Mead did her doctoral dissertation at Michigan State University on the Iowa-born composer's first and second clarinet sonatas. "His first clarinet sonata is very similar to the quintet. ... It has intensity and drive, lots of motion ... very progressive, with lots of variety. It connects with the emotional character coming through the music."

The group's opener, "Prelude, Variations and Finale," was chosen to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the late Philip Greeley Clapp's birth. Tyree noted that the current quintet has a much "different attitude than 15 or 20 years ago," the time that he remembers first sightreading Clapp's quintet.

Betty Mather, the professor of flute who has been with the quintet since 1952, adds that, while difficult to play, the piece is "very appealing" and "easy to listen to. He wrote it in an eclectic style — it mixes early 20th century styles, some Mahler (and) has constant tempo and dynamic changes."

"Originally, I didn't like it very much," says Weiger. "(Clapp) gave written instructions for every note in every measure. You spend so much time reading the words you don't have time to read the notes."

Dueling love stories hit Hancher with wit

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

It'll be a weekend of affairs of the heart as Hancher Auditorium presents a pre-Valentine's Day love-in by the nationally renowned Acting Company. Elizabethan comedy and American farce pair off for a weekend of hearts gone awry at Hancher.

The Acting Company, America's touring repertory ensemble, will perform Shakespeare's comedy "Love's Labour's Lost" at 8 p.m. Saturday and the 1930s Hollywood farce "Boy Meets Girl" at 3 p.m. Sunday in Hancher Auditorium.

"Love's Labour's Lost," under the direction of Paul Giovanni, is considered by many scholars to be the first play that revealed Shakespeare's genius. It is noted for its style and lyric power.

The plot concerns the King of Navarre and three of his lords, who sign an oath to devote themselves to their studies and forget the pursuit of women. The oath is soon tested with the arrival of the beautiful Princess of France and her ladies. An epic battle of the sexes ensues, as the men break their vows and the women decide to teach them a lesson.

"Inside a university community, this play may have a special appeal," said UI English professor Miriam Gilbert. "It's a play about young people, about pretension, about falling in love. In part, one could say this is a play about learning how to speak honestly — about love, yes, but really about anything."

Gilbert was not worried about the potential difficulties Shakespearean modern-day audience. "It's a fairly difficult play to read, but it's very easy to see on stage. The characters in the play are intoxicated with language and love to show off."

Director Giovanni is best known for writing and directing "The Crucifer of Blood," which has played to great acclaim, winning a Tony nomination on Broadway and a Best Play nomination from London's Eastern Standard. He recently directed "Hamlet" at the University of South Carolina and "A Man for All Seasons" at New York's Roundabout Theatre. He directed the American premiere of "Equus" and the first British Touring Company of "Amadeus."

"Boy Meets Girl," directed by Brian Murray, is considered a classic of the American farce genre. It was written by Bella and Samuel Spewack, who also wrote the libretto for "Kiss Me, Kate," and the original 1935 production was directed by George Abbott. It was made into a film in 1938 starring James Cagney and Pat O'Brien.

The plot centers on two zany, fast-talking Hollywood screenwriters who are forced to manufacture a script for a studio star following the formula "boy meets girl, boy loses girl, boy gets girl." Their efforts expose the artificiality and pretensions of Hollywood as one stereotype after another comes under attack: the pompous producer, the dumb blonde, the amoral agent.

The play, a co-production with the Repertory Theatre of St. Louis, is a multi-media bonanza with period film trailers, excerpts from Hollywood radio broadcasts and the songs of auditioning studio musicians. The production also features the off-stage voices of Robin Williams and Kevin Kline.

Brian Murray, older brother to Bill, previously directed Moliere's "Tartuffe" for The Acting Company's 1982-83 season.

On the pairing of the two plays, Gilbert said, "I think it's wonderful, since 'Love's Labour's Lost' is about boy-meets-girl. It's really a kind of witty battle of the sexes."

The Acting Company's appearances will mark their fifth visit to Hancher. The company was founded in 1972 by Margot Harley and the late John Houseman with

Full Fathom Five album shakes Hüsker parallels

By Brian Jones
The Daily Iowan

Say "Full Fathom Five" and what a lot of people hear is "Hüsker Dü." Not a bad comparison, certainly; both bands have (or had, in the Hüskers' case) a propensity for compressing several hooks into a relatively small space, and Eric Melcher's guitar often buzzes in a manner not inconsistent with the way Bob Mould's used to.

But that's where the similarities end. First, Melcher rarely solos, concentrating instead on big shards of guitar noise. Second, bassist Dave Stephenson plays both rhythmic and melodic lines Greg Norton would have killed for. Finally, just about every song on FF5's new Link Records release, "4 a.m.," is better than most anything the Hüskers released after they signed to Warner Brothers.

The company has won many awards, including the Los Angeles Drama Critics Circle Award and several Obies. In 1980, the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts invited the Acting Company to become its official touring arm, and the group also performs at a New York City theater named for co-founder John Houseman.

Tickets for "Love's Labour's Lost" are $16.50, $13.50 and $10.50 for adults; $13.20, $10.80 and $8.40 for UI students. Tickets for "Boy Meets Girl" are $16, $13 and $10 for adults; $12.80, $10.40 and $8 for UI students and senior citizens; $8, $6.50 and $5 for persons 18 and under.

Bands

All is not grim, though, at "4 a.m." Both "Madeline," with its "I've decided not to die" refrain (which actually sounds uplifting), and "7.99 an Hour," almost sound like pop songs. Melcher allows as much, saying that "as a whole, (the album's) a little more upbeat, not as modal. Plus, the production just makes the songs sound better." If the band's debut album, "Cry of a Falling Nation" was largely filled with clenched-jaw damnations of a world hurdling toward information-overload collapse, then "4 a.m." is peopled with those who, despite day-in day-out struggles that threaten to overwhelm them, are resolved to keep trying.

Full Fathom 5 appears poised for big college success. "Paingiver," from last year's EP of the same name, received heavy college radio play and placed well on independent label charts. The band does a terrific job of balancing taut, lean compositions against thick, heavy, chord-based songs.

In a startling display of half wishful thinking and half ethnocentricity, Iowa City music fans have been predicting for the past couple years that, sooner or later, one of "our" bands will release a record that'll put Iowa City, so to speak, on the musical map. With any luck, "4 a.m." is that record.

Full Fathom 5 will be appearing at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., tomorrow night. Also playing will be Titanic Love Affair.

Lectures enliven Mesquakie art

The Daily Iowan

If you're expecting a typical symposium this weekend — a Friday and Saturday full of dusty old windbags droning on and on down deserted back alleys of Mesquakie art and culture — you'll be disappointed for sure.

The UI Museum of Art will sponsor a symposium, "Mesquakie Art and Culture," today and Saturday. The symposium is in conjunction with the current exhibition of Mesquakie artworks, "Art of the Red Earth People: The Mesquakie of Iowa."

"There'll be a lot of people lecturing and showing slides that put the exhibit objects in perspective," said Christopher Roy, UI professor of art and Museum or Art curator of African, Pacific and New World cultures. "At the opening of the exhibit, there were a lot of people surprised — pleasantly surprised — at the quality of Mesquakie art objects."

Participants in the two-day event will include representatives from the Mesquakie Settlement in Tama; exhibition curators Gaylord Torrence, professor of art at Drake University in Des Moines and Robert Hobbs, associate professor of art history at Florida State University in Tallahassee; and several curators and collectors of native American art.

Today's program begins at 10 a.m. with a panel discussion, "Issues and Responsibilities of Collection Native American Art," featuring Torrence; George Horse Capture, curator, Plains Indian Museum, Buffalo Bill Historical Center, Cody, Wyoming; and Richard Pohrt, collector of Native American art, Flint, Michigan.

Art

The afternoon session, on the topic "Mesquakie History and Its Relationship to Outside Cultures," begins at 1:30. At 7 p.m. Evan Maurer, director of the Minneapolis Institute of Art, will speak on "Mesquakie Visual Arts in the Woodland and Prairie Traditions."

The first session on Saturday, "Important Forms of Mesquakie Art," will begin at 10 a.m. The afternoon session, beginning at 1:30, will feature Ruth Bliss Phillips, professor of art history, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada, whose lecture is "Clothed in Blessing: Traditions of Great Lakes Indian Dress."

Phillips' talk will be followed by a panel discussion at 2:30 p.m. on the subject "Mesquakie Art and Culture, Old and New."

The symposium is free, and no registration is required.

Restored 'Napoleon' reigns

By Tom Hunter
The Daily Iowan

Napoleon was the poet of action. Bullied as a boy, Napoleon Bonaparte became an artist of the battlefield, a motivator of men and a master strategist who commanded his troops like chessmen and ultimately became Emperor of France.

In his epic biography "Napoleon," Abel Gance did what no other filmmaker has done — he created the aura of genius on the screen. Gance's 1927 masterpiece, made at the dawn of sound films, stretches five hours and ends at the height of Napoleon's triumph in Italy.

Gance, born in 1889 in Paris, was the midwife and father of modern cinema. He knew the power of film to create emotion, and he invented many famous techniques. Gance commanded every aspect of his films. He was writer, director, editor, cameraman, chief mechanic and inventor.

Gance developed and patented the wide screen we now call "Cinerama." He invented the close-up, the horizontal wipe, "Perspective Sound" and the "Pictograph." He invented "Polyvision," where the screen is divided into thirds as if three films were going at once. Gance used this technique in the finale of Napoleon.

In his lifetime Gance made innumerable films, but interference from producers caused him to claim only six as his own. While Alfred Hitchcock was in England making the first sound picture with dialogue, Gance was doing likewise in France.

Gance's genius, like Napoleon's, became his curse. Ahead of its time, Gance's five-hour masterpiece "Napoleon" was doomed to constant and savage cutting. Audiences rarely saw one-fourth of the original footage. But recently, through the efforts of film historian Kevin Brownlow, "Napoleon" has been released from its celluloid St. Helena. Brownlow's efforts have returned the film to within one minute of its original running time.

Gance admired Napoleon and chose to ignore the faults of the great man many called a sinister monster. In an obvious foreshadowing of future events, Gance has a scene of young Bonaparte organizing a snowball fight among his schoolfellows. Hit in the head by a rock disguised as a snowball, Napoleon, poet of action, sacker of cities, dashes into the opposition side and trounces the guilty party.

When his pet eagle turns up missing, young Napoleon goes to interrogate every boy in the dormitory. No one admits releasing the eagle, and Napoleon judges them all guilty, attempting to thrash all of them at once. Eventually, as Napoleon suffers his punishment, the eagle returns and sets up a motif that returns throughout until the eagle is the final image of the film.

"Napoleon" will be shown at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, at the Bijou.
