Drug rehab costs UI $17,000

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

The UI spent nearly $17,000 last summer to send three UI athletes through drug rehabilitation programs, UI officials said Sunday. The three were identified in Sunday's Des Moines Register as members of the Iowa men's basketball team. They underwent drug treatment last August and September at the Hazelden Pioneer House Treatment Center in Plymouth, Minn., and at the Hanley Hazelden Drug and Alcohol Treatment Center in West Palm Beach, Fla.

A total of $16,522 was spent on the treatment, which is part of a revised athletic policy recently instituted at the UI, according to Ann Rhodes, an assistant UI vice president and President Hunter Rawling's liaison to the Board in Control of Athletics.

The money for the rehabilitation came from athletic revenues and the UI Athletic Department's budget, Rhodes said. No tax dollars were used to fund the athlete's therapy.

"It comes out of the sports medical budget, but it was budgeted out of athletic revenue and there are no tax dollars involved," she said.

The payment for drug rehabilitation of UI student athletes does not constitute a major policy reversal, Rhodes said, but is part of a "modification interpretation" of the UI's previous position on student athlete drug testing, as set by the Board in Control of Athletics.

Established just four days after Rawlings took office last August, the modification strengthened the UI's existing drug testing policy, which had minimum standards for drug testing and required that athletes be tested for drugs only at the end of regular season play, and then only if it appeared that they would be competing in post-season NCAA competition, such as bowl games.

The revised policy requires that athletes undergo drug testing before regular season play commences. If the tests reveal that the athlete is using illegal substances, the player is sent through therapy at the university's expense. If treatment is refused, the player will be automatically suspended from play for an indefinite time.

Rhodes said the modification was an attempt to maintain the integrity of the UI Athletic Department as well as provide the student athlete with a more comprehensive plan for testing and treating possible drug abuse.

"We felt it was irresponsible to give the message that it was OK to do what you wanted until the last week before competition, so we decided to test them earlier.

"Also, hand in hand with the policy of earlier testing, we needed a protocol for dealing with positive test results, either for alcohol or drugs. It doesn't make sense to have a testing program without knowing what to do once those results are in," Rhodes said.

Once an athlete has successfully completed therapy, he or she is allowed back on the team. But if the player continues to use illegal substances and future unannounced drug tests reveal evidence of this continued use, the person is resuspended and only a special university committee can grant

Najib: We'll win without Soviet army

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib told thousands of communist loyalists at a rally Sunday his government will survive after Soviet troops leave and his soldiers will win the nation's 10-year-old civil war.

Moscow Radio said all Soviet troops were out of Kabul, according to British Broadcasting Corp. monitors in London. The radio quoted Monday's edition of the Communist daily Pravda as reporting that "on Sunday, the last Soviet soldier left Kabul." There was no way to immediately confirm the report.

The radio said there were also Soviet troops moving toward the border from the eastern Afghan city of Shindand.

"God is with us. The people are with us. We will win the war," Najib told about 10,000 members of the People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan, who gathered in freezing temperatures near the presidential palace.

In neighboring Pakistan, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze extended talks on the civil war. Guerrilla sources said he would meet Monday with the Moslem guerrillas fighting the Soviet-backed Afghan government. Leaders of the Iran- and

Iowans debate wage increase

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Raising the minimum wage in Iowa would have far-reaching economic effects beyond just increasing the hourly wage of one segment of the population, proponents and doomsayers alike say.

The Iowa House of Representatives passed a bill Tuesday that would raise the minimum wage from $3.35 to $5 an hour in three years.

Downtown Hardee's Manager Rita Schultz estimated 20 of 60 of the employee positions would be eliminated if the minimum wage is raised.

"We would probably have to decrease our staff. Either that, or it's going to cause an increase in our food prices to compensate for it," Schultz said. "Either way, the consumer is going to pay for it."

Schultz said the minimum wage needs to be increased, but the $5 figure may be too high.

"If I'm looking it from a manager's standpoint, it's going to hurt our business," Schultz said. "If I look at it from a personal standpoint, if I were just making $4 an hour, it would be difficult to live on, especially if you're going to school."

House Majority Leader Bob Arnold, D-Davenport, said about eight states have set minimum wages higher than the national minimum wage, $3.35. Debate in the Iowa House of Representatives centered on where the minimum wage in Iowa should be set.

"I think we were down to bargaining where the wage ought to be, not that it needed to be raised," Arnold said.

"Our argument in the debate was that Iowans are among the most productive workers in the nation and they deserve an honest wage

Paraguayan victor promises elections Ousted ruler exiled amid jeers

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Former President Alfredo Stroessner, who ruled this nation 34 years until he was ousted in a coup three days ago, boarded a jetliner Sunday and flew into exile in Brazil.

Also Sunday, the new president, Gen. Andres Rodriguez, announced that elections for president and Congress will be held in 90 days.

As Stroessner led about 20 family members and aides up the steps to the jet, onlookers on the observation deck at President Stroessner International Airport jeered, carried Stroessner's entourage to the airport were accompanied by truckloads of soldiers in combat gear.

Radio stations in the capital reported Stroessner was accompanied by his two sons — Gustavo, an air force lieutenant colonel, and Alfredo.

Rodriguez was Stroessner's top commander and long-time friend. The two remain linked by the marriage of Rodriguez's daughter Marta and Stroessner's son Alfredo.

Stroessner had been under house arrest near the capital since he was captured early Friday after a night of fighting. The death toll from the coup has been estimated at up to 300, but no official figures have been given.

Virgilio Moretzsohn, a councilor at the Brazilian Embassy, told The Associated Press earlier Sunday that Brazil had agreed to Paraguay's request that it accept Stroessner.

The Roman Catholic radio station Radio Caritas reported that Stroessner would go to the Atlantic coastal resort of Guaratuba, in the Brazilian state of Parana. Stroessner has vacationed there often.

In Brazil, a foreign ministry source who spoke on condition of anonymity said he did not know where Stroessner would land.

According to Brazilian press reports, he was to land in Southern Curitiba, about 550 miles south of Rio de Janeiro. From there he was to travel to a beach house owned by the Stroessner family in Guaratuba, according to TV Globo, the nation's principal private network.

Other press reports said Stroessner would land in Sao Paulo and undergo medical treatment there.

Rodriguez arrived at the airport clapped and chanted, "Dictator Get Out!" and "Adios! Adios!" Stroessner came to power as a general in a coup in 1954 and remained commander-in-chief of Paraguay's armed forces until Friday, when Rodriguez led the coup against him. Rodriguez was sworn in as president later that day. As he left his country for perhaps the last time, the 76-year-old Stroessner wore a blue suit and red tie. He did not acknowledge the crowd and made no final gesture. The two black limousines that

Manson mails cryptic note

GRAND ISLAND, Neb. (AP) — Mass murderer Charles Manson responded with a post card to a ninth-grader's letter asking him what his future plans are and if he would commit murder if released on probation.

Manson, who has a parole hearing scheduled for Wednesday at California's San Quentin Prison, didn't answer Lario Alcorta's questions. But he did write a post card that Alcorta said was hard to decipher.

On the front of the card, under Manson's name and prison number, was written "You want one to fix what many have done."

"All you wrote about was the judgement made by others and pushed over on me to carry," Manson began. "People have made me to be all the frills of their own world and put me up to die for it."

Alcorta's mother, Jan Jakubowski, said she was not enthusiastic about her son's decision to write to Manson and was surprised that Manson responded.

"It's scary," she said. "The man is sick."

Alcorta, 14, said he wrote to Manson for a journalism project at Walnut Junior High School. Alcorta said he'd seen Manson interviewed on television and watched the movie "Helter Skelter," which is about the 1969 killing spree Manson was convicted of participating in.

One victim was actress Sharon Tate, then eight months pregnant. Manson's reply came Jan. 30, about three weeks after Alcorta sent his letter.

Manson, 54, has had six parole hearings since 1978. He had them yearly for several years, and then California law was changed to require them for murderers only once every three years. His last hearing was in 1986.

Yuppies may have partied on charity funds

BOSTON (AP) — A young professionals' group is under investigation for raising up to $75,000 through eight charity parties but donating just $3,565, a newspaper reported Sunday.

A judge ordered a bank account for the Boston Society of Young Professionals frozen last week, but there was no money in it, according to Joanna Soris, an assistant state attorney general handling the case. The probe began after two charities complained they had received no money.

The eight parties grossed up to $75,000, but $3,565 was donated to charity, about 5 percent, the Boston Sunday Herald reported.

"Our concern is to break even, and if we have any money left over, we give it to charity," Jeffrey Southmayd, 29, who heads the society, told the newspaper. There was no answer at Southmayd's home Sunday.

Hundreds of young professional singles over an 18-month period flocked to the bashes, billed as benefits for charities including the Jimmy Fund, a Boston children's charity, the U.S. Olympic Swim Team, the American Cancer Society, and the Pine Street Inn, a shelter for the homeless.

Businesses donated drinks and hotel rooms on the assumption that proceeds from the functions would go to charity, the newspaper reported.

A benefit party for the Special Olympics last month raised $1,300 for the charity, but only after Karyl Resnick, the Boston area charity manager, threatened the society with legal action.

"They weren't on the up-and-up with us,"

Resnick said. "People were thinking they made a donation to a charity when in fact they were paying for these people to have a big shindig."

At a Super Bowl party held last month, only 105 of the 250 guests paid admission, the Herald said. The event grossed $3,225 but expenses were $6,000, resulting in a net loss of $2,775, the newspaper said.

The Quality Inn donated a room worth $2,000 and a $600 in drink discounts for the party in the belief it would benefit the Pine Street Inn, said the hotel's food and beverage director, Bert Patterson. But the homeless shelter has received no donation, the Herald said.

The Pine Street Inn and the American Cancer Society were not informed in advance that their names would be used for the events, the newspaper said.

UI dental students plan dental health fair

A dental health fair organized by students from the UI College of Dentistry will be the highlight of Children's Dental Health Month this year in Iowa City. Children can trade in their old toothbrushes for new ones, visit with Herky the Hawk, play games and learn about dental health by watching a Charlie Brown video presentation, all at the Sycamore Mall in Iowa City on Feb. 11 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Feb. 12 from noon to 4 p.m.

Winners in a poster competition for area third-grade students will be on display at the mall. Prizes will be awarded to the top five entries illustrating this year's slogan "A healthy smile shows your style."

Children will also be able to register for the "Which Crest is Best" contest and for a Sparkle toothpaste telephone, sponsored by Procter and Gamble Manufacturing Co. The company is also donating "Crest for Kids" toothpaste and activity books to be distributed at the dental health fair.

Police Department promotes two members

Acting Police Chief Ken Stock announced the promotions of Officer Matt Johnson and Detective Tom Widmer to the rank of Sergeant in the Iowa City Police Department.

Goodwill Industries offers Emily Helms Award

Goodwill Industries of Southeast Iowa is seeking nominations for the 1989 Emily Helms Award.

The purpose of the award is to recognize a person who has demonstrated outstanding strength of character in coping with or overcoming a significant disability. In particular, the award recognizes traits of courage, perseverance, industry, sense of humor, imagination or leadership — qualities that Emily Helms demonstrated during her short life.

The award is in memory of Emily Helms who died on Aug. 3, 1983, at the age of 11. Emily was the daughter of Charles and Lelia Helms of Iowa City and the great-granddaughter of Edgar J. Helms, who founded the first Goodwill Industries in Boston in 1902.

Peterson told to pay widow after Stewart murder ruling

By Belinda Bloor
The Daily Iowan

Mark Robert Peterson, who was sentenced to life imprisonment Oct. 31 for first-degree murder, was ordered Thursday to pay $53,413.68 in restitution for damages to the victim's wife, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Sixth Judicial District Judge L. Vern Robinson handed down the order after a revised statement of pecuniary damages was submitted by the Johnson County Attorney's office Wednesday. The revised statement used a 3 percent increase in the interest figure. The previous analysis of wrongful death damages used 6 percent as its figure; the revised statement uses 9 percent, according to court records.

In addition to the amount Peterson must pay in restitution to the family of victim Marshall Stewart, Peterson must pay $2,650.40 to the Iowa Crime Victim Reparation Program as reimbursement for the program's funeral expense award, according to court records.

The $53,413.68 figure was the sum of five specific figures: $18,731.65 for lost TIAA account payments; $3,750.12 for lost health insurance premiums; $26,322.73 for lost Social Security benefits; $150.40 for medical expenses; and $4,609.18 for lost interest on premature funeral expenses, the recovery of which is allowed by Iowa law, according to court records.

Peterson, 36, of Coralville, pleaded guilty of the crime Sept. 6. He entered the Stewart residence, 1314 Whiting Avenue Court, March 24 and stabbed to death Marshall Stewart. Peterson turned himself in to police and confessed to the stabbing, according to court records.

He received a mandatory life sentence for the crime Oct. 31, with no chance for parole, according to court records.

New chairman of Republican Party vows to organize grassroots Iowa

DES MOINES (AP) — Lake Mills lawyer Richard Schwarm was elected chairman of the Iowa Republican Party on Saturday and immediately vowed to strengthen the grassroots campaign and voter-registration efforts.

"I think it's obvious that there are a few things that maybe we want to do better," Schwarm told the party's State Central Committee. "There are many challenges we face, but the opportunities are absolutely unlimited."

The committee elected Schwarm to succeed Michael Mahaffey of Montezuma, who decided not to seek re-election after a two-year tenure that culminated in disagreements with some Central Committee members after party setbacks in the 1988 elections.

"While there is organizational work to be done, there are still many people working hard at the grassroots level," Mahaffey said Saturday. "We simply need more of them."

Democrats used a big voter-registration advantage to solidify their hold on both chambers of the Legislature in 1988, and Democrat Michael Dukakis carried Iowa in the presidential election.

However, Republicans hold four of Iowa's six seats in the U.S. House, and boast two of the state's top elected officials — Gov. Terry Branstad and Sen. Charles Grassley.

"We also have thousands of grassroots, dedicated Republicans who have been fighting the good fight, and rather than being disheartened, they're ready to go," Schwarm said. "Maybe we need to toot our horn a little. Apparently some people aren't aware of how good we can be."

Several top Iowa Republican Party staffers, including Executive Director Rhonda Menke, are leaving their posts. Schwarm will have to rebuild the party's headquarters staff, and in doing so will likely have to deflect charges that he is turning over control of the party to Branstad. Schwarm is a long-time friend of Branstad.

Branstad is expected to seek re-election in 1990, but Republican Party faithful also hope to unseat Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin and to cut into Democrats' majority in the Legislature prior to reapportionment after the 1990 census.

"I understand that there are people who, in good faith, are concerned about that connection," Schwarm said of his association with Branstad.

Iowa schools perpetuate subtle racism, report indicates

DES MOINES (AP) — Minority students are suspended far more often than their white classmates, according to a new report, and there continues to be a dearth of minority instructors in the classroom.

But the report also shows a sharp increase in the number of minority students enrolled in talented and gifted programs.

The report, which will be pre-ented to the Iowa Board of Education this week, shows that the percentage of minority students suspended is greater than the percentage of minorities in the 10 school systems containing the most minority students.

In Des Moines, for example, nearly 50 percent of the suspensions from school involved minority students. Only 18 percent of students are minorities.

School officials said the reason for the disparity is that many minority students don't feel they fit into the educational system.

"Undoubtedly there tends to be a feeling on the part of our minority students that the rules are not made for them," said James Bowman, assistant superintendent for the Des Moines schools. "We will be working with staff so that they better understand the various subcultures. We need to make some adaptations to them."

He also said minority students often misbehave. "I think some of the rules are harder for them to accommodate. There is no question about that. There is not enough about the system that makes them feel like it's their system."

But Cyndy Reed-Stewart, a state Education Department consultant, said racism also plays a part. "For some reason, children of color are dealt with more harshly than white students when it comes to discipline," she said. "It's partly because we aren't training teachers to understand diversity."

In Burlington, 9 percent of the students are minorities, yet 17 percent of the suspended students are minorities. Percentages in other communities are Cedar Rapids 8 and 13, Council Bluffs 3.7

and 6.1, Davenport 19 and 36.3, Iowa City 9.5 and 11.0, Muscatine 13 and 14, Sioux City 10.4 and 12.3, South Tama 13 and 21.3, and Waterloo, 21.9 and 40.8.

The report also shows that few blacks or other minorities are instructors. About 5 percent of Iowa's students belong to a minority group, while only 1 percent of the teachers, counselors, librarians or other staffers are minorities.

Junkins withdraws from race

DES MOINES (AP) — The Democratic gubernatorial field has shrunk by one, with 1986 nominee Lowell Junkins announcing his decision not to join the fray.

Junkins, in a weekend meeting with party activists, said the financial and personal risks are too high for him to make a second race.

"There's a limit to what sacrifices you can make, and what kind of risk you can put forth," said Junkins. "Our family has concluded that at this point in time the risk is too high."

Junkins cited financial and family considerations in ruling out another run against incumbent Republican Terry Branstad. Junkins is still carrying a small debt from the 1986 campaign, and said he would have to begin full-time campaigning immediately if he entered the race.

"My not being a breadwinner in this family would put us in an economic position that might become intolerable for us in the event of a loss, in fact it might be difficult for us even if we were to win," he said.

Junkins made his announcement at a meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee. He declined to endorse any of the other Democratic contenders, and said it's too early to judge the impact of his decision on the race.

"I want to remain neutral," said Junkins. "I think it serves no purpose for me to jump out in support of someone right now."

"There's a lot of time left, a lot of time for people to make up their minds," he said. "The real starting contest doesn't start, I think, until next fall."

"I'm not sure who ultimately is going to be in the race," he said.

And Junkins made it clear that the only thing he was ruling out was a second bid against Branstad next year.

"I am going to remain active in this party," said Junkins. "I'm not ruling out anything except 1990 governor at this point, given that whatever opportunities are available in the future are affordable to this family."

Junkins' decision still leaves a crowded field of Democrats posturing to replace Branstad.

Attorney General Tom Miller, House Speaker Don Avenson, Lt. Gov. JoAnn Zimmerman and Des Moines banker John Chrystal are the most frequently mentioned possibilities.

Avenson also attended Saturday's meeting to give Democratic activists a fiery stump speech that left no doubt he's firmly committed to the race. He and Junkins are close personally, and many assume Junkins will eventually throw him his support.

Junkins is a Montrose businessman and farmer who was Majority Leader of the Senate before he resigned to devote all of his time to campaigning against Branstad. He lost the 1986 election by 35,000 votes.

There have been suggestions that Junkins would be a logical candidate for chairman of the State Democratic Party, and he wouldn't rule out such a bid, though he said it's too early to make those decisions.

"I have not even been approached" about running for that post, said Junkins.

"Minutes ago I went from being a politician to a political pundit, and I'm liking this being smarter already," he said. "I want to enjoy this new-found sense of wisdom."

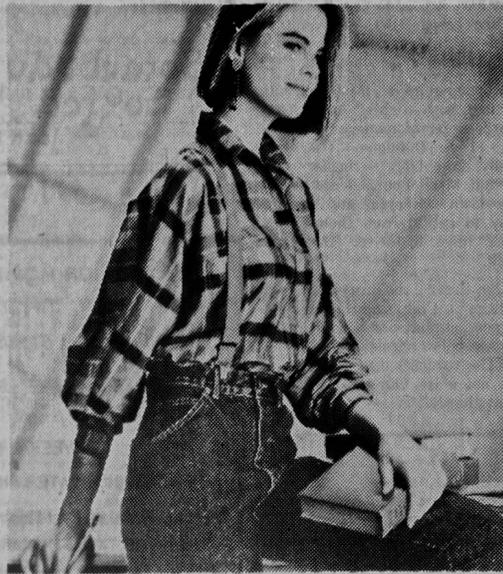

Junkins insisted his decision wasn't because of Branstad's political strength.

"We believe that Terry Branstad is beatable," he told party activists. "He is as beatable today as when I smelled the roses in 1986. With the right candidate from this party, Terry Branstad will be history."

Junkins said his campaign debt has been reduced to about $13,000, and he was confident of being able to raise enough money for another run.

But, he said, the combination of campaign demands and lost income could cost his family more than $100,000, and that's too steep a price.

Blaze leaves students shuffling for classrooms

ROCKFORD, Iowa (AP) — About 350 pupils at the Rudd-Rockford-Marble Rock High School will have the next two weeks off as a result of a weekend fire that destroyed their building, but students weren't celebrating.

"I can't believe it's gone. I lost a lot of things in my locker. I'm just glad this didn't happen during a school day," said Earl Kiefer, a ninth-grader who stood in minus-10-degree temperatures watching firefighters put out the blaze Saturday.

His friend, Billy Riggan, a 10th-grader at the school, stood next to him.

"It's kind of depressing right now. You lose your valuables, and you don't know where we're going to go to school now," Riggan said.

About 100 firefighters from six communities responded to the blaze, which was reported by a patrol officer at 4:42 a.m. Saturday, but the fire had a strong head start by the time they arrived.

Rudd Fire Chief Alan LaCoste, whose men joined colleagues from Nora Springs, Rockford, Marble Rock, Greene, Charles City and Colwell, said firefighters had trouble with low water pressure and subzero cold as they battled the stubborn blaze.

LaCoste said the fire apparently started in the industrial arts area in the rear of the school. He said two firemen were treated for minor smoke inhalation.

The cause of the fire wasn't immediately determined, and the state fire marshal's office was assisting in the investigation.

Fearing the worst, school officials raced to save the most sensitive records in the administrative area, which was filled with acrid smoke.

"We broke into the counseling offices and saved the records there," said Superintendent Lynn Hansen. "And we got a fireproof safe out. At least, we hope it's fireproof. And some people are over on the east side trying to get the band instruments out. The fire hasn't reached that area yet, but it will soon. We lost everything else."

Initial plans call for grades nine and 10 to have morning classes while the juniors and seniors would be in session from about 12:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Weather stops Iowa City cold

Cars readjust to seasonal hazards, drivers head to bars

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Cheryl Iler was on her way to a meeting Friday morning when, after walking two blocks, she turned back — not because she had forgotten anything, not because she decided to crawl back into bed, but because it was just too cold.

Temperatures in Iowa City Friday were below zero, and with the strong, gusting winds, it felt about 40 below through most of the day. The mercury didn't drop quite as low Saturday, but it was still a rude change from Tuesday's record-breaking highs.

"It was physically painful," Iler said of her morning jaunt. "I was so cold it hurt. I couldn't make it to my meeting, I couldn't even make it two blocks."

Iler blamed part of the problem on her inappropriate dress.

"I should have been wearing long underwear or something, but it didn't look that cold out, and after the weather we'd been having before, I just didn't think this could happen."

But happen it did, and neither local residents nor their cars were ready for it, according to Wendy Wissink, a Holiday Wrecker and Crane Service dispatcher.

Wissink reported a "sharp increase" in the number of callers requesting help from Holiday Wrecker and Crane Service, 211 10th St., Coralville.

"This is the first real snowstorm we've had all winter, and people aren't really sure how to drive in this weather," she said. "This weather is making people really grumpy, it's really put the damper on the lot of people."

She said a majority of callers needed their cars jump started or towed from ditches.

Vitosh Standard Service, Keokuk and Highway 6, also reported a dramatic weekend increase of people requesting help starting their cars.

"We've just plain had a ton of jump starts," said Matt Hollingsworth, Vitosh assistant manager. "We barely had any all winter, now it's almost like we need another person to help."

He also cited the weather as the reason many patrons seemed "not at all happy."

"We had a lot of people who used the full-service gas pumps instead of the self-service ones, and it seemed like they gave us more hassels than usual," he said.

The weekend's frigid temperatures may have kept some cars home and in the garage, but, according to local bar owners, humans didn't feel the same sluggishness.

"I was quite surprised at our turnout both nights," said Steve Ward, assistant manager of Mick-y's, 11 S. Dubuque. "We were really quite busy — busier than normal. Most of our patrons live in the downtown area, and we are easy to get to from there. They don't have to drive. They can walk."

Dan Greene, the former owner of College St. Club, said the weekend turnout at that bar was 10 to 20 percent below normal.

"(The turnout) was down some, but not a lot. Our customers are pretty hardy."

ISU faculty study proposes departmental restructuring

AMES (AP) — Familiar and long-standing fields of study at Iowa State University would be eliminated or sharply trimmed under recommendations of a long-awaited faculty study.

The faculty committee said ISU should eliminate eight academic departments and merge more than a dozen others as part of the university's most dramatic restructuring ever. Committee members said they didn't expect all of the recommendations to be adopted, and critics said some of the proposed mergers didn't make any sense.

The 13-member committee, which issued a 115-page report on the university's future Friday, said Iowa State should strengthen its programs in biological and physical sciences and mathematics, thus restoring the university's traditional emphasis on science and technology and moving away from the liberal arts programs that have developed during the past 25 years.

The recommendations would weed out some of ISU's agriculture, journalism, art and design programs. Faculty members acknowledged that some of the programs are steeped in tradition, but they said that alone isn't enough to justify keeping them.

"The program has a long tradition at Iowa State," the report said, referring to the agricultural studies-farm operation program. "However, it provides no essential background for other curricula and provides no service or new information through research."

Mathematics is singled out as a priority academic field for Iowa State to pursue. "Without a high-quality Department of Mathematics, the quality of Iowa State's science and technology programs is limited," the committee's report said.

The programs targeted for extinction in the report include freshman engineering, nuclear engineering, industrial engineering and engineering science and mechanics.

The departments that would be merged under the committee's plan include the journalism and telecommunication arts programs into a new Department of Journalism and Telecommunications.

Journalism would be offered only as a secondary major and would be focused on science and technology journalism.

The departments of animal ecology, forestry, botany, microbiology and zoology would be merged.

UI looks to draw minorities

Rawlings, student groups work to fund recruitment

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

Faced with low minority enrollment, UI administrators and student groups are working together to attract more minorities and foreign students to the UI.

Minority and foreign student leaders met with members of the UI student government and administrators Saturday afternoon in the Union with hopes of assessing ways to better meet the needs of students.

UI president Hunter Rawlings said he was hopeful the state will decide to provide funds needed for minority recruitment.

"We want to provide some funding to the University of Iowa . . . to do an even better job at minority recruitment," Rawlings said. "This is a leading priority."

Last fall minority enrollment at the UI increased 6 percent, up 0.5 percent from the fall of 1987. However, the state Board of Regents requires state universities to have an 8.5 percent minority enrollment by 1991.

The UI planned to recruit minorities and partially fund their tuition through the Opportunity at Iowa program, created in the fall of 1987. But Gov. Terry Branstad's recent 1990 budget proposal did not include the funds for the program, despite the regents' $500,000 recommendation for the fiscal year.

Rawlings also met Saturday with Rep. Jack Hatch, D-Des Moines, to discuss the possibility of increasing state funding for minorities in the Legislature's 1990 budget.

Encouraging minority and foreign student groups to provide strong cultural support for minority and foreign students is key to retaining existing minority students on campus, Rawlings said.

"Students are the ones who can best get the attention of other students. We often follow their lead," he said.

Several members of the state Board of Regents and the Iowa Legislature told Rawlings that minority recruitment will be a strong priority when planning funds for the UI, he said. "We are making a lot of headway this year," Rawlings said.

The minority group leaders echoed the president's high hopes that minorities will soon have a more prominent profile on the UI campus.

"We want to increase the minority population at the UI," said Olivero Rivera-Davila, a student senator and president of the Latin American Student Association.

Rawlings added that cultural events sponsored by student groups are beneficial not only to members of the groups, but to all UI students.

"I think it's valuable for white students to have access to minority students," he said.

But reminding minority and foreign students of their cultural links is the main purpose of the groups, said Diane Hightower, Office of Campus Programs coordinator for minority and foreign students.

"They feel they serve a cultural and social purpose," Hightower said. "If majority students do get an increased awareness, that's one of the positive offshoots."

Since beginning her position as a coordinator three weeks ago, Hightower has been meeting with the leaders of student groups to determine their needs from the UI administration.

Hightower said she plans to hold workshops for minority student groups on how to effectively cut through bureaucracy when requesting student funds. "We'd also like to put some emphasis on the importance of networking and lobbying," she said.

The administration needs to understand that differences in culture and organizational operating procedures cause minority and foreign student groups to have different needs than other student organizations, Hightower said.

"We can't use our American standards of parliamentary procedure to assess, criticize and help international and minority student organizations on how to run a meeting," she said.

Democrats attempt to 'box in' Branstad

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES (AP)—Democratic legislators are all smiles these days, confident they have painted Gov. Terry Branstad into a box with a package of bills aimed straight at working Iowans.

Unfortunately for them the box has a number of exits, including some that could leave the Republican governor with the best of both worlds.

From increasing the minimum wage to health insurance for the working poor to carving out fundamental rights in the workplace, Democrats in the Legislature are sounding a populist theme and are confident the public is on their side.

They're probably right about that. It is, after all, tough to oppose better pay and good health care, even if legislative Republicans are slow to learn that lesson.

The conventional wisdom at the Statehouse is that Democrats will dump bill after bill on Branstad's desk, forcing him to veto issues that are tailor-made for a political campaign.

Under that thinking, Democrats would be able to campaign as the party that tried to do something for the working poor and middle class and portray Branstad as listening only to the privileged few. In that kind of a campaign, the numbers are very good for Democrats.

A few years ago, the tactic would have worked. When he took office, Branstad's views on labor issues were little more than whatever the Chamber of Commerce thought on a given day. Worse, he let those biases cloud his political judgment on occasion.

This year, it's easy to imagine a scenario in which Branstad comes off looking like a winner.

On the minimum wage, for instance, Congress is likely to pass a law increasing the level to near what the Legislature is considering. With a little judicious negotiating, Branstad could easily sign a minimum wage bill that in reality doesn't mean much.

Allowing injured workers to pick their own doctors is another issue he's likely to get and has vetoed in the past. That issue is so shopworn that only a few hard-core business and labor groups really care, and even GOP lawmakers concede privately they are tired of arguing about it.

In short, Branstad could sign those two longtime priorities of organized labor with little risk to his political base. He could, in fact, trade his signature on those bills to head off action on really serious matters such as limiting the power of the businesses to fire workers.

Branstad could make the point to business groups that he approved of merely symbolic issues, while blocking dollars-and-cents proposals. That would be an appealing argument to conservatives, while labor leaders would find some of the steam taken out of their relentless opposition to Branstad.

The governor will never win their support, but he can lessen the level of their opposition. And if the governor miffs the most conservative of the business side, so what? What are their options, voting for a Democrat like House Speaker Don Avenson, who is behind most of the labor issues?

That's why Branstad sent a quiet message to business lobbyists last week to drop their outright opposition to much of the labor package being debated in the Legislature and focus instead on negotiating compromises.

The governor knows he has an ally in the Legislature, with the conservative Senate certain to tone down the more extreme proposals.

The Democrats are gaining also from the populist debate at the Statehouse.

Though they've controlled the Legislature since the 1982 election, Democrats have spent a lot of their time approving business incentives and grappling with a sour economy.

Leaders can argue that giving money to big companies is good economics, but it isn't the sort of stuff to fire up party activists.

Minimum wage hike may harm students, unskilled labor

By Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

The UI student employment rate could suffer if Iowa's minimum wage is increased to $5 an hour, UI students and officials said Friday.

"Raising the minimum wage is not a good idea for students," said Robert Tamura, a UI economics professor. "Low-skill job holders and students are usually the first and the hardest hit by this sort of action."

Tamura said that raising the minimum wage has benefits but not for students.

"The winners are skilled labor and organized labor," he said. "The unemployment rate among students will increase because college work-study programs will not receive sufficient funding from the federal government due to a decrease in the amount of tax dollars."

Because an increase in the minimum wage could trigger a decrease in the number of taxpayers, the UI might not receive enough money to fund its work-study program, Tamura said.

"In business, firms will hire fewer employees. Here, fewer students might be hired because of a lack of government subsidization, but those who are hired will do OK," he said.

Stafford loans, previously known as guaranteed student loans, might not be as accessible because of the direct relationship between an income increase and financial need.

"Stafford loans are based on financial need, and we have a methodology to determine need," said Cathy Wilcox, assistant director of the UI Office of Student Financial Aid. "If the students' contribution to their education increased because of a wage increase then their financial need would decrease. Given this, they might be ineligible for a loan." But the rationale for awarding loans is subject to change, Wilcox said.

"We're not sure if the same methodology for determining need would be in effect because we revise our qualifications yearly," she said.

While the effects of a wage increase are speculative, UI work-study students foresee problems with the change.

"In some cases an increase would benefit employees, but in others it might not be such a good idea," said Shannon Kilduff, a UI librarian-guard. "I can't see my job paying $5 an hour to sit and watch people come in and out of the library. Positions like these might be cut from the budget."

To some students, the importance of immediate financial gratification is overshadowed by its long-term effects.

"You have to be conscious of the long-term effects as well as the short-term effects," said Cullen Fuller, a work-study student in the Collegiate Associations Council Book Co-op. "I'll graduate in a year so I probably won't be affected, but my younger brother will need a work-study job when he comes to the UI."

"If a wage increase makes the university hire fewer employees at higher salaries then work-study students are out of luck," he said.

Structural unemployment, or fewer jobs at higher salaries, is a Catch-22 situation, said Fuller.

"I can see the good and bad in raising the minimum wage, and you're damned if you do and damned if you don't," he said.

for an honest day's work," he said. Arnould said the number of jobs has increased each time the minimum wage has been raised, with exception of 1975, a year of economic depression.

"When you raise the minimum wage during times of relative economic prosperity, a larger turnover in volume and trade causes an increase in jobs," Arnould said.

Since minimum-wage workers spend all of their wages on necessities, a wage increase would pump more money into the Iowa economy, Arnould said.

John McCarroll, director of communication for the Iowa Association of Business and Industry, said his office is lobbying against the bill because a minimum-wage increase would damage economic growth in Iowa.

"Some jobs might be eliminated because the employer simply can't pay that figure," McCarroll said.

"The point we have tried to make is that at a time when the Iowa economy is on the rebound, things are looking good. Employers have started to do considerable hiring this year. Why slow things down with a bill like this?" he said.

McCarroll said the prices of goods and services will rise if businesses have to pay higher wages.

"Wages don't exist in isolation. They have an impact on goods and services," McCarroll said.

Barb Halvorsen, owner of Love-A-Lot Child Care Center, 213 Fifth St., Coralville, is strongly against the proposed minimum-wage increase because it will diminish her margin of profit.

Halvorsen said she would have to increase childcare fees if legislation is enacted. In turn, parents will demand higher wages to cover higher childcare costs.

"It's going to escalate everything. It's not going to help anything whatsoever," Halvorsen said. "It's still going to be the same scale, only higher. It's just going to cost me more because of taxes."

Tom Bullington, manager of Job Service of Iowa, 1810 Lower Muscatine Road, said raising the minimum wage would not impact Iowa City as much as other Iowa communities because most Iowa City businesses offer entry-level salaries higher than $3.35 an hour.

"I'm not sure that (increasing the minimum wage) would have much bearing one way or another," Bullington said. "I feel that employers are going to have to have a certain number of employees to run their operation."

Most businesses have opposed increasing the minimum wage since 1938, the first year the U.S. minimum wage was implemented, Arnould said.

Proponents of the bill argue that the Iowa Legislature has invested heavily in Iowa business and needs to consider workers' needs as well.

"As the economy turns, it's important that everyone benefit from this economic opportunity we've all benefited from," Arnould said.

Pullout

Pakistan-based resistance signed a cooperation pact Sunday in the Iranian capital, Iran's foreign minister, Ali Akbar Velayati said. The agreement could boost the guerrillas' chances of taking over in Afghanistan and creating an Islamic republic once the Soviets are gone.

Najib's rally, broadcast on national television, was staged largely for the dozens of foreign journalists in Afghanistan for the Soviet withdrawal.

"The Russian armies are leaving the country, and we will defend ourselves," said the 43-year-old Najib, dressed in combat fatigues. "We have to be strong. We have to unite. They say our people cannot defend our homeland. That is a lie."

As he spoke, more than a dozen giant Soviet transport planes streaked off in different directions, spewing flares designed to deflect heat-seeking missiles fired by the guerrillas, or mujahedeen.

Artillery fire, which officials said was aimed at the rockets, could be heard in the distance.

Before the rally, agents of KHAD, the Afghan secret police, searched each party member, emptied their Soviet-made rifles and placed the ammunition in a truck.

Najib later led party loyalists, who carried red flags, on a march down the street in front of the palace, not far from the U.S. Embassy.

U.S. officials closed the mission last week because of fears the Afghan army will not be able to defend the capital against the guerrillas once the Soviet army has departed.

The Soviet Union sent troops into Afghanistan in December 1979 to help the Marxist government fight the insurgents.

Under a U.N.-mediated agreement, Moscow is to have all its troops out by Feb. 15.

The Soviets began their pullout in August and resumed it in January, when convoys of tanks, trucks and armored personnel carriers started heading up the Salang Highway toward the Soviet border 260 miles away.

Soviet and Afghan officials have said there were about 1,000 Soviet soldiers in Afghanistan and that they could be gone as early as Wednesday.

Swedish Col. Bo Pellnas, who heads the U.N. observer force in Kabul, said in a telephone interview with Swedish national television Sunday it is "absolutely clear" the Soviets are about to complete the withdrawal.

"The march today is a demonstration of our might, that we are stronger than ever," Najib said.

shortly before Stroessner took off and spoke briefly with reporters. "I'm going to guarantee all freedom and total democracy," he said. Asked how, he replied, "I will call general elections in 90 days."

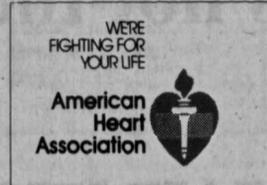

Earlier, Foreign Minister Luis Maria Argana discussed the election plans with reporters at Campo Grande army base. He was accompanied by Rodriguez, who did not say if he would run for president.

"Within a few days, we will decree a new election law and a new electoral system that will dissolve both houses of Congress, and call for elections within three months dating from last Friday," said Argana.

Stroessner was elected president eight times, the last time in February 1988. Opposition groups said all the elections were fraudulent.

Under current law, the ruling Colorado Party is guaranteed two-thirds control of Congress, with the remaining third split between the two other political parties recognized by the former government.

Argana said the government will recognize opposition parties, including the Authentic Radical Liberal Party and the Christian Democrat Party, and allow them to participate in the elections.

reinstatement status. Rawlings has said he takes the problem of drugs in college athletics very seriously, and Rhodes praised this position. "He is extremely supportive and committed to a high degree of integrity in athletics."

But she added that despite Rawlings' strong stand and the fact that the new directive was issued soon after he took office, the revised policy had already been in the works for some months previous to Rawlings' arrival.

"A number of people in the coaching department, sports medicine and also the Board in Control of Athletics played a part in the modification. I don't want to minimize (Rawlings') role since he is so committed to this issue, but this is obviously not a problem that just came to light," she said.

Rhodes said the decision to pay for drug treatment of UI student athletes was made by a number of UI administrators, athletic officials and sports medicine personnel who felt a drug problem should be treated like any other medical problem.

"It's a medical decision," she said. "The approach we've taken is recommended by physicians who deal with the student athletes. The physicians made the decision, and they call the shots."

"The testing is just one part of the whole policy. We think it's extremely important to carry through with the whole problem," Rhodes added. "Paying for something like treatment is something we think is appropriate — we look at it like any medical problem."

Rawlings and Iowa men's basketball Coach Tom Davis were unavailable for comment Sunday.

Aides bet against S&L depositor fee

WASHINGTON (AP)—Financial industry officials and members of Congress are predicting President George Bush's plan for resolving the savings and loan crisis will employ a mixture of tax dollars and higher industry premiums to pay off billions of dollars in new borrowing.

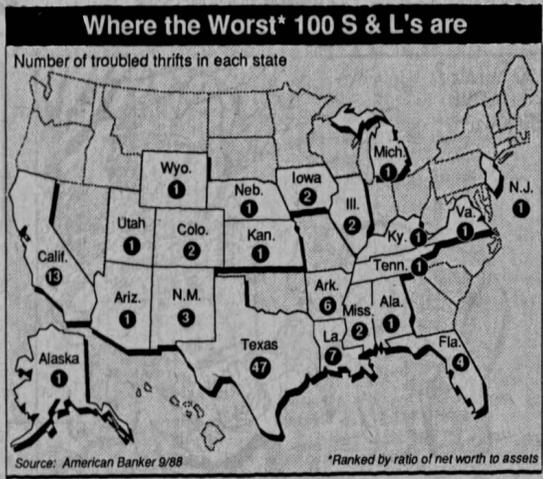

Bush, who met Saturday at Camp David, Md., with top advisers to go over their recommendations, isn't talking publicly about his package. He plans to reveal his decisions before Thursday when he delivers a televised speech to Congress.

But White House aides, speaking on condition of anonymity, say they do not expect the final package to include a controversial plan to levy a fee on depositors of about $2.50 for every $1,000 in their accounts.

Instead, trade association officials and members of Congress who have spoken with the Treasury Department predict the plan will feature these elements:

- Borrowing, in the form of bonds, of about $50 billion over the next three years. Congress' General Accounting Office recommends spending $85 billion over three years.
- A mixture of income sources, including taxpayer dollars and insurance premiums from S&Ls and banks, to pay the $7 billion to $9 billion in interest on the bonds.
- An administrative reshuffling that would include a separate apparatus to sell off insolvent S&Ls, a recapitalized insurance fund for healthy S&Ls and a regulatory agency, perhaps under the control of the Treasury Department.

There has been little disagreement over borrowing the S&L cleanup money. The much more difficult problem is figuring out how to pay the interest on the bonds.

Instead of the deposit fee, insurance premiums paid by the institutions — currently 83 cents per $1,000 for banks and $2.08 for S&Ls — probably will be increased.

The increase mentioned, at least before Bush reviewed the plan, would bring the premiums to about $1.80 per $1,000 for banks and $2.50 for S&Ls. That would raise about half the $7 billion to $9 billion needed each year.

Commercial bankers have vociferously opposed being made to help pay for problems in a competing industry. They do not want any mingling of their insurance fund, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., with the S&L fund, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp.

But, they probably would accept higher premiums for a limited period, say three years, if the money went to build up the FDIC, which has had its own less publicized and less severe problems after paying to close or merge 217 banks last year.

FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman told a group of Illinois bankers in Washington on Friday that the fund will report a balance of about $14 billion for the end of 1988, down from $18.3 billion at the end of 1987.

At $14 billion, the FDIC now has reserves representing 0.8 percent of the deposits it insures, the lowest ratio since its founding in 1934. Seidman told the bankers the ratio should be boosted to 1.25 percent, roughly a $7 billion increase.

One government official, not directly involved in formulating the administration's plan, outlined a possible method for simultaneously building up the FDIC while freeing tax money for S&Ls.

Although premiums collected from banks are earmarked for the FDIC, they count immediately as revenue for the purpose of the overall budget.

So raising bank premiums would give the administration several billion more dollars a year to spend without adding to the budget deficit, the official said.

Bank officials worry that they would not be able to pass on the increase to customers without driving them to mutual funds. Also, big institutional customers could be driven overseas, where they could make dollar deposits in the European branches of large U.S. banks.

Another financing problem is how to sell the bonds without inflating the government's already huge $2.7 trillion national debt.

A way around that is to cover the principal of zero-coupon bonds with several billion dollars in retained earnings at the regional Federal Home Loan Banks, which are owned by the industry. That way, only the annual interest paid on the bonds would be "on-budget."

As a way of easing the pressure to push more of the cost onto financial institutions and giving the government more leeway to spend tax money, bank officials are pushing the notion that the spending from general revenue should be exempt from Gramm-Rudman budget deficit limits.

Stock investors fail without system

By Dean Jarnow
The Daily Iowan

Without principles or guidelines to follow when investing, an investor is eventually destined to fail, which may mean losing cold cash.

I know of very few people who enjoy losing money, yet there are many who appear to invest with precisely that objective in mind. The primary reason some have a perpetual losing streak investing in stocks is the absence of sound principles, or failure to employ a strategy.

Gamblers have systems; investors have strategies. The difference is that a gambler's system eliminates the need to think and reason. Some investment strategies, however, are nothing more than a system in disguise. The following is a review of several popular investment strategies. You decide which are prudent and which are poppycock.

There are two schools of thought to stock selection: technical analysis and fundamental analysis. There are hundreds of popular technical strategies and all are founded on the same basic premise — repetition of past price movement and patterns. A technician will make decisions based upon charting stock prices and volume and sometimes the relationship between the two. Although there are many technical indicators, each has a specific rule as to when to buy and sell. For example, if a stock shows a double or triple bottom making lower bottoms, sell. If a stock continually rises on increased volume, buy.

Another bizarre indicator is astrological readings. The premise is that our attitudes and psyches are based upon movement of heavenly bodies. When the moon is full, lunar forces that affect high tide and low tide also affect people's emotions, making them more aggressive and possibly provoking them to buy stocks when they shouldn't, thus causing a rise in the market. Sounds loony to me.

Fundamentalists select stocks based upon the underlying assets they represent. What kind of dividends can a company pay? What is the earnings growth? What is the relationship of debt to assets? How will broad economic factors affect them?

The low P/E strategy selects stocks with a low P/E ratio (price of stock divided by earnings per share). This means an investor pays less per dollar of earnings than with a high P/E selection. The idea is that profitability and earnings to a large degree reflect the success of a company, so buy the company's stock when the earnings are cheap in terms of stock price.

The low P/S (price divided by sales) strategy contends that sales are more consistent than earnings and a company with lots of sales relative to its price needs only a small increase in profit margin to show a larger increase in earnings per share.

Other fundamental approaches include buying companies with increased growth of earnings each year, higher tangible assets per share than share price and low debt relative to assets.

There are countless other strategies, some falling in between technical and fundamental analysis. There are also many people who have success employing these various types of strategies — as silly as they may sound. There are reasons some of these strategies work (even the most ridiculous ones), but that is another topic. The key to success is hard work, research and constant monitoring. Most analysts, no matter what their specialty, do not blindly follow decision-making rules. They are willing to make exceptions for external circumstances. If the individual is not willing to devote some effort, he should buy a mutual fund. All that is necessary is to find one with a strategy that makes sense to you. Happy hunting.

Shamir brands Palestinians 'alien invaders' of Holy Land

HEBRON, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Israeli troops killed a Palestinian teen-ager and wounded 21 other Arabs on Sunday, and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir branded Palestinians "alien invaders" of the Holy Land.

In the West Bank town of Hebron, about 30 armed Jewish settlers locked themselves into two empty Arab-owned buildings they claim are used to stage fire-bomb attacks on Israelis.

In a nationally televised speech to his right-wing Likud, Shamir vowed: "There will be no Palestinian state here. Never."

Israel was linked to only one person — the Jews, he said.

"Aliens, terrorists, PLO men and others are recalled in that context today. But they are brutal, wild, alien invaders in the Land of Israel that belongs to the people of Israel, and only to them."

Sunday's clashes with soldiers erupted as merchants closed shops and public transportation halted in the Gaza Strip to protest Saturday's fatal shooting of two Arab teen-agers.

Another youth, Mohammed Jamil Mattar, 17, died Sunday when soldiers fired on stone-throwers in the Shati refugee camp, according to Arab hospital officials.

His death raises to 374 the number of Palestinians killed during the 14-month uprising against Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Fifteen Israelis have died.

In Gaza, soldiers opened fire in three other refugee camps and a village, wounding 19 Palestinians, hospital officials said. Two more Palestinians were reported wounded by troops in a West Bank village.

The army confirmed Mattar's death and said it is investigating the circumstances. A military spokesman said the army had reports of 10 injuries.

The worst violence was in Gaza's Jabalya refugee camp, where 11 demonstrators were reported shot. The youngest victim was 2-year-old Ahmed Muhaisin, wounded in the left leg with a plastic bullet and reported in stable condition at Ahli Arab hospital.

Muhaisin's mother told Arab reporters the child was playing in front of their home when he was shot.

The army imposed curfews on Jabalya, Shati and Khan Yunis refugee camps.

Jewish settlers in Hebron, most of whom live in the center of the Palestinian city, seized two abandoned, Arab-owned buildings adjacent to the settlement of Beit Ramano.

They moved into the buildings early Sunday, carrying weapons, food and mattresses. They told soldiers they would not leave unless the army took over the houses or turned them over to settlers.

The army declared the area a closed military district and sealed off an adjacent market with barbed wire.

Arabs living nearby said soldiers threw rocks at Arabs and demanded merchants close their stores.

Upset mars Jamaican election

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — A poll Sunday suggests conservative Prime Minister Edward Seaga badly trails his socialist rival, Michael Manley, in the final days of a campaign marred by violence that has left at least eight people dead.

Seaga, one of the United States' closest allies in the Caribbean, is rated a 14-point underdog in his bid for an unprecedented third consecutive term in Thursday's election.

A poll published Sunday by The Daily Gleaner, an independent Kingston newspaper, said Manley's left-leaning People's National Party will win a comfortable 36-seat majority in the 60-seat Parliament. The nationwide sampling of 1,024 voters was carried out Jan. 27-29 by University of the West Indies political scientist Carl Stone. No margin of error was stated.

It is Jamaica's first nationally contested election since 1980, when an estimated 700 people were killed in a nine-month campaign. Manley boycotted the last election, in 1983, in a dispute over voter registration at a time when his popularity was flagging. That gave Seaga's party all 60 Parliament seats.

Nothing comparable to the 1980 mayhem has occurred, but isolated shootings, firebombings and stonings have left at least eight dead and 75 injured since the campaign opened Jan. 15.

Sri Lankan opposition leader escapes assassination attempt COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A former prime minister escaped with minor bruises Sunday when three bombs exploded at a campaign rally and security guards responded by firing randomly. Nearly 40 people were reported injured.

Sirimavo Bandaranaike, who has become a top opposition leader since leaving office, said the attempt on her life failed when a bodyguard picked up a grenade that was thrown at her before it could explode. She survived a similar assassination attempt in December while campaigning for president.

Five thousand people were attending the outdoor rally when unidentified assailants hurled the explosives just as Bandaranaike stood up to make a speech kicking off her party's campaign for the Feb. 15 general election.

A military official in Colombo, who cannot be identified under briefing rules, said at least 38 people were injured, 14 seriously, in the attack in Hingurakgoda, a remote town 100 miles northeast of Colombo.

Many were shot by Bandaranaike's security guards, who shot randomly after the bombs exploded. "The bodyguards panicked and opened up with rifles, pistols and shotguns, injuring a lot of people," he said.

Authorities said they were unsure who was behind the attack. At least 10 candidates, including six from Bandaranaike's party, have been killed in the past month by suspected Sinhalese militants.

The attack came one day after at least 13 people were killed in Sri Lanka in violence related to the election.

Bandaranaike, 72, sustained minor bruises in a stampede that followed the explosions.

Bandaranaike was elected the world's first woman prime minister in 1960. She ruled until 1965 and then again from 1970-77.

Her husband, S.W.R.D. Bandaranaike, was prime minister when he was assassinated by a Buddhist monk in 1959.

Mobs revel in drizzly Mardi Gras

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Carnival revelers mobbed the French Quarter on Sunday, seeking temporary refuge from the unseasonably cold, bleak weather that started the long Mardi Gras weekend.

Eleven parades were to roll in metropolitan New Orleans on Sunday, including the popular Bacchus, over which comedian Billy Crystal will reign.

The day was cloudy and drizzly Sunday with temperatures in the 40s. Near-freezing temperatures were predicted overnight, getting a little colder Monday and Fat Tuesday, the National Weather Service said.

Carnival maskers on passing floats tossed plastic beads, doubloons and other trinkets at the crowd, but police warned they would enforce the prohibition against revelers throwing things at floats.

On Saturday, a woman was hit in the back of the head by an object thrown at a float during the Irish parade, New Orleans police said. Shirley Geraci, in her early 40s, was treated and released from Southern Baptist Hospital.

In the French Quarter, merry-makers flocked to Bourbon Street bars and the venerable Café du Monde seeking a bracer for a damp day along parade routes.

"We're packed now," said George Barclay, night manager at the Café du Monde, famous for its beignets, those hot, holeless doughnuts covered with powdered sugar.

Toni Reyes, general manager of the Seaport Bar on Bourbon Street, said she was grateful for the arctic air mass that chilled feet and hands.

"Thank God it did get a little bit colder. As soon as it rained, it pushed everyone inside," she said.

New Orleans police estimated this will be the biggest Mardi Gras ever, with 1.7 million revelers lining the streets and jamming the French Quarter on Fat Tuesday, the last blowout before the solemn season of Lent. Authorities said 1.5 million people attended the 1988 celebration.

The long Carnival weekend got under way Saturday, highlighted by the "super parade" of Endymion with celebrity riders such as pop singers Daryl Hall and John Oates and child television star Fred Savage of "The Wonder Years" on giant, animated floats.

Savage, a 12-year-old Chicago native, was taken aback by the spectacle of Carnival.

Conflict engulfs ethics aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — The man in charge of President George Bush's ethics policy has found himself in the midst of a possible conflict-of-interest controversy because of his chairmanship of a multimillion dollar communications company.

C. Boyden Gray, who served as Bush's counsel when he was vice president and continues to serve in that capacity now that Bush is president, has told The Washington Post and The New York Times that he plans to continue serving as chairman of the family-owned company, Atlanta-based Summit Communications Group Inc.

During his eight years as the vice president's counsel, Gray served as the paid chairman of the company, earning several hundred thousand dollars and reporting that on his annual financial disclosure forms. He told the newspapers that starting at the beginning of this year, he no longer was accepting fees for that job.

"Due to my promotion and due to the policies enunciated by (Bush) during the presidential campaign, I cannot and I will not take outside income and so have instructed the family company," Gray told the Post.

Gray also said he could function without any conflict of interest both because he has removed himself since 1981 from any matters concerning communications and because he was not Summit's chief executive or operating officer. He said he only devoted four to six days a year to overseeing the company.

The Ronald Reagan White House had an unwritten policy that no White House officials should accept outside earned income or serve on the boards of outside corporations, said Frank Nebeker, director of the Office of Government Ethics. The Times noted that this unwritten policy was mentioned in a 1983 written advisory opinion by the ethics office that was distributed to all government ethics officials, including Gray.

Gray was not bound by those regulations because he worked for the vice president, and the policy in the vice president's office there was more lenient, Gray's deputy, John Schmitz, told the Times.

In July, Bush made a campaign pledge that his appointees would not accept any outside income, but he did not address the problem of serving on outside corporations' boards.

3 Middle East leaders plan spring visits to United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Middle East leaders have quietly notified the Bush administration they would like to visit here in the spring and schedules will be worked out to receive them, a State Department official said Sunday.

The three, who would make separate visits, are King Hussein of Jordan, President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel.

The purpose would be to map out plans for a new U.S. peace initiative aimed at both resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict and dealing with Palestinian unrest on the West Bank and at Gaza.

President George Bush will hold preliminary talks in Tokyo with Hussein and Mubarak later this month while they attend the funeral of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, said the officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Secretary of State James Baker told a Senate confirmation hearing last month he was opposed to an independent Palestinian state. Shamir, meanwhile, last week launched an initiative promising local self-rule — but not statehood — to the 1.3 million Palestinians on the Israeli-held West Bank and in Gaza, along with a pullback of Israeli troops from major population centers.

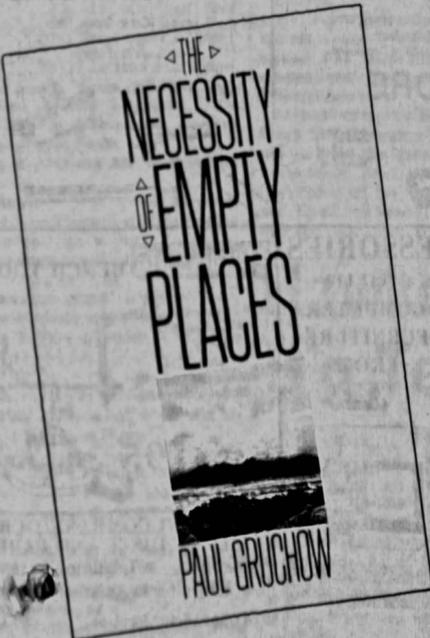

The Palestine Liberation Organization, which has made headway in a diplomatic blitz in western Europe, immediately rejected Shamir's effort to base a settlement on the 1978 Camp David agreements that produced a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel in 1979. The PLO is holding out for a state that would be carved out of Israeli territory.

Hussein was unable during the Reagan administration to interest PLO Chairman Yasir Arafat in a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation and subsequently left the problem of the Palestinians' future to the PLO chairman.

In December, the United States broke a 13-year ban and opened talks with the PLO, over Israel's objections, but there are no indications the long Mideast impasse is over.

Hussein, Mubarak and Shamir would make separate visits to Washington. The State Department officials said they all asked to be received in the spring and timetables were being worked out.

Author Reading

Naturalist author Paul Gruchow will read from his new book on Monday, February 6 at 8 pm.

In the tradition of Annie Dillard's Pilgrim at Tinker Creek and Gretel Ehrlich's The Solace of Open Spaces, The Necessity of Empty Places is rich in literary and scientific allusions. It is a philosophical evocation of western North American landscapes that are treeless, windswept, seemingly barren, and largely unpopulated.

Creating a sense of place for his readers—whether the tallgrass prairies of Minnesota, the alpine tundra of the Rockies, the scrub desert of Baja, the buttes and badlands of the western Dakotas, or the river shallows in Nebraska where sandhill cranes stand in their quiet, primitive splendor—Paul Gruchow conveys the hidden appeal of these demanding, uncompromising places that our culture has largely prevented us from truly appreciating.

Mr. Gruchow will also be signing copies of his new book THE NECESSITY OF EMPTY PLACES. Published by St. Martin's, $17.95

Kidnapping of foreigners in Lebanon banned

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A senior Shiite Moslem cleric said the Amal and Hezbollah militias have banned the kidnapping of foreigners in Lebanon, the conservative daily al-Anwar reported Sunday.

The newspaper quoted Sheik Abdel Amir Kabalan, the Shiites' top religious judge, as saying the ban was included in a peace pact reached by the rival militias in Damascus, Syria last week.

"Foreigners should have a role in Lebanon," Kabalan was quoted as saying.

One of the hostages is U.S. Marine Lt. Col. William Higgins, who was kidnapped Feb. 17, 1988, while serving as chief of an observer group attached to U.N. peacekeeping forces in Lebanon.

Kabalan, who heads Amal's religious affairs department, was a member of its delegation to the Damascus talks.

The peace accord halted a nine-month war between the pro-Syrian Amal and the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, or Party of God, in which more than 500 people were killed.

Algerian leader wants new constitution

ALGIERS, Algeria — President Chadli Bendjedid has proposed a new national constitution that drops references to socialism and opens the door to a multi-party system with protections for civil liberties.

Bendjedid's office issued the draft constitution late Saturday, and said it will be submitted to a referendum on Feb. 23.

Bendjedid, 59, has been taking quiet steps for years to move Algeria away from orthodox socialism toward a free-market economy, but has faced determined resistance within the ruling party and the government bureaucracy.

The proposed document would supersede the 1976 constitution drawn up under Houari Boumediene, president from 1965-78. Boumediene established a Marxist system on the Soviet model, with a Politburo controlling a ruling party that has a monopoly on political and economic power.

Under the new constitution, the army no longer would be given a role in "the development of the country and the building of socialism." Its role would be restricted to defending the "national independence, the unity and territorial integrity of the country."

Eighteen die following jailbreak attempt

SAO PAULO, Brazil — Eighteen prisoners died and eight others were injured after they were jammed into a tiny cell in a punitive action following an attempted jailbreak, authorities said Sunday.

Several of the 18 died of asphyxiation, while others were trampled to death by cellmates when more than 50 prisoners were packed into a 3-by-9 foot cell with no window or ventilation, Sao Paulo state prison system spokesman Guilherme Santana told The Associated Press.

One was shot to death, said Carlos Vasconcellos, who is in charge of the Parque Sao Lucas jail where the incident occurred.

The prisoners were forced into the cell after grabbing prison guard Teresa Dantas in an early morning attempted break from the jail, in a working-class neighborhood of Sao Paulo.

Ex-lover says Hudson knew he had AIDS

LOS ANGELES — In a lurid Hollywood trial, Rock Hudson's one-time lover has testified that the actor had unsafe sex with him up to five times a week although he knew he had AIDS, and that Hudson lied about having the deadly disease.

Hudson fiercely kept secret his homosexual life for more than 25 years before admitting he had AIDS in 1985.

But during testimony in recent weeks, blond, clean-cut Marc Christian, a 35-year-old unemployed bartender, has glaringly exposed Hudson's love life.

The trial stems from Christian's $11 million lawsuit against Hudson's estate and the actor's former secretary, Mark Miller. Christian alleges that he suffers extreme emotional distress for not being told Hudson had AIDS.

To prove his claim, Christian has testified that he and Hudson engaged in unprotected oral and anal sex for eight months, three to five times a week, after Hudson learned he had AIDS in June 1984.

Pinochet opposition names candidate

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Patricio Aylwin, a former senator who led the opposition's victory over President Augusto Pinochet in last year's referendum, was chosen Sunday as the presidential candidate of the Christian Democratic Party.

The nomination by the leading opposition party is likely to be followed by an endorsement from the rest of the anti-Pinochet coalition. Pro-government forces also are expected to pick a candidate for the Dec. 14 election.

"I trust my name will be accepted by the other parties" in the 17-party opposition coalition, Aylwin said after his unanimous nomination by the Christian Democrat's 286-delegate convention.

Recovering Botha may retire, Heunis expected to succeed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Newspapers Sunday said President P.W. Botha, who stepped down as leader of the ruling party last week, may retire soon.

Botha, who suffered a stroke Jan. 18, resigned Thursday as head of the National Party and was replaced the same day by National Education Minister F.W. de Klerk, who is considered Botha's heir apparent as president.

Botha said he will stay on as president, but he has appointed Constitutional Development Minister Chris Heunis as acting president while he recuperates.

Doctors say the 73-year-old Botha is making a rapid recovery but will need at least another month before he can consider returning to work.

Botha was not present for the opening of Parliament in Cape Town on Friday and has not been participating in the government's day-to-day operations, officials have said.

The Sunday Times, the country's largest paper, said in a front-page story that Botha's decision to step down as party chief "is a prelude to complete withdrawal from public life."

The newspaper, citing unidentified sources within the National Party, said Botha may retire "within weeks."

The Sunday Star of Johannesburg said in its front-page story that Botha's decision to relinquish his party post has sown confusion, because National Party members now owe allegiance to three leaders — Botha, de Klerk and Heunis.

"Botha has to retire from the presidency soon to solve the crisis," the newspaper reported, also citing unidentified sources within the National Party.

P.W. Botha

As president, Botha still has control over policy-making, while de Klerk will be responsible for the fundamentals of partisan politics, such as organization and fundraising.

Botha has refused to divulge his retirement plans, and both newspapers said he needs to give a clear indication of his intentions.

"He deems it unnecessary to offer any clue as to how — or how long — he proposes to wield power," The Sunday Star said in an editorial. "Not even (de Klerk) knows how it is all going to work."

The government must call an election before March 1990 and there has been widespread speculation it could be held as early as April this year.

"I hope we will be able to reach an agreement on a single opposition candidate," said Aylwin, 70. "That's what all the parties in the opposition want."

The 10-hour Christian Democratic gathering at the town of Talagante, 20 miles southwest of Santiago, ended at dawn Sunday with Aylwin's nomination.

The nomination was unanimous, party officials said, after at least two other contenders withdrew from the race.

The nomination was expected to restore unity within the opposition coalition, which had been badly split in the last three months over the choice of the presidential candidate.

Mourning, Hoyas make bid for No. 1

(AP) — Georgetown, which lost a shot at the No. 1 spot in the Associated Press college basketball poll last week, renewed its bid for a higher spot on the ladder on Sunday.

The sixth-ranked Hoyas, who earlier this week beat No. 10 Seton Hall, topped Villanova 69-55 as Alonzo Mourning blocked eight shots and Jaren Jackson scored 27 points.

It was a victory dominated by defense as Mourning, the 6-foot-10 freshman, and 7-foot Dikembe Mutombo consistently forced Villanova players to alter their shots from close in. Tom Greis, the 7-2 center who led the Wildcats with 18 points, was just 9-for-26 from the field as he tried to steer his shots around the Hoyas' big men.

"We still have a lot to learn," Mourning said, "but every game things seem to be falling into place. I thought we played well, especially on defense."

Overall, Villanova shot just 33 percent and scored under 60 for just the third time this season as they fell to 12-10, 3-6 in the Big East.

In other games Sunday, No. 9 Iowa beat No. 2 Illinois 86-82, No. 4 Arizona defeated Washington 85-68; No. 12 Duke stopped Notre Dame 102-80 and No. 18 West Virginia got past Rutgers 60-58.

Georgetown, No. 2 a week ago, lost a chance to take over the top spot by losing to Louisiana State following a week in which top-ranked Illinois and third-ranked Louisville both lost.

But Oklahoma, which moved into the top spot Monday, fell 77-73 Saturday to Oklahoma, and No. 2 Illinois and No. 3 North Carolina lost earlier in the week. It marks the third straight week the No. 1 team has lost and the second straight in which Nos. 1, 2 and 3 have all gone down.

Three other Top 20 teams lost Saturday in addition to Oklahoma — 13th-ranked North Carolina State fell to DePaul 81-74; 16th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas lost to California-Irvine 99-98 and No. 19 Louisiana State lost to Mississippi State 96-79.

In other Saturday games involving ranked teams, No. 5 Missouri beat Kansas State 73-68; No. 7 Louisville beat Memphis State 101-85; No. 8 Florida State overcame a 13-point second-half deficit to beat Cincinnati 66-65; No. 10 Seton Hall trounced Boston College 105-82; No. 11 Michigan beat Michigan State 82-66; 14th-ranked Syracuse ran away from Pitt 103-80; No. 17 Indiana beat Minnesota 66-62; Mississippi State surprised No. 19 Louisiana State 96-79; and 20th-ranked Stanford beat Florida 84-69.

No. 4 Arizona 85, Washington 68

Anthony Cook scored 23 points and Sean Elliott had 21 as Arizona finished with a flurry to win at Washington in the Pacific-10.

Arizona led just 72-66 with 1:14 left before going on a 13-2 burst. The Wildcats improved to 17-2 and 11-1 in the conference. Washington is 9-11 and 5-6.

No. 12 Duke 102, Notre Dame 80

Danny Ferry scored 28 points, 11 during a second-half surge that led Duke over host Notre Dame.

Duke led by four points before going on a 20-2 burst that made it 78-56. The Irish got no closer than 16 the rest of the way.

The Blue Devils, who had lost four of their last five games, are 15-4. Joe Fritch scored 21 points and James Jackson scored 20 for Notre Dame, 12-4.

No. 18 West Virginia 60, Rutgers 58

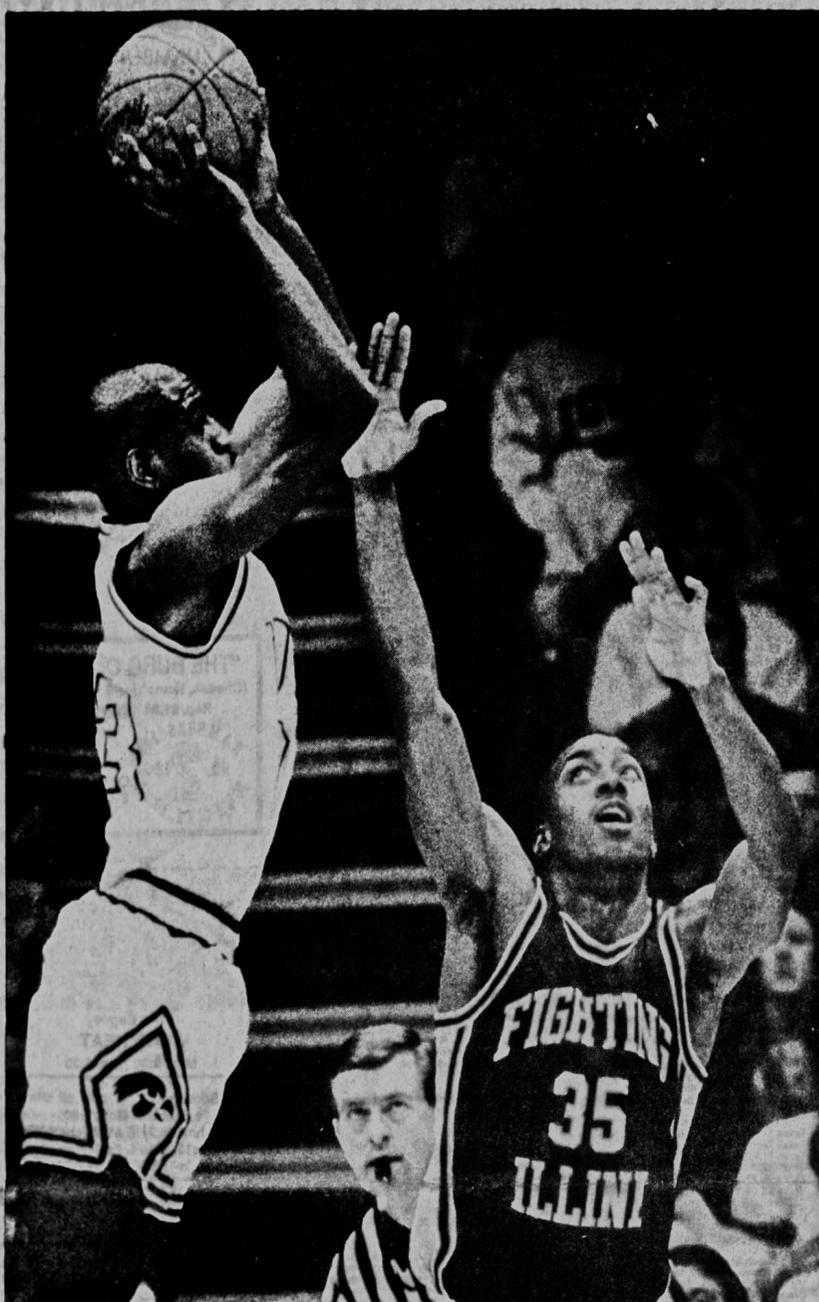

Backup center Wade Smith banked in a five-foot shot with 2:44 to play and visiting West Virginia defeated Rutgers to extend the nation's longest winning streak to 16 games.

West Virginia, 17-2, held Rutgers scoreless for the final 4:22 and scored the game's final five points to keep its streak going and remain undefeated in the Atlantic 10 Conference at 11-0.

Iowa knocks off Illinois behind Horton's efforts

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Hawkeyes powered past Illinois Sunday behind their usual lineup built around three seniors — with one exception.

The No. 9 Hawkeyes defeated the second-ranked Illini 86-82 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena behind the strength of Ed Horton's game-high totals of 26 points and 17 rebounds. B.J. Armstrong added 24 points, shooting 12 of 13 from the line. Roy Marble added 18.

But the Hawkeyes took on a new complexion, or at least one they hadn't had since December, when Matt Bullard entered the game with 16 minutes, 49 seconds remaining in the first half. Bullard had been out with a knee injury since Dec. 12.

Still, it was the performance of Horton, the Big Ten's leading rebounder, which kept Iowa in control of the inside game.

Illinois' lack of front-line height had not been a problem until this game. The forefront for the Illini touts 6-foot-8 Marcus Liberty, 6-7 Lowell Hamilton and Nick Anderson at 6-6.

Illinois Coach Lou Henson said the lack of size finally caught up with the Illini.

"We don't have a lot of size," Henson said. "We fight hard and when we can't outscrap the other ballclub we're not going to beat many people."

"I think we played about as well as we could play. We were up against a team that had a dominating pivot man. At the half, Horton had eleven (rebounds) and our starting post man had nine (for the game)."

Anderson kept the Illini within striking distance in the second half. Eighteen of his 25 points came in the second stanza and he also led Illinois in rebounds with 11.

"I think any time you get a win over that ballclub, you know that you've done something," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "That's a very, very dangerous ballclub."

Iowa junior center Les Jepsen started the game for the Hawkeyes but saw only seven minutes of playing time. Davis said after the game that Jepsen had cracked a rib in practice during the past week and was used only as a backup to Horton.

P.J. Bowman, who was thrust into Illinois' starting lineup because of an injury to Kendall Gill, contributed 12 first-half points. When Bowman hit a 3-pointer with 10 minutes, 33 seconds remaining in the first half, he gave the Illini their biggest lead at 24-16.

Iowa then caught fire, going on an 11-point run. And when freshman Ray Thompson hit a short jumper in the lane with 7:55 left in the half, Iowa led 27-24.

The Hawkeyes led the remainder of the game, with the exception of a 57-57 tie midway through the second half.

Bowman knotted the score with a 3-point shot, but Iowa crept back to a 67-60 margin and Illinois called a timeout.

Illinois came as close as 72-68 with 5:00 left when Iowa pulled away again. Armstrong's two free throws with 1:04 remaining put the game away at 84-75 after a foul by Larry Smith.

Bullard, Jepsen and Thompson filled out the scoring for Iowa. Bullard and Thompson added eight while Jepsen chipped in two.

Bullard sparks team, fans in return to lineup

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

It wasn't a bird. It wasn't a plane. It was Iowa forward Matt Bullard.

Bullard, appearing in his first game since injuring his knee against Jackson State Dec. 12, looked like Superman as he entered Iowa's 86-82 win over No. 2 Illinois last night.

At the 16:49 mark of the first half, Coach Tom Davis gave Bullard the nod to enter the game. Bullard immediately leapt off the bench and ripped off his warmup pants and jacket, and tossed them nearly over the Iowa bench.

"I was so pumped up," Bullard said, "that I just wanted to make sure I didn't trip over my warmups, or not get them off at all." Bullard's extravagant entrance pumped up the capacity crowd of 15,500 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena — and so did his performance.

Bullard sank his first two shots — both 3-pointers — en route to an eight point, six rebound, two assist game.

"I thought he did just about the best possible job you could expect," Davis said. "Knowing how long it's been since he played, the middle of December, to play as well as he did is a real tribute to him."

"Matt's a fine athlete, and he worked as hard as he could to prepare himself for today. We couldn't have done it without him — he was important to our success today. But, I'm sure Matt will find some things he wasn't real happy with."

But Bullard was happy with his performance, Iowa's play and the support of the crowd.

"I've been chomping at the bit so much," Bullard said, "that I was so anxious that I didn't even think about being tentative. I just had to go out and work hard. After my first shot went in, it kind of set the tone for the whole game."

"It felt so good to be out there. The crowd was going crazy — it was the best crowd I've ever played in front of. Also, to beat Illinois in my first game back was an incredible feeling. The seniors really took over in the second half and played great. The whole team looked good."

At the time of the injury, Bullard's rehabilitation wasn't expected to be complete until mid-February. But with Bullard's disciplined work and the help of Iowa team doctor John Streif, he came back sooner than anticipated.

"He worked so hard when he got hurt," forward Ed Horton said.

"He definitely showed how effective he can be."

Midway through the second half, Bullard sent a scare through the Carver-Hawkeye crowd. Bullard hit the parquet floor hard — the result of an unintentional shove from Illinois' Ervin Small. Bullard was sprawled out on the floor, clutching at the right knee.

Small's right knee, that is. "I was trying to make sure he wasn't going to get the rebound," Bullard said.

Although Bullard played more than expected, spending 22 minutes in the game, any playing

Hawkeyes sweep Big Ten road trip

By Michael Triik
The Daily Iowan

Life on the road for Big Ten women's basketball teams continues to have its hidden pitfalls.

Iowa, which is beating teams by an average of over 30 points per game at home, got two road wins this past weekend, but neither was a cakewalk.

Friday, the Hawkeyes beat Wisconsin 67-57, and Sunday Iowa rallied from a 27-24 halftime deficit to beat Northwestern 63-53.

"Northwestern has always been a team that played us well, and we always have good games when we come here," Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer said. "Don Perrelli is one of the finest coaches in America. He always gets the best out of his players. Their intensity and aggressive play is a credit to his coaching."

Northwestern held a 35-28 lead with 16 minutes and 40 seconds to play before Iowa rallied. Felicia Hall scored with 10:56 left in the game to give the Hawkeyes their first lead, at 41-40. Franthea Price nailed a 3-point basket to give Iowa the lead for good, 46-44, at the 9:15 mark.

Robin Christian paced Iowa with a career-high 24 points, Carrie Lawless led Northwestern with 20 points. Christian's previous career best was 22 against Wake Forest earlier this season.

"Robin Christian is capable of great things and we saw that today," Stringer said. "She was a steady influence throughout the game. If I had to pinpoint one reason why we won this game, I would have to credit Robin's performance."

The sweep lifts Iowa to 18-3 overall and 8-1 in the Big Ten. The Wildcats fall to 7-11 and 3-6.

Sunday's game was the second straight week in which Shanda

Brands brothers boost Hawks in 41-6 trouncing of Missouri

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

Neither the cold conditions nor the No. 5 Iowa wrestling team were kind to the Missouri Tigers Saturday night as the Hawkeyes cruised to a 41-6 win at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The sub-zero temperatures outside were not unlike the performances turned in by the Tigers as Iowa got out of the gates quickly.

Freshmen Terry Brands at 118 pounds and brother Tom Brands at 126 pounds gave the Hawkeyes a 10-0 lead by recording five-point, major decisions.

"It felt good to be back on the mat," Terry Brands said of his 21-5 win over Buddy Smith. "Being out in front of the home crowd was a little bit different, but it wasn't too bad."

Terry Brands was making his first appearance in front of a Carver-Hawkeye Arena crowd Saturday. Junior Steve Martin, who is ranked second in the country by Amateur Wrestling News, is the usual starter at the weight.

"I think this is the first time that (Terry) has wrestled for us at home," Gable said. "He was probably a little nervous. (Terry) is not the varsity man right now, Martin still is, but I'm planning on wrestling both for a couple of meets."

The momentum didn't stop for the Hawkeyes with the Brands brothers.

Senior all-American Joe Melchiorre recorded a 20-4

technical fall with 28 seconds left in the final period to extend the Iowa advantage to 15-0.

Following a Missouri forfeit at 142 pounds, Rick Novak evened his season record to 12-12 in impressive fashion. The sophomore pinned the Tigers' Freddie Darris, making it 27-0, Iowa.

"I think it was important for me to get a fall like this," Novak said. "I just used a duck and tripped him and got him on his back."

"That was a big win for Novak," Gable said. "It was a really nice move. The difference between Novak's move tonight and what he usually does, is that he hits that move a lot and doesn't follow through."

"Tonight he put great emphasis on the finish. He nailed the guy."

The Hawkeyes didn't drop any team points until the match at 167 pounds. Senior all-American John Heffernan, who has been out with a knee injury, didn't compete against the Tigers.

Freshman Doug Streicher moved up from his normal weight of 150 pounds to wrestle in place of Heffernan, losing 11-6.

"Streicher gave a good effort," Gable said. "He

Report: Sanders will turn pro

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Barry Sanders said Sunday night he has made a decision about whether he will return to Oklahoma State for his senior season but declined to say what that decision was.

"I'm not discussing that right now," Sanders told the Associated Press by telephone from Stillwater, Okla.

The Dallas Morning News reported Sunday that Sanders, a junior, has told one NFL team that he definitely would turn professional. Since Sanders has never redshirted, he would not be eligible for the regular NFL draft this spring. However, he could apply for the summer supplemental draft.

Sanders, who set national records last season by rushing for 2,628 yards and scoring 39 touchdowns, previously had said he had no intention of leaving Oklahoma State even though the Cowboys recently were placed on four years probation by the NCAA.

Asked whether it was unfair to say that he was wavering on his original statement that he would return, Sanders said, "It's unfair to make any opinions or speculation on it."

Asked when he would make a decision, he said, "I've already made it."

Dooley says he won't run for governor

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Former Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said Sunday night he will not run for governor but will remain as the university's athletic director.

In a statement released before a scheduled news conference, Dooley said he realized he did not want to make the commitment needed to mount a statewide political campaign.

"Though in the preliminary stages a potential campaign looked promising, it became increasingly apparent to me that my heart was not totally behind such an effort," the statement said.

"It was relatively easy to plan and discuss the possibility of running for governor in a small group. However, as I began to travel the state with a heavy speaking schedule and to discuss the possibility in more detail, I realized the level of commitment required to reach that objective was lacking," Dooley said in the statement.

Abdul-Jabbar scores 38,000th point

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar became the first NBA player with more than 38,000 points when he connected on his signature sky hook 22 seconds into Sunday night's game between the Los Angeles Lakers and the New Jersey Nets.

The Lakers set up a pass by Abdul-Jabbar to take the first shot of the game. After a pass by Michael Cooper, Abdul-Jabbar hit a 10-footer from the baseline.

Abdul-Jabbar, who went into the game with 37,999 points, went on to score six of the Lakers' first eight points.

Abdul-Jabbar is all-time NBA leader in points, games, minutes, field goals made, field goals attempted, blocked shots and personal fouls.

Wilt Chamberlain is No. 2 in scoring with 31,419, and Julius Erving is the only other pro player with more than 30,000.

Gamecocks' Morrison dies

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Joe Morrison, head football coach at South Carolina, died Sunday night of a heart attack. He was 51. Morrison, who had been playing racquetball at the university and found collapsed in the shower, Providence Hospital spokeswoman Dawn Catalano said.

"He was not feeling well, apparently went to the shower and was found in the shower collapsed when they started CPR (cardiopulmonary resuscitation) on him," she said.

She said Morrison was alive, but unconscious, when he was brought to the hospital at 7:44 p.m. He was pronounced dead at 8:03 p.m.

Catalano said Morrison, who played in the NFL for the New York Giants from 1959 to 1972 as a running back and an end, had a history of heart problems and previously had been hospitalized for that condition.

Joyner-Kersey breaks own record

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Jackie Joyner-Kersey set an American record of 7.81 seconds in the 60-meter hurdles Sunday at the Mobil 1 Invitational, breaking the record of 7.88 seconds she set last year at the same meet.

Joyner-Kersey, who won gold medals in the heptathlon and long jump at the Seoul Olympics, led from start to finish in setting her third American indoor record.

time was better than staying at home, watching his teammates suffer two road defeats.

"It's really hard to sit at home and watch the games on television," Bullard said. "It's hard not playing and seeing all the stuff I could do to help the team. It was nice to be able to contribute again."

Bullard also may have had a thrill playing in front of a national television audience, especially ABC-TV announcer Dick Vitale.

"Vitale is a nut case," Bullard said. "I talked to him a little bit Saturday, and before the game. You know that when you hit a jump shot he'll be screaming, 'Oh my, he hit a three!'"

Iowa, now 14-2 on the season, will prepare for next weekend's showdown with No. 1 Oklahoma State

"The road may have caught up with us today," said Coach Billy Tubbs, whose team has played four of its past six games away from home, including both games as No. 1. "They made the right plays down the stretch. We didn't."

Byron Houston, a freshman, scored five straight points in the final three minutes to lead the Cowboys, 13-6, 4-2. Houston finished with 11 points, 12 rebounds and six blocked shots. Another freshman, Darwyn Alexander, made two free throws with 22 seconds remaining to clinch it.

No. 5 Missouri 73, Kansas State 68

Gary Leonard had 22 points to lead Missouri, which improved to 20-3, 6-0 in the Big Eight. The score was tied 28-all at halftime, but Missouri scored the first six points of the second half and never trailed again. LaKeith Humphrey led Kansas State, 12-7, 3-4, with 22.

No. 7 Louisville 101, Memphis State 85

Kenny Payne scored 20 of his 28 points in the first half as Louisville, playing its second game without injured center Pervis Ellison, improved to 16-3 and 5-0 in the Metro. Memphis State, which lost at home for the first time in 10 games this season, is now 14-8 and 3-3.

Cousino leads Iowa in Dow's absence

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

While Iowa all-American gymnast Jeff Dow rested his flu-sickened body in Iowa City this weekend, Dow's roommate, team captain Keith Cousino, didn't seem the least bit tired.

Cousino claimed the all-around championship with a score of 54.20, while leading the Iowa squad to the team title over Michigan State and Wisconsin last Saturday in East Lansing, Mich.

Iowa claimed the team championship with a score of 265.00. Michigan State was second with 261.50, and Wisconsin finished last at 256.35.

Men's Gymnastics

"Keith did what he normally does," Coach Tom Dunn said. "He only missed one event — and it happened to be parallel bars — his best event. If he had hit it, his score would have been over 55. He had a good day, again."

Cousino's performance was aided by Iowa's still rings specialist, Paul Wozniak.

Wozniak, the only senior on the squad, equalled his season-best score with a 9.65.

"He's the only senior on the team," Dunn said, "and that is what he's supposed to do for us. He's been doing a great job for us this year."

"I'm pretty happy with my performances this year," Wozniak said. "I think that I can improve, however. It will just take some more hard work and a better consistency on my landings."

"I don't feel any pressure being the only senior, because there are plenty of other experienced gymnasts on the team to help the freshmen adjust. They are doing fine, and they will gain more experience as they participate in more meets."

Dunn also praised the performance of Rich Fry, a part-time performer for Iowa, who notched an impressive 9.1 on the pommel horse.

"We had some good individual performances today," Dunn said. "Cousino, Wozniak and Fry all performed well. But we still have many mistakes we have to correct before next week."

"We had better depth than Wisconsin and Michigan State. Our fifth and sixth scorers were where we won the meet."

Cousino paced the all-around competition, followed by Michigan

State gymnasts Rich Pulstort and Terry Aillespie, who scored 53.65 and 51.8, respectively. Iowa freshman Paul Bautel tied Aillespie for third place.

Entering last weekend's action, Dunn was attempting to set a lineup for upcoming league and national competitions. Unfortunately, he wasn't able to find any solutions.

"I didn't answer any of the questions I had concerning a set lineup," Dunn said. "Therefore, we'll use different lineups for the next few competitions, and hopefully by the end of the month we'll be fairly certain where we stand."

Hawks stay close, fall to Wolverines

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

For the first time in several years, the Iowa men's swimming team did not get blown out of the water by Michigan.

Although the Wolverines won Friday's meet 60-53, the teams traded off the lead throughout the meet.

"It's definitely a classic rivalry," Iowa Coach Glenn Patton said. "We're very proud of our performance. They are a very, very tough team. This was the fastest unshaved dual meet in the history of the Field House Pool, and we had a lot of lifetime-best, unshaved times. We did just what we needed to do. They deserve to be ranked second (in the nation), but tonight they looked like the number one team."

Although Iowa lost the 400-yard medley relay, considered the key event in many meets, Patton felt the team came back very well, especially since the seventh-ranked Hawkeyes captured first and second places in the next two events, the 1,000-yard freestyle and the 200-yard freestyle.

The 1,000 freestyle was won by Tom Gawronski, who also set a new meet and pool record with his time of nine minutes, 10.86 seconds, with Iowa's Artur Wojdat coming in second.

Men's Swimming

Erik Bacon captured the next event, the 200-freestyle, in 1:39.34, and Wojdat, who was competing in his first collegiate dual meet, placed second again.

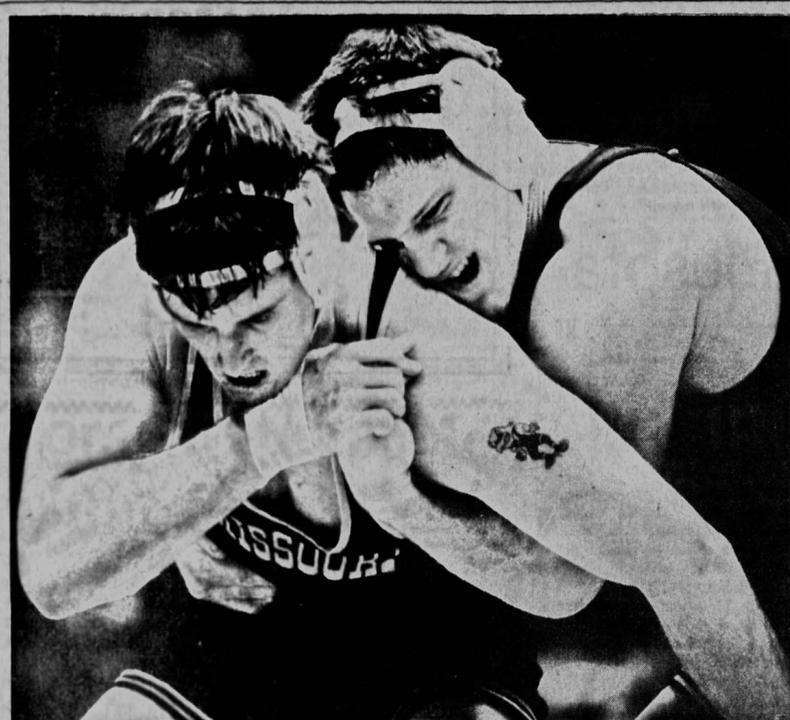

"We've never had an athlete who could swim the 1,000 in 9:11 and turn around and swim the 200 in 1:40," Patton said of Wojdat. "It was a very gutsy performance."

Wojdat, who won the bronze medal for Poland in the 400-meter freestyle at the Seoul Olympics, set another meet record for Iowa in the 500-yard freestyle.

Michigan set seven meet records, including Brent Lang's first-place finishes in the 50- and 100-yard freestyles, and Mike Barrowman's wins in the 200-yard individual medley and 200-yard breaststroke.

Both Lang and Barrowman competed in the Seoul Olympics for the United States. Lang won a gold medal as part of the 400-meter freestyle relay team, and Barrowman finished fourth in the 200-meter breaststroke.

"We knew we had the potential (to beat Iowa)," Lang said. "We've been working hard."

Hawkeyes win two, lose one in Texas

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

Even a delayed flight into Texas couldn't hinder the Iowa women's tennis team, as the Hawkeyes won two matches and lost only one at the Texas Tech indoor quadrangular in Lubbock, Texas, this past weekend.

Iowa Coach Micki Schillig said the team didn't get to bed until 4:30 a.m. Friday, just eight hours before their match with Texas Tech.

"The girls were really tired from the flight in and the long delay in Dallas," Schillig said, "but they really fought hard, and I am quite pleased with their progress."

The Hawkeyes edged the host Red Riders 5-4, in a match that featured the highlight of the weekend, according to Schillig.

The contest came down to the No. 2 doubles teams, which pitted Iowa's Tracey Peyton and Karen Muldowney against Texas Tech's Amy Ryan and Rebecca Naverez.

Peyton and Muldowney captured the first set, 6-3, but lost the second set, 4-6. The third set was a see-saw battle until the Hawkeyes forced the set into a tie-breaker and seven points later found themselves with a victory.

"It was an exciting match because it was just point-for-point all the way to the end," Schillig said. "We just put them together last week and they really came through."

The Hawkeyes weren't as fortunate against New Mexico, as they only won two matches while losing seven. Junior Liz Canzoneri had a hand in both victories as she defeated New Mexico's Rachel Wilson 4-6, 6-2, 6-2 in singles play.

Canzoneri later teamed with senior Madeleine Willard to defeat New Mexico's No. 1 doubles team of Chris Hoffee and Wilson 6-3, 3-6, 6-2.

Iowa had its best showing of the season Saturday afternoon as the Hawkeyes breezed by Texas-San Antonio 9-0. In singles action, Willard, Canzoneri, Peyton, Tracey Donnelly and Muldowney were all winners.

The winning doubles combinations included Willard and Canzoneri, Peyton and Muldowney and Patti DeSimone and Donnelly.

Kruckeberg leads Hawkeyes past Southern Illinois in Open

By Matthew Zlatnik
The Daily Iowan

Coach Jerry Hassard probably wishes Iowa could have more meets like the Hawkeye Open.

The Iowa women's track team dominated their only home meet of the indoor season, Saturday's Hawkeye Open in the Recreation Building. The Hawkeyes rolled up 140 points, far outdistancing runner-up Southern Illinois with 107½.

Illinois State and Drake tied for third with 59 points each. Seven other schols competed in the meet.

Iowa recorded six first-places in the track events, led by Jeanne Kruckeberg's wins in the 1,000-meter and the mile.

Kruckeberg received the Ron Renko award as the meet's outstanding track athlete. Besides winning the 1,000 and the mile, she also ran on Iowa's "B" mile relay team.

"Jeanne Kruckeberg's 4:48 mile is excellent without competition," Hassard said. "She ran really well in the mile relay, too."

Women's Track

"This was supposed to be a relaxing meet for me," Kruckeberg said. "I really want to concentrate on the half-mile next weekend."

The sprints were also a strength for the Hawkeyes, with wins by Karen Layne in the 400-meters and Amy McRell in the 500. Iowa's Alycia Simpson took second in the 500, and Angela Chadwick came in fourth in the 400. The Hawkeyes' Bev Powell also had a fourth-place finish, in the 55-meter hurdles.

"The sprints are coming along," Hassard said. "We're starting to have some pride in that area. Karen Layne dominated in her events, and Amy McRell ran a super 500.

"I think we're capable of putting together a good mile relay."

Iowa's "A" mile relay, of Chadwick, Powell, Layne and McRell, won in 3 minutes, 53.01 seconds, beating second-place Drake by more than seven seconds. The "B" relay, of Rachele Roberts, Tami Hoskins, Leslie Brown and Kruckeberg, edged Drake by .03 seconds, but didn't score team points because only one relay per school could score in each event.

Those in the field events also performed well for the Hawkeyes. Traci Claussen won the high jump for the second-straight week, going 5 feet, 7½ inches.

"I wanted to go five-nine," Claussen said. "The jumps were there, they just didn't go. I know I can do it."

Becki Borg placed second in the triple jump and fifth in the long jump, and freshman Laura Kriener took second in the shot, with a personal-best throw of 44-7.

"Becki Borg (triple) jumped into the 39-foot range," Hassard said. "It was her best performance of the year. She's continually improving."

"There was good improvement for Laura Kriener in the shot — she had a two-foot improvement over last week."

"Lately in practice," Kriener said, "the last couple of weeks I've been throwing pretty good. I'm a lot happier with myself."

Calcavecchia bests Lyle for one-stroke L.A. win

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There were no miracle shots from the sand this time, not even the thoughts of one, and Mark Calcavecchia held on to beat Sandy Lyle by a stroke Sunday in the Los Angeles Open.

Calcavecchia looked up with an expression of mild surprise when asked if his comeback victory promoted any memories of his loss to Lyle's magnificent shot from a fairway bunker in the 1988 Masters.

"It never even crossed my mind," Calcavecchia said. "Sandy's a great guy, a great player. How can you be mad at a guy who hits one of the great shots in history and then makes birdie on top of it? There was no revenge factor involved. I was just trying to win the golf tournament. It wasn't important to me that I beat Sandy. It didn't matter whether he was second or third or 50th. I was just trying to beat Sandy."

McGhee leads Hawks past Minnesota

The Daily Iowan

Pat McGhee eclipsed the Iowa record in the 55-meter hurdles as eleven first-place finishes powered the Iowa men's track team past Minnesota, 75-47, Saturday in Minneapolis.

McGhee captured first-place points in two events. The senior set an Iowa record and a Minnesota Fieldhouse record in the 55 hurdles with a time of 7.25 seconds, then came on later to top the field in the 600-meter run.

The 7.25 surpassed the previous mark of 7.38 held by Ronnie McCoy, who is currently an assistant with the Iowa squad.

Men's Track

Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said the time places McGhee among the nation's best in the event.

"That would be one of the top times in the country right now," he said. "The time that won the NCAA's last year was 7.19, so he's not far off that, either."

Wheeler said McGhee's performance and two wins by James Armstrong were the high points of the meet. Armstrong paced all sprinters in the 55 in the time of 6.40 and came back in the 200 to win in 22.02.

Paul Jones came away with first in the long jump with a leap of 23 feet, 9 inches. The win gave him his third first-place finish this season in as many meets.

"The big thing was that we came out with no additional injuries," Wheeler said. "I think right now the encouraging thing is they were very competitive in all events, and where it was close we were able to win."

Other first-place finishers for Iowa were Gordon Finch in the triple jump, 46-2; K.P. Lansing, high jump, 6-8; Bernard Heard, 400, 49.45; D'Juan Strozier, 800, 1:54.83; Rod Chambers, mile, 4:15.98; Strozier, Heard, St. Clair Blackman, — Louis English, 400-meter relay, 3:19.90.

McGhee's time also topped the best time recorded at the Big Ten indoor meet in 1988. McGhee said the main thing he works on is starting quickly in the 55, since his true specialty is the 400 hurdles. "In the 55 I just concentrate on getting started, getting out of the blocks and going through the first hurdle," he said.

Iowa sets mark at 4-team meet

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

With a new school-record score of 183.45, the Iowa women's gymnastics team finished second behind Michigan State at a quadrangular meet at New Hampshire Saturday.

The Spartans finished first with a team score of 184.3, with New Hampshire and Iowa State coming in third and fourth, scoring 182.55 and 177.15, respectively.

"It was one rewarding weekend," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said. "We knew we had to be tough and aggressive, and we were."

One reward was the capture of the second, third and fourth places in the all-around competition by Iowa's Lori Cole, Robyn Zussman and Michelle Cahal.

Other highlights included first-place finishes by Zussman in the vault competition, with a school-record score, and by Cahal on the uneven parallel bars.

Women's Gymnastics

"It was a great meet," Cahal said. "It was a busy meet because four events were going on at the same time, but we all stuck together."

According to DeMarco, the team was in third place going into the last event — the balance beam — but they "really turned it on" and pulled into second place.

"It was an incredible team effort," DeMarco said. "No one let up, and as a team, we were so focused."

Iowa senior Kathie Orwig captured second place on the beam, with teammates Cahal and Cole following with fourth- and seventh-place finishes.

"The beam was fantastic," DeMarco said. "We were very fluid and aggressive. Even with three falls, we broke the school beam record. It was beautiful."

The Hawkeyes were also led by Zussman, who finished 12th in the beam event with a score of 9.1 despite a fall.

DeMarco credited her for "really hitting her (parallel) bar routine for the first time this year."

"It feels so good to be back to where I thought I should be performing," Zussman said. "(My fall) was upsetting, but I still got a 9.1, and I know I could have done it."

"The competition was very fierce," DeMarco said. "But we hung tough. And even though it was very competitive, we had a lot of fun. It was an awesome meet."

Jordan will miss slam dunk contest

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. (AP) — Michael Jordan, winner of the last two NBA slam dunk contests on All-Star weekend, said Sunday he will not compete in Saturday's event in Houston.

Jordan said a knee sprain he suffered on Jan. 24 still is causing some swelling, although the injury didn't make him miss any games.

Jordan, who leads in the NBA in scoring and steals, will play in the All-Star Game next Sunday in Houston, but doctors said the extra pounding his legs take in a slam-dunk contest make his participation too risky.

If Jordan were taking part, it would have been the first time the champions in every previous slam-dunk contest have faced each other.

Spud Webb, Dominique Wilkins and Larry Nance are scheduled to compete. Webb won in 1986, Wilkins in 1985 and Nance in 1984.

Nance has not competed since he defeated Julius Erving at Denver.

Driver Derek Bell, of Pacham, England, right, dumps beer on driving team member John Andretti, of Indianapolis, in Victory Lane Sunday after their Porsche 962 won the Daytona endurance race.

Porsche regains dominance with closest Daytona finish

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Porsche regained its hold on the Daytona 24 Hours as Derek Bell of Britain, Bob Wollek of France and American John Andretti on Sunday won the closest finish in the 22-year history of the race.

The Porsche 962 prototype, a model no longer being produced by the German factory, has now won four of the last five 24-hour events on Daytona's 3.56-mile road circuit.

The winners, outlasting and out-running state-of-the-art Jaguar and Nissan prototypes, gave Porsche its 12th Daytona 24 Hours victory in 13 years.

A Jaguar XJR-9 broke Porsche's string last year and an XJR-9, co-driven by Price Cobb, John Nielsen of Denmark, Andy Wallace of Britain and Jan Lammers of The Netherlands, battled for the lead through the final four hours.

Several times, the British-built car crept within sight of the Porsche. But, each time an exchange of scheduled pit stops pushed the challenger back.

Wollek drove the final two hours in the 962, crossing the finish line 1 minute, 26.665 seconds ahead of Lammers in the second-place car. The winners completed 621 laps and covered 2,210.76 miles.

The winning car averaged 92.009 mph.

This finish was more than 20 seconds closer than the previous closest in 1986 when a 962 driven by Bell, the late Al Holbert and Al Unser Jr. nipped the Porsche of

A.J. Foyt, Danny Sullivan and Arie Luyendyk of The Netherlands by 1:49.150.

Wollek made an eight-second pit stop for a splash of fuel just four minutes from the end, making the finish appear somewhat closer than it really was.

The total laps and miles were nowhere near race records because the event was stopped for nearly four hours in the early morning because of a dense fog that rolled in off the nearby Atlantic Ocean.

It was the third victory in America's most prestigious endurance event for both Bell, 47, and Wollek, 45. Andretti, 25, the nephew of Mario Andretti, won the twice-around-the-clock event for the first time.

Walliser claims downhill title

VAIL, Colo. (AP) — Switzerland's Maria Walliser added a gold medal to her impressive collection of trophies Sunday, winning the women's downhill by 1 1/2 seconds over Canada's Karen Percy at the World Alpine Ski Championships.

Walliser, successfully defending the title she won at the last World Championships in 1987, burst down Vail Mountain's International course in 1 minute 46.50 seconds.

Percy's time was 1:48.00, just one-hundredth of a second in front of bronze medalist Karin Dedler of West Germany.

Heidi Zurbriggen of Switzerland was fourth in 1:48.05.

Swiss teammate Michela Figini, the World Cup downhill standings leader and the favorite in the race, wound up eighth in 1:48.57.

The United States' best hope in the event, Pam Fletcher of Acton, Mass., finished well off the pace at 1:49.67.

Course workers did an admirable job of clearing the course of two feet of fresh snow that fell in a 72-hour period ending Saturday night. Walliser's winning time was comparable with training times held on a clear, icy course last week.

Officially, three feet of snow fell at nearby Beaver Creek, forcing postponement of the men's downhill from Saturday until Monday.

Walliser, 25, winner of two of the five women's downhill on the World Cup circuit this season and second in the downhill standings to her teammate but archrival Figini, never let up on her aggressive run that featured one slight slip half-way down the course.

"It's fantastic to win the World Championship for a second time," Walliser said in the finish area after kissing her skis.

"I was well prepared for this race. I knew I could do it, and my skis were well prepared."

Figini said she wanted to check her split times before commenting on the race, but noted, "My skis weren't the fastest today. I felt Maria could win. After the snow, the course fit her, while I would have liked a faster course."

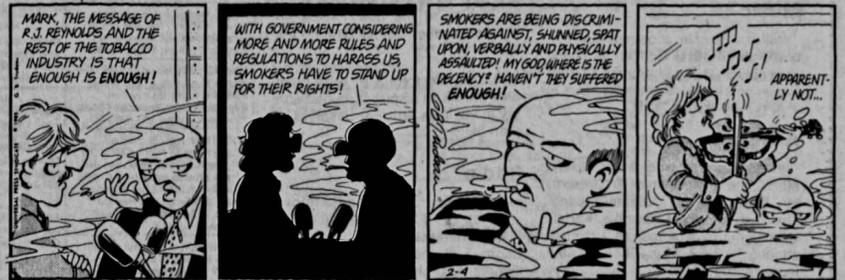

Japan's Emi Kawabata finished fifth in 1:48.32, followed by Michaela Gerg of West Germany in 1:48.38 and Canada's Kerrin Lee in 1:48.45.

Agassi leads U.S. in Cup win

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Andre Agassi beat Francisco Gonzalez 6-2, 6-4 Sunday and, directing defiant gestures toward a small section of Paraguayan fans, completed the United States' 5-0 payback victory over Paraguay in Davis Cup first-round play.

American Michael Chang rallied for a 5-7, 6-0, 6-1 victory over Hugo Chapagu in the day's earlier match.

The United States ensured its victory Saturday when Ken Flach and Robert Seguso swept Gonzalez and Victor Pecci 6-1, 6-3, 6-4. The Americans will meet France in San Diego in April's quarterfinals.

The victory avenged the Americans' bitter loss to the same team before a raucous crowd in Asuncion in 1987.

Agassi needed only 58 minutes to beat Gonzalez, a late replacement for Pecci in the meaningless match. When Agassi broke Gonzalez for a 5-4 lead in the second set, he faced the Paraguayan fans, put his thumbs in his ears and wiggled his fingers.

The American fans erupted with cheers, then began chanting "USA, USA."

'Galileo' shoots for stars, ends up lost in space

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

It's fitting that a play about Galileo should have as its strong point ambition. University Theatres' production of Bertolt Brecht's "The Life of Galileo" Wednesday night certainly had great goals of that. Too bad it didn't excel in acting, too. Director Timothy Troy kept the pacing brisk, but at a running time of 3½ hours, it could have been tighter. There were scenes — especially in the first half — that could have been trimmed or cut entirely, although Troy's direction of even the long scenes was energetic and insightful. Unfortunately, almost all of that energy and insight rested solely in Troy's direction and nowhere in the cast on stage, most of whom seemed more concerned with not missing lines than with putting feeling into what they were doing. This would be annoying if it were confined to minor parts, but in large roles — in this case, Michael Wells as Galileo's servant Andrea Sarti and Elizabeth Simeon as Galileo's daughter, Virginia — it's nothing short of catastrophic. Wednesday night was preserved from such a catastrophe by the efforts of a relatively small number of talented people. Foremost among these was Bruce Vieira as Galileo. On stage for more than 95 percent of the play, Vieira tirelessly hit the right notes. His Galileo was adamant without being preachy, funny without being comical, and ultimately larger than life without being melodramatic. His sensitive and forceful performance was strong enough to carry whole scenes — and sometimes, sadly, had to.

Beyond Vieira, all the main roles in the production were gratefully and forgettably done, and all the life came from the smaller parts. Some truly wonderful work was done in these small places, however, and taken together they constitute the strongest reason to go see the play. Stanton Dosssett, so deliciously menacing in last semester's "Catch My Brother's Eye," seems a natural to play the Cardinal Inquisitor, and he does indeed play that part to perfection. But a more pleasant surprise was his Mathematician, who drew howls of laughter from the audience and upstaged even Salil Singh's delightfully windbaggy Philosopher. By far the most entertaining performer of the night was Frank Ensenberger in his various roles as the Bursar Signor Priuli, an Ecclesiastical Secretary and Gaffone. Ensenberger's manic energy and flawless comic delivery made him one of the bright spots in "Catch My Brother's Eye," and here he came as a breath of fresh air whenever he was on stage. His Bursar was hilarious, and his Gaffone garnered uproarious laughter just by shuffling his feet. Ensenberger's enthusiasm should have been the norm among the cast. Twice Troy achieved the sublime. In the closing scene of the first half, when Dosssett's Cardinal Inquisitor simply stares at Galileo, the stare was held as the lighting dropped, producing a shiver of anticipation, a brilliantly subtle drawing of battlegrounds. And at the play's close, when Galileo stands in single spotlight before a projection of the stars in space and fixes the audience with a mischievous smile, Troy — and Vieira — turn it into an emblem for the entire play. But such moments came too seldom for a play of this length, and that hurts the production. Its ambition and energy — and fantastic on-stage accompaniment by the band — recommend it, but not as strongly as if the acting had been firmly in place.

On stage for more than 95 percent of the play, Bruce Vieira tirelessly hit the right notes.

Duck's 'Zadar!' really is funny, even beyond all the Iowa jokes

By Locke Peterseim
The Daily Iowan

Once in a great while there comes a film that challenges everything we think we know about art and life... no, no.

Not since "Citizen Kane" has the cinema... no, no.

In years to come when people think of radioactive cattle, they'll think "Zadar!"

Perfect. Watching the world premiere of Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre's "Zadar! Cow from Hell!" Friday night at Hancher Auditorium was in itself an exercise in social aesthetics. As expected, the crowd cheered the loudest when their family, friends, homes, Dairy Queens or livestock appeared onscreen. And, as expected, they laughed the loudest at the easy Iowa jokes.

Afterward everyone uttered the usual safe, noncommittal platitudes to the waiting news-cam crews ("Nice little movie," "charming," "I liked it,"), the local pseudo-stars basked in their fleeting fame, and Channel 7's Gary Sarnoff made one of his infamous puns — "They're holding their Duck's Breath while waiting for distributors." But most of the people in attendance at the premiere, either in their excitement over seeing "Randy of the Redwoods" (Duck Jim Turner) or in their cynical determination not to believe anything good could come out of such low-budget, semi-amateur chaos, seemed to overlook a simple fact:

"Zadar! Cow from Hell!" — all geographic favoritism and/or cynicism aside — is a good film. Really.

Not only is it funny and nice and charming, "Zadar!" is also an intelligent film. But more than that, it possesses a rare and valuable commodity that seems to decrease in inverse proportion to the size of a film's budget: sincerity. "Zadar!" did have a very low budget.

Not that the film looked it, the production values were surprisingly high. And while not all the local talents were as comfortable in front of a camera as they are behind a tractor, the acting was adequate and sometimes more than.

Plus there was genuine quality in Merle Kessler's script and the performances of the Ducks. Quick little jokes about clinics and latex and Scientology were often there and gone before the audience had stopped cheering the appearance of Jonesy's Cafe.

One scene in particular — set during multiple takes while shooting in a cafe — brilliantly combined Kessler's sharp writing with his, Turner and Dan Coffey's performing sensibilities and Bob

Zadar! Cow from Hell!

Directed by Robert C. Hughes

Mr. Nifty	Bill Allard
Rex Haskel	Dan Coffey
Sleepless Walker	Merle Kessler
Max	Jim Turner
Dan Tension	Leon Martell

"Zadar! Cow from Hell!"'s biggest crime is that it doesn't fall neatly into a comedy classification.

Hughes' direction. Like the best parts of the film, the scene worked its self-reflexive parody on several levels: capitalist-creativity and naive small-towners and sleazy filmmakers and low-budget horror films (which always have a scene with the sheriff flirting with a waitress in a cafe).

The Ducks wrote the film around themselves, so, of course, their casting was perfect. Kessler puts his naturally humorous Karloffian appearance to work as Sleepless Walker, the film-within-the-film's director. And Leon Martell, as production manager Dan Tension, strained his neck muscles and grimaced off some of the film's funniest moments.

Despite the obvious farm-folk jokes that never failed to raise a chuckle at the screening, "Zadar!" contained quite a bit of subtle satire that seemed to slip by the Hancher audiences. "Zadar!" is a mood-humor film that you have to let take you over. Maybe it isn't meant to be viewed in such a cavernous forum as the Auditorium — its small, often quiet, comedy is better suited for a more intimate screening space — even (sorry) video. "Zadar!"'s biggest crime is that it doesn't fall neatly into a comedy classification. Coffey had described the film as more "Local Hero" than "Animal House," but in fact "Zadar!" can't be safely placed on either end of such a broad spectrum. Its understated humor and subject (outsiders invade rural area only to be conquered by its inhabitants) fit the "Local Hero" bill. But the inherent Duck's Breath silliness, though keyed down in "Zadar!", still keeps the film teetering on the verge of manic comic surrealism.

So you wind up with a delightful film that the kids won't like because it moves at its own pace and doesn't have bare breasts — at least not bare human breasts — and the oh-so-adult "film lovers" won't like because it's not DEEP enough.

"Zadar!" has some faults. The story amounts to little more than a series of disjointed sketches strung together, reflecting Duck's Breath's theatrical past. And at times you can sense the filmmakers' nervous self-awareness, bordering on contrition. And it does have some slow spots — especially in the second half when the film starts to lose its edge, winding up with an abrupt and unsatisfying ending.

But "Zadar!" tries. Sincerely tries. Maybe it tries too hard, but its earnest effort is refreshing in this age of assembly-line comedy filmmaking. Those who judge "Zadar!" by regular Hollywood standards are doing both the film and themselves an injustice. Granted, it shows its makers' cinematic inexperience at times, but "Zadar!" was an experiment and a successful one at that. "Zadar!" succeeds in fulfilling its potential much more than it fails. Those involved in its creation have nothing to be ashamed of and plenty to take pride in.

Besides all that, the film is funny. And not just the farm jokes. Really.

Rosen performs 'by numbers'

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

Charles Rosen had several strikes against him before he even set foot on the stage of Clapp Recital Hall Thursday night.

First, winter — that's the long, cold season long missing from Iowa weather — was camped down there by the river, with subzero cold and snowy, blowing winds.

Second, there was Clapp itself. How anyone could stand to hold a recital of any kind in this dank and pasty-walled mausoleum is something of a mystery. If the shabby stage and the plentiful fire extinguishers could speak, they'd say "Under construction."

And third, there were the two pieces Rosen had chosen. Beethoven's "Hammerklavier" sonata and Chopin's third piano sonata are extremely well known to classical music buffs — especially the Beethoven. Such familiarity feels like settling into an easy chair, and that's bad.

These two pieces are stamped with genius — and genius always upsets, even unintentionally. It breaks down the appearance of the familiar and reveals in it unseen patterns, and this is always upsetting.

Likewise Rosen took apart these pieces, making each separate note sound like it was the one and only thing he was going to play for the night. In the Beethoven especially, his playing was abrupt and taut, seeming more technique than anything else. The meditative third movement showed that something coolly done can still be moving, but the "Hammerklavier" is a work of almost obsessive complexity, and Rosen played it like that complexity was an end in itself.

Chopin's third sonata is a quietly grand and almost unbelievably beautiful piece, and it suffers if it's played by the numbers, without feeling. Unfortunately, Rosen seemed distracted through most of it, like an engineer so skilled at his work that it no longer holds his attention.

The notes were flawlessly rendered and cried out for so much more than execution — a something more they received only in the largo.

However, this distraction seemed absent from Rosen's one encore — a song by Chopin arranged for the piano by Liszt — which he played with a precision matched by a delicacy of feeling that had been missing most of the evening.

This he brought to a close with grace and deliberation.
