President Bush's chief administrator, Charles C. Gray
Monday revised a decision to maintain his position in a multimillion-dollar decision to manage the reorganization of the Federal reserve system, with the president telling retainers to carry on.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush on Monday called on Congress to approve $30 billion in rescue plan for savings and loan institutions.
He said the passage of the legislation was needed to stem the confusion of the crisis and to reassure the public that the government would not abandon the dedicated institutions.

Bush plans to announce the legislation on Wednesday.

The legislation would provide $30 billion to the Resolution Trust Corporation, which is responsible for supervising the resolution of savings and loan institutions that fail. The legislation would also provide $10 billion to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which insures deposits for banks.

The legislation would also provide $5 billion for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which supervises the thrift industry.

Bush has been under pressure to act on the crisis, which has caused widespread concern and uncertainty among consumers and investors.

CACC lobbying brings nursing loan forgiveness to Legislature

By Diane Wallace

The Daily Iowan

Just over a year ago, the concept of loan forgiveness in exchange for at least two years of nursing service was approved by ternbers of the Iowa State University's Bond Committee.

Now, the concept is being discussed in the Iowa General Assembly. The bill was introduced to the House by Rep. Bruce Bonds, D-Marshalltown.

Maryann Schlehr, head of the State Reading Response Program, said, "It's a win-win situation for everyone involved. Nursing students will be able to get the money for their education, at the same time ensuring a skilled work force for the future. The state will have a valuable investment, knowing that these nurses will have a commitment to the state for at least two years."

Students would have to meet certain requirements in order to qualify for the loan forgiveness program. The requirements include living in the state and being a student at a post-secondary nursing program.

"The bill is designed to attract nurses to the state," Bonds said. "The nurses would have to be employed at least two years in the state in order to qualify for the loan forgiveness."

"The nurses will be paid a salary that is commensurate with the nurses in the state. The state will not pay more than the amount that the hospital would have paid them if they were employed," Bonds explained.

"If the nurse does not honor the agreement to stay in the state for at least two years, the state would have the option to have the loan forgiven or the nurse would have to repay the loan.

Bonds said the bill would benefit everyone. It would help the state get more skilled nurses, help the state to save money, and help the nurses get a better education."

Bonds said the bill would be good for all sides of the equation. "It is a win-win situation for everyone involved," he said.

Bonds said he hopes to get the bill approved by the House committee on education and then on to the House floor. He added that he hopes to have the bill approved by the end of the session.

Schlehr said that the bill is important for both the state and the nurses. "It is important for the state because it will help to attract nurses to the state. It is important for the nurses because it will help them to get a better education," she said.

Students from Hong Kong, Vietnam, Singapore, Malaysia, and Japan are also invited to the event. "It's the first time that the different cultures have gotten together like this and tried to make a show not only for the Americans but for the international Chinese in town," said Julie Min, a freshman sophomore at UI. "It's really a chance to meet different cultures, the world comes together to make a show at the lunar new year, the lunar calendar, and each year is named by an animal symbol. The current year is 'The Year of the Snake.'"

Traditionally, we use a dragon, a lion dance, an extension dragon and a dragon, and the performance will be in English to allow the greater number of people to understand through music of the Chinese New Year. "It's just like a Christmas 100,000 people will be put into the show," said Min. City Council debates funding for Emergency Housing plan

Iowa City Council discussion on the impact of the proposed fiscal year 1990 human services budget Tuesday night led to debate over funding for Emergency Housing and the longer-term impact of the proposed budget on funding human service agencies. While the council approved the budget — which was prepared by the Human Services Agency, Planning and Management Committee and distributed in 3-1 form at the council meeting Monday — the impact of the budget on funding human service agencies was a major concern. The council tabled a request by the Council of Social Agencies to address funding human service agencies. The human services budget is prepared in conjunction with the United Way and the State Office of Social Services.

"I think the council is doing a great job of preparing the budget. We've been told not to really fund human services agencies, so we've cut back on these areas," said Harnes. "We can't avoid the demands of a growing population. The human services budget is prepared in conjunction with the United Way and the State Office of Social Services.

Unaccountable injuries

In Saturday night's match against Montana, Iowa wrestler Doug Bresnahan jumped two weights classes to fill a spot emptied by injury. Despite his best efforts, he lost.

But Doug was not the only victim of injury. Certainly the weekend replaced also lost. But wasn't the basketball team recently landing a player back from injury? And wasn't many of the week's performances of fighters past this past week attributed to missing players?

Doug knows a reality of sport, especially at the level many UI injury scene. Nevertheless, the rate of injury on Iowa this year has been undesirable. And the list is not being placed where it certainly lies on the matches.

Bresnahan's解析 to win. Not to the players, who are, one hopes, working toward an Iowa diploma, and who play for free. Their security as athletes depends entirely on their coaches, who they themseles stay at it. The coaches, not some stranger, run and earn [noun] and fame. And if the NCAA truly wishes to protect college athletes, it should develop regulations -- it would be the product of our society and more specifically, our worthless private sin.

Doug's injury prepared for the TCA and Iowa-Iowa games. Musson had already spent half of his life away from the sport. The product's damage had been great. Doug is a trouble as a young teenager from from there his stroke became more and more serious, and were followed by short stays in

And what did Charles Musson learn in all? Well, he learned a lot. He learned a lot about basketball, plenty more where they came from. And in our ineffective society made to punish them. But the blame placed on one's self. In the meantime, Iowa should be the price.

Reorganization brings challenge

Investigator finds misuse and fraud of Navajo funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate investigation and trial at the Navajo Nation court in Arizona have reached a conclusion.

Friday's trial ended with the judge dismissing the case against Navajo Nation President Ben Shelly. The judge said there was insufficient evidence to support the charges of fraud.

The investigation was launched after a whistleblower alleged that Shelly had misused funds intended for the tribe's education program.

The whistleblower's allegations included claims of mismanagement and misuse of federal education funds.

The investigation found that Shelly had used some of the funds for personal expenses, including a new car and a luxury yacht.

Shelly denies the allegations and has said the investigation was politically motivated.

Iran plans conditional diplomatic proposal

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran now uses diplomacy to exported its balance of power, Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati and Hamrah, two day, announced that they were proceeding with a broader diplomatic strategy.

They said they would not rule out further talks with the United States, but that any talks would be conditional.

They added that they would only engage in talks if the United States promised to lift sanctions and agree to a mutual understanding.

The statement came after years of tense negotiations between the two nations.

The Trump administration has repeatedly called for a stronger role for Iran in the region, but has so far resisted direct talks with the Islamic Republic.

The comments suggest that Iran is willing to engage in negotiations, but only under certain conditions.

BUt officials have said no immediate action will be taken towards an end to the conflict. The United States provided aid to the anti-Soviet rebels, but no substantive action ever came.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Burdett said U.S. relations with Paraguay will depend on the actions of the government in resolving the conflict. Rodriguez denies drug allegations, but the United States has threatened to cut off all aid to the government if the drug trade does not end.

Women to serve on Harvard board

That panel, whose members serve without pay for unlimited terms, makes day-to-day decisions on educational, financial and other matters. It has the power to fire the president.

The student body of 14,000 last spring went on a hunger strike to demand that Harvard consider appointing women to the governing board.

The Harvard College Employees Union has launched a lawsuit in Massachusetts Superior Court against the college and the governing board, the Harvard Corporation.

The union contends that the board has violated anti-discrimination laws by excluding women from its membership.

A federal judge has ordered a temporary stop to the strike, pending the filing of a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"I'm really into jazz," Richards said, "but I'm not sure about negro music, or the banjo, or the guitar."

"I think it's important that people have a role in governance," she said. "I'm concerned about how women are treated in society, and I think it's important that women have a voice in making decisions that affect them."
