S&L solution uses taxes, premiums

Bush shelves depositor fee plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush on Monday called on taxpayers to pay for about half the $90 billion solution to the savings and loan crisis, with banks and thrift institutions paying the rest.

He recommended no direct fee on individual depositors. "We intend to restore our entire insured deposit system to health," the president told reporters in outlining a series of regulatory changes. He vowed to prosecute any wrongdoing at S&Ls that have failed thus far.

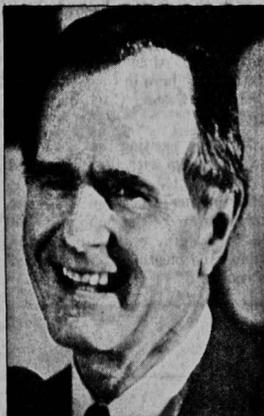

"In all the time since the creation of the deposit insurance, savers have not lost one dollar of insured deposits and I am determined that they never will," Bush added.

Under the Bush plan, which must be approved by Congress, the government would sell $50 billion in 30-year bonds as needed over three years to finance the cost of closing or selling about 350 failed institutions. That's in addition to the $40 billion pledged last year by regulators to rescue and prop up 223 institutions.

Budget Director Richard Darman said higher insurance premiums from the savings and loan industry would pay part of the interest on the bonds, but that tax money would also be needed. Taxpayer money would also be needed to meet last year's commitments by regulators, he said.

Darman estimated the cost to taxpayers at $1.9 billion in 1990, $28.1 billion during the first five years and $39.9 billion over 10 years. Over the 30-year life of the plan, the public would shoulder about 54 percent of the burden, he said.

The banks and savings and loans likely would try to pass on at least a portion of their costs to consumers, possibly in the form of lower interest rates on savings accounts.

"I would hope that wouldn't happen, but there's no guaranteeing what the institutions will do," Bush said. "... Nothing is without pain when you come to solve a problem of this magnitude."

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady said competition from money market mutual funds and other investments would prevent S&Ls from passing on much of the cost of higher premiums. He acknowledged that some banks and S&Ls may get into trouble.

Specifically, Bush proposed:

- Increasing the insurance premium paid by banks from the current 83 cents per $1,000 of deposits to $1.20 in 1990 and to $1.50 after that. The premium for S&Ls would be raised from $2.08 now to $2.30 from 1991 through 1994, dropping to $1.80 after that. Both S&L and bank premiums could be lowered as their insurance funds are brought to full strength.

- An administrative merger of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which insures commercial banks, and the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp., which backs S&L deposits. The staffs of the agency would be combined, but the moneys in their respective funds would not be mixed. The new deposit insurance agency would retain the name of the FDIC. It would be controlled by a board composed of the current three-member FDIC board, plus two additional members.

- Regulatory changes, including steps to reduce the type of risky investments that got the industry into difficulty, and an expanded role for the Treasury Department in supervising S&Ls.

- Requiring S&L owners to put up more of their own money. By June 1, 1991, capital requirements would be 6 percent, the same as banks and double the current S&L requirement.

- Placing insolvent savings and loan institutions under the control of the new deposit insurance agency. A separate three-member board would oversee spending on the sick S&Ls. It would be composed of the secretary of the Treasury, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and the head of the General Accounting Office.

- Increasing Justice Department funds by $50 million for investigation of wrongdoing within the industry. Maximum civil money penalties against S&Ls and banks would be raised to $1 million a day and criminal penalties against executives would go as high as 20 years in prison. Regulators would get the authority to pay rewards to informants.

The UI Center for Laser Science and Engineering is currently under construction north of the Union along the Iowa River. The facility is scheduled for completion in early 1991 at a cost of $25.1 million.

Laser Center fate remains a mystery

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

Lost in a cloud of academic and legislative mystery, the fate of the UI Center for Laser Science and Engineering may only be known to those who can use the force.

While there is no doubt the facility, well into its first phase of construction, will be built, there is a great deal of concern among legislators as to what form the fiercely promoted project will eventually take.

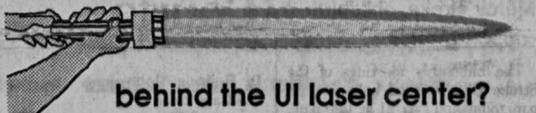

In 1986, the year the laser concept first took shape, then-UI president James Freedman envisioned it as the gateway to "world leadership in an emerging area of 21st century science."

Along with the optimistic rhetoric came a few tangible promises. Three world-renowned professors would join the center, and the new industry would create almost 12,000 jobs for Iowa residents.

Two years and three endowed professors later, many legislators are wishing they had given the proposal more time and forethought.

"I am disappointed in the way in which the president and the governor presented the proposal," said Rep. Jack Hatch, D-Des behind the UI laser center?

Moines. "The impression President Freedman gave us was that three professors had promised to come, and a great window of opportunity would be passing us by if we didn't act immediately."

Hatch, House floor manager for the laser proposal, nonetheless denies the Legislature was deceived into passing the legislation.

"Deceived implies that we were blind to what was happening," he said. "We were not blind. That's why it took four days to pass in the Senate and four weeks in the House. I helped to slow it down."

Hatch said he told Freedman to soften the "unrealistic aspects" of the laser package, such as the promise of 12,000 jobs, but was thwarted then by a lack of information that could refute the former UI president's claim.

"Everything I've read points to the fact that the 12,000 jobs was a shot in the dark," he said. "I heard from people in the university that they took this number from a national figure in Newsweek and multiplied it by two percent for the population of Iowa. By no means was this a scientific calculation."

Laser center Director William Stwalley defended Freedman, saying the number was only meant to be a rough estimate, not a fixed amount.

"That was widely reported as a guess, and we always considered it a guess," Stwalley said. "It may be 1,200 jobs, it may be 21,000 jobs. It depends on what kind of impact the facility has."

Referring to the alleged claim that three endowed professors had promised to come to the UI, Stwalley said legislators could have been

Speaker promises pay vote

WASHINGTON (AP)—Speaker of the House Jim Wright caved in Monday to opponents of a 51 percent congressional pay raise, conceding "the majority has spoken" in demanding a vote that will likely keep senators and representatives from getting any increase.

Wright had planned to let the raise take effect Wednesday, then have the House vote the next day to scale it back to 30 percent.

On Monday, however, after opponents won a dramatic vote to keep the issue alive on the House floor, he relented and said the chamber will vote Tuesday.

"The majority will rule," he said, promising a vote that "will be plain, ... pretty damn simple."

One leading opponent of the raise, consumer advocate Ralph Nader, said Wright's capitulation showed he had realized "that the power of the people is greater than the power of his tyranny in (trying to) close down the House of Representatives until the members got their salary increase."

The speaker gave no indication whether the vote would also repeal raises for federal judges and top executive branch officials. Members of Congress would see their annual salaries jump from $89,500 to $135,000 under the proposal.

Kitty Dukakis begins treatment in alcohol rehabilitation facility

BOSTON (AP)—Kitty Dukakis, the wife of Gov. Michael Dukakis, is being treated for alcohol problems triggered by her husband's loss to George Bush in the 1988 presidential election, the governor said Monday.

Dukakis was not known to be dependent on alcohol until the governor's statement, but she has had a history of addiction to diet pills. She entered a Minnesota treatment center in 1982, where she said she conquered her dependency.

"Until shortly after Election Day on Nov. 8, Kitty had never had a problem with alcohol," Dukakis said in a statement.

He said that since the presidential campaign Kitty Dukakis, 52, used alcohol "in excessive quantities ... on a limited number of occasions while at home."

"As she has now discovered, whether it comes in a bottle or is solid, if you are chemically dependent you are chemically dependent," Dukakis said at a news

Cambus: Better late than never

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Through rain, snow, sleet and hail — Cambus' 120 employees do their best to never fail.

The 17 Cambuses serving the UI community offer free transportation across campus, but during the snow season, students must sometimes sacrifice punctuality for a warm ride to classes.

The recent snow storm has made Cambus routes run slightly behind schedule, but there had been no Cambus-related accidents as of Monday night.

"People can help us by not doing what they usually do, which is step out in front of traffic," said Cambus dispatcher Brian Brosbaho, a UI senior. "These buses can't stop on a dime, especially in this weather."

Cambus drivers annually transport more than 3 million people through rain, sleet and snow. The 40 new drivers hired in the fall semester are now getting their first experience driving fully loaded, 30,000-pound Cambuses through the snow.

Cambus coordinator Brian McClatchey said winter driving skills, including following vehicles and braking distances, are stressed in the Cambus training manual, but are only really learned with experience. "You just have to get out there and get a feel for it," he said.

Both traffic and lethargic riders getting on and off the 65-passenger buses make it difficult for the drivers to arrive at posted times, McClatchey said.

"It gets hard to keep buses on schedules, but the thing is, cold weather increases the ridership," he said. "In public transportation you'll find you have a lot of foul weather friends."

People are much more appreciative

CAC lobbying brings nursing loan forgiveness to Legislature

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Just over a year ago, the concept of forgiving the student loan debts of nursing students who chose to stay and practice in Iowa was just something being kicked around by two members of the Collegiate Associations Council.

But today, because of the research and lobbying of the CAC, that concept has become a bill that will be voted on during the current Iowa Legislature.

Mike Reck and Maureen Edwards, two former CAC presidents, first discussed the idea of a loan repayment program in the fall of 1987.

"Mike Reck and I asked the CAC to look into different professions that might benefit most from a loan forgiveness program," Edwards said. "Nursing was one of the professions that's really experiencing a shortage in the state."

Members of CAC then addressed their idea to Rep. Mary Neuhauser, D-Iowa City, who Edwards said "really got the ball rolling" by drafting nursing debt-repayment legislation.

Neuhauser said she "is now waiting for the bill to come down from being drafted" and will file the bill as soon as her draft request is filled. Sen. Al Sturgeon, D-Sioux City, has drafted a similar bill that will be filed in the Senate.

Neuhauser's bill "is going to be a debt-repayment program. The state will not actually make loans, but would repay the debt as long as a person each year filed a statement saying he or she was employed in the state as a nurse or occupational therapist. That's the crux of the bill," she said.

"With this legislation, Iowa nursing students who settle and work in Iowa will have a portion of their loans paid for as long as they're living and working in the state," said Edwards, who is currently a member of the State Relations Committee. "Staying and living in Iowa is the main constraint."

Edwards said that in addition to curbing the "brain drain" of students leaving the state after graduation, she hoped that a nursing loan-repayment policy would help meet the state's increasing health-care needs.

"Iowa's aging population means there's going to be a larger call for health care," she said.

Furthermore, Edwards said a major concern of the CAC at the time it researched the idea was to encourage healthcare workers to fulfill the need for them in rural areas of Iowa.

"There's a real shortage of healthcare workers in rural areas, and it's evident in the number of people who have to travel a long way to Iowa City for adequate health care," Edwards said.

Edwards and Neuhauser said they don't expect strong opposition to the nursing repayment bill.

"I haven't heard any (opposition). But of course it's a little early to tell since the bill hasn't even been filed," Neuhauser said.

"All the details haven't been worked out yet, but the important thing is that this is going to happen, and this is an idea that began right here in the CAC," said Chris Anderson, CAC executive associate.

"It's very exciting that CAC last year came up with this idea," said CAC President Gordon Fischer. "It's another way the CAC has helped to make the public accessible to the university, while at the same time meeting a critical need of the state."

An Iowa City man was charged Saturday with third-degree sexual abuse and assault with the intent to commit sexual abuse without injury for alleged incidents in late November or early December and late January involving a 16-year-old girl, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Marion Edwin Jones, 54, 4 NC Towncrest Trailer Court, was charged with third-degree sexual abuse for an incident two or three months ago in which he allegedly fondled the victim and forced her to lie down with him without clothes on, according to court records.

Jones was charged with assault with the intent to commit sexual abuse for a late January incident in which he allegedly grabbed and fondled the victim's buttocks. The victim told police she feared further sexual abuse and yelled for help. Someone interceded so she was able to get away from the defendant, according to court records.

Bail was set at $21,000 plus a 15 percent surcharge. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 14, according to court records.

and malicious prosecution for allegedly giving a false name to police on two occasions when he was stopped for a traffic violation and did not have identification, according to Johnson County District Court records.

David Allen Bruns, 38, 2 NC Towncrest Trailer Court, allegedly gave a false name in October and did not pay the traffic ticket. The man whose name he had used was contacted and told that if he did not pay the ticket his license would be suspended. Bruns was contacted last month by the Iowa City Police Department, but allegedly failed to go to the station to discuss the incident, according to court records.

In the October incident Bruns was charged with preventing apprehension and obstructing prosecution, according to court records.

Brun was stopped for a traffic violation Sunday and allegedly did not have identification with him and gave police the same false name. He allegedly admitted to police after they investigated what his real name was, according to court records.

Brun was released from custody on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 21, according to court records.

Asian students hail New Year

Celebration of traditional dance, food, song awaits Americans

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Dancing, music and an abundance of food will greet people who participate in the Chinese New Year celebrations on campus this week. UI Asian students are combining their efforts for the first time to bring the traditional Chinese festivities to Union Friday night.

"The main purpose for this event is for the American people," said Chi-Hsien Yu, a UI graduate student. "We want to diffuse the Chinese culture among the American people."

More than 600 tickets have been sold for the celebration that will feature homemade Chinese cuisine and entertainment.

The UI Office of International Education and Services (OIES), Malaysian Student Society, Vietnamese Student Association and Chinese Student Association are sponsoring the event.

Students from Hong Kong, Vietnam, Singapore, Malaysia and Japan are also involved in the event.

"It's the first time that the different groups have gotten together like this and tried to make a show not only for Chinese but for Americans as well," said Julie Misa, a graduate assistant at OIES. "It's just a real taste of Chinese culture with different countries," she said.

The Chinese New Year is based on the lunar calendar, and each year is named for an animal symbol. The current year is "The Year of the Snake."

The Chinese New Year celebration also features dancing, music and storytelling. All the performances will be in English to allow the greatest number of people to understand them.

New Year's songs, a lion dance, an umbrella dance and a Mongolian chopsticks dance will be among the 13 different programs to take place following the dinner. Mainland China's Er-Dong Hu, a UI graduate student in dance, will also perform.

Lions and dragons symbolize power in China, and it is also believed that they can scare off disease and evils. A dragon suspended in the air on stilts is a tradition at New Year's street dances.

"Traditionally, we use a dragon; but the dragon we use is about 200 feet long and not suitable for a stage performance," said Patrick Goh, a UI senior.

He added, "Usually back home in Singapore, or in other Asian countries, the traditional New Year's songs would be played in the air like Christmas songs are here. It builds the spirit."

Chinese families traditionally celebrate the new year for seven days. The seventh day is for human beings — families eat special foods, exchange gifts and share good luck wishes. "It's just like a Christmas celebration. Christmas has been celebrated all over," said Lirong Liu, a UI student. "The whole thing is to let all people share the happiness of the Chinese New Year."

Liu said volunteers will prepare a number of homestyle dishes including curry beef, green onion chicken and Chinese dumplings. The dumplings and sweet rice cakes are not served in American restaurants, he said.

"It's the kind of dumpling that has been eaten for quite a long time. Tradition says it's been prepared for 1,200 years, but I've never seen it in Iowa City," he said.

The traditional "Golden Dumpling" is a wheat-based noodle wrapped in pork or beef and not available in the United States.

"They haven't been out in the Chinese restaurants overseas," he said, "so I hope people will come out and give these items a try."

City Council debates funding for Emergency Housing plan

By Paige Bierma
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City Council discussion over the approval of the proposed fiscal year 1990 human services budget Monday night led to a debate over funding the Emergency Housing Project and the larger question of what role government should play in funding human service agencies.

While the council approved the budget — which was prepared by the Iowa City Human Service Agency Funding Committee and allocates $217,820 to 11 Iowa City human service agencies — they voted 4-3 not to fund the Emergency Housing Project, 331 N. Gilbert St., which had requested $1,800 from the city.

"It's not the money," said Mayor John McDonald who voted against funding the EHP. "It's a request to become one of the agencies we fund. Once we have them, we'll keep them." Councilor Susan Horowitz disagreed.

"If we don't put any money in (EHP), we essentially will not be funding Iowa City's only homeless shelter," said Horowitz. "I can't imagine the impact if a program like this didn't exist."

The homeless shelter receives some federal grant money and is supported by 13 area churches but is not one of the agencies regularly funded by the city or county. United Way, a private organization that solicits funds from private citizens for human services, gave EHP $3,000 last year.

"Independent fund-raising strategies (like United Way's) say to me that we're not really funding (human service agencies) at the level they need," Horowitz said.

Since federal dollars for human service agencies have been decreasing over the years, it's the city's responsibility to pick up the slack, Horowitz said.

"I don't expect the government to do it all," Councilor William Ambrisco said. "I believe in volunteerism," he added, citing volunteer organizations like United Way.

Those agencies funded most in the budget include United Action for Youth, the Elderly Services Agency, Mayor's Youth Employment, Big Brothers/Big Sisters, and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program.

The human services budget is prepared in conjunction with United Way and the Johnson County Board of Supervisors who will discuss their budgets today.

Final decisions on the budget will not be made until after a public hearing on the city's entire budget scheduled for Feb. 28.

Legislators crack down on fake IDs

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa Senate moved Monday to outlaw the possession or manufacture of fake driver's licenses.

The move is aimed at people under age 21 who use the licenses to buy alcohol. Current Iowa law prohibits the altering of state-issued driver's licenses but does not address false licenses that have been made from scratch.

"There seems to be quite a few of these floating around," said Sen. Donald Gettings, D-Ottumwa, who was floor manager of the bill that won 50-0 approval and now goes to the House.

Under the bill, anyone convicted of possessing a fake driver's license would be guilty of a simple misdemeanor, punishable by up to 30 days in jail and a $100 fine. Conviction of making such a license would be a serious misdemeanor.

Unaccountable injuries

In Saturday night's match against Missouri, Iowa wrestler Doug Streicher jumped two weight classes to fill a spot emptied by injury. Despite his best efforts, he lost.

But Doug was not the only victim of injury. Certainly the wrestler he replaced also lost. And wasn't the basketball team recently lauding a player back from injury? And weren't many of the weak performances of Hawkeye football this past season attributed to missing players?

Injury is a reality of sport, especially at the level many UI teams play. Nonetheless, the rate of injury on Iowa teams this year has been deplorable. And the blame is not being placed where it certainly lies: on the coaches.

FACT: Coaches are paid to win. Not so the players, who are, one hopes, working toward an Iowa diploma, and who play for free. Their security as athletes depends entirely on their coaches, who they therefore obey at all cost. The coaches' security, on the other hand, hinges on wins, losses and ties.

If the NCAA truly wishes to protect college athletes, it should develop regulations that require coaches to maintain low injury rates. In the meantime, Iowa should establish a pay scale for coaches that takes injury rates into account. Any coach who respects his players would find such actions no threat.

A product of society

With another pointless parole hearing set for Wednesday, California mass murderer Charles Manson is in the news this week, giving Americans a renewed opportunity to think about what a terrible person he is.

He is a terrible person — a racist, violent, hate-filled animal. And, like most killers Manson is a product of our society, and more specifically, our worthless prison system.

At the time he was convicted and sentenced for the Tate and LaBianca murders, Manson had already spent half of his life incarcerated. The product of a broken home, he got into minor trouble as a young teenager and from there his crimes became more and more serious, and were followed by short stays in prison.

And what did Charles Manson learn in jail? Well, he learned a useful trade, of course. No, not carpentry or plumbing — he learned crime, from the masters. If you want to take a novice criminal and turn him into a successful thief or murderer, sentence him to prison. It works every time.

In Vincent Bugliosi's chronicle of the Manson story, Helter Skelter, Manson the anti-hero tells the trial court that he is a reflection of a society devoid of compassion, particularly for its youth. He was educated and cared for by criminals all his life. Then he began to care for the young runaways and teenage malcontents he found lost and alone in Los Angeles.

He taught those youths to kill for him, and for that Manson again went to prison. But there is something to think about in what he said about those kids and himself. He took them in because nobody else wanted them — not their parents, not society. Like Manson they had been cast aside at a young age. Together they struck back against the society that had shoved them away.

Two decades after the senseless murders Americans still see Charles Manson and those who followed him as twisted lunatics. But consider that American society produced those lunatics, and as Bugliosi warned in Helter Skelter, there are plenty more where they came from. And in our ineffective prisons, they're learning all of Manson's tricks.

Iowa landfill proposal

The Iowa Legislature is considering a plan that would reduce the amount of waste discarded in Iowa landfills. Key components of the proposal include recycling programs, fees imposed on automobile tires and plastic beverage containers that cannot be refilled, a ban on plastic foam products by 1990, and a ban on allowing tires, oil and lead acid batteries in Iowa landfills by July 1, 1990. Also, yard waste such as leaves and clippings could not be dumped in landfills after Jan. 1, 1991, unless it had been separated from other garbage to allow composting.

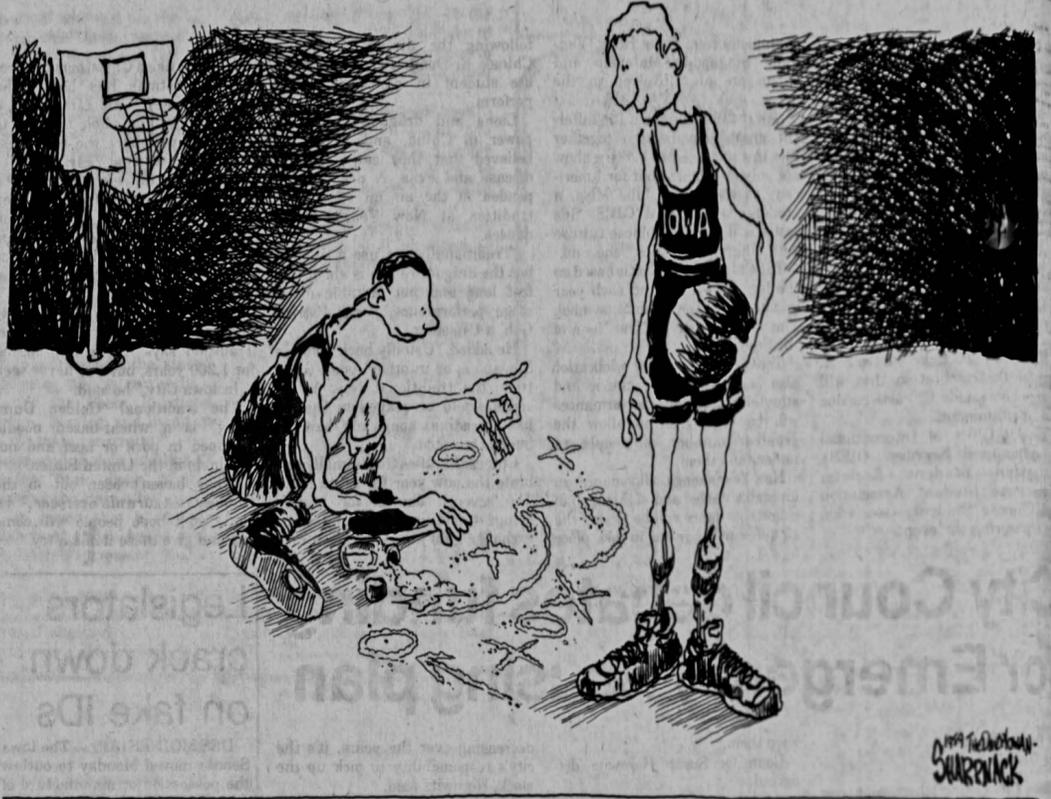

If successful, the reforms would reduce the amount of waste dumped in Iowa landfills by 25 percent by 1994 and 50 percent by the year 2000.

If passed by the Iowa Legislature, Iowans should do their best to meet the goals and comply with the new regulations. For too long, our consume-and-dispose society has naively assumed that waste disappeared when the garbage truck pulled away from the curb. It doesn't — and we're running out of places to put it.

One could hope for a positive and receptive reaction from the Iowa public if the proposal becomes law. Iowans and people everywhere should realize that the problem of consumer waste in our society will not just go away. By enacting these proposals, the Iowa Legislature has an opportunity to show courage and foresightedness in addressing an issue which affects the future of our state and the world.

British bury wounds of World War II

LONDON, England
The Chrysanthemum Throne became vacant on Jan. 7 when Emperor Hirohito succumbed to the cancer that had been gnawing his insides away.

In his 62 year reign, the Emperor saw many disasters and triumphs — the great financial crash of 1929, Japan's military expansion, World War II and the Japanese surrender, and its subsequent rise as an economic power.

It was Hirohito's role in World War II that caused the British to agonize even before the Emperor was dead: Should a member of the royal family represent Britain at the funeral? Indeed, who should represent Britain?

In this constitutional monarchy, decisions of whether a royal should attend a state funeral are taken by Buckingham Palace in consultation with 10 Downing Street. If a decision to attend is taken, the Queen chooses which member of her family will attend.

The problem in this case was that Japan has perpetrated many atrocities on British prisoners-of-war during World War II in the Emperor's name. Most of the war veterans and the public old enough to remember, did. On the other hand, Japan was a power Britain needed to have good relations with. Finally, it was decided that the Queen-consort, Philip, Duke of Edinburgh, would represent Britain at the funeral along with Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe. There has been the expected public outcry.

Was Hirohito really the horrid villain he is made out to be, or just a puppet buffeted around by forces he could not control? What was the extent of his complicity in Japan's war crimes?

Vishwas Gaitonde

Hirohito certainly sat on meetings of the Cabinet and the War Council, and he headed the Supreme War Council that met at the imperial palace. But after the Japanese surrender, these records and other official documents were burned. The odd ones that surface suddenly from some forgotten pigeonhole are quietly suppressed.

Now, Edward Behr (author of The Last Emperor), who researched Hirohito for two years, has come out with a documentary, "Hirohito — Behind the Myth". Among other things, Behr's piece will show that Hirohito knew about Japan's planned attack on Pearl Harbor a month in advance, knew about the massacre of thousands of Chinese, was delighted at Japan's conquest of Java and sent congratulations to Hitler. The documentary, to be televised by the BBC (British Broadcasting Company) on Jan. 24, is sure to escalate the hard feelings.

But it must not be forgotten that the Allies themselves chose not to indict Hirohito in a Nuremberg style war trial. They settled for the Emperor to publicly renounce his divinity and become a constitutional monarch. President Harry Truman was not in favor of an indictment, and the British government told Parliament in a written statement: "It was not the atomic bomb which caused the Japanese to surrender, it was the Emperor's rescript ordering them to do so. Without that, we should have had a costly invasion. ... If we were to indict the Emperor, we should immediately be faced with 70,000,000 hostile Japanese."

The Emperor was further rehabilitated when he toured Europe in 1971 and the United States in 1975. So why attempt to send a strong message now by having the royal family boycott the funeral? The Japanese prisoner-of-war camps must have been a truly horrifying experience for their inmates. But don't the Japanese themselves have a grouse or two against the Allies? What about Hiroshima and Nagasaki where hundreds of innocents were snuffed out, and hundreds more left to rot away with radiation cancer? Didn't the British Empire have its share of villainies? Think of the Jallianwallah Bagh carnage so vividly depicted in the movie "Ghandi".

We can all start pointing fingers at each other this way and there will be no end to it. How much better to look to the future. The Japanese have called the era that commenced with the new Emperor's reign Heisei (attained peace). That is a message in itself.

The choice of Prince Philip is a good one. He was in active naval service in the Pacific during the World War II. The Japanese culture is heavy on symbols. And the man who once fought them now coming in peace to the funeral of his erstwhile enemy is a symbolic gesture indeed.

It's good that Prince Philip is going to Tokyo.

Where are the Congressional heroes?

Where is Cicero, Edmund Burke, or Daniel Webster when you need him? Unless there's a hero on Capitol Hill today, congressional and executive office holders will receive a 50 percent — or $46,000 — raise tomorrow. And though both of our senators led the Senate to a (negative) vote on the issue last week, Iowa City's Congressman Dave Nagle remains content to watch the raise take effect without debate in the House. Today's the last consequential day that a call to your congressman might change his mind.

A week ago Nagle's staff explained to me on the phone, "If it comes to a vote, he'll vote against the pay increase." Yesterday, evidently frightened by rising national indignation, Nagle's position had been refined: "If it comes to a vote, he'll vote against it. If it doesn't come to a vote and it passes, he'll accept a 4 percent COLA (cost of living adjustment) and donate the rest to charity."

What a guy. Like his colleagues who receive honoraria which surpass the limits of decency, Nagle is prepared to contribute what will evidently be excess income to charities — charities inevitably here in his home district. Now while the third district has many deserving organizations, its constituents would probably prefer to choose the amounts and recipients of their charitable contributions personally. Starting tomorrow, Nagle will make more of the choices, and at the same time begin strengthening his reelection bid by looking like Mr. Altruism.

A friend recently told me that he was essentially unconcerned with the upcoming congressional raise because it would represent but a drop in the bucket that is our federal budget deficit. In terms of numbers, he's right, but I'm concerned with the rhetorical leadership (or lack thereof) involved in the pay hike. Here we have a House of Representatives that debates whether the minimum wage should be raised, but provides its own members with a massive raise silently.

Here we have representatives who are telling the country to tighten its belt, to prepare to have its social security benefits taxed, its Medicaid curtailed, etc., but who are not content with their current annual income — an income which would put any wage-earning American in the top 1 percent of persons who earn their living by the hour.

We've heard the arguments for the pay increase (though not on the House floor): Top federal salaries have been gutted by inflation, and the raise will coincide with the banning of honoraria from interest groups. What we don't hear much about is that congressional pay has been increased four times already this decade. In 1980, congressional salaries stood at $60,662; today they're $500 short of $90,000.

As for eliminating fees for speaking to interest groups, such legislation would not affect outside income stemming from stock transactions, rental property (Rep. Silvio Conte owns five homes in Washington, D.C.), or other sources that are common fare for representatives. The Washington Post recently found that 70 of 100 senators and 250 of 435 House members had annual incomes of at least $135,000 without honoraria. Thus, sacrificing the controversial honoraria need not coincide with a salary increase.

Our national economy, despite its strengths, teeters on the precipice of disaster. High-ranking government officials should share in the sacrifices that average Americans are about to make so our economy can retrench on firmer ground. Make a telephone call today. Tell your congressman he's going to have to sacrifice first.

Branstad defends school-aid plan as 'rising above partisan politics'

DES MOINES (AP) — Gov. Terry Branstad said Monday he is not concerned that his school-aid plan is drawing more support from Democratic legislators than the governor's fellow Republicans.

"I've said and I will consistently say, 'My goal is to provide the best-quality education we can for the state,' and I cannot please one caucus in the House without displeasing the other caucus," Branstad said at his weekly news conference.

"My goal isn't to get involved in that. My goal instead is to say, 'Let's rise above partisan politics. Let's look at the best interests and the long-range interests of the education of the kids of our state.'"

Branstad was responding to questions about Republican criticism of his school-aid plan.

Last week, House Minority Leader Delwyn Stromer, R-Garner, offered his own school-aid plan. The formula for distributing state funds to school districts is due to expire, and the Legislature must address the issue this year.

Branstad's plan is almost identical to one approved by the state Department of Education's board of directors and has been well-received by many Democrats, who control both the House and Senate.

Stromer and some Republicans say the plan would require property tax increases in some school districts that have not suffered enrollment declines in recent years. Stromer said Branstad's plan would continue to benefit school districts whose declining enrollments have been cushioned by state aid for "phantom students."

Under Stromer's plan, budgets of those districts would grow more slowly than budgets in districts who are spending less per pupil because they do not benefit from phantom students.

Branstad said that plan would be "devastating" to some districts. He said his plan allows property taxes to allow districts to address any inequity.

Branstad said he is confident his plan will receive legislative approval with little change.

"Sure, there's been some criticism from people who only saw a small part of it, but as they see the whole thing and as they get to understand it, I think it's going to generate strong support from the people of this state who the legislators represent," he said.

misled by "subtleties" in Freedman's language. "I have a copy of Freedman (making the promise) on videotape," he said. "He didn't say the three scientists would come if the building was built. He said they would not come if the laser center was not built. There's a difference."

No matter what is found in Freedman's "subtleties," the fact remains that three years later, legislators are taking a much more pragmatic attitude toward the project.

"I think the universities were dealing with us in good faith," said Senate Majority Leader Bill Hutchins, D-Audubon. "I just think we should stop dragging this issue out and work with what we have."

Hutchins urged the members of the House not to "let their own individual political egos prevent them from doing what's best for the universities."

State Board of Regents President Marvin Pomerantz agrees with Hutchins. "What we ought to do is coalesce and support it, because it's a real fact — it's here," Pomerantz said. "The debate about what the intent of the university president or the governor might have been seems to me to be superfluous."

But it is not bleak for the laser facility. After the loss of the three endowed professor candidates early in the project's development, the laser facility received a ray of hope this September when world-renowned laser scientist Arthur Swirl accepted one of the endowed positions. Already, Swirl has received $1.3 million in grants.

Another hopeful sign is the open and active attempt of UI President Hunter Rawlings to reverse the policies of his predecessor.

Hatch said he met with Rawlings last weekend and believes the president is doing his best to ensure a smooth flow of information between the UI and the Legislature.

"He would not present a project like the laser facility the way President Freedman did," Hatch said. "He knows what the Legislature wants."

Raise

The raises, recommended by a presidential commission, had been supported by President George Bush and by former President Ronald Reagan. The commission, formed in 1967, meets every four years to recommend pay levels.

A House vote will require coordination with the Senate, which voted 95-5 for a more complicated rejection measure last Thursday that included a plan to roll back the increase for Congress and the executive branch officials.

Wright said he has been in touch with Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell, D-Maine, on a common approach that would be needed to send legislation rescinding the raise to Bush.

Both houses must approve resolutions rejecting the plan to stop it.

The turnaround came after pay raise opponents mustered a 238-88 majority against a House Democratic leadership motion to adjourn.

"The majority has spoken, and the majority will speak emphatically," Wright said afterward.

The chairman of the House Democratic Caucus, Rep. Bill Gray, D-Pa., predicted there would be "no pay raise, no change" in the lawmakers' salary. Gray also said he doubted the House would move to ban speaking fees and other honoraria — a plan favored by Wright in return for the raise.

Gray said members feared a vote to end Monday's debate and adjourn "was going to be interpreted as a vote on the pay raise."

He said any vote to increase lawmakers' salary now would fail. Even "if it's a vote on 4 percent, it ain't going to pass," Gray added.

"This pay raise is dead," said Rep. Thomas Tauke, R-Iowa and an architect of the opposition strategy.

Tauke, however, said he expects Congress to take up the issue later, along with a review of honoraria, often paid to members by special interests seeking to influence legislation.

Besides the raise for members of Congress, the presidential commission proposed:

- Increasing the president's pay from $200,000 to $350,000.

of the bus drivers who make it possible to avoid long hikes through the bitter cold, one driver said.

New drivers and cold weather ridership often translate into late arrival times along the Cambus routes. "Most all our buses have been down, have been behind schedule at some time today," Brosbaho said.

Most routes will run about 10 minutes behind posted schedules because of the poor street conditions and slow traffic during the inclement weather, Brosbaho said.

"The only reason (passengers) would understand why you were late is if they drove around where themselves," said Dennis Bruns, a Cambus dispatcher.

The addition of 15 new larger buses next year may allow the Cambus system to transport more people on schedule during inclement weather, McClatchey said.

Cambus will take bids for the new bus contracts in March, and the buses should be in use by next December, which will increase the capacity to 85 passengers, he said.

Dukakis, who does not smoke and rarely drinks even a glass of wine, said his wife had entered the Edgehill Newport facility in Newport, R.I., on Sunday and will stay there about a month.

"She recognizes it. It was her decision to go into treatment."

Dukakis said, adding that he and their children supported her choice.

"It is a disease from which you never recover; you're always recovering," he said, calling her alcohol problem another manifestation of her underlying chemical dependency.

Dukakis said in July 1987, early in her husband's presidential campaign, that she had recovered five years earlier from a 26-year addiction to mild amphetamines she began taking as a teen-ager to control her weight.

She won praise for her candor and became an active campaigner.

Investigator finds misuse and fraud of Navajo funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate investigator said Monday that Navajo chairman Peter MacDonald received favors from two old friends who sold a 491,000-acre ranch to the tribe for $8 million more than they had paid for it hours earlier.

Eugene Twardowicz, an investigator for the Senate Select Committee on Indian Affairs' special committee looking into fraud and mismanagement in Indian programs and on reservations, told the panel that the favors included a leased BMW automobile and a $25,000 loan.

"This was a major fraud on the Navajo people," he said of the deal, which has long been under fire by critics and is the subject of a federal grand jury investigation in Phoenix, Ariz.

The chairman's son also told the committee that he, his father and one of the principals in the deal had planned a cover-up that would make it appear he — and not his father — had sought the alleged favors. A Senate aide said such an agreement would be illegal.

A Navajo official at the hearing said the tribe's purchase of the land was "a normal real estate transaction," but refused to comment on whether the alleged favors for MacDonald spurred the sale.

Twardowicz presented the committee with documents showing the purchasers of the land, both long-time friends of MacDonald, had incurred expenses in 1987 including the loan to the chairman, a $4,000 down payment for the leased car and two $900 monthly installments for the automobile.

The two friends, Byron Brown and K. Tom Tracy, purchased the 491,000-acre Big Boquillas ranch in northern Arizona for $26.2 million in July 1987 from the Tenneco West Co. Brown also received a $750,000 commission from Tenneco. The two men then sold the land to the Navajo tribe for $33.4 million — either the same day or a day or two later, according to Twardowicz.

Twardowicz said that based on his investigation of the finances of Brown and Tracy, he believed the men could not have afforded to buy the land from Tenneco unless they knew they would soon sell it to the tribe.

"They had to know they could flip — when I say flip, I mean resell it — for a much higher amount, which they did," said Twardowicz.

Brown received 59 percent of the sale's profits and Tracy got 41 percent, according to a copy of the agreement between the two men that Twardowicz gave the committee.

The deal netted the two men about $5 million and $3 million respectively, Twardowicz said.

The investigator told the committee that Brown paid for a November 1986 trip to Hawaii that MacDonald took with his family, shortly after he was re-elected chairman of the nation's largest

Dennis DeConcini

Indian tribe.

Twardowicz also said Brown signed a one-year, $5,500-per-month consulting contract with MacDonald's son, Peter MacDonald.

That deal, the investigator told the committee, "basically says nothing, except the services to be supplied are very unique."

The younger MacDonald told the panel that he, his father and Brown met early last year to concoct a cover-up in which they agreed that they would claim the younger MacDonald had sought the $25,000 loan and the use of the BMW.

The chairman's 33-year-old son, who was subpoenaed to appear and testified under immunity, said that allowing it to appear that his father had sought the money and the car "looked bad" because Brown was involved in the Boquillas deal.

After the session, a Senate investigator who asked to not be named said such a cover-up would be illegal and could be construed as planning to commit perjury, obstruction of justice and obstruction of a congressional investigation.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a committee member, said the land deal "appears to this member as a questionable, if not fraudulent, transaction."

Another panel member, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said, "In essence, the Navajo people paid $8 million more than they had to, assuming they wanted the property in the first place."

The committee launched its hearings last week, following reports of alleged fraud in The Arizona Republic.

The panel has come under criticism by Indians for aiming its probe at accusations against Navajo leaders rather than problems within the Bureau of Indian Affairs and other government agencies.

Richie Nez, the senior MacDonald's chief of staff who was attending the hearing, told reporters afterward that "this was a normal real estate transaction."

Iran plans conditional diplomacy

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran will use diplomacy to export its Islamic revolution, Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati said Monday, but he appeared unwilling to use that persuasion on Tehran's biggest foes, Washington and Iraq.

Iran will hold direct peace talks with Iraq "soon," but they will make no progress unless Iraqi troops withdraw from Iranian territory, Velayati told a news conference.

He also said better relations with the United States are possible only if Washington changes its hostile posture toward Iran's revolution.

"We have a concept, and we are going to continue the policy to export the revolution," said Velayati. "But this doesn't mean we're going to export the revolution with a gun."

"You're trying to make other people in the world to be Western-oriented," he told scores of foreign reporters in Tehran for 10th anniversary celebrations of the revolution. "We're going to do the same on the basis of our Islamic beliefs and concepts," he said.

Iran has been restoring relations with Western countries and its gulf neighbors in a new open door policy aimed at ending a decade of self-imposed isolation.

"Except for the Palestine-occupying regime (Israel) and the racist South African regime, and precluding American sabotage, we desire good relations with other countries of the world," Velayati said.

The Tehran hierarchy is deeply divided over restoring links with the United States, severed in 1979.

Tehran's so-called pragmatists have united, however, to make it clear Iran has backed off the militant export of its fundamentalist revolution since the Aug. 20 U.N.-sponsored cease-fire in Iran's eight-year war with Iraq.

Velayati said peace talks with Iraq were effectively deadlocked, and Baghdad was making no effort to get them going again.

"If Iraq adopts a stubborn attitude and refuses to retreat, the talks will get nowhere," he said.

He gave no date for resuming the talks, deadlocked since last November over the issue of troop withdrawals.

Both Velayati and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz are due in New York this week for talks with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar that could bring the two face-to-face.

Simmons goes on trial for 14 deaths

CLARKSVILLE, Ark. (AP) — A man accused of killing 14 relatives in a Christmastime rampage went on trial Monday for the slayings, even though he has said he is ready to die for his convictions of two other murders.

Two of the 89 potential jurors were excused during preliminary questioning Monday. After that, individual questioning began to select a panel for the trial of R. Gene Simmons.

A homemaker who cares for five children and a 76-year-old retired civilian employee of the Air Force were the first two people selected Monday as jurors.

Earlier Monday, Circuit Court Judge John Patterson denied a motion to let the jury decide whether the deaths of Simmons' relatives were part of the same criminal episode in which two people were killed in Russellville on Dec. 28, 1987. Simmons, 48, was convicted May 12 for those slayings and sentenced to death. He told Patterson he was ready to die and did not want his sentence appealed.

The state indicated it would call 20 witnesses in the current trial. The defense indicated it would call three.

Simmons' first trial was moved to Ozark because of publicity in Russellville, and the second trial was moved to Clarksville for the same reason. Patterson addressed that issue when he asked the potential jurors, "Is there anybody who has not heard anything about this case?"

Nobody raised their hand.

Patterson told the jury that he realized that "the court cannot make you just wipe things out of your mind and forget it," but that verdicts must be based upon a higher quality of evidence than what is sometimes reported by the media.

Rodriguez denies drug link

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — Gen. Andres Rodriguez, who seized power in a violent coup last week, denied links with the drug traffic and announced Monday that elections will be held May 1, with only communists excluded.

Four cronies of ousted President Alfredo Stroessner, who ruled Paraguay for nearly 35 years until the coup, were accused of using public funds and graft to obtain "luxurious mansions, expensive apartments abroad and sumptuous automobiles."

Replicers asked the general about casualties during eight hours of fighting Thursday night and early Friday that ousted Stroessner.

"Believe me, total casualties — dead plus wounded — do not exceed 50," Rodriguez replied. Earlier estimates by embassies and civilian witnesses put the number of dead alone at nearly 300, but no official figures have been released.

Rodriguez also said Congress has been dissolved and that the new president would take office immediately upon election. Some opposition leaders said they didn't have enough time to prepare for the election.

Stroessner was given asylum in neighboring Brazil and was staying in Itumbiara, a remote city 270 miles southeast of Brasilia. He is living in a house owned by the government power company, which operates a dam on the nearby Paranaiba River.

At the first presidential news conference Paraguayans could remember, Rodriguez said rumors of his involvement with the drug trade "were spread by people trying to defame me."

"I detest drugs," he told reporters let into his office in small groups.

"I swear as a Catholic and as a family man; I swear on my children, I have no connections with drugs."

Paraguay has become a way station for cocaine produced in neighboring Bolivia. Foreign diplomats, academics and media reports have linked Rodriguez with traffickers, but no proof has been presented and no charges have been filed.

Asked whether he would cooperate with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, he said Paraguay "will cooperate with all foreign governments and agencies, including the United States, and the more help we get the better. We will fight together."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said U.S. relations with Paraguay will depend on the actions of the government on creating democracy, respecting human rights and suppressing narcotics trafficking and cultivation. "We will be watching closely the extent to which the provisional government allows opposition parties to campaign and the media to broadcast the positions of the candidates and their parties," he said.

Rodriguez, a 65-year-old cavalry general, said Stroessner "was not a dictator."

Bush adviser waives job, $10 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush defended the ethical conduct of high-ranking officials in his administration Monday, but said he might have to tighten standards and make "our people bend over backwards" so they avoid even the appearance of conflict of interest.

Bush's statement came as C. Boyden Gray, his longtime counsel and chief ethics adviser, reversed an earlier decision and resigned as chairman of a multimillion-dollar communications company.

The president also defended former Sen. John Tower of Texas, the nominee for secretary of defense, against new allegations of womanizing and drinking, as well as other matters.

He said some of the allegations about Tower have been examined by the FBI and found groundless. However, Bush said, "If somebody comes up with facts, I hope I'm not narrow-minded enough that I wouldn't take another look."

Bush said that all of Gray's actions had been reviewed and approved by the Office of Government Ethics, as he served for eight years as Bush's counsel during his vice presidency.

However, Bush said, "We are in a new era on these matters. Matters that might have been approved and looked at one way, may have a different perception today. . . . So, I think it might be different now. I have to approach it differently as president."

Bush said that when it comes to the appearance of conflict of interest, "I'd like our people to bend over backwards . . . as far as we possibly can."

On the other hand, Bush said he didn't want to go overboard.

Spurred by publicity about his finances, Gray announced he was stepping down as chairman of the family-owned Summit Communications Group, Inc., and putting his personal assets — estimated at $10 million — into a blind trust.

Bush calls for new Latin policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush said Monday that there is a chance for "a new spirit of cooperation" between the Soviet Union and the United States in solving Central American problems.

Bush was asked at a news conference if he foresees a deal with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to resolve the region's problems, which include a superpower dispute over the leftist-ruled Sandinista government.

The Soviets help supply the Sandinistas while the United States provides aid to the anti-Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Bush said he wouldn't make a deal on Contra aid, but added, "I can see a possibility of cooperation in Central America."

The Soviets don't have "substantive interests in that part of the world, certainly none that rival ours, so I would like to think they would understand that," Bush said. "And there are so many areas where we could demonstrate a new spirit of cooperation, and this would clearly be one of them."

The United States has an "unshakable" commitment to democracy, freedom and free elections in the five-nation region, he said.

Bush hasn't spelled out his Central American policies, particularly the Contra aid question and the fighting in neighboring El Salvador between the U.S.-backed government and leftist rebels.

Bush said he is reviewing the policy of his predecessor Ronald Reagan, which involved unwavering support for military aid to the Contras.

But officials have said no Contra aid will be sought in the near future, and the administration is willing to support regional efforts toward a diplomatic solution to the Contra war.

Bush and Secretary of State James Baker haven't yet named a new assistant secretary of state for Latin America.

Baker has settled on Bernard Aronson, a Democrat who helped the Reagan administration win Contra aid, but the appointment hasn't been announced, said the sources.

The previous holder of the post, Elliott Abrams, discussed Nicaragua during several meetings with Soviet officials, but no substantive action ever came of the meetings.

Israel asks U.S. to stop talking to PLO due to 'broken pledge'

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel formally asked the United States on Monday to stop talking to the PLO, and top leaders began a campaign to convince the U.S. administration that PLO chairman Yasir Arafat broke a pledge to end terrorism.

An Israeli diplomat delivered the request to the State Department's Bureau of Near East Affairs, sources in Washington said on condition of anonymity.

Israeli leaders cited the case of five Palestinian guerrillas killed Saturday night by Israeli soldiers in south Lebanon, near the Israeli border. Israel's embassy in Washington submitted information "identifying details and additional facts linking the PLO to that squad," Israel Television said.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said "we're looking into" whether the encounter Saturday violated Arafat's renunciation of terrorism. Other officials said the United States was seeking additional information.

In Jerusalem, Foreign Minister Moshe Arens accused the Palestine Liberation Organization of breaking a promise to refrain from terror

The Daily Iowan/Rod Faccio and gave the latest clash as evidence.

In a speech to American Jewish leaders, he said Israel was urging the United States to reconsider its dialogue with the PLO on grounds the conditions for such contact had been "clearly and unequivocally violated."

Angry families charge Pan Am with neglect

NEW YORK (AP) — Angry relatives of Flight 103 victims accused the federal government and Pan American World Airways on Monday of negligence before the bombing that killed 270 people and of insensitivity afterward.

Thirty relatives, some with photographs of their lost loved ones pinned to their clothes, chiefly demanded an accounting of why the government had not made public a terrorist threat that such a flight would be bombed.

The group also demanded the resignation of Alan McArthur, chief of the Federal Aviation Administration, saying he had failed to maintain security, and asked that Congress investigate the circumstances of the Pan Am attack.

But in an outpouring of emotion and frustration, the relatives voiced a litany of other complaints, ranging from their inability to recover their loved ones' personal effects to the handling of the victims' remains.

Food relief needed for 500,000 in Sudan

NAIROBI, Kenya — More than 500,000 people will need emergency food relief in the southern Sudan this year, but a U.N. agency is having trouble delivering shipments, officials said Monday.

The World Food Program said it is facing "tremendous logistical problems in moving desperately needed relief food to the southern provinces" of the war-torn country due to bad roads and lack of proper equipment.

The agency, the food aid arm of the United Nations, said its first overland shipment of food in more than four months recently arrived in the town of Kaya near the Ugandan border. It consisted of 220 tons of corn aboard 16 trucks.

The agency suspended ground shipments late last year after 11 drivers were killed when Sudanese rebels attacked a truck convoy in September.

In a statement issued in Italy, the agency said more than 150,000 refugees have flocked to camps in Juba, about 90 miles north of Kaya. It said they need 2,000 tons of food monthly, but that an even greater amount must be delivered and stockpiled before roads are made impassable by the start of the rainy season in late April or early May.

Nazi-hunters request change in British law

LONDON — Residents of Britain who are suspected of being Nazi war criminals could be tried quickly if the government enacted simple changes in the law, a parliamentary committee said Monday.

Nazi-hunters have accused Britain of delaying action on fugitive Nazis and their collaborators, including a Lithuanian-born man the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles says was involved in killing thousands of Jews.

The War Crimes Group, with members from all parties, said British laws could be amended within six months to give courts jurisdiction over war crimes committed abroad by people who were not British citizens at the time.

Marcos' condition critical but stable

HONOLULU — Exiled Philippine President Ferdinand Marcos remained in critical but stable condition Monday, after marked improvement over the weekend, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

The 71-year-old Marcos recognized family and friends and was able to respond to simple commands, such as to raise his right hand, said St. Francis Medical Center spokeswoman Norma Kop. Marcos remained in the intensive care unit attached to a respirator to regulate his breathing, Kop said.

"He's still in critical, but he's showing signs of improvement," she said. "He's more alert."

Marcos has been hospitalized since Jan. 15 with pneumonia and bronchial asthma. While in the hospital, he suffered a collapsed lung, which was reinflated, and underwent a tracheotomy to relieve the buildup of fluids in his lungs.

Along with his wife, Imelda, Marcos was indicted last October on federal racketeering charges accusing him of plundering his homeland's economy and stashing much of the money in the United States.

First woman appointed to Harvard board

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. — An attorney who recommended 15 other women to serve on Harvard College's governing board said Monday she doesn't know who offered the nomination that made her the first female member in 352 years.

"I'm really in awe," Judith Richards Hope said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles. "It's such an august body, I really was surprised."

Hope, 48, is a federal appellate judge nominee whose name was mentioned last year as a possible successor to Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Harvard's Board of Overseers on Sunday unanimously approved Hope's appointment to the Presidents and Fellows of Harvard. That panel, whose members serve without pay for unlimited terms, makes day-to-day decisions on educational, financial and institutional policies.

Lawyers argue Calif. women's pay suppressed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lawyers for 60,000 to 70,000 female state employees go to trial Tuesday arguing that California has intentionally held down the pay of its female workers for more than 60 years.

The California State Employees Association hopes its lawsuit can scale a "comparable worth" barrier that a federal appeals court planted in 1985 in the path of women's groups and unions seeking equal pay for jobs of comparable value.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the state of Washington could follow prevailing market wages in paying less to workers in female-dominated jobs. The opinion by Judge Anthony Kennedy, now a Supreme Court justice, said a decision to pay unequal market wages did not constitute the type of intentional discrimination needed for such a lawsuit.

That ruling was disastrous for advocates of comparable worth, the doctrine that public jobs requiring equal skill, effort and responsibility must receive equal pay under federal civil rights laws. Government officials invariably defend disparate salaries by pointing to market rates.

But CSEA, which sued California in 1984 on behalf of past and present female employees, claims it has found the evidence it needed to survive the appeals court ruling: a policy of sex-based salary setting in state government dating back to 1931.

"The state has never relied primarily on prevailing rates in setting salaries," the union said in court papers.

"Wage discrimination on the basis of sex was the state's standard operating procedure during the early 1930s, and . . . the effects of such discrimination carry over to the present day."

Mindful of the appeals court ruling, which is binding in California, CSEA is trying to avoid a "comparable worth" label for the case.

Lawyers for the state deny that salaries were ever based on gender, and say any taint caused by policies of the early 1930s was eliminated when state civil service job classifications were changed in 1937-38.

So far the union's strategy has succeeded in keeping the case in court. U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel has ruled that the claims of intentional discrimination in salary setting, if proved, would be grounds for awarding damages to women in female-dominated jobs as far back as 1977.

But Patel, a former lawyer for the National Organization for Women, has indicated skepticism about CSEA's claims that it can prove a link between the alleged discrimination of the early 1930s and later pay policies.

Solidarity talks open in Poland

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The government's top delegate to historic talks with the opposition opened the first session Monday by offering to legalize Solidarity if the union agrees to economic and political reforms.

Interior Minister Gen. Czeslaw Kiszczak, seated opposite Solidarity leader Lech Walesa, called for the opposition to participate in Poland's government.

Fifty-seven delegates from the government, the opposition and the Roman Catholic Church gathered for the talks at the ornate Council of Ministers Palace.

The delegates met for about three hours and issued a short communique that said talks by three "working groups" would resume Wednesday. One group will consider economic and social policies, another political reforms and the third the issue of allowing more than one union to exist.

"We were brought together here by the sense of responsibility for the future of our motherland. We are all responsible for the Poland that is to be," Kiszczak told the participants, the state-run news agency PAP reported.

"We must accept the philosophy of necessity alongside that of the gradual character of transformations," he said. "As it goes for trade union pluralism, there is no question if, but the point is how." "We demand Solidarity. We have the right to it," Walesa said in his speech, PAP reported.

Walesa blamed Poland's economic and political crisis on a lack of freedoms, but said he sensed the government was ready for change, state-run TV reported.

"We know the country is in ruins. But it has not been ruined by gnomes, but by the system of carrying out power which has been depriving people of their rights and wasting the fruits of their labor," Walesa said.

"The time of social and political monopoly is ending. We need a restructuring that will turn the one-party state into a state of the nation and the society," he said.

Known as the round table, the talks are the first between Solidarity and the government since the union was suppressed by the martial-law crackdown in December 1981.

"If we work out at the round table . . . a confirmed consensus on the idea of non-confrontational elections as well as support for planned political and economic reforms, there will be an immediate possibility" to allow more than one trade union to exist at a given factory, Kiszczak said.

Kiszczak called for changes in electoral laws and a new parliament that would "represent a coalition of forces."

Solidarity has expressed willingness to see the opposition enter parliament. But it is reluctant to endorse opposition participation in a Cabinet that, despite reform, is likely to be dominated by the Communist Party.

Kiszczak, a member of the ruling Politburo, said if Solidarity were legalized, it "cannot return to old ruts, becoming the source of anarchy and tensions."

NHL tabs Gretzky

MONTREAL (AP) — Wayne Gretzky of the Los Angeles Kings, who had nine points in three games, was named the NHL Player of the Week Monday for the period ending Feb. 5.

Gretzky scored a goal and three assists in an 8-5 loss against the Calgary Flames on Jan. 31. It was the 12th time in his career that Gretzky had collected four points in a game.

Two nights later, he scored his 38th goal of the season in a 6-6 tie with the New Jersey Devils, then had his first three-goal game of the season Saturday in a 5-3 victory over the Buffalo Sabres. It was his first hat trick of the 1988-89 season.

Gretzky is the starting center on the Campbell Conference team in Tuesday night's All-Star Game in Edmonton.

He currently has a streak of eight games with at least one point, and he has 20 points in that stretch.

Center Steve Yzerman of the Detroit Red Wings and goalie Wendel Clark also were considered for the award.

German surprises field, wins downhill title

BEAVER CREEK, Colo. (AP) — To the surprise of everyone, most notably himself, unheralded Hansjoerg Tauscher rocketed to the gold medal Monday in the weather-delayed men's downhill at the World Alpine Ski Championships.

The 21-year-old West German, whose best finish in three seasons on the World Cup circuit was fifth, had a winning time of 2 minutes 10.39 seconds, besting race favorite Peter Mueller of Switzerland by 19-hundredths of a second.

Another Swiss, Karl Alpiger, won the bronze, another nine-hundredths back.

Standing in the finish area, enduring an agonizing wait as one skier after another failed to better his time, Tauscher said, "I can't believe this. I don't think I'll believe it until the last racer has come down."

Tauscher admitted he had modest goals entering Monday's featured event of the championships.

"I am very surprised with this victory because I was thinking at best to finish among the top 15," he said. "I never thought I could beat the kings of downhill Peter Mueller and Pirmin Zurbriggen, so this is like a dream come true."

Because of new snow on the course and colder temperatures than in training, selection of the proper skis and wax formula was vital, and Tauscher's team got it right.

"I must say my skis were perfect for today's conditions," he said. Mueller, the defending world champion in downhill, agreed with Tauscher about the importance of equipment.

"It's always difficult to get things completely right in new skiing conditions," he said. "Our people had a hard time selecting our skis, but I can't blame anything on the skis today. They ran well. I skied to the limit. I lost some time on the jumps, especially off Willy's Face where I flew too far. But I'm happy with the silver medal. I do not consider it a defeat."

Davis, Balboni win arbitration cases

NEW YORK (AP) — Glenn Davis and Steve Balboni won their salary arbitration cases on Monday, leaving players and owners tied at 2-2 in cases decided so far.

Arbitrator Stephen Goldberg awarded Davis a salary of $1.085 million instead of the $875,000 offered by the Houston Astros. Goldberg awarded Balboni $800,000 instead of the $500,000 offered by the Seattle Mariners.

Davis, a first baseman, batted .271 last season with 30 homers and 99 runs batted in and made $340,000. Balboni, also a first baseman, hit .251 in 1988 with 21 homers and 61 RBI and made $350,000.

Meanwhile, three players scheduled for hearings settled their cases, reducing the remaining players in arbitration to 34.

Danny Tartabull, the Kansas City Royals outfielder, tripled his salary, agreeing to a one-year contract for $1.035 million. He made $330,000 in 1988.

Ivan Calderon, who was scheduled for a hearing on Monday, settled on a one-year contract with the Chicago White Sox for $320,000, a raise of $180,000. The outfielder can earn an additional $60,000 in performance bonuses.

Outfielder Milt Thompson agreed to a one-year contract with the St. Louis Cardinals for $455,000, a raise of $215,000. He can earn an additional $25,000 in performance bonuses.

Hall of Famer Ringo retires from coaching

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) — Hall of Fame member Jim Ringo, offensive coordinator and offensive line coach with the Buffalo Bills since 1985, announced he was retiring from football Monday.

Ringo, 56, made his announcement at a Rich Stadium press conference and said he would remain in the Buffalo area, residing in Orchard Park.

Ringo played 11 seasons with the Green Bay Packers and four seasons with the Philadelphia Eagles. He was elected to the pro football Hall of Fame in 1981 after retiring as eight-time All-Pro selection and setting a league endurance record of 182 consecutive games.

The Orangeburg, N.J., native played his college ball at Syracuse.

Morrison seemed OK before death

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — South Carolina Coach Joe Morrison's vital signs were normal moments before he collapsed in a shower after suffering a massive heart attack, according to the doctor who examined the coach.

Dr. Robert Peele, an orthopedic consultant for the Gamecock football team, was called to examine Morrison by Gamecock trainer Terry Lewis after Morrison had trouble cooling down after playing racquetball at Williams-Brice Stadium.

"I came over and looked at his heart and checked his blood pressure, and he didn't have any complaints of chest pains," Peele said Monday night. "They all were normal."

Peele said he examined Morrison about an hour after the coach finished his weekly racquetball games with defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn, attorney Ed Holler and area businessman Ken Wheat.

"Whatever hit him, it hit him massively and irrevocably," Peele said. "I don't think he ever knew what hit him."

college level was to excel at just one event."

After rejoining the Iowa squad in 1987, Wozniak was granted a partial scholarship for his efforts.

He finished eleventh on the still rings at the NCAA meet, tied for third in the Big Ten Championship and scored a school record 9.8 four times during the season.

However, with all the accolades Wozniak received in the 1987 season, the most important thing he walked away with was a lesson in confidence.

"I learned a very valuable lesson," Wozniak said.

"I felt that I might have put too much pressure on myself this year. I set goals of finishing in the top three at the Big Ten's and in the top six at nationals. Due to my added pressure, I started getting nervous before I performed."

"This year, I haven't set any goals for myself. I just want to make Nationals and hit my routine. Then we'll see what happens."

Even though Wozniak quit putting added personal pressure on himself, there was no escaping the pressure of being a specialist.

"You only have one chance to hit your routine," Dunn said. "It's not like an all-arounder who can move on to the next event. The pressure from being a specialist is that if you don't hit your set, you have to wait a week to redeem yourself."

"If you're a specialist," Wozniak said, "you have to

Curry casts curious spell

By Tom Hunter
The Daily Iowan

"Curious Music" is no ordinary radio show. It's a bubbling cauldron of sound; a radio stew stocked with exotic cuts of music; a weekly dollop of interview and dash of variety. Tuesdays at 11 p.m. on KRUI (89.7 FM) the wizard of this cauldron mixes up his potions and casts his spell for three hours.

Russ Curry is the curious man behind "Curious Music." He is the creator of a radio show whose tentacles have spread from Santa Cruz to Pittsburgh. Curry's brainchild was a lifetime in the making, but its on-air birth came on KRUI in June of 1988.

Since its inception, Curry has gone to epic lengths in pursuit of interviews. This quest led him and his production assistant Lloyd Dunn on a road trip to Toronto, Canada, to interview performer John Oswald. KRUI paid for the gas, but Curry himself did the rest, from driving to getting the interview.

"What I rely on is my phone savvy," he said. "I have a 30-second spiel I use." Curry's talents have landed unpaid interviews with Philip Glass, Brian Eno, and The Kronos Quartet.

Composer Philip Blackburn, a resident of Iowa City, has appeared several times on "Curious Music," and commends Curry's role in the local music scene.

"I think what Russ does and the enthusiasm he brings to it are just what we need," Blackburn said. "His enthusiasm comes across on the air." According to Blackburn, Curry provides a valuable link between the artists and the listeners, a link provided by no other source.

"For a 100-watt station and a peanutsy radio show with absolutely no budget, I'm pretty happy," said Curry. His dedication has led him to forgo eating for a week in order to buy a reel of tape. Curry handles the on-air editing and voice-overs, as well as printing promotional fliers and taping them up in Cambuses.

But Curry does not work in isolation. He has two production assistants, Mike Bartelme and Lloyd Dunn, but Curry is the prime mover. As Igor only fetched the brains, it took a Dr. Frankenstein to stitch them into the monster. "Curious Music" shows the influence of a single person, acting alone, using only willpower and drive to create.

"I'm like everybody else, I'm a frustrated composer," he said. "I used to think that I wasn't doing anything creative." He is an active person, with a tendency to speed up in conversation when he gets excited. "There are times when I can almost step out of myself and see that there's this guy with this fervent drive." Curry funds his program from his own pocket, so it's clear he does it for love, not money.

As Curry explains, "For me to be happy, I have to do this."

Fans need different perspective

The big story in Iowa this week is the revelation of drug use by three Hawkeye basketball players and subsequent treatment paid for by the athletic department. The incident is being both praised and attacked by the fans and press, but perhaps what it should be ignored.

The story is an interesting one, but the issue really is one of drug use by three college students. They aren't the only three Iowa students to use drugs in 1988, but the saga of these three unidentified men is being played in the media like the death of a president.

College athletics is plagued with problems. Drug abuse and the corruption that comes with big revenues arguably top the list, but the core of all the troubles is the unbelievable emphasis Americans place on sports. And that overemphasis is no more evident than in Iowa.

Sports stars are heroes in America. In Iowa, they're gods.

Kids growing up in Iowa idolize Hawkeye athletes. They imitate them on the playgrounds and dream about them at night. This is considered a healthy situation by most sports fans, but when carried to obsession, as it is in Iowa, it becomes damaging.

I once talked to an elementary school class in northwest Iowa about the importance of academics, and the need to take school seriously. After I delivered a short speech designed to ignite the latent Einstein in each student, the boys in the class began telling me how wrong I was.

"I'm going to be a professional football player," one told me.

I thought about his older brother, who was a great high school linebacker, but left college after one day.

I tried to explain to him that the chances of becoming a professional football player are incredibly slim. He wasn't buying it. He KNEW he could do it. I wonder what he thinks about the recent drug use revelations.

That's a major concern of sports fans these days. These athletes have to be held to a higher standard, because they're role models for our children. Okay, fine, but I would submit to the people of this state that James Van Allen is a better role model than Ed Horton.

We tell our kids with our words and actions that the talents valued in this society are the ability to put a ball in a hole or drive another person into the ground. The excitement of sports compared to academics makes such a situation somewhat unavoidable, but do we have to be so obsessive?

We are more concerned about Roy Marble's outside jumper than whether Dan Quayle is equipped to handle the presidency. We spend more time thinking about Matt Bullard's knee than Terry Branstad's budget. And more Iowans recognize Hayden Fry than Mikhail Gorbachev.

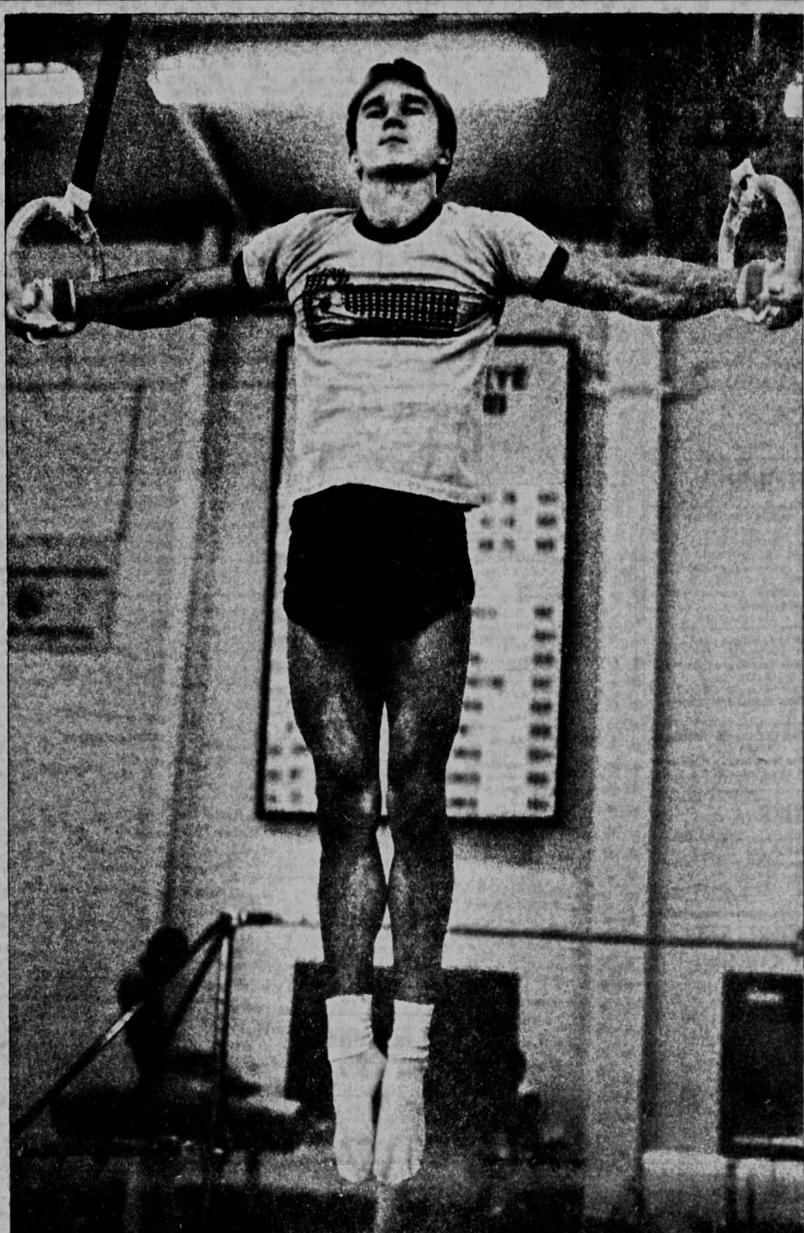

The truth is, if Hawkeye fans can put this drug incident in perspective — which is highly unlikely — they will realize that in the overall scheme of things, who used drugs and what drugs they used is not important. It just doesn't matter.

For the three individuals, their families and friends, it is important. Drug abuse can ruin a life. But for Iowans in general, what's the difference?

Perhaps the one thing this incident can teach us is that Hawkeye athletes are not god-like. They're complicated, diverse individuals, with some good qualities, some bad. They all have uncommon athletic talent, but aside from that they're nothing special.

Maybe we should tell that to our kids. But what's the use — they wouldn't listen.

Iowa still rings specialist Paul Wozniak, a fifth-year senior from Elmhurst, Ill., works out on the rings during practice in the North Gym of the Field House Monday afternoon. Wozniak, who walked on the team as a freshman, is currently ranked third nationally in the still rings.

Former walk-on Wozniak within reach of NCAA title

 The Daily Iowan

Kentucky Fried Chicken and Iowa gymnast Paul Wozniak share the same motto: do only one thing, and do it very well.

Wozniak, the lone senior on Iowa's squad, is an all-America candidate and currently ranked third in the nation on still rings.

"Paul has got all the tools to win the national title," Coach Tom Dunn said. "He's got everything needed to win. He can beat everyone in the country, but it depends on the given day and the given time. He's got to do his best routine."

Success didn't come easily for Wozniak, however, as he received no recruiting offers coming out of York High School in Elmhurst, Ill.

But Wozniak set a goal for himself — he wanted to walk on the Iowa gymnastics team.

"I really liked the Iowa campus," Wozniak said, "and I wanted to follow several of my high school teammates who were on the team."

"But the first day after I had walked on, I got injured. It was a very disappointing setback."

Dunn also recalls Wozniak's initial visit to the gymnastics room.

"The first thing Paul did," Dunn said, "was to attempt a cross. He immediately hurt himself. My first impression was that he was strong, but it was kind of stupid of him to try the cross."

"He showed a lot of perseverance. He spent plenty of time trying to clean up his routine. He has good work habits and patience. He had to sit around for a few years waiting for his time to come, but he knew what he had to do in order to compete, and he did it."

"When I returned from the injury," Wozniak said, "things went pretty well. The coaches really helped me improve my routines. They taught me originality — the key to moving to the upper level of gymnastics."

At the conclusion of the 1985-86 season, Wozniak was named Iowa's most improved gymnast. But the following year, hitting high marks in class became tougher than sticking ring routines, and Wozniak red-shirted himself for the season.

"My grades weren't up to my standards," Wozniak said. "School was becoming more competitive, and my grades fell to a 2.25 average. I set my expectations at a 3.00, and until I reached that level again, I wasn't going to compete in gymnastics."

The decision was a sound, rational one. That was same type of common sense which turned Wozniak from an all-around competitor into a still rings specialist.

"My senior year in high school, I began dropping some of the events," Wozniak said. "Most of them, like horizontal bar, were way too dangerous."

"Another reason I became a specialist, was because I realized that the only way I could compete at the

Kentucky sends report on investigation to NCAA

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The University of Kentucky sent the NCAA an eight-volume response Monday to 18 allegations of wrongdoing after telling trustees that some changes already have been made in the basketball program.

Bernie Vonderheide, a spokesman for the university, said the school would have no comment on the response except to say that it had been mailed.

At the NCAA in Mission, Kan., a secretary in the office of David Berst, director of enforcement for the NCAA, said the NCAA would neither confirm nor deny whether it had received any kind of material from a university.

The trustees, who received a private briefing on the reply, expressed full support for President David Roselle's handling of the 10-month internal investigation.

Roselle earlier told the Courier-Journal of Louisville that the response will fall into three categories: allegations the school will deny; those for which it will accept responsibility, and those in which insufficient evidence was found to make a judgment.

University and NCAA officials are expected to meet in early March to see what allegations will be presented to the NCAA's Infractions Committee.

"I hope we're in good shape," Roselle said of the March meeting. "I have a strong urge to reach the end of this matter."

Asked if he was satisfied with the findings in the report, Roselle said: "I'm not satisfied with findings unless it's a clean bill of health. But I'm satisfied with the exemption because the investigation has been conducted."

The NCAA's allegations include charges of illegal payments to recruits, including $1,000 allegedly air-expressed to a recruit's father in California, and a charge that player Eric Manuel cheated on a college entrance exam.

Roselle said he would not comment on any part of the response unless directed to do so by the courts. Two newspapers have asked Fayette Circuit Court to declare the Hawks advance to eighth in poll; 'Cats take No. 1

(AP) — After wins over Northwestern and Illinois, Iowa climbed one spot, to eighth, in the Associated Press basketball poll released Monday.

The Hawkeyes, 17-4 overall and 5-3 in the Big Ten, received 747 points to advance, despite a loss at Indiana early in the week.

Arizona took over the top spot in the poll, the fourth consecutive week a new team has claimed the No. 1 spot. The Wildcats held the top position for six weeks last season.

Arizona jumped from its No. 4 ranking last week after the top three teams — Oklahoma, Illinois and North Carolina — all lost at least one game while the Wildcats were beating California and Washington.

Duke had been No. 1 in the preseason voting and for the first nine polls of the regular season before the Blue Devils suffered three straight losses.

Illinois took over the top spot for the first time in 37 years and held it just one week as the Fighting Illini lost at Minnesota.

Oklahoma, which also jumped from No. 4 to No. 1 when it assumed the top spot, held the post for just last week as the Sooners fell to Oklahoma State on the road.

Arizona, 17-2, received 30 of the 65 first-place votes cast by the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters and 1,226 points to reclaim the No. 1 ranking it held for six weeks in a seven-week period in the middle of last season.

The Wildcats will be put to the test right away as the No. 1 team as they play a Pac-10 conference game at Oregon on Thursday before traveling to Oklahoma for a nationally televised game on Sunday.

Georgetown, 17-2, jumped from sixth to second with 1,180 points, 11 more than Missouri, 20-3, which moved up from fifth. Georgetown, which was second in three polls this season, received 17 first-place

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — George McCloud made two foul shots with five seconds left and No. 12 Florida State held off No. 4 Louisville 81-78 Monday night.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Sherman Douglas scored 28 points and No. 9 Syracuse built a big lead and then held off a furious rally to beat No. 11 Seton Hall 85-79 Monday night, giving the Orangemen their seventh consecutive 20-game winning season.

Stephen Thompson added 23 points as Syracuse, 20-4, won its sixth straight this season and 17th in a row over Seton Hall, 19-4. It also put the Orangemen and Pirates into a tie for second place in the Big East with 6-4 marks, three games behind Georgetown.
