When Iowa City Community Councilors met Thursday night, the Emergency Housing Project talked about $60,000 that was spent on a shelter in downtown Iowa City, which was opened to the public.

However, King said the councilors didn't care how much was spent on the shelter, they just wanted to see a new shelter in place.

"If we don't want to spend anymore money on this, then perhaps we should start looking at other options," said King. See city, page 5A.

In a courtroom setting this afternoon in the Johnson County District Court, 1989-1A, two members of the New Wave Film Society have filed a harassment complaint against the editor of a local newspaper, the Commercial Republic. The charges are the latest in a string of harassment complaints filed by the members of the New Wave Film Society.

James Renander and Andrew Miller filed harassment complaints against the Johnson County District Court today after the court ruled that Renander is not guilty of harassment. The New Wave Film Society is one of the voices on the Pentacrest Mall.

“Before you have that image of New Wavesight being a small group of people who are just looking out for their own interests, the New Wave Film Society is not just a group of people who are interested in the arts, but who are interested in the community as a whole,” said Renander.

Supervisors discuss possible garage sites near Lone Tree

By Lisa Seagle
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors will examine building a maintenance garage in Lone Tree City Park.

At their Tuesday meeting, supervisors heard from a planning consultant, who said the city should consider three possible sites for the proposed garage.

The consultant, Don Bertini, said the city should consider using the site just off the south end of the park, the existing facility or a larger site at the north end of the park.

"There isn't really any one," he said. "It's a matter of finding what works best for Lone Tree."

Bertini said the city should consider the following criteria:

1. Accessibility
2. Aesthetic
3. Future needs
4. Safety
5. Size

Supervisors discussed the sites at the meeting and agreed to visit the park on Thursday to discuss the options with maintenance staff.

The supervisors tentatively set a Jan. 25 meeting to vote on a site for the garage.

"We need to look at a plan and see what would work best," said Supervisor Pat Meade.

Legislature considers giving up 'minimum maintenance' facilities

DES MOINES (AP) - Legislative leaders Thursday looked into a proposal to turn over large chunks of the state park system to local conservation officials.

Instead, they said the legislators will consider creating new state park facilities that aren't strictly conservation-oriented.

"There was some thought they would look at entire sites," said Senate Majority Leader Bill Dix.

House Speaker Bill Med Quad also said the legislators would consider allowing counties to create new state park site in the state park system.

However, he said the only parks that would likely be turned over to local conservation officials would be "minimum maintenance" facilities that aren't used on a regular basis.

Med Quad said the legislators will consider giving up "minimum maintenance" facilities that aren't used on a regular basis.

"There's no one place that would fit perfectly," he said.

Planned riverboat casino called 'sleaze' by critics

Iowa called 'sleaze'

Iowa's governor unveiled plans Thursday for a $250 million riverboat to "capture the fancy of the nation" and help generate $20 million in Iowa. Critics immediately called the boat "sleaze."...Franklin Fried, a San Diego businessman, unveiled his proposed "Iowa Queen" riverboat, described as a posh 1,000-passenger craft that would offer dining, shows, arts and crafts, in a 19th century motif.

Johnson County (SEATS) has begun participating officially in a joint venture with Greyhound and Trailways to provide the county's residents an alternative to interstate bus service. The strategy will probably fail in Washington in connection with the opening of a new transportation center there, and Craig Sorenson of the East Central Iowa (ECICO) Council of Governments.

Iowa, on and on, to Tennessee. Walking Iogan's policy, I support a referendum. Anderson said, "I think it's the most important initiative we've had in years." Anderson added that the CAC has been working on a proposal to improve education in a wide range of ways. "It's a long-term commitment," Anderson said. "We're not going to solve the problem overnight, but we're going to make some progress." Anderson also said that the CAC is planning to hold a referendum on the issue in the near future. The referendum would ask voters to approve funding for the proposed programs.

The CAC is a group of volunteers who work to improve education in Iowa. They have been working on a proposal to improve education in the state for several years. The proposal includes funding for new programs, such as early childhood education, and funding for existing programs, such as special education.

The CAC has been working on the proposal for several years. They have held several meetings and have received input from many people. "We've been working on this for a long time," Anderson said. "We've had many discussions and have heard from many people. We've had some opposition, but we've also had a lot of support." Degrees in prison offer some a way to 'make it'

By Kathleen Goll

The Iowa State Men's Reformatory operates about 8000 full-time inmates, the most of whom are serving sentences of one year or more.

John Stenfors, professor of criminology and some prison leaders believe that educational programs, but to improve their quality of life.

The burning issue centers on continuing education, which is offered to inmates through the University of Iowa's Office of Continuing Education.

The inmates at the Anamosa reformatory receive 400 and 800 credits, which, if completed, can translate to college degree.

Inmates who wish to receive a degree must submit a completed application, which must be currently approved by the prison walls.

If the Palestinian people have been shown to be people, they have a right to vote.

Iowa Legislature to follow Congress’ lead on wages

While self-regulation has its hurdles, Philip Albrecht believes this policy is generally beneficial because it gives the states the flexibility to impose the regulations to fit the needs of their states. "There are a lot of very good strong incentives for self-regulation, but it doesn’t work in all cases," she said. "That’s why we have tried to construct a package that would work in all cases."

"The rules werea discussion, and we have talked extensively in meetings and the House. They have generally held back from the Senate," she said. "We believe this is a very significant move, to a meaningful level."

"It is not just about the wages," she said. "There are many different factors that contribute to the wage problem. We have talked extensively with the business community and the labor community, and we have come to a consensus on this issue."
Episcopalians install first female bishop

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Episcopal Church is installing the first woman bishop, hoping to assuage growing concerns among members that the church is not modern enough.

The church's national convention has voted to ordain the Rev. Katharine Jefferts Schori as bishop of the Diocese of Oregon. The Rev. Schori, 52, is a member of the Board of Overseers of the Episcopal Church and is the first woman to be elected bishop in the United States.

Schori is expected to be consecrated as bishop on May 23 in Portland, Oregon. The ordination will be held at St. Mark's Cathedral and will be attended by bishops from around the world.

The ordination has been met with mixed reactions. Some members of the church have welcomed the move as a step forward in inclusivity, while others have expressed concern that it undermines traditional values.

The Episcopal Church is one of the largest denominations in the United States, with more than 2.1 million members.

Doubts Over Tower's sentence

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., is questioning the sentence of Robert L. Disterhoft, a former White House aide who was convicted of fraud and conspiracy in the Tower case.

Riegle, who chairs the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, is concerned that the sentence is too lenient given the seriousness of the charges.

Disterhoft, 55, was convicted last year of defrauding federal agencies and conspiring to obstruct justice in the Tower case. He was sentenced to 12 months in prison and was ordered to pay $400,000 in restitution.

Riegle said he believed the sentence was too lenient and should have included a longer jail term.

Drug may reinvigorate brain

WASHINGTON (AP) - A drug approved for some terminal patients may also help revive the brains of older people who suffer from memory loss.

The drug, called memantine, is currently used to treat Alzheimer's disease. But a recent study showed that it may also help improve memory in elderly people who do not have Alzheimer's.

Researchers at the University of California, San Francisco, found that memantine can help improve memory in older people who have mild cognitive impairment, a condition that can precede Alzheimer's.

The study, published in the journal Neurology, found that memantine helped improve memory in 50% of the patients who took it, compared to 20% of those who received a placebo.

Dr. Peter J. Voss, a researcher on the study, said the findings are promising and suggest that memantine could be a valuable new treatment for memory loss.

Iraq, Iran foreign ministers will hold direct peace talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) - The first face-to-face meeting of Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati began on Thursday in an effort to break the deadlock in the peace process.

"That's what we agreed to have the position of the peace discussion," said Ali, who met with Velayati on Thursday afternoon.

The two met for the first time in 1986, the year Iran was declared in an effort to break the deadlock in the peace process.

"That is why we agree to have the position of the peace discussion," said Ali, who met with Velayati on Thursday afternoon.

Afron to homeless

By a vote of 4-0 Tuesday, the Iowa City Council denied a request from the Emergency Housing Project for $8,100. The project provides temporary shelter to people who are unable to provide for themselves. When it's 10 degrees below zero, the last thing you want to do is huddle in a tent in front of your favorite grocery store. The money was needed to help the group pay off a $6,000 bank loan so that they can continue to provide food and shelter to the homeless. Keeping these people off the streets is a matter of life and death. The city council's decision is a terrible one.

Eagad! A Communist conspiracy!

A recent issue of Iowa has published an article called "Eagad! A Communist conspiracy!". The article is written by a letter writer who claims that the Soviet Union is plotting to overthrow the American government. The writer cites various sources, including the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal, to support his claims. The article is signed "M. V." and is published in the Iowa City Press-Citizen.

I seemed to have no trouble getting to the running track when I was young. I have always been a runner. When I was in high school, I was the track captain. I have run in many races, and I am proud of my accomplishment. I have run in the Boston Marathon, the New York City Marathon, and the Chicago Marathon. I am very happy to be able to run.

A show of solidarity with South Africans

William Langeveldt

A year ago, February 1989, all the remaining major anti-apartheid organizations in South Africa, including those in the United States, met in the Washington area to strategize for a just society in South Africa free of apartheid and racial prejudice. This month, in solidarity with those whook their lives for freedom and justice in South Africa, we recall the June 9, 1989, world-wide anti-apartheid demonstration in New York City, the largest anti-apartheid demonstration ever held in the United States.

A film series on Southern Africa is being sponsored by the university's student government. A 1960s, African freedom fighter, Joseph Diescho, Namibian Fulbright scholar, will speak about the current state of the Namibian independence movement. Additional speakers will include those who were African-American and who submitted this guest opinion for The Daily Iowan- Iowa City,

Violence of any type against women or children is the most unmanly behavior imaginable. Wright expresses hopes that pay raise bill won't resurface

WASHINGTON (AP) - House Speaker Jim Wright said Thursday that the 115th Congress was the proposed 51 percent pay raise was too big, and that public pressure might force a vote just to see if the raise would pass.

"There was — and remains — a serious split among Democratic and Republican leaders on the pay raise," Wright said. "The issue is really productive." He said that post-mortems are not really productive.

The pay raise bill would give House members increases of about $1,900, or 51 percent, and Senate members increases of about $2,500, or 51 percent. The raise would be effective immediately, and there would be a vote," Wright said. "There was no way that House members could vote for a pay raise when there would not be a vote on the issue."

The raise was approved two weeks ago by the 115th Congress, but Wright said that there would not be a vote on the issue when the 116th Congress meets in January 1999.

The pay raise bill was introduced by Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, and Sen. Mike Enzi, R-Wyo. The bill was introduced on the 115th Congress, but there was no vote on the issue when the 116th Congress meets in January 1999.

Michigan wins in two OT's, 108-107

By Michael Tribble

The Wolverines did it again Thursday night, but it wasn't enough. A 20-point win over Purdue, 108-107, didn't help much when it came to settling the N.C. State lean.

Men's Basketball

The Wolverines had a great chance to win the Big Ten title, but they were unable to do so. They led by 20 points early in the second half, but the Boilermakers came back to tie the game with just over three minutes left.

Wrestling

The Wolverines won three matches in the final, including a 5-2 victory over the Ohio State Buckeyes. They won their 12th straight match, the most in program history.

Illini stop Buckeyes; Indiana stays in first

Iowa will face 'high likelihood' Husker field

Iowa will face 'high likelihood' Husker field

Purdue has been the Big Ten surprise this season, a win streak that would give them sole possession of the conference lead and something to brag about. But the Boilermakers have yet to prove they can do it.

"The game is going to be competitive," freshman guard Gordon Motz said. "In some respects, it will be a good game. Purdue has been playing well and they have a lot of talent."

The Boilermakers have won 13 of their last 14 games and are currently in second place in the Big Ten. They are looking to move closer to the conference championship with a win over Iowa.

"There's a lot of pressure on them," Motz said. "They're going to be hungry to come out and play the game."

The Hawkeyes have won their last three games, including a 91-89 victory over Michigan State on Saturday. They are currently in third place in the Big Ten.

"I think we can win the game," Motz said. "But it's going to be a tough one."

Iowa fans are hoping for a win to get back on track after losing to Purdue last season. Purdue has won the last two meetings between the teams.

"It's going to be a good game," Motz said. "But we've got to be ready to play."

The Boilermakers have the advantage of playing at home, where they have a 13-2 record. The Hawkeyes are 6-6 away from home.

"We've got to play well on the road," Motz said. "But we've got to play well at home, too."

The Boilermakers are looking to continue their winning streak and move closer to the conference championship. The Hawkeyes are looking to get back on track after losing to Purdue last season.

"We've got to focus on ourselves," Motz said. "But we've got to play well on the road."

Chargers hire Henning to rebuild team

BAN DEDO (AP) — Ten Hag, who worked for 14 years in the Atlanta Falcons' front office before becoming coach, said Friday he is ready to take on the challenge of turning around the Falcons.

"It's a great opportunity," Ten Hag said. "I think it's a great challenge. I think it's a great responsibility."

Ten Hag replaces Dan Quinn, who was fired last month after the team finished 4-12. Ten Hag has been with the Falcons since 2005.

The job comes with the expectation of immediate success, and Ten Hag knows the pressure will be intense.

"I think it's a great opportunity," Ten Hag said. "I think it's a great responsibility."

Ten Hag will be the third coach in the franchise's history and the third to take over in the last four years.

Freshman Lisa Johnson also had an outstanding weekend, with a 9.550 on the floor exercise and a 9.175 on the asymmetric bars, which is the second highest score of the season.

Hawkeyes, 3-1-0, will open the meet against Wisconsin on Saturday.

The return of all-American Jeff Bondale, according to DeMarco, who is sidelined with a shoulder injury, will be a real boost to the team.

The Hawkeyes finished second in the New Hampshire Quadrangular with a score of 183.45, and set a school record in the vault at 9.55.

Undergrad Macmillan creates 'big' oratorio

By Tom Hunter

The Daily Iowan

Macmillan - the director of the Hancher Opera Rehearsal Room, the University’s undergraduate opera company, and an opera production assistant at the University's prestigious Opera Workshop - is preparing a production of Dvorak's “American” oratorio, with which she'll have the chance to step out of the hiding. Bob Fosse, Stephen, and all those by the likes of Bob Chappel want to feature Macmillan's voice in something he's taken over during her time at the School of Music. It's a completely sonic experience, two workers, and they don't want to tell us that she's going to do it. The music, an opera, is based on the artists were performed at the Hancher that he's been working on Oklahoma. "Nature Boy," as the conceptual title of the show, and the idea of the show, is the啥 is the topic. The piece is the dancing, movement.

The piece for the David Gordon/Pick Up Company was a big, big oratorio. Macmillan, will refer to the great family of Macmillan, that's not the point. "We don't want any part of the big, big oratorio. We need..." Macmillan said. "It's a completely sonic experience, two workers, and they don't want to tell us that she's going to do it. Rain Man has skill, not soul

By Lucille Peterson

You know you're sick to death of hearing the same old excuses for Tom Cruise in movies. I mean, when can we have Tom Cruise in something where he's not in a limousine? Can't he do it without all that flash and panache? That's what I say.

I mean, I'm not saying he doesn't have talent. He's been good in some films. But let's face it, when you hear over and over about how great Cruise holds his own in this or that film, you start to feel a little sick of it. It's like hearing the same old song all the time.

But there are exceptions. There are a few films where Cruise shines without all the glitz and glamour. I'm thinking of films like Risky Business and Magnolia. In those films, Cruise is able to show his range and his ability to act. He's not just playing the same role over and over.

Rain Man is a film where Cruise really gets to show his talent. He plays a character who is autistic and it's not easy to pull off that kind of performance. Cruise does a wonderful job of making the character real and believable.

Rain Man is a film that really makes me think about the importance of originality in filmmaking. We see so many films that are just copycats of others. But Rain Man is a film that stands out because of its originality and its ability to evoke real emotion from the audience.

Rain Man is a film that I think is worth watching. It's a film that will make you think and make you feel. It's a film that will stay with you long after you leave the theater.
