CACC defends engineering against cuts

Group plans report to regents

By Andy Drymon

In the latest round of a controversy over possible departmental cutbacks, engineering students and faculty gathered this week to express their concerns to the board of regents of the University of Iowa.

The meeting was held in response to a letter from the president of the university, which indicated that some departments, including engineering, might face budget cuts due to a decline in enrollments and funding from outside sources.

The engineering students and faculty expressed their concerns about the potential cutbacks, which they said could have a significant impact on the department and the university as a whole.

They pointed out that the engineering department is a major contributor to the university's research and innovation efforts, and that it plays a critical role in the state's economy.

They also stressed the importance of maintaining a strong engineering program, both for the university's reputation and for the state's future competitiveness.

The board of regents, which will consider the budget proposals in the coming weeks, has said that it will take into account the concerns expressed by the engineering community.

Khomeini rejects Rusudie's apology

In an interview with an Italian newspaper, Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of Iran, rejected an apology issued by British author Salman Rushdie.

In the interview, Khomeini said that Rushdie's apology was not enough and that it was the responsibility of the British government to ensure that Rushdie was punished.

Rushdie was granted asylum in Britain after his novel "The Satanic Verses" sparked controversy when it was published in 1988.

The book was seen as offensive to Muslims, and many Muslim groups and leaders called for its burning and for Rushdie's punishment.

In 1989, Rushdie was awarded a knighthood by Queen Elizabeth II, but his award was rescinded after Iran threatened to execute him for blasphemy.

The issue of Rushdie's apology continues to be a source of tension between Iran and Western countries, and has been a major source of friction in recent years.

Local bookstores remove 'Satanic Verses'

Local bookstores began removing the novel "The Satanic Verses" by Salman Rushdie from their shelves in response to a request from Ayatollah Khomeini, the leader of Iran, who called for the burning of the book.

The novel, which was published in 1988, sparked controversy when it was seen as offensive to Muslims, and has been a major source of tension between Iran and Western countries.

As a result of the controversy, many bookstores have decided to pull the novel from their shelves in order to avoid any further conflict.

Weather

Winter continues to be a factor in the Midwest, with temperatures remaining well below freezing and wind chill factors reaching as low as 30 degrees below zero.

This week, the weather in the Midwest is expected to continue to be cold, with temperatures remaining below freezing for most of the week.

The National Weather Service has issued a winter storm warning for the region, with heavy snow and blizzard conditions expected in some areas.

The warning covers parts of Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio, and is in effect from Monday morning through Tuesday evening.

The warning advises residents to stay indoors and avoid travel if possible, as the heavy snow and blizzard conditions could make driving hazardous.

The weather service also recommends that individuals keep a winter emergency kit at hand, which should include items such as food, water, and warm clothing.
Tauke addresses varied issues, plans clean gubernatorial race

By Mike Graver

Iowa residents are free and fairly uninformed about their candidates for the 1990 election. Yet most of the major candidates are standing and saying nothing. On the Republican side, Rep. Gary Tauke of Ankeny is the only candidate with a decent record to defend. Tauke said he also wants to end the state's mental health crisis.

The Republican candidate for governor, David O. Johnson of Des Moines, is malapropism for Johnson. He has no record to defend and no ideas to defend it with. Johnson is a proponent of the state's mental health crisis.

The Democratic candidate for governor, Tom Harkin of Iowa City, has a decent record to defend. He has a good chance of winning the governor's race. Harkin is an active participant in the state's mental health crisis.

The Republican candidate for U.S. Senate, Richard Lugar of Bloomington, Indiana, is a proponent of the state's mental health crisis. He has a good chance of winning the Senate race.

The Democratic candidate for the Senate, Paul Wellstone of Minnesota, has a decent record to defend. Wellstone is an active participant in the state's mental health crisis.

It's important to vote in these elections, because the candidates have a lot of power. They can make decisions that will affect your life. Your vote is important.

ACHA president addresses students' health, self-esteem

By Debbie Fleming

Students' health consciousness is soaring, and the American College Health Association and its member institutions are looking for ways to extend their message to a younger audience.

"There is a new generation of students that really need to be targeted," said Dr. Richard Keeling, ACHA president and coordinator of health services at the University of Iowa. "The ACHA is trying to develop programs that will impact this generation and prevent the spread of AIDS.

For instance, February is the National HIV/AIDS Awareness Month, and the ACHA is sending packets to universities on the importance of health education and awareness.

In addition, the ACHA is working on public service announcements that will be played in airports to raise awareness about AIDS.

"The ACHA is also looking at developing a national health education program that will target younger audiences," said Keeling.

The ACHA is currently working on a program that will be presented to the American College Health Association's annual meeting in June.

The program will include a presentation on the impact of AIDS on society, a discussion on the role of health education, and a panel discussion on how to effectively communicate messages about AIDS to young people.

"The ACHA is committed to developing programs that will help prevent the spread of AIDS," said Keeling. "We believe that by targeting younger audiences, we can make a difference in the fight against AIDS."

Sirhan, 44, who is on death row in a state prison, admitted to killing Kennedy.

Sirhan, a Jordanian citizen, had been in the United States on a student visa since 1959.
He had been studying at Boston University when he returned to Jordan on a leave of absence.

Sirhan told the judge that he was not responsible for the assassination and that he had been coerced into committing the crime.

Sirhan said he had been told by an Arab nationalist group in Jordan that he should return to the United States and kill Kennedy as a way of expressing his frustration with the United States' support of Israel.

The United States government has denied that it was involved in any way with the assassination.

Sirhan's case has been a subject of controversy and speculation since his conviction. Some people believe that he was unfairly tried and that his guilt is questionable.

Sirhan's prison term is

New group initiates Sri Lankan violence

COLOMBO. Sri Lanka (AP) — A new group calling itself the "Black Cats" announced 20 Sri Lankan villages in the first major violence since election results were announced last week, military officials said Tuesday.

The official said the victims were members of the People's Liberation Front, an ultranationalist Sinhalese group opposing the Sinhalese-dominated government's move to grant limited autonomy to Tamil in the north and east.

The group announced that about 250 villagers had been killed, and 100 more were injured in the violence. The official said that in the capital of north Sri Lanka, hundreds of residents were killed and injured by their Tamil neighbors.

The official identified the group as the "Black Cats," which he said was formed to fight against the Sinhalese-dominated government.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — It may sound like a broken record, but it's the story of a team in the nation's most up-and-down conference: Missouri is good enough to win the conference, but not good enough to win the game.

The Tigers, behind一律 3-pointer with 11:03 left, beat No. 14 Texas Tech 83-75 on Saturday night.

But Missouri (17-5, 8-5 Southeastern Conference) had a 12-point lead with 10 minutes left and Texas Tech (13-9, 4-9) never threatened to get close.

Missouri, which has won five of six, improves to 8-3 in the SEC. Texas Tech, which was coming off a 103-78 loss to Texas, has lost four of five.

"I think we were just better than them tonight," Missouri coach Buzz Williams said. "We played better defense. We were more physical and we shot the ball better.

"I think we dominated them in every phase of the game." Williams said.

Texas Tech coach Bob Knight said, "We were in the game for a little while, but then they started looking down the lane and getting easy baskets and it was over before it really started.

No. 13 Iowa went 3-0 to finish second at Iowa State, winning 15-14, 13-6 and 15-4. No. 11 Oklahoma won 19-15, 19-10 and 22-10.

"It was a good day for us," said Iowa wrestler Jonatan Benjamin, who won his 120-pound match 15-14. "It was a good day for the team and we're looking forward to the NCAA championships next weekend in Iowa City.

"We're just trying to get better every day, and that's what we did today."

Iowa will have to search for another state-of-the-art home this summer, as the University of Minnesota is moving to Minneapolis.

The Hawkeyes will host their final 33 home matches at Carver-Hawkeye Arena when the Minnesota Golden Gophers take the court for the first time at the new Target Center.

"It's going to be easier one of these years, but it's nice to have our home court advantage," said Iowa head coach Tom Brands.

"We've never had a home court advantage in the last two years, but it's nice to have that for the next two years and make a good job," Brand said.

For the past 30 years, the Iowa men’s basketball team has had to beat Iowa State out of the water in their annual meeting. This year, it happened again.

Iowa’s Brian Roberson-Mitchell scored 12 points and 17 rebounds, leading the Hawkeyes to a 63-47 win over the Cyclones at the Hancher Auditorium on Thursday night.

The win marked the 30th anniversary of the Hawkeyes’ first Big Ten Championship, which they won in 1989.

In the game, Iowa faced a tough challenge from Iowa State, which had won the last four meetings between the teams.

Iowa started the game strong, with guard Jordan Bohannon leading the way with 11 points in the first half. Bohannon scored 14 points in total, including four 3-pointers.

In the second half, Iowa continued to dominate, with forward Tyler Cook adding 11 points and 12 rebounds.

Despite the loss, Iowa State head coach Steve Prohm praised his team’s effort.

“Our guys did a good job,” Prohm said. “We played hard and fought to the end.”

The Hawkeyes improved to 17-11 overall and 7-11 in the Big Ten, while the Cyclones fell to 14-14 and 6-12 in conference play.

Iowa faces its next challenge on the road against Nebraska on Saturday. The game is scheduled to tip off at 7:30 p.m. CT.
