CAC defends engineering against cuts

Group plans report to regents

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

In the wake of last week's controversy over possible departmental cutbacks at the UI College of Engineering, several student groups have banded together to prevent what they see as "a very real possibility."

Their fears were sparked by an article in the Des Moines Register last Sunday that quoted late Board of Regents President Mivyn Pomerantz as suggesting possible program cuts at Iowa's three state universities. Pomerantz seemed to suggest that several departments would be cut at the College of Engineering and then consolidated into programs at Iowa State University in Ames.

"I find it very likely that the college will be eliminated with the exception of a few key programs," said Benita Dilley, vice president of the UI Collegiate Association Council. "We perceive it as a very real possibility."

The CAC, under the leadership of Al Beardsley, is in the process of compiling a report to be shown to the regents and the Iowa Legislature. The CAC intends the report to prove the quality of the UI's Engineering College and to defend it from possible cutbacks.

Among other things, the report will show: the UI's engineering school garners 50 percent of outside grants given to the state's universities, with only one-fourth the faculty and undergraduate students of ISU; the UI has four times more graduate students than ISU; and the UI Engineering College earns the most research dollars per faculty member in the Big Ten.

"We're not saying we're better than ISU — we're not going to start a fight," Beardsley said. "We have two nationally renowned colleges of engineering. We should be proud of both of them and not say that one has to go."

Tom Didelot, president of Engineering Student Organizations, said the regents' refusal to listen to such information as found in the CAC report has caused a serious decrease in morale at the college.

"Morale's down quite a bit," Didelot said. "In the past, I have heard that we're not worried about the audit — that we have the numbers behind us. Now the feeling is that we have a serious problem and it's not a problem you can handle with logic."

"The regents say (the proposed changes) will improve higher education in Iowa, but they can't say why," he added.

Engineering professors have expressed similar sentiments. At last week's hearing for the Strategic Planning Committee, UI mechanical engineering professor James Andrews said the lack of faculty input in the regents' decisions has caused him to consider seeking other employment.

"How can I not consider looking around?" Andrews asked last Monday.

In response to Andrews' comments, Robert Hering, dean of the College of Engineering, said he understands the professor's dilemma, but hopes Andrews will wait until the final audit report is filed to make any employment decisions.

"Obviously, persons like professor Andrews feel that the current situation is not one in which he wants to continue his career," Hering said. "I think anybody who dedicates his career to teaching and research would like to see that his efforts are recognized."

Khomeini rejects Rusdie's apology

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini on Sunday rejected the apology of British writer Salman Rushdie and exhorted Moslems around the world to "send him to hell" for his novel "The Satanic Verses."

In a statement issued by the official Islamic Republic News Agency, Khomeini said the "imperialist mass media were falsely alleging that if the author repented, his execution order would be lifted. This is denied, 100 percent."

"Even if Salman Rushdie repents and becomes the most pious man of time it is incumbent on every Moslem (to) employ everything he's got, his life and wealth, to send him to hell," Khomeini was quoted as saying.

Khomeini, patriarch of the Islamic revolution, last week sentenced Rushdie to death for his novel, which Moslems say insults Islam. But Iranian President Ali Khomeini, allied with so-called pragmatists led by parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, sought to defuse the crisis Friday by saying Rushdie's life would be spared if he apologized and repented.

Rushdie, in hiding under the guard of Scotland Yard, issued an apology Saturday.

Khomeini's latest statement appeared to leave no room for a negotiated settlement of the issue, which has put Britain's newly restored relations with Iran in jeopardy.

A bounty of $5.2 million has been put on Rushdie's head by Iranian religious leaders since Khomeini issued the death sentence.

In his message Sunday, Khomeini also called on non-Moslems to help carry out the death sentence against Rushdie.

"If a non-Moslem becomes aware of his whereabouts and has the ability to execute him quicker than a Moslem, it is incumbent on Moslems to pay a reward or a fee in return for this action," the statement said.

Neither Khomeini's statement nor IRNA referred to the president's offer of a reprieve, reflecting a widening rift in the Iranian hierarchy over the Rushdie affair.

In London, a spokesman for the British Foreign Office said: "We heard of this report with great concern. We shall be considering carefully its implications."

"This subject will, of course, be discussed in Brussels by the Foreign Affairs Council" today, when Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe is to raise the issue, the spokesman said. He spoke on condition of anonymity in keeping with British practice.

The 41-year-old Rushdie, born to a Moslem family in India, has not been seen in public since Thursday, two days after Khomeini's first decree.

In his apology issued through an agent, Rushdie said: "As author of 'The Satanic Verses' I recognize that Moslems in many parts of the world are genuinely distressed by the publication of my novel. I profoundly regret the distress that publication has occasioned to sincere followers of Islam."

Moslems say "The Satanic Verses" blasphemes their religion by portraying the prophet Mohammed's wives as prostitutes and suggesting that he wrote the Koran, the holy book of Islam, rather than receiving it directly from God.

"The Satanic Verses" is banned in Iran, India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Egypt and South Africa.

Local bookstores remove 'Satanic Verses'

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

Local demand for Salman Rushdie's novel "The Satanic Verses" continues to be strong, though both Waldenbooks and B. Dalton Bookseller chains pulled the book from their shelves last week.

The B. Dalton bookstore chain ordered its 1,250 nationwide stores to pull the novel Friday.

The Waldenbooks chain ordered the book pulled Thursday after "receiving several threats against our 8,500 national employees," according to a Waldenbooks statement.

Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini has called for the death of Rushdie, the 41-year-old British author who was born into a Moslem family in India. Iranian religious leaders have placed a $5.2 million bounty on Rushdie's head.

The B. Dalton statement said: "Under these extraordinary circumstances, the safety of our employees and patrons must take precedence."

The manager of the Iowa City B. Dalton, Old Capitol Center, said he had been instructed not to expand on the national statement.

Waldenbooks Assistant Manager Missy Schrader said the book sold out from the Sycamore Mall store Wednesday, one day before Waldenbooks' national decree. Before selling out, the store had stocked 15 books in the new fiction display.

"To tell you the truth, we'd never even heard of the book before all this outcry," Schrader said. "I really never paid attention to it and then this started happening. I was surprised when the last copy sold out."

The Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., has a copy available for check out, but it has been checked out since its arrival in January and is now five days overdue. There is a seven-person waiting list for the novel, which, Andrews said, will probably ensure the public library ordering another copy.

"It makes me wonder if the person who has it checked out isn't trying to keep it," librarian Stephanie Andrew said.

The UI Main Library does not currently stock the novel for check out, after the circulating copy disappeared last week. Library officials purchased another copy last week, and the novel is now placed in the rare book room.

Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., continues to stock "The Satanic Verses."

Prairie Lights employee Sunita Reddy said the store received 10 copies of the book last week and they quickly sold out.

She said the store expects at least 30 more books soon, but printed copies have sold out nationwide. More books have to be printed, so it may be one month before the store can

Mibrity group complains CAC violates rights

By Shehnaaz Dorow
The Daily Iowan

The Asian Indian Law Student Association filed a human rights violation complaint against the Collegiate Association Council with the Human Rights Committee Thursday.

AILSA complains with the CAC when they tried to receive funding for an upcoming conference in the Mesquakie Indian Reservation. AILSA requested $2,522 for the conference and received $500.

"We feel that the CAC is singling out minority groups and denying them access to information to acquire funding," said Matt Morrison, AILSA president.

The complaint charges AILSA has not been informed of procedural policy changes, requires funding and that the CAC changed the reasons why AILSA has not received money.

"They keep this the run-around," Morrison said. See Arts/Entertainment, page 5A.

Sack sentenced to prison, probation for low City summer arson cases

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

Twenty-two-year-old Michael Sack was sentenced to more than two years in prison Friday after he was found guilty of setting several fires in Iowa City last summer.

Sack was arrested in 1988, and was charged with several fires shortly after morning. The fires at East College Street and eight nearby vehicles.

Sack pleaded guilty to the fires Dec. 3, 1988.

During the weekend of Dec. 3, 1988, 16 car fires were set.

Iowa City area, including the eight that Sack was charged with starting.

At Friday's sentencing, Sack asked the judge to consider the steps he has made toward recovering from a drug and alcohol dependency when setting the prison term.

District Court Judge Paul Kilburg sentenced Sack to serve a prison term not to exceed two years for third-degree arson in connection to the apartment fire and ordered him to pay $8,055 as restitution for damages caused to the eight vehicles.

Kilburg suspended a five-year sentence for the second-degree arson charge. Sack will serve five years' probation after he is released.

The judge denied Sack's request that he be allowed to complete the spring semester at the University of Northern Iowa and ordered that he report to the Johnson County Jail Feb. 27.

Leon Spies, Sack's attorney, said Saturday that Sack should get probation and there is a possibility he may continue his education while incarcerated.

Sack worked at the men's clothing store Sack's On The Plaza, 130 S. Dubuque St., when the store opened in May 1987. He enrolled at the UI in 1985 and would have graduated this year.

RNC condemns ex-Klansman for trying to legitimize bigotry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican National Committee said it will seek to censure David Duke, the former Ku Klux Klan leader who won a seat in the Louisiana Legislature, saying he is a "charlatan" who does not reflect GOP principles.

"David Duke is not a Republican," RNC Chairman Lee Atwater said in a statement released by the party. "He's a pretender, a charlatan and a political opportunist who is looking for any organization he can find to try to legitimize his views of racial and religious bigotry and intolerance."

In unofficial results Saturday night, Duke narrowly defeated homebuilder John Treen to represent a state House district in Metairie, a suburb of New Orleans. Duke registered with the GOP two days before qualifying to run in the House race. Treen also is a member of the Republican Party.

RNC spokeswoman Leslie Goodman said that if Duke is officially certified the winner, Atwater will call a meeting of the party's executive committee within the next week to consider a motion of censure against Duke.

Engineering Week features lectures

The UI Department of Engineering will sponsor activities each day this week in recognition of National Engineers Week. Events are as follows:

• Today: Glynis A. Hirschberger, professor of engineering at Iowa State University, will talk on "Contemporary Topics in Engineering" at 5:30 p.m. in the Engineering Building, Room 3407. She is currently manager of transmission planning for Northern States Power in Minnesota.

• Tuesday: A student design competition will take place at 4:30 p.m. in the Engineering Building, Engineering Student Lounge. Students will have 45 minutes to design and construct a lightweight "car" whose chassis is a McDonald's Big Mac Styrofoam container.

• Wednesday: James E. Ashton, UI distinguished alumnus, will talk on "Ethics and Performance on Defense Contracts" at 4:30 p.m. in Phillips Hall, Room 100. He spent 15 years with General Dynamics Corporation and was involved with the highly successful F-16 development and production program.

• Thursday: UI President Hunter Rawlings will talk on "The Future of Iowa's College of Engineering" at 3 p.m. in Macbride Hall Auditorium. Rawlings will explain the current status of the Engineering College expansion.

• Friday: A student-faculty reception will be held at 5 p.m. at The Gallery Restaurant, 223 E. Washington St. Two awards will be presented and free beer will be provided in an informal atmosphere.

Harvard professor to give anatomy seminar

Ann Kiessling, associate professor of obstetrics, gynecology and reproductive biology at Harvard Medical School, will give an anatomy seminar on the UI campus titled "Pre-Implantation Embryo Development."

The seminar will be held 12:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Bowen Science Building, MacEwen Room.

Two UI programs earn affirmative action award

Two UI programs have been recognized for their outstanding commitment to equal opportunity and have received the second UI Affirmative Action Award.

The Educational Opportunity Program of the UI College of Medicine and the Parenting Concerns Subcommittee of the Council on the Status of Women were named as this year's recipients by UI President Hunter Rawlings.

The EOP program in the College of Medicine was developed to provide assistance to educationally or economically disadvantaged individuals from groups currently under-represented in American medicine.

The Parenting Concerns Subcommittee has taken an active role in studying and promoting the need for high-quality child care that allows women to pursue economic and personal rewards of employment and education.

Tauke addresses varied issues, plans clean gubernatorial race

By Noelle Nystrom
The Daily Iowan

Iowa residents are fair and they look at the issues a candidate stands on, Republican Rep. Tom Tauke said Friday during a campaign stop at the Robert A. Lee Community Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St.

Tauke tentatively plans to run against Iowa Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin and made a stop in Iowa City during his tour across the state. Tauke said he thinks his ideas are more in tune with the people of Iowa than Harkin's are.

"I think I will strike a responsive chord," he said.

Tauke also wants a clean race. "It is imperative that any candidate focus on issues in the state, not tear down the opposition," he said.

Tauke addressed several issues, including his role in the recently proposed 51 percent federal pay raise that was defeated by Congress.

"My role in the pay raise I didn't see coming, but I got," Tauke said. By accident, Tauke eventually led the opposition to the raise, he said. Before he knew it, he became an ally to taxpayers and supporters like Ralph Nader. They backed him, and he soon became the opposition leader.

"We were eventually able to get the vote," Tauke said. "It was a great victory for taxpayers."

Governmental wages are a problem that Congress must address, but the pay raise would have made the battle against the deficit much more difficult, Tauke added.

Tauke said Congress is walking a fine line in foreign policy matters in the Middle East. He said it is hard to speculate about the situation brought about by the book "The Satanic Verses" and death threats against author Salman Rushdie.

Because the relationship between Iran and the United States has been strained for so long, Tauke said the United States must take seriously the death threats on Rushdie's life made by the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

"The situation with Iran has been delicate for a long time," Tauke said. "We can just hope the threats aren't carried out."

Tauke voted against military aid to the Nicaraguan Contras and said he considers Contra aid to be a dead-end policy, although he is unsure exactly what the new policy should entail.

"We need reassessment of all our policies in Central America," Tauke said. "We should provide what support we can."

Tauke said President George Bush's controversial nomination of John Tower for secretary of defense was not the choice he would have made, but said the nomination must be dealt with fairly by Congress.

"John Tower is not my choice for secretary of defense," Tauke said. "But Congress should confirm the choice unless there is something to disqualify him."

In regards to Bush's proposed budget, Tauke said Congress is obligated to review the budget very carefully.

It is "very important we seize initiatives," he added.

"We must be careful how we appropriate dollars. The defense is essentially going to be frozen. Medicare is going to take a hit," Tauke said.

The atmosphere at the White House under President Bush is new and different, Tauke said.

"It's much different than (under former President Ronald) Reagan," Tauke said. "Bush is an insider and works more closely with Congress. He's not anti-government like Reagan."

Iowa political races heat up as candidates begin battle

By Mike Glover
The Associated Press

DES MOINES — After suffering something of a drought, Iowa's political landscape is beginning to blossom again in what is shaping up as an intense 18-month struggle for supremacy.

From grassroots politicking and door-knocking for legislative seats to a high-profile Senate race, the battles have all been joined. Iowans who don't like politics should consider moving because it's going to be hard to avoid.

Virtually everything that's happening in state government this year is a result of strategies candidates have adopted for the 1990 election.

Workers' rights bills being debated in the Legislature spring from a Democratic need to shore up support with the party's traditional base, while Republican Gov. Terry Branstad's new-found environmentalist streak is recognition that very few people are opposed to clean air and water.

Since the candidates are out of the starting gate, it's probably time for some early handicapping. The caveat, of course, is that things will change dozens of times as candidates goof, circumstances shift, the economy improves or falters and President George Bush soars or slips in the polls.

First, at the top of the ticket: Incumbent Democratic Sen. Tom Harkin is finishing his first term and faces a challenge from 2nd District Rep. Tom Tauke. The race is likely to be among the most spirited in the nation. Both candidates have vowed that they won't be the first to launch a negative campaign but will respond if attacked.

Translated, that means the negative commercials are being filmed and the only question is where and when to run them.

Harkin is a tough-minded politician who doesn't fear a fight. From Tauke's perspective, you don't knock off an incumbent by talking about what a nice guy you are.

Both demonstrated a willingness to engage in world-class demagoguery in the recent fight over a congressional pay raise.

The early advantage goes to Harkin, in part because Tauke will be saddled with every sin of the Bush Administration.

Local activists rally behind struggle against apartheid

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

A high, rich voice rose from the middle of a crowd of 80 people and led them in singing the words of "Nkosi sikelele i Afrika," the national anthem of South Africa that in English translates to "God Bless Africa."

Many sang the anthem's complex harmonies while raising right arms and punching fists in the traditional anthem pose after an assembly Friday in Shambaugh Auditorium.

Danisa Baloyi, president of South African Azanian Student Movement in North America, said that when apartheid ends in South Africa, Africans who fought against it will remember who participated in the struggle and who was not supportive of the anti-apartheid movement.

"We will remember the role of those who have been indifferent in our struggle," Baloyi said.

She mainly spoke of the need for South Africans to work together in their fight against apartheid.

"We believe that South Africans need to be unified," she said. "We can have differences without being disagreeable."

Joseph Diescho, Namibian Fulbright scholar from Columbia University, explained how Namibia's forthcoming independence may be hindered by the South African apartheid policy in Namibia.

The independence process will begin in April of this year, when United Nations peacekeeping forces will try to aid Namibia in the process.

South African "stumbling blocks" might impede or even destroy their independence, Diescho said.

South Africa, in spite of the U.N.'s decision in the 1967 to remove South Africa from trusteeship of Namibia, still enforces its apartheid system in the country, he said.

UI associate law professor Adrian Wing said the U.N.'s plan concerning the independence of Namibia is not perfect.

"The one failure of the U.N. independence plan is that it does not include a provision that South Africa turn over control of Walvis Bay, the only deep-water port to the Namibian people," she said.

The South African military base in Walvis Bay is a strategic trade location for South Africa. After independence, South Africa would be permitted to continue its control of Walvis Bay, and South Africa could take the profits from Namibian uranium exports, he said.

The Namibian economy may be dependent on South Africa because Namibia "produces what they don't consume and consumes what they don't produce," Diescho said.

"South Africa can bring down the government in less than a month," he said. "We need to forge more solidarity with our brothers and sisters in southern Africa to stand against South Africa."

Although the Africans' fight against apartheid is for human rights, the U.S. government is mainly concerned about the livelihood of American business and the trade of uranium in Namibia, Diescho said.

"I don't think the U.S. government understands its own attitude," he said.

Baloyi said press coverage of the disputes between blacks in South Africa is damaging to the anti-apartheid movement.

"They remove the focus from the real problem," Baloyi said.

The recent coverage of accusations against Winnie Mandela is one example of this damage, she said. Articles about "black on black" violence are racist, Baloyi said, adding "I never hear anybody referring to World War II as 'white on white' violence."

While the UI Cambus program provides the community with a valuable transit service, some riders fail to appreciate its overall convenience despite its imperfections, Cambus employees said.

Cambus drivers acknowledge that schedules are hard to maintain for uncontrollable reasons, but the UI's Cambus drivers still express some disbelief that students riding the Cambus are anything less than tolerant of factors that are beyond the drivers' control.

In winter and especially during sporting events at either the basketball arena or football stadium, traffic in and around campus backs up, causing some riders to take personal offense.

"People always ask 'Did you change your schedule or something?'" said Sam Margeas, a Cambus driver. "When they're standing alone at a bus stop and we're late, they really believe that we harbor some sort of personal vendetta against just them in particular."

"So maybe we are two minutes late, but two minutes is not going to ruin their life," he said.

Riders often forget the weighty responsibility that all Cambus drivers shoulder and being two minutes behind schedule demonstrates an exercise in precautionary measures, Margeas said.

"It's an incredible responsibility, having to take care of an entire busload of people, because you can't lose your concentration for even a minute," Margeas said. "You can lose concentration for a minute or two if you're working at Burger King, but you can't do that when you're driving a bus."

In addition to the responsibility of ensuring the safety of whole busloads of people at a time, drivers also have to tend to those individuals who are less coherent.

"Drunks are the drivers' worst nightmare because they'll sit in the back and taunt you," he said. "Of course, it's always a treat to clean up after them when they lose control of their bodily functions."

Cambus drivers have one fear greater than drunks and that is the incessant ringing of the 'emergency stop' bell.

"People want to get off the bus and they pull the stop cord once, twice, three times," Margeas said. "We're not deaf and we're not retarded, and most drivers would agree that they need to pull the cord merely once."

John Arnold, Bionic Bus driver and Cambus dispatcher said most Cambus drivers enjoy their routes despite the occasional poor treatment from passengers.

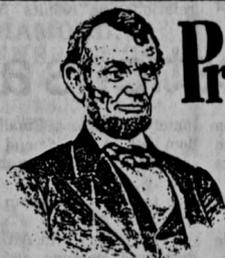

"We serviced over three million passengers last year, and there's not a lot we can do when riders get mad because the football or basketball game causes a backup," he said. "Sometimes it takes over an hour for a bus to get through its entire route, but our riders have to realize that some circumstances are beyond our control," Arnold said. "They also have to realize that Cambus is free and that we're not a taxi service."

AIDS lecture targets students

ACHA president addresses students' health, self-esteem

By Debbie Kleiman
Special to The Daily Iowan
and Mary Marshall
Special to The Daily Iowan

One of the country's foremost authorities on AIDS will bring his message to the students of the UI today.

Dr. Richard Keeling, president of the American College Health Association and chairman of its AIDS task force, will present a lecture and slide presentation, "AIDS in 1989: New Realities, Greater Challenges," at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom.

Keeling, who also serves as director of The University of Virginia's student health service, is recognized as one of the country's foremost experts on AIDS. He has given AIDS presentations at over 275 colleges and universities nationwide, and his visits are booked up to a year in advance.

Barb Petroff, coordinator of Health Iowa, said Keeling's message is exceptionally educational and inspiring.

"Keeling has the ability to move his audience about a very serious subject," Petroff said.

Keeling focuses his work and research on AIDS and its development in college communities. Rather than stressing the biology of AIDS, Keeling concentrates on social issues and their connection to the spread of AIDS.

Dr. Mary Khowassah, director of UI Student Health Service, said she has listened to Keeling's presentations on a number of occasions.

"Keeling's message is important for students because they make a wide range of decisions about lifestyle," she said.

A preliminary study by the ACHA and the Centers for Disease Control indicates that one in 300 college students is infected with the AIDS virus.

Khowassah said Keeling wants to show the correlation between low self-esteem and many health problems, including AIDS. Keeling believes behavior such as misuse of drugs and alcohol and unhealthy relationships results from students' low self-esteem, Khowassah said.

According to Petroff, one of Keeling's goals is to boost students' confidence.

"You get the impression that he cares about each student," Petroff said. "Because of this, he is willing to overextend himself to reach as many people as possible to prevent the spread of AIDS."

"(His) message is that AIDS is preventable and that each individual can protect himself or herself from this disease," she said.

Keeling's presentation at the UI is part of a tour including stops at other Iowa campuses, Petroff said. Admission to Keeling's presentation is free.

Students' AIDS questions answered

By Mary Marshall
Special to The Daily Iowan
and Debbie Kleiman
Special to The Daily Iowan

Despite widely available information about AIDS, many college students still have unanswered questions about the disease, a UI Student Health questionnaire states.

In October 1988, representatives from the UI Student Health Service spoke to UI rhetoric classes to answer questions about the AIDS virus.

Where is a good place to store condoms?

When storing condoms avoid temperature extremes, especially warm places such as glove compartments and men's billfolds.

Are VD checkups available at Student Health?

Yes, there are services available for students concerned about sexually transmitted diseases. Students who experience symptoms of an STD or who think they may have been exposed to an STD can come to Student Health for examinations.

There is a gynecology service available for women, which includes normal checkups for gonorrhea, chlamydia and herpes.

What are the chances of getting AIDS or VD if you use a condom?

Used correctly, a latex condom offers about 90 percent protection. A condom with spermicide increases protection to approximately 95 percent. Finally, a condom with spermicide and lubricant may increase protection to approximately 97 percent.

Is there a relationship between cancer and AIDS?

Yes. Persons with AIDS have a depressed immune system that does not function properly. Kaposi's sarcoma is a cancer of the lung directly related to the AIDS virus. Other pre-cancerous conditions are due to the failing immune system.

Have there been any cases of AIDS reported at the UI?

Student Health does test for the AIDS virus, but statistics of reported cases are unavailable due to confidentiality.

Is it true that when you are having sex with someone, you are also "having sex" with that person's previous sexual partners?

Not technically, but you are potentially being exposed to the diseases and conditions that your partner may have previously encountered.

What are the risks of getting AIDS for homosexual women?

If and when body fluids are exchanged, there is a risk of transmitting the AIDS virus if one partner is infected.

Is it true that heterosexual intercourse is safe unless there is broken skin or sores on either the penis or the vagina?

No. Unprotected heterosexual intercourse is not safe because there is an exchange of body fluids and therefore the potential for the transmission of disease. Also, there may be cervical bleeding or sores in the vagina that may not be felt.

'Little guys' should watch experts for market clues

By Dean Jarnow
The Daily Iowan

It has been almost 16 months since the big event in the New York Stock Exchange of October 1987, and individual investors have not participated greatly in the rally to the recent post-crash highs. In fact, this rally has been a very quiet event, since institutional or professional investors have only recently participated to a large degree. Wouldn't it be nice if the little guy could aid his or her decision making by having an idea of what the pros are doing? If one knows what to look for and where, it is possible to get clues to market direction by watching the institutional investors.

Since institutions account for approximately 80 percent of the volume on the stock market, it is safe to say the direction of stocks are heavily influenced by these institutions. When the pros buy and sell, they usually do it in very large blocks of 10,000 shares or more. By following the large block trading numbers provided by most daily financial publications, one can get clues to the short- and long-term bias of the broader stock indexes.

In general, when pension funds, mutual funds and other institutions become more aggressive and buy large volumes of stocks, prices begin to rise — and when they sell, prices obviously fall. Lately the average big block trading when stocks are trending lower has been approximately 2,000 and when stocks are trending higher it's about 5,000. Interpreting this indicator is tricky. When big block trading spikes near or above 5,000 as stocks are rising, this may indicate a long-term positive signal for stocks — but it probably will prove to be a short-term condition, and a decline or a correction of some kind typically follows. Conversely, when big block trading falls as stocks decline, this may prove to be a longer bearish trend for stocks. However, in the short-term it may indicate an oversold and a rally may follow.

Another indicator used to analyze institutional trading is the big block ratio. This is a ratio of big blocks traded daily against the total up and down volume. Currently this indicator is at high levels compared to a long-term average, which indicates that small investors are not participating.

Dean Jarnow is president of DJIA Financial Services, a full-service brokerage firm located at 513 Kirkwood Ave. His column appears periodically in The Daily Iowan.

No evidence that missing $38 million helped Contras

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Federal regulators investigated but found no evidence that money from a failed Omaha credit union helped finance Nicaraguan Contras, Rep. Peter Hoagland, D-Neb., said Saturday.

Hoagland said officials of the National Credit Union Administration, which is led by former Sen. Roger Jepsen, R-Iowa, asked him to help "dispel rumors" that some of the $38 million missing from the Franklin Community Federal Credit Union went into drug-laundering schemes or the Contras.

"The NCUA told me that it was a rumor around town and it was another rumor that needed to be dispelled," Hoagland said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"I'm told that thus far in the investigation no evidence has turned up whatsoever for either of those two things — the drug-laundering or the Contras," he said. "There are a lot of wild rumors going around."

Franklin was closed Nov. 4 and was declared insolvent Nov. 10. Federal officials have learned that $38 million in Franklin funds are missing.

The NCUA has filed a lawsuit accusing Franklin executive director Lawrence King of diverting at least $34 million from the credit union for his own personal and business use.

Hoagland said the U.S. Attorney's Office has refused to tell him whether other individuals are being investigated in connection with Franklin's collapse.

Government documents filed in connection with the investigation accuse King of using Franklin's funds to make more than $40,000 in political contributions to Republican candidates and GOP causes.

King's biggest single contribution, $25,350, was to Citizens For America, a nationwide lobbying group for former President Ronald Reagan's economic and defense policies.

King gave $1,100 to Jack Kemp for president and $4,000 to Campaign for Prosperity, Kemp's political action committee to help conservative political candidates. He also gave money to Americans for Bush, Robert Dole for President, former Republican Sen. David Karnes of Nebraska, former Rep. Hal Daub, the Republican National Committee and the National Black Republican Council.

State Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, chairman of a legislative panel probing Franklin, said Saturday federal regulators have been dragging their feet in the search for Franklin's missing assets.

"There is an amazing lack of interest from some people, including Mr. Jepsen, about where the money went," Schmit said.

However, at least one faculty member believes the events of the past week were a misunderstanding.

Calling the Register article "misreporting," UI Faculty Senate President Peter Shane said the quotes attributed to Pomerantz suggested only hypothetical program cuts and not actual recommendations.

Shane said he would be "shocked" if the changes alluded to in the article would actually be implemented. The article suggested that the UI College of Engineering would strengthen its departments of medical engineering, biotechnology engineering, computer-aided design, manufacturing and hydraulics — and that other engineering areas would be consolidated into ISU.

"I do not assume from anything that happened this week that there will be any losses at the College of Engineering," he said.

Despite the debate over the validity of the Register article, students and faculty are still questioning why the regents have not responded to defenses of the UI Engineering College.

One source, who spoke to the DI on condition of anonymity, said the answer to that question lies in a letter from the auditing firm to the state universities' presidents.

The letter, which was put into public domain Monday, revealed a study by the firm that shows that Iowa's universities are much less "unnecessarily duplicative" than similar institutions in the country, and universities that have tried to cut back duplicative departments have never yielded more than $1 million in savings.

The source said the letter seemed suspicious in light of Pomerantz's recent comments in the Register and at the regents' meeting Wednesday suggesting cuts were necessary.

"Here's the guy who signs the checks for the Peat, Marwick Co., who comes out contradicting what they said in the letter," the source said. "These auditing firms try to be objective, but when somebody is paying the bills, there will be a tendency to change their positions. They can read the newspaper too."

UI President Hunter Rawlings confirmed the contents of the letter, but said that it doesn't necessarily condemn the study of unnecessary duplication at the UI.

"I think in other states it has not given significant funds," Rawlings said. "What might be the case here, I don't know yet."

around. They keep changing the rules on us," Morrison said.

"We are also caught in the middle of a power game between the CAC and the Student Senate. The CAC sends us to the Student Senate, and the Student Senate sends us back to the CAC," she added.

Jennifer Fleck, Student Senate treasurer, is quoted in the complaint as saying AILSA is not the only minority group that has been denied CAC funding.

"I thought it was very ironic that AILSA came to us just a week after the Black American Law Student Association had been denied funding from CAC," Fleck said Sunday. "The CAC has more money than any other group. I do think both of these groups were unfairly denied money. Good programs like these need to be funded."

Gordon Fischer, CAC president, said he was angry AILSA had filed the complaint without first going back to the CAC to request additional funding.

"I feel this is unfair to do this to us. The group jumped from step four to step eight when they filed the complaint," Fischer said. "The allegations made by some individual Student Senate members are completely unfair. It hurts us, and it hurts individual groups when others decide to play political power games.

"The CAC has a very stringent non-discrimination clause and works hard to promote cultural diversity at the university. Although we do have limited funds, we do our best to fully and fairly accommodate all of our groups," Fischer said.

The CAC funds programs to promote minority recruitment such as Opportunity at Iowa and Look to the Future, Fischer said. He added the CAC would be happy to show its records to the public.

"My main concern is procedural policies. We feel problems like ours should be brought to the attention of the university," Morrison said.

The complaint states that without funding for the conference, or without assurance that they will receive money for future events, AILSA can not continue to exist as an organization.

AILSAs and CAC will be meeting tonight to discuss supplemental funding for the conference.

The Human Rights Committee will examine the complaint to see if an investigation is necessary, said Robert Burchfield, chairman of the committee.

Sack

His father, Richard Sack, said the experiences of living in Iowa City and being a member of a fraternity may have contributed to his chemical dependency.

"Let's put it this way, he was both in a fraternity and also out of a fraternity. You figure it out," Richard Sack said.

Sack's father added that he was not sure Sack would be able to continue his education in the immediate future but said would probably complete his degree following his incarceration.

Friends who had been close to Sack before the arson charges said it was not like the former UI marketing student to behave in such an erratic manner. But they said Sack liked to party and went out to the bars quite often.

"I just know that it is very true what they said in court, that he did not know what he was doing at the time and was on drugs," said one friend, who asked not to be identified.

The friend said none of Sack's acquaintances in Iowa City had heard from him since the arrest and the family had kept quiet about Sack's whereabouts.

Shortly after his arrest, Sack admitted himself to Mercy Hospital in Cedar Rapids where he received drug and alcohol rehabilitation treatment. During nine weeks as an outpatient, Sack attended weekly Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

"If he went through the rehabilitation and it worked, I'm sure he's fine," the friend said. "He's a nice guy."

Rushdie

Publishers in France, West Germany, Greece and Turkey have decided not to publish the book, and some bookstore chains in the United States have pulled it from their shelves.

In New York Sunday, a spokesman said Cardinal John J. O'Connor criticized both "The Satanic Verses" and those who threaten its author and seemed to imply Catholics should avoid reading the novel.

"He (O'Connor) encourages everyone not to dignify the publication of this work, which has been viewed by Muslims as highly sacrilegious and offensive," said Msgr. Peter Finn, a spokesman for the cardinal.

The European Conference of Foreign Press Associations Sunday called Khomeini's order an "act of terrorism against freedom of conscience, of religion and of opinion, values which are held to be the truest expression of a civil and more human world."

Representatives of the group, in Rome for a three-day meeting, sent a telegram to the Iranian ambassador to Italy and to the Holy See.

Meanwhile in Washington Secretary of State James Baker said the Iranian death threat against the novelist was "intolerable" and an obstacle to that nation "rejoining the community of civilized nations."

receive them. "There's been no negative response to our stocking the novel. People are interested in the topic and in the novel as a collector's item," Reddy said.

"People want to know what it's about and whether it's worth reading. We suspect a lot of them are not really going to read it. It's hefty and dense, like most of his works," she added. "Most people won't understand where the conflict is arising, on a topic level."

The plot of Rushdie's novel concerns two men who fall from an airplane and resume life on earth, one developing horns and the other a halo.

The passages condemned by Muslims refer to a character named Mahoud, whom they call a thinly disguised version of the Prophet Mohammed.

Prairie Lights first received copies of the book in November. The store sold one book in December, three in January and 15 in February.

Reddy said she sympathizes with Waldenbooks' and B. Dalton's decisions not to stock the book, but does not approve of it.

"It's caving in to a few people's demand," Reddy said. "There is still a need for freedom of speech. (Pulling books) is kind of like terrorism in that respect," she said.

Leave Afghans alone

Just because the last Soviet combat troops have left Afghanistan does not mean that the war there is over. As the Soviets left the country, they repeated their offer to stop supplying the Soviet-backed government with weapons if the United States would stop arming the mujahedin rebels — the United States rejected the offer.

There are two factors which probably weigh heavily in Washington's refusal to stop arms shipments to Afghan rebels. One is the decisive difference American-made Stinger anti-aircraft missiles made in the rebels' efforts against the Soviets. American Stingers essentially turned the tide in Afghanistan, and the United States has not forgotten this.

The other reason the United States may have to continue to arm the mujahedin is diplomatic. With the Soviets gone, the mujahedin are waiting to strike; the days of the Soviet-backed Afghan government appear numbered. Officials in Washington may be hoping that the next Afghan government will have feelings of friendship and gratitude toward the United States.

The concern over Afghanistan's future should not be limited to the superpowers' military and political ambitions. Humanitarian concern for the Afghan people should be paramount. Using them as pawns in a superpower skirmish is immoral.

Supplying arms to both sides in Afghanistan can only make the inevitable civil war worse. The best thing the Soviet Union and United States could do now would be to suspend all arms shipments, and limit their assistance to humanitarian and economic aid.

De-pants the NRA

In the Reagan White House, it was fairly easy to determine who wore the pants on certain issues. Nancy Reagan had an extensive wardrobe, and wasn't afraid to slip on the pants when Ronnie needed assistance.

But the Bush White House is different. Barbara Bush's wardrobe isn't quite as extensive. She may have a couple of pairs of pants, but none likely to clash with George's. But last week it was discovered that neither George nor Barbara wears the pants on gun control — the National Rifle Assoc. does.

Barbara said she was scared of guns and "absolutely" believes in a national prohibition on assault rifles. However, George, a life-time member of the NRA, echos the NRA party line, and absolutely opposes tightening gun control measures.

George must not be getting out of the White House much. In Washington, D.C., there have been 75 homicides — nearly two per day — since Jan. 1, the majority of which involved guns. Barbara, seeing this carnage, wants something done.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater stated that "everyone in the country, including the president, is outraged by the homicides" in Washington and throughout the nation. But the NRA continues to hold the White House hostage.

George maintains that to control guns, even assault rifles, would be to deprive hunters of their rights as citizens to shoot game. But what kind of "game" do you hunt with assault rifles, semi-automatic pistols and cheap handguns? Rival gang members, competing drug lords, children, and even presidents, that's what.

Barbara should remind both her husband and Fitzwater about what happened on March 30, 1981. Less than three months into his presidency, Ronald Reagan and then-White House press secretary James Brady were gunned down by John Hinckley, Jr. Reagan was lucky, he survived. Brady, was not so lucky; he survived, but remains a shell of his former self.

She then should de-pants the NRA and kick them out of her house.

Political suicide?

Johannesburg police launched an investigation Wednesday into the death of a 14-year-old male whose badly beaten body was found there last month. Some in Soweto allege that anti-apartheid activist Winnie Mandela and her bodyguards played a part in Stompie Seipei's death.

Anti-apartheid leaders the following day issued a stinging rebuke to Mandela, expressing outrage at her "complicity" in the assault.

In 1986, Mandela formed a group called the Mandela United soccer team, whose members act as her personal bodyguards. The group, it is said, plays very little soccer, and may well be utilizing terrorist tactics in carrying out Mandela's orders.

A ban on Mandela was lifted three years ago, once it became known that she seemed to have a penchant for putting her foot in her mouth and making militant, often offensive statements about the nature of the anti-apartheid movement.

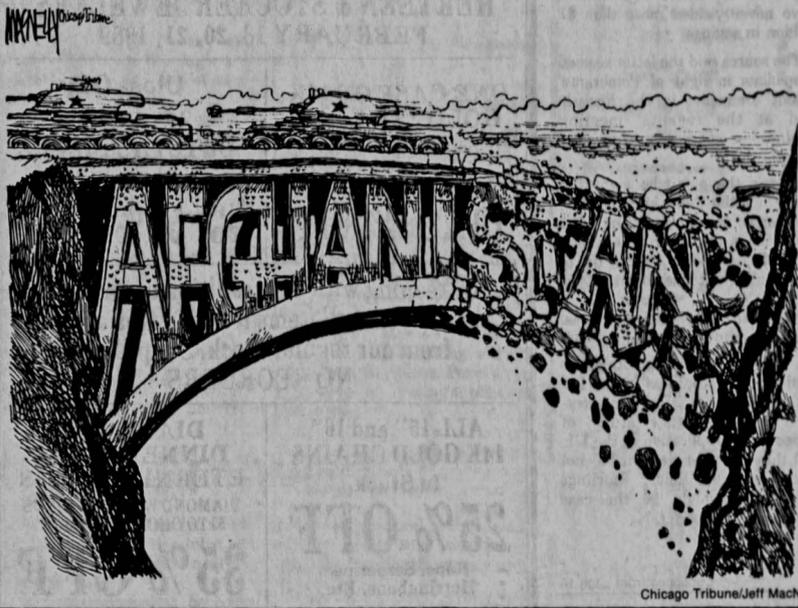

The media, fearing the reports were part of a government propaganda campaign to discredit her and her jailed husband Nelson Mandela, had refused to publish reports of violence linked to her and her bodyguards. Until recently, that is.

The reasoning behind the lift on the ban three years ago had to do with allowing Mandela to dig her own grave. And she is apparently beginning to do just that.

If reports about Winnie Mandela are confirmed, she has stooped to the level of the brutal system she professes to hate and has done such damage to the anti-apartheid cause that she may as well consider a position in the Botha administration.

Confessions of a Love Weenie

Kim Painter

February is the month of love. To those of you tired of the shameless display of stupidity and sexual maladjustment printed each Feb. 14 in The Daily Iowan's "Happy Pages," I offer the following. After "woog woog," "fuzzy fuz," "My Silly Goose," "Poo-Bear," and especially "My Sex Poodle," it may come as a letdown. But at least it involves a confession.

You know about my morbid fear of bugs. You were there when I admitted forthrightly that I have a mother a lot like your mother. Today I ask that you consider the plight of the humble, benighted love weenie. In this case, me.

And let me tell you, snookums — that's no pet name. Unlike stupidity, LWS (love weenie syndrome) is something that cannot be helped. Its chief symptom is the immediate physical grip of adoration. The sensation is akin to what a flying grouse must feel when the shot parts its feathers. "Uh, oh... that's me, isn't it? Damn. I'm hit."

It is a poignant moment. Having been there before, one's mind moves ahead as one plummets to the ground. The next stops are sweat, memory loss, motor skill deterioration and what I call run-on mind, a disorder that leaves a person wildly vigilant throughout the night.

The woman who first coined the term "love weenie" and applied it to me is one with whom I was once a weenie. She invited me over for dinner. I arrived exhibiting a flock of symptoms. The line of sweat across the brow, the grin that puts me in a category with Dostoevsky's seizure-riddled heroes, and the mental state that calls to mind the tragedy of head injury. It is not the way one adult should come to another and speak of love, but it is my lot. You work with what you have in this life, as some famous non-weenie has said.

I say "hi" a lot when LWS hits. I use all the good, short words that keep me clear of protracted conversations and lengthy trains of thought. I did fine that night. Didn't say much, chopped some vegetables, drank a little wine. I smiled and sweated as cutely as possible. Then I had to go to the bathroom and got my shirt caught in my zipper. Seriously caught. The zipper had eaten the shirt.

I began to giggle. Primarily considered a variety of laughter, giggling starts as a noise, but soon a physical giggle sets in. My shoulders were giggling. My arms and hands were giggling. My shirt and zipper were very somberly tangled. A woman was several feet away preparing my dinner; somehow I would have to tell her the guest had a small problem.

I sort of wanted to die. Weenies spend a lot of time longing for death. She was very lovely, I felt very silly, and I tugged and tugged, as if courting a fish at the end of a line, but could not disengage my shirt from the teeth of the zipper. She called out, "Kim? Are you alright in there?"

 "I'm fine. Really." (Pause for a very long giggle.)
 "My shirt's stuck in my pants." She came in to find me giggling all over. She was brave and wise as well as lovely, and knew how to get my shirt unstuck. And I was a love weenie, and she knew it right away.

There is, then, something about love that makes me a klutz. And there is something about a klutz which love smiles upon. I suppose love weenies are regarded so favorably by love, and rewarded so handsomely by her, because we give what she sees as her due. She renders us stupid, inept, speechless, and physically clumsy. We are thunderstruck, dumbstruck, awestruck — we are struck all to hell by love. Love likes that. Love hates nothing so much as being ignored. Ignore love and she will plot your slow, painful demise. But let love knock the wind out of you, humiliate you a bit, and she plays with you gently, batting you around like a lioness with her claws in.

The good news for LWS sufferers is that it is strictly a beginning stages of love affliction. It vanishes as soon as a mature relationship is embarked upon, leaving the sufferer free to revel in sexual relations, capable of conversing with the beloved about intricate and weighty matters, and able to start, finish and walk confidently away from fights.

But I detect an occasional wistful gleam in the eyes of those who love the love weenie. They miss it. They try not to want it, but they long to catch me brushing toothpaste into the side of my face or stumbling on the carpet.

I was once told by someone that she "didn't want to get too carried away with this thing." Love, she was talking about. I was poisoned by envy, astonished that she could even say it. We hadn't known each other long; I was still running face first into the cornerstones of bank buildings downtown and barking shins on table legs, my body and psyche bruised and bewildered by love. And she spoke of controlling it. Not this kid. Not the love weenie. I can always be found right down in the trenches, fighting and losing the finest fight of my life.

Cheap shots

To the Editor:
 I am writing in response to the Feb. 13 article "Tough talk on Top 40 scholck," which appeared in the Arts and Entertainment section. "Schlock" is a Yiddish slang term for inferior merchandise.

In the arts, there are many opinions, and none are right or wrong. Steve Cruse comes across as an ignorant, prejudiced man who takes shots at whatever he can to boost his own self-confidence.

Cruse attacks Mike Rutherford (of Mike and the Mechanics) for telling us to forgive before it's too late, and Tone Loc for not being a funny rapper. (As we all know, Rap "isn't any good unless it's funny.") If he wants a funny wrapper, why doesn't he buy a Bazooka Joe bubble gum?

Although Samatha Fox doesn't enlighten me with her lyrics, her music is light, fun, and has a good dance beat. As for Debbie Gibson, she has more talent than most of the people in the music industry. She is the youngest person to write, sing and produce a number one song. As for her "new image" that has something to do with mascara and a hat, it might have something to do with her other talents such as acting, and being the cover girl for a line of cosmetics.

I don't know what kind of music Cruse likes, but maybe someday I'll be lucky enough to read what he thinks is worthy of the public's ears. Maybe then I can show him that it is easier to criticize than praise.

'80s kind of things

To the Editor:

Condoms... the trend of the '80s. We usually don't think of buying Cokes, chips, and condoms at the same time — but not anymore. The presence of condom machines at Vendoland in the residence halls is just ridiculous.

Yes. This is National Condom Week and we are all aware of condoms by now, but do we really need them where we buy our M & M's, Pepsi and ice cream sandwiches. Wouldn't it be more fitting to place them in the men's and women's bathrooms where they can be bought in privacy.

Who wants to go to Vendoland in the heat of passion and buy one in front of people mingling and talking amongst themselves? And, who ever heard of the brand name "Prime" anyway.

Throughout the year, we, as a nation, celebrate Presidents' Day,

Labor Day, the Fourth of July, and Veteran's Day. But, who ever heard of National Condom Week appropriately starting on Valentine's Day.

As the headline in Tuesday's DI stated: "Condom Week starts with a cautious bang." Now that is something to get excited about. "Hail, Hail to the condom!"

There is a need today for the public to be educated in this area, but I feel that this is carrying it a little too far. I'm all for the use of condoms, but when it continually pops up in our everyday life it gets stale. All I have to say is, "Happy National Condom Week everybody!"

Interesting challenge

To the Editor:

Congratulations are in order to Hayden Fry and his staff for a "successful" recruiting season!

However, now I'd like to see headlines in The Daily Iowan informing the community how successful the UI was in attracting high school valedictorians, National Merit Scholars, Mathematic olympians and all-state orchestra concert masters/mistresses, and, of course, granting them full scholarships to attend the UI.

An interesting and exciting challenge, don't you think?

10 helpful hints for a taxing time

A lot of you have been coming by the trailer house, asking me to fill out your 1040 tax forms, or the new abbreviated form 1040-T, which stands for "Take it all." Obviously, there are some misunderstandings about the new improved Reagan

Joe Bob Briggs

tax laws, so here's the ten questions I been personally asked about most often. Maybe this'll help you figure it out.

1. Can I deduct mileage to and from the liquor store if I go there for a business purpose?

A. Yes, you can. An acceptable business purpose would be "I was thinking about buying me a liquor store one day maybe when I get some money."

2. Does the home mortgage deduction apply to my situation?

A. Yes. Many of you are wondering why you bought a house ten years ago for $80,000 and now you owe $150,000 on it. And the reason is simple. The home mortgage deduction! You get to keep paying on it like that FOREVER. And it's all DEDUCTIBLE. See, if it wasn't deductible, then you'd probably be paying it down to next to nothing, and then you wouldn't have anything to deduct. Wouldn't that be sad?

3. How much tax do rich people pay?

A. The new tax laws treat the wealthy about the same as they were treated in the past. They pay nothing.

4. How can I reduce my taxes?

A. Make more money! The more you make, the less you pay. I thought I explained this in the last question.

5. What if I've got a big wad of receipts in my dresser drawer but I can't remember what any of em were for and also some of em are faded and so I can't read the amounts or the dates on em?

A. You're in luck. Write carefully, in ink, on each receipt, the following words: "Airport parking, client pickup, plus $7.00 in tips." Another one that always works is "Misc. office supplies." Remember, the more boring you can make it, the better. Try something imaginative like "Two-ply industrial pipe linkage." These IRS guys are just like you and me. Who wants to have a conversation about THAT?

6. What about the $4,700.84 in interest I paid last year to MasterCard, VISA, Discover Card, and Bob's Discount Credit?

A. Ronnie nailed you on this one. All this time we thought we were being good citizens, running up all that credit and never paying it off. It turns out, we get NO tax benefits for wasting all that money. My recommendation: If you owe, say $27,000 to VISA, increase that monthly payment from $15 to about twenty bucks so you can get it paid off quicker.

7. What if I cheated on my expense account at the office?

A. Still allowed. No reason to report it on your return.

8. May I claim alimony as an above-the-line deduction?

A. Yes, but I find the taxpayer is better able to deal with this particular deduction if he first scrawls "The little goldigger drained me dry!" across the top of the form 1040. This in no way invalidates your return, but does amuse the IRS agents, making them more sympathetic to your eventual audit.

9. What are the chances of being audited?

A. They get better every year. The government's desperate.

10. What are the chances I'll be audited by an intelligent person who'll catch me?

A. ZERO! Don't you have a friend who's worked at the IRS? Didn't he stay about three months and then leave to work at McDonald's? Won't they take ANYBODY to work there? Isn't it worse than the Post Office? Knows less about it than you do.

Arrests break KGB spy ring

ROME (AP) — Two people have been arrested in Italy on charges of procuring classified military information for the Soviet Union, including documents on a computer system being developed for NATO, news reports said Sunday.

The arrests broke a KGB spy ring seeking to acquire top-secret documents on the computer system, which would help NATO nations direct activities on the battlefield, including ground and air operations, the reports said.

Milan's Corriere Della Sera said the operation was coordinated across the Yugoslav border by KGB agents apparently working without the knowledge of the Yugoslav government. The newspaper quoted unidentified sources as saying one of the agents in Yugoslavia was a former Tass news agency correspondent in Rome.

"It will be the biggest counterespionage operation in Europe in recent years," said Rome's circulation La Repubblica.

The reports said the two men — a Yugoslav and an Italian — were arrested in northern Italy and that the Yugoslav was seized by police as he tried to drive across the border with documents related to the computer system. The Italian may have obtained information on a NATO anti-submarine project, they said.

State-run RAI television said the classified information was to have been sent from Yugoslavia to KGB agents in Austria.

Prosecutors and police confirmed that two people were arrested on espionage charges, but they refused to give any details.

They said their investigation was continuing. The reports, carried by all major newspapers, identified the suspects as Giorgio Stancich, an electronics technician who lived in Yugoslavia and worked in Italy, and Natalino Francalanci, a fur dealer from Pontedera, near Pisa.

Stancich, 42, was arrested Thursday near the northeastern Adriatic port of Trieste, the reports said, and Francalanci, 51, was arrested Feb. 11 in the northwest Ligurian port city of La Spezia.

Two other people were reportedly detained in La Spezia, but it was not immediately clear if they were suspected of espionage.

Newspapers reported that Francalanci traveled often to eastern Europe on business. RAI said his arrest was in connection with NATO research in La Spezia on anti-submarine warfare.

Stancich worked for IRET, a joint Italian-Yugoslavian company in Trieste that manufactures electronic communications systems for civilian and military use, the reports said. He commuted to work every day from Skofje, just across the border in Yugoslavia where he lives with his family.

The reports said Stancich was arrested while trying to drive across the border with documents related to the computer system, known as Catrin, that is reportedly being developed for use by the NATO alliance.

Blood traces found during Mandela raid

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police investigating the murder of a young black activist detained four men at Winnie Mandela's home Sunday and said they found traces of blood during a pre-dawn raid there.

Radio reports said the men served as Mandela's bodyguards.

"This is a thorough search of the premises where the alleged attacks and assaults took place, according to witnesses," said Maj. Gen. Jaap Joubert, chief of the investigation into the death of Stompie Seipei, 14. The boy's body, with the throat slit, was found last month dumped in Soweto, the sprawling black township outside Johannesburg.

South African police released a videotape of their operation, showing officers without gloves searching trunks of clothing, leafing through photograph albums and collections of African National Congress literature, and lifting up what appeared to be blood-soaked sneakers, a knife and a pair of gardening shears.

The camera focused on spots on the walls of some back rooms where the detained men lived. State-run Radio South Africa said the spots were spatters of blood.

Three Soweto men have said Mandela's bodyguards abducted them and the boy and beat them at the Mandela house. They say Mandela, wife of imprisoned ANC leader Nelson Mandela, was involved.

Winnie Mandela, 54, has denied being at home when the four were brought there. But she has defended their abduction and said they probably were "slapped" to get them to talk about alleged homosexual activities at the Methodist Church residence where they lived. The church denies her allegations.

"We have found fingerprints and blood samples which will be sorted out in the laboratory," said Joubert. He said police will try to prove in court that members of the so-called Mandela United soccer team, who live at Mandela's home and act as her bodyguards, assaulted the boy who died.

The Rev. Frank Chikane, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches, told a news conference Saturday that Mandela had decided to remove the young men from her home at her husband's instruction.

Major anti-apartheid leaders inside South Africa and the exiled African National Congress president have publicly criticized Mandela's association with the soccer team.

Joubert said one of those detained during the 4 a.m. raid was Jerry Richardson, identified as team coach. Others arrested at the house were not named, but Radio South Africa said they were Winnie Mandela's bodyguards.

Joubert said police also arrested two other men elsewhere in Soweto, who will be charged with murdering Soweto's Dr. Abu Baker Asvat. Community leaders have told newspapers that Asvat examined Seipei after he was beaten. Mandela said Asvat was a witness to her charges of sexual abuse.

Police also raided five other "premises" connected with Mandela, including the home of a free-lance journalist, Joubert said.

Sirhan regrets Kennedy assassination

NEW YORK (AP) — Sirhan Sirhan, in his first television interview, likened his assassination of Sen. Robert Kennedy to a Jew killing Adolf Hitler, but went on to apologize repeatedly for the 1968 slaying.

Sirhan, who comes up for parole in May, called Kennedy his hero in the hour-long interview, which was shown to reporters Sunday and will be broadcast later this week. But he said he felt betrayed by Kennedy's support for Israel in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

When Kennedy gave a speech favoring the provision of U.S. fighter jets to Israel, "that seemed as though it were a betrayal," said Sirhan, a Jordanian immigrant.

In killing the senator, then the leading candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, Sirhan said, "I was not doing it out of personal malice toward the man, but out of concern for other people."

Sirhan is serving a life term in state prison at Soledad, Calif. He spoke there Tuesday with David Frost for the syndicated program "Inside Edition." The interview is to be broadcast in segments Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sirhan Sirhan

Sirhan, 44, has given other interviews, but this was the first in which he agreed to be recorded for broadcast, the show's producers said.

Kennedy "was my hero. He was my champion. He was the protector and the defender of the downtrodden and the disadvantaged," Sirhan told Frost. "I can't say anything except that I am totally sorry and feel nothing but remorse for having caused that tragic death."

In carrying out the killing, "My only connection with Robert Kennedy was his sole support of Israel and his deliberate attempt to send those 50 bombers to Israel to obviously do harm to the Palestinians," Sirhan said.

Although he repeatedly expressed remorse for the killing, Sirhan also argued that Kennedy exercised a "double standard" by favoring both peace in Vietnam and the sale of arms to Israel.

Sirhan said that murder is not an accepted way to settle political differences. But he added: "Imagine if you were a German or a Jew in Hitler's Germany and if you had the opportunity to assassinate Hitler. I'm sure that you would have tried to do that."

Frost replied: "There is no comparison between Hitler and Kennedy."

Sirhan: "Agreed, agreed. But the principle, in sorts, seems to be similar."

Kennedy was shot in the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles on June 5, 1968, moments after he claimed victory in California's Democratic presidential primary.

Jet crash kills 4 Americans outside Malaysian capital

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — A jumbo jet owned by an American cargo company crashed outside the capital Sunday morning while trying to land at an airport, and authorities said the four Americans aboard were killed.

A witness reported seeing a huge explosion in wooded hills 10 miles from Subang International Airport, where the Boeing 747 was headed.

Police recovered the plane's flight data recorder and planned to examine it, but officials said the cause of the crash was not immediately apparent.

The plane, owned by Flying Tigers, a Los Angeles-based company, carried only four people and was loaded with clothing and mail, according to Ann-Marie Hennessey, a spokeswoman for the company. She said in a telephone interview that although it was foggy at the time of the crash, the crew reported no problems to the control tower.

She said the flight originated at

John F. Kennedy Airport in New York, and went on to Columbus, Ohio; Anchorage, Ala.; Narita, Japan; Taipei, Taiwan; Singapore and Kuala Lumpur. Aviation officials said Flying Tigers operates three flights a week to Kuala Lumpur.

Shevardnadze on Middle East tour for peace

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze met Sunday with King Hussein and said he hopes to persuade Israeli officials this week to abandon their "stubborn" stand against the Arabs.

Shevardnadze offered new proposals for advancing the peace process Saturday in Damascus, the first stop on his 10-day Middle East tour.

He left Amman for Egypt on Sunday night after a 7½-hour stay and told reporters that he would meet both Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens and Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasir Arafat in Cairo.

He is also to visit Iraq and Iran before returning home Feb. 27 from a trip that is pushing the Soviet Union closer to the heart of Middle East peace efforts.

Shevardnadze told reporters before his talks with Hussein that he was giving the king a letter from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that touched on "the Middle East issue and the peaceful march to solve this question."

He also met separately with Prime Minister Zaid Rifai and Foreign Minister Marwan Kassem.

"Only through dialogue and convincing can one overcome the stubborn Israeli stand," Shevardnadze said in a news conference before leaving Damascus.

Shevardnadze said in Jordan that Jews and Arabs had made great efforts toward an international conference. "The rest now awaits the Israeli position. We will discover it through our meetings with the Israeli foreign minister."

Shevardnadze is the first Soviet foreign minister to visit Jordan, a country which historically leaned to the West.

Asked on departure about resuming relations with Israel, broken during the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the Soviet minister replied: "First let us convene the conference and then there will be no problems on diplomatic issues."

We're a leading supplier of technology-based electronic and mechanical aerospace components. A Fortune 500 company with over a billion dollars in annual sales. An engineering and manufacturing firm with a reputation for quality design and quality products.

We're looking for dedicated engineering graduates with a solid education and a proven desire to perform. We're searching for those select individuals with the ability to contribute to the success of a winning team. Whether you're interested in research, design, project, testing, or manufacturing engineering, we're interested in you.

In addition to our openings for graduating engineers, we have a highly successful cooperative education program for engineering students.

WE WILL BE ON CAMPUS SOON!

See your appropriate college placement office for further information or to arrange an interview during our campus visit.

Tigers win behind 3rd-string coach

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — It may sound strange, but the No. 3 team in the nation needed an easy game to restore its self confidence. And that's exactly what Missouri, down to its No. 3 coach, got Sunday against Nebraska. Using a fast start built partly on Nebraska's cold shooting, the Tigers, behind Gary Leonard and Anthony Peeler, coasted to a 79-63 victory over the Huskers.

"If I could use the cliché, it was just what the doctor ordered," Leonard said. "We proved to ourselves that we could play again."

With Leonard leading the way, Missouri scored 19 of the game's first 25 points as the Tigers raised their overall record to 22-5 and their Big Eight mark to 8-2.

Interim head Coach Rich Daly, the No. 2 assistant under 22-year head Coach Norm Stewart, is 2-0 at home and 0-2 on the road since Stewart was hospitalized and top assistant Bob Sundvold was suspended pending an investigation into alleged NCAA violations.

Stewart is listed in satisfactory condition at a Columbia hospital after undergoing cancer and gall bladder surgery last week, but he is not expected to return to the team this year.

No. 8 North Carolina 86, Maryland 75

Steve Bucknall scored 14 of his 16 points in the second half, including a 3-pointer with three seconds left on the shot clock that gave the Tar Heels a 73-66 lead with 1:50 remaining.

King Rice sank two free throws and converted a three-point play, and Jeff Lebo added four more points in the final 90 seconds for the Tar Heels, 22-5 overall and 8-3 in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

J.R. Reid scored 17 points for the Tar Heels. John Johnson scored 24 points for Maryland, 8-16 and 1-10. No. 14 West Virginia 90, beat Rhode Island 66

Chris Brooks scored 22 points and Ray Foster 17 as the Mountaineers, 22-2 and 15-0 in the Atlantic 10, extended the nation's longest winning streak to 21 games.

John Evans scored 23 points for Rhode Island, 11-13 and 7-8, which lost its third straight. Herb Dixon scored 17, including 11 in the second half, and Kenny Green 11. No. 18 Nevada-Las Vegas 62, Temple 60

Greg Anthony made a game-winning, off-balance jumper with 28 seconds left as the Runnin' Rebels rallied in the final four minutes.

Temple slipped to 15-9, Nevada-Las Vegas improved to 18-6.

Mark Macon, who scored 17 of his 27 points in the second half, made a jumper with 2:10 left, pulling Temple within one. He was fouled by Stacey Augman with 1:05 to go and made both free throws, giving Temple a 60-59 lead.

Macon missed a 22-footer for Temple with two seconds left.

No. 2 Arizona 102, UCLA 64

Sean Elliott set the Pacific-10 career scoring record as the Wildcats, 20-3 and 14-1 in the Pac-10, sent UCLA to its worst loss ever, eclipsing a season-opening 107-70 defeat at North Carolina in 1985.

Elliott scored 35 points for a total of 2,327. He surpassed the mark set by Lew Alcindor, now Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, in 88 games at UCLA. Elliott has played 123 games.

No. 6 Syracuse 87, Providence 80

Derrick Coleman scored 22 points as the Orangemen won their 20th straight over the Friars.

Syracuse, 22-5 and 8-5 in the Big East, has never lost a conference game against Providence, 17-6 and 6-6.

Ma Conlon, who scored a career-high 29 points for Providence, made two foul shots to tie it at 72. But Coleman, playing the last seven minutes with four fouls, scored five points as Syracuse took a 79-74 lead with 4:42 remaining.

Memphis St. 89, No. 7 Florida St. 78

Elliott Perry scored 24 points and Ernest Smith added 22 for Memphis State, 19-8 and 6-3 in the Metro Conference. The Tigers have beaten the Seminoles twice this month.

No. 11 Duke 102, Kansas 77

Danny Ferry had his jersey retired in pregame ceremonies, then scored 20 of his 26 points in the first half.

Haman fall at heavyweight seals win

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Senior Andy Haman couldn't have had a fonder farewell.

The Iowa City native said goodbye to Carver-Hawkeye Arena with a dramatic fall against Iowa State's Chris Knutsen with 48 seconds gone in the heavyweight match. The win propelled No. 5 Iowa to a 22-17, come-from-behind victory over the No. 10 Cyclones Sunday.

"It was good to come back after two years and do such a good job," Haman said, fighting back tears.

Iowa freshman Terry Brands pulls on the arm of Iowa State's Sean Watt during a match at 118 pounds in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Brands pinned Watt in the second period and the Hawkeyes went on to defeat the Cyclones, 22-17.

Wrestling

"When it came around I knew it was going to be another one of those matches where I was going to have to come out with a win."

Iowa upped its season record to 17-2 with the win. Iowa State edged below 500 at 7-8-1.

Haman's family was in the crowd to watch his final match as a Hawkeye in Carver. The senior had taken the past two years off following a freshman season at Iowa.

Iowa bolted out to a 13-0 advantage on the strength of wins by Terry Brands at 118 pounds, Tom Brands at 126 and Joe Melchiorre at 134. Until the bout at heavyweight, the Cyclones captured every weight except 167 pounds, to

Iowa routs Gophers, 99-61

By Bryce Miller
 The Daily Iowan

It was a night of records.

The Minnesota Golden Gophers, who had beaten Iowa Jan. 14 at Williams Arena 80-78, were payed back in full at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday night, 99-61.

In the aftermath, a number of established marks were rewritten into the Iowa record book.

The margin of victory, 38 points, was the biggest by either club in the rivalry's 146-game history. The previous had been the 47-10 win by the Gophers in the first game of the series, in 1902.

Men's Basketball

"I want to give credit to the Hawkeyes for having an outstanding game," Minnesota Coach Clem Haskins said. "They just really kicked our fannies in every stat you want to look at."

B.J. Armstrong had a career-high 15 assists, erasing his previous high of 12 on two occasions. The number of assists was one shy of the all-time record by a Hawkeye. Cal Wulfsberg had 16 against Ohio State in 1976.

"I'm a distributor of the basketball," Armstrong said. "We worked really hard this week in practice and it showed tonight. We came out and played very hard."

But one pass drew all the attention.

With a little over eight minutes remaining in the contest and the Hawkeyes holding a 77-45 advantage, one of the 15 assists brought the sellout crowd to their feet. Armstrong drove the lane, spun 360 degrees and put the ball behind his back to Roy Marble for a layin.

Armstrong assists highlight blowout

By Erica Weiland
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa basketball Coach Tom Davis preaches an unselfish style of basketball to his players. Apparently, they are starting to listen.

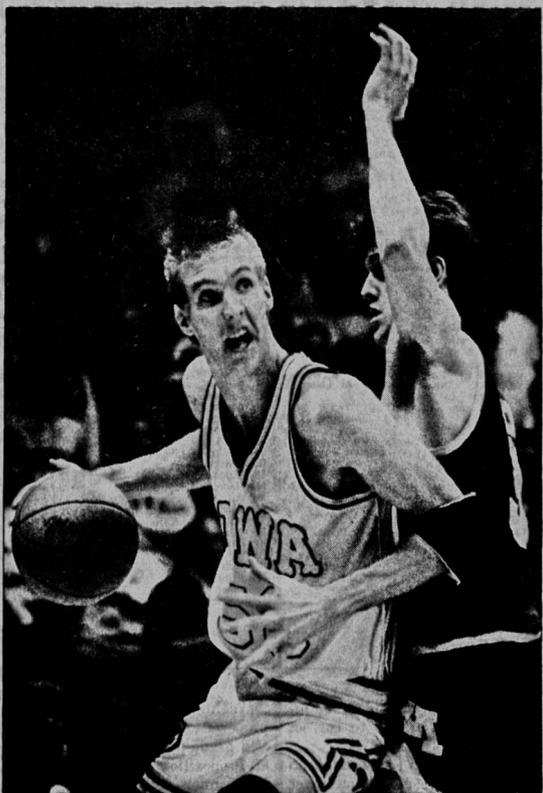

Davis' squad bombed Minnesota Saturday in a game which saw B.J. Armstrong dazzle a sell-out crowd with a record number of nifty assists and four Hawkeyes scored in double figures.

"(Unselfishness) has been the attitude this whole year," Armstrong said. "We've just got to get it going, put the pieces together, get settled in, get the players and everybody adjusted to their role, and we're really doing that."

Armstrong dealt out a career-high 15 assists Saturday, only one away from the school record set by Cal Wulfsberg in 1976. Armstrong's previous career high was 12, which he hit on two occasions.

"(B.J.) picked up where he left off against Ohio State; he had 12 against Ohio State," Davis said. "He's got a chance to be a leader in the league in assists, and I'd like to see him set his sights on that. He's coming from behind a lot. I'd like to see him move up that ladder."

Saturday's game was Iowa's first since coming off of a grueling three-game stretch last weekend. Matt Bullard, who led Iowa with 20 points, said he was still tired before Saturday's game but Armstrong's passing helped wake Iowa up.

"(B.J.) did just an outstanding job," Bullard said. "To have 15 assists, that's unbelievable. That's like an NBA game."

Armstrong even opened some eyes in the crowd after a he dished a 360-degree pass to Roy Marble.

"I thought it was great," Marble said of the pass. "It didn't really surprise me because I know what he can do and I pretty much knew he was coming to me with the ball. I think B.J. is just starting to let everyone else see what it is he can do. Without a

Law leads Hawks past Minnesota

By Michael Triik
 The Daily Iowan

Jolette Law scored a career high 24 points Friday as the seventh-ranked Iowa women's basketball team beat Minnesota 80-73 at Williams Arena in Minneapolis.

But the win proved costly for the Hawkeyes.

Two Iowa starters left the game with ankle injuries. Shanda Berry, the Hawkeye's leading scorer and rebounder, left the game late in the second half, after recording 18 points and seven rebounds. Iowa guard Stephanie Schueler suffered a similar injury during the first half.

Iowa trailed most of the second half before Law hit eight-straight points down the stretch to seal the win. It was the second-straight game in which the Golden Gopher's led a top-10 team late in the second half.

"Jolette did a fine job of taking the ball to the basket," Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer said. "Although she thought perhaps she was penetrating at times, she was taking shots in rotation."

Last week, Minnesota had 10th-rated Purdue on the ropes before the Boilermakers escaped with an 82-79 win.

Friday's game was also a lot different than the team's earlier meeting this year. Iowa bombed the Minnesota 97-54 Jan., 23, in Iowa City.

"In that earlier game, they didn't get out of the blocks early, they got into a rut and couldn't raise their confidence level," Stringer said. "We were able to run more and control the boards more."

Minnesota guard Ellen Kramer said the difference is in the Gopher's attitude.

"We overcame that mental hurdle," Kramer said. "These past few weeks we've played in practice well and the difference is confidence."

Iowa's Law has been playing with a new level of confidence too.

In back-to-back weekends, Law has posted career bests. Last Sunday against Illinois, the junior put together a 23-point effort in an Iowa win. Law's improved scoring is a welcome change because the Hawkeyes have struggled with their field-goal shooting as of late.

Franthea Price chipped in 15 points on the day. The total finally pushed her over the 1,000-point barrier. She is the eighth Hawkeye to pass the 1,000-point mark and only the fourth to do it as a junior.

The win keeps Iowa in sole possession of the Big Ten lead. The Hawkeyes, 21-3 overall and 11-1 in the conference, travel to second place Ohio State Tuesday.

Washington backs school's drug policy

JOHNSTON, Iowa (AP) — The UI's program for helping athletes with drug problems goes "far beyond" those offered by other major colleges, many of which aren't equipped to deal with the issue, a coach at the school said Sunday.

"Just the care, the sincerity of the program to actually help the student-athlete, it's a lot different," said Rudy Washington, an assistant basketball coach at Iowa and executive director of the Black Coaches Association.

"You can go to some of your major schools, with major programs in athletics, and they're not close to being able to care for a student-athlete, whether it be psychologically or dealing with them on the abuse side," Washington said.

Washington said he spent the summer traveling the nation evaluating athletic programs for the black coach's group.

"The program at the University of Iowa is so far beyond, the drug program in particular, is so far beyond what is going on in the rest of the country it's scary," he said.

His comments were made during a taping of Iowa Public Television's "Iowa Press" program, which aired later Sunday, and came in the wake of revelations that three Iowa basketball players were treated at drug rehabilitation centers at the university's expense.

Although not asked specifically about the three players, Washington dismissed suggestions that there's an acute drug problem among athletes and defended the school.

"I think it (drug abuse) is a tremendous amount higher among the student population," said Washington, who added that coaches bear a heavy responsibility

Pacers trade Tisdale

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Indiana Pacers traded forward Wayne Tisdale to the Sacramento Kings for guard Randy Wittman and center-forward LaSalle Thompson, according to published accounts Sunday.

Tisdale and Wittman, a native of Indianapolis, confirmed the trade to The Indianapolis Star in a story published in Monday's editions. The Pacers also would send a future second-round draft choice to Sacramento.

In Sacramento, KFBK radio reported Thompson and Wittman were headed to Indiana. The radio report said it was believed Tisdale would go to the Kings.

take a 17-16 lead into the Haman match.

"That looked to me like a slam," Iowa State Coach Jim Gibbons said. He was referring to the way in which Haman put Knutsen on his back. If the referee had determined that it was a slam, Knutsen would've been awarded one point.

There was no score at that point in the match.

"(Andy) did the job for me," Iowa Coach Dan Gable said. "We've put him in that situation five or six times this year. All I can say is that he did a nice job."

Perhaps overshadowed by Haman was a pin by Terry Brands at 118 pounds. With 3:58 gone in the match, Brands allowed Iowa State's Sean Watt to escape. Watt spun to face his opponent, who gave him two shoves, caught him off balance and put him on his back for the fall.

The pin came at the 4:10 mark. "It felt good," Terry Brands said. "I never thought I'd be smiling coming off the mat, but sometimes you can't help it."

Gophers

"It's funny how one great pass makes the other players want to play, too," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "B.J. deserves a lot of credit. He just all of sudden has got it going."

One thing noticeably different from the game at Williams Arena in January, was the presence of Matt Bullard for the Hawkeyes.

The junior transfer, who has since returned from a knee injury, exploded for his finest performance as a Hawkeye, pumping in 20 points on a perfect six-for-six shooting from the floor. Included in that total were two, 3-point shots in the first half.

"I just felt really good when I was out there playing," Bullard said. "After I hit that first three-pointer, I think it really boosted my confidence."

Bullard was fitted for a new, lighter knee brace on game day and showed his mobility, scoring from both the inside and the perimeter.

"He really changed the whole complexion of the game," Haskins said.

One bright spot for the Gophers was the play of sophomore Kevin Lynch. After five points in the first half, Lynch poured in 16 to end as the game's high scorer.

But there were too many dull spots for Minnesota.

With 12 minutes, 52 seconds left in the first half, the Gophers doubt he's one of the best, if not the best. It was a great performance."

Armstrong's passing may be the ingredient that Iowa has been missing. As Armstrong's assist total has been rising so have his teammates' field goal percentages.

"He's got to have someone to throw it to," Marble said, "and if I'm on the other end of the pass, then I feel like I'm a part of what he's doing. He expects me to score in order to get the assist, so I think that helps out a lot."

"The way he passed the ball, it was just so easy for me," Bullard said. "I didn't miss a shot, just because I had the ball in such great places to shoot it. It really helped the whole team."

Bullard cashed in on Armstrong's for helping their players.

"I think coaches have been given an extraordinary set of agendas," he said. "We become whatever we need to be for that young man to be successful."

"If it's a shoulder to lean on, if it's a lap to cry in, if it's a home-cooked meal, if it's a kick in the pants, whatever the case, that's what we have to do."

Washington appeared on the program with Grinnell College president George Drake, and both were questioned about controversial rules that would prohibit athletes from getting scholarships if they don't meet testing and grade-point standards.

Drake is a former member of the NCAA's President's Commission

Brands and junior Steve Martin have been battling all season for the starting slot at 118 pounds. Martin is second-ranked at the weight by Amateur Wrestling News, but Gable had been disappointed in past efforts, giving Brands the opportunity.

"Terry has been wrestling well lately," Gable said. "We'll probably decide this week who will be the starter. It will probably be in a wrestle-off situation."

Before the dual, Iowa seniors making their last appearances at Carver-Hawkeye Arena were honored. In addition to Haman and Melchiorre, John Heffernan (a 5-3 winner at 167 pounds), Dean Hoppel and Dave Munson rounded out their regular-season careers.

Iowa now prepares for the Big Ten Meet, March 4-5 at West Lafayette, Ind., before the NCAA Meet, March 16-18 at Oklahoma City, Okla.

"We wrestled about like I coached," Gable said. "We were so intense last week. I guess I wasn't ready to coach. Now it's time to think about the Big Tens" leading rebounder Richard Coffey went down from an injury to his left knee. Coffey went up in the air to receive a pass on an inbound, came down, pivoted, then fell to the floor in pain.

Haskins had no report on Coffey, except that he was in a walking cast by game's end.

The rest of the Minnesota health report wasn't encouraging, either. Coffey and Willie Burton suffered from the flu entering the game and Walter Newbern had to be rested throughout the contest because of weak ankles, but Haskins made no excuses.

"A lot of times you look around and say 'what happened to you,'" Haskins said. "I think you have to say what the Hawkeyes did to us. This is an outstanding club."

In the previous meeting, the Gophers captured the victory in the closing seconds on a tip by Jim Shikenjanski. Iowa senior Roy Marble, who talked last week of how difficult the loss was for the team, seemed pleased with the outcome.

"We were happy to be at home," Marble said. "The crowd was into it, our families were here. We just went out and played hard basketball and tried to change what happened at Minnesota."

The win moved the Hawkeyes to 19-6 overall, 7-5 in the Big Ten. Minnesota slid to 14-8, 6-6.

Washington

which deals with such issues. Washington said college entrance examinations are culturally biased against black youngsters and shouldn't be used as a standard for admissions. He rejected alternative testing.

"I don't think you have to test is the bottom line for me," said Washington. "You take a student, his progress. He might be gifted in a particular subject and you never can tell that if you don't sit down and talk to the student, talk to his instructors, talk to the people who are admitting him into the university."

"I think the universities should bear the burden of admitting a particular student."

Drake conceded there are cultural biases in the tests, but said administrators are working to correct them.

"We should not bring students to our universities who cannot meet the standards of our universities," he said.

"It's unfortunate, but kids don't come to your school initially to become great students," Washington countered. "They come, in our case, as athletes. They want to participate in athletics. The carrot for each of those individuals, be it football or basketball, is the professional ranks. That's just being as honest as I can possibly be."

"What we hope to do with those students is make them realize that education is a very important part of their life."

Keogh, Millmier qualify for NCAA

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming team is content with maintaining the status quo — for now.

For the second consecutive year, the Hawkeyes placed seventh at the Big Ten swimming and diving championships. The Michigan Wolverines, hosting this year's event at Ann Arbor, Mich., took the title with 740.5 team points. Iowa gathered 272 points.

"Many other coaches picked us lower than seventh because we have a really young team," Iowa Coach Pete Kennedy said, "but everyone really came through for us. As the meet went on, people found out we came to swim."

Kennedy said that he was pleased with the effort of his team, figuring in Iowa's youth and inexperience.

"The kids did a great job for us," Kennedy said. "From top to bottom we got some big-time performances out of everybody. We only graduate three seniors, and with a good recruiting year we'll be shooting for the top four next year."

Kennedy added that his club's enthusiasm was as important as the performances turned in at the meet.

"The kids showed a lot of spirit, plus they swam fast, which is infinitely important," Kennedy said. "You know you've accomplished something when you're a seventh-place team and everybody's talking about you."

Iowa's highlights included NCAA-qualifying performances by junior Louise Keogh in the 200-yard breaststroke and senior diver Terri Millmier on the 1-meter board.

Keogh registered a 2:19.09 in the event, giving her fifth-place. The time also met the required NCAA standard of 2:20.00. Qualifiers will participate in the NCAA meet at Indianapolis, Ind., March 10-12.

"I was over the moon," Keogh said. "I'm really excited and content now that I get to go on to the NCAA meet."

Keogh missed the Iowa school record of 2:18.67, but Iowa assistant coach Jim Sheridan said she has an excellent chance of breaking it in Indianapolis.

"She'll have less pressure on her at the NCAA Championships," Sheridan said.

Diving Coach Bob Rydze said the weekend's meet may have been Millmier's best meet. Her score of 450.81 was good enough for second-place on the 1-meter board and an automatic berth in the NCAA meet. In addition, she finished seventh on the 3-meter board with 452.22 points.

"I thought all of our divers did pretty good," Rydze said. "What's encouraging for us is the fact that freshman Kim Yager placed sixth on the 1-meter and freshman Katie Ketoff placed in the top eight on the tower (10-meter platform)."

Three Iowa school records were established during the weekend, including two by junior Katie Van Verst. She set school records in the 100- and 200-yard backstroke events, but failed to qualify for the NCAA Championships.

Junior Becky Anderson, sophomore Colleen Thome and Debbie Lynch teamed with freshman Stacie Gilleo to set a new Iowa mark of 1:34.78 in the 200-yard, freestyle relay.

Hawkeyes sweep Cyclones, Warriors

By Lance Ivey
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's gymnastics team pulled a weekend sweep, beating Iowa State and Winona State at Ames Friday and Winona State Sunday in Iowa City.

The Hawkeyes raised their season record to 10-3 and turned in five school-record performances in the process.

Iowa scored 185 in defeating Iowa State, and captured a 183.95-176.8 victory in the Field House over Winona State.

"Both Iowa State and Winona looked tough on Friday," Iowa Coach Diane DeMarco said. "Iowa State was pumped and psyched, but we came out ready. It was an extremely competitive meet for all of us. We seem to really thrive in highly competitive situations."

DeMarco was pleased with the individual performances turned in. And despite two falls, the Iowa gymnasts had two solid performances in preparation for the mid-March Big Ten Championships.

Robyn Zussman, Lori Cole, Jamie Lynn Hedley and Kathie Orwig had strong beam sets Sunday, with Zussman placing first at 9.55, Cole second at 9.45, and Hedley and Orwig third, both at 9.3. Cole took first in the floor exercise at 9.5, and Martie Janovich checked in at 9.4 in the floor.

Women's Gymnastics

Tracy Junker scored a first place 9.25 on bars with Hedley close behind at 9.2. Zussman, 37.4, captured the all-around with Cole, 37.1, Hedley 36.4, and Michelle Cahal, 36.1, following.

Iowa set school records in team score, 185, vault, 46.25, beam, 46.30, floor exercise, 46.75, and Zussman set a new individual mark with a 9.7 on the beam.

"Barring last year's Big Tens, Friday's meet was probably one of the most exciting meets we've been in," DeMarco said. "It was nip and tuck all the way."

"We sustained a couple of falls on Sunday, but we are sharpening our executions"

Iowa travels to Wisconsin March 4 to take on the Badgers, Minnesota, and Michigan before returning for the Big Ten Championships in Iowa City, March 19-20.

"We're looking awesome," Zussman said. "I think we can finish number one in the Big Tens."

"Everybody needs to stay on; to stick their routines."

Freshmen key weekend win; Hawks breeze past Iowa State

By Mike Pollsky
The Daily Iowan

For the first time all season, Iowa Coach Tom Dunn's inconsistent, inexperienced freshmen performed like veteran sophomores.

It was all worth the wait. "We really turned it on," said freshman Dillon Ashton, who finished second in the all-around. "We performed real well, better than we have all year. But we still have a lot of room for improvement."

Ashton's finest all-around performance of the season helped Iowa claim the three-team meet championship against Iowa State and Wisconsin-Oshkosh.

Iowa finished with a season-high total of 268.90, while Iowa State placed a distant second at 257.30. Wisconsin-Oshkosh, a Division II powerhouse, finished last with a score of 215.80.

"It was a real relaxing meet," Dunn said. "Being able to perform on our own equipment and having the great home crowd made things a lot easier.

Men's Gymnastics

"Considering that we were without Keith Cousino, Keith Rooks and Paul Wozniak, this was our best meet of the year."

Cousino, Rooks and Wozniak were held out of Friday's competition by Dunn, to allow sophomores Jim Cuthbertson, Chip Greaves and Matt Roes an opportunity to work themselves into the regular lineup.

Greaves tied for third on the still rings with a 9.10, Roes placed fourth on floor exercise at 9.10, and Cuthbertson claimed the fifth spot on the pommel horse with a 8.45.

"They all performed real well," Dunn said. "They made a few mistakes, but they got right back and finished strong."

All-American Jeff Dow, still not fully recovered from a recent bout with the flu, was impressive as he claimed yet another all-around title.

Dow won every event, with the exception of a second-place finish on the floor exercise, enroute to scoring a 55.90.

"Dow is still not 100%," Dunn said, "and he's taken some difficulty out of his routines. But he's been working real hard and he'll be back in shape real soon."

Dow's performance was not an unusual sight to the North Gym capacity crowd. But the fine performances turned in by the Iowa freshmen was quite unusual.

"The freshmen looked much better," Dunn said. "Dillon (Ashton) looked really good, as did Paul (Bautel) and Don Scarlett."

"I just hope that the confidence that we gained this weekend will carry over to future meets. But for now, we just have to continue to work hard and hopefully things will fall in place."

Improved Iowa set for Big Tens

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes won one of 17 events at the UNI-Dome Open in Cedar Falls, Iowa, Saturday but came away with what they were looking for — several improved performances.

"It was definitely a confidence booster for me," Rod Chambers said of his 1 minute, 51.33 second performance in the 800 meters. The junior from Chicago said he considers himself "a miler" but some of his best races this season have come in the 800.

"I've been having a good season ever since the first meet," he said. "I just hope to score points in one of the two events at the Big Tens."

Iowa sent only a partial squad to the event which drew competitors from host Northern Iowa, Iowa State and Division II and III schools from the Midwest. The meet was unscored but Iowa State came away with a meet-high five first-place finishes.

High jumper K.P. Lansing turned in the Hawkeyes' only win Saturday, clearing 6-foot-9. Iowa Coach Ted Wheeler said Lansing, Chambers and sophomore hurdler Gary Falls showed the most marked improvement.

"I was happy that Gary Falls got back into competition in the hurdles," he said, "and Rodney Chambers' time indicates that he's progressing. That's a (personal record) for him and sets us up for the Big Tens."

In the 800, Chambers ran closely with former Iowa distancer Bill Theisen and came on in the final 60 meters, only to be leaned out by .02 seconds at the tape.

"No one knew who had won the race," Chambers said. "We were both leaning and I thought I had won."

Lansing's 6-9 was a season best jump but four inches short of his personal best height. Wheeler said the senior jumper from Marion, Iowa, could contend for the 7-foot plateau by outdoor season.

"He jumped seven-one last year," he said. "We haven't been pushing it and he's progressing well right now."

Iowa swamps Iowa State, 139-97

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

For the past 10 years, the Iowa men's swimming team has blown Iowa State out of the water in their annual dual meet. This year it happened again.

Iowa, which finished first in all but four events, trounced the Cyclones 139-97 at the Field House pool Friday.

Iowa Coach Glenn Patton juggled his lineup against the Cyclones to evaluate his team heading into the Big Ten Championships. The Big Ten meet will be held in Indianapolis, March 2-4.

"This was a good Big Ten tune up," Iowa Coach Glenn Patton said. "We juggled the line-up to look at the guys' third events. It was a very low-emotion meet, and

Men's Swimming

(the swimmers) learned some things about their other events."

"It was a good chance to experiment," junior Erik Bacon said. "And the atmosphere was very nice and laid-back."

Individual first-place winners for Iowa included freshman Artur Wojdat in the 200- and 100-yard freestyles, Bacon in the 200-yard butterfly and senior Dave Anderson in the 500-yard freestyle.

Iowa State was led with first-places by Sean Seanlon in the 1,000-yard freestyle and Magnus Persson in the 200-yard backs-stroke. Iowa State did have something to cheer about. Cyclone diver Lee-Jay Strifler posted a double win in the diving competition.

Strifler defeated Iowa's Tomasz Rossa by almost 32 points on the low board and 13 points on the high board.

"(Tomasz) was tired," Chris Breckner, an assistant to the diving squad, said, "and he dove tired. He's been working pretty hard."

Strifler was the only performer to break a meet record this year when he scored 321.9 in the 1-meter competition. The old record was 314.85, set by Iowa State's Jeff Symons in 1987.

The Hawkeyes also swept the relay races, capturing first and second in the 400-yard medley.

Hawks win at Drake invite

The Daily Iowan

Iowa volleyball Coach Sandy Stewart enjoyed a slice of heaven this weekend.

Stewart's Hawkeyes beat her alma mater Nebraska in straight games, 15-13, 15-4, to capture the Drake Invitational Volleyball title this past weekend.

Volleyball

"It was heaven there for a few minutes," Stewart said. "That's my alma mater and it's been a goal of mine as a head coach to beat them. It was a fun win."

It was Iowa's first ever win over the Cornhuskers. Nebraska finished the fall season ranked tenth nationally.

"I think everyone there was surprised," Stewart said. "We played well and kept getting better as the weekend went on."

Iowa trailed Nebraska 13-9 in the first game of the championship match before rallying for the win. "Nebraska was shellshocked. They didn't know what hit them," Stewart said.

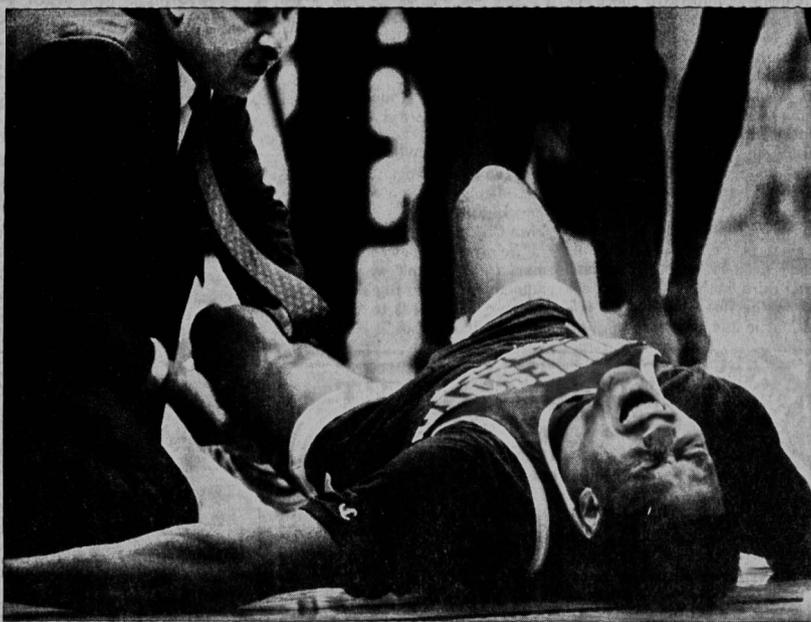

Iowa opened the tournament with a 15-5, 15-13 sweep of Missouri. Then Iowa disposed of Graceland College, 15-9, 7-15 and 15-5. The Hawkeyes rounded out the opening round with a 15-9, 15-11 win over Iowa State.

In the championship round Iowa beat Central Missouri in three games before sweeping Nebraska for the title.

"We're pretty excited," Stewart said. "Needless to say this was a very big win for Iowa. It should help our preseason ranking next fall."

This was the first off-season event for the Hawkeyes this year. Iowa posted a 24-9 record and set 25 school records during last fall's regular season. Iowa will open next year's schedule against Nebraska.

Iowa continues its spring season schedule at Western Illinois this weekend.

Minnesota forward Richard Coffey winces in pain Saturday in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Coffey never returned to play in the game after injuring his left knee during the first half.

Edwards' basket lifts Indiana

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP)—Jay Edwards made a 3-pointer at the buzzer Sunday, sending ninth-ranked Indiana past No. 13 Michigan 76-75 and giving the Hoosiers a 15-game home winning streak.

Edwards, who scored nine of his 23 points in the final 8:48, also made three of four free throws in the last 1:22 after Michigan took a 75-71 lead on Sean Higgins' 3-pointer.

Michigan, 19-5 and 7-5 in the Big Ten, had a chance to win but missed its final shot. Eric Anderson grabbed the rebound with nine seconds left to set up Edwards' winning basket.

Indiana, 21-5 and 11-1, leads Illinois by three games. Michigan and Iowa are four games back.

Glen Rice, who entered as the Big Ten's leading scorer with 26.4 points per game, got into foul trouble late in the first half and scored just seven points.

Rumeal Robinson, who finished with 24 points, made a 3-pointer to tie the game at 63 with eight minutes to go. He had two more baskets as Michigan outscored Indiana 7-6 until a free throw by

Big Ten Basketball

Lyndon Jones tied the game again at 70 with 1:52 remaining.

The Wolverines opened the second half with a 13-7 run that gave them a 50-49 advantage with 14:55 to play.

Northwestern 70, Ohio State 69
EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Brian Schwabe sank a game-winning free throw with four seconds left Saturday night as Northwestern overcame a 16-point deficit in the final eight minutes and beat No. 16 Ohio State.

Ohio State was playing its first game without leading scorer Jay Burson, whose college career ended with a neck injury earlier in the week.

Walker Lambiotte scored 23 points for Northwestern, 9-14 overall and 2-11 in the Big Ten. Perry Carter scored 25 points for Ohio State, 17-8 and 6-6.

Ohio State put on a 15-2 run early in the second half, with Carter scoring nine points, to take a 56-40 lead. The Buckeyes were in front 63-47 with eight minutes left.

Ohio State led 65-62 when Tony White scored an apparent basket for the Buckeyes. But it didn't count as a foul was called on Jamaal Brown.

Wisconsin 72, No. 5 Illinois 52
Trent Jackson scored 27 points, including five 3-pointers, as Wisconsin improved to 15-7 and ensured its first winning season in nine years.

The Badgers, seeking their first postseason berth since 1942, took a 32-18 halftime lead, and cold-shooting Illinois never got closer than 12 points in the second half. The visiting Illini is 21-4.

Purdue 87, Michigan St. 63
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP)—Tony Jones scored 13 of his 19 points in the first half as Purdue beat Michigan State in a matchup of struggling Big Ten teams Saturday.

Purdue had lost seven of its last eight games.

EDITOR WANTED

Iowa City's morning newspaper is also Iowa City's largest newspaper, with an editorial staff of more than 50 young professionals, an editorial budget of over $225,000 and a circulation of 20,500. The Board of Student Publications Incorporated and the publisher of The Daily Iowan will soon interview candidates for the position of editor for the term beginning June 1, 1989 and ending May 31, 1990. Salary for the year will be $10,000 to $12,000 depending on experience.

The editor of the DI must have strong journalistic abilities and dedication, as well as skills in management and a clear sense of editorial responsibility. The board will weigh heavily such factors as scholarship, previous news writing and editing experience (including work at the DI or other daily newspaper) and proven ability to lead, organize and inspire a staff engaged in creative editorial activities.

Applicants must be currently enrolled in an undergraduate or graduate degree program at the U. of I. Deadline for submission of completed application is noon, Friday, February 24, 1989.

Cliché Sousa Spectacular marches through Hancher

By Steve T. Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

The baby waited until the quietest moment of the Tchaikovsky violin solo to gurgle something about going home.

The Hancher Hackers took it as a personal pneumatic challenge when a commentator took the podium and talked to the audience. He could hardly be heard for the honking.

The Don Pardo-voiced narrator read from the program notes, which was bad enough, and for some inexplicable reason decided to tell the audience everything presently known about soprano Paula Boire, but only the names and faculty positions of violinist Leopold LaFosse and cornetist David Greenhoe.

And — how to put this delicately? — Myron Welch's Symphony Band is no Army Drum and Bugle Corps. Not in this lifetime, anyway.

"And despite it all," you're probably expecting to read, "the Sousa Spectacular Saturday night worked."

Score one for you, this time. Because despite it all, the Sousa Spectacular in Hancher on Saturday night worked.

Like the mop-haired heavy-metal heads they consider the vanguard of Satan, the Hancher patrons sat immobile and entranced — and quiet, as God is my witness — by the volume and unrelenting pace of the first two numbers, Paul Creston's "Celebration Overture" and Jacques Press' "Wedding Dance." Welch conducted these two works, and the band rendered them earnestly, if clunkily.

But before any Sousa was played, a well-dressed used car salesman took the stage and said, "Good evening, ladies and gentlemen." Bad enough that a disaster like this — a lecturer at a band concert — could happen at all, but infinitely worse that it was a boring disaster.

Finally, though, there came the dramatic side of the evening. Guest conductor Keith Brion, dressed and moving as John Philip Sousa, led the band in Sousa's "Semper Fidelis" march. Sousa's marches are arch-anthems of seductive hummability, built to last, and the symphony band gave "Semper Fi" a respectable effort.

UI School of Music's David Greenhoe drew the loudest applause of the entire night with his skilled performance of Herbert Clarke's cornet solo from "The Carnival of Venice." And although Paula Boire rendered her vocal solo from Donizetti's "Don Pasquale" with zest and humor, the choice of the solo was unfortunate; it's far too set in the context of the opera to weather separation the way other solos would have.

But none of this really conveyed the 'hokey-as-all-get-out-but-effective-anyway' character of the night as well as the number that closed the first half of the show. This was Sousa's "The Daughters of Texas" march, with its famous "Over hill, over dale, we will hit the dusty trail, as those caissons go rolling along" phrase. Brion directed his trombones to face the audience and initiated a clap-along to the rousing score, finishing it off with gunshots and tons o' hoopla.

This was the stuff that should have been too obvious to work. But a performance of anything is at least partly — if not entirely — judged by the reaction it gets, and the audience laughed like kids, actually having a better time than at more "sophisticated" events.

The highlight performance of the night was the band's rendition of Frederick Meacham's "American Patrol," and the funniest moment of the evening came right after, when Brion initiated an audience whistle-along for Arthur Pryor's "The Whistler and His Dog." This audience just coughed. Ah, Hancher!

During every Sousa march, from "Power and Glory" to "Glory of the Yankee Navy," there could be seen a sea of tapping feet and drumming fingers, with smiles of recognition on the proverbial faces young and old. This was stuff to sicken the cynic, but it happened, and therein lay the night's success.

The obligatory Big Finish consisted of Rossini's "William Tell" overture, but there were no illusions as to what would actually end the night — "Stars and Stripes Forever," played with infectious spirit, trombones and horns facing the audience, everybody on their feet, applauding as the American flag was lowered from the ceiling. For a cliché, one could do worse.

Ziggy gets Hancher jammin'

By David S. Lacher
Special to The Daily Iowan

"We're the survivors!" Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers played to a sold out Hancher Auditorium audience Thursday night that remained on its feet and sang along throughout the entire show. The monster dread locks of lead guitarist Chinna and the free and lively dancing of the three female backing vocalists initially seized the attention of the audience. Ziggy came on stage clad in what any rasta would consider the vanguard of college fashion — a gold Iowa sweatshirt, number 45.

Though Ziggy and his brother (on guitar and drum) and their two sisters (on backing vocals) took the front of the stage, a full ensemble provided tight driving rhythms for the front-stage vocalists. Though they don't carry the Marley last name, the band, consisting of two keyboard players, a rhythm guitar, bass guitar, lead guitar, a rhythm percussion section and the third backing vocalist, demonstrated the mastering of their instruments — more than adequately allowing them to play with the Marley foursome.

The musical talent of the band paired with the vocal compatibility of the three backing singers allowed the entire group a freedom to spontaneously redesign, lengthen or alter their music.

The success of the concert lay in how unrestricted the band was with their musical rhythms. Having six voices jumping in on command for vocal accent in "Tomorrow People" was just one time when the band expertly journeyed through the unknown waters of spontaneous rhythms. The band also effectively set their bass guitar and drum rhythms in direct opposition and frequently lengthened songs with both vocal and guitar solos — often simultaneously. To hear a band of so many instruments have such freedom with their material is indeed a joy, and with Ziggy and the Melody Makers it happened effortlessly and without a flaw.

Despite the fact that the band consists of 12 people, the Melody Makers played in a very tight, close rhythm. Covering their older material and most every song from their latest album "Conscious Party," Ziggy and his band opened with and sprinkled their show with several Bob Marley songs. The crowd responded favorably to "Survivors," "Stir It Up," "Buffalo Soldier" and even the mixing in of "Get Up, Stand Up" with a Melody Makers song.

The playing of these old favorites wasn't a cheap crowd pleaser, but merely a reminder that the message of the older songs is still alive and true. "Buffalo Soldier," the closing song, involved the audience in singing the chorus, creating an uplifting conclusion to the concert. "Buffalo Soldier" reminds us of the evils of oppression, and when Ziggy sings one of his father's songs, the message is that much stronger. A vocal rendition of "Get Up, Stand Up" let the audience know that the struggle still continues for many and that the solution comes only by standing up for our rights. "Aiding and Abetting (Rastafari)," from their early album "Play The Game Right," reminded the audience of Jah love and showed that the Melody Makers still consider their oldest material contemporary and relevant — and that they can still perform it well. "Tumblin' Down" symbolically spoke of the eagle and the bear, suggesting U.S.—Soviet relations, and how each is fighting "to control our body and our soul." Yet, the song shows that Jah, the almighty, knows of the struggle and encourages us to love all people as a solution.

Thanks to the efforts of SCOPE, Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers' performance easily ranks as one of the best shows to play Hancher. When even the people in the back row of the balcony were constantly on their feet, you know there was a good feeling going around.

Dance and praises to Jah Rastafari from Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers! A spirit of joy was created in all thanks to the joy of reggae music.
