Shuttle, rats await launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Buoyed by a flawless countdown and a forecast of perfect weather, NASA is set to launch space shuttle Discovery today with five astronauts and a cargo that includes a $100 million satellite and four crippled rats.

Liftoff of the first shuttle mission of 1989 is scheduled for 8:07 a.m. EST. Launch-time weather forecasts called for clear skies, gentle winds and mild temperatures.

"(This) morning is a great day to go fly," shuttle boss Richard Truly said at a Sunday afternoon news conference. "The weather has been getting prettier and prettier. We're in good shape."

The countdown proceeded so smoothly on Sunday that preparations skipped two hours ahead of schedule.

"It seems a little scary it's going so well," said Chuck Henschel, launch test director. "We're ahead of where we want to be."

The fault-free countdown was in sharp contrast to the troubles that plagued NASA in getting Discovery ready for the mission. The flight originally had a Feb. 18 target date, but a series of faulty or suspect parts delayed the launch four times.

Workers changed out turbo pumps in the main engines when flaws were found in the pumps on sister shuttle Atlantis. Last week, tests showed a failure in the system that commands the separation of the two booster rockets and the external tank. The unit was replaced with a part removed from Columbia.

Launch of Discovery sets in motion NASA's ambitious plan for seven shuttle missions this year while building toward a once-a-month flight by 1992. The flight will be the third since the nation returned to manned spaceflight following the Challenger disaster of 1986.

Discovery's five-man crew was to be awakened about 3 a.m. today and was to board the shuttle at 5:15 a.m.

Waiting for them in cages aboard the ship will be four rats, part of an experiment on the effects of weightlessness on the healing of injured bones.

A small piece of bone was clipped from each of the rats, and how well these injuries heal during five days in weightlessness will be studied when the rodents are returned to Earth.

Source of leak undetermined in explosion

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

A gas leak triggered Thursday's explosion that injured two people in the main control building at the Mid America Pipeline Co. terminal, five miles east of Iowa City, a fire investigator said Friday.

West Branch Fire Chief Dick Stoolman said investigators are still unsure of the origin or cause of the gas leak. Pilot lights or a switch tripping are possible causes behind the gas leak, he said.

"We're taking the building apart piece by piece," Stoolman said.

Employees Kent Gedlinske, Coralville, and Mike Burkett, Solon, were inside the main control building when it exploded at 11:19 a.m. Thursday. Estimated damage to the building is $500,000.

The Mid America plant outside Iowa City has a history of accidents. Two men were killed and three others injured in a 1975 propane accident; a pipeline leak forced the evacuation of 60 people from the area in 1985; and a

Cheney eyed for defense

Easy confirmation foreseen

WASHINGTON (AP) — At first glance, Rep. Richard Cheney might seem an unlikely candidate to run the Pentagon, but his selection by President George Bush won't have reviews in Congress.

In picking the six-term Republican from Wyoming, Bush moved quickly on Friday to fill the void left by the Senate's rejection of John Tower less than 24 hours earlier.

And while the announcement caught most political leaders by surprise, the Cheney choice at once fulfilled two objectives Bush advisers had cited as critical: someone quickly available and someone quickly confirmable.

To allow the politically divisive Tower defeat to fester over the weekend — and to be churned over on Sunday television talk shows and in newspaper columns — would have not been helpful to the president.

So far, the move-quick strategy seems to be working. Senate leaders announced immediately that they would hold confirmation hearings in the coming week.

"Congressman Dick Cheney is well known and highly respected by the members of the Senate," the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and the panel's ranking Republican, John Warner of Virginia, said in a joint statement.

Although Cheney, 48, lacks direct defense experience, he is a member of the House Intelligence Committee and was senior Republican on the 15-member special panel that investigated the Iran-Contra affair.

Equally important, he served as President Gerald Ford's chief of staff.

In selecting Cheney, whom Bush praised as a "widely respected man of principle," the president repeated what he had done in filling many other Cabinet slots — he reached back and picked someone whom had served in a previous Republican administration and with whom he had enjoyed a close working relationship.

Cheney did not get wind of what was in store until Thursday — as the Senate was at work rejecting Tower — when he got telephone calls from chief of staff John Sununu and National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft.

Bush himself didn't contact the candidate until just hours before the official announcement.

The president's choice makes sense, said Norman Ornstein, a political analyst for the Conservative American Enterprise Institute.

"You wouldn't have thought of him initially because he's not a defense specialist. But in terms of respect in Congress, he's near the top of everyone's list."

"If Dick Cheney can't make it through the confirmation process, no one can," Ornstein said. "Bush had to find someone who could sail through, and it was a wise choice."

Bush himself called Cheney "a thoughtful man, a quiet man, a strong man" who "approaches public policy with vigor, determination and diligence."

And, judging from early reaction, most members of the Senate appear to agree. Cheney has few detractors.

"I have the greatest respect for his broad range of experience and knowledge," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., a member of the Senate

Branstad's proposal could bring additional funding to universities

By Jay Casini
The Daily Iowan

Several UI budget priorities not adequately addressed in Gov. Terry Branstad's January budget proposal may receive additional funding through bills currently being prepared in the Iowa Legislature.

Branstad's January proposal recommended $900,000 to improve the quality of undergraduate education at the UI in 1990. Although that sum was less than the UI and the state Board of Regents requested, it represented the first time in years that the governor's office had recommended any money for undergraduate education. However, UI officials complained that Branstad's proposal did not contain adequate funding for areas such as minority recruitment and retention, library automation and acquisitions, and fire and environmental safety improvements.

Sen. Richard Varn, D-Solon, said the Legislature is trying to meet the needs of the regents' universities through two supplemental appropriations bills.

"The first supplemental bill contains only those things that are absolutely necessary, such as deferred maintenance costs and fire and environmental safety," he said.

Varn said the draft of the first supplemental bill, which was passed by the Senate Appropriations Committee, includes $500,000 for fire and environmental safety improvements at the UI. The bill also provides some funding for the remodeling of MacLean Hall and OASIS, the UI library automation project.

Additional funding for other areas of concern at the three regents' institutions may be provided by the second supplemental bill, Varn said, depending on the availability of funds near the end of the legislative session and on the priorities of state legislators.

In addition, Varn said separate bills are being prepared to address

Confident candidates predict wins, vow to rise above political muck

By Diana Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Despite a campaign season wrought with accusations of mudslinging, lying and conspiracy, the opening of the UI Student Senate election polls this morning comes with both confident and cautious predictions of victory from party leaders.

Vowing to continue to campaign until the polls close at 5 p.m. Tuesday, Jenö Berta, vice-presidential candidate of the Allied Student Advocacy Party, said his party will keep trying to rise above the negative campaigning of the other parties and other setbacks ASAP has suffered.

"We're doing everything we can to show the students a positive campaign and to keep things upbeat," Berta said. "I think we've given the voters a choice and tried to show them our accomplishments."

As polling places open at 9 a.m. today in seven UI buildings, Berta and the ASAP party go up against Students First and Student Monarchy. Both Students First and ASAP are vying to take over the senate with full slates of 29 candidates, while Student Monarchy campaigns with 20 members on its slate. Each party also has candidates for the senate's executive board — including president, vice president, executive associate and treasurer — that will face election by the Student Senate after the new senators are seated.

Doug Urban, presidential candidate of Student Monarchy, said his party is "really confident about winning" and added that he thinks the Monarchy campaign has gone well because of its originality and the fact that his party has stayed away from the mudslinging of the other two parties.

"They're saying, 'we're better than the other parties,'" Urban said. "We're not saying that we're better, we're just saying that we think we can do a better job governing the student body."

But even though members of the parties have accused each other of

Harmon, Mitchell testimonies spark investigation of ethics in UI athletics

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

UI President Hunter Rawlings Friday ordered an investigation into allegations that the UI may have violated Big Ten and NCAA rules in its treatment of former football players Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell.

Rawlings' announcement came after the former players' testimonies in the highly publicized trial of sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom, who are accused of signing contracts and giving huge sums of money to the players before their college eligibility expired.

Harmon and Mitchell told a federal jury in Chicago of their slim academic records while at the UI — records that some suggest fell well below required standards.

"The university will vigorously follow up on any statement or allegation regarding possible violations of NCAA or Big Ten rules or UI policy," Rawlings said Friday. "We will not tolerate any violation of rule or policy."

Harmon, a former Hawkeye running back now playing for the Buffalo Bills, testified that in three years at the UI he took only one course toward his major in communications.

His transcript showed he took courses in billiards, bowling, soccer and fundamental military organization to meet the minimum requirements to play football.

Mitchell, a former defensive back now playing for the Detroit Lions, said he only came to the UI to play football and went to classes only to remain eligible to play.

Mitchell also testified to accepting a loaned car from a Hawkeye fan, a violation of NCAA guidelines.

Rawlings said in a statement issued from Princeton, N.J., where he was visiting Friday, that UI officials are watching such testimonies "very closely" and that a full investigation of the matter is pending.

"I have asked Vice Presidents Susan Phillips and David Vernon to investigate the matter fully and to determine whether a more extensive investigation is needed and, if so, what the extent or scope of the investigation should be," Rawlings said.

Phillips is vice president for finance and Vernon is acting vice president for academic affairs.

Ann Rhodes, Rawlings' liaison to the Department of Athletics, said the two players were eligible by league standards and that the investigation would be looking beyond questions of possible violations.

"It's a matter of going beyond the minimum requirements," Rhodes said. "Both of them, based on the minimum standards of eligibility, were eligible."

Vernon agreed. "It's clear that they were both

High-school minorities visit UI

Annual CAC conference looks at future for area students

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

About 54 minority high-school students were told Saturday that life and college are tough, but hard work will usually bring success.

The second annual "A Look to The Future" Conference, organized and funded by the UI Collegiate Associations Council, is a student government effort to advance the UI administration's Opportunity at Iowa program that aims to recruit and retain minority students at the undergraduate level.

Ranging in age from sophomores to seniors, the students from Davenport, Waterloo, Muscatine and Tama in Iowa heard from speakers, toured campus, and learned about admissions, financial aid and special support programs during the two-day conference. Many were able to watch the end of a men's basketball practice and gather players' autographs.

"Strolling around the campus was a very enlightening experience. I found the atmosphere and social setting relaxed and inviting," said Todd Ramirez, a Davenport North High School senior.

The participants, in the upper 50 percent of their class, were invited to attend the free conference by the CAC, and about 15 more attended than last year.

The conference opened Friday at a luncheon where Philip Hubbard, UI vice president of student services and Opportunity at Iowa director, discussed the importance of earning a university degree.

Hubbard said census figures predict that by the year 2020 minorities will be 35 percent of the United States population, and therefore today's young people must prepare to meet the demands of a changing world through education.

"Every student who comes to this university, no matter what their ethnic background, is going to go out and conduct their life in that kind of society," he said. "All of our students need that kind of an experience here, and if we as a university did not provide that kind of environment, we have failed."

Minority students should commit themselves to a university education to acquire the communication skills necessary to succeed in an economy that has evolved from manufacturing ships, cars and steel to information.

It is important for minority students to major in those areas where they can receive a degree that will offer them a broad educational background with the ability to move into different career areas, he said.

Esther Materon-Arum, academic support coordinator at the UI Office of Special Support Services, told the students that the special services offered the 600 UI minority undergraduate students success with hard work.

About 15 peer assistants, who work with Special Support Services to act as friends and counselors to fellow minority students, met with the high-school students at the conference.

Darryl Lockett, a UI junior, said coming to the UI from the predominantly black Hyde Park Career Academy in Chicago was a transition, but he made the adjustment with help from a peer assistant.

"I had to get used to being the only black in class sometimes," Lockett said. He said working as a peer assistant has given him the opportunity to encourage more minorities to attend the UI and help the minority students who now attend.

"We were letting them know that if they wanted to work to get here there are enough services to keep them here," Lockett said.

Financial Aid Director Mark Warner also spoke about the UI programs. Warner said UI students received $94 million in financial aid awards from the UI, federal, state and private funds in 1987-88. "There's a lot of financial aid available from grants, loans, scholarships and work-study. All in all we have 21,500 of 29,000 students — 71 percent receive some type of financial aid," he said.

CAC Auditor Eric Sanders and Liberal Arts Student Association member Mary Snyder organized the project and agreed the information would help students.

Private control of liquor has raised cost, lessened selection

DES MOINES (AP) — Liquor prices are higher and selection is lower, especially in rural areas, since the state got out of the liquor retail business two years ago, according to state and private industry sources.

"The old system did things better," said Rep. Roger Halvorson, R-Monona. "You hear the complaints, you hear the disgruntled people out there, and you hear all the arguments about why we shouldn't have done it."

Still, Halvorson and other lawmakers say there is little chance the change will be reversed. "I don't see any turning it around at this stage."

When Iowa became the first control state to relinquish the retail monopoly, it did become more convenient for Iowans to buy liquor, since 443 private stores now sell spirits in place of 219 state stores.

Also, the private stores often have longer hours and many accept private checks, unlike the state stores which imposed restrictions as part of the state's policy to hold down consumption.

But while the state no longer retails liquor, it remains the sole wholesaler. Lawmakers wanted the state to earn as much money under private sales as it did under the monopoly, so they set the markup at 50 percent on liquor and $1.75 a gallon on wine.

8 emerge as prospects for new city police chief

The Daily Iowan

Iowa City officials have narrowed their search for a new police chief from 200 applicants to eight finalists.

The finalists include an Iowa City native, Paul Hoffee, director of public safety in Cedar Falls.

Other finalists are: Lt. E. Doyle Barker of Greeley, Colo.; Glenn Gabriel, director of public safety in Mankato, Minn.; William Lillich, police chief in Kent, Ohio; Lt. Gary Mass of Wheatridge, Colo.; John Packer, police chief in La Vista, Neb.; Leslie Sharrock, police chief in Moorhead, Minn.; and John Ward, police chief in Kirksville, Mo.

City Manager Stephen Atkins spearheaded the search for Iowa City's first new police chief in 13 years. The search began late last year after former police chief Harvey Miller was granted a disability pension in November by the Police Retirement Systems Board. He underwent surgery in August to remove a cancerous growth from his colon.

Neither acting police chief Kenneth Stock nor any other members of the Iowa City Police Department were among the chosen finalists.

The deadline for applying for the position was Jan. 31 and Atkins received about 200 applications. Salary for the new police chief will be between $39,900 and $57,000.

The team that selected the finalists looked for applicants who had worked in a university community and had the ability to build relations with the county sheriff, Atkins said.

Atkins said he hopes to narrow the search to two candidates in about two weeks.

First candidates determined for vice president position

The Daily Iowan

Two candidates — the dean of the College of Arts and Letters at San Diego State University and the chairwoman of the English Department at Indiana University — will interview this month for the position of vice president of academic affairs at the UI.

Marilyn Boxer, who has been an administrator and professor of history at San Diego State University since 1974, will be on campus for interviews today and tomorrow, according to Donald McCloskey, professor of economics and of history and chairman of the UI search committee.

Mary Alice Burgan, chair of the English Department at Indiana University since 1983 and English professor there since 1964, will interview March 27 and 28, he said.

McCloskey said these are the first two candidates who will be interviewed on campus for the top UI academic job. He expects to announce other candidates in the near future. The committee hopes to make its final recommendations to President Hunter Rawlings by the middle of April.

The search for a new academic vice president began last fall. The position currently is being filled by David Vernon, professor of law, who is serving as acting vice president during the current academic year. The position has not been filled on a permanent basis since Richard Remington left the post July 1, 1987, to serve as UI interim president upon the departure of James O. Freedman.

minority recruitment and retention and student aid.

Branstad's January budget proposal recommended no funding for Opportunity at Iowa — the UI's minority recruitment and retention program — despite efforts by UI officials and the state Board of Regents to generate support for the program.

Varn said legislators recognize the importance of developing minority recruitment and retention at the regents' institutions, and said $1.6 million for funding a statewide program is currently being written into a general bill.

He said the bill will include $1 million for minority student recruitment at the three regents' institutions, $500,000 for minority faculty recruitment and retention and $100,000 for minority recruitment at the state's private institutions.

The bill represents the first substantial effort by legislators to fund and develop a viable minority recruitment and retention program, Varn said.

"There has been no money — no real effort — for minority recruitment in the past seven or eight years," he said.

Varn said the proposed program seems to have considerable support in both the Senate and House, despite the fact that no funding was recommended in Branstad's proposal.

"I think some amount of money will be appropriated, and a program will be recommended this year by the Legislature, even if the governor didn't recommend anything," he said.

Because the state legislators are operating under a different budget process this year, Varn said, the final results of the legislators' efforts are hard to predict. This year, Varn said, legislators were given a target amount for their budget that was considerably lower than in past years and asked to prioritize specific expenditures beyond the base target.

Varn said the budget target for fiscal year 1989 was $8 to $10 million lower than the total budget proposal recommended by Branstad in January.

"It adds a lot more uncertainty to the budget process," Varn said. "It is hard to predict whether it will actually make the process more difficult, but it certainly could."

Despite the uncertainty, Varn said, the Legislature will probably pass both supplemental bills along with bills focusing on minority recruitment and retention and student aid provisions.

"We're hoping to provide funding that is at least at the governor's level, although not necessarily on the same things," he said.

Ann Rhodes, UI assistant vice president for finance, said legislators have indicated that certain programs at the UI may receive additional funding as the legislative session progresses.

"I guess right now we're still pretty optimistic about seeing some additional funding," she said.

Rhodes said a number of legislators have been supportive of the UI's requests for additional programs, especially fire and environmental safety improvements, and minority recruitment and retention.

"We've really got some good responses from a number of legislators," she said. Rhodes said she expects fire and environmental safety to be a high priority in any supplemental appropriations.

Rhodes said UI officials will probably see versions of supplemental appropriations bills sometime this week, but said it may be some time before the UI reaps any benefits.

"Typically, appropriations bills don't get finished until the last hours of the legislative session, so it may be as long as April until we see results," she said.

Varn said the priorities expressed by the state legislators should provide more funding for critical areas that were left out of Branstad's budget proposal.

"Hopefully, we'll provide bills for funding at the regents' institutions at a higher level than what the governor recommended, but whether he'll sign those bills isn't all that certain," he said.

malfunctioning valve caused a 15-day underground storage tank fire in 1987.

MAPCO Division Manager Delmar Prescott said no improprieties have existed at the plant.

"Certainly one accident is too many, in my estimation," Prescott said. "But these accidents are altogether separate. They're not connected in any way."

Safety inspections are performed at the plant every six months, he said.

The plant's truck-loading operation will be shut down for an indefinite period of time, Prescott said.

"The plant itself will not be put back into operation until it's completely rebuilt and inspected to make sure everything is in order," Prescott said.

mudslinging, Ed Bennett, a member of the UI Elections Board, said that as of Sunday afternoon, no official complaints had been submitted to the board and no candidates have lost any or part of their $25 campaign deposit because of disobeying campaign rules. The Elections Board is the five-member, senate-appointed body that oversees the election.

John O'Roake, an off-campus candidate for Students First, also said his party is "feeling pretty good about the campaign."

Berta said his party, ASAP, will "definitely continue to work with our slate members, contacting people with our message and certainly not take anything for granted," during the last two days of the campaign.

"An excellent choice," said Sen. Charles Robb of Virginia, one of the last Democrats to announce opposition to Tower. "Unless there is a complete void in (defense), the confirmation should move rapidly."

Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell of Maine praised Cheney as a man who "served with distinction" in the House and promised "prompt consideration by the Senate Armed Services Committee and the full Senate."

eligible by Big Ten and NCAA rules," he said. "What's at issue here is if we're giving the students good advice about their academic programs and are helping them work toward their degrees."

Both Vernon and Rhodes said they doubted whether any wrongdoing would be found from a wide-scale investigation of UI athletics.

"I don't think we're going to find any violations,"

Rhodes said. "We would not do that — the risks are too high. Assuming these two were typical, and I don't think they were, we'd have to look into ways student athletes could have a more balanced course load."

Rhodes said UI officials will monitor the trial this week to see if any new developments arise before starting the investigation.

Local sparks fly over 'Verses'

'Bazaar of ideas' airs arguments of free speech, retribution

By Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Salman Rushdie's novel, "The Satanic Verses," has become a controversial best seller, and Friday evening's reading and open-forum discussion of the novel in the Union furthered the controversy in an orderly way.

Slightly more than 400 people gathered to hear prepared statements, reading selections and a panel discussion of the book that has been labeled "blasphemous" by members of the Moslem community.

In his address to the audience, Frank Conroy, director of the UI Writers' Workshop, supported Rushdie's freedom of speech.

"We move in an open bazaar of ideas," Conroy said. "These freedoms are not negotiable. It's and old, old story, and we know where we stand."

"The Satanic Verses" was originally released in September of 1988, but it was only in February of 1989 that Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini attacked the novelist by leveling a death sentence on him for blasphemy. Rushdie, after offering an apology to Moslems, went into hiding.

"Rushdie dares to go where angels fear to tread," UI English professor Peter Nazareth said in his opening remarks. "Two issues that are raised here are: Is it blasphemous, and is it an insult to Moslems?"

Commenting on Khomeini's treatment of the novel's newfound success, Nazareth answered his own question by asking, "Does it follow that everyone who makes it into the Western world (Iran) into the Western world is a sellout?"

Whether or not Rushdie is a traitor to Islam is questionable. As the first 50,000 copies of the book already have been sold and another printing of 100,000 copies is underway, "The Satanic Verses" does, however, appear to be a commercial blowout.

Mahmoud Rizig, panelist and president of the Iowa City Islamic Society, criticized Rushdie's verbal attack on the Moslem prophet Mohammed, and cited the Bible to propose retribution.

"Once you offend a prophet, you offend an entire community," Rizig said. "Then you cause anarchy, and anarchy leads to civil war and then bloodshed."

Rizig, after spelling out the letters of the Bible's third book, Leviticus, drew a vengeful parallel for Christians by quoting, "Anyone who blasphemes the Lord shall be stoned." Panelist Thomas Irving, a retired professor of Islamic Studies from the University of Minnesota, agreed with Rizig's intrareligious comparison by posing a political question.

"What would happen if you desecrated the stars and stripes?" he asked. "Simple — you'd be put in jail," he said.

Tensions between the panelists and the crowd flared at one point when panelist Susan Al-Houbi, a UI undergraduate from Palestine, returned a question to a male member of the audience and asked "If Rushdie were here right now, would you murder him?"

"I would kill him with my own hands," the unidentified man said. Nazareth later gave his own interpretation of the novel and reaffirmed Rushdie's freedom of speech.

"His novel is about the question of forgiveness," he said. "He was, himself, raising the question of blasphemy."

"What Rushdie is doing is stepping into the jaws of the monster and dealing with everything around him for us to read and digest," Nazareth said.

Laser research contract granted to UI professor

The Daily Iowan

Arthur Smirl, professor of electrical and computer engineering in the University of Iowa College of Engineering, has won a four-year, $775,560 contract from the U.S. Army for laser research.

Smirl, who holds one of three endowed chairs in laser engineering at the UI, will use lasers to study the physical processes in semiconducting materials used in high-speed electronic, optical, and optoelectronic devices. He recently received a three-year, $575,000 U.S. Navy grant for similar research.

Smirl says that his work may contribute to the development of improved computers, communications systems and other consumer products.

"Future communications and computing systems will continue to demand ever faster and smaller electronic, optical, and optoelectronic devices and circuits. As we develop devices and systems that push the state of the art in speed, we must face the technical problem of measuring their performance, a task not readily accomplished using standard electronic techniques," Smirl said.

"Furthermore, advances in the development of such devices and circuits will almost certainly be limited by our understanding of the physical processes responsible for their high-speed performance. Measurement and analysis of these processes are clearly crucial to the improvement of existing systems and to the development of the next generation of systems," he says.

He notes that optical techniques permit the measurement of speeds more than 1,000 times faster than those that can be measured with the fastest electronic instruments.

Smirl came to the UI in 1988 with a primary appointment in the College of Engineering's Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering and an affiliate appointment in the College of Liberal Arts' Department of Physics and Astronomy.

He is the first researcher to fill one of three UI chairs in laser science and engineering endowed with $1.5 million in state lottery funds by the Iowa Department of Economic Development and $1.5 in matching funds from the UI Foundation.

Dry summer, polluted water kill Iowa fish

By Kathleen Brill
The Daily Iowan

Victims of last summer's drought are still appearing. The unusually large number of dead fish floating in the Iowa River is partially an effect of the low water level.

The fish kill is a common spring-time occurrence, said UI environmental engineer Donald McDonald. When fish are trapped beneath ice in a fairly shallow pool of water, they often suffocate.

"It's a typical spring problem, and because of a combination of conditions it's been worse than we have seen it for a number of years," he said.

The drought is one reason for the large number of dead catfish in the nearby reservoir and gizzard shad in the Iowa River, he said. A drought depletes the water supply necessary to dilute the run-off of organic material that pollutes bodies of water, he said.

Much of the water pollution in Iowa is from an accumulation of agricultural waste along the banks of the water. This run-off causes an unusually high concentration of ammonia to pollute the water. There has been less of the melted snow needed to dilute the waste as it enters the water than in the past, McDonald said.

Poor management of farm land can contribute to the problem of soil run-off pollution, said Dave Ceiley, from the UI Hygienic Laboratory. Preventive steps to lessen this pollution would include "educating farmers to practice soil management techniques," he said.

George Hallberg, of the the Geological Survey Bureau, said many of the recent fish kills in Iowa are the result of a long-term environmental problem with pollution.

County opens budget for debate

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

Tonight marks county residents' last chance to voice opinions about next year's proposed county budget at a public hearing slated for 5 at the Johnson County Administration Building.

Supervisor Dick Myers said the budget may be cut after the public budget hearing, but Iowa law prevents further increases at this point.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors has an additional $1.8 million to spend next year — a 10 percent increase from the current year's $18.6 million budget.

The extra $1.8 million stems from increases in user fees and the tax base, he said. Last year, Johnson County saw an increase in employment, businesses and building projects.

"Revenues have begun to increase in the county, and the tax base has begun to grow," he said.

Myers said the supervisors had an easier job writing the budget this year than in previous years because the additional $1.8 million enables them to lower taxes and still maintain services.

City property owners will pay 1.9 percent less next year in county taxes, and rural property owners will pay 1.4 percent less, he said.

Myers said the supervisors don't want to compensate in future years for next year's proposed tax decrease.

The $1.8 million budget increase demonstrates the stability of the government in Johnson County, he said.

"I think stability will be here a couple more years," Myers said. "That is, if the Legislature doesn't do anything drastic to us."

Myers said seven new employees will be added to county departments next year. Three Johnson County Sheriff's Department staff positions, three social services positions and a county naturalist position will be filled.

Capital improvements are also a major chunk of the budget this year, Supervisor Betty Ockenfels said. Approximately $180,000 will be spent on care-facility renovations, and $150,000 on Johnson County Courthouse renovations.

The supervisors have been working on the budget since December.

Directions: For the following question, select the best answer choice provided.

1. Only if we know human nature can we know the nature of the true good for human beings. And only if we know the nature of the true good for human beings can we arrive at an idea of the truly just society. Thus, if we know human nature and the nature of the good for human beings, we can arrive at an idea of the truly just society.

Which of the following points out a potential flaw in the reasoning above?

(A) What one human being thinks is good might well be something that another human being thinks is not good.
 (B) Many people have arrived at ideas of the just society, and all of them have been slightly different.
 (C) It is quite possible to know human nature without in any way being able to know what is the good for human beings.
 (D) Philosophers have argued for centuries over what specifically defines human nature, without coming to a general agreement.
 (E) Arriving at an idea of the just society may require more than knowledge of human nature and knowledge of the good for human beings.

Sidelined Soviets report on Afghan war

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan guerrillas fired 3,000 rockets Sunday on the city of Jalalabad, but government troops repelled the onslaught and killed at least 380 attackers, according to Afghan and Soviet news reports.

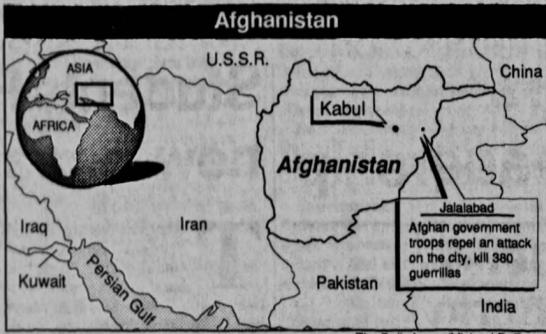

Guerrilla reports said 45 to 90 insurgents died in the battle for the city, the target of some of the heaviest fighting in the decade-long Afghan civil war.

Soviet television reported that the Afghan army claimed 14,000 guerrillas backed by 3,000 Pakistani advisers took part in the attack.

Afghanistan's Radio Kabul, monitored in Islamabad, said 386 guerrillas and 36 "foreign advisers" were killed. The official Soviet news agency Tass said 380 guerrillas and 11 Afghan soldiers were killed.

Radio Kabul said civilian and government casualties from the rocketing were slight. It gave no total count.

The broadcast said two Pakistani helicopters landed outside Jalalabad on Saturday and unloaded weapons and "foreign advisers" before heading back home.

The Daily Iowan/Michael R. Eacott

Official spokesmen in the United States and Pakistan have denied sending their nationals to the country, where U.S.- and Pakistani-backed Moslem guerrillas are battling a communist government.

The Soviet television report, based on an Afghan army news conference, said Jalalabad was not out of danger even though the attack had been turned back. "Judging by everything, the Pakistani military circles, which sent more than 3,000 of their advisers here, will try to do everything in their power to capture Jalalabad," it said.

Also Sunday, the Communist Party daily Pravda reported that Afghan guerrillas fired on Soviet border guards in the Soviet republic of Tadzhikistan.

The newspaper claimed the culprits were connected with Pakistan, but it did not say when the incident occurred or if anyone was injured.

The Soviet Union ended nine years of military intervention in Afghanistan on Feb. 15, when the last of its 115,000 soldiers who had been sent into the country left.

That left the Afghan government alone to fight the guerrillas, who have vowed to take power.

Jalalabad is Afghanistan's fifth-largest city and is 40 miles west of the Pakistan border, on the main highway between Pakistan and the Afghan capital, Kabul.

Guerrillas say the city's fall will signal the early demise of the ruling communists.

Thousands of the guerrillas have been moving toward Jalalabad from Pakistan to join the offensive.

FBI suspects pipe bomb gutted van of Vincennes captain's wife

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The bomb that blew up in a van being driven by the wife of a Navy captain who mistakenly ordered the destruction of an Iranian airliner was a non-military device, possibly homemade, the FBI said Sunday.

The bomb was "an improvised exploding device, which would suggest it was not some kind of a manufactured, military bomb," FBI spokesman Gene Riehl said.

"A pipe bomb would fit into that generic family," he said, adding that it may have been homemade.

The bomb set fire to a van being driven Friday by Sharon Rogers, whose husband, Capt. Will Rogers III, commander of the USS Vincennes in the Persian Gulf, gave the go-ahead last July to shoot down an aircraft mistakenly believed to be an Iranian fighter. The plane, identified only from its radar blip, was actually a civilian airliner and all 290 people on board were killed.

Sharon Rogers was not hurt. Riehl refused to disclose more of what the FBI's investigation had found and also declined to comment on an Iranian newspaper editorial that blamed the FBI for the bombing, saying it was engineered to provoke anti-Iranian sentiment in the United States.

"We have no response to that at all," he said.

The English-language newspaper Kayhan International linked the alleged U.S. plot to Western anger at Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's order that British novelist Salman Rushdie be killed for his new novel, "The Satanic Verses."

The bombing "will not be the last attempt to implicate Iran" over the Rushdie controversy, Kayhan International said in an editorial summarized by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency.

FBI spokeswoman Kathy Kennedy in Washington denied the allegation and added, "We have never made any linkage to Iran since this incident happened."

Rogers and his wife remained in seclusion, where they had been since Friday. They returned home briefly Saturday afternoon, presumably to collect belongings.

Chief Craig Huebler, spokesman for the San Diego Naval Base, said the Navy was awaiting FBI findings to determine if the couple would return to work Monday. Sharon Rogers is a teacher.

Will Rogers III

The captain remained in command of the Vincennes, whose home port is San Diego. As commander, Rogers would be required to stay in the San Diego area, Huebler said Sunday.

Federal investigators ended their work late Saturday at the University City intersection where the van exploded. The van was taken away Saturday evening, but Riehl refused to say where it was being kept.

Thomas Hughes, agent in the charge of the San Diego FBI office, said Saturday that the agency faced a lengthy analysis to determine what type of bomb was used, but he said fragments indicated it could have been a pipe bomb.

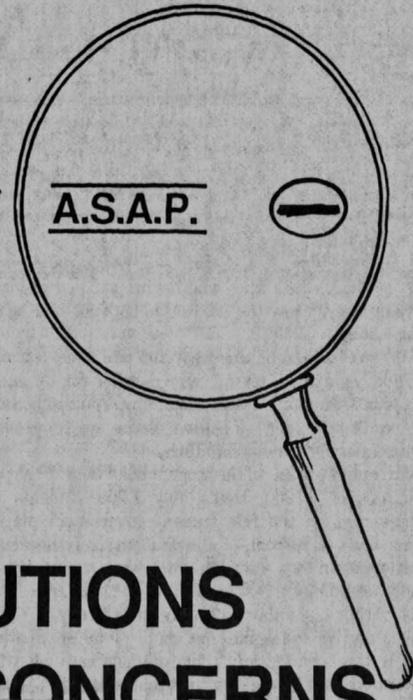

Government sources said the possibility of terrorism was being investigated. Officials confirmed the Rogers family received threatening calls about the missile strike on the airliner.

Rogers had driven the van earlier Friday for a regular run to a nearby donut shop and felt he may have been the target of the bombing, said Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who talked with the captain.

To vote, or not vote

Today and tomorrow, UI students have the opportunity to exercise their franchise on this campus. You have the opportunity — whether you use it is your prerogative.

The reality is that most of you won't. Over the past few years, voter apathy in campus elections has reached a new low. It has been years since anywhere near 10 percent of UI students bothered to vote.

But UI students can't be blamed for their apathy. Increasingly, student government campaigns are little more than an exercise in negativity. Every year, the campaign for the most important elected offices on campus gets mired in the murky abyss of overtly partisan, personal politics.

Mirroring the trend in national elections, the people running UI Student Senate elections seem unable to wage a campaign without waving a bloody shirt or dredging up some kind of Willie Horton-esque electorate swaying charge.

Last year, just three days prior to the election, ASAP produced a flyer accusing Students for an Active Senate of illiteracy. SAS then produced a flyer that accused ASAP of "fiscal irresponsibilities."

This year, a "fiscal irresponsibility" has been alleged near the close of the campaign — an allegation that appears now to be a purely partisan ploy. "Fiscal irresponsibility" has become the Willie Horton in a bloody shirt of UI campus politics.

Petty partisan bickering has also been a basic tenet of this campaign. Anyone who attended last Wednesday's debate (and there can't be many who did) saw "debate" that was reminiscent of a tiff between rival siblings; the parties traded "you started it" and "I told you so" like six-year-olds. Someone once said, "University politics are so vicious because the stakes are so low," and the speaker may be more right than he or she knew.

Lost in all this malicious bickering were the ideas, goals and objectives of the parties who, whether or not you realize it, play a major role in how the UI works, both for and against the student body.

But it doesn't have to be this way. You can affect a change; you can add your voice to the outcry either for or against ASAP, Students First or Student Monarchy. You can bother to vote. It doesn't take long — polling places are conveniently located in numerous campus buildings.

Last year, only 4 percent of the student body went to the polls. On a campus of 30,000, that's only 1,200 students who bothered to question the role student government plays in their lives. Only 4 percent of the student body decided to question the system that affects their lives on campus. While a vote is only an admission of confidence or dissonance by the voter, not voting is neither; it's only an affirmation of the status quo, and provides nothing more than an apathetic admission to those who govern that you don't care what they do. Furthermore, not voting is a tacit admission that you are willing to allow less than a handful of people — last year 1,200 — decide the direction of the UI in what may be trying times. This is a most dangerous admission.

Don't let apathy affirm yet another year of résumé padding and networking by nameless, faceless student government officials. Don't let apathy allow yet another year of petty bickering and partisan cronyism. This year, don't let apathy negate your right to question the role student government plays in your life.

Torture accusations

A Newsweek story tells of a recent investigation by Amnesty International into alleged torture of children in Iraq by government forces. The 70-page report by the Nobel Peace Prize-winning organization claims that Iraqi security forces kidnap, torture and execute the children of political dissidents, Kurds and army deserters. In one case, the report says, a screaming 5-month-old child was kept beside its parents' cell while being deprived of milk, in order to force confessions out of the parents. Other claims made by Amnesty International are that children have been tortured by electric shocks, sexual abuse and fingernail extraction, and that children have been killed in mass executions.

Amnesty International has asked the United Nations Commission on Human Rights to investigate its charges. The fear is that such an investigation may be subject to political pressures and influences, as has happened in the past. A recent report by the commission regarding rights abuses in Cuba was watered down by Bulgaria, a Cuban ally which had representatives on the commission.

Such charges demand official investigation to check the accuracy and reliability of the Amnesty International report. One potential problem is that the United States has been among the nations which have supported Saddam Hussein's regime in Iraq in recent years.

American foreign policy and actions should reflect the ideals of American justice and respect for rights. Ignoring these things in the pursuit of our own foreign policy objectives would be to attempt to secure the blessings of liberty for ourselves while being unconcerned about the rights of others. It would be extremely hypocritical for the United States to promote the welfare of its own citizens by hampering a human rights abuses investigation. Justice demands that the U.N. commission be allowed to conduct its inquiry free of political pressures by the United States or any other nation.

ASAP offers students leadership

In January, 1987, I decided to run for Student Senate with the Allied Student Advocacy Party. I was not entirely sure what I had involved myself with, but I was sure that I would soon find out. And I did.

As the 1987 election unfolded, I discovered that campus politics could be, at times, a very unpleasant thing. After I was elected I wanted to see just how much student government, Student Senate in particular, was able to do. I wanted to know if we could make a difference.

I soon discovered that we were far from useless, as our critics have claimed. As an ASAP Senator I was a member of the Budgeting and Auditing Committee, and learned first-hand about how complex the budgeting process was. There is a document called the Budget Protocol Act, which outlines how every approved group, from New Wave to the Young Americans for Freedom, is to receive funding.

This process takes several weeks in April, and when all is said and done, over 70 student groups and organizations, including ADELA (Latin American Student Association) and Riverfest receive funding that adds up to over $200,000. While this part of Student Senate is far from glamorous, it is a critical part of what we do. My only question is: If we were doing something wrong, why is it that the criticism comes only from our opponents, and then directly before the elections?

One also learns that if one is serious about making a change, he or she needs to not only have new ideas, but the understanding that nothing is done overnight. In the past two years, both as a member and then Chair of the State Relations Committee, I have seen this take place.

I have seen the state government address funding for University daycares, minority recruitment, student aid and, of course, action on tuition. My point is that students can have an effect on what goes on in Des Moines, but only if they are organized, committed and persistent. One of the major reasons for our campaign is that we have done this, and will continue to if re-elected.

Then there is the question about new ideas. What I find interesting about this election is that on the major issues such as tuition and student services all three parties basically agree. But what you might find interesting is that some of the "new ideas" being tossed around are simply recycled old ones.

When Student Monarchy states they want an emergency phone system on campus, they have forgotten that the idea was already proposed by Mike Reck (Collegiate Associations Council president 1987-88) and failed to win passage by the UI administration. Every year parking meters are addressed, and every year the city says "no."

The issue should not be general broad new ideas, but SPECIFIC solutions to old problems. I honestly believe that this is the key to a successful student government and ASAP has done this.

We have been able to do this on everything from the Rec Center, which replaced the Armory, to the defeat of the sales tax proposal last year. Some specifics we would like to address next year are, organizing student opposition to the keg ordinance — should the Iowa City Council consider passing it — working with the athletic board to see that students are able to sit closer to the floor at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, working with SCOPE to determine what their specific needs are to continue to bring such groups as U2 and R.E.M., working with the city to establish a realistic time frame for the phase-out of the hour meters on Iowa Avenue and other streets, and a detailed program to help facilitate minority recruitment.

In conclusion to this guest opinion, I would like to stress that none of this is possible without your support. You have three choices in this election. Our challenge to one of our opponents, Student Monarchy, is: Why must Student Senate be a joke? They offer little substance and less hope that his can be a better campus. We feel the students deserve better.

Our challenge to our other opponent, Students First, is: Why must they ignore the major issues, choosing instead to misrepresent the truth about funding? Why is it that you are making premature assumptions about the state Board of Regents' audit when you know that NO ACTION is planned? It would seem as if you are using this issue strictly for political gains.

My biggest question is: If you were so concerned about state government issues, why did you wait until TWO WEEKS BEFORE THE ELECTION TO GET INVOLVED?

Although you deny any direct association with the recent character assassinations, you cannot hide the fact that your campaign is being in being effected, and your negative campaigning does not flatter you. You say you want to change the Student Senate, but you give NO CONCRETE ANSWERS for your own questions. We feel the students deserve better.

The time has come for Student Senate elections, and I ask for your support for ASAP. But I also challenge you, regardless of who is elected, to get involved in student government if you are upset. Join a committee, come to a Senate meeting, or just talk to a senator. The bottom line is these elections are about you. Student government is about you. With your support we can all make a positive difference. Please vote ASAP March 13 and 14.

Jeno Berta, ASAP vice-presidential candidate, wrote this guest opinion for the Viewpoints page.

Students First offers new ideas to students

Today, as voting in the Student Senate elections starts, I think back to last year's election. I was sickened by last year's highly negative campaign, and, considering the low voter turnout, so were most of the students.

This year's campaign has, with a few exceptions, been a fairly positive one and that is a credit to all three parties. Most of the literature distributed during the campaign has been about new proposals to help students, which is what Student Senate is all about.

New and innovative ideas are also the reason why Students First was formed. Our party has concentrated on new ideas that will help all students. For instance, we want to see a new financial aid loan program set up that would give a discounted loan rate to students who stay in Iowa after graduation. If a student currently is receiving a Guaranteed Student Loan with an 8 1/2 percent interest rate, he or she would only have to pay 6 percent if he or she stayed in Iowa three years after graduating.

Currently, the Iowa Legislature is reluctant to fully fund Iowa's state universities because they feel that once people graduate, they immediately leave for Chicago, Minneapolis or Kansas City. This loan program would give graduates an incentive to stay in Iowa and the Legislature would be more willing to increase funding for the universities. Increased funding means lower tuition!

Closer to home, we feel one of the major problems facing students is the lack of parking in downtown Iowa City. It is nearly impossible to find a street-level parking place downtown, yet the parking ramps are rarely full.

We are proposing a new permit system for the two downtown ramps that would give students discounted parking rates. Students could purchase 50 hours of parking with this permit for $17.50. When a student leaves the ramp, he or she would just give his or her punch card to the attendant who would punch off the number of hours the car was in the ramp.

This would alleviate several problems. First, students would save time and money because they would neither have to worry about parking tickets nor have to drive around for an hour looking for a parking place. The city would make money because more parking would be utilized. Finally, no more green space would have to be torn up for a new parking ramp.

We also feel it is important that students get a discounted parking rate. Lets face it, Iowa City would be in severe economic trouble without the students, faculty and staff to support it. Cheaper, hassle-free parking is one way to turn the favor.

In addition to new ideas, members of our party have been leaders on current issues such as campus safety, the keg ordinance, and lobbying the Legislature and the state Board of Regents.

Peter Von Lehe, a member of Students First, has headed the Student Senate's efforts opposing the keg ordinance. We pledge to continue his fight against this ordinance.

I have worked with the resident assistants in all residence halls to increase distribution of rape whistles to all people in the residence halls. The program was so successful that we eventually ran out of whistles — a first.

Lobbying is also an important concern of ours. Without a consistent lobbying effort, state leaders have no way of knowing what student concerns are. I feel very strongly about this. I was the only student senator who was at the regents meeting when they discussed the future of the College of Engineering. Our party feels it is imperative that students present a strong voice for the students to the governor, the Legislature, and the regents.

Today when you vote, the most important issue you must consider is which of the three parties will best represent you. In building Students First, my executives and I have worked to develop a diverse slate made up of students with different viewpoints on issues, but joined by the common goal of working for and helping fellow students.

Our party is made up of Democrats, Republicans, Independents and even a Libertarian. I feel that only with the diversity and commitment found in Students First can we offer effective representation of the student body to the UI administration, the governor, the Legislature and the regents.

Today and tomorrow, you face an important decision. It is a decision that will affect how much you pay in tuition, how much financial aid you receive, when you can go to the Main Library, and where you can park when you do. Students First, with our diversity, leadership and new ideas, is the best party to represent you in the senate. Please take the little time it takes to vote today.

Prasanta Reddy, Students First presidential candidate, wrote this guest opinion for the Viewpoints page.

The Daily Iowan chastized for outrageous, yellow journalism . . .

To the Editor:

The Daily Iowan has sunk to the depths of yellow journalism. More than that, our student newspaper has sunk to the depths of spineless racism. On March 8, the front page story headlined "Senator faces accusations", written by Diana Wallace, was a slander against one of the UI's most respectable Chicana students, Senator Delores Duran-Cerda.

Former Students First treasurer Michael Ketchmark accused Duran-Cerda of embezzling $1,250 from the Student Senate that she was to have paid singer Felix De Oleo Montero. The article was a clear example of journalism at its worst.

Duran-Cerda was never interviewed for the story; she was neither allowed to defend her credibility, nor did the reporter investigate what actually happened to the money. Instead, the reporter relied on an unreliable source, who is a founding member of Students First and obviously an agitator for the Students First camp. Ketchmark had no proof that Duran-Cerda had kept the money. In fact, the cancelled check that Montero had cashed was brought forth the following day. But it was too late.

The damage had been done.

Wallace and the editor of the paper decided to sensationalize the situation based on lies. Ketchmark claimed to have called Montero's residence and spoke to an "unidentified" person who confirmed that Montero only received $200 of the $1,450. On a poor and obviously made-up lie, Ketchmark claimed Duran-Cerda pocketed the rest of the money. However, Montero does not have a telephone, so how could Ketchmark have called him?

I believe it is the duty of the DI to scrutinize public figures, but what was done was not scrutinizing; it was persecution. For 24 hours, thousands of students were planted with the idea that Duran-Cerda was a thief. Wallace should have gone straight to Duran-Cerda and asked her about the check that was written in the senator's name, cashed, and then given to Montero in the form of another check in order to avoid a 30 percent income tax. Duran-Cerda was serving as Montero's agent in the transaction, which makes it 100 percent legal.

The real question is: "Why didn't Wallace ask Duran-Cerda about the money when the two of them rode in an elevator to the Student Senate meeting the night before the article appeared?" I'll tell you why, because the DI thrives on sensational, unprofessional journalism.

A woman's reputation has been damaged by the DI because of their despicable investigative reporting. Yet there have been no apologies made. All this yellow journalism makes me wonder who the DI is supporting in this election.

It is very telling that Ketchmark, formerly of the Students First party, made his accusations so close to the student elections. So close, in fact, that there is little if any time to correct the damaging remarks against Duran-Cerda and the Allied Student Advocacy Party.

Not only are slander and shoddy journalism involved here, but racism as well. Ketchmark compares ASAP to the Ferdinand Marcos government because he knows many of the people running on the ASAP slate are Latinos. His statement: "It's like Ferdinand Marcos heading the Student Senate, just on a smaller scale." Why does Ketchmark choose the Marcos government for his comparison? Why not the Nixon administration?

He did not select Marcos arbitrarily, but chose a foreign country where a few PEOPLE OF COLOR were corrupt in order to stigmatize ALL people of color. Not only are we seeing that same old racist belief that Latinos are thieves, but also the racist denial of fair representation, or adequate defense!

There were 30,000 newspapers passed out that day to students and faculty — this put Duran-Cerda's moral character in a very dubious light. The article branded her as a thief and she had no voice to defend herself against such criminal accusations.

The DI should have retracted the accusations the following day, or at least apologized. Instead, they perpetuated more lies from the Students First party with another article. The DI must be held accountable for its irresponsibility and dangerous journalism and Ketchmark for his racist slander. But does the DI, as well as Wallace and Ketchmark have the guts to admit they were wrong?

To the Editor:

As former teachers of Dolores Duran-Cerda, we are shocked beyond words that she was accused of embezzlement. She is the last person in the world who could do such a thing. Her morals and character are totally beyond reproach.

Not only should the DI and the university present a public apology to Dolores and her parents, they should also take steps to make sure no other innocent person will ever be a victim of such vile character defamation, just for trying to do a job for the university!

To the Editor:

Dolores Duran-Cerda and her family deserve a public apology from The Daily Iowan and a retraction of the accusations that were printed about her in the March 8 issue.

Basing its story on nothing but some person's phone call to an "unidentified" source in the Dominican Republic, and not even, in its own words, giving Dolores "the opportunity to respond directly to the allegation," the DI slandered Dolores' good name and character by associating her with the quite serious charge of embezzlement.

A story the next day, of course, completely cleared Dolores of these outrageous charges (though the DI accepted no responsibility and offered no apology.)

But the damage had been done. Dolores and her parents — who she is quite close to — were deeply hurt.

The integrity and character of Dolores Duran-Cerda is not — and never has been — in doubt. But the integrity and character of the DI is seriously called into question until such time as it apologizes to Dolores and her family.

and the instigator's and others' responses

To the Editor:

I'm glad that Dolores Duran-Cerda has had an opportunity to respond to the embezzlement charges made against her. It makes me even happier to learn that there is a logical explanation for the confusion that resulted in the charge.

In Thursday's DI, we learned that Duran-Cerda accepted payment for a foreign singer so that he could avoid a 30 percent tax. She then cashed the check, gave the cash to someone else to deposit in his checking account, who then gave a personal check to the singer.

Can you say "money-laundering"? Can you say "tax evasion"? This makes me feel a lot better about Duran-Cerda's qualifications for senate treasurer.

To the Editor:

Having been a student senator from 1983 to 1986, I would like to come to the defense of Mike Ketchmark. Mike should be commended for following up on the behavior of the current student senate, but instead is being used as a scapegoat by your paper in order to cover up for its poor editorial control.

As a student senator, I was aware of a number of episodes where members of the student government and student organizations used senate funds for personal use. There were several instances of senate executives embezzling funds.

While Mike Ketchmark was treasurer there was never a hint of foul play. It is very important that a public official upholds the highest ethical standards. As a result of his experience, Mike is aware when games are being played with senate funds.

Mike learned that games were being played with the senate accounts. It would appear on the surface that a senator was taking money for personal use, instead the senate was helping an individual escape from paying their taxes. This unethical behavior is unbefitting a student representative, and such lax accounting procedures will open the door to the problems that have pervaded student government in the past.

I believe the DI owes Mike an apology.

Bob Rafferty
 Iowa City

To the Editor:

Label, slander, malice, baseless charges? Not! At the beginning of last week, I was perfectly content in my own isolated world where I was not the object of radical New Wave protests and Daily Iowan editorials. However, I was contacted out of the blue by an individual who felt they had evidence that clearly established that the ASAP candidate for treasurer embezzled money from the UI Student Senate.

When a senate group is appropriated funds to bring in a speaker, the money is held in a separate Senate account. To access these funds, the student organization must fill out a pay roll voucher and obtain the signatures of the senate treasurer. The voucher requests the social security number of the individual providing the services, which allows the honorarium to be reported as taxable income. If the speaker is not a U.S. citizen, then pay roll is required to withhold 30 percent of the honorarium for taxation purposes.

Now, I was senate treasurer a few years back and I must have signed over 200 of these vouchers. Without exception, the check was always drawn in the name of the individual who provided the service. The reason being that "honorariums" are considered to be taxable income by the IRS and they must be claimed by the wage earner.

However, I had in my possession a voucher that clearly stated that Dolores Duran-Cerda, ASAP senator and candidate for treasurer, received and cashed a $1,450 honorarium check from the Senate. The ASAP executives and the UI business office refused to discuss this matter with me.

OK, put yourself in my shoes for a second. I have documentation to show that the ASAP candidate for treasurer received a $1,450 check from the current ASAP senate and a number of people are saying that this money is being used to fund ASAP's current campaign. I decided to continue to search for a legitimate explanation.

The voucher said Duran-Cerda was acting as an "agent" for Felix De Oleo Montero. Apparently, Montero was brought to Iowa City by a student group to sing a few songs in the park. I had no idea where he was from, or how to get in contact with him, but after a few phone calls, I tracked down a possible contact person who lived here in Iowa City. At the time, I thought this might even be Montero's number. I called and a woman told me Montero received "a couple hundred dollars for his performance." Now, in my book that is around $200, so I am left wondering where the extra $1,250 could have possibly gone and, for that matter, why the check was even made out to a ASAP senator in the first place.

I felt this raised enough suspicion to demand that ASAP explain the situation and rebut the inference of impropriety. Therefore, I contacted The Daily Iowan and basically related the events as I have done above. The next day a banner headline runs, accusing Duran-Cerda of embezzlement.

Apparently, the DI reporter who covered the story did not convey my concerns to the ASAP executives or Duran-Cerda before the article ran. She simply asked the current ASAP treasurer, Jennifer Fleck, to explain why a check was drawn out to Duran-Cerda. According to Fleck (who I might add is an honors student in accounting) Duran-Cerda was allowed to receive the check on behalf of the singer "in order to avoid the 30 percent withholding." Fleck claims this is an established and legitimate senate procedure.

Well, I believe it only takes a little bit of common sense to realize that this "legitimate explanation" is often referred to in the law as tax evasion. This view has been confirmed by my subsequent discussion with the IRS. The federal government requires a 30 percent withholding from non-U.S. citizens for a reason, and one cannot legally avoid this tax by playing games with UI pay roll vouchers.

Some people are demanding that I make a public apology for my "baseless charges" against Duran-Cerda and ASAP. Well, I believe they are right. I am honestly sorry that I was lead to believe that Fleck and Duran-Cerda were parties to embezzlement, when in the end they were no more than willing or foolish accessories to federal income tax evasion.

Students riot, demand new government

SEOUL, South Korea — Students and workers demanding the overthrow of President Roh Tae-woo battled hundreds of riot police with firebombs, clubs and rocks Sunday after they were blocked from marching into the streets.

Armored police vans with multiple tear gas launchers fired volleys of choking gas into the crowds around Yonsei University in eastern Seoul.

"Oust Roh Tae-woo!" and "Thrust a knife into the Roh regime!" protesters shouted as they charged police and pelted them with rocks and firebombs that spewed blazing gasoline.

About 2,000 troopers hurled rocks back as dense clouds of white tear gas cloaked the campus.

Police said some officers were injured, but they had no figures. They did not report any arrests.

The violence erupted when protesters tried to march out of Yonsei after about 10,000 workers, dissidents and students held a campus rally to denounce the Roh government and demand free labor unions. South Korean law restricts some trade union activity.

Hebrew "Mein Kampf" stirs debate

JERUSALEM — A Holocaust survivor's Hebrew translation of "Mein Kampf" has touched off a controversy over whether the book, which inspired the slaughter of 6 million Jews, should be published in Israel.

Author Dan Yaron argued Sunday that a Hebrew edition of Adolf Hitler's manifesto will educate young Israelis about the evils of the Nazi regime. Other Holocaust survivors say it should never appear on Israeli bookshelves.

So far, Yaron has not found a publisher.

"It's not easy to get someone to publish a book that is connected to Hitler," said Yaron, who spent the past 18 months translating the first volume of "Mein Kampf."

"But 50 years after Hitler, we must be strong enough to look at who he was," said Yaron, who fled his native Vienna in 1938.

Yaron, a retired educator, said in an interview that young Jews should read "Mein Kampf" as a warning against racist ideology. He said, for example, that there were disturbing anti-Arab sentiments expressed by extreme right Israeli politicians.

Saudi-Iran clash looms over Rushdie

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — The leaders of 45 Moslem states and the PLO meet today at a conference that will likely be dominated by Saudi-Iranian clashes over ethics and politics.

This kingdom has refused to support Iran's death order against British novelist Salman Rushdie, and it is not expected to change its position at the Organization of Islamic Conference.

The Saudis also are expected to clash with Iran over the question of recognition of the Afghan guerrilla government.

Arab diplomatic sources said Iran sent a delegation to Riyadh on Saturday for meetings to set the agenda for the four-day conference but that the delegation returned to Tehran without taking part in the meetings.

INSIDE SPORTS

Despite two losses over the weekend, the Iowa men's gymnastics team may be in better position to receive an NCAA bid. See page 4B

Missouri topples Oklahoma

Oklahoma, runner-up in last year's NCAA tournament, finished second again on Sunday.

Byron Irvin scored 29 points and Doug Smith had 22 points and 14 rebounds as 10th-ranked Missouri beat the second-ranked Sooners 98-86 to win the Big Eight tournament and an automatic NCAA bid.

"Missouri had a great game. They shot well and whipped us on the boards," Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs said. "They did about everything you have to do to win."

Missouri, 27-7, is the No. 3 seed in the NCAA Midwest Regional and will play Creighton in the first round. Oklahoma, 28-5, is the top seed in the Southeast Regional and will meet East Tennessee State in the opening round.

Also winning conference tournaments and automatic NCAA bids Sunday were: top-ranked Arizona, No. 3 Georgetown, No. 9 North Carolina, No. 16 Louisville, Alabama, Arkansas and Ball State.

Arizona routed No. 12 Stanford 73-51 in the Pacific-10; Georgetown beat No. 5 Syracuse 88-79 in the Big East; North Carolina edged No. 7 Duke 77-74 in the Atlantic Coast Conference; Louisville downed No. 14 Florida State 87-80.

Pac-10

Sean Elliott had 21 points as Arizona beat Stanford 73-51. The Wildcats took command early and cruised to their ninth straight win.

Todd Licht, Stanford's leading scorer with a 20.6-point average, was held to 11 points. Despite the loss, the Cardinal received their first NCAA berth since 1942.

Big East

Alonzo Mourning scored 21 points as Georgetown dominated Syracuse to win its sixth Big East championship, 88-79.

The Hoyas controlled the game in the second half following an 8-0 run that gave them a 58-45 lead with 11:50 left. The Hoyas, 26-4, have won all six of their Big East tournament championship games. Syracuse, 27-7, has lost seven of its last eight meetings with the Hoyas.

ACC

Steve Bucknall scored all 10 of his points in the last 5:28 to lead North Carolina to a 77-74 win over Duke and its first ACC tournament title since 1982.

Danny Ferry's desperation 70-foot toss at the buzzer could have tied the game, but it bounced off the rim. J.R. Reid led North Carolina with 14 points, while Phil Henderson had 16 for Duke, which fell to 24-7.

Metro

Pervis Ellison scored 22 points as Louisville won its second straight Metro tournament by beating Florida State 87-80.

Louisville, 22-8, led by 14 in the second half, but the Seminoles rallied. Ellison and LaBradford Smith each hit two free throws in the final 37 seconds to clinch the victory for Louisville.

The title was the third in four years for the Cardinals and seventh in the 14-year history of the league. Florida State, 22-7 and the league's regular-season champion, has been to the tournament final five times but has never won the title.

Mid-American

Billy Butts scored 19 points, including five 3-pointers, and Paris McCurdy added 15 points and 11 rebounds as Ball State survived a late Kent State rally for a 67-65 win.

The Cardinals, 28-2, led by 11 twice in the second half, but fell behind 61-60 on two foul shots by Eric Glenn with 2:33 left. McCurdy hit a jumper 40 seconds later to put Ball State back in front, and two foul shots by Curtis Kidd with 1:02 left made it 64-61. Kent finished 20-10.

Keith Perkins scored 14 of his 23 points during a 2:14 span in the second half as Alabama broke open a close game to win its fourth SEC tournament championship with a 72-60 win over Florida.

It was the fifth victory in a row and the seventh in eight games for Alabama, 23-7. Florida, 21-12, was the regular-season SEC champion.

SWC

Lenzie Howell scored 28 points as Arkansas beat Texas 100-76 and won the Southwest Conference tournament for the first time in seven years.

Arkansas, 24-6, broke the record of 92 points in a SWC tournament championship game.

Hawks head east, draw Rutgers

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The question of where the Iowa Hawkeye men's basketball team would spend the beginning of spring break was answered Sunday.

Providence, Rhode Island. The question of who the Hawkeyes would spend the start of spring break with was answered as well. The Scarlet Knights of Rutgers University.

No. 15 Iowa received the fourth seed in the East Region of the NCAA Men's Basketball Championship, and will face 13th-seeded Rutgers in the opening round Friday. For the Hawkeyes, this will be the 10th appearance in 11 years, the most of any Big Ten team.

"They're a good aggressive athletic team with good, quick kids," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said of the Scarlet Knights. "I don't know who they'd be like in our league; more like Illinois, probably."

"That kind of athletic ability, good quickness and can do a lot of things, not overpowering size." Rutgers doesn't have a starter over 6-foot-6. Anthony Duckett, who has started 28 games for the Scarlet Knights at center, has averaged 8.8 points, 5.8 rebounds per game at that height. He leads the team in blocked shots with 18.

In the scoring column, Tom Savage leads Rutgers with 19.8 points per outing.

"I think Rutgers would be (a team that could surprise people) for sure," Davis said. "I think you could build a pretty good case for them. I'm sure, over the next few days, there will be a lot written on Cinderella teams."

That is the kind of role that Rutgers played in the Atlantic 10 postseason tournament. Coach Bob Wenzel's club came on strong in the closing weeks of the season, finishing third in the conference.

The Scarlet Knights won their last eight games, the final victory earning the automatic bid for being the conference tournament champion.

On the other hand, Iowa is definitely not peaking around tournament time.

Hawkeyes cruise by Indiana

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

The names on the uniforms said Indiana, but the team that lost to No. 15 Iowa 87-70 Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena certainly wasn't the team that captured the Big Ten title.

"I think everybody's realistic and knows that we did not see the team that won the Big Ten Championship," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said.

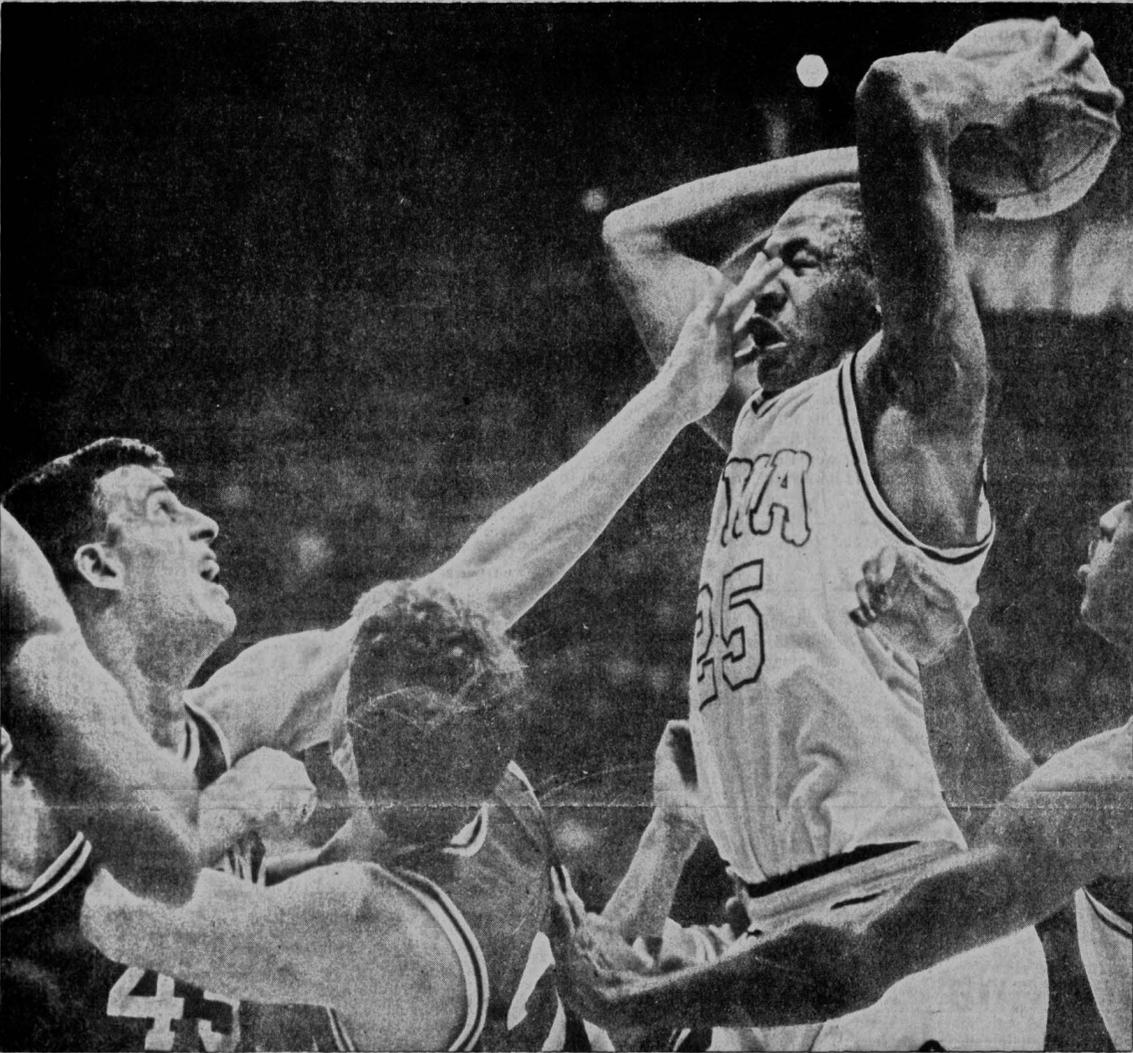

Men's Basketball

The sixth-ranked Hoosiers, owners of a 25-6 overall mark, 15-2 in league play going into the game, sent sportscasters and writers scrambling for press guides in efforts to examine some of the unusual faces that Indiana Coach Bob Knight put on the floor.

Big Ten Player of the Year Jay Edwards was out. The Indiana sports information department issued a statement saying, "Edwards suffered a back strain and developed severe muscle spasms in Thursday's game against Wisconsin."

Todd Jadlow was out. Earlier this year at Bloomington, Ind., Jadlow shredded the Hawkeye defense, pumping in a career-high 32 points in the Hoosiers' 104-89 win at Assembly Hall.

Jadlow was reported to have "reinjured a chronic right ankle." See Indiana, Page 2B

Senior trio shines in final Arena appearance

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

B.J. Armstrong, Ed Horton and Roy Marble may have played their last game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday, but their performances against Indiana may have insured that it wouldn't be their last game.

The only seniors on the Iowa squad combined for 55 points, 18 rebounds and 21 assists en route to the Hawkeyes' 87-70 victory over the Hoosiers.

The win boosted Iowa's record to 22-9 overall, and 10-8 in the Big Ten, while Indiana dropped to 25-7 overall and 15-3 in the conference. Indiana had clinched a berth in the NCAA tournament by winning the Big Ten title, and the victory all but guaranteed an invitation for the Hawkeyes.

"I thought they did what they had to do," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said of the seniors. "Ed had some great passes and it was good to see him back in double figures with 10 rebounds. That was a good final game for them. Everybody did their own thing — Ed rebounded,

B.J. passed and Roy did a little of everything."

Armstrong, Horton and Marble, in addition to senior student managers Jeff Goldstein, Brent Michelson and Dean Wilkins, were honored in a pregame ceremony.

"It was very emotional," said Marble, Iowa's all-time scoring leader. "I tried not to think about it being my last game here. We just wanted to go out on a positive note. Winning the game was important to us."

Iowa came out with the starting lineup of Marble, Armstrong, Horton, Ray Thompson and Matt Bullard. But Indiana matched them with five players who have seen limited action this year, not the starting five that captured the Big Ten Championship.

"I was disappointed. I was supposed to take Jay Edwards so I've been geared up to play him," Marble said. "I like playing with him because he's among the best and I like playing with the best; and I wanted to prove myself."

Iowa only led by six at the half, 32-26, but came out of the locker room quickly, with defense forcing turnovers that led to fastbreak baskets for the Hawkeyes.

"It was fun," Horton said. "We just tightened up the bolts in the second half. Everybody was loose and we just had a good time out there."

Knight attributed the loss to the Hoosiers blowing a number of opportunities in the first half, but Knight praised Iowa's Armstrong.

"Armstrong is just such a good player," Knight said. "He has a real understanding of what the hell is going on out there. He does everything that has to be done."

Iowa shares Big Ten crown

By Michael Triik
The Daily Iowan

It was a big weekend for the Iowa women's basketball team.

Saturday the eighth-ranked Hawkeyes downed Michigan State 74-63 to gain a share of the Big Ten title. Sunday, the Hawkeyes were invited to the NCAA Tournament.

Iowa shared the conference crown with Ohio State. It is the third-straight Big Ten title for Iowa and their fourth-consecutive NCAA bid.

Iowa, 26-4, is seeded third in the Midwest Region. They will face the winner of Wednesday night's South Carolina-Tennessee Tech game Saturday at 11:30 a.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. South Carolina, 23-6, is the Midwest Region's No. 6 seed while Tennessee Tech, 21-7, is the region's 11th seed.

"I would imagine that we will be playing South Carolina," Iowa Coach Vivian Stringer said. "They are legitimate. They lost to Tennessee by four or six points and they have been consistently ranked in the top 20."

See NCAA pairings..... Page 5B

South Carolina was ranked 17th in the last Associated Press poll.

The Midwest Regional finals will be held March 23-25 at Louisiana Tech in Ruston, La. Should Iowa win Saturday it would mark the second time in three years that Iowa has been to Louisiana for the NCAA Tournament.

"Maybe some poetic justice can be served here," Stringer said. "We were down there two years

Kruckeberg earns all-America honors

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

Jeanne Kruckeberg ran as fast as she'd ever run before but it wasn't fast enough for an NCAA Championship.

Kruckeberg posted a personal best and an Iowa school record 2 minutes, 6.38 seconds to finish second in the 800-meter run at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at Indianapolis.

Iowa State's Edith Nakiyungu won the race with an NCAA record time of 2:05.68. She was followed by Kruckeberg, Sylvia Brydson from Louisiana State and Villanova's Michelle DiMuro.

The second place finish earned Kruckeberg all-American status for the second year in a row. Last season Kruckeberg won all-American honors in the mile run.

"It was a close race and Jeanne really made us proud," Iowa Coach Jerry Hassard said. "She earned all-American with her place, and nobody deserves it more than her—she's really earned everything she's accomplished."

Kruckeberg also was a member of the Hawkeyes' 3,200-meter relay team that missed the finals by a little more than one second.

Kruckeberg said she was happy with her performance, but she hoped to share some of the glory with teammates Kim Schneekloth, Tammy Hoskins and Michelle Roberts in the 3,200 relay.

"I was indifferent to my placing second immediately after the race," Kruckeberg said, "but now that it's sinking in I'm really happy and I'm satisfied. I just wish we'd made the finals in the relay."

During Friday's preliminaries in the 800, Kruckeberg finished second in her heat, which automatically qualified her for Saturday's finals.

Judging from her preliminary time of 2:06.5, Hassard knew she would do well in the finals.

Sportsbriefs

Hawks open with two wins

The Iowa baseball team opened the season with wins over Kentucky, 17-6, and Maine, 5-2, before facing the top-ranked team in the nation, tournament host, Texas A&M Sunday night.

Iowa overpowered Kentucky Saturday in the opener on the strength of five home runs. Tim Costo and Mike Bradley led the attack, each hitting two, while driving in five of Iowa's 17 scores. John DeJarld worked 6 2/3 innings to earn the win.

Junior pitcher Al Rath worked a complete-game victory over Maine, striking out nine. The Bears have made the trip to the College World Series five times in the 1980s, but were unranked by the most recent Associated Press, college baseball poll.

Blevins' squad posts 2-3 weekend mark

The Iowa softball team came home with two wins, three losses, and a scoring deficiency after dropping out of the Oklahoma Invitational in Oklahoma City Saturday.

After defeating Wichita State and Northern Iowa and losing to Sam Houston State last week during preliminary play, Iowa entered tournament action Saturday against Oklahoma State and Oklahoma City and came away with a split.

Iowa Coach Gayle Blevins said that she "hopes the defense will make up for the lack of offense."

Iowa takes sixth at Illinois invite Sandy Stewart's Iowa volleyball team placed sixth in the 10-team Illinois Invitational Spring Tournament, in Champaign, Ill., over the weekend.

Illinois, the defending Big Ten champs, defeated 1988 NCAA Champion Texas for the tournament title while Iowa lost to Wisconsin in the consolation finals to claim sixth.

"It was a tough tournament, but the competition was great," Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said.

During Saturday morning action, the Hawkeyes beat Eastern Illinois in straight sets before losing a close match with Ohio State, 15-13 and 15-13.

Iowa then suffered its second loss of the day, dropping a pair of games to the Longhorns. That match became more important to the Hawkeyes when junior Kari Hamel sprained her ankle.

"That was a big loss for us," Stewart said. "Jennifer Thompson won't be back from a knee injury until mid-April, and we're a different team without Hamel and Thompson."

Iowa rebounded to defeat conference rival Indiana in another close match, 17-16 and 15-9.

Kite wins Nestle tourney in playoff

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Tom Kite and Davis Love III both double-bogeyed the 18th hole Sunday to send the Nestle Invitational to a playoff, and Kite won the tournament when Love three-putted the second extra hole.

Kite gained the 11th victory of his 18-year career after he and Love made shots on 18 that they will find hard to forget.

The 24-year-old Love and Kite were tied when they went to the tee and both drove well. Kite hit his second shot into a lake to the right-front of the green.

their last four games. Iowa dropped three in a row before ending the regular season with an 87-70 win over Indiana Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

"It was just one of those games where you do the things you need to win the game," Iowa senior Roy Marble said. "I think it was a great win because we needed to get back on track."

Davis agreed. "It's hard to feel positive after you lose," Davis said. "The younger the team, the more devastating it is. It doesn't matter who you lose to, a loss is a loss."

"I think Saturday helped us. I really think it was a good way to conclude."

Georgetown is the top seed in the East Region, followed by Duke, Stanford and Iowa. The Hawkeyes went to the Final Four out of the East Region in 1980.

"I think now, if we can just play the best we've ever played as a team... I really think our best days can be ahead of us," Davis said.

"The problem is if we have one bad night; we don't shoot well, we don't rebound well, it's a one game season from now on."

Indiana

sprain and sustained a severe left thigh contusion in the same contest," according to Indiana team physician Larry Rink.

Senior Joe Hillman and Big Ten Freshman of the Year Eric Anderson were out. Both dressed for the contest, but Knight opted to keep the two out of competition.

"If we don't play Edwards and Jadow, there is no reason to play Hillman and Anderson and have them bust their asses for 40 minutes," Knight said.

Lyndon Jones wasn't out, but he wasn't on the floor at tip-off. Jones was the fifth member of the group who were listed to start, but didn't. He came off the bench at the 11:17 mark of the first half, finishing with nine points in 21 minutes of action.

"That's typical Indiana," Iowa forward Ed Horton said. "Bobby Knight is a very, very smart coach and he knows that he's got the Big Ten clinched, so hey, why not play his bench?"

Horton registered 18 points and 10 rebounds, while Roy Marble had 19 points and B.J. Armstrong scored 18 points and 10 assists. It was the senior trio's final appearance in Carver Hawkeye Arena.

"I kind of didn't want to leave," Marble said. The seniors exited the game with 2 minutes, 22 seconds remaining. "It's like, man, this is the last time I'm going to see all these people here to see me play."

telling us that we are good enough to participate, but that's it. I like that.

"We're not going just to participate. We have seen the top and I want to be there and I think my team wants to be there, too."

Injuries hampered the Hawkeyes all season, but Iowa will enter the tournament as healthy as its been all season. The Hawkeyes also own a five-game win streak.

"We're playing real well right now," Iowa center Shanda Berry said. "Coach Stringer is looking for that one game when we all play together and that's going to be a Final Four game."

Berry is Iowa's leading scorer and rebounder averaging 16.4 points and 9.3 rebounds a game. Three other Hawkeyes are averaging in double figures for scoring.

Junior Jolette Law is averaging 14.6 points per game, junior Franthea Price is averaging 14.4 and senior Robin Christian is adding 12.8 points per game.

Iowa has never played South Carolina or Tennessee Tech. The Hawkeyes' all-time NCAA record is 4-3 in three tournaments.

NCAA

1989 NCAA Men's Basketball Championship

Committee cuts home-court edge

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Georgetown, Arizona, Oklahoma and, surprisingly, Big Ten runner-up Illinois were made No. 1 seeds Sunday in an NCAA basketball tournament draw that reflected competitive balance and fewer home-area advantages.

Big Ten champion Indiana, which lost two of its last three games and dropped two during the season to Illinois, lost out on a chance to play the first two rounds at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis and was banished to the Western regional as the second seed.

Cedrick Dempsey, chairman of the nine-man selection committee, said Indiana fell back because the first responsibility was "to nationally seed them on the basis of competition all year." He added that Illinois' late surge after the return of guard Kendall Gill from a broken foot, plus two wins over the Hoosiers, were also a factor.

In addition to Illinois, Georgetown was made the top seed in the East, Oklahoma in the Southeast and Arizona in the West.

The seeds were determined while some conference championship games were still being played and did not reflect Oklahoma's 98-86 loss to Missouri later Sunday in the Big Eight final.

The Atlantic Coast Conference had the most entries with a record-tying six, while the Big East, Southeastern Conference and Big Ten had five each and the Pac-10, the Metro and the Big Eight four apiece.

"There is no question that at the top of the bracket, we have great parity," Dempsey said. "There are a number of teams capable of being in Seattle for the Final Four."

Eighteen teams with at least 20 victories did not make the field.

This is the richest NCAA tournament ever, with all 64 teams guaranteed at least $250,000 and the 32 first-round winners a minimum of $500,000 apiece.

Two of the ACC entries, Duke and North Carolina, were made second seeds, the Blue Devils behind Georgetown in the East, the Tar Heels behind Oklahoma in the Southeast. Syracuse of the Big East was second seeded in the Midwest and Indiana out West.

Third seeds included Stanford in the East, Missouri in the Midwest, Michigan in the Southeast and Seton Hall in the West.

Iowa in the East, Nevada-Las Vegas in the West, Louisville in the Midwest and Florida State in the Southeast were the fourth-seeded teams.

Missing from the field is defending champion Kansas, which won 19 games but became the first champion barred from defending its title under terms of a probation for recruiting violations.

Georgetown will open against Ivy League champion Princeton in Providence on Friday, and Arizona will play Robert Morris, champion of the Northeast Conference, on Thursday in Boise, Idaho. Ironically, when Robert Morris won its conference title, its fans were holding signs saying "We Want Arizona."

Illinois will open Thursday against McNeese State in Indianapolis and Oklahoma will play against East Tennessee State in Nashville as the tournament committee did its best to take the home court advantage away from top seeds.

But it did try to keep teams close to home. North Carolina, for example, will play in Atlanta, the same city where it won the ACC championship with a 77-74 victory over Duke earlier Sunday, and Georgetown will open in Providence, home of a Big East team.

Cyclones sweat out NCAA tourney bid

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State received its hoped-for invitation to the NCAA basketball tournament Sunday, but the television folks made Coach Johnny Orr and his players sweat a little before disclosing their fate.

The Cyclones will play UCLA in the Southeast Regional at Atlanta on Friday. Iowa State is the No. 10 seed in the region and UCLA is seeded seventh.

By seeding Iowa State 10th, the NCAA selection committee is saying it considers the Cyclones to be among the top 40 teams in the country. However, in the televised announcement of the pairings, the Iowa State-UCLA matchup was the next-to-last of the 32 first-round games to be flashed on the screen.

When the pairing finally was shown, the Iowa State players who had gathered in the football locker room to watch began whooping it up and exchanging high fives.

"We took it down to the wire, man," Orr exclaimed after hugging football coach Jim Walden and Athletic Director Max Urlick.

"I was really nervous," said center Victor Alexander, the team's leading scorer. "My heart was in my shoes."

This will be the fourth NCAA appearance in five years for Iowa State, which lost to Oklahoma 76-74 in the semifinals of the Big Eight Conference tournament on Saturday.

The Cyclones are 17-11 after trying for fourth in the Big Eight at 7-7.

Iowa earns best home marks during two weekend losses

By Mike Polisky
The Daily Iowan

It doesn't happen all that often, but sometimes a loss is better than a win.

The 10th-ranked Iowa men's gymnastics team suffered two defeats this weekend, and strangely enough, they're in better position to make the NCAA tournament.

The Hawkeyes are struggling to ensure an NCAA tournament bid. The bid is decided by the top-five meet scores, two at home and three away. This weekend, Iowa recorded their two highest home-meet scores of the season, both in the mid-270's.

"Winning this weekend's meets was not as important as getting good scores," all-American Jeff Dow said.

Fifth-ranked Ohio State defeated Iowa Friday, 280.45-276.5, and sixth-ranked Minnesota knocked out the Hawkeyes Sunday, 277.9-275.30.

Iowa fell behind early against Ohio State, and never came any closer than 1.6 points, as the Buckeyes turned in their best performance of the year.

"It was the best we've done at home all year," captain Keith Cousino said. "We had a lot of good areas, but we still have a few weak spots we need to work on."

"Anytime you see good gymnastics, you can't get upset about losing," Iowa assistant coach Mike Burns said. "Ohio State had their best meet of the year."

"We just have to work on our inconsistency — we keep missing little things and they are killing us. But the guys did a good job and Dow and (Keith) Cousino really keep things going."

Dow and Cousino led Iowa in the all-around. Dow finished second with a score of 56.75, while Cousino placed fourth at 55.75. Ohio State's Mike Racanelli and Gil Pinto finished first and third with scores of 57.2 and 55.85, respectively. Iowa freshmen Dillon Ashton and Paul Bautel finished fifth and sixth.

Dow claimed first on high bar at 9.75, second on still rings, 9.55; second on pommel horse, 9.5; second on parallel bars, 9.45; and fourth on floor exercise, 9.25. Cousino finished first on parallel bars at 9.75, second on high bar, 9.55; sixth on still rings, 9.15; and fifth on floor exercise, 9.2.

Other places for the Hawkeyes were Keith Rooks, first in vault, 9.65; Paul Wozniak, second on still rings, 9.55; Erik Heikkila, fifth on vault and third on high bar, 9.3 and 9.5.

Against Minnesota Sunday, Dow won the all-around with a score of 56.45, Bautel placed third at 54.3, Cousino was fourth at 54.1 and Ashton finished fifth with a 53.65.

"It was kind of hard to get motivated," Dow said. "Sunday's meet was a letdown from Friday. We almost pulled it out at the end. We're pretty pleased."

"We're on the right track," Cousino said. "If we put it all together over the next two weeks, we could win the Big Ten."

Iowa's final regular season competition will be Saturday, against Houston Baptist, in Houston, Texas.

Hawkeyes qualify one for NCAA at home invitational, zone meet

By Erica Weiland
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes won the team title in the Iowa Invitational this past weekend, but the team win was soured by the fact that only one Iowa swimmer qualified for the NCAA Championships.

The meet was one of the final chances to qualify before the March 23 entry deadline for the NCAA meet. Iowa divers also competed in the NCAA zone qualifying meet in Madison, Wis.

The Hawkeyes placed first in the invitational with 248 points, followed by Nebraska with 162 and Iowa State with 75. Sophomore breaststroke swimmer Doug Mencl was the only Hawkeye to qualify for NAAs.

Mencl won the 100-yard breaststroke with an NCAA-qualifying time of 55.83 seconds. His time also broke the school record of 55.86 set last year by Todd Slaybaugh.

"I felt better than at Big Tens," Mencl said. "This was more low-pressure, and I think that helped. My goal all season has been to go 55.5, and I'm still shooting for it. Now I don't doubt I can do it."

On the disappointing side, diver Tomek Rossa, who qualified for the NCAA meet on the 3-meter board at the Big Ten Championships, failed to qualify on the 1-meter board this past weekend.

"There's no way he shouldn't have made it," Iowa diving Coach Bob Rydze said. "I feel responsible as a coach. He was not mentally ready for the meet."

Rossa, who was ninth on 1-meter at the NCAA meet last year, hit the board on his two and one-half somersault pike, scoring threes on the dive.

"If he hadn't hit the board, he would have been fourth," Rydze said.

The top four divers from the zone, in addition to the top six finishers at the Big Ten meet, qualified for the NCAA Championships.

Rossa will be performing in the 3-meter and platform competitions at the national meet, Rydze said. The meet will be held in Indianapolis March 30-April 1.

"We were real pleased that Doug Mencl qualified," Iowa swimming Coach Glenn Patton said. "But we feel bad that Erik Bacon and Dan Dumford didn't qualify. It was a valiant personal effort by both."

Ketoff makes nationals

By Steve Reed
The Daily Iowan

Freshman Katie Ketoff was the only member of the Iowa women's diving team to qualify for the NCAA Championships as she placed fifth on the 1-meter board Saturday at the NCAA zone qualifying meet in Madison, Wis.

Ketoff will join senior Terri Millmier and junior Louise Keogh at the NCAA Women's Championships March 16-18 in Indianapolis. Ketoff tallied 398.25 points to grab the last qualifying position on the 1-meter. Teammate Kim Yager, also a freshman, was just one-tenth of a point behind with a score of 398.15.

"If God would've been on our side, they both would have qualified," Iowa Diving Coach Bob Rydze said. "Katie is the only freshman from our district, and that bodes well for us."

Rydze said Iowa got a bonus out of her qualifying for the NCAA meet.

"She does really well on the 10-meter platform, but the only way you can compete on the platform is if you're already in the meet, since there is no qualifying on the tower. She should score some points for us up there," Rydze said.

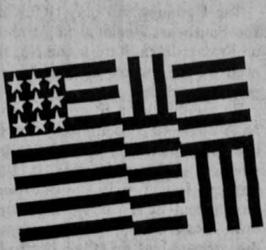

Rydze said he was encouraged by the results, even though Iowa only advanced one diver.

"The girls coming back next year had really good meets, and I'm real happy with them," Rydze said. Ketoff led the charge for Iowa on the 3-meter board as well as the 1-meter, placing seventh with a score of 425.15.

Sophomore Debbie Wirth came in at 12th, while seniors Terri Millmier and Vicki Ramseyer placed 17th and 18th, respectively.

Freshman Kris Munn finished 11th on the 1-meter board.

NCAA 1989 NCAA Women's Basketball Championship

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Top-ranked and once-beaten Auburn was made the top seed in the Midwest Region for the NCAA women's basketball championship, in pairings announced Sunday.

Auburn, 28-1 after losing to second-ranked Tennessee 66-51 on Monday, gained a bye in the first-round of the tournament and will meet the winner of the Temple-Holy Cross game March 19 at Auburn.

No. 2 Tennessee, 30-2, was the top seed in the East Regional. It will open play in the second round March 18 at home against either Connecticut or La Salle.

Fifth-ranked Maryland and No. 3 Louisiana Tech were given the other top seeds. Maryland, 26-2, was put in the West Regional, but will play either Cincinnati or Bowling Green at Maryland in the second round March 18. Louisiana Tech, 29-3, was top-seeded in the Midwest and will open play against either Miami, Fla., or Oklahoma State on March 19 at home.

Also given byes in the first round were No. 7 Long Beach State, 28-4,

No. 13 North Carolina State, 23-6, No. 4 Stanford, 26-2, and No. 6 Texas, 25-4. Long Beach State will play in the East, Texas in the West, North Carolina State in the East and Stanford in the Midwest.

Long Beach State, Louisiana Tech and Tennessee were among five teams to make an eighth appearance in the tournament. Also appearing in all eight years the tournament has been played are Georgia and Mississippi.

Eight teams were added to the tournament this year for a total of 40. Conference champions earned 19 automatic berths and 29 at-large spots were awarded.

First and second-round games were to be played at campus sites with first-round games scheduled March 15.

The first round of regional play was scheduled March 23 and 25, with semifinals March 31. Regional sites are East, Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green, Ky.; Mideast, Auburn University, Auburn, Ala.; Midwest, Louisiana Tech, Ruston, La.; and West, University of Texas, Austin, Texas.

Karamazovs gamble with skill

The Daily Iowan

You name it, and they'll juggle it. Within reason, of course. The Flying Karamazov Brothers will bring their multifaceted juggling skills — and other skills, considerably less developed but offered with ample apologies — to Hancher Auditorium for two shows at 8 tonight and tomorrow night.

The Karamazovs — vaudevillians who are not brothers and not even Russian — have gained worldwide fame for juggling almost anything, no matter how improbable or dangerous, and telling any pun, no matter how awful.

Although they got their start on the streets, the Karamazovs have taken their unique brand of theater to prestigious venues around the world. Their triumphs include an adaptation of Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors" at New York's Lincoln Center, an experimental production of Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat" at the Brooklyn Academy of Music, an Obie-winning off-Broadway run and an appearance as Sufi jugglers in the Kathleen Turner/Michael Douglas film "The Jewel of the Nile."

Their own humble description of their act is "juggling and cheap theatrics."

The Flying Karamazov Brothers

Among their more remarkable accomplishments have been juggling roaring chainsaws and playing Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" by bashing transmitter-wired helmets with clubs that are simultaneously juggled. In a skill that involves no trick photography or sleight-of-hand, they routinely encounter and surmount real, hold-your-breath danger. As they point out, "There is only one edge of a sickle one can catch — more than once."

A traditional highlight of the Flying

Karamazov's show is "The Gamble," in which the audience is invited to get into the act by providing three objects that will challenge the juggling prowess of one of the brothers. Any object heavier than one ounce but lighter than 10 pounds and no larger than a bread box is acceptable. The deal with the audience is this: If the juggler succeeds at keeping the objects airborne to the count of 10, he wins a standing ovation. If he fails, he suffers an ignominious cream pie in the face.

Although the Karamazov's act owes more to the Marx Brothers than Dostoevsky, it is not without its respectable and literary aspects. Two of the brothers have been known to act a scene from Tom Stoppard's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead" while juggling Indian clubs. And in the new show, a famous Gilbert and Sullivan patter song becomes a summation of the Karamazov's diverse skills as they simultaneously dance, juggle and sing "We are the Very Model of a Modern Vaudeville Juggling Troupe."

Tickets for tonight and tomorrow's performances at the Flying Karamazov Brothers are $14, $12 and $10. UI students receive a 20 percent discount, and tickets for those 18 and under are available for half price.

I Works hits, misses in innovative pieces

By Bonnie Gordon
The Daily Iowan

I Works, Iowa City's resident dance company, performed an uneven but provoking program of "collaborative dance" with sterling help from the Tarkio College dance company of Tarkio, Mo.

I Works founder Doug Wood's two pieces ranged from stimulating to almost entirely unsuccessful, and company member Jim Moore's two solos were pleasant to watch. But the Tarkio production, "Origin," was a nerve-tingling festival of color and beat — appealingly chic and sincerely felt at the same time.

Choreographer Rob Scoggins collaborated intimately with visual artist Tony Crowley to create "Origin," as much a dance of projected images as human beings. The white untidied dancers leaped and whirled through wildly composed paintings projected against a white screen, accompanied by music of John Cage and "new age" composer Irastein.

Scoggins has a precise, sharply etched choreographic style that corresponds beautifully to the synthesized yet primarily rhythmic music. The choice of the quickly changing slides, although not easily rationalized, was intuitively satisfying.

The artistic intuition so evident in Tarkio's Scoggins/Crowley collaboration was only partly present in Wood's creations. "He Certainly Very Clearly Expressed Something. Some Said That He Did Not Express Anything," was an exploration of pattern and individual experience, danced to live improvisational piano music by Tony Nalke and to Gertrude Stein's text about Henri Matisse.

"Certainly Very Clearly" combined non-professional dancers' walking patterns with intense concentration, as soloists Jim Moore and Angie Hayes portrayed the burden of self-doubt that Matisse, according to Stein, carried all his artistic life. Wood carried the canonic patterns of movement beyond the point where the viewer was aware that it was getting repetitive, but switched patterns before it became actually boring — showing, perhaps, a little better judgment than Stein herself.

But it was the rich, evocative lighting and the dreamy music by Nalke that created the emotional mood of the piece, and Hayes' bouncy dance persona added just the right spice.

"Building/Falling," on the other hand, quickly became a parody of itself — which was unfortunate because it was by far the longest work on the program.

Wood's attempt to integrate video (in the form of a 9-by-12-foot TV screen showing visually static postmodern compositions by Jane Champion), text (Edgar Allan Poe's "The Masque of the Red Death," altered to make a much-too-literal parallel with modern nuclear defense strategies), new music (a Bach cello sonata occasionally ruined by composer John Corsetta's white noise additions) and dance (Wood's characteristically lyrical choreography) was an utter failure.

Wood should take his cue from the only two entertaining moments of the piece, which involved human interaction between the two dancers (Wood and Moore). The audience laughed aloud as the duo, having frantically arranged their personal spaces so as to have as little contact with each other as possible, finally sat down and stared doubtfully at each other. Thematic unification of artistic elements is all very fine and good, but art is not a theoretical essay.

Moore's two solos, one danced by Marie Wilkes to country music sung by K.D. Lang and the other by Moore to Philip Glass' "1000 Airplanes on the Roof," needed more intense exploration of character and feeling to be memorable. Moore has improved tremendously as a dancer, but as a choreographer he is like Wood in that they are both short on human expressiveness.

The evening ended with an hour-long discussion between audience members and all of the collaborators, which was taped and will be shown on Heritage Cablevision's Public Access Channel 26.
