Hopes of controlling oil spill 'abandoned'

VALDRAS, Alaska (AP) — A vital harbor reopened Tuesday after two weeks of being closed by an oil spill. But there is every indication that the nation's oldest and largest oil spill has hit the nation's oldest and largest oil spill. Only a 10% of the 15 million gallons of oil has been recovered from the spill.

President George Bush said at the White House that the federal government would transfer control of the spill to the private sector and allow it to be cleaned up by an oil spill.

The latest news from the ABC News Real-Time Wire indicates that the spill has been successfully cleaned up by a private company, and that the federal government will not be involved in the cleanup process.

Senate eases foreclosures

D-Des Moines (AP) — Despite warnings that Iowa farmers could lose their homes, a Senate panel Tuesday to allow criminal foreclosures to make easier for financial institutions to dispose of foreclosed farms.

The Senate voted 26-19 for a bill that eliminates the state’s strict requirements that banks file all papers related to evictions before the court. The requirement, if not met, would allow a tenant to remain in the property under certain circumstances.

The bill also includes a provision requiring banks and homeowners’ advocates to work together to find solutions for renters who are facing eviction.

The legislation, which is sponsored by Senate Majority Leader Ralph Rosenberg and Representative Jim Riordan, D-Ames, is designed to help homeowners who are facing eviction and are unable to pay the rent.

The Senate approved the bill on a 40-9 vote, sailing through the chamber with bipartisan support.

Senators call for moratorium to block planned Brushy lake

DEE MOSLEY (AP) - The latest move in America's Cup challenge, a large sailing vesselBrushy Creek valley near Fort Dodge, was something out of the ordinary, trying to get a three-year moratorium on building the lake. The original plan would have drained 40 percent of the state's water recreation needs and has been controversial due to the changes in the environment.

That would delay any lake development for 12 years. The plan is being offered as an amendment to a Senate bill aimed at protecting a 200,000-acre National Monument from building the Brushy Lake. The Senate Committee on Natural Resources held a hearing on the matter last week.

"These are the kinds of issues that are the focus of the moratorium," said Senator Don Sauer of Coralville. "If it's not a moratorium, it's something that needs to be reviewed."

The moratorium would apply to the entire area, including the Brushy Creek valley, which is considered one of the state's most important natural areas. The senator said that the moratorium would be a way to ensure that the lake would be built in a way that would not harm the environment.

"We need to have a moratorium," Sauer said. "We need to have a moratorium on any lake development in the area."

The moratorium would allow for further study of the impact of lake development on the area, including the effects on wildlife and water quality.

The search for a new academic dean continues last fall. The position currently being filled by David Vance, professor of law, who is serving on acting vice president for the time being, will not be filled for a permanent basis. Richard Remington, vice president and treasurer of the university, has been in the position since John O. Freedman, the UI's vice president, resigned last March.

The UI is in communication with several of the prominent and influential candidates they have in mind for the position and will continue the search for a new dean once a permanent successor has been chosen.

Board uses fees to help budget cuts

By Nicole Nyhuis

The Daily Iowan

Board members in the Iowa City Community School District voted Tuesday night to raise fees in order to help fund a new staff position for public relations.

Paul Davis, coordinator for the gymnasium and community services, recommended the fee because of the district's need to help fund the new position.

"We're estimating about $1,200 a year in fees to offset expenses," Davis said. "I need assistance. We normally get the fee in the rest of the summer, but we need it for the money on the add-on as a registration fee for students.

"If we don't add this and the increase, the same school program is going to be put on. And it operates with no extra money, and that's a problem.

"Maybe we should start assessing more responsibility even though these are tough fiscal times," Davis said. "The school needs these funds to help the program.

"The fee is paid by the fee in the cost of the summer camp, but we need the add-on as a registration fee for students."

The fee was added to the fee for the add-on to the fee for the fee for the program, which was raised from $15 to $20, to a total of $40.

The fee for the program was increased to $45 for summer camp.

The administration is expected to present the new fee to the board next week.

If the fee is not cut, the school district will lose $2,000 a year.

"I think we're tied a good fee," Davis said. "I think that the fee is in the cost of the program, but we need the add-on as a registration fee for students.

Prison uprising could be linked to drug trafficking, officials say

SANTA CATERINA, Guatemala (AP) — Effective and police staged a prison standoff on Tuesday, and officials deplore another instance of violence against humans and women inside the Penitentiary. President Carlos Castillejos said drug traffickers may have been behind the prison standoff. Officials said more than 2,000 inmates remained inside.

Just before dawn, two prisoners were killed in the prison, officials said. About 2,000 inmates were rounded up from the prison, and the inmates were searched by the police. A prisoner who is linked to drug trafficking, officials say.

Castillejos said the prison is to be closed only if the inmates agree to a peaceful solution. More than 400 inmates have remained inside.

Baker denies 'warning trend' in current U.S.-Cuban relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State James Baker said in a phone call to his Cuban counterpart that major impediments remain to improved relations with Cuba. Baker said Cuba had been "courageously" changed sufficiently to warrant a new U.S. policy toward the island nation.

Baker said in the three-page document that he believed that Cuba's leaders were now making a genuine commitment to change, and that he was writing the same type of recommendation to the president's national security council. He noted that the specification mentioned following the precedent of the Cuban Revolution's initial phase of 1959-60 and the period of the Cuban missile crisis in 1962.

Baker was speaking to his Cuban counterpart, foreign minister Vicente Fox, through a translator.

"Further, the Cuban government's admission in the interview that major impediments remain to improved relations with Cuba is recognized," the document said.

The document was dated March 28, 1990, with a 2-0:30 p.m. "This is not an offer to sell, or solicitation of offers to buy, or transaction in any security, as each are subject to certain legal requirements. Najib bars guerrillas with guerrillas for end to 'Afghan fratricide'

KALED, Afghanistan (AP) — President Najib has told Afghan political leaders that the only way to end the war is through political means, not military force. In a statement delivered Monday, Najib said that the government is ready to sit down with guerrillas in Pakistan and work towards a negotiated settlement. Najib's offer comes after years of bitter fighting between the government and guerrillas, and after attempts at peace talks have failed.

The Afghan government has long been divided on how to resolve the conflict. Some officials favor a military approach, while others believe that political solutions are needed. Najib's decision to engage the guerrillas is seen as a significant change in the government's strategy.

Najib's offer is also likely to be met with skepticism by some guerrilla leaders, who may view the government's efforts as a ploy to delay negotiations or to get them to agree to terms that are unacceptable.

The immediate cause of the conflict is the failure to achieve a negotiated settlement. The guerrillas, known as mujahedeen, or holy warriors, refuse to negotiate with what they call a ‘godless communist regime.’

On Feb. 15 the last Soviet troops withdrew under a U.N.-mediated agreement, after more than nine years of direct involvement in the war. Najib's consent is sought and supplied with modern Soviet equipment, was a compromise made in order to gain U.S. support. Najib has said he will continue until the United Nations and Pakistan stop arming the guerrillas.

Najib called repeatedly for an end to ‘Afghan fratricide’ and accused ‘Pakistani insurgents’ of being ‘godless communist regime.’

Court grants moniker stay of execution of OFFICE — A federal district judge yesterday stayed seven days in a case involving the National Football League when he granted the league's motion for a stay of execution of the order issuing writs of garnishment on the property of the estate of former league President Pete Rozelle.

The stay was made possible when the judge indicated he would issue a formal order staying the execution of the orders of Garnishment pending an appeal of the order of April 30. The stay was necessary because the orders of Garnishment are due to be executed today. The orders will cause the seizing of property worth an estimated $7 million, which is expected to be sufficient to cover the $3 million in legal fees, taxes and court costs incurred by Rozelle's estate.

The stay of execution was sought by Rozelle's estate, which is being represented by attorney William M. Schreiber of San Diego.

The problem with ARENA, of course, is its utter unreconstrucibility. Its leader, Alfredo Cristiani, the party's main candidate is Roberto D'Aubuisson, Nicknamed "Macho Rafael" for his preference of torture techniques, D'Aubuisson's squads have operated out of uniform or civilians operating with no protection for human rights. Although the idea is sound, it has been tried before with mixed results and the National Peasant Movement. The Bush administration has yet to stop the death squads, and Bush has not yet called for their recognition.

But the administration's expressions of concern are empty. El Salvador has always had a death-squad government. Using the Christian Democrat Duarte regime, tens of thousands were murdered by these groups who were either soldiers operating out of uniform or civilians operating with no protection for human rights. So, the Bush administration has yet to achieve the ultimate political promise: "Democratically elected death squads!"

Yet some in Congress are now saying that further U.S. military aid to El Salvador should be conditioned on the new regime's respect for human rights. Although the idea is sound, it has been tried before with mixed results and the National Peasant Movement. The Bush administration has yet to stop the death squads, and Bush has not yet called for their recognition.

The Campus Review also victimized by slander and lies

It's a rare occurrence to hear many who didn't necessarily agree with my opinions, but who respected their peers well and took the time to consider our positions. We did not always come to the same conclusions, but we valued our dialogue and the chance to engage with other viewpoints. Unfortunately, the list of engaged and reasonable writers to proceed and share their views within this op-ed, using this atmosphere for their own benefit. But alas, it's clear to all that the recent anti-Campus activities and actions against the Campus are simply an attempt to harass and obstruct the process of the campus newspaper. This is not the first time this has happened, nor will it be the last.

The situation is fraught with certain aspects of the larger fabric. It's a situation that requires us to carefully consider how we engage with each other and what constitutes a fair and respectful exchange of ideas. The recent attempts by some to spread misinformation and undermine the credibility of Campus are not only irresponsible but also damaging to the culture we've worked so hard to build.

I'm writing to share my views on this issue and to urge our readers to remain vigilant and to support the work of Campus, which has been a valued resource for our community for many years. It's essential for our students and faculty to have a forum where they can share their ideas and engage in meaningful dialogue. By supporting Campus, we are supporting the vibrancy and diversity of our campus.

I encourage all of us to continue to engage in respectful conversations and to maintain a commitment to the values of free speech and open dialogue.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]

Court claims were false, Becker says

Iowa men's basketball coach Bob Huggins and the University of Louisville have been unable to agree on the status of a lawsuit filed by the former University of Iowa basketball player by Mr. Mitchell. Mr. Mitchell was once considered one of the best players in the country and was drafted by the Houston Rockets in the first round of the 1980 NBA draft. He played for the Houston Rockets for two seasons before being traded to the Portland Trail Blazers. He then played for the Golden State Warriors before retiring from the NBA in 1985.

The lawsuit alleges that Mitchell was wrongly declared ineligible for the NBA draft and that the University of Iowa failed to properly represent his interests. Mitchell claims that the university failed to properly communicate with him about his eligibility and that the university's failure to properly represent his interests led to his being declared ineligible for the draft.

The lawsuit seeks unspecified monetary damages. Mitchell's attorney, Robert Friedland, said that the case is still pending and that he is confident that the university will be held accountable for its actions.

Mitchell's former coach, Lute Olson, said that he was surprised by the lawsuit and that it was not in line with Mitchell's character.

"I was shocked by the lawsuit," Olson said. "He was always a gentleman and a team player. I can't imagine him doing something like this."

Givens drops libel suit with Tyson
