Oil clean-up plan panned

Transportation Secretary Sam Skinner told Senators Wednesday that oil industry plans for dealing with a spill like the one off Valdez, Alaska, were non-existent, a fact that would have altered the Bush Administration's decision to leave primary clean-up responsibility to Exxon. Fire safety violations plague UI

By Brian Dick
The Daily Iowan

Fire safety at the UI has been the hot topic of discussion for the past 10 years. Forty buildings on campus suffer from fire-safety code deficiencies, and without resolution the flames of apathy could engulf the UI's need to comply with fire-safety regulations.

In 1979, the office of the State Fire Marshal increased its periodical inspection of the UI. Based on its findings, the UI administration used the first inspection to gauge both the magnitude of the existing deficiencies and the implications of their corresponding actions. The results of the study provided the basis on which the UI was later to make funding requests to the Board of Regents and the state Legislature.

Since the date of the first inspection in 1979, the State Fire Marshal's Office has toured the UI in 1981, 1983, 1986 and 1988 to inspect, indicate and suggest improvements on building deficiencies.

Branstad pledges to keep tuition prices minimal

By Andy Brownstein
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Terry Branstad made his position loud and clear Wednesday: no unfair tuition increases for UI students.

In a candid interview with student government leaders, the Iowa governor firmly supported the stand of the state Board of Regents and the Legislature to keep future tuition increases at the rate of inflation.

"We've gone through a period of time where the student's share in tuition payments increased during the early part of the '80s," Branstad said. "The state just didn't have the money. We were going through the farm crisis, land values dropped, and we just had a general lack of revenue."

"Now that's beginning to change," he said. "I can assure you that the regents will make foreseeable increases at least nothing more than inflation."

Branstad said the state is now in a

Gun turret catches fire during exercises

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A huge gun turret packed with gunpowder exploded in flames on the battleship USS Iowa near Puerto Rico on Wednesday, killing at least 47 sailors in one of the worst naval disasters since the Vietnam War.

The death toll from the accident, which happened during a gunnery exercise, "could go higher, but we don't know at this point," said Lt. Cmdr. Steve Burnett, a spokesman for the Atlantic Fleet, based in Norfolk.

He said the number of crewmen injured had not been determined.

Two ships participating in the same exercise collided Wednesday afternoon about 500 miles east of Jacksonville, Fla., causing one minor injury, said Archie Galloway, a civilian public affairs officer at Norfolk.

Neither the USS Platt, a fleet oiler, nor the frigate USS Tripp was in danger of sinking, Galloway said. The ships were not in the same area as the Iowa.

Iowa crewmen put out a fire inside the forward turret, which supports three of the ship's nine 16-inch guns, flooded several compartments holding explosives as a precaution and declared the ship no longer in any danger, said Lt. Cmdr. Chris Baumann, another spokesman for the fleet.

The Iowa rendezvoused at mid-afternoon with the nearby aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea, which carries three doctors and has full medical facilities, Baumann said.

Helicopters from the Coral Sea brought medical equipment to the Iowa and transferred some of the injured to the carrier.

The Iowa will proceed on Thursday to Roosevelt Roads, a Navy base in Puerto Rico, said Cmdr. Robert Franzmann of the Atlantic Fleet. The 48-year-old ship, one of the four largest in the fleet, is based at Norfolk.

Navy officials were notifying family members personally of the deaths, Baumann said.

The explosion occurred while the ship was taking part in a gunnery exercise about 330 miles northeast of Puerto Rico, said Burnett.

The ship's guns were being test fired, and the turret was "full of gunpowder," Baumann said. The

O'Rourke talks on war and chaos

By Jean Thilmany
The Daily Iowan

The principle features of society are war and chaos. It would be stupid to stay on a planet for 70 years and not go to check out some of that war and chaos first hand — according to P.J. O'Rourke anyway.

O'Rourke, who spoke last night in the Union, is currently International Affairs Desk chief for Rolling Stone magazine and author of "Holidays in Hell." He is billed as "the intrepid reporter who travels to the world's worst places and asks, 'What's funny about that?'"

"I wanted to find out why the world is such a mess, why the entire world isn't as pleasant and as nice as a middle-class college campus," O'Rourke said.

So saying he took off in 1984 for Lebanon, "just as if I decided to take a trip to Disneyland."

"I thought, I'll pretend I'm on vacation, I'll pretend this is just a regular place," he said. "But once I got there I thought to myself, 'What the hell am I doing here?'"

Armed with a copy of the 1957 guidebook, "Beirut — The Paris of the Middle East," O'Rourke enlisted the aid of a taxi driver named Najeeb to drive him through Lebanon to the sites listed in the guidebook.

"Instead, he drove me back and forth across the greenline about 47 times," O'Rourke said.

On the greenline — the line separating Beirut's Christian East Bank from the Moslem West Bank — he was stopped by several patrol groups who brandished guns in his face but put them down when Najeeb spoke with them. Finally, O'Rourke asked Najeeb what he said to the soldiers.

"I tell them you travel for pleasure," Najeeb told O'Rourke.

"It turns out I wasn't missing any of the sites See O'Rourke, Page 5A said Robert Leber, fire protection supervisor at the State Fire Marshal's Office. "Our decisions aren't empty threats."

The UI's prime target for correction, as a result of the inspections, has been residence halls.

Dormitories, being the most heavily populated of all UI facilities since they involve 24-hour occupancy, assumed top priority. The UI has spent nearly $2 million over a seven-year period on fire improvements in the dorms.

Harkin slams Yeutter's lack of drought aid

DES MOINES (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter's resistance to drought aid is "shocking" and a clear signal the administration is "telling Iowa just to kiss off," U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin said Wednesday.

"When we have a natural disaster, the country has stepped in to help. It is a time-honored principle," Harkin said. "We help local areas that have a natural disaster."

Harkin's comments came after a Senate Agriculture Committee meeting at which Yeutter was questioned about the potential for federal assistance for drought-ravaged portions of southern Iowa.

Yeutter said federal budget restraints would make it difficult to meet Iowa's needs and suggested that the state government might be a better place to look.

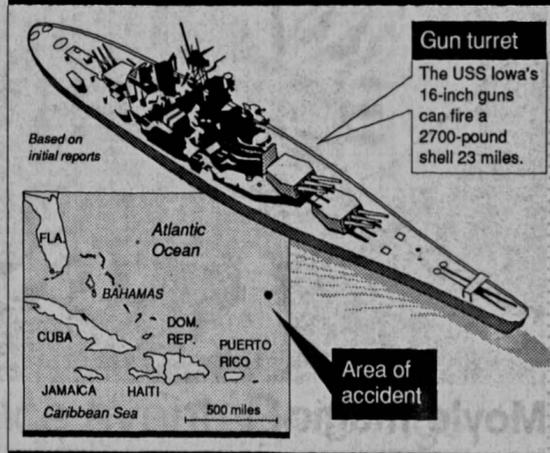

"The federal government can't be everything to everyone," Yeutter said.

That stance angered Harkin, who fired back at the committee meeting and in a later conference call with Iowa reporters.

"Basically, he's telling Iowa just to kiss off," Harkin said. "I'm just shocked at his attitude."

Salcido ensnared in northern Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — California winery worker Ramon Salcido Bojorquez, wanted for a bloody rampage that left seven people dead, including his wife and two of his daughters, was arrested yesterday at a roadblock in northwestern Mexico, officials said.

"He was arrested before dawn this morning in a surprise roadblock set up by agents fighting the illicit drug trade," said Vicente Mendoza, a spokesman for the attorney general's office.

Salcido was picked up just outside Guasave, a village near Los Mochis, his hometown in Sinaloa state about 850 miles northwest of Mexico City, Mendoza said.

Mendoza said he did not know Salcido's nationality, and U.S. Embassy spokesman Bill Graves said the embassy is not sure if he is an American citizen.

"He has been arrested at the request of U.S. authorities who have asked for his extradition. We are bringing him to Mexico City," Mendoza said, adding that Salcido is in the custody of the Federal Judicial Police, a branch of the attorney general's office.

Mendoza said Salcido would be taken to Mexico City later yesterday for an extradition hearing, but he did not know when that would take place.

Salcido was arrested the same day services were being held in Glenn Ellen, Calif., for some of the six members of Salcido's family who were killed.

About 300 people attended a memorial service Tuesday for another of the victims, Tracy Toovey.

Salcido, 28, was a forklift operator who worked with Toovey at a winery.

Salcido's wife, mother-in-law, two sisters-in-law, and Toovey were butchered, shot to death or both on April 15. The next day, three of See Slayings, Page 5A

Long-timers in residence halls are rare, but aren't so different

"God, you're old!" gasped one freshman to Don Faust on a Mayflower Residence Hall elevator.

Faust, a UI graduate student seeking a master's degree in hospital administration, was amused. Since he has lived in Mayflower for 2½ years, he has grown used to other students' reactions. At 25, he is almost five years older than his resident assistant.

Dave Jacobson is just another guy to his floormates. Aside from a more modest demeanor than most of his stereo-cranking neighbors, there is nothing noticeably different about him.

Without fanfare, Jacobson currently reigns as the longest consecutive resident of Currier Residence Hall. His five years in UI residence halls is a feat rarely matched on this campus. The fifth-year actuarial sciences major lived one year in Burge Residence Hall and four in Currier, including the last three years in the same single-person room.

Jacobson said he has witnessed significant changes in residence-hall life over the past five years. He is one of few remaining dormitory residents who remember life in the halls before the drinking age was raised to 21. The result, Jacobson said, is more calm residence halls that are vandalized less.

Still, he fondly recalls the years prior to the change.

"What are now called 'floor activities' are much different than what they used to mean," he said. "Back then, staying in beat going out."

Warrior of the Mississippi River

Greenpeace advocate devotes life to 'biggest toilet in America'

By Heather Maher
The Daily Iowan

"I HOPE NO ONE MINDS THAT THERE'S NO PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEM. I CAN USUALLY YELL PRETTY LOUD — IT COMES FROM DEALING WITH CHEMICAL COMPANIES," John Liebman's voice boomed across Van Allen Hall's Lecture Room II last Thursday night.

Sitting on top of the counter that's usually reserved for astronomy lecture notes and marketing exams, Liebman talked for the next 2½ hours about the work that consumes his life: the Greenpeace Mississippi River Toxic Waste Campaign.

"Six of the 10 worst polluted states in the nation are located along the Mississippi River region," Liebman started off. And the news only got worse.

Not only has the Mississippi River become a dumping ground for the run-off of America's major chemical, paper and sewage plants, Liebman said, but a recent mortality study of populations in the river region uncovered the chilling fact that death rates on the Mississippi are 66 percent higher than average national rates.

"People who live on the Mississippi River are dying a helluva lot faster than those who don't," said Liebman. "We're talking Vietnam-size death rates."

For six years, Liebman has directed a campaign — sponsored by the environmental group Greenpeace — to investigate the cause of this extraordinary pollution, and to make people aware of the life-threatening danger it poses.

In the Beluga, a boat specially brought from Europe for Greenpeace's North American Inland Waters Expedition, Liebman and hundreds of volunteers began their clean-water campaign last fall in the Great Lakes and worked their way down from the headwaters of the Mississippi to its end in New Orleans.

What they found was, according to Liebman, nothing short of horrific.

By conducting biological and water analysis studies, the Greenpeace workers identified in the water sometimes hundreds of chemicals known to be deadly to humans, millions of gallons of which are discharged every day by American industry.

"By the time the Mississippi River reaches Louisiana, the last American city to drink from it, American companies have used legal permits to discharge more than 95 billion pounds of deadly chemicals into the river," Liebman said.

From St. Paul to St. Louis, industries are using the river as "a toilet," Liebman said. "Out of sight, out of mind" is the catch phrase of American industry. Flush it and that's the end — the Mississippi River is the biggest toilet in America."

In St. Paul, Minn., Liebman told of the city's sewer treatment plant — appropriately called Pig's Eye — with a 253 million gallon-a-day solid waste flow into the river. In their analysis of the water around drainage pipes, Greenpeace found 32 "priority pollutants" that pose considerable harm to human health.

City officials had only been testing for five such pollutants on a once-a-year, pre-announced basis, he said.

As they do at most companies discharging deadly run-off into the water, Greenpeace workers plugged the drainage pipe to make a statement.

"It backed up all the toilets in the city," Liebman said, "but it brought the problem to light."

The 'Pig's Eye' problem turned out to be one of the milder cases of river abuse.

In Illinois, the Illinois River is biologically dead until 80 miles outside of Chicago. In St. Louis, the "who's who of polluting chemical companies" can be found, said Liebman.

"St. Louis is the most polluted city in America. Their sewage treatment plant has even been sued by the EPA, which is very conservative," he said. "It's also the home of Monsanto Chemical, which has done just about everything it can do to the river down there."

Monsanto Chemical made local headlines last fall when its Muscatine plant was the target of a "Greenpeace action." The facility discharges 20 million pounds of pesticide contaminants regularly into the river, some of which are the end products of chemicals banned in the United States but manufactured for distribution overseas.

The Beluga arrived in Muscatine in the middle of the night to find "guys with shotguns sitting on their discharge pipes," Liebman said.

Greenpeace eventually returned to the plant, and managed to evade security to climb one of the plant towers and string a 60-foot banner that read "Water for Life" across it. They also plugged the drainage pipes to stop the discharge, and in doing so, brought Monsanto much unwanted publicity.

Such publicity is the goal of the river campaign, said Liebman. "We're gonna wake people up, educate them and infuriate them," he said.

Although Iowa was voted "the neatest place" on the river by Greenpeace workers, Liebman said the farmer is one of the river's biggest enemies.

"In Iowa, we find the American farmer is killing the Mississippi River faster than the chemical companies. Last year, more tons of pesticides and fertilizer were used than in any other year, and half of that ended up in the river," he said.

Liebman said the campaign to stop the pollution on the Mississippi is not over, although the Beluga has already completed its voyage.

"We have gone up against some of the most technologically advanced companies — 15 of them — and we've not been stopped yet," he said. "Not once were we impeded as we tried to make people aware of the abuses being done by these companies."

Senate approves pay raise for legislators

DES MOINES (AP) — A proposed 8.5 percent pay raise for state legislators in 1991 won easy Iowa Senate approval Wednesday.

"I think legislators, frankly, are worth it," said Sen. Robert Carr, D-Dubuque, in response to weak Senate opposition to the pay increase.

The raise, included in a budget bill granting most state government workers 8.5 percent pay increases over the next two years, would move rank-and-file lawmakers' base salary to $18,100, from $16,600 currently.

The raise was patterned after the collective bargaining agreement reached earlier between the state and its unionized employees. That contract calls for a 3.5 percent raise in the fiscal year beginning July 1, followed by a 5 percent raise the next year.

The legislators' raise could not take effect until 1991, however, because state law requires that legislative pay raises be delayed until after an intervening general election. A $2,000 annual raise for legislators, approved prior to the 1988 election, took effect this year.

The bill also would raise the per-day expense reimbursement for legislators and appointed state board and commission members to $50, from $40 currently. That increase for legislators would take effect in 1991, although state appointees could begin collecting it beginning July 1.

Groups unite in opposition to U.S. policy in S. America

UI demonstrations include speakers, newspapers, videos

By Deborah Gluba
The Daily Iowan

People heading to the Union between classes Wednesday may have noticed a candy-striped tent dotting the edge of Union Field.

The tent was part of a coordinated effort by the El Salvador Action Coalition and students across the country to increase awareness about U.S. policies in South America. About 40 universities, including Harvard University, Ohio State University and the University of North Carolina, participated in the event.

"What we're trying to do is relate the oppression in Central America to the racism in this country," said Bruce Nestor, a New Wave member.

A banner reading "Stop CIA Secret Wars in Central America" expressed the organizers' sentiments as they used newspapers, video tapes and speakers to demonstrate their opposition to U.S. government activities in developing nations.

Members of New Wave plan to gather on the Pentacrest today at 12:30 to march to a local military installation to protest the U.S. involvement in El Salvador and demand an end to the repression of students there.

UI history professor Stephen Vlastos was one of six speakers who led discussions about the current situation in Central America.

Vlastos, who has taught courses on the U.S. involvement in Vietnam and written a book on the war's portrayal in history, said public opinion plays a major part in U.S. military actions.

"What one has to understand is the sophistication of the effort that is being made to mold and shape public opinion. It is much more sophisticated than during the Vietnam War," Vlastos said.

In the recent election in El Salvador, both candidates hired public relations firms to present images acceptable to the U.S. and world community, he said.

El Salvador just elected a new president who inherits a country that has been the site of revolution and a limited U.S. military involvement.

"The real question is, what is going to happen next in El Salvador?" he asked.

The Pentagon does not want to become involved in another U.S. direct intervention, but the State Department and the executive branch have been taking the initiative, he said.

One of the event's organizers said war and death squads continue in El Salvador.

Miya Soison said, "I think its real important right now to let everyone know what is going on, especially right after the elections."

Janice Binder, a third-year law student, addressed the current treatment of South American immigrants in Texas and Miami.

Binder spent a month working in South Texas with Proyecto Libertad. The group's 30,000 caseload includes many immigrants who are confined to overcrowded detention centers while they await the results of deportation or asylum hearings.

Detainees have inadequate food, medical care and sanitation facilities in the detention centers and wear long-sleeved prison jumpsuits, she said.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service detention centers follow policies condemned by David Kenyon, U.S. District Court judge in Orentes-Hernandez v. Meese (1988), she said.

Kenyon's opinion stated that El Salvadoran refugees possess good-faith claims to asylum and a well-founded fear of persecution as established under United States asylum laws. INS procedures for processing Salvadorans are not uniform, take place in coercive conditions and fail to provide procedures for complaints, Kenyon said in the opinion.

Binder said the oppressive conditions related in the court opinion remain in the South Texas detention centers, and increased border patrol officers will not end the exodus of more than 40,000 Central American refugees in six weeks.

"They're trying to stem the flow of immigration, but the actions have only stemmed the flow for a few months," she said.

Central American immigrants, not treated as political dissidents, are in danger if forced to return to their homeland. The Congressional Record shows that a larger percentage of immigrants from Poland and Iran are approved for asylum than those from Nicaragua or El Salvador, Binder said.

"The thing that is really interesting is that in those four countries, Poland, Iran, El Salvador and Nicaragua, only citizens from Nicaragua have actually been deported," she said.

Three UI researchers will be honored by the Iowa Academy of Science Friday, April 21, during the academy's 101st annual meeting at Buena Vista College, Storm Lake.

Vasu Nair, professor of chemistry, will receive the IAS Distinguished Fellow Award; Donald Gurnett, professor of physics, will receive the IAS Distinguished Scientist Award; and Duane Spriestersbach, vice president for educational development and research, dean of the Graduate College, and professor of speech pathology and audiology, will be presented with the IAS Distinguished Service Award.

Nair, recognized internationally for his work in the development of new anti-viral agents, was cited for his research "on the frontiers of nucleoside chemistry, which has already had significant implications in the rational development of potentially new therapeutic agents in the anti-cancer and anti-viral fields."

In announcing the award, the IAS also said, "This work has already led to and is expected to lead further to the synthesis of unique nucleosides with high therapeutic potential in acquired immune deficiency syndrome."

The Distinguished Fellow Award is the highest honor the IAS can bestow upon one of its members.

Gurnett received his doctorate in physics at the UI in 1965 and became a UI faculty member in the same year. He is internationally renowned for the design and construction of scientific instruments for 25 NASA spacecraft, instruments that measure radio emissions and plasma waves in the thin, electrically charged gas in space called plasma. In presenting the award, the academy said, in part: "Dr. Gurnett's most outstanding achievement is a set of discoveries involving electromagnetic waves in outer space."

Gurnett's instruments have led to the discovery of many of the most important radio and plasma wave phenomena in the magnetospheres of the planets Earth, Jupiter, Saturn, and Uranus, as well as at the Jovian moon Io, and in interplanetary space.

Spriestersbach was cited for his personal research, as well as his work on behalf of scientific research at the UI.

The IAS said, in part: "Dr. Spriestersbach has demonstrated through his personal research and scholarship the benefits of applying scientific methods to the study of human communication disorders, specifically regarding cleft lip and palate, a condition which ranks as one of the major human birth defects."

Spriestersbach came to the UI in 1939 as a graduate student, received his doctorate in 1948, achieved distinction as a professor of speech pathology and audiology, was named dean of the UI Graduate College in 1965, and became a vice president in 1966. He served as interim president from Sept. 1, 1981, through March 31, 1982.

First candidate interviews for job of UI vice president for research

The first candidate to interview for the vice president for research position at the UI has been on campus yesterday and today, according to John Kennedy, professor of civil and environmental engineering, and search committee chairman.

The first candidate is Marla Peterson, who has served as a faculty member in the Department of Educational and Counseling Psychology at the University of Tennessee since 1985 and before that as dean of research at the university from 1981 to 1985.

Kennedy said the search committee anticipates interviewing at least four additional candidates before making final recommendations to President Hunter Rawlings by the middle of May.

The search for a new vice president for research began last fall. The university also is simultaneously conducting a search for a vice president for academic affairs.

Dreams

Here are in a world apart. But remember, you once had dreams the same as she. And one day she'll have dreams the same as yours. These dreams become the seeds of all her achievement. They have a way of growing... just like she will, just like you did.

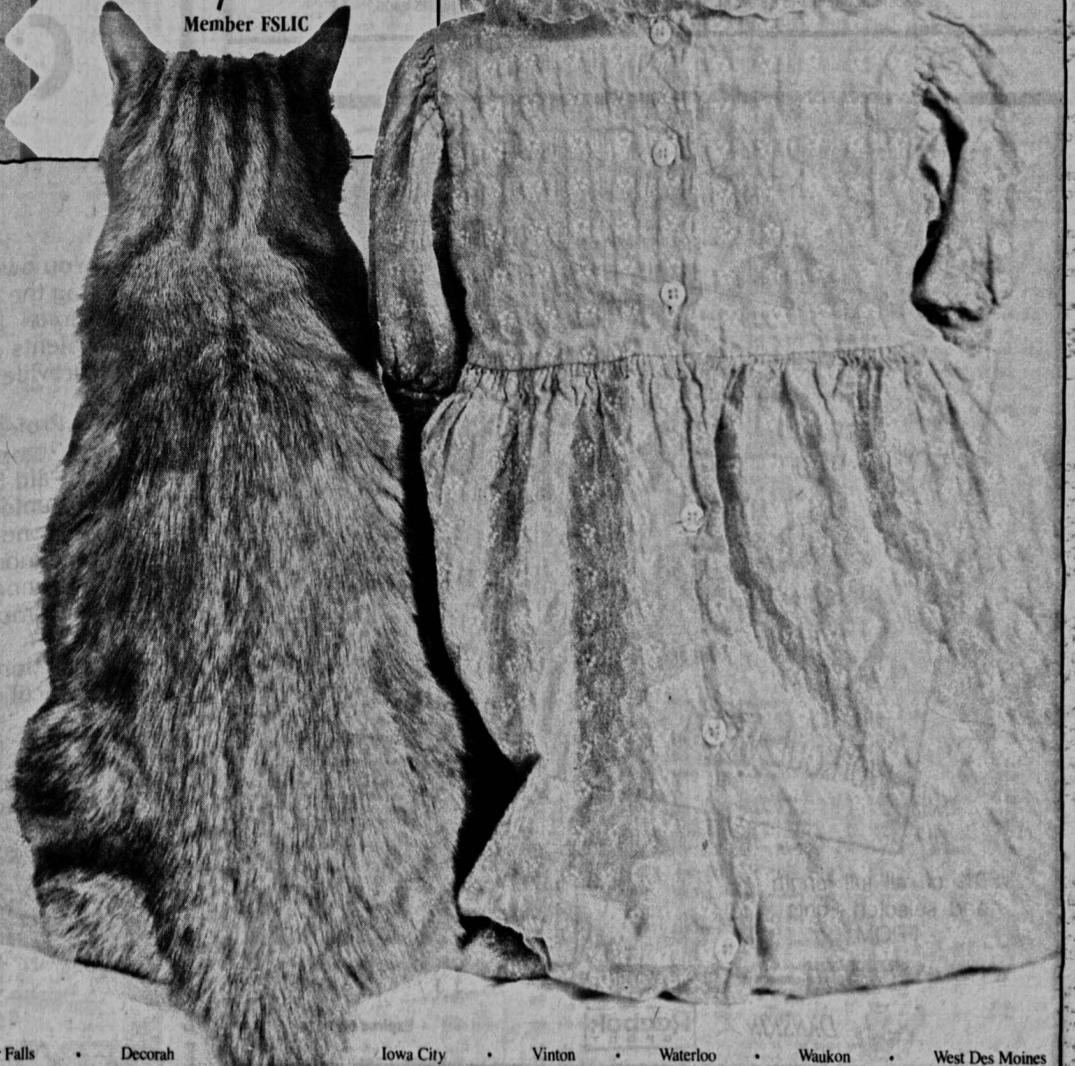

And for 83 years, those dreams have been the seeds of our growth too. Homes, cars, college, your business and more. We've been there and helped a lot of folks see those things come true.

So the next time you're dreaming YOUR American dream... come see us. We'll help you catch your part.

Pro-choice ad hits airwaves

DES MOINES (AP)—Des Moines radio and television audiences got a preview of commercials supporting the pro-choice view on abortion Wednesday, with supporters urged to become politically active before it's too late.

"Call us while you still have a choice," declare the ads, sponsored by the National Abortion Rights Action League. The ads raise the question of what would happen if politicians decide the issue rather than the pregnant woman.

The commercials, together with newspaper ads that have run for about a week, are timed to coincide with oral arguments April 26 in the U.S. Supreme Court on a Missouri abortion case. Pro-choice advocates fear the court is on the verge of reversing a 1973 decision that legalizes abortions, thus turning the issue back to the states.

"It means that state legislatures across the country would make this most personal decision for us," said Judy Bierkamp, field organizer for the abortion rights group. "That is not what America wants."

But she said pro-choice advocates can not afford to rest on their victory in 1973.

"For too long the majority has been quiet, secure in the knowledge that we had won on this fundamental issue. Our ads will remind the pro-choice majority that women's lives are at stake and that there are grave consequences to their continued silence."

"Our ads will remind the pro-choice majority that women's lives are at stake and that there are grave consequences to their continued silence." — Judy Bierkamp, National Abortion Rights Action League

The ads began Wednesday in Des Moines and several other cities and will start running nationwide next Sunday.

In three 30-second spots and three radio commercials taken from the same soundtrack, viewers and listeners are taken back to the days before abortions were legal.

In one, the camera takes viewers slowly down a dark alley, presumably a place where a woman might find a clandestine abortion should the operation become illegal. Women seeking abortions shouldn't have to resort to back alleys, the narrator declares, adding, "There was a time when women had no choice."

In another, Lou Gerstley, an executive at Philadelphia General Hospital from 1956 to 1967, said the hospital routinely set aside 32 beds for women admitted after "botched criminal abortions." And in the third spot, still pictures are shown of a woman who was raised in the 1950s and who died after an illegal abortion went wrong.

It's important, the commercials say, "to keep government out of our personal lives."

Bierkamp said Des Moines was chosen to preview the ads because Iowans, veterans of political caucuses, are used to dealing with issues.

"People look to Iowa for opinions and leadership," she said. The ads also were previewed Wednesday in Sacramento, Calif.; Raleigh, N.C.; and Austin, Texas. The $2 million ad campaign will also pay for spots on Cable News Network beginning Sunday.

Viewers of network television didn't see the ad in Des Moines Wednesday because it was limited to KDSM, a UHF independent station. An abortion rights organization official explained that the other three commercial stations, all affiliated with networks, rejected the commercials because of standing policies against running issue ads.

The ads were also played on four radio stations that feature various types of rock music.

City tackles senior parking

By Lisa Swegle
The Daily Iowan

UI students aren't the only ones who want to park directly in front of their classes.

Senior Center Coordinator Bette Meisel said parking is the No. 1 complaint of senior citizens who use the center, 28 S. Linn St.

"Older people are just students with 50 years added to them," Meisel said.

Only 36 free parking spots are available for the 8,000 senior citizens who use the center each month.

Meisel said in 1981, the senior citizens were in such an uproar about metered parking that the city removed the meters from the Senior Center lot.

Meisel said the senior citizens keep on complaining, even though she repeatedly reminds them they can park in a city parking lot across the street or in a city parking ramp one block away from the center.

Future remedies being considered by the Iowa City Council include issuing $10 parking permits for the Senior Center parking lot or building a parking ramp in the lot, City Manager Steve Atkins said.

June Pieper, chairwoman of the Council of Elderly, said the committee recommended issuing $10 parking permits as a way to reduce the number of people fighting for spaces in the Senior Center lot.

City Manager Stephen Atkins said the city council will decide shortly about the $10 permits.

"The (senior) commission decided that would be an appropriate way to go about controlling the traffic volume in that parking lot," he said.

Atkins said the Senior Center is one of the sites being considered for a ramp as part of a downtown-parking study commissioned by the city council.

"That's a very complex decision," he said. "The university would have to be involved in it."

Pieper said the variety of public transportation options — Cambus, city buses and SEATS — needs to be better utilized by senior citizens.

Meisel said attitudes about driving vary throughout the United States.

"I grew up in New York City without a car. I was happy when the subway was only 2 1/2 blocks away," Meisel said.

"They say Texans go around the corner to their neighbor in their car. (UI) students drive over to the rec center to run. Why don't they just walk and get some extra exercise?" she said.

Slayings

Salcido's daughters were found with their throats cut, two of them dead.

The survivor, 3-year-old Carmina, is recovering in Petaluma Valley Hospital. She told investigators her father cut her and her sisters.

Salcido's friends told the San Francisco Examiner that he had a frenzied, cocaine-fueled night of drinking and dancing before the killings.

"He party, party, party all the time — run around all night," the newspaper quoted one unidentified person as saying. "He drink everything — beer, wine, tequila."

Salcido's mother, Valentino Bojorquez Armendariz, said her son called her on Friday and told her "Mama, this is last time you will hear my voice."

Bojorquez said her eldest son was sobbing in the brief phone call to her home in Los Mochis, the Los Angeles Times reported yesterday. Bojorquez said her memory of the conversation wasn't clear, but she remembered that Salcido said, "I have problems, and I'm going to kill myself," or "I have problems, and they're going to kill me."

He then hung up, and Bojorquez said she had not heard from him since.

Salcido's friends said the binge began last Wednesday night, a day after Salcido had been served with Fresno County, California, court papers ordering him to pay $511 a month support for a 4 1/2-year-old daughter from another marriage, plus nearly $6,000 to the county for back payments.

Salcido has been charged with four of the killings and was being sought on a federal warrant for flight to avoid prosecution.

O'Rourke

because they were all blown up," O'Rourke added.

He said he was most struck by the "normalness" of parts of the city. He saw, among the ruins, the St. George's Hotel with its pool club alive and thriving and a large amusement park that was perfectly normal — except that none of the rides had safety belts.

"You're going to the Middle East, you're unprepared for an urban city," he said.

He was also struck by how normal Johannesburg, South Africa, seemed when he visited in 1987.

"Those signs 'No Dogs or Blacks Allowed' are rare, almost tourist attractions. You're as likely to see a black man in a coat and tie on the streets of Johannesburg as in any American city," O'Rourke said. "If you put your mind to it, and you would really have to put your mind to it, you could spend a month there and not know anything is wrong. But on a weird, self-conscious level, you know that apartheid exists and it bothers you."

Overall, O'Rourke said he has learned much about humanity from his travels.

Fire

in terms of consideration, and physical support buildings finished third based on their smaller size, decreased student traffic and lower occupancy rates.

The UI has attempted to resolve its fire-code deficiencies, but Maureen Edwards, Collegiate Associations Council State Relations Committee member and lobbyist for fire-safety improvement claims the effort has been half-hearted.

"It's the university's No. 1 priority, and it's one of the regents' top priorities, but nothing significant has been done to correct these violations," she said.

Edwards maintained that the fire-safety issue has enjoyed only a nominal status and less topical and more critical attention.

"Fire safety is everyone's top priority, or so they say, but there's no funding or actively voiced support," Edwards said. "The violations go uncorrected, and the problems still remain."

At blame for the UI's lack of attention to the fire-safety issue, Edwards said, is the university's moneymaking machine. Based on its actions, the UI places attracting more students and researchers ahead of overall safety.

"Fire safety's not a glamour project," Edwards said. "It's not a beautiful new building that will bring in the students or create new jobs, but it is necessary."

"I don't understand why everyone says they're so concerned but still haven't made any improvements," she said.

Jim Coombes, facilities planning and utilization manager, said building deficiencies were placed into three categories in 1975 to define their severity: user violations could be corrected with a change in operating procedures, maintenance deficiencies could be corrected with a "minor outlay" of funds, and capital deficiencies necessitated building renovations, architectural study and a "greater expenditure" of money.

The UI Physical Plant investigated the user and maintenance deficiencies and analyzed capital deficiencies to determine their ranking in comparison with all others needing correction.

Coombes, in association with the Health Protection Office, developed a risk formula to determine the severity of the problems by factoring the number of persons exposed to a hazard, a particular facility's size in square feet, the likelihood of a fire and the degree of injury that could be expected as a result. The formula gives the most serious deficiencies a priority ranking designed to correct the most severe situations first.

The 1979 inspection included 70 buildings and uncovered 279 deficiencies. Currently the number of buildings inspected has reached 102, of which 40 are academic structures, 15 are residence buildings and 47 are support facilities. A lack of fire alarms and detection equipment in addition to improperly stored flammable substances proved to be the foremost capital deficiencies.

First on the list of fire-alarm deficiencies is the UI's Main Library, but defenders of the UI's fire-safety endeavors say the library's violations have been blown out of proportion despite their efforts.

Dick Gibson, facilities planning and utilization director, suggested "trying to light a compacted, dense book on fire — it's almost impossible."

"We don't have unlimited funds," he said. "If we did, we would correct these problems, but we don't."

William Sayre, assistant UI librarian, said the UI Main Library does have, contrary to popular belief, both smoke alarms and fire exits.

While the entire library isn't equipped with smoke alarms, the fourth floor, fifth floor and south end all contain working fire-detection devices. The library looks to upgrade its deficiencies with four areas slated for improvement in its October 1988 funding request with emergency lighting as the first objective.

"We don't have enough emergency lights — especially in the restrooms and the stack areas to allow people safe egress," he said.

Second on the list are emergency telephones accessible to handicapped people outside the elevators in case the elevators stopped in the event of a fire. The third target is an increase in the amount of smoke detectors "especially in the plenums between floors," Sayre said.

The fourth request calls for the installation of a sprinkler system — once a taboo line of defense against library fires because of the destructive capacity of water, but now imperative because they provide a measured response, Sayre said.

Educating the library's employees far outweighs the cost of any mechanical improvements or innovations, and Sayre resigned himself to the fallibility of the human factor when he said, "I don't want to leave the impression that we've got it covered."

"We're not doing enough training of our employees, but we will begin reinforcing fire-safety education," he said. "Training is the one area that we can focus on immediately that doesn't cost any money."

"We (UI administrators) live and work in these buildings too, and the staff is very much concerned with safety," Sayre said.

This is the first of a two-part series on fire safety at the UI.

Harkin

"I find that shocking, that he would have such a callous attitude," said Harkin.

At the hearing, Harkin and Yeutter clashed over the role of the Agriculture Department.

"This is a problem that is agriculture-oriented," said Harkin. "I hope that we find something more from the agriculture department than the attitude, 'we can't solve that problem.'"

"We'll be glad to be as accommodating as we possibly can," said Yeutter. "But I want everyone to be cognizant of budget restrictions."

Earlier this week, Republican Gov. Terry Branstad asked for federal assistance in hauling and piping water to some parched sections of southern Iowa, and Harkin said his line of questioning was aimed at determining the potential for federal assistance.

"I outlined for him the severe problems that we had out there," said Harkin. "These are poor communities. They don't have a lot of money."

"I can't begin to tell you how bad it is," Harkin told Yeutter the hearing.

Harkin said many residents of his state don't have drinking water and can't flush their toilets or water their crops. He said it was difficult to get enthusiastic about legislation for 1990 when his state faced such immediate problems.

During the conference call, Harkin said he found Yeutter's position "just almost unconscionable."

"He just kept repeating that we don't have the money, that they should look in their own souls," said Harkin.

In seeking the federal assistance on Monday, Branstad declared six southern Iowa counties disaster areas and said the second consecutive year of dry weather has rendered many private wells useless.

He sought assistance from the Army Corps of Engineers.

Branstad

Branstad seemed surprised. "If you can't get off, then it doesn't work," he said.

Later, he added: "(Accessibility) is going to be an area where we can make some progress. What you're basically saying is that the present laws are not being enforced or aren't working. It's not providing the accessibility that was intended. We ought to be able to do something about it, not only here, but throughout the state of Iowa."

Asked about fire-safety questions at the UI, Branstad said he recommended money for the problem, but believes the funds should be used flexibly. The Republican governor said he often clashes with the Democratic-controlled Legislature on this issue, because congressmen have supported money for very specific areas that sometimes exclude unexpected hazards.

"I think the regents ought to be able to be given a sum amount of money, say $2 million as an example, for major maintenance and fire safety, and they ought to use that for the priorities they feel are most pressing," Branstad said. "And let the university decide what is most pressing."

Branstad said the UI fire-safety system should not be, as Councilor Maureen Edwards called it, "a tragedy waiting to happen."

"I believe that we ought to have money for major maintenance and for fire safety, and I think we ought to do that on a regular basis ... and I think those sorts of things have to be done every year," Branstad said. "When you have a complex as large as the University of Iowa, you're going to have something happen every year. You can just predict there's going to be a certain amount of things that are going to wear out or blow up or go wrong."

Branstad also said he is committed to keeping academically successful minority students at Iowa's universities, but added that the state has to consider its small minority population when thinking about recruitment.

"One of our biggest problems is to get our highest-achieving minority students to stay in Iowa, because they're getting offers to go out of state," he said. "I guess I also think we have to be realistic in terms of what the minority population of Iowa is. We're not going to be able to get 25 percent of the student body that are minority students because of the fact that we have a smaller minority population."

Residents

still opt to live in UI residence halls. According to UI Housing Assignment Office data, their numbers are lost in a legion of underclassmen.

As of September 1988, freshmen represented 64 percent of all residents. Sophomores accounted for 24 percent, juniors for 7.5 percent and seniors only 2.5 percent. Graduate students accounted for less than one percent of residents.

But both Faust and Jacobson dismiss their unique status. Faust said he does not feel especially unordinary because of his housing choice.

"I know a lot of people see a guy my age living in the dorms and think 'God, he must be a geek,' but I really don't feel much different," he said.

Jacobson said relating to younger residents is a matter of simple adjustment.

"I look at some of these freshman guys, and suddenly realize that I used to know their older brothers," he said.

Both cited the financial practicality of residence halls in the face of mounting college expenses. "Cost is the main consideration," Faust said.

Jacobson said his single-room Currier lifestyle is desirable compared to most off-campus housing.

"It's like living in your own house but with everyone else around. The social interaction is unbeatable," he said.

Jacobson said his age affords him greater independence and respect from others.

Faust agreed. "When you're my age, you just don't have to hassle with RAs," he said.

Although the older residents are occasionally bothered by excessive noise from their roommates, Faust said their raucous behavior is part of the college experience.

miah Johnson, commander of U.S. 2nd Fleet.

In Washington, President George Bush was asked during a photo session with congressional leaders to comment on the explosion.

"It is a great tragedy, and a matter of terrible sadness," he said.

"I will take this opportunity to express my regrets, especially to the families of the kids that were killed," Bush said. He called it a "terrible tragedy to lose a lot of fine young lives."

Police rush activists in China

BEIJING (AP) — Thousands of police rushed a crowd of 3,000 pro-democracy activists on Beijing's main boulevard early Thursday, beating some protesters and taking away others.

"Fascists, dogs!" members of the crowd yelled at police as they ran to safety. "Hoodlums and bandits!"

Police by the thousands charged the crowd at 3:30 a.m., sending protesters fleeing east past Tiananmen Square, the site of three days of rallies calling for political reform and commemorating the death of purged Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang.

At one corner about eight police officers grabbed a woman in her 20s. One officer ripped off the sleeve of her coat. Other officers slapped her face.

Another protester on a bicycle also was hit. Three officers knocked him to the ground and began kicking him. Chinese protesters said they saw at least six other people being beaten.

Some protesters threw bottles at police.

There were no figures on arrests, but an Associated Press reporter saw two people being put into a police jeep. Chinese witnesses said they saw about eight people being taken away.

About 200 police also rushed a crowd of several hundred protesters in the western section of the city, kicking and beating demonstrators who did not run quickly enough.

Another group of about 150-200 students who had been blocking the front of the Communist Party's headquarters at Zhongnanhai were taken away in a bus. Its destination was not known.

In Shanghai, about 1,000 students

A funeral wreath, banners and red flags made their way through a sea of people in Beijing's Tiananmen Square Wednesday en route toward a martyrs' monument where thousands gathered to eulogize former party chief Hu Yaobang. Thousands of police later rushed the demonstrators, beating some and taking away others.

and workers marched Wednesday to the central People's Square. One worker was arrested after speaking to the crowd about "the destruction of my life by the Communist Party."

Police surrounded the square to keep onlookers away, and the demonstration broke up about 7 p.m., foreign and Chinese sources said.

In both Beijing and Shanghai the demonstrations — the largest since nationwide student protests in the winter of 1986-87 — were triggered by Saturday's death of Hu at age 73.

Hu, acclaimed by students for protecting the rights of intellectuals, was forced to resign in January 1987 after being blamed by conservatives for failing to take a harsh line against the student demonstrations.

The marchers in Beijing demanded freedom of speech and press and more money for education. They also said that "people who don't understand science should not hold high office."

"Down with dictatorship!" the students chanted. "Long live freedom, long live democracy!"

More than 15,000 people watched activists lead a rally Wednesday evening from atop a monument to revolutionary heroes on Tiananmen Square, the hallowed symbolic center of communist China.

The monument was draped with dozens of wreaths and banners eulogizing Hu and carrying slogans such as "long live democracy and freedom."

Skinner criticizes Exxon response to spill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner told the Senate Wednesday that industry plans for responding to catastrophes such as last month's Alaskan oil spill were "zero" and said federal and state officials should have required improvements.

Skinner also said he was "disappointed" in Exxon's response to the 10 million-gallon oil spill that occurred when a tanker collided with a well-marked reef in Prince William Sound on March 24.

Testifying before the same Senate subcommittee, a top Exxon official acknowledged that industry plans for so massive a spill were inadequate. But William Stevens, president of Exxon Company USA, disputed any claim that his company's response had been slow.

Yet on the Republican senator, John Chafee of Rhode Island, ridiculed Exxon's early efforts to deal with the environmental damage.

"From all accounts, the cleanup crews initially responding to this spill acted more like the Keystone Kops than the well-trained oil spill response team described in the industry's contingency plan," he said.

Most witnesses before the Senate's environmental protection subcommittee — from federal officials to Alaska's governor and industry executives — said that plans for dealing with a spill of oil from the Alaskan pipeline had not imagined an accident of the magnitude of the spill that followed the grounding of the Exxon Valdez.

Skinner, asked to evaluate the plan developed by a consortium of oil companies that ship oil from Alaska's North Slope through the pipeline and Valdez harbor, said the document should not have been approved by the state and should have brought warnings from the federal government that the plan was inadequate.

"On the scale of one to 10, it was a zero," Skinner said of the standby procedures.

The secretary told the panel that, before the tanker ran aground, everyone had "assumed that this would never happen."

"I don't think anybody was ready to deal with a spill of this magnitude," said Skinner, whose department oversees the Coast Guard.

The subcommittee's chairman, Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., complained that "there has never been a time when this situation was under control."

Bush, Hussein committed to 'serious' peace process

WASHINGTON (AP)—President George Bush and Jordan's King Hussein agreed Wednesday to strive for "a serious negotiating process" for Middle East peace, and the United States said the monarch did not reject an Israeli proposal for Palestinian elections in the West Bank and Gaza.

King Hussein

After the two leaders talked for more than an hour at the White House, the administration expressed satisfaction over Hussein's statement to Bush that, "I fully support you and all your efforts."

Hussein's visit marked the end of the first round of Middle East diplomacy for Bush, following talks earlier this month with Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

As he had done with the two others, Bush played tour guide for the king.

He took Hussein by helicopter to Mount Vernon, Va., to visit the home of George Washington overlooking the Potomac River. They returned to the capital on a yacht confiscated from drug merchants and now owned by the Navy.

Standing alongside Hussein in a Rose Garden ceremony, Bush said, "The time has come to encourage fresh thinking, to avoid sterile debate and to focus on the difficult but critical work of structuring a serious negotiating process."

"His majesty committed Jordan to this task, and I commit the United States to this task," Bush said.

The administration said the next step was to develop Shamir's proposal for the 1.7 million Palestinians in the occupied territories to elect representatives to negotiate with Israel on limited self-government.

The United States has endorsed the proposal on the condition that the elections lead to negotiations on the final status of the territories.

Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Ned Walker told Congress that the United States wants a timetable from Israel by July for the elections.

But he said that "serious difficulties" remain over what kind of elections would be held and which Palestinians would agree to take part.

Walker said it should not matter to Israel whether candidates are card-carrying members of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Shamir has ruled out negotiating with the PLO, which he holds responsible for the violence that has wracked the occupied territories.

"It shouldn't matter what the labels are," Walker told the House foreign operations subcommittee, as long as the participants are willing to negotiate a peaceful end to the conflict with Israel.

In his public remarks, Bush said that "properly designed and mutually acceptable elections could, as an initial step, contribute to a political process leading to negotiations on the final status of the West Bank and Gaza."

Bush also reiterated his guarded support for an international peace conference as a step toward direct negotiations.

Hussein did not publicly mention the Israeli election proposal, but a senior administration official said, "He certainly did not reject the idea."

The official, who declined to be named, said Hussein expressed "some concerns" about the elections.

The official said, however, that the king felt "reassured and encouraged about the directions after having heard the president and Secretary (of State James Baker) explain our approach."

The official said Hussein said he would "try to work with others in order to ensure that ideas which could advance the prospects for peace in the Middle East were not dismissed prematurely." The PLO said any elections must be preceded by the withdrawal of Israeli forces from the territories.

In his remarks, Hussein praised the United States for beginning a dialogue with the PLO late last year.

"I hope this will prompt Israel to respond similarly to the requirements of peace and recognize the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people."

"Peace can neither be negotiated nor achieved without PLO participation," Hussein said.

The king's involvement in the peace process has diminished considerably since last summer, when he severed administrative and legal ties with Palestinians in the West Bank.

On Capitol Hill, Walker said Hussein would have to be an integral part of future peace talks because of his country's geographic, historic and demographic links with the West Bank.

Polluted attitudes

On Tuesday, members of Iowa City Environmental Advocates gathered at a local McDonald's to protest the national chain's refusal to switch from harmful styrofoam to paper packaging. Their cause is noble and McDonald's stand is difficult to defend, but the statement of a single patron in the restaurant Tuesday indicates how difficult it will be for the protesters to win their fight.

"I might not like the containers, but I like the food," said a UI student. That statement indicates two things. First of all, the speaker doesn't realize the containers actually taste better than the food, and secondly, she is oblivious to the connection between her eating habits and the goals of the protesters.

Together with other groups across the country, Iowa City Environmental Advocates is attempting to persuade McDonald's to join other fast food chains in using paper packaging. Styrofoam is not biodegradable, making it particularly troublesome to a nation and world full of garbage. But it is cheaper than paper, and like any massive, global, profit-motivated enterprise, McDonald's is standing on a pile of money rather than its principles.

This is where the protest comes in. The environmentalists aren't appealing to McDonald's sense of decency or public duty. They're appealing to the corporation's considerable sense of greed. If a significant percentage of its patrons become aware of the styrofoam problem, and concerned about it, McDonald's sales may dip enough to make paper packaging look good.

But if the statement by the UI student at Tuesday's protest reflects majority sentiment, that strategy will likely fail, and this will not only be a nation with extremely poor taste in food, but one extremely rich in permanent pollution.

It's baaack!

It's big, it's back, and it's badder than ever.

The drought that menaced Iowa farmers last year has returned with a vengeance, causing more stress on the fabric of Iowa's economy — agriculture.

With rainfall totals half of what they should be in a normal year, many farmers are expecting the worst for this year's crop, if they can get one planted at all. "For some farmers this could be a make-or-break year," Jefferson County Extension Director Ron Bower said. And this on top of a long string of make-or-break years.

Like the farmers, the federal and state governments expect the worst. Fortunately, they both have already taken steps to lessen the effects of this year's expected drought.

Tuesday, Gov. Terry Branstad declared six Iowa counties as disaster areas, opening the floodgates to increased drought-relief aid. And Wednesday, the Legislature passed two relief measures, originally enacted during the depths of the farm recession, in hopes of easing the financial burden of this year's drought.

Also Tuesday, President George Bush — unlike his predecessor — vowed not to push even more farmers into dire economic straits. Bush freed up $116 million in additional farm payments, which farmers can draw against for spring planting in anticipation of fall crops. But unless they get the rain they desperately need, the bushels of spring cash will turn into bushels of debt in the fall.

It's too early to tell if this year's expected drought will be as bad as last year. But, fortunately the federal and state governments are initiating programs to ease the plight of farmers this year, and not reacting to the drought's adverse effects.

More reform needed

The 1986 tax reform was enacted to redistribute the tax burden within our society, to make our tax structure more progressive so that those with more paid a proportionately bigger chunk of their income and those with less paid less or not at all.

Most of us, however, probably haven't noticed a major change in our taxes over the past three years. The reason? There hasn't been a major change in most Americans' tax payments.

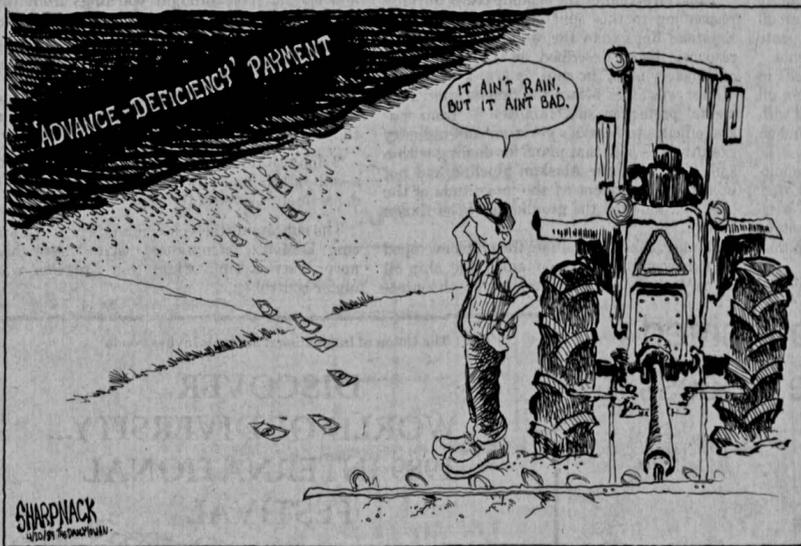

A study recently completed by the Tax Foundation, a non-profit research organization, shows that the 1986 reform has done little to ease the burden placed on the poor. Most Americans, those making between $10,000 and $90,000 annually, pay about one-third of their incomes to federal, state and local taxes. But according to the study, people falling outside of those parameters pay roughly half of their incomes in taxes.

True, the reform took more than 10 million people off the federal tax rolls. But since its implementation, state and federal legislators have raised many of the taxes on products like liquor, gasoline and cigarettes. The poor, especially the working poor, are major consumers of such products, so increases in sales and excise taxes virtually offset any benefit they receive from the federal reform.

The 1986 Tax Reform was a positive step for our nation — if only because it displayed a consciousness of the potential injustice inherent in a strictly proportional tax structure. But if future research yields results similar to those of the Tax Foundation study, then legislators must abandon regressive tax hikes in favor of true reform.

Money, Money, Money

One of the most sacred notions in American culture is that money buys happiness. As beliefs go, this is more strongly held than belief in the sanctity of family or allegiance to flag. As a people, we believe in the redeeming value of money with a fervor that is religious. And like any other religious fervor, we rarely examine why we believe. We accept the notion as received wisdom. To challenge this popular belief is perceived as heresy. We live in a commercial culture and our culture is never wrong. But just for the hell of it, let's commit a little heresy.

It's impossible, of course, to convince anyone that money does not buy happiness. By "money" I'm talking about money over and above what you need to live; I'm talking about money for money's sake: extra money, lots of money, sacks of money, enough money to purchase spiritual freedom. We've all heard the notion since the day we were born, we see it on TV, our heroes are all tycoons, and as a consequence we've all come to believe that Donald Trump is a true genius, on a par with Da Vinci. As far as most people are concerned, Donald Trump could be caught having sex with four different kinds of fruit and two leafy vegetables, but as long as he's got money, he's a god to them. Even though he's married to a woman who wears nine pounds of make-up, it's widely believed he's a man of intelligence. Money, many people truly believe, is most if not all that matters.

Your friends tell you to make money, your parents talk about making money, the entire planet seems to be chanting, "money-money-money." But an old man once told me something which I think is about as wise as anything I've heard. He said, "Advice is free and the whole world wants to give it. But before you take somebody's advice, look and see how well it has benefitted the person giving it away."

Here's the story I want to tell. I just spent the weekend with a buddy who now lives in another state. My buddy, who I'll call Buddy, brought his family and came out to visit. Buddy is a doctor with a speciality. He started out thinking he wanted to help people, but "opportunities" came along to make more and more bucks and he took them each and every time. Buddy is what most of us would call a successful man. Buddy makes $250,000 a year. Buddy is one miserable human being.

"How can this be?" some of you are already asking. "If he makes a quarter of a million bucks a year, he must be in double hog heaven; he must be in hog heaven with extra slop; he's reached the apex of human experience if he's making that kind of money. How can he be miserable?"

The answer is easy. He's lost control of his life. Like a lot of people, Buddy thought that money buys plenty of happiness. So he looked around and got into a situation that demanded most all of his time but paid him like a bandit. It's understandable. Recent college graduates are notorious for thinking things like, "If I only owned a sailboat, I'd be happy." Or, "If I only owned a BMW with a jet engine and a condo in New York on Central Park South and got to wear shoes made out of alligator skin, I'd be happy."

Well, Buddy's got himself a sailboat and a jet powered BMW and wears exotic animals on his feet. But Buddy also grew up in the meantime. Buddy's got a couple of kids now and a wife who'd like to get to know him. Buddy made obligations a few years back that he can't get out of now.

It's a funny thing, but the more money you make, the more you need. Buddy's got expenses. Buddy's already in debt up to his yazoo and if he makes less than a quarter mil next year, he's going to be in real trouble. Even though Buddy is as intelligent and cautious as the next guy, he bought a very expensive house. But because he works 12 to 16 hours a day, he needed a little hideaway. His hideaway, up in the woods of northern New York, cost him $100,000. But it was on a 30 year plan and he makes plenty of money.

He also needed a hobby close to town so he could relax quickly. That led him to the sailboat which led him to club dues and docking fees. Buddy's BMW can't break down without it costing him $500. Buddy's wife can't go out dressed in rags if all her friends look nice, so there's an additional expense. The schools aren't any good so his kids have to go to private school. And of course the kids would be shamed for life if they don't dress right, so that costs as well.

Get the picture? To put it bluntly, Buddy is on a career track that will suck up the next 20 years of his life and leave him one of those prosperous looking old guys who are completely exhausted and don't know what to do with themselves after they're retired. He never developed any other interests in life — like a relationship with his wife or kids or reading or personal development, he never had the time — and looking at Buddy now it's not hard to see in him what I've seen in many old folks who live in big houses they're still paying on.

Have you ever asked yourself how hard you have to work to make $250,000 a year? Have you ever wondered how expensive it is to make money?

Buddy had to plan four months in advance for the four-day weekend he spent here. He wants to spend a month in Europe with the family so they can get reacquainted, but has been scheduling that for two years already and won't be able to get away for at least another year. And once he's on his European vacation, it will take a couple of weeks to unwind before he can even begin to not think about the office. Three years to get time off with the family.

I know what you're thinking. You're thinking, "Not me." Well, the capper is that Buddy and I used to talk about this very thing just a few years ago. And back then, do you know what he said? "Not me."

Punished for their passion forexcellence

The University of California at Berkeley says it is sorry. About time, you may say, remembering the 1960s. But the Chancellor's grudging apology pertains to something recent, something that looks like racism practiced by a bastion of liberalism.

In a statement in which circumspection competed with contrition, the Chancellor said that "decisions made in the admissions process indisputably had a disproportionate impact on" Asian-Americans. He blamed "insensitivity." But the real reason may be resentment of people who are "different" and have the temerity to be excellent.

George Will

One group sensitive to that is the unfortunately named Chinese for Affirmative Action, located in Chinatown in, appropriately, a building on the site of San Francisco's first bookstore. CAA knows that Asian-Americans are facing what Jews once faced: the resentment reserved for "outsiders" pressing for a fair share of the status conferred by elite institutions. Like American Jews before them, Asian-Americans have an intense desire to achieve social mobility by means of education, respect for which is inculcated by cohesive families.

Generally "race-conscious" policies are advertised as "remedial." They supposedly place floors beneath particular groups, guaranteeing a certain level of social participation to disadvantaged people. But race-conscious policies toward Asian-Americans may place ceilings through which they are not allowed to rise.

Recently, Berkeley revised the formula by which applicants are evaluated. The new weightings — less weight for high school grades, more for verbal tests — disadvantaged Asian-Americans, many of whom have English as a second language but are academic "overachievers."

An interesting term, "overachievers." "Over" what? Over their quota of excellence? Of America's rewards? Who sets these quotas?

About 9 percent of California's high school graduates are Asian-American. Today, 26 percent of Berkeley's undergraduates are Asian-Americans. There probably would be more were it not for race-conscious social engineering in the name of the latest theory of distributive justice.

Evaluating the aptitudes of young people for higher education is difficult. Academic freedom requires granting universities discretion in devising admissions policies. However, universities must be monitored because they have proven themselves susceptible to intellectual fads and politicization. California, particularly, is a polyglot state sunk deep in the dangerous business of racial discrimination on behalf of government-approved minorities deemed "under-represented" in this or that.

The name Chinese for Affirmative Action reflects a felt need to participate in an ethnic spoils system. However, affirmative action discriminated against Asian-Americans by restricting the social rewards open to competition on the basis of merit. We may want a modified meritocracy, but it should not be modified by racism and the resentment of excellence. An egalitarian democracy is prone to such resentment.

Universities are incubators of future elites and some Americans resent Asian-Americans storming the citadels of status. However, Asian-Americans lead all other ethnic groups, including WASPs, in educational attainments. America needs more university students like Asian-Americans.

At a time of high anxiety about declining educational standards and rising competition from abroad, and especially from the Pacific Rim, it is lunatic to punish Asian-Americans, the nation's model minority, for their passion to excel.

George Will's syndicated column appears every Thursday on the Viewpoints page.

ICARE clarifies its function

To the Editor:

I am writing in regard to the April 14 article, "ICARE provides service, support for AIDS victims." There are several points in the article that I believe need clarification.

ICARE's structure has indeed changed in the last few months; however, I do not feel the agency previously "existed in name only." Since ICARE's incorporation in July 1987, many persons have volunteered to organize and provide services for persons with HIV infection, ARC (AIDS related complex), and AIDS, as well as for their families and friends. Concerned individuals, businesses, service agencies, churches, student groups, and medical professionals have joined ICARE's effort to ensure these services are made available. It would be negligent and inaccurate to ignore the contributions of these persons and groups.

We are extremely grateful to the Emma Goldman Clinic for donating office space to ICARE from January 1988 to March 1989. All rent and utility expenses were covered by the Clinic during this 15-month period. Their generosity made it possible for ICARE to reach the point where services could be provided on a consistent basis.

Despite the changes in ICARE, there are circumstances surrounding the AIDS epidemic that "unfortunately, have stayed the same." These include limited funding for service organizations, lack of public awareness, and discrimination against HIV-positive individuals. Progress in these areas is not keeping pace with the positive changes in the pattern of the disease. People are surviving longer due to increased awareness of the symptoms, earlier diagnosis, and better understanding of treatments for the various opportunistic infections.

People with AIDS, ARC, and HIV are people living with AIDS, ARC, and HIV. They are not "victims," nor should they be victimized. They are "patients" only when they are in the hospital. Most importantly, they have a right to be treated with respect, dignity, compassion and understanding.

Christy Scheetz
ICARE Coordinator

Liverpool officials, fans deny allegations

LONDON — Liverpool officials and survivors of a stadium crush that killed 95 soccer fans denied police reports Wednesday that hooliganism and drunkenness were factors in the disaster.

Police in the northern city of Sheffield said more than a dozen supporters of Liverpool's soccer team were arrested before Saturday's game for public order offenses.

Irvine Patnick, the governing Conservative Party's lawmaker in Sheffield, said police told him "they were hampered, harassed, punched, kicked and urinated on by Liverpool fans" as they struggled to help the injured and dying.

Eric Heffer, an opposition Labor Party member from Liverpool, called Patnick's charges "absolutely degrading and disgusting."

"Mr. Patnick is suggesting that Liverpool people did the most despicable things to their own people, when the whole of the television (coverage) showed the contrary," Heffer said in the House of Commons, his voice trembling. Patnick was not in the house.

Three killed in rioting in Jordan

KERAK, Jordan — Soldiers fired on protesters who defied a military curfew Wednesday night and demanded the resignation of Jordan's prime minister. Witnesses said three people were killed.

Officials said at least 18 people have been injured in two days of rioting in the city of Maan, 120 miles south of Amman. The rioting, prompted by price increases and an economic austerity agreement with the International Monetary Fund, spread to at least three other towns.

The violence appeared to be the worst in Jordan since the army crushed Palestinian guerrillas in 1970-71 and drove them from the country.

A police source said a 21-year-old army soldier on leave was fatally wounded in Maan. The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, identified the man as Ahmed Matlab Saudi.

Saudi was on the roof of his house, watching protesters stoning government buildings and destroying police cars, when he was hit by a stray bullet, the source said.

U.S. presses for modernized missiles

BRUSSELS, Belgium — U.S. officials Wednesday stepped up efforts to convince European allies that NATO must improve its short-range nuclear weapons by offering intelligence information on how the Soviets are boosting their arsenal.

Defense sources said, however, that it remained unclear how the 16-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization would handle the politically sensitive issue.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, attending his first NATO meeting, presented what was described as an unexpectedly extensive intelligence briefing behind closed doors, stressing the Soviet Union's efforts in the past five years to modernize its own arsenal of short-range nuclear missiles and artillery shells.

Belgium, West Germany and a few other NATO members also have questioned the wisdom of proceeding now with modernization when it might be possible to open new arms control talks with the Soviets on the issue.

Sullivan closes arguments in Contra trial

WASHINGTON — Oliver North's lawyer, in emotional final arguments Wednesday, described the former White House aide as a sacrificial lamb, a scapegoat and a hostage, and implored jurors in his trial to "set him free."

"Oliver North never wanted to be a hero," said Brendan Sullivan. "He just wants to go home."

Summing up North's defense in the Iran-Contra trial's 12th week, Sullivan said North had done his job well as a White House aide, following superiors' orders to help the Nicaraguan rebels, then was thrown overboard as then-President Ronald Reagan sought to escape political heat over the affair.

Sullivan told the jury that North, who had worked to free American hostages in Lebanon, has been, in a sense, a hostage himself.

"I ask you, on the evidence, to set him free," said Sullivan.

El Salvadoran official killed in car blast; leftists blamed

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's attorney general was killed Wednesday by a bomb that his driver said was placed on top of his car at an intersection. The rightist president-elect blamed leftist guerrillas.

Roberto Garcia Alvarado, 53, was killed instantly by the blast, said Oscar Orellana, the driver. The explosion ripped a hole through the roof of the attorney general's Jeep Cherokee.

Garcia is the highest-ranking government official slain since the civil war began in 1981. An estimated 70,000 Salvadorans, most of them civilians, have been killed in the conflict.

Neither the driver nor a bodyguard in the jeep was visibly wounded, but both complained of partial deafness from the blast.

No group immediately claimed responsibility. President-elect Alfredo Cristiani blamed leftist guerrillas battling the U.S.-backed government.

In Washington, the State Department called the assassination a "brutal, despicable killing" and said the act was designed to provoke further violence. "We condemn this terrorism," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

The rebels' Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front last month accused the attorney general's office of "covering up for murderers." Garcia was a militant of Cristiani's rightist Republican Nationalist Alliance, or Arena.

El Salvador's attorney general, the government's chief prosecutor, is not a Cabinet official and is appointed by Congress, which is controlled by Arena. Garcia had held the post since December.

Orellana told journalists the jeep stopped at a downtown San Salvador traffic light at 7:45 a.m. when a young man placed something on the roof. The driver said he immediately tried to accelerate, but the bomb exploded.

Cristiani, who was having breakfast with foreign correspondents when the attack occurred, condemned what he termed "the brutal assassination by Marxist guerrillas."

Hawkeyes cruise past Northern Iowa

By Brad Sparesus
The Daily Iowan

Baseball

Iowa coasted to an 11-2 victory over Northern Iowa Wednesday at Waterloo's Municipal Stadium, improving its season record to 26-9.

The Hawkeyes jumped out to an early lead and the strong pitching of junior Allen Rath paced them through the first four innings.

"My control was good again, so I had confidence to go to my breaking ball even when I was behind in the count," Rath said. "I started the season off a little slow but things are finally starting to hit on all cylinders."

The Hawkeyes hoped to regain some momentum after losing two of four games against Illinois last weekend. The losses allowed Michigan to take the conference lead away from Iowa.

One highlight from the weekend series was the performance of Iowa leftfielder Brian Wujcik. The junior was named the Associated Press Big Ten player of the week Wednesday. Wujcik blasted three three-run homers in one game against the Illini and set a new Iowa record with 10 RBIs in the game.

The Hawkeyes buried the Panthers early. Erroll Shirer and Tim Costo started the first inning with walks and scored on sophomore Chris Hatcher's three-run home run. Wujcik followed with a walk and Mike Bradley singled before Joel Williamson knocked in both runners to end the five-run outburst.

Rath is now second on the all-time

Iowa strikeout list after moving ahead of former Hawkeye Mike Boddicker during the Illinois series. The junior scattered three hits in his four innings and struck out two to improve his season record to 6-0.

Iowa assistant coach Tom Petroff earned his first win of the season. Petroff filled in for Iowa Coach Duane Banks. Banks is president of the American Baseball Coaches Association and was in Tennessee at a meeting for the organization.

"It was a good workman-like performance," Petroff said. "We didn't stop playing hard."

The Hawkeyes continued the assault on Panther starting pitcher Steve Bair into the eighth inning. Williamson led off the inning with a walk and scored on Tim Canney's triple. Costo followed with an RBI single to finish off the struggling Panthers.

Canney and Hatcher led the Iowa attack with three hits apiece. Hatcher added four RBIs and Costo produced two hits. The Hawkeyes return to Iowa Field Saturday and Sunday for a four-game series against Wisconsin.

Blackhawks are worst of the best

ST. LOUIS — The Chicago Blackhawks entered the Stanley Cup playoffs as the worst of the best, but they're tired of playing the patsy.

"I think in Game 80 we started to peak," said defenseman Trent Yawney, who scored a third-period insurance goal in Chicago's 3-1 victory over St. Louis in the opener of the Norris Division final Tuesday night. "We wanted to salvage something out of this season."

"And the playoffs are a new season."

Steve Thomas' goal 31 seconds into the third period, off a drop pass from Troy Murray, snapped a 1-1 tie. Yawney's goal at 5:04, which bounced off defenseman Gordie Roberts and into the net, nailed down the victory for Chicago, which went 1-6-1 against St. Louis during the regular season.

It was just another bit of postseason magic for the Blackhawks, who beat Norris champion Detroit in six games in the first round after finishing the regular season 27-41-12. Chicago qualified for the final playoff spot in the league's worst division with an overtime victory over Toronto on the final day of the regular season.

Thomas' goal was his first since January, after missing the last 34 regular season games and the first four of the Detroit series with a shoulder injury. He said the Blackhawks finally were heeding the grind-it-out game plan of first-year coach Mike Keenan.

"It's a great attitude when you're winning," Thomas said. "Everything we're doing is the way Mike wants."

"I don't know what our problem was during the regular season. Some people came to play and some didn't, I guess."

Judging from Yawney's goal, the Blackhawks also were a little lucky.

"What a fluke," Yawney said. "It went off a stick and a leg, and then through Dirk's (Graham) legs. But I'll take it."

"It was a really big goal."

The Blues entered Round 2 of the playoffs with seven days rest after dispatching the Minnesota North Stars in five games, and seemed rusty. Brett Hull, the team's leading scorer during the regular season, was held without a shot on goal. Center Peter Zedel, who had three goals and two assists in the clincher against Minnesota, had one shot Tuesday night.

Blues coach Brian Sutter said the goaltending of Greg Millen, whose 16-game home unbeaten streak was stopped, was about his team's only plus. Millen had been 13-0-3 since Dec. 8.

"If it weren't for Millsy, it would have been a hell of a lot worse," Sutter said. "We always seemed behind a second or two and we never got over it."

The teams entered the third period tied 1-1 after Greg Paslawski of St. Louis and Steve Larmer of Chicago traded goals 1:18 apart in the second period.

Dave Lowry carried the puck the length of the ice, split two defenders and got off a backhander. Paslawski slipped the rebound under Cheyenne Alain Chevrier to put St. Louis on top at 13:58.

But Larmer beat Millen from the right circle off a feed by Denis Savard at 15:16 for his fourth goal of the playoffs. Savard faked a shot from the left circle and passed it to Larmer for a 20-footer.

The Blues had an apparent goal by Todd Ewen disallowed at 12:24 of the second period. A shot by Sergio Momesso trickled between Chevrier's pads and stopped on the goal line, but referee Denis Morel ruled a whistle had stopped play before Ewen dived over the fallen Chevrier to jam in the puck.

Bears play cops in charity game

Bortz talks on attention to UI

By Bryce Miller
The Daily Iowan

For former Iowa Hawkeye football player Mark Bortz, Wednesday night's charity basketball game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena wasn't only a homecoming but a chance to air some views.

Bortz, currently with the Chicago Bears, joined his Chicago teammates in Iowa City to face a team of Northeastern Iowa law enforcement officers. Proceeds of the game went to the Iowa Association of Chiefs of Police and Peace Officers.

Recently, the UI has been in the national spotlight following the recent trial of sports agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom. During that trial, the academic quality of the university was brought under questioning after testimony by former Hawkeyes Ronnie Harmon and Devon Mitchell.

"It's a shame it had to happen to Iowa. I wasn't the greatest (student), I couldn't sit down and study for two or three hours every night, but I went to class."

— Mark Bortz, Chicago Bears guard and former Iowa player

"I think it's unfortunate that Iowa has to be singled out," Bortz said. "It's a shame it had to happen to Iowa. I wasn't the greatest (student), I couldn't sit down and study for two or three hours every night, but I went to class."

Bortz said he never received a degree from Iowa. But the crowd that assembled for the "Cops versus Good News Bears Game" never once gave indication that the troubled waters at the UI were on its mind. That night, it was basketball.

It wasn't pretty basketball, though. "I hope we're better football players (than basketball players)," Bortz said. "We're in a whole world of hurt if we're not."

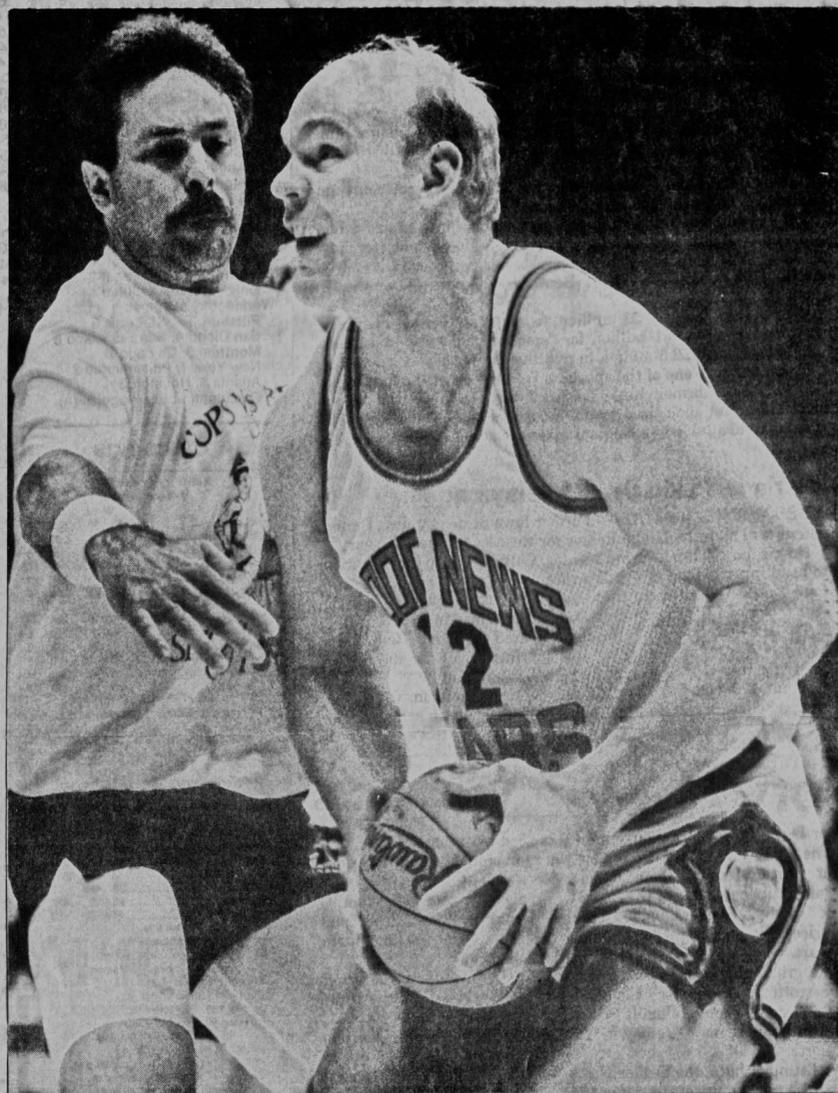

At times, a long-time follower of Iowa basketball could reminisce at the lack of soft touch on the court. Many of the shots, by both teams, crashed on the backboard ala former Iowa basketball players Steve Krafecisin and Steve Waite who took the Hawkeyes to the Final Four in 1980.

But many of the young fans probably wouldn't remember that far back. At this game, they had a hard time figuring out who was supposed to be important when the autograph session came around.

"Who's that guy?" was a familiar question.

"I don't know, but have him sign your shirt," was the standard reply.

Hawks top Cyclones for close 8-1 victory

By Julie Deardorff
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's 8-1 romp over Iowa State wasn't as one-sided as it sounds. The score was tied 1-1 after two singles matches, and the middle four courts were each entering the third set.

"The score was not at all reflective of how the match went," Iowa Coach Steve Houghton said, whose team improved to 14-6. "Iowa State is a vastly improved team. I was pleased that we could hang in there and win four three-setters in singles."

Claes Ramel lost to Glen Wilson for the second time this season at

No. 1 singles, 4-6, 6-3, 6-1. But Jay Maltby crushed Jeff Benson, who has only won one match all season, to even the score. Maltby has won 10 of his last 11 matches at the No. 6 singles position and shares the best record on the team with Dave Novak, 15-5.

"We were sub-par in singles except for Maltby," Houghton said. "He had a very solid performance."

Lars Nordmark avenged a loss earlier this season with a 7-6, 1-6, 6-4 win over Ismawan Chamdani, and Novak outlasted Rob Spears at No. 5 singles, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5. Also posting singles wins were Martin Aguirre and Mike Kiewiet.

Campbell: colleges should pay athletes

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Campbell, the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner, Wednesday called on the NCAA to become relevant and said colleges should pay their student-athletes "at least $200 a month."

"The NCAA does not do enough for student-athletes," said Campbell, an All-American at Texas who went on to star for the Houston Oilers and the New Orleans Saints of the National Football League.

"They need a bunch of guys who've paid their dues."

Campbell said the governing body of college athletics should get input from former student-athletes in policy making.

"If the NCAA would say to Calvin Hill, Franco Harris, Roger Staubach, Bubba Smith, O.J. Simpson, 'We would like for you to help us structure a way to help student-athletes,' ... I think the NCAA would be more accepted by the general public," he said.

Campbell said the NCAA is made up of "the president of Harvard, the president of the University of Texas, the president of the University of Kansas ...

"They don't know about a boy from Tyler, Texas, who comes from a family with seven boys and four girls and no father."

Campbell, who retired prior to the 1986 NFL season, is the assistant to the vice president of student affairs at Texas. He was in New York to help commemorate the 25th anniversary of Parade's High School All-American football team. When he was at Texas, Campbell said he received $15 a month. "Before my senior year, they cut that to $13 a month."

While he said "that was a lot of money for me at the time," he now believes athletes should receive more.

"A student-athlete is not a student," Campbell said. "I think he's an athlete. That person will eventually get an education — maybe not in four years, but eventually. It took four-and-a-half years for me to get my degree."

Although he is not in the athletic department, Campbell's current job is to insure that UT athletes keep their grades up.

Besides Campbell, a number of other active and retired NFL players were on hand as Parade publisher Carlo Vittorini presented a $40,000 donation in the name of the Parade team to The Miami Project to Cure Paralysis.

Participating were Jerome Brown, Chris Carter and Keith Jackson of the Philadelphia Eagles; Anthony Carter, Minnesota Vikings; Matt Suhey, Chicago Bears; Bob Crable, New York Jets; Richard Todd, Jets and Saints; Joe Morris, New York Giants; Earl Morrall, Giants and Miami Dolphins; Calvin Hill, Dallas Cowboys; and Nick Buoniconti, Miami Dolphins. All except Morris, Morrall and Buoniconti were named to the Parade All-American when they were in high school.

ISU's Orr still baffled by robbery

AMES (AP) — Calling it a "bizarre thing," Iowa State Coach Johnny Orr says he still has no idea how basketball player Sam Mack wound up being shot and arrested on charges of holding up a fast-food restaurant.

Orr also said he's disappointed that Mack and another athlete charged in the robbery, transfer football player Levin White, were forced to leave school. If the two are found innocent of the charges against them, Orr said they would have grounds to sue the university.

Mack, a starting forward for the Cyclones this past season, and White, a transfer who had yet to play for Iowa State, are charged with robbery, kidnapping and terrorism in the March 30 holdup of a Burger King restaurant in Ames. Both were shot and wounded by Ames police officers.

Orr said he has talked to both athletes and remains unsure of the circumstances. Neither was drunk or on drugs at the time, he said.

"I have no reason why he did that," Orr told the Cedar Rapids Gazette. "I've talked to him. Of course, his plea is that he was forced to do it. I think when it comes down to it, it's going to be if the jury will believe it or not. It was a bizarre thing."

The Iowa State coach said he wondered how a person would react in the situation that Mack described to him. Police said White was carrying a gun in the holdup and Mack had a knife.

"Sam says he was forced to do that," Orr said. "OK, has anybody ever put a gun on you and told you, 'Hey man, you're going to do this or I'm going to shoot you. I wouldn't be afraid to shoot you.'"

"Well, I've never had that happen to me either, and I don't know what reaction I'd have to that."

Iowa hires field hockey assistant

IOWA CITY — Patty Shea, goalkeeper on the 1988 United States Olympic field hockey team, has been named assistant field hockey coach at Iowa, athletic department officials announced Wednesday.

Shea replaces seven-year assistant Michele Madison, who accepted the head coaching position at Temple University in March.

Shea's duties will include working with goalkeepers, defensive players and recruiting. Shea has been an assistant field hockey coach at Harvard University since 1986, and served as an assistant at the University of Massachusetts in 1985. She has experience as a clinician and lecturer, and also continues to work in U.S. Olympic Developmental field hockey camps.

Canadiens take 2-0 lead over Bruins

MONTREAL (AP) — Bobby Smith scored on a backhand on 12:24 of overtime Wednesday night, giving the Montreal Canadiens a 3-2 victory over the Boston Bruins and a two-game lead in the Adams Division finals.

Smith came out from behind the net to the right of goaltender Reggie Lemelin and swept the puck past Lemelin's glove, giving the Canadiens their third overtime victory in six playoff games this year.

The Canadiens, seeking revenge for last year's five-game loss to the Bruins in the Adams final, won the first two games at home. Games 3 and 4 will be played in Boston Friday and Sunday.

Montreal goaltender Patrick Roy extended his season-long unbeaten streak at the Forum to 29-0-4 by making 27 saves. Lemelin, inserted in place of first-game starter Andy Moog, made 38.

Brooklyn woman sues Tyson

NEW YORK (AP) — A Brooklyn woman sued heavyweight champion Mike Tyson for $4.5 million Wednesday, accusing him of assault and battery in an incident at a Manhattan disco last December.

Lawyers for Sandra Moore filed the suit at federal court in Manhattan because Tyson is a citizen of New Jersey.

The lawsuit accused Tyson, who has a home in Bernardsville, N.J., of "violently and forcibly grabbing" Moore and "forcibly fondling and embracing her against her will" in the early morning hours on Dec. 10 at Bentley's Disco on Manhattan's Eastside.

The lawsuit sought $1 million for injuries Moore allegedly sustained, another $1 million for "emotional distress and great humiliation" and $2.5 million in punitive damages.

Tyson, 22, was one of the speakers Wednesday at the funeral in Los Angeles of former champion Sugar Ray Robinson. He choked back tears and apologized to the mourners as he tried to speak. He was unavailable for comment after the service.

Harris will skip Drake Relays again

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Former Iowa State standout Danny Harris will skip the Drake Relays for the second straight year.

Harris, now living in Santa Monica, Calif., declined an invitation to headline a 400-meter hurdles race, Drake officials said. He won four consecutive titles in that event at Drake beginning in 1984 and was voted the meet's outstanding performer in 1985.

The 1984 Olympic silver medalist missed the Drake Relays last year because of a hamstring injury. Harris said he didn't feel ready for this year's meet, to be held April 28 and 29.

About 700 tickets remain for the Saturday session, which has been a sellout for 23 straight years. Drake Stadium seats 18,000.

Bortz

For Bortz, however, any attention was good attention.

"The old saying is that 'You know you're in trouble when they don't want your autograph,'" he said.

Making appearances for the Bears were safety Shaun Gayle, running back Thomas Sanders, wide receiver Glen Kozlowski, cornerback Maurice Douglas, tight end James Thornton and rookie Curtis Stewart.

The group gave a mediocre rendition of the world-famous Harlem Globetrotters. They chased the officials, pulled people from the crowd and offered up plenty of smiles.

All involved seemed to enjoy the event, but most of the attention was on Bortz.

In fitting tribute, the former Hawkeye used his mammoth frame to score the first points of the game and collect the first foul. Bortz is the starting offensive guard for the Bears. He has been in Chicago since leaving Iowa in 1983.

Roger Hughes, executive director of the Iowa Association of Chiefs of Police and Peace Officers, said the visibility of the professional players gave an opportunity to promote law enforcement as well.

"It's very important to seek public support for things like a new prison and drug awareness," Hughes said. "This is a fun thing, but we want to take the chance to circulate with the public."

Wednesday's matchup was part of a four-game series that started Monday and Tuesday in Des Moines. The Bears will finish the swing with a game in the Quad Cities May 3.

season. They have won 10 straight and are 4-0 in the Big Ten.

"Kiewiet and Buckingham have been playing consistently well in doubles and they did again today," Houghton said.

Iowa also won at No. 1 and No. 3 doubles, sweeping for the ninth time this season. They have won all three positions in three of the last four meets.

"We played well enough to win today, and it's a nice feeling to win a match against a good team on a day when we weren't our sharpest," Houghton said. "It's tough to keep your mind on a match like this with Big Ten duals coming up."

Iowa winds up its home portion of the Big Ten schedule against Wisconsin and Minnesota this weekend. Saturday's match against Wisconsin starts at 12:30 and Sunday's begins at 1:30. Both will be held at Klotz Courts.

"We played really well, and we need to play well every time out to win," Creighton said. "We have good depth down below and win a lot at No. 5 and No. 6 and at No. 3 doubles."

The Daily Iowan

Minnesota made quick work of the Iowa women's tennis team Wednesday afternoon at Klotz Courts.

So quick, in fact, that the Golden Gophers clinched a victory only 90 minutes after the meet began. By that time, Iowa had lost five of six singles matches and went on to lose the remaining singles match and all three doubles matches.

The shutout pushed Minnesota's record to 6-1 in the conference and moved Iowa to 1-7. The Hawkeyes managed to win only one set of the 19 played.

Minnesota Coach David Creighton said he didn't take Iowa lightly coming into the meet even though

Gophers clobber Hawkeyes

By Neil Lewis
The Daily Iowan

Minnesota made quick work of the Iowa women's tennis team Wednesday afternoon at Klotz Courts.

So quick, in fact, that the Golden Gophers clinched a victory only 90 minutes after the meet began. By that time, Iowa had lost five of six singles matches and went on to lose the remaining singles match and all three doubles matches.

The shutout pushed Minnesota's record to 6-1 in the conference and moved Iowa to 1-7. The Hawkeyes managed to win only one set of the 19 played.

Minnesota Coach David Creighton said he didn't take Iowa lightly coming into the meet even though

'Lefty' Carlton leaves baseball but still dreams of a comeback

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Steve Carlton gave up a three-year struggle to remain in the game he loved, telling the baseball world Wednesday he is through pitching after repeated comeback attempts.

The 44-year-old "Lefty" wouldn't use the word "retirement" in the announcement that came almost a year since his last release.

Even this spring, Carlton — coming off September surgery to remove eight chips from his pitching shoulder — still was trying to show major league teams that he had the same fire that earned him four Cy Young awards.

"My arm hasn't rehabilitated the way I had hoped," Carlton said in a brief statement issued by the Philadelphia Phillies, for whom he recorded 241 of his 329 career wins.

"I'm still experiencing some pain and I've decided I no longer would be active as a player."

The Phillies said they would retire his uniform number, 32, in a July 29 ceremony.

Club President Bill Giles said Carlton is "not officially retiring, according to him, but we're going to honor him anyway."

Giles said that if someone wanted Carlton, he might try another comeback.

"But he feels it's not going to happen, at least in the major leagues, although you never know when somebody's going to call," said Giles.

He said Carlton apparently "still has a glimmer of hope that Japan might be interested."

National League spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Carlton remains technically a free agent, because he was released by his last club, the Minnesota Twins. She said he would not go on a voluntary retired list since he belongs to no club.

Giles said he thinks Carlton really is finished pitching this time.

"In fact I tried to talk him into retiring two or three years ago," Giles said. "But he thought he could still pitch."

He did keep pitching after the Phillies released him in June 1986, playing with four more teams before his last release, April 28, 1988, by the Twins. Minnesota let him go after he compiled a 16.76 ERA in four games.

But the Carlton many will remember had a 22-year mark of 329-244, with a 3.22 ERA. Only eight pitchers won more games, and Warren Spahn with 363 is the only left-hander with more victories.

Gamecock aides indicted

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Three former South Carolina assistant football coaches were indicted Wednesday for allegedly providing athletes with anabolic steroids, and a fourth was charged with importing the muscle-building drug into the state.

The indictments came as Athletic Director King Dixon said South Carolina reopened an internal investigation into the charges. The university probe was halted after the grand jury investigation began.

James W. Washburn, Thomas E. Gadd and Thomas Kurucz were charged with "conspiring to conduct a program of illegal steroid use by members of the athletic community, . . . particularly by the university's football team." The coaches allegedly encouraged and monitored the progress of the athletes using steroids.

The three coaches also were charged with importing steroids into South Carolina and dispensing the drug without prescriptions.

Keith Kephart, a former strength coach at South Carolina, was charged with conspiring with "other members of the USC athletic community" to bring steroids into the state and dispense them without prescriptions.

The charges facing the four coaches are all misdemeanors. If convicted on all counts, the three could be sentenced to a maximum of four years and fined $301,000. Kephart faces a maximum of five years in prison and $302,000 in fines if convicted on all five counts.

Kurucz, who left South Carolina in December 1986 after four years at the school, also was charged with one felony count of lying to the grand jury, which carries a maximum fine of $250,000 and a five-year sentence.

U.S. Attorney Vinton Lide said at a news conference Wednesday the coaches also used steroids.

"I think if you read the indictments carefully you may come to that conclusion," he said.

Lide declined to elaborate, but one of the indictments said "Kephart and others would administer the steroids to each other to improve athletic performance and to enhance physical appearance."

USA exits hockey tournament

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Team USA lost its fourth straight game, a 5-4 decision to Czechoslovakia, and was eliminated from medal play at the World Hockey Championships Wednesday.

Team Canada routed West Germany 8-2 and the Soviet Union bombed Poland 12-1 at Stockholm's Globe Arena to improve their records to 4-0. Sweden, the defending champion, beat Finland 6-3 to tie the Czechs at 3-0-1.

Team USA, which trailed 3-0 midway through the game, rallied but fell short.

Earlier in the round-robin tournament, the Americans absorbed a pair of 4-2 heartbreaking losses to the Soviet Union and Sweden. On Tuesday, they lost 8-2 to Canada.

"We seem to be the team of the tournament that can't win despite good play," said Team USA Coach Tim Taylor. "We would very much like to hear our anthem at the end of a game here. That's what we're here for."

Czechoslovakia survived sustained pressure by the Americans in the final minutes in the game played at Sodertalje.

With 1:07 left and the Americans trailing by a goal, Taylor pulled goalie Robb Stauber for an extra attacker.

Phil Housley, a defenseman from the Buffalo Sabres, had an excellent chance with about 30 seconds left as he was left unchecked just outside the crease. But Czech goalie Dominik Hasek came up with a brilliant save.

'Pirate Radio' loots laughs - live!

By Steve Cruise The Daily Iowan

Dan Coffey believes in hands-on experience. The visiting UI communications instructor (and co-founder of Duck's Breath Mystery Theatre) says that most university mass communications courses are "long on theory," but don't place enough emphasis on "how to do things" — in other words, actually putting programs together.

On Thursday afternoon, the situation was remedied somewhat, as members of Coffey's Advanced Audio Production (i.e. radio writing) course present "Pirate Radio," 45 minutes of live radio comedy at the Union Wheelroom. The show — which is part of the current Riverfestivities — runs from 12:30 p.m. to 1:15 p.m., and will be broadcast live over KRUI. Admission to the Wheelroom performance is free.

Riverfest

was any indication, the program promises to be highly successful. A skit in which three strung-out engineering students are visited by the Prince of Darkness is typical of the dramatic material, and a fair amount of the jokes are directed at Iowa City itself (including a merciless jab at the drinking water).

enterprise: "I would be surprised if any other university in the country had a radio comedy writing class," he said.

Coffey's students are equally pleased with the course. "I find the class extremely fun and relaxing," says Doug Levy, a third-year theatre major. "It's a comfortable change from the day-to-day drudge of regular classes." Most of the students are communications and theatre majors; however, the course is open to all, as there are no prerequisites. Interested students should take note, however, that Advanced Audio Production doesn't appear in the course catalog. Blame it on red tape.

WHO Goes There screens telly gems

By Jennifer C. Weglarz The Daily Iowan

What, you ask, could possibly be more exciting and entertaining than over seven hours of "Doctor Who" episodes? How about more than seven hours of "Doctor Who" and "The Prisoner" episodes — simultaneously?

Saturday from 10 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. WHO Goes There is sponsoring a "Doctor Who"/"The Prisoner" convention at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St.

In Meeting Rooms A and B, videos of both television programs will be presented, featuring recent "Doctor Who" episodes starring the little-known Sylvester McCoy as the seventh Doctor.

While Steve Crow, a group member, says that "Doctor Who" is most notorious for its obviously cheap special effects, it is more than the campy side of the show that has made him a fan. "It's different from 'Star Trek.' It's one character; (the Doctor) doesn't answer to anybody. . . he goes out and finds adventure." A favorite on the BBC for more than 25 years, the show has gained in popularity in the United States through syndication.

Also of interest to '60s-telly science-fiction mavens is the showing of all 17 episodes of "The Prisoner," including the final episode, which attempted to clarify just what the hell had happened to the oft-imprisoned Patrick McGoochan.

Crow explains that the final episode, which was McGoochan's pet project, was not aired in the United States. It contained "weird, hallucinatory drug scenes" in a bizarre Old West storyline and in Vietnam-era 1967 was seen as "a protest-for-peace thing."

Episodes of each show will be played one after another, with an hour-long break for a trivia contest — "A Doctor Who 'Jeopardy,' you could probably call it," said Crow. There will also be displays of "Doctor Who" memorabilia, magazines and books.

WHO Goes There is a local group, but it also boasts members from Illinois and California; and Crow says there have been inquiries to join the organization from overseas. Members produce a newsletter six times a year and meet on a bi-monthly basis.

Opera Director Beaumont Glass speaks on 'Carmen'

By Steve Donoghue
The Daily Iowan

There's a plaque over Beaumont Glass' desk in the Music Building that reads "Opera Theatre."

It's somewhat superfluous. For almost 10 years, Glass has been the UI's Opera Theatre director, and he has put his own elegant stamp on major productions like "Faust," "Boris Gudonov," last year's "The Elixir of Love" and this year's "Carmen," which opens Friday night in Hancher.

How do you go about promoting an opera?

Well, of course, the first thing I have to do is consider what operas we could put on; that's considering the talent we have, the singers that I would perhaps like to feature or perhaps in general an opera that students can cope with, that requires very mature dramatic voices — I wouldn't want to push them too hard when they're young. And then I have to consider what would appeal so that we can get a good audience at Hancher, and what has been done before, so that we don't do the same opera too often.

Or at all . . .
Or at all, yes, right — then, I have to either find a translation or make one. In several of the last few productions, I've made the translation myself because I couldn't find any one translation that I liked all the way through; either the funny scenes were funny and the dramatic scenes were dull, or vice versa.

And I don't have to worry about the operas we build ourselves — we have a fabulous production unit here, a wonderful designer, Margaret Wenk, and light designer David Thayer from the Theatre Department, Chuck Ping from our own production unit, prop people, a wonderful scenery supervisor, Dan DePrenger — he can build anything, a medieval village, a ship, whatever you need — and in the case of Carmen, we've got a good bit of Seville on stage . . .

And horses, of course . . .
Oh, you've been hearing about them, have you? Well, you talk me, they don't involve me . . . on television, you see them walking through parts with a few stock gestures and whatnot. Now here I have a real thrill of working with young people who are discovering these great masterpieces for the first time, or at least the first time of actually trying to do it, and realizing all that's in those parts, all the excitement, the emotions, all the variety of feelings, all the musical and vocal and verbal possibilities, and they're throwing their hearts and souls into what they're doing.

And therefore, I must say I get more joy — as a member of the audience — out of these productions than I do when I'm at the Metropolitan Opera.

Are there any drawbacks to working in a university setting?
Well, I wouldn't call them exactly drawbacks. Every situation in life has its sun and shadow sides. But disadvantages? Hmm. Well, I can't do every opera I want . . .

Every situation in life has its sun and shadow sides. But disadvantages? Hmm. Well, I can't do every opera I want . . .

What about Carmen? Does a role like that strain a student too much?
Well, Carmen's another big role, a role that prima donnas would give their eye-teeth for, and not just the mezzo-sopranos, the type it was written for. A lot of history's famous Carmens have been sopranos that just kind of took the role. They changed the music around to suit themselves.

Barbara Buddin is turning out to be a very fine Carmen. I'm very pleased with her.

What about the rest of the production? Would you say it's running smoothly?
Well, if I can knock on some wood here — if all goes as if it looks like it's going to, then I think we have an outstanding cast and a beautiful production.

Are there any peculiarities about audience response that you've noticed here in Iowa City?
I think it's been a wonderful audience. When I first accepted this job, I was warned that they probably wouldn't like anything but Puccini and one or two Mozarts. And my very first opera was a very unknown piece at the time by Yanacek called "The Cunning Little Vixen." At that time, nobody had ever heard of it, and it was a big hit! We had a full house, and they loved it, and we started getting a lot of favorable publicity and attention.

Of course, a group that I would love to turn on to opera, to use that expression, is the student body of the university. Not just the music majors — you don't want to just preach to the converted — but if I could convince those 25,000 young people that if they'd get a ticket to one of the operas we present here, they would enjoy it. And I firmly believe that.

When you mention opera to a student, you see things spring up in their minds — stereotypes that have nothing to do with opera.

This is the barrier I'm hoping to gradually break down here in Iowa City and at the university.

And do the horses help?
I think they're helping, yes. I've been told that the ticket sales are better for "Carmen" than for anything we've done since "Boris Gudonov" — we have a very good chance of actually surpassing that ticket sale. I think part of it is that "Carmen" is more recognizable than even "La Traviata." Already the sales were very good, even before we got the horse publicity in the papers, so I can't give all the credit to the horses.

Does the task of translating a libretto like Carmen intimidate at all?
It doesn't intimidate. It takes a couple of months. I really enjoy it, and I find myself doing it all the time, when I'm walking to work or walking home or brushing my teeth. Carmen was pretty easy, because the dialogue can be realistic. It doesn't have to be poetic. I enjoyed it. It was fun.

Opera is a cooperative effort, and I've got wonderful people to work with here.
