UI Senate defeats punitive bill

Rojas-Cardona, Fleck won't be rebuked for ad

By Diana Wallace The Daily Iowan

A bill introduced to the UI Student Senate Tuesday night called for the punishment of Senate President Pepe Rojas-Cardona and Assistant Treasurer Jennifer Fleck for their authorization of an allegedly fraudulent advertisement that appeared in The Daily Iowan April

But it took less than 10 minutes of debate for the senate to defeat it.

The advertisement, which ran for one day, announced that the UI Collegiate Associations Council, the academic branch of student government at the UI, was seeking applicants for executive positions on the council.

However, the placement of the ad was never authorized by any member of the CAC, and several councilors have expressed anger toward the senators who were responsible for its placement. The CAC further passed a resolution during its April 17 meeting which stated their disapproval of the actions of Fleck and Rojas-Cardona.

The senate's bill, which was defeated by a roll-call vote of 16-5, also called for a written apology to

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court will hear arguments Wednesday in a Missouri abortion dispute that has become its most closely watched case of the 1980s. Court officials are bracing for "an extraordinary day" at the usually placid building on Capitol

State officials and the Bush administration are urging the court to use the case to overturn or substantially limit its 1973 decision that women have a constitutional right to abortion.

Even if the court rules on the Missouri abortion regulations narrowly, the decision will be viewed as a barometer of the current justices' commitment to the 16-year-old ruling in Roe v. Wade.

Officials warn students of HIV presence

By Kelly David The Daily Iowan

Although most UI students do not realize it, a lot of them know people who carry the HIV virus which causes AIDS, said Pat Herring, co-chairman of the AIDS Coalition of Johnson County.

Most students don't recognize this, because the virus has not overwhelmingly manifested itself in the form of AIDS in the student population, Herring said.

They think they can somehow tell by looking at someone that they have AIDS, and it's just not true. You cannot tell by looking at someone's genitals or anywhere else," said Ann Rhomberg, the HIV antibody coordinator at the Free Medical Clinic, 120 N. Dubuque St.

Although students carry the HIV virus, they may not show any symptoms of AIDS. They can, however, still transmit the virus and may develop AIDS after they graduate, Herring said. "The problem is that AIDS develops eight to 10 years after expo-sure," Herring said. "Therefore, it's very unlikely that undergraduates will develop AIDS in school,"

Herring said. "The average student should be worried about HIV, even though

AIDS is not that prevalent among students on campus," she said. Nearly one out of every 300 college students is infected with the HIV virus, according to preliminary results of a survey being conducted by the Center for Disease Control and the American College Health Association.

This statistic reflects half of the 20,000 anonymous blood samples currently being taken from 20 nationwide university student health centers. "The virus is here in this community," said Dr. Mary Khowassah, the director of the UI Student Health Service. "Everyone who is sexually active is at risk unless they are absolutely sure that they and their sexual partners are not infected, or they always use con-

Student Health officials point to the increase in students who have sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) as evidence that HIV can and is being transmitted among the student population.

Agencies may recruit gays, singles as adoptive parents

By Kelly David The Daily Iowan

Single people, gays and lesbians should be actively recruited as adoptive parents to accomodate the growing number of children with AIDS, said a UI researcher in the school of social work.

Assistant professor Vic Groze thinks adoption agencies should make "pro-active" efforts and target single people to find homes for children with AIDS before the numbers in 199 1000 children are expected to have AIDS, and 2,000 will be infected by the HIV virus. By 1992, nine out of 10 hospital beds will be occupied by children with AIDS, said Groze.

The reason the numbers are so high is that they're being left in hospitals," Groze said. "They are lower-income, minority babies, so they are abandoned. Often (the mothers) are so drug-addicted they don't care."

In addition to the babies with AIDS or HIV, there are 34,000 "special needs" children waiting to be adopted. These are children who are older than 3; are mentally, physically or hearing impaired; come in sibling groups; or have mixed parental heritage.

Currently adoption-agency materials are gauged towards couples,

"Single parents are not looked said Sue Sass, adoption specialist consider single people as viable for the Iowa Department of Human Services for Johnson, Washington Consider single people as viable parents," Groze said.

Although it is more difficult to and Iowa counties.

The Iowa Department of Human Service in Cedar Rapids places less than 10 percent of its "special needs" children in single-parent homes, said Dale Garlinghouse, adoption specialist for the depart-

"They should learn to tailor their recruitment materials to single parents also," Groze said.

Groze bases his conclusions on the preliminary results of a survey of 800 families in Oklahoma, Illinois and Kansas conducted by Groze and Jim Rosenthal of the University of Oklahoma-Norman. The final results will be presented in October at the National Association of Social Workers Conference in San Fransico.

The survey found that single parents are just as good at provid-ing care for adoptive children as couples, Groze said.

Adopted children are considered a positive addition in 48 percent of the single-parent families and in 40 percent of the couples. None of the single parents found adoption to be a negative experience, while 4 percent of the couples said they were discontent, and 1 percent said the experience was negative.

"Given the fact that we have 34,000 special needs children that need homes and that a new swarm of children with AIDS that need placement is coming, we should raise a child alone, single parents are usually well-prepared to adopt

"They are probably more moti-vated than couples," Garlinghouse said. "They made a conscious decision, and they had to think about it harder beacuse they are the only one doing it. They prepare more than other parents.

gays and lesbians should also be considered as adoptive parents, Groze said.

"I think that they would make wonderful parents," he said. "The Midwest needs to wake up."

Groze pointed out that while it took the nation four years to acknowledge children with AIDS, gays were the first to develop AIDS services and were "the best to react" to the problem.

"I think that they are very sensitive, because they are a minority and will be sensitive to a child's pain," Sass said. "They'll go the extra mile to make sure that child is an aware and sensitive child."

If they are not adopted, children with AIDS are born and die in hospitals, Groze said.

"A home with one parent is much better than living in a hospital," Groze said. "Terminally ill children have a right to parents too."

Although two-parent homes are ideal, a home with one parent is better than none, Groze said.

Branstad had sent a clear message that he would approve of the particularly House Speaker and

"Don Avenson is not my public relations manager," scoffed Branstad. I make pay own decisions. There's plenty of credit to go around for the people the worked for it. I don't think that is something we need to President Hunter Rawlings opened the meeting with a speech praising Shanes' and the senate's accomplishements. Shanes will remain on the senate as past-president.

First time senate occurrences during the past session included the UI Faculty Senate Symposium, a state Board of Regents president attending the senate meeting and a faculty representative serving on the Alumni Association Board of Directors.

Shanes said the faculty's role in UI budgeting, strategic planning and the research park are areas for future senates to address. The notion that faculty representatives be faculty-selected should also be a concern, he said.

"Our greatest need in the year ahead may not be new initiatives, but follow-through to see that the expectations raised by this year's activities are not disappointed," Shanes said.

Affirmative action, tenure and the budget were addressed by the 1989 senate. Another priority was strengthening communication between the administration, faculty and students.

UI professor Elizabeth Burns turned over secretarial duties to Anderson, who is now responsible for recording the minutes and preparing agendas at both the Faculty Council and senate meet-

"Based on the strategic planning coming to an end, looking at that development in terms of the university, and the outreach programs that have been started by the university, I think it is going to be a great year," she said.

School board investigates fund raising

By Noelle Nystrom The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Community School District Board of Directors said Tuesday they hope to coordinate a system that will alleviate the fund-raising inequities throughout the district.

Last week, board members agreed that a committee was necessary to look into the current policies on fund raising and consider an alternative strategy.

Board member Alan Leff said the idea of a new policy is not meant to stifle district fund raising.

"We want a positive vein, not a restrictive vein," he said.

The board is concerned that separate fund-raising projects in the district run with little consideration to each other and that businesses and residents in the community become confused when confronted with a plea for donations from one group one day and another group the next.

Last week, the board decided the community should know in advance what fund-raising events and drives will be held when, and by whom.

Leff said the board now must decide exactly how it wants the fund-raising committee to func-

"I think we're in agreement that we don't have sufficient policy on fund raising," Leff said. "But we haven't given enough consideration to what to tell the commit-

Board member Betsy Hawtrey said she felt there were certain needs that the committee should Hawtrey suggested that fundraising policy and administrative regulations have specific guidelines put in writing. She also suggested that the committee consider regulating the across the district requests for fund raising because the opportunity should be available to all students.

"The frustration has been that some groups are not given the opportunity to participate," Hawtrey said. Board member Fran Malloy said she was uncomfortable with asking a committee to do what she considers the school board's job.

"I'm not ready to relinquish policy-making decisions to the committee before I learn the facts," Malloy said.

The committee should relate to the board possible problems it may run into when formulating a new policy and should also offer a tentative solution, said board member Jay Christensen-

"They should tell us what's going on and offer what they perceive as a solution," he said.

The board agreed that the committee will be asked to address potential problems regarding the implementation of a new policy and consider who should monitor district fund raising.

Medvedev remarked, "This is a serious and important milestone in our course, perestroika, which shows that our party is realistically assessing its own work and is quite critical about its own activities."

The resignations followed the first contested nationwide elections in 70 years of Communist rule on March 26. Dozens of top party and government officials, including more than 30 regional party chairmen, were defeated.

It was not clear whether Gorbachev had urged the officials to step aside Tuesday, but portraying their removal as voluntary was a deft tactical maneuver possibly meant to head off criticism that they were ousted.

The military lost a substantial voice in the Central Committee. At least nine senior officers were dropped, and just one officer was promoted from candidate status to full membership.

The changes left the Central Committee with 251 members, party personnel chief Georgy Razumovsky told the news con-

But Tutwiler, who consulted with Baker, said "the discussions will continue" and launched into an attack on the Soviet Union.

Sen. Troy Raper, who submitted the bill, said he felt the "executives were in error by stepping over their boundaries" because the allocation for the advertisment, which came out of UI Student Senate's office account, was never approved by the senate and because Vernon McKinley, whose home phone number appeared in the ad, said in The Daily Iowan April 19 that he had no prior knowledge of its publica-

However, Rojas-Cardona said he agreed to authorize the ad after McKinley asked him for a monetary loan. McKinley also confirmed this during Tuesday's senate meeting.

McKinley and Dave Elick were elected by the CAC to the offices of vice president and president, respectively. Since then, however, the CAC has annulled the election and on Monday voted to impeach

Elick and McKinley. But Rojas-Cardona echoed the stance the UI Elections Board has taken in not responding to the CAC's actions, and recognizing Elick and McKinley as the new

CAC officers. 'An election was held according to the constitution, it was certified by the Elections Board, and anything that happened after that is irrelevant," Rojas-Cardona said, adding that he's "had enough of this whole thing ... it's embarrassing for

Jerry Miller, CAC administrative assistant, disputed Rojas-Cardona's claim, saying the CAC has always made an effort to work with the Student Senate. Miller cited several projects where the two bodies have worked together in the past, such as allocating mandatory student fees, interviewing candidates for the vice president for academic affairs position and meeting with state congressmen.

"You need to have some good relations in order to get anything done," Miller said. "Just because you don't agree on one or two issues doesn't mean the whole

The Pentagon had hoped to spend $25.9 billion on 663 Ospreys, including $1.3 billion in 1990. Cheney called this decision his most difficult.

• The National Aerospace Plane, a joint project with NASA, will be scaled back drastically. The high-speed transport could fly around the world in just hours. Cheney decided to cut the project's fiscal 1990 budget by two-thirds, from $300 million to $100 million.

• The Midgetman nuclear missile, a single-warhead missile that would be small enough to be carried and fired from a truck launcher, will be held to $100 million despite President George Bush's decision to develop the missile in addition to a rail-based version of the MX nuclear missile.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., the committee's chairman, expressed concerns over the plan to give the MX priority over the Midgetman.

City Manager Stephen Atkins said Johnson's UDAG repayments — which are about $19,000 a month are up to date even though they have been consistently late since they began last November.

"While we can be sympathetic, we have to look out for Iowa City's interest," Atkins said. The reorganization plan, set in Friday's preliminary hearing, states that Johnson may not divert Iowa City funds to other businesses, Gentry said.

The plan, to be finalized at another bankruptcy hearing next Monday, states that the Iowa City Holiday Inn's incoming cash should be used to pay for employee wages and other hotel expenses - not for other properties, Gentry added.

The UDAG repayments are not included among the things the hotel's income must pay for under the plan, but Gentry said Johnson's attorney assured her the payments would be made.

"There's enough income produced from that hotel to pay the mortgage," Gentry said.

Johnson will also be required to provide weekly cash flow reports to Iowa City and his other debtors if the plan is approved by the bankruptcy judge, Gentry

Student Health. These figures do not include students who were diagnosed in other Iowa City clin-

"If you look at the increase in STDs in heterosexual college students, you can see that if you are at risk for an STD, then you are at risk for HIV," Herring said.

The increase in STDs among students indicates that students are engaging in unprotected sex, a high-risk behavior associated with the spread of the HIV virus, Petroff

A 1989 survey conducted in January by the Student Health Service on the health interests and practices of undergraduates found that 75 percent of the undergraduates have been sexually active in the last 12 months. Of those, half said they had more than one sexual partner, and 9 percent used con-doms. The y-two percent said they had en ged in unintended or regrettable sex after drinking alco-

This survey indicates a number of high-risk behaviors among the majority of students, Petroff said. They are having more than one sexual partner, practicing unprotected sex and engaging in unin-tended sex induced by alcohol.

Ironically, however, UI students are well-informed about the risks of AIDS and show a high level of survey results.

In the same survey, AIDS ranked 11th in a list of 38 catagories of male and female health concerns.

"Students are fairly highly interested," Petroff said. "The interest has waned (nationally), but it is high on our campus." UI students also demonstrated in a 1988 survey conducted by hospital and student health administration that they knew how to prevent AIDS. Nine out of 10 students surveyed in rhetoric classes knew that condoms are the best way to prevent AIDS in sexually active people, Petroff

"They have a good knowledge of how to prevent AIDS, but they are not applying that knowledge to modify their sexual behavior," Khowassah said. One reason UI students may not feel threatened by AIDS is because the number of reported cases in Iowa is relatively low.

"People in Iowa often have a false sense of security. It is a myth to believe that AIDS will not touch us here in Iowa," said Ellen Van Laere, director of the AIDS Project of Johnson County.

Health reported 135 cases of AIDS in the state of Iowa as of January 23, 1989.

This statistic is misleading, Her-there is an underreporting of AIDS because of the stigma, and people dying without diagnosis," Herring said. "To study the epidemic we need to count, but unfortunately people take the process of counting and use that to feed into their denial." Furthermore, this number reflects only the number of people who have AIDS, not the number of HIV-infected people who are still spreading the virus, Herring said.

Other reasons students may not see AIDS as a student problem are that they perceive themselves as too young to be affected by a life-threatening disease, or they assume a cure will be found, Petroff said.

"There is a mentality that medical technology is so advanced that it is someone else's responsibility to come up with a cure," she said. "We're very gullible, we're used to instant cures."

Although most emphasis in curing the AIDS problem has been through education, some authorities think that behavior modification is the bottom line.

f Johnson County.

The Iowa Department of Public challenge," Petroff said. "When a student begins to engage in sex, they become comfortable with their method of protection. It takes three months to practice a habit until it's day, but it's what people feel most familiar with.'

Petroff feels that in order to change behavior, attitudes must first be changed.

While Herring sees education as part of the answer, she does not think it will change student behavior. "Unfortunately, all of us have to know someone who is dying of AIDS before we'll do something. We have to put a face on this," Herring said. "When a college student with AIDS is vocal about it, then they will put a face on AIDS and make it more real to other students. Students must not wait until all their friends are

Mexico City, Acapulco rocked by quake

Mexico Quake

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A strong earthquake struck Mexico City and Acapulco on Tuesday, cracking buildings and an aqueduct, shattering glass and panicking thousands of people who remembered the killer quake of 1985.

One man was electrocuted when power cables fell on him, and two women were seriously injured when they jumped in panic from the second story of a swaying building during the 8:26 a.m. MDT quake, officials said.

Police sent on inspection patrols throughout the city reported no collapsed buildings or other deaths or serious injuries, but many buildings in the seismically sensitive center swayed widely and were evacuated.

"The quake produced a lot of panic because of the recent (1985) experience," said Mayor Manuel Camacho Solis.

He said fallen cables and short circuits caused power blackouts in many parts of the city. He also said the Tlahuac aqueduct, one of several bringing drinking water to this metropolis of 19 million, cracked in several places and caused some flooding.

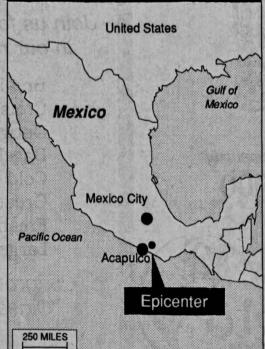

However, he said all services would be restored within three days.

President Carlos Salinas de Gortari made a quick tour of affected areas and, in a television interview, praised residents for maintaining "serenity and coolness." He said their experience in the 1985 disaster had served them well.

Tuesday's tremor shook the Pacific beach resorts of Acapulco and Zihuatanejo, but there were no reports of death or damage throughout the state of Guerrero, according to state government spokesman Miguel Angel Hernan-

"Even though the quake was intensively felt, everything is normal and there are also reports of no major damage. We did a survey by radio," said Hernandez by telephone.

The U.S. National Earthquake Information

Center in Golden, Colo., said the earthquake registered 6.8 on the Richter scale. The epicenter was 40 miles east of Acapulco, about 200 miles south of Mexico City, said seismologist John Minsch. Mexico's Seismic Institute calculated the quake at 7 on the Richter scale.

The tremor hit Mexico City at about the same time as the massive earthquake that hit on Sept. 19, 1985, killing at least 10,000 people and destroying hundreds of buildings. That quake measured 8.1 on the Richter scale.

"There's a real psychosis here about earthquakes since 1985," said Alejandro Maura, an office worker who, like hundreds of others, had not re-entered his building hours after the Francisco Guerra, advertising director of the newspaper Novedades de Acapulco, said the quake caused panic.

"I've never felt a tremor so strong in the city, and I've lived here for 30 years. I thought the building would collapse," he said.

The quake was reported in the southern states of Oaxaca, Morelos, Michoacan, Jalisco and

In Mexico City, the earthquake began as a small jolt and stopped momentarily. Then buildings began swaying back and forth, with plaster cracking and windows breaking.

It knocked down power and telephone lines and damaged water lines in some areas. Shattered glass showered some streets.

The quake was felt most strongly in the center of the city, which is built on an old lake bed and where most of the damage occurred in 1985. Many buildings, including schools and government offices, were evacuated until engineers could inspect them.

A man of about 30 was electrocuted by a fallen power line just north of the city center, according to Maria Cortina Benitez, a spokeswoman for the police department rescue service. The two women who leaped from a building suffered cuts and fractures, she said.

"It was horrible. There was hysteria. Parts of the ceiling fell, but they were not big enough to hurt anyone. Some of us calmed many people and made them go down the stairway," said Carlos Bravo, who works in penthouse offices at the Health Ministry.

The motion splashed water out of a swimming pool into the streets below from the top floor of the 23-story Hotel Century in central Mexico

Moises Hernandez, bellboy at the hotel said, "It was enough to wash my car on the street below" after water fell on his car.

ucas nomination draws criticism.

Captain was told not to rock boat

WASHINGTON (AP) — President George Bush announced plans Tuesday to nominate William Lucas, a black critic of racial hiring quotas, to become the Justice Department's civil rights chief despite opposition from the NAACP.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, in a statement released by the Justice Department, called Lucas "a talented, decent and compassionate person whom I have known for a number of years."

"Bill Lucas is fully committed to the vigorous and fair enforcement of our country's civil rights laws and to removing barriers to equal opportunity for all our citizens," Thornburgh said.

Questioned by reporters as he accompanied Bush on a tour of a seized drug ranch in Orange County, Calif., Thornburgh said that "it's regrettable that this kind of fission has developed but the president and I are both strongly" in favor of the nomination.

"There is bipartisan support for his nomination generally. Most of the senators we have talked to have agreed to withhold any position until they have have learned. He's a man well-qualified to be on the job," Thornburgh added.

The White House said Bush would nominate Lucas, 61, a Detroit lawyer, to be assistant attorney general for civil rights. Lucas, a former Democrat, lost a race for governor of Michigan in 1986 after he joined the Republican Party.

"We'll have a chance to examine his record," Kennedy said, noting reservations expressed by civil rights groups.

Lucas has said he generally opposes racial hiring quotas but once told an interviewer that there were 'some specific areas where quotas are appropriate."

Lucas has said he disagreed with attempts by the Reagan administration to overturn affirmativeaction plans for the Detroit police department and the Memphis, Tenn., fire department. Since Thornburgh recommended Lucas in February,

Lucas has drawn criticism from some civil rights leaders who question whether he is qualified to be the government's chief civil rights enforcer. Ralph Neas, executive director of the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, an umbrella coalition of 180 organizations, said his group is concerned that Lucas lacks civil rights and legal experience. "William Lucas is a disappointing most important civil rights job in the federal government, a job for which expertise and experience are absolutely vital," said Arthur Kropp, president of People for the American Way. "Instead of a strong civil rights advocate, Bush has chosen a man whose qualifications and record are at best a question mark," he added in a statement.

Recession inevitability uncertain

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wages and salaries paid to American workers in private industry rose 4.2 percent in the last 12 months, the biggest jump in 31/2 years, the government said Tuesday in a report that showed increasing inflationary pressures from tight labor markets

But the Labor Department's Employment Cost Index and other economic reports issued Tuesday brought mixed predictions of whether a recession is inevitable or could be averted by slower growth in the seventh year of the economy's expansion.

Economist David Wyss of Data Resources Inc., noting a number of recent reports that point to a slowdown in economic expansion, said he believed growth had eased enough to convince the Federal Reserve Board that further credit tightening would not be needed to fight inflation.

Wyss said credit-tightening already done by the Federal Reserve may be enough to postpone a recession for up to two

"It's sort of like death: You can't cure it, you can only postpone it," Wyss said.

But chief economist Allen Sinai of Boston Co. Economic Advisers Inc. said he was looking for the next downturn to begin within a

"What is happening is that wages and salaries are picking up because of the tight labor market. I think there is an increasingly embedded upward tilt in wage compensation and overall employment costs," Sinai said. There is a recession in there somewhere." Others, however, predicted that inflation would ease as the economy slows to a sustainable pace and that the Federal Reserve then would ease its tight hold on credit to help the economy into a 'soft landing.'

Gassing protestors

Russian officials have been sniffing too much glue if they think they can deny the fact that their troops used a debilitating — if not lethal — nerve gas to disperse protestors in Tbilisi April 9. Untold numbers of Tbilisians have the symptoms of nerve gas poisoning to prove it.

Nearly 120 Russian people were hospitalized and 20 died after government troops disbanded the pro-independence demonstration. Half of those hospitalized are presumed to be children from a school near the demonstration site. In addition, one member of the commission investigating the incident said 600 of the 700 people injured at the protest were poisoned by gas.

Two weeks later, Russian officials are still trying to deny that they used any chemical weapons at all in their efforts to break-up the demonstrators.

The Defense Ministry newspaper Krasnaya Zvezdna identified at least one of the chemicals used by the troopers cheremukha, which becomes poisonous in high concentrations - and several doctors on the commission claim another gas was used which causes irregular paralysis of the central nervous system, memory loss, blackouts, headaches and Several dozen of the hospitalized protestors appealed for an antidote for their tormenting illness in a letter to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. But not only has the government refused to provide an antidote - if one exists - they won't even release the names of the chemicals used during their vicious attack.

One thing they can't deny are the facts. It will be interesting to see how the government will explain the deaths of the 14 protestors who did not appear to have been seriously beaten if it is explained at all.

Animal rights theater

Welcome to World Animal Liberation Week.

The debate over so-called animal rights has taken an ugly turn of late, each camp becoming more entrenched in its position. Neither side conceeds an iota of the other's viewpoint, and both are rapidly becoming associated with the extremism of their members — those who elevate animals to the level of human beings, and those who treat animals with a callow disregard that is both bad ethics and bad science.

The truth of the debate lies somewhere in between. Who isn't in favor of the "ethical treatment of animals"? On the other hand, how many among us, faced with the prospect of a grave illness, would put the lives of animals above their own?

Where animals are concerned, we are a culture of contradiction. We wear animal skins and eat animal flesh, all the while showering our pets with a love second only to our love for children. While Europeans eat venison and hare by the plateload, we order beefsteak and lament our Continental counterparts' ruthless appetite for Bambi and the Easter

Like it or not, American culture has always drawn distinctions between the species, and that is the chord that animal liberationists have struck to great effect.

But by attaching the word "rights" to "animals" - granting them the equivalent of the human soul - activists have placed themselves in an untenable position. And breaking into laboratories doesn't solve a thing, anymore than bombing an abortion clinic changes people's minds about the moment life

Our obligation isn't to revere the animal kingdom with blind deference. We couldn't do it if we tried. We don't even treat each other all that well.

That's why the animal rights debate isn't really about animals at all. It's about us - and as creatures who must live with our consciences, we owe it to ourselves to police the treatment of animals thoroughly.

Education president?

For someone who wants to be known as the education president, George Bush has pretty feeble proposals in his first

Both in his inaugural address and again last week, the president declared that the nation has more will than wallet, but when it comes to making progress in education, Washington will have to open its wallet wider than Bush proposes.

The administration's education package has worthwhile goals. Unfortunately, to pay for these aims, the president proposes $441 million - not much by Washington standards and certainly not enough to make a dent in any of his targeted areas, much less in all of them.

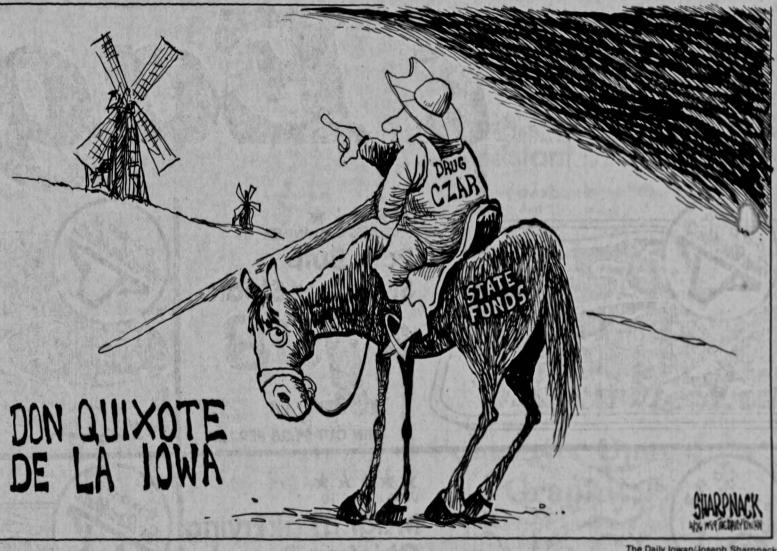

Instead of throwing pennies at such problems, Bush would be better advised to restore some of the cuts made by the Reagan administration.

But if Bush wants to make his mark on education, he will have to rethink how much the nation can spend on improving its schools - and whether it can afford not to.

Why some 'students' are really at the UI

reading for one of my classes recently, I came across a passage which struck me as being profoundly true. The book I was reading, American Politics in Everyday Life, by Robert D. Holsworth and J. Harry Wray, is an anecdotal account of various ways in which the seemingly normal events of modern society mold us into the types of people we are.

On the subject of education, the authors argue that our consumeroriented society has led to the college education, and I feel that of us to question whether they are

They write:

"Anti-intellectual sentiment is evident on the first day of class registration. Consider the values that determine course selection for so many college students. The more prominent ones include selecting courses that will not disrupt the student's social schedule, selecting courses which do not require papers, selecting courses with minimal required reading, choosing professors who are supposedly easy graders, selecting classes in which exams are based on rote memory. Once in class, these values continue unabated. Questions like 'How long does the paper have to be?' Does it have to be typed?' Is the book going to be on the exam?' are rivaled in their regularity only by the rising sun. It rarely occurs to students that they may read beyond the required assignments. Students think of classes as discrete little packages of knowledge bearing, evidently, no relation to each other or anything else.' These concerns, which we see manifested daily, are especially visible at registration time, when students seek out the types of courses described above. The fact bankruptcy of attitudes towards a that they are true should lead each their argument bears repeating, true for ourselves, and why we are really here at the UI. I offer a partial list of reasons people choose to attend college.

First, and perhaps most obviously, to prepare for a career. It is a fact of modern society that a college education will lead to a more economically fruitful career. However, in practice, this usually means that a person is seeking a degree, rather than an education. I think it is generally felt that possession of a degree, regardless of the educational content of that degree, is the focus of one's college

This is what leads students to take the easiest courses available, rather than those which will lead to a well-rounded education. When people enroll in classes they are not interested in, but merely to fulfill a GER or gain elective credit. the quality of the discussions in the class will obviously suffer because the students are not interested in hearing the opinions of others or offering their own. Consequently, the quality of the education for the people who are interested is Another reason people may attend college is to postpone their entry into the workplace for several more years. Regardless of their fitness for higher education, they sure as hell don't want to get a job yet, so why not enjoy four more years at mom and dad's expense? People who enter college for this reason are equally if not more harmful to the learning environment as the people described earlier, and often are not even seeking a degree, but merely a reprieve.

A third reason people may attend college is the fact that it seems to be the next logical step after high school. All their friends are going, so they figure it must be the right thing to do. I think there are a great many people who come to college for precisely this reason, when in fact junior college or trade school would be more appropriate.

The rate of attrition for the latter two categories tends to be fairly high, but that doesn't bother me. Through the process of a sort of 'academic Darwinism," the quality of students in the latter stages of their education tends to be higher, and that's the way it should be. I can't feel sorry for someone who doesn't make the grade because it probably means that he or she was not cut out to be in college to begin with. If a higher quality of student remains after the rest have been "weeded out," I think that is a positive phenomenon. Holsworth and Wray conclude that: "Many students, for their part, eventually come to see the aridity of their educational experience. They step off the conveyor belt. They start to make demands of teachers. They meet informally in small groups to discuss ideas and interesting books. They are the best hope of this nation.

I would be remiss if I did not add that there are many students who come to the UI seeking academic growth. These students certainly do exist, but are not as visible as the other types. Anyone who has been stuck in a discussion section composed mainly of academically inclined students knows how frustrating it can be to try to have a meaningful discussion of the course material, and when this happens, the student is unable to get the most out of the class, and the quality of education for those who really want it is

I think each of us would do well to think about the reasons we chose to come to the UI, and, now that we're here, decide whether we are following a path which will allow ourselves to achieve those goals. Hopefully, instead of deciding that college is not for them, more people will redefine what they really want to get out of college and take the appropriate steps toward achieving

Phone registration proposed

To the Editor:

Once again, I took part in the UI tradition of Calvin registration. I have to admit my satisfaction this time around, though, as my waiting time was cut from 40 minutes last winter in sub-freezing wind chill factors to 30 minutes last Thursday in a nippy April breeze. Blessed be the fact that the new SYTEK network may soon alleviate our registration frustrations, Registrar's Office can come up with?

In the fall of 1987, Iowa State University, a haven for terminal worshippers and Atanasoff idolizers, bypassed the computer craze and implemented a system of touch-tone registration, or registration by phone. ISU, too, was plagued by lines of hundreds which converged on a microcosm of 30 to 40 CRTs (Computer Registration Terminals). But instead of transferring the burden and the lines onto its own highly developed mainframe, VAX, Iowa State moved registration to the students' rooms. The system is very user friendly. Students pick up their registration worksheet and four-digit access code from their advisors and together they plan the students' schedules for the following semester. Each course is coded, so by filling in the worksheet with the appropriate codes, all you need to do is call the registrar's phone bank and start punching. If this Freedom to be sounds ludicrous, try calling Teleconnect's Cityline (337-7000); it works on the same principle.

Touch tone shows a clear advantage over Calvin lines, but it also surpasses mainframe systems. For instance, will new terminals be required at all? Which sounds more imposing to the computer illiterate. a terminal or a ten-digit keypad? What will the load of 25,000-plus registrants do to our current mainframe, especially a time in the semester when access to terminals is crucial to students?

Everyone has access to a touchtone phone, and the touch-tone registration process, which takes less than 10 minutes, can be executed from the comfort of your own room. If the phone lines are busy, simply use automatic callback and queue up. In addition, the touch-tone system is completely capable of handling drops and adds, pass-fail sign up, etc., at any time right up to the first day of courses. It even tells the student if a class is closed.

SYTEK sounds like a wonderful idea, and I commend the Registrar for aiming to eliminate registration hassle. But why buy into it when there is a model system demonstrated at another large, public university which surpasses SYTEK in efficacy and facility?

To many vehicles To the Editor:

Though all to few even give it a thought, there are obviously too many vehicles on the roads and streets. How many automobiles right here in Iowa City are being driven less than a mile, with one person in them?

Investigation of USS lowa blast continues

NORFOLK, Va. — Repairs to the blast-damaged gun turret on the battleship Iowa could cost as much as $100 million, a defense expert said Tuesday, and a Navy officer said the investigation could take up to a year.

An explosion in the turret on April 19, while one of three 16-inch guns was being loaded with gunpower, killed 47 crewmen.

Foregoing repairs would be a good idea because the technology and materials needed to fix the 49-year-old ship no longer exist, said retired Rear Adm. Eugene LaRocque of the Center for Defense Information in Washington, D.C.

"The pumps, the motors, the various other components in the turret are simply not available anywhere today and would all have to be hand-manufactured," he said in an interview.

LaRocque, a frequent defense critic, said his center has estimated that repairs to the Iowa could cost $100 million or more.

The 43-year-old Armitage was picked for the Army's top civilian post by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney in late March after originally accepting a post at the State Department.

Assuming Senate confirmation, Armitage will replace John Marsh, who has held the position since the first day of the Reagan administration and who has made clear his desire to retire once a successor was picked.

In his current job, Armitage has played a key role in overseeing American security assistance programs around the world as well as counterterrorism and Vietnam POW-MIA issues.

Armitage becomes the second service secretary to be announced by Bush. On April 13, the president said he would nominate Navy Under Secretary H. Lawrence Garrett to take over the top job with that service.

Planned renovation spurs controversy

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands - Neighbors of the house where Anne Frank hid from the Nazis are waging a campaign against a projected renovation of the building, now a top tourist attraction. Fearing loss of privacy as well as inconvenience caused by construction work, residents of the central Amsterdam district housing the last home of the world-famous teen-age Nazi victim have written a letter protesting the four-year renovation plan.

The Dutch capital's agency for the preservation of monuments is also opposed to the project, with its director saying the plan will destroy . . . the memories it conveys."

"What he's claiming doesn't appear to be the case at all," said Ron Wilson, a spokesman at San Francisco International Airport where the incident was reported at 11:30 p.m. Monday. "We have not yet been able to confirm any of the statements Mr. Downey

Authorities found no evidence of skinheads in the area, he said. Wilson said a witness reported seeing the talk-show host in a restroom where the attack was said to have happened, but didn't see any confrontation. Downey was cleanly dressed when found in the limousine at the airport and showed no signs of being in a scuffle, said Wilson. Scissors and a marking pen were found in the restroom, but there were no physical signs of a fight, he said. In an interview with the San Francisco Examiner, Downey displayed swastikas scrawled across his face, shirt and pants. His right eye was bloodshot and bruised, his head partially cut.

Chinese government calls for end to student protests

BEIJING (AP) - The government moved Tuesday to halt a 9-day-old student protest for democracy and a free press, urging them to go back to class and disband their fledgling unions, and warning workers to stay on the job.

In a harsh editorial, read on the televised nightly news and hourly on the radio, the Communist Party called for a swift end to the student movement, the biggest since the revolution of 1949.

"This is a grave political struggle facing the whole party and Chinese citizens," the editorial said. "This is a planned conspiracy that ... aims at negating the leadership of the party and the socialist sys-

Iranian newspaper chooses favorite Khomeini successor

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) - A prominent Iranian newspaper on Tuesday backed Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani to head a leadership council that would eventually succeed the 88-year-old Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The state-controlled Ettelaat daily said in an editorial that no single possible substitute for Khomeini existed "when it comes to knowledge and jurisprudence especially in the area of government. . . . or when such other factors as record of struggle or political intuition is

It suggested a leadership council made up of present state administrators and leading religious authorities in which one member "would be capable of saying the last word on matters of dispute and able to adopt decisions on his own responsibility."

"If we were to make a decision on the basis of a grade-point average of a candidate it seems . . . Rafsanjani has the necessary qualifications for heading the leadership council," Etelaat said.

"In all countries and with every leadership council there is one member entitled to veto the vote of the rest."

It was the first public backing for a Khomeini successor since Khomeini forced Ayatollah Hossein Ali Montazeri to step down last month as his officially designated successor. Rafsanjani is a leading candidate for president in elections scheduled to be held this year to choose a successor to Ali Khamenei, who is not permitted by the constitution to run for a third four-year term. But under Iran's present system, the president divides power with the prime minister and Parliament, all of them subject to the authority of Khomeini. The revolutionary patriarch's separate status as spiritual leader is unmatched and unlikely to be filled after he dies.

Ettelaat's endorsement significantly boosts Rafsanjani's status in current political infighting.

Rafsanjani kept a low profile in a recent purge of moderates and in the international outcry over Khomeini's death sentence decree for British author Salman Rushdie.

Don't let the Heat get to you

ome advice for the Miami Heat, who finished 15-67 in their first season: Don't panic. Stay the course. Have faith in your people.

This from men of experience, like Tom Fears, the original head coach of the New Orleans Saints, and Lou Gorman, the first general manager of the Kansas City Royals and Seattle Mariners.

As New York Islanders general manager Bill Torrey explained, all expansion teams start at the same point: "no pencils, no desks, no players, nothing." But why did the Islanders evolve into playoff con-still struggle for respectability?

The problem can begin at the top. Fears, fired after compiling a record of 13-34-2 over 3½ seasons, bitterly recalled his relationship with team owner John Mecom Jr.

"Well, he wasn't very receptive to anything," Fears said. "He wouldn't listen to any of my suggestions, he would just talk to his cronies and none of them knew football. He was dipping in the wrong basket.

"We went to San Diego once and he rented homes and had boats and because he was enamored with out after curfew. He was working against the program." No such horror stories could be heard from Torrey. The Islanders finished 12-60-6 in their first year, 1972-73, but reached the playoffs two years later and eventually won four straight Stanley Cups.

"Unfortunately," Torrey noted,
"when you start an expansion team, your fellow competitors are not going to give you anything but broken down players or players who've got a problem somewhere along the line or they wouldn't have given up on them in the first

So Torrey patiently built the Islanders with draft picks like Bryan Trottier, Clark Gillies and Mike

Bossy.
"We knew what we were attempting to do, that it was going to be a long pull, but for those of us who were in the hockey end of it, we had a good idea of what the drafts in the future were going to be like. They were loaded, stacked with

Gorman has been on both sides. The Royals, who started in 1969, compiled a respectable 69-93 record their first year, avoiding the disastrous beginnings of most expansion teams. By 1976, Kansas City was good enough to win the American League West.

"I think it's because we got good people, put them in the right jobs, and kept some continuity," Gorman said. "We developed a good farm system and made some brilliant trades." liant trades."

But when Gorman took on the But when Gorman took on the general manager position with the Mariners, something went wrong. Seattle has never finishd with a winning record and is still going through the process of "rebuilding." What happened?

"Because of the change in ownership above the change in ownership.

ship, changes in management philosophy, the constant change of people," Gorman explained.

"Patision is important, you can't build ed hampionship ballclub overnight. Sell the fans that you have a plan and stick by your plan. Have faith in what you're doing and if you're right, it will come out right. Every victory you get, you savor."

But don't get too excited.

"I remember when we first played the Baltimore Orioles, and (Manager) Earl (Weaver) had worked for me," Gorman said. "We beat them 6-4 or 6-3 and I was kidding Earl about it the next day.

They beat us for 22-consecutive ames after that. I should have ept my mouth shut."

Iowa middle hitter Willis qualifies for Festival team

By Steve Reed The Daily Iowan

Iowa middle hitter Barb Willis recently became the first Hawkeye ever to make the Olympic Festival team after trying out at Chapel Hill, N.C., in late March.

Willis was among 320 women, including teammates Janet Moylon, Jenny Rees, Trista Schoenbeck and Ruth Spethman, competing for 48 spots on the festival volleyball

The Olympic Festival will be held in Oklahoma City, Okla., during the last two weeks of July. The 48 women will be divided into four teams which will compete against each other.

Willis, a sophomore from Camanche, Iowa, said she was surprised when she found out she had made the squad.

"I was really excited," Willis said. "The competition was very good. When I went in there, I didn't know what the competition would be like, but I knew there'd be a lot of good players."

Players at the tryout were tested on their hitting and blocking skills and other physical attributes like jumping ability and arm speed.

Iowa Coach Sandy Stewart said it was a combination of all of these that gave her the edge.

"I think the coaches were impressed with her agility and her fast arm swing. She's very quick son, where she helped guide Iowa for her being 6 foot," Stewart said. "She's also a very enthusiastic person."

"I'm really happy, too," Stewart said. "As a coach, you always hope that your players get recognized. It's been neat for Barb because she wasn't heavily recruited and nobody knew too much about her."

Willis is coming off her best sea-to second in the Big Ten with a 25-9 record. In leading the conference in blocks per game, Willis contributed 47 solo blocks and assisted on 169 others.

"It was a good season, but I'm not entirely satisfied," Willis said. "I think I can improve in a couple of areas like my defense and serving."

She also noted that she didn't play up to her full potential at the tryouts in North Carolina. The Olympic Festival is one small step toward Olympic competition and Willis said she will need to improve before she is ready for that big

"It's exciting to think about being in the Olympics, but I realize that the Olympic Festival is just a small step on the ladder to the Olympic team," Willis said.

"It's part of the training ground to the next step — the Junior Olympic team," Stewart said. "This is like an entry-level position where the officials are trying to create more quality players who can play at the international level."

Stewart believes that if Willis sets her mind to it, she has the talent to advance to the Junior Olympic team and beyond.
"She definitely has the potential,"

Stewart said. "She's still learning and very coachable. Barb is also willing to try new techniques. I'm really prud of her."

Cone, 2-1, struck out 10 and walked four before needing last out relief help from Randy Myers.

Cone lost his shutout bid when Ron Gant homered on a 1-2 pitch with one out in the eighth inning into the left-field bullpen.

Drake athletes arrested for forgery

DES MOINES (AP) - Two Drake University athletes were arrested on forgery charges after trying to cash a $210 check, Elliott Henderson, a guard on the basketball team, and Frederick Drew, a defensive back on the football team, were arrested Monday night at a check cashing center on the city's east side.

The two freshmen were accused of trying to cash a forged check taken from Henderson's dormitory roommate. Both were free Tuesday on pretrial release.

Police said Drew tried to cash the check, which was made out to Randy Brown, with an Illinois identification card bearing that name. A clerk called police after noticing that Drew's face did not match the picture on the identification card.

Drew, of Lincolnshire, Ill., and Henderson, who is from Milwaukee, Wis., were arrested as they sat in a car outside the check cashing service, police said.

Hornets top NBA attendance

NEW YORK (AP) - Boosted by the addition of two teams, NBA attendance increased 22 percent this season and set a record for the sixth straight year.

Total attendance increased from 12,654,374 to 15,464,994. Excluding the expansion teams in Charlotte and Miami, attendance rose 9.9 percent.

Average attendance increased from 13,419 to 15,088 per game. The Charlotte Hornets led the league with an average attendance of 23,172. The Miami Heat averaged 14,945 fans per game — 99.6 percent of capacity at their 15,008-seat arena.

Overall, attendance increased for 17 teams and decreased for six. Three of the teams that showed decreases went down less than one percent.

Sacramento, Boston, Detroit and Portland sold out every home

NBA makes rules changes

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Two minor rule changes, both involving timing, were approved by a unanimous vote Tuesday at the annual meeting of the NBA's Board of Governors.

Starting next season, scoreboard clocks will include tenths of seconds in the final minute of each quarter and overtime. Commissioner David Stern said the change was made to better reflect how much time was remaining in the final seconds. A similar system is in use in most international competition.

Also, the 24-second clock will no longer be reset when the defensive team knocks the ball out of bounds. Under current rules, the shot clock is reset to five seconds when fewer than five seconds remain.

Drake Relays may test for drugs

DES MOINES (AP) - Some athletes competing in the 80th Drake Relays this weekend could be subject to drug tests conducted by The Athletics Congress, Relays director Bob Ehrhart said Tuesday.

"TAC randomly selects various track meets around the country for drug testing and we happened to be selected," Ehrhart said. He said the tests will be limited to 10 events. Only athletes who are not affiliated with a track club or university will be subject to

The events in which athletes will be tested are the decathlon, heptathlon, marathon, 10,000-meter road race, men's and women's 10,000-meter run, men's 5,000 and the women's 200, 400

In Pittsburgh, Mario Lemieux tied NHL playoff records with four first-period goals, five overall and eight points Tuesday night as the Pittsburgh Penguins beat the Philadelphia Flyers 10-7 to take a 3-2 lead in the Patrick Division finals.

Lemieux, listed as questionable before the game with a whiplashlike neck injury, scored a natural hat trick in the first 6:55 of play to give the pumped-up Penguins, who led 9-3 entering the final period, a 3-0 lead.

In a playoff performance rivaling any by the once-incomparable Wayne Gretzky, Lemieux made it 5-1 with his fourth goal at 17:09, tying the league record for playoff goals in a period set by the Flyers' Tim Kerr against the New York Rangers in 1985.

The five goals match the efforts of Maurice Richard of Montreal in 1944 and Darryl Sittler of Toronto and Reggie Leach of Philadelphia in 1976.

The eight points match the yearold record set by New Jersey's Patrik Sundstrom. Lemieux had eight points in a game twice during the regular season.

The NHL scoring champion, returning to the "Mario the Magnificent" who scored 199 regularseason points, assisted on all three of the Penguins' second-period goals, two on picturebook feeds to right wing Rob Brown. His final goal came into an empty net with 37 seconds to play.

The total goals were one short of the NHL playoff record set in 1982 when Edmonton beat Los Angeles

Lemieux was limited to three goals in the first four games of the series and was shut out in Game 4 as the Flyers won 4-1, but the Flyers barely had a chance to lace up their skates before he began pounding the puck at goaltender Ron Hextall.

With the 16,025 fans waving their version of the Steelers' famed Terrible Towels - labeled "Hex Towels" - Lemieux had his first playoff hat trick within his team's first nine shots on goal.

Lemieux made it 1-0 at 2:15, taking Paul Coffey's outlet pass just inside the blue line and beating Hextall on a breakaway. He made it 2-0 just 1:30 later, putting Bob Errey's feed from Coffey who set a club playoff record with four assists - into a wide-open

Judge won't talk about Rose

NEW YORK (AP) - The judge who said he thought there was a vendetta against Pete Rose said Tuesday he would have no further comment until he sentences the Ohio bookmaker linked to the Cincinnati Reds manager.

In a telephone interview from his chambers in Cincinnati, U.S. District Judge Carl B. Rubin said the bookmaker, Ronald Peters, would be sentenced shortly on felonies of cocaine trafficking and tax evasion.

"As far as I'm concerned, I've said everything I want to say," Rubin said. "When the time comes to sentence Mr. Peters, I will make a statement and it will be in the public record."

Rubin said he expects sentencing will be in a week to 10 days. The timing, he said, will depend on when he recieves certain reports.

In a transcript of a conference last Friday, Rubin refers to the vendetta and seemed to suggest that baseball commissioner A. Bartlett Giamatti was involved in it. At the conference. Rubin criticized a letter sent to him by Giamatti about Peters.

"I resent the baseball commissioner entering into what I think is there is evidence here, in my opinion, of a vendetta against Pete Rose," Rubin said.

Rose is being investigated by a Cincinnati grand jury on "tax matters," according to Robert C. Brichler, as assistant U.S. attorney in Cincinnati. Anthony Nyktas, another assistant U.S. attorney, said the office had no further comment on the investigation.

Giamatti is conducting his own investigation concerning allegations that Rose bet on baseball games.

The IOC plan, similar to one which failed to win approval last year, would eliminate several major hurdles to almost universal drug testing in Olympic sports.

The IOC's executive board sent a five-part Agreement for the Prevention of Doping in Sport to the Association of International Summer Sports Federations, as both groups met here this week.

UI prepares for performing arts festival

Summer Rep'89 season devoted to female playwright

The Daily Iowan

The Summer Rep '89 season at the University Theatres will be a festival of works by British playwright Caryl Churchill, recognized as England's top female playwright.

Summer Rep is a professional, rotating repertory company operated by University Theatres each year. This year's Caryl Churchill Summer Festival, June 23 through July 22 in the UI Theatre Building, will feature four of her plays, three to be held in Mabie Theatre and one in Theatre A.

Series subscriptions for the festival are now on sale at Hancher Auditorium box office. The series offers a discount of 25 percent on the ticket price of the three Mabie productions. Single tickets are also on sale for the production in Theatre A, which is not a part of the subscription package.

A special feature of this festival is that for the first time Summer Rep performances will be given on Sundays. These performances will, be at 7:30 p.m., rather than the customary starting time of 8 p.m.

Caryl Churchill is recognized as one of the most brilliant and original voices in theater today. University Theatres will perform Tom," to her Obie Award-winning popular successes "Cloud 9" and Top Girls.

There is no question that Churchill is one of the most exciting playwrights alive today," says UI theatre arts faculty member Eric. Forsythe, artistic director of Summer Rep. "Audiences will be delighted by her work. Her range, from fanciful historicism to modern realism, is astonishing.

"Her concerns are often centered in the relationships between males and females, the politics of these relationships," Forsythe continues.
"The battle of the sexes may seem a common element in plays, but we usually hear it from the male point of view. Churchill's is a refreshing voice which allows us to see the female side. We haven't done a woman playwright before in our summer festival. It's time we did."

Churchill is a native of London and the daughter of a political cartoonist. She has admitted that her father's combination of humor and political thought has been a prime influence on her work. After her graduation from Oxford, she married a lawyer and raised three children. It was while she was works ranging from her first pro- home caring for her children in the 13th-century Japanese courtesan, eral plays for radio.

The critical acclaim of these radio plays led to her first professional theatrical play, "Owners," which was produced at London's Royal Court Theatre in 1972. Her breakthrough came with 1979's "Cloud 9," an immense popular and critical London success and her first play produced in the United States. The New York production earned her an Obie Award.

Since then she has had successes on both sides of the Atlantic. Her most recent play, "Serious Money," won England's Olivier Award for Best Play and had a long off-Broadway run.
"Cloud 9" is a satirical look at ender choices and confusion, both Victorian and modern. The play opens with a parody of British colonial life, as a seemingly proper governor and his family engage in a dizzying round of sexual roleplaying. Act II presents the same characters in modern-day London, experiencing the effects of sexual

"Top Girls," another Obie winner, presents an unusual dinner gathering: the guests include a housewife, fessional play, "Owners," and a early 1960s that she began her and Pope Joan, the woman who, neglected early play, "Vinegar active writing career, writing sev-disguised as a man, served as a 9th-century Pope. The play examines the prices a woman must pay for her accomplishments in a male-dominated world.

"Vinegar Tom" examines the witch trials of the 17th century, as a mother and daughter are accused of sorcery because they unashamedly live with no men in their lives. The story is interspersed with songs by a modern-day Greek chorus, tempering the drama with comedy and pulling the play's concerns into the pre-

"Owners," in Theatre A, is a hilarious look at the give-and-take of modern marriage. A butcher whose business is failing tries to do in his wife, whose new real estate career is skyrocketing.

Some of these plays contain language and situations that may offend some audience members.

This will be the sixth summer that University ineatres has devoted its Summer Rep season to a single playwright. This is done to allow student actors, directors and technicians - as well as audiences the opportunity to explore a playwright's work in depth.

Hancher to present events in first summer variety series

The Daily Iowan

For the first time in its history, Hancher Auditorium will present a summer series of performing arts events. Series subscriptions and single tickets for the fiveevent variety series are now available. Subscriptions for all five events offer a 10 percent

The events, which take place during the week before the opening of University Theatres Summer Rep season, are: • The inspired clown Avner the

Eccentric, at 8 p.m. Friday, June

• Theater organist Dennis James and the Ann Arbor Chamber Orchestra accompanying two silent film classics on June 17, Douglas Fairbanks as "Robin Hood" at 2 p.m. and Greta Garbo in "Flesh and the Devil" at 8

• Two performances by William Forsythe's tradition-breaking Frankfurt Ballet, at 8 p.m. June 20 and 21.

A leading figure in the "new vaudeville" movement, Avner the Eccentric combines the talents of a comedian, juggler, mime, magician, kazoo player and slack rope walker in his gentle style of clowning.

Dennis James and the Ann Arbor Chamber Orchestra visited Hancher last fall to gi authentic accompaniment to e Phantom of the Opera" and Charlie Chaplin's "The Circus." In their return they will give musical life to an action-filled family matinee and Garbo's most torrid silent film role.

Under the direction of American choreographer William Forsythe, the Frankfurt Ballet has become Europe's most exciting and challenging ballet company. His riveting dances combine electronic music, dramatic lighting and spoken texts with highly theatrical choreography. The June 20 and 21 performances in Hancher will mark this acclaimed company's Midwest

At last! The complete sunbunny and sunlizard summer booklist

h, summertime in Iowa And what better way to spend the time than

We don't get so many sunny days where I come from. On the few we do get, we tend to wander around blinking in queasy surprise. It's a different story here.

Crank out one sunny day, and every lithe and limber sun worshipper within two hour's drive of the Coralville Reservoir is there on display, preening and primping while acting like they're just minding their business.

And that's not all: Every lawn, rooftop, patio and stretch of macadam in Iowa City becomes a homegrown person-B-Q, and skin cancer isn't the only guaranteed side effect of this de riguer college student ritual. Not at all - in addition to saggy, blotched crocodile skin when you're 40, you also get tons and tons of free time right now, when you're literally just lying around. And I ask again: What better way to spend that time than reading?

In fact, a fat summer novel is already a familiar sight in summer, right? And this isn't surprising in a literary place like a college town — especially this town, called "The Harvard of the Midwest" by all the hordes of bitter Midwesterners who couldn't pass the test to mop the floors in the orignal. The problem isn't that the books aren't there; it's that the books brought along are so bad.

But there's no telling a college student — especially an English major — to read a good book. No Melville in this column, nor Twain, nor Tolstoy. Not even Swift, Voltaire or Rabelais.

But no Stephen King, either. No Clive Barker or Danielle Steel. No boring Salman Rushdie or Margaret Atwood. The titans of twaddle have an ironclad lock on the market as it is - they don't need any help from the casual sunbather who's just out to waste some time and isn't even bright enough to be pretentious.

For that book-grazer, for all those solarbabies and solarbaby wannabes who'll be spending the money anyway, there is an alternative. Somewhere in between good "heavy" books and bad, bad, bad "light" books, there are good "light" books. Finding these books - the kind that, in earlier epochs, were called "a good read" requires a tiny bit more effort, like going all the way into the bookstore. But they're oh, so much more satisfying than choking down 4,000 pages of Stephen King's latest flatulence, that the trip will be well

The following 10 suggestions aren't going to tax anybody's brain. But underneath their surface readability, there's some worth, some quality - some small potential to interest the reader so much that they actually continue reading at home after the sun has set.

• We'll start off slow with a home-town favorite: "Shoeless Joe" by W.P. Kinsella. This is a wonderful fantasy about baseball and Iowa, and Kinsella' writing is bright with accessible similies about flowers and grass. But underneath the summertime sappiness, there's a wry humorist at work who manages to say one or two interesting things about being American. If you act now, you can still buy an edition before it has Kevin Costner's face plastered all over it in preparation for what will certainly be the late spring's most popular movie, "Field of Dreams."

· Another entrant in the "buy it now or be movie-starred" is "The Memoirs of an Invisible Man" by H.F. Saint, which is fated to become a Chevy Chase movie in the near future. But hey, a Chevy Chase cover might look cool on a riverbank, and it's the book that

Somewhere in between good "heavy" books and bad, bad, bad "light" books, there are good "light" books. Underneath their surface readability, there's some worth, some quality - some small potential to interest the sunbathing reader so much that they actually continue reading at home after the sun has set.

matters, right? The book is the engaging story of Nick Halloway, who gets caught in an experiment gone awry and finds himself pursued by the government. "Memoirs" is every bit as much a page-turner as any horror thriller, but it says things - about alienation and identity — that invariably get buried in the schlock of summer garbage.

· And speaking of horror thrillers, there's the latest novel from a man who's called a horror writer and whose books are found among horror titles - but who's last four books have been anything but horrifying. The man is Dean R. Koontz, and the book is "Lightning," and the story concerns time travel, pistol-packing guardian angels and Nazi death troops. Its moralizing is heavy-handed at times, but it's quick, involving reading with a little meat to it.

· Beginning a trio of murder mysteries, there's a classic in the good light-reading category: "Red Dra-gon," by Thomas Harris. To para-phrase the usual book-jacket hysteria, if you can read this one and not get engrossed, there's something wrong with you. Harris' story of a cop who gets into the thoughts of mass murderers is riveting and marvelously written, with a humdinger of an ending. This one is artually guaranteed to keep even the most vapid of sunbunnies reading late into the night.

· Steady yourself, this one is somewhat thick. Mitchell Smith's "Daydreams" is longer than any other book on this list, and it's packed with names and places and events. But Smith's prose will carry you along in this tale of an unlikely duo of New York City cops out to solve a bizarre murder case. If you want to avoid headaches like conclusions, this is the book for you! But the visions Smith lavishes on the reader are sometimes nothing short of astonishing, on surface levels or otherwise. And "Daydreams" unquestionably wins the booby prize for "Most Gripping Beginning" and "Most Gripping Ending.'

· Here's another long one, but you really won't notice the pages going by. It's "Time Out of Mind" by Robert Maxim. The story is spread over several generations and revolves around Jonathan Corbin, who sees ghosts in the snow and eventually becomes a ghost in the snow, but it's got violence, good characterization and messages buried deep enough so that you won't even notice them if you're not looking for them.

Next up, there's "The Socratic Method" by Michael Levin, and as much as it may sound like an "Intro to Law" tome, it's actually a witty little story of corruption in a college law school. Law student sunlizards take heed! This is the summer book for you!

The last three items on the list are all long shots, so we'll be brief:

"A Confederacy of Dunces," by John Kennedy Toole, is hilarious and delightful to read and sure to make you laugh. Unfortunately, it's also complex - and that may be a turnoff for the strict mindless grazer. Try the first 20 pages before you give up.

"The Killer Angels" is a historical novel by Michael Sharra about Civil War generals, but even so, it's got action, a sharp plot, and you already know who wins and who loses. Then again, maybe you don't. Ah-hem. Let's move on.

· "Neuromancer" by William Gibson is a brain-twister of a book, perhaps the quintessential Sci-Fi book of all time. Weird landscapes, made-up words, laser beams and thinking computers — watch Gibson pull every cliché together into a book that still manages to be Well, there you have it - a brief toe-in-the-pool of worthwhile light reading for a summer simply filled with empty hours. Why not turn things around with some good reading and have a summer empty with full hours?

Or words to that effect.

Ross plays, sings, evokes old-fashioned era

NEW YORK (AP) - Steve Ross performs the music of Cole Porter and Noel Coward with a wit, style and sophistication that those two masters of song would appreciate.

Most nights you'll find him behind the piano at L'Omnibus de Maxim's, the Madison Avenue watering hole modeled after its famous Paris namesake.

Maxim's, with its elegant charm, is the perfect setting for someone who plays and sings the songs of not only Porter and Coward but other musical geniuses such as Gershwin, Rodgers and Hart, Arlen, Kern and Sondheim, too.

With his slicked-back hair and impeccable tailoring, Ross evokes another era, a time wan men dressed for dinner, wore tuxed opening night at the opera, drank martinis instead of mineral water and had seen every hit Broadway musi-

Ross has been a part of the New York cabaret scene since the late '60s when he arrived from Washington, D.C. But his love of music, particularly popular music, started much earlier. As a child, Ross remembers listening to Beatrice Kay, who sang songs of the Gay '90s, old-fashioned ditties like "Heaven Will, Protect the Working Girl" and "She's Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage." "They were real numbers," Ross recalls.

"The seeds were being planted even back then for that kind of vaudeville performing. The cabaret stuff that performers do now is really an outgrowth of what vaudeville was. There's the idea of building a number or getting to an

It was one of those types of numbers — "Don't Go in the Lion's Cage Tonight" which became the first song Ross sang in public, warbling in what he calls his "cracked baritone voice."

"Roberta Flack was a big influence," he recalls. "At the time, she was a piano and singing teacher and worked a little club on Capitol Hill.

"I would go there for brunch, get mildly high on Bloody Marys and she would come on and break our hearts," he recalls. "Every once in a while, she would invite me up to sing, and I would do 'Don't Go in the Lion's Cage

Before the rock era took over, Ross dabbled in classical music and played in little dance bands in the Washington area. But then Manhattan beckoned, and Ross didn't say no to jobs in small clubs in New York and teaching voice to students. It wasn't easy.

At first, he didn't sing. But when he discovered night spots were more eager to hire a singer than just a piano player, he would.

"I started singing funny little songs, patter songs," he says. "So I started taking lessons, and still do, to keep me on the straight and narrow."

Even then, he was carefully cultivating his image as urban sophisticate.

"I always wore my little tie, and I always sang Cole Porter songs," Ross says. "People said, 'Keep doing that.' And fortunately that kind of music came around again. I didn't know anything else. I kept doing the songs that I liked

Audiences really began discovering Ross in the late '70s when he played a now-disappeared club and restaurant called Ted Hook's Backstage.

Audiences also discovered Ross' passion for obscure good songs. An enthusiastic sheet-music collector, he searches everywhere for new old material and has resurrected many a Porter or Coward rarity. The title of his new album, "Most of Every Day," is a rare Coward song. Now people bring him songs, new and

How does Ross pick the songs he sings? "The words have to work first," he says. "When it's just me and the piano, I want to have good words. I can't make it on a high note. I'm not Pavarotti. So the words have to be important."

In 1981, Ross became the first performer in 40 years to play the Algonquin Hotel's famed Oak Room. He stayed for four years. Since then, he hasn't given his passport a rest. London. Venice. Hong Kong. Australia. Even Kenya, where he wowed them in Nairobi. Now he's ready to hang his hat in New York for a while. It's the city that suits him best. Its possibilities are endless.

"The essence of romance is possibility," Ross says. "That's why New York is such a romantic place. Anything can happen: you cross the street, something comes to town, you go into a place. That's why I can't leave this city. Anything can happen here."

'true' take on teens

By Locke Peterseim The Daily Iowan

ne of the problems with today's teen films, or rather films about teen-agers, is that the producers feel that in order to keep our attention they must either present high school as one long rock 'n' roll sex party, or swing to the opposite and present psychoteen tales of suicide, homicide, drug addiction and pregnancy.

Say Anything

Directed by Cameron Crowe

John Cusack

Showing at Campus Theatres

While both sides of the teen-film coin have produced good cinema ("Risky Business," "Sixteen Can-dles" and "Valley Girl" for the former, "River's Edge," "Permanent Record" and "The Chocolate War." under the latter) the skeptics' cry still remains the same: My high school wasn't anything like that (no matter how much we wish it had been). Those who had secondary-school experiences anywhere near the intensity of those presented by Hollywood are either dead or in prison.

But "Say Anything" nicely and quietly avoids either categorization. It's not an ambitious film. It's not a deep film. It's not even an entirely sucessful film. And its subject matter — teen love — is certainly guilty of perpetuating a host of cinematic atrocities on us in the past. But producer James Brooks and writer-director Cameron Crowe (who wrote "Fast Times at Ridgemont High") know how to put enough condensed unreality into the genre to keep it interesting and entertaining, without going over the easily crossed line into outrageous high jinks or falling back on drippy yearbook nostalgia. John Cusack is Lloyd Dobler, who in turn is the typical John Cusack character, the loveable loser whose solitary stroll on the edge of highschool society is interrupted by that biggest of interruptions, love. Playing Diane, Lloyd's affection target, is Ione Skye, who's climbing the Hollywood teen-ladder on the basis of her pouting good looks, taking the roles that used to go to the now "mature" Jami Gertz. Skye is one of those modern models-cum-starlets whom directors praise for their "innocent sensuality and smouldering screen presence." In other words, she can't act to save her cosmetics case, but she looks real good in a tion, but when it fails, it fails on a respectable level due to an overreaching plot and jumbled themes, rather than lame lost-top jokes and vomit sight-gags. But halfway through the film, Crowe becomes ashamed of his comedic teen-angst talents and tries to bring some credible adult drama to the film in the form of a crisis between Skye and her father, played by the always solid John Mahoney. But instead of strengthening Lloyd and Diane's love story, the fatherdaughter sideshow derails it. Worse, the suddenly dual plotline puts the film's focus on Diane, a burden neither Crowe's characterization nor Skye's performance can Still, the film's first half, dealing with Lloyd's world, not Diane's father's, is wonderfully handled. "Say Anything" gets all the touches right; on Saturday night the kids don't go out and drag race on ocean drives, but rather sit and eat Funyons at the Gas 'N Sip. Backseat romance isn't all dry ice and shooting stars, but rather sweating under rough blankets in cramped quarters. And most impressively, a party scene, usually the most offensively unreal part of a teen flick, is not only enjoyable, but rings true in atmosphere and content. Obviously Crowe must glamorize, condense and exaggerate the teen world, but he does so without sacrificing believability and a tonal sincerity so rare in the teen-beat fodder pumped out weekly by studios.

Not a small part of "Say Anything"'s overall charm can be credited to Cusack. He's always enjoyable to watch - charming in a nervously idiosycratic way, but never crossing the deadly line into Cruise-Sheen cock and strut. The part of Lloyd is no great stretch for Cusack, but such "stretches" which every likeable young actor seems in such a rush to inflict on the public ("I'm tired of playing 19-year-olds, I feel it's time to do O'Neill") are what are ruining today's young actors. Cusack has a good thing going with "light" films such as "The Sure Thing" and "Say Anything" - if he turns his Hoffman, Hurt and Streep, he's only going to crush the likeable performer under the pretentious weight of the serious actor.

Teen films are not, as it often seems, inherently bad. Their problem is that the genre's nature is easily exploited by producers and studios; its set pieces (romance, parties, cars, music) easily mimeographed from film to film. "Say Anything" may not be aesthetically solid, but it makes a sincere and original effort. And failure on those grounds is greatly preferred to the crass market-appeal calculations of its more "successful" peers.

And between these film clips shown at a Film Society of Lincoln Center tribute on Monday night, several people who worked with Davis praised her for her artistry and versatility.

"Working with Bette Davis was as happy and rewarding as any experience I've ever had. Barring grand opera I can't think of anything beyond her range," said Joseph Mankiewicz, who wrote and directed the 1950 movie "All About

That was done, as a scene from "Bad Sister," the first of Davis' more than 80 movies, was shown.

Two of the speakers mentioned being warned by others that Davis could be selfish.
